DELEGATION

ESCANABA SHOULD SEND BIG PARTY OF CITY'S BOOSTER ON DETROIT CRUISE.

A number of the leading business men of Escanaba will make a determined effort to allow Escanaba to be represented on the upper peninsula cruise to Detroit early in next month by the biggest delegation of any city in the district. John J. Sourwine is one of the leading boosters for the organization of a party of at least 50 to make the trip from this city that the peninsula's mertopolis may take its proper rank among those on the cruise. Other cities are planning on sending delegations averaging 25 and the local promoters of the movement will be satisfied only with a delegation that outstripes every other peninsula municipality.

In the issue of the Escanaba Journal of last week Mr. Sourwine gave enthusiastice voice to his ideas of the good that could accrue to Escanaba by sending a big bunch of enthusiasts on the Detroit trip and yesterday he received the following letter from Theodore E. Quinby, manager of the Upper Peninsula Development Bur-

Escanaba, Mich., Dear Mr. Sourwine:

I have just read with much pleasure your interview in the Escanaba Journal of Friday Aug. 11th. That is the right kind of talk. It will indeed be a discredit to the largest city in the Upper Peninsula if it does not send the largest delegation on the Detroit cruise, but I beleive that it will do so, for on my several visits to Escanaba I have never falled to meet many enthusiastic members of the Bureau and I am sure that as the date approaches for our departure that they will fall in line and do credit to FUNERAL WAS

If I can be of any assistance to you in any way in arousing interest, please call upon me. I am glad that you are going to Detroit because I still have fresh in my memory your live work while in Menominee during the K. of P. Convention.

With kindest regards, I. am, Yours very truly THEO. E. QUINBY

ESCANABA DIVISION MEMBERS WILL RETURN FROM CRUISE TOMORROW EVENING-

C. G. Hewett returned to the city on Sunday night after accompanying members of the Escanaba division of the State Militia on the annual cruise to the Les Cheneau Islands. He left the steamer Yantic at that place and proceeded to his home here by boat and rail arriving over the Soo Line on Sunday night. Mr. Hewett reports that a large part of the members of the local division will return to their homes here on Wednesday evening while the remainder will not arrive until several days later.

When he left the Yantic the boat was bound for the Soo, Houghton and Hancock, where those who are forced to return to their work will be given their release and the remainder will proceed to Ashland where the Ashland division members will debark and the vessel will be brought back to Hancock to be docked.

AN APPRECIATION AND A PROTEST.

While local and outside Newspapers are carelessly bandying about the name of U. S. Senator Isaac Stephenson of Marinette, charging him with fraud and the improper use of money in his election to the greatest legislative body in the world, the home folk; those who know him familiarly as "Uncle Ike," sit back and wonder to what lengths political intrigue is to be carried.

Probably nowhere is "Uncle Ike" better or more fully known than in and about Escanaba.

It was here that he got his start in the lumber business and where for years he made his home before he arose to the high place that he now holds. It is of his experiences as a boy in the woods of Delta county where he labored as a comon woodsman and a mill hand that he best loves to tell in relating his experiences. . Those who really know "Uncle Ike" give to him full credit for the energy and ambition which allowed him through hard work in his early years and a wonderful business ability, to take class today as one of the millionaire lumbermen of the country.

Those who really know the senator, know him as a kindly hearted, generous old man who has a host of characteristics that go to make him sincerely respectedby by all who have ever come into personal contact with him and none of the qualities which should allow him to be so shamefully abused by political

While political enemies, after years of intrigue and constant effort, have succeded in bringing about an investigation of his election to the senate, the home people will know that the move is but a political scheme and in spite of the efforts of adverse newspapers "Uncle Ike's" reputation will not suffer in the eyes of those who know him best.

The writer was a resident of Wisconsin when the Stalwart faction of the Republican party in that state governed Wisconsin with a high and shameless hand. After years of endeavor by the common people of the state to break up the ring that controlled politics in the state it was "Uncle Ike" Stephenson of Marinette, who, realizing the need of the state and the necessity for action, who furnished the funds for legitimate expenses in educating the mass of the voters to down the ring.

It was "Uncle, Ike" Stephenson who brought out Robert M. Lafollette, then an obscure country attorney, as the champion of the common people. "Uncle Ike" made Robert LaFoliette the leading figure in Wisconsin politics because he believed LaFollette to be the man who would lead Wisconsin out of the wild-

Wisconsin's history is blackened by the page which tells of one of the basest cases of ingratitude ever prepetrated by man when, after LaFollete had "arrived," he turned on his aged benefactor and by the machine that he himself had built up attempted to blacken the reputation of the Marinette lumberman. Every scheme known to the wily politician was brought to bear when after "Uncle Ike" had served out a short term in the United States senate, he announced that he was to be a candidate for reelection before the legislature.

In the race for the senatorship were: McGovern of Wilwaukee; Hatton of New London; Cook of Nee-

From a careful survey of the situation in Wisconsin at that time the writer is prepared to state honestly that if not one cent had been spent by any of the candidates' "Uncle lke" would have been the choice of the people by a monster majority.

His opponents began flooding the state with money to hire workers and promoting publicity for their candidates. "Uncle Ike was forced by the elucumstances to protect his rights by using the same weapon. He spent his money freely in a legitimate way in purchasing newspaper space and giving publicity to his stand on important questions that the people might not be hoodwinked by LaFollette's appointed politicians opposing him.

In spite of the fact that the ring opposed him "Uncle Ike" was elected at the primaries by a big majority because the people of the state believed in him and the principles for which he stood.

When the legislature convened to confirm the will of the people expressed at the polls, the necessary majority refused to give their votes thus giving to those who had voted and stood for the Marinette man what appeared to be conclusive evidence that some power had tampered with the legislature influencing some of the members who had been elected to vote for "Uncle Ike," to withhold from him the office that was rightfully his.

After a deadlock of weeks the legislature fimily issued to . Stephenson his certificate of office He took his rightful seat in the upper house of congress and no matter what local and outside papers may say while inspired by spiteful political demagagues, those who really know "Uncle Ike" can ever be made believe that that office is not his by the full and free will of the people of Wisconsin-

Lovable Women

Stout, Stupid Kind Are Most Favored

By VIRGINIA RANDOLPH

HAT kind of a women do women like? What a queer question! Women like all-no; not all women, of course-there are some women who are simply impossible.

The women we see across the footlights, for instance. There are many varieties in the orchestra stalls alone. Those who come with their young men seldom know the name of the play. They talk nearly all the time, and when they are not talking they are thinking of the walk home. We don't like them. Then those who want to be actresses-they all think they were born to the stage-we just know are looking hard at us and thinking all the show people should be doing domestic work. They are unlovable, too. Then there are women who are there every Monday afternoon in the same seats. They believe the villain really dies, and that the leading man is an Adonia. Distance certainly lends enchantment; and so does the spotlight. Well, we pity them; and pity may be akin to, but it isn't, genuine affection.

We never get very fond of the women out in the big world who try to exploit us, and invite us to afternoon carnivals of weak tea and sandwiches with the inside layer photographed on. I'm sure we could be temporarily fond of a hostess who would habitually forget to padlock the chest of real food. And we are cool toward those gentle persons who introduce us to their friends in order to point a moral and adorn a tale. It's only natural to dislike the role of Horrible Example.

Among our own people it is different. Twenty weeks of one-night stands on the kerosene circuit makes one yearn for a kindred soul; and it isn't uncommon to form friendships that last a whole season, closing at Mauch Chunk. Of course it would be different if we all had a comfortable home, with a fireplace and a conventional source of support. We would running over the front windows and have to be careful then.

I'm going to be real frank. I think women like stout, stupid women, who haven't told the truth since childhood, and haven't any lack with men. They're so so comfortable.

Visits to Sick Are Often Made Too Long

By E. J. LAIRD .

What I am about to say does not apply to one suffering from some acute illness or where the case demands the services of a trained nurse, as the latter is well protected and does not have to speak for himself. But it is impossible to relate here the harm that is done every day to those afflicted with chronic troubles, and especially patients whose ailments are those of fore every case of pulmonary and the nerves, when they are subjected to long calls by friends or old acquaintances from of transmitting the infection to a out of the city. Such visitors would no minimum. doubt be shocked if they knew half the damages done by their often repeated visits, of the nights passed by the patients in wakefulness and suffering that have been caused by the excitement and strain during the day. It seems strange that people of intelligence have to be told.

It places the one afflicted in a very uncomfortable position. A sick person dislikes to own to very near and dear friends that it hurts to listen to and respond to a visitor's chatter, fearing isolation, perhaps, or injured feelings if they tell the penalty they must pay as a result of the visit.

It requires strength and a good deal of nervous energy in even those who are comparatively well to entertain callers, let alone those who are

There are so many ways of letting your friends know that you don't forget them aside from visiting them. A pretty little card with a verse or a line that will bring them cheer and hope would be appreciated.

Correct Many / Errors of Teacher and Pupil

By DR. HAROLD J. STEERE

The high school boy who cheats is dishonest and no amount of argument can make him otherwise.

The lesson should be systematically taught and explanations clearly given.

There seems to be much "go as you please" instead of a stated curriculum for each year.

Home work should be given advisedly also be used for an ordinary magic instead of no home work one day and enough to keep the child up till twelve o'clock at night on another.

When a pupil does anything wrong, whether intentionally or otherwise, he should be punished in accordance. To give a zero and thus rob a child of his right average because he was guilty of some slight misdemeanor is unfair and is the cause of great discouragement. It disheartens and ruins experimental demonstration of the the school life of many pupils.

Systematic reviews should precede all examinations.

The public schools as a whole are well conducted and good, and what anted is a thoughtful correction of errors of both teacher and pupil ad not the rabid abuse to which so-called reformers so often resort.

Benefits of Calm Sleep in Pure Air

I started to sleep outdoors in May, 1909, and have slept out every night since that date, and would not go back to sleeping indoors any more for the following reasons and experiences:

First, one gets a more refreshing sleep in cool, pure air than can be had in an illventilated and heated room. In fact, the pure, cool air is so soothing to the tired person that one falls to sleep nearly at once. But of course one must be well covered up about the body to protect from cold, leaving only the face exposed.

Second, I am less predisposed to colds and the many ailments which come from colds. The results in my own

WHERE HYGIENE RULES

AUSTRALIA'S HEALTH CONDI-TIONS BEST IN THE WORLD.

Death Rate From Tuberculosis Steadlly Declining-Wise Sanitary Regulations in the Large Cities.

Health conditions in Australia are etter than in any other country of the globe if the low death rate of 10.95 a thousand a year may be accepted as an index, says the Medical Record.

The death rate from tuberculosis has steadily been declining during the last 25 years and now is less than 9 per cent of the total deaths, which is a lower percentage than any pub-lished by any other country which compiles its statistics in an equally accurate manner.

In New South Wales the notification of cases of pulmonary and throat tuberculosis has been compulsory for over ten years. The walls and ceilings of houses in which cases occur are sprayed with a solution of formalin and the floors are washed with a solution of corrosive sublimate.

The effectiveness of the educational campaign is shown by the fact that open air sleeping is more general than in any other country. There is scarcely a dwelling house constructed nowadays in Australia, even a laborer's cottage, which is not provided with a suitable veranda for outdoor sleeping. There is very little expectorating on the sidewalks or other public places.

Ordinances to prevent the contamination of milla and other foodstuffs are well observed. In shops where fresh meat is offered for sale it is customary to find sheets of water walls for the purpose of catching dust. All large cities, like Sydney, Melbourne, Adelaste and others, have tuberculosis sanatoria and also a large number of beds for chronic cases. The Greenvale Sanatorium, near Melbourne, will compare favorably with similar institutions in Europe and America.

Gratifying progress has been made in isolating chronic and more particularly open cases of tuberculosis. In New South Wales, Victoria and South Australia it is estimated that at least 50 per cent of these cases have been placed in hospitals and a good proportion of the remainder under supervision. The health officials believe that only a few years will elapse bethroat tuberculosis will be under such control as to reduce the danger

Moving Picture Camera. The day is at hand when the amateur camera enthusiast will take his own moving pictures. The British have invented the "cinematograph camera," which is little larger than the ordinary hand camera and is not much more expensive. It has been exhibited in London and is attracting a great deal of attention. In addition to ordinary snapshot photographs, the camera will take either 100 feet or 350 feet of film of standard size. The instrument is divided into two parts, making a camera for taking cinematograph films or pictures on the ordinary photographic plate or film. A lantern and a standard for projecting the cinematograph films taken by the camera and a printing device and developing tray are also provided, thus enabling the photographer to take his own films, develop and print them, and show them in his own home. The camera is expected to prove of value as an educational factor, and should

LOTS OF WILD GAME DYE HAIR TO MATCH MOTORS

Southwest Coast of Mindoro Is Paradise for Hunters.

Tamarao, Fierce Animal Resembling American Buffalo, Found Only Here-Plenty of Carabao, Boar and Deer.

Manila, P. I .- "A paradise for hunt ers." is the way Judge Liddell de scribes the country in the vicinity of his home and plantation on the southeast coast of Mindoro. One game Mindoro excels in is, the tamarao rarest of animals, and one which is found only in Mindoro. This flerce animal, much like an American buffalo, is held in universal dread by every native on the island, who looks on him as a far more formidable cres ture than the maddest of wild cara-

The tamarao is seldom seen in clear ings because he sticks to his native wilds. When he does come near a clearing the natives in that vicinity make for the nearest shelter. For the tamarao does not wait to attack. He takes the initiative himself, charging every one and everything in sight.

Mrs. Liddell, wife of Judge Liddell. is, perhaps, the only white woman who has ever seen a tamarao. A few weeks ago one came within fifteen feet of the window of the Liddell kitchen, where she was instructing the cook, and peered in. The natives in the neighborhood took to their heels and then the tamarao quietly walked off. But if the tamarao is the piece de resistance among the game of lindoro it is not the only game to be found on the island. There are myriads of deer, wild chickens and game birds of all sorts. There are also plenty of wild boars on the island, some of them of extraordinary size and none of them noted for their docility. Judge Liddell has one tusk fully eighteen inches long. This came from a monster boar, which charged the hunters repeatedly before he was shot down.

Wild carabao hunting is another pastime of the Mindoro planters and one that is not destined to soothe the nerves of weak-hearted men. These big animals are at all times dangerous, and when once wounded or angered will charge their hunters with all the ferocity of an '.frican buffalo.

James Liddell, a son of the judge, had an experience with one of them recently that will not be forgotten in a hurry. He was hunting and shot the big fellow, knocking him off his feet. As the carabao lay still he approached him and when not a foot away the carabao leaped to his feet ning a suit for $60 brought by him and charged.

There was no time for a shot, so young Liddell did the only thing open to him-grappled with the infuriated beast. Three times the animal gored him and finally the boy made his escape. What the Filipinos in his party regarded as them fraculous feature of the accident was the fact that the picture. carabao had permitted him to escape.

New York.—There was a wild cramble at the Fourth avenue grounds at Asbury Park, N. J., when a porpolse appeared among the 2,000 bathers. The crowd, thinking it was shark, made a rush for shore, the men leading the women. The porpoise, undisturbed by the clamor, swam leisurely around and then made his way northward, but it was some into the water.

> An $800,000,000 Industry. A point of great interest is the manifold values of the by-products of the cotton industry. The cotton fiber is chiefly used for the manufacture of cloth, while the by-products are used for many different purposes. For instance, the portion of the cotton fiber that remains on the seed (the lint, as it is called) is taken off in the manufactures incident to the use of the seed and is used for a variety of purposes. It is sold at much lower rate than the other and used for stuffing pillows, horse collars and cushic and, strange to say, for adulterat shoddy. The idea of shoddy being adulterated is somewhat amusing, but this is a fact. It is also used for making fine writing paper and for the nanufacture of gun-cotton and a number of other purposes. The Perpetual Change.

The things of the world are ever rising and falling, and in perpetual change; and this change must be according to the will of God, as he has bestowed upon man neither the wisdom nor the power to enable him to check it. The great lesson in these things is that man must strengthen himself doubly at such times to fulfil his duty, and to do what is right, and must seek his happiness and inward peace from objects which cannot be taken away from him.-Wilhelm von Humboldt.

His Was Laziness.

When an Indian candidate for the ministry was asked to define original sin, he said he didn't know what other people's might be, but he felt sure his was laziness.

BOSTON MARKETS

Market sold off a little at the opening but support was given and prices rallied very sharply. On any further rally the stocks are liable to come back on to the market again. Coppers were very strong today, the offerings being very light, the best prices being seen at the close.

NEW YORK MARKETS

Taken as a whole the stock market displayed improvement in the tone during todays session. At times particularly at the first two hours, the selling was quite active, but it was apparent that he pressure was not as urgent as heretofore and as a result shorts were inclined to cover at least a part of their commitments. In addition, the demand for foreign account was on a good scale. It can hardly be said that conditions surounding the market have changed to any extent that would warrant the expectancy of a substained upward movement but it would not be unnatural should short covering and a moderate increase in the outside demand be reflected temporarily by a slight higher range of prices.

SHARPENING SENSE OF SMELL

Woman's sense of smell is well known to be sharper than is the sense of smell in man, broadly speaking, disregarding occasional variations in individuals. But man's ingenuity has enabled him to offset this defect in a most simple manner.

In a certain English boys' school, a man monitor has charge of rooms and dormitories, reporting upon surreptitiously introduced wines, ales and tobaccos. Cigarettes are tabooed "And in what way, sir, haven't I without chance of apology. To discover these odors has been one of the prime duties of the monitor. And Cactus..... you most effective scheme.

He carries with him on his rounds a glass of water. Entering a room where suspected odors may be in nasal evidence, he dips a finger in the water and moistens his nostrils freely. In a moment the odor of stale tobacco or of ales or wines strikes his olfactories with a hammer blow. In explanation the monitor says that as the sense of taste is slight unless the substance be in solution, either through water or by mastication, it occurred to him that his sense of smell might be quickened by a watered nose. He says that he can discover in strong degree odors that, without wetting the nose, are imper-

True Enlightenment.

"When we get enlightened we find him, not by seeking to conform him to us. By and by we find that there is a God of infinite perfection in power, wisdom, justice, love and holiness: fore the beginning he knew all which Yukon would happen in the history of the human race. He needs no appeasing to alter his affection, for he is all love, and has an infinite desire to confer the highest possible or conceivable blessing on the whole human race, and on each individual thereof. When we come to this conclusion we take pains to bring ourselves into harmony with God. All sacrifice disappears; all mutilation of the flesh or spirit, all ceremonies which do not grow out of the natural wants of mankind."-Theodore Parker.

THE MAN WHO WINS

Any man can go without many comforts before he can safely dispense with a savings account. It is his paymaster in time of idleness, and his insurance policy against sickness; it is protection for his loved ones in case of death, and above all it is his testimonial of manly self-denial, industry, forethought and independence. Luck and fortune play but little part in the drama of modern industrial life. It is the man who works every day he can and saves what he can, who wins. He wins because he is the most fit. That is the law.

CARDINALS ARE MONEY MAKERS

The Cardinals will make $150,000 for the National league this season by being contenders for the pennant. The Cardinals for years were the poorest drawing card in the league. On the last eastern trip they played to record crowds in Vittsburg, New York, Boston and Brooklyn. The attendance in Philadelphia averaged 19,500 a day, more than they attracted in a whole season last year.

By CLAUDINE SISSON

On a certain chill October after over. Of what use was it to regret? a flare of crimson leaves on all the maples and the ever-present tangles of aster and goldenrod along the bushy banks, Elsie turned her horse in at a rickety picket gate and dismounted before the porch of a tiny, shabby, neglected house. With the reins upon her arm she stood looking about her with tender, remembering eyes. The little yard was grown up with mingled grass and weeds. In one corner was a bit of garden where corn had ripened and was curing where it stood, where a few red tomatoes which the birds had not eaten glowed jewel-wise upon fading vines, and a yellow pumpkin and a green Hubbard squash lay side by side. At the right side of the narrow path which led up to the door a flower bed showed a few scarlet geranium blossoms. Upon the shelf within the little porch stood an oxalis and a cactus dead for want of moisture. The house blinds were shut. It was a very pitiful little house, like a shell without its mollusk or a body without its soul

Tears came to Elsie's eyes as she thought of the dear woman who had animated it with her kindly presence. She felt that she would like to go in and look about and try in imagination to refurnish the abandoned rooms and to people them with the gentle figures that had once frequented them.

The thin old horse, a freckled gray from the livery stable in town, was pulling at the reins in an effort to get his nose to the grass. Elsie sought for some place to make him secure and remembered the little barn. If the door was not nailed up she could put him in there.

The door was not nailed up. It slid open easily and she led the horse in and tied him to the stall which had held only cobwebs and hay dust for a long time. A little hay remained in one corner. She carried it to the horse, who received it as eagerly as if it had been the freshest of fodder. Then she went to the

It was locked securely. She went about trying the shutters. At last she found one partly off the hingeslown off by a high wind, no doubt. She swung it clear and put her hand to the window underneath. To her surprise, it raised as she pushed upon ce saying in her ear:

If one did come in he'd be glad shough to get out again after I'd given it to him good and lively with that old pair of brass tongs I keep handy for the purpose."

Aunt Hope's dear voice! Aunt lopes' own remembered words! And this was the pantry window. Elsie looked in. The tiny place was neat cupboard doors shut; an old iron oked perfectly natural and right. guite as if Aunt Hope had just stepand out Clarissa Mains, the heirees left some things as they should

The window-sill was only knee-high from the ground, and Elsie climbed over it easily. 'She let down the winfow behind her. The floor gave back an empty sound beneath her feet as walked across it to the kitchen. The kitchen, too, was quite unchanged. There stood the old-fashloned stove from which she had eaten so many of Aunt Hope's good dinners, In the dining-room the chairs, and the table still stood in their places upon the painted floor.

After the dining-room came the par lor the room that in Aunt Hope's lifetime Elsie had always loved best. It was a good-sized room in the front the house. She lifted a window and turned the slats of the closed shutter. The yellow afternoon light se in across the bare floor. Inerable motes danced in its rays. Upon the walls a few old pictures I hung, and the wall paper showed resh spaces upon its faded surface there others had been. There was a what not in one corner; a few chairs salted as if for occupants; a shell and a large cheap vase were upon the mantel. Of all Aunt Hope's treasred parlor furnishings these things

She was thinking of the last time she had been in this m. There had been flowers in the and many people. Her bands were crossed a a flower; her lips smiled a new smile of understanding of men's and of God's. Above the hushnd of tears rose a dignified they both looked at Aunt they would not look at the ser. How pale he had been! His eyes had the look of one who had been very near the holy things. "Who knows?" he answered, very under her well. Well, it was low. "Blessed are the peacemakers!"

Hope had longed for them to be friends again, how strongly she had advised their making up their foolish quarrel.

"You are both young and high-tempered," she had pleaded again and again, "but there'll come a time when you'll be old and remorseful unless you make up now. Why, you are made for each other, Elsie. You'll never be happy with anyone else, nor will David. He's a splerdid young fellow. Don't I know? Wasn't I with his mother the night he was born and haven't I watched him grow up from baby to man? And haven't watched you grow up, too? And I love you both. I've tried to have you care for each other because I felt that was as it should be. And now you've let that little trollop of a Doris Kennedy come between you! Oh, I knew what folks say about me that I am a meddling old matchmaker-

"Peacemaker, Aunt Hope," Elsie had laughed tremulously.

"Well, then, peacemaker, I hope am. Blessed-you know what the Bible says. But I ain't sure of that unless you'll let me make peace between you and David!"

"Some day," Elsie had half promised. That was a year ago. Then they had met at Aunt Hope's funeral and had not spoken. Afterward David had gone back to the city to his work and Elsie had gone to hers in the little country town. As far as she knew now, her romance was ended. There was no Aunt Hope to advise and gently smooth away the difficulty. But, oh, the sweetness and the bitterness of it lingered with her like mingled myrrh and money. She had loved David-she loved him still and must go on loving him as long as she lived. But she had the Bennett temper. He had it, too, for back somewhere, a couple of generations ago, a certain marriage had made them kin. She would not give up. Neither would he. And it was all because she had not liked his city cousin, Doris Kennedy, and he had! Perhaps down in her heart Elsie had been a bit fealous of the blonde young woman who looked as if she had been run in an exceeding slender mold and had never so much as bent her back since—an effect obtained, it parted for the front. The boy was Captain Bartlett and Mr. Whitney will

"Envious!" cried Elsie, scarlet with rage. So the quarrel had begun. And it had ended in David going his way and Elsie hers.

As she sat there now in the empty room Elsie owned to herself sadly that she had been unreasonable. After all, Doris was David's own cous in and older than he. There had been no reason in the world for her being ealous—as she had been: yes, she had to admit that now.

"If only I had listened to Aunt Hope. If only I had let her make

Now they were in the kitchen-now the diningroom. She plunged toward the door that opened into the little front entry. It was locked. She tugged at it frantically. Heaven! To be shut in this house with a tramp. Still tugging, with futile desperation, at the unyielding door she looked back over her shoulder just as the invader appeared in the parlor door-a tall young fellow in a respectable ulster, who looked almost as white and shaken as she knew she was

THE UNUSUAL CAREER OF COLONEL JOHN L CLEM

Col. John L. Clem, senior colonel in the quartermaster's department, 'U. S. A. has been assigned to duty in the new central division with headquarter at Chicago. He comes from Fort Sam Houston, Tex. By the time of his retirement from active military service in 1915, he will be the only man in the army who bore arms during the Civil war. This fact will give an inkling of the colonel's chief claim to distinction

Toward the end of those tumultuous years of the war the armies, both north and south, were largely recruited from among the youth of the nation. While this was peculiarly true the south, it was true of the north also, in spite of the north's vastly greater resources. Many of the volunteer officers applied for and were given commissions in the regular army after the close of the conflict. Most of these have long since been retired. Colonel Clem is one of the few such remaining in active service; he is the youngest even of these. This ized the possibilities of the far north distinction could have been gained only as Colonel Clem gained it-by enlisting at an age when most youngsters are just emerging from the nursery. Lossing, the historian, and other writers have affirmed that Colonel Clem was the youngest man who bore arms in the northern army. This assertion has not been challenged.

The colonel was ten years old at the time war was declared. Colonel Clem-little Johnny Clem he was called in his native Newark, Ohio, because of his diminutive stature—was certainly among those youngsters who got the most out of the moment. He watched the raw recruits, hastily got under arms, drilled and disciplined into the semblance of an army. His whole being vibrated to the roll of drums and the rumble of gun carriages. He applied to Captain Mc-Dougal of the Third Ohio regiment of foot for permission to accompany the regiment south. Quite naturally, the boy's petition was denied. He was, however, permitted to accompany the regiment as far as Cincinnati.

Cincinnati at that juncture was full of troops staying for orders. The boy, cheated of his first hopes, set himself to corrupt some other regiment. finally succeeding in attaching himself to the Twenty-second Michigan infantry, which soon afterward de-She seemed to hear a familiar was said, by means of an exacting not enrolled. It was enough for him use sledges and dogs instead of dressmaker. Elsie was far too natsort of substitute drummer. On the field at Shiloh, Johnny Clem played the "long roll," carrying himself so stoutly that he was given the sobrieuet "Johnny Shiloh."

By the time the battle of Chicksmauga was fought, in September, 1863, Johnny Clem had been advanced to the full dignity of a soldier, although he still acted as drummer boy. Equipped with a musket. barrel of which had been sawed off, he fought on foot among the men. The shortness of his legs was, how-ever, a sad handloap when it came to narching. He usually went into action seated on a gun carriage, joining his company only after the line

After the close of the war Colonel Clem entered West Point that he might continue his army career, After serving for a time on the Rio Grande, Colonel Clem joined the artillery school at Fortress Monroe, whence he was graduated in 1875. In 1879 he was appointed professor of military science and tactics at Galesville university in Wisconsin. Later he was given the rank of captain and assistant quartermaster in the army, his first station being at Schuylkill arsenal Philadelphia. In 1895 he was appointed major and served with that rank in the Porto Rican campaign. Since 1901 he has been stationed at San Antonio.

WILL HUNT IN THE ARCTIC, THEN TO SEEK SOUTH POLE

Capt. Robert A. Bartlett, of Peary Arctic fame, is so enamored of the polar regions that although he and Harry Whitney intend to set the South Pole this fall, he has taken a run up into the Arctic on a hunting trip before he turns his back for a three years'

Antarctic. He has taken a party of friends with him to the Arctic in search of big game and when he returns he will be in prime condition to set out on the south polar quest.

Several times has Captain Bartlett penetrated the Arctic Circle. His first voyage there was with Peary in the old Windward. He was chief officer then, and his uncle, Capt. Samuel Bartlett, was in command of the ship. In 1901 Captain Bob penetrated the northern wilds as a full-fledged commander of the Algerine with his little party of sportsmen, for on that first voyage with Peary he had realas a hunting ground par excellence.

In 1905 Captain Bob went into the far north again with Peary. This time he commanded the Roosevelt. He was the youngest skipper who ever commanded a polar exploring ship, and his excellent executive ability on that voyage decided Peary to have Captain Bob as the commander of the Roosevelt in 1908, when the last and successful dash to the pole began.

The lure of the sea was strong within him as a lad, just as it has been in his ancestors of many generations before. He is never happy on land. Neither were his forefathers. If they had lived in the old Norse days they would have been vikings, no doubt. And, as for that, Captain Bob looks not unlike those old vikings of a bygone century-bronzed and tall and fearless, his eyes keen and steady from long years of looking ahead as his vessel plows her way through dangerous waters, quick to meet any emergency and a handy man in a fight, if needs be. But Captain Bob is not wont to seek trouble. If it comes his way he meets it, just as he meets all other difficulties which beset the paths of seafaring men, as well as landsmen, if they live long enough.

and Easily Learned. A girl can learn nothing more useful than the simple trick of having her own room beautiful, attractive and clean. It is not always possible to have the furniture, but one can have a "homey looking" room. One thing is absolutely necessary, a room must be clean, bedspreads, pretty linen dresser pieces and chair cushions are necessary. Cover the trunk (if kept in the room) with a cretonne cover, and have a scrap basket to hold little odds and ends which must be burned. On the table have well selected books and magazines. Keep gay postal cards in a neat postal card book. Do not decorate the walls with them, for pretty as they are they soon hang crooked and make a room look untidy. Have a place for shoes, for if any thing makes a room upset it is a pair of tan shoes lying, pigeon-toed, under the bed and another pair of black ones under the dresser. Keep the closet in order so that when the door is opened you will not be ashamed to have anyone see how you keep your clothes. If you put things away as you use them you can have a room like this. A woman who likes to h house full of growing plants in winter has discovered the baskets which can be bought for 10 cents make very old-fashioned willow-ware, come in dark green, deep red and brown, and any of them are effective with the green of the plants, says the New York Tribune. If the baskets are bought in a 10-cent store it is most likely that one will need only to go to another department to buy for 10 cents the pans that will exactly fit them. Before being filled by the florist the pans should be painted grass green, or to match the basket.

One of these baskets may also, with a little more manipulation, he made to fill the more prosaic sphere of a work-basket, lined with Persian silk in harmonising colors. On one side is a pocket of silk drawn up by narrow elastic, and small bows holding in place an emery ball, a bodkin, a glove mender and a needle book make a pretty decoration atong the edge. The outer edge is trimmed with a modest little fancy fringe.

Newer in style is the brown one, with yellow added for brightness There is a mat in the bottom cut from cardboard and covered with brown silk, which is fastened to the under side with glus. The little silk cushion, which is of the tomato order, measures four and a half inches across. Both mat and cushion are held in place by two stitches of strong silk that go through the bottom of the basket. A yard and a half of ribbon three and a quarter inches wide will be required to hold the spools and to make the bow. A quarter of a yard of a wider ribbon in the same shade will do for the cushion.

Slip-Over Blouses

Blouses of silk or linen or wool or satin or pongee that slip over the head and require no buttoning up back or front are the latest. They are very dainty in appearance and complete, needing no guimpe. There is a little opening down a few inches in front and the neck has a tube for a draw-string of silk, which ties in front and ends in tassels. Some are finished at the neck with a net frill. The sleeves are in kimono style and there is any variety of plain, striped and fancy silks and other materials.

Mount Airy, Ga.-If James Adolph Cody keeps on growing for the next 20 years as he has for the past 27 months, there won't be a street in the country wide enough for his passage. He couldn't enter a railway train, couldn't pass under a bridge without crawling and would strain the axies of the biggest auto truck in the country. He now weighs 110 pounds and is just three months over two years old. If anybody knows of a bigger baby than that, George invites him to enter exhibit B. But James Adolph is

Mr. and Mrs James Aleck Cody, who live on the mountain side not far from Mount Airy, don't know what to think of the enormous size of their offspring. He wasn't their first baby and his predecessors were not unusually large nor are the parents above the average.

Young James Adolph was larger than the average when he entered this world, but not of appalling size by any means. But he began growing after his very first meal and hasn't done anything but grow since.

The child has grown in proportion within the past six months with the record he made in his first baby days. With the first indication of his abnormal growth, his parents consulted a physician and James Adolph was put under his care for some length of time. All efforts to keep the baby on a diet suitable for one of his age, proved as unsuccessful as the physician's treatment to keep him normal in flesh growth and any tendency beyond the ordinary baby.

He now weighs more than 100 pounds. He is 39 inches in height. barefoot. His measurements are as follows:

Between breakfast and dinner, he will eat two more biscuit with butter and syrup. For dinner he can eat a large plate of greens or any kinds of vegetables with boiled bacon, corn bread, biscult and a whole pie if he can get it, with two glasses of buttermilk. He eats again between dinner and supper, and his supper is in keeping with breakfast and dinner. He consumes as much as any grown person on the place and has sampled every kind of food served on the Cody

When James Adolph was six months old he showed a remarkable tendency to become a giant, and the family physician arranged a diet for him to' re-duce his flesh and curb his tendency to outerow his baby clothes faster than his mother could make them. They tried everything they could think of, but Adolph grew just the same, and anally his parents cut out the diet and inally his parents cut out the diet and let nature take its course. They have the satisfaction of knowing that he is the healthlest youngster in Habersham county, in spite of his size, and his mental capacities, while not in keeping with his avoirdupois, are really equal to other children of his age.

Scientists have been consulted as to James Adolphus' future. Some of them make a gloomy prediction, others believe he will stop growing taller in a few years, his figure will develop to that of a man and he will be full grown at 10 or 11 years. But if he doesn't

MOTHER OF GREAT HORSE PULLING A CAR IN NEW YORK

New York, Aug. 14- somewhere in the narrow alleys of the east side there toils daily at a peddler's cart a mare whose son, Anvil, won the $10,000 Merchants & Manufacturers' trotting prize at Detroit last week.

When the dam of Anvil was identified with racing she was known as Amy Smith. Frank G. Jones, who owned her, sold her at the Old Glory auction in the 1907 for $80 to a peddler named Stein.

Today a big reward is offered for the recovery of Amy Smith, and horsemen figure that she is worth at least $10,000, although the man who driving her is ignorant of the fact.

In addition to the mare herself being worth a fortune, there is the interesting fact that at the time she was sold she was in foal. The colt was born on the east side, and now that its brother, Anvil, has taken a big stake, trained men are scouring the dark lines of that section, looking at everything on four legs hitched to wagons stabled there.

The loss of Amy Smith to the horse breeding industry recalls the career of Morganatic, the mare who gave to the turf that champion of champions, Pitz Herbert.

Morganatic was sold without a pedigree for just what traders figured her mane, tail four legs were worth. She was one of the collection of brood mares auctioned off by Perry Belmont in the old days. When her son, Fitz Herbert, began to win races, the turf would search for the mother, but on one ever found out what had become

It was no emotional, impulsive action that took Mrs. Stone from her family. Her course was deliberate. and she followed it after long reflec-tion and, apparently, after having counted the full cost.

Most singular is the story of Mrs. Stone's fall under the spell of the mysterious Yoga cult. For years she had been reading theosophy and kindred subjects, and was mildly interested in them. It was along about this time that Dr. George Moulton organized in Lafayette a class in the Yoga philosophy. Many women and some men, in West! Lafayette, the college town, joined the class, and it became a great fad with certain highly educated people. Moulton taught that the Yoga philosophy was the religion of the Indian Yogi, or Soothsayers. One of the leading features of this doctrine was that of the "withdrawal," or separation from kindred and friends. It was this feature that at last fastened itself upon Mrs. Stone as subsequent events showed. Meetings of Dr. Moulton's class were held in several homes. Books on the subject were put in the hands of Mrs. Stone and other members of the class, and their interest grew.

Radical and revolutionary as were the books of the cult, Dr. Moulton seemed to go still beyond them, and evolve a Yoga philosophy of his own. But the members of the class were warned not to make public any of the private and secret instructions of how o send telepathic messages, how to hypnotize, how to use the key of Karna Yoga, and how to heal the sick. One of the injunctions in this respect was "Do not become a laughing stock for your friends by telling them what you can do or how you do it."

$2,000 MINT JULEP WAGER.

Washington, Aug. 14.-Representative Ollie James of Kentucky and Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, government pure food expert, who with Henry Waterson of Louisville, were named as a committee to settle an alleged $2,000 bet as to the merits of a mint julep, had interviews today, touching that famous beverage.

The utterance of Mr. James, popularly supposed, because of his place of residence, to be ex-cathedra, set forth that a mint julep should be mixed in a silver cup, a lump of sugar in the bottom, with a leaf or two of mint. Next comes cracked ice, filling the cup to the brim. The ice must be stirred as it is put in, thus crushing the mint a bit and putting a fine frost on the outside of the cup an ornamental feature highly regarded. The stirring must be done with a silver spoon if the true Kentucky ideal is to be gained. Then the whiskey is pourned in and the wonder is com-
