CITY WILL BUY LIMBS

UNFORTUNATE YOUNG WOMAN IS TO BE AIDED BY THE CITY COUNCIL

That Miss Anna Bergman, who recently had both limbs amputated below the knees as the result of complications that developed following an attack of typhoid fever, may be made self supporting and returned to her proper position in society, members of the Escanaba city council last night voted to purchase artificial limbs for the young woman. Through County Poor Commissioner the offer was made to the council that the county will pay the cost of taking the young woman to Chicago and having the limbs fitted in that city while the city will bear the expenses of purchasing the artificial feet.

The case of Miss Bergman is one of the most pitiable ever brought to the notice of the public.

Four years ago, when 19 years of age, she suffered an attack of typhoid fever. Her condition was critical for weeks and months at the Delta county hospital and a few months ago it was found necessary by the physicians to remove her limbs below the knees. For some time the cost of her treatment was born by foster parents and a foster brother. Ill fortune descended upon both, however, and she became a city charge. After recovering from the effects of the final operation she was removed to the Delta Almshouse where she is now being cared for.

Now she is absolutely helpless but by the aid of the aldermen real charity is to be extended to her that she may enter again into the real pleasures of life and instead of proving burden to herself and those attending her will become a self supporting young woman.

SEND MAYOR ON TRIP

ESCANABA'S MAYOR WILL GO ON DETROIT CRUISE AND EXPENSES WILL BE PAID.

Members of the city council last night designated Mayor John S. Lindsay as the official representative of the city for the cruise of the Upper Peninsula Development Bureau to Detroit early in next month. Mayor Lindsay will make the trip as the representative of the city and all of his expenses will be paid by the municipality.

It is hoped that a large delegation will represent Escanaba on the cruise and the action of the council shows well the temper of the people in relation to the cruise, forecasting a big turnout from this city.

COUNCIL IS TO APPEAR ON LABOR DAY

Members of the Escanaba city council last night formally accepted the invitation extended by the Trades & Labor Council of Escanaba to take part in the Labor Day parade and exercises on Sept. 4. The council members and city officials will appear in the parade and will take part in the exercises to be held at South Park according to the terms of the invitation that was accepted last night.

Charged with assaulting Peter Chesek, Peter J. Mertens was arraigned before Judge Emil Glaser yesterday. The defendant demanded an examination and his attorney will appear for him in the case when the action is called this morning.

MATTERS ARE ACTED UPON

COUNCIL TOOK UP MUCH BUSINESS OF IMPORTANCE AT SESSION LAST NIGHT.

Members of the council last night acted upon a number of matters of importance in a session of two hours. Among the matters acted upon were the following:

Granted permission to Knute Knutson to move a building from Wells and Wolcott streets to Rose and Ludington streets.

Received the report of the street committee showing that the cost of changing the course of Butcher's creek to drain a big area of city property would be $1222.60. The report of the committee was referred back for further information to be submitted at the next meeting.

Accepted the bond of J. M. Mulligan for moving his saloon to 301 Ludington street upon the approval of the city attorney.

Referred the bond of John Finnegan back for correction as Ald. Carl Johnson was offered as one of the sureties and a city official cannot qualify as a surety on a city bond.

Decided to vacate Roller avenue from Ruth street to Stephenson avenue upon the filing of a deed by the Escanaba Manufacturing company giving a similar street along the north end of their property to the city.

Ordered paid all bills that were due for street work in the city.

Ordered paid the bills of the Delta Contracting company for making improvements to the road leading to St. Joseph's and St. Anne's cemeteries.

Received the applications of several men from places on the fire department including Oscar Nelson.

Instructed the street committee and city engineer upon motion of Ald. E. J. Kirkpatrick to investigate methods of draining the water from North Jennie and Langley streets and Norris street and Escanaba avenue.

PAYMENT IS ORDERED

The first payment on Escanaba's new gas plant, which is now under the course of construction, was authorized by the aldermen last night. A statement from the foreman in charge of the work showed that $1500 was due the contractor, and after but a short discussion the bill was ordered paid immediately.

ESCANABA LAD SUSTAINS CUT WHILE AT WORK

While opening the door of a box car at the Extract company's plant at Wells on Monday, Porter Shaw, son of F. M. Shaw, owner of the plant, was struck by the car door when it fell and sustained a long gash across the scalp. He was taken at once to the office of a physician where it was found necessary to take five stitches to close the wound. The young man was in charge of a loading crew at the plant and in opening the door of a car the door fell from its hinges and struck him across the top of the

FIGHT CASE TO THE END

COUNCIL TAKES ACTION IN APPEALING ACTION TO THE SUPREME COURT.

That the Escanaba city council will fight to the bitter end to escape payment for the voting machines purchased by the city three years ago was shown last night when the aldermen authorized the retaining of Atty. F. D. Mead to continue the defense of the case against the Abbott Voting Machine company and to appeal the action in the face of an adverse decision against the city in the circuit court. In an opinion submitted to the council last night Atty. Mead expressed the opinion that a number of points were brought up that never before had been passed upon by the supreme court and it was this decision that the ease should be taken to the higher court. City Atty. Ryall in the action of last night is instructed to aid the special attorney in an effort to make the city's case perfect before the higher court.

SCOUTS WERE AT WELLS YESTERDAY

Under the leadership of Scout Master, Rev. Frederick Spence, the Escanaba troop of Boy Scouts left yesterday morning at 11 o'clock on a "hike" to Wells where they were the guests for the entire day of Supt. R. E. McLean. Upon their arrival the Scouts were taken to the boarding house where a special dinner was given for them. Following the dinner Mr. McLean gave a short talk to the boys and then took them under his personal care and showed them about the grounds and mills of the I. Stephenson company. He explained all of the things of interest to the boys and showed them how different things were made at the mills from the raw material. The Scouts returned to the city late yesterday afternoon loud in their praise of Mr. McLean as a host.

DIRECTORS IN SESSION

Members of the board of directors of the Escanaba Baseball Club met yesterday afternoon at the office of Dr. R. E. Hodson, manager of the club and took action on a number of matters of importance. Several new players were decided upon if they can be secured and last night telegrams were sent out over a wide ranch of territory to bolster up the weak spots in the local lineup.

Before the series of games at Ishpeming on Friday, Saturday and Sunday the management must secure at least another pitcher and several twirlers are in view any of which it is believed would fill the bill if they can be landed.

The team is to play four league games at Ishpeming in the present series meeting the team in single games on Friday and Saturday and with a double header booked for Sunday.

A number of locals will go to the Hematite City for the week day games while on Sunday it is estimated that fully 200 fans will be in attendance.

COUNCIL WILL CONDEMN AN ALLEY FOR SCHOOL

The city council last night instructed the city attorney to act with the school board in beginning condemnation proceedings to close an alley which on the present city map would pass through the site proposed for the new school building at North Escanaba. The school board owns the entire block in which the building is to be erected but that future complications might be avoided it was decided that it would be best to condemn the

LABOR DAY FUND IS SWELLED BY AMATEUR'S PLAY

For the benefit of the fund for the Labor Day celebration, the "Talk of the Town" was repeated last night to a capacity house at the Gladstone theater. The cast in the play was the same as when the production was given several weeks ago in that city. Each and every one of the principals and members of the chorus scored a hit at last night's performance and it is the opinion of some of those who witnessed the show that it was even better last night than on the occasion of the first production. The proceeds of last night will be given to the members of the committee in charge of the Labor Day celebration.

TOURNAMENT TO BE BEST

GREAT PLANS BEING MADE FOR CORNISH WRESTLING BOUT AT THE GLADSTONE CELEBRATION

That the Cornish wrestling tournament, which is to be one of the big features of the two days Labor Day celebration at Gladstone, is to be one of the biggest affairs of its kind ever planned in the peninsula, is the statement of J. H. Billings of Ishpeming, who has been engaged to manage the affair by the Gladstone businessmen. Of the coming tournament and the enthusiasm of Mr. Billings the Ishpeming correspondent for the Mining Journal says:

"We expect to make the Cornish wrestling tournament, to be held at Gladstone on Labor Day and the day following, one of the best that has ever been seen in the upper peninsula," said James H. Billings of this city, who has been engaged by the Gladstone businessmen to manage the affair. "I expect that all of the very best Cornish wrestlers in the upper peninsula will participate, and I am now endeavoring to induce John Rowett to enter. I feel quite certain that Joe Ziehr, the copper country champion, will be there, and if Rowett enters, his meeting with Ziehr should prove to be quite an event. The Gladstone businessmen want us to make the wrestling tournament a big event and I shall do my best to accommodate them. There will be at least six of Ishpeming's best wrestlers in attendance and I expect in addition to Ziehr, the Chapman brothers and Orr, from the copper country, also the Sampson brothers from Iron Mountain. If I can get sixteen first-class men, and I believe we will have no trouble listing them, the tournament will be a hummer.

"I intend to bring down Marquette country men to act as sticklers. It would be difficult to find competent men for those positions at Gladstone, as the people there do not profess to know anything about Cornish wrestling and this will be the first tournament of the kind ever held there. When I was at Gladstone a couple of weeks ago, the businessmen told me they wanted to make the tournament the biggest kind of a success, and it was at my suggestion that they increased the prizes. The sticklers and I will go from here to Gladstone in my Mitchell car, making the trip by way of Republic and Iron Mountain. We will go down the day before, so as to be there in ample time to complete the final arrangements for the tournament.

"The Gladstone people intend to make the Labor Day celebration the biggest affair ever held in the city. In addition to wrestling there will be baseball games, athletic events, motorcycle races, and music by the Ishpeming and Norrie band, the latter of Ironwood. There is also to be a big parade and practically all of the automobile owners in the city, as well as a number in Escanaba, have promised to put in their cars. I intend to decorate my automobile, and the sticklers, myself and a few others will occupy it. I have not decided who I shall engage as sticklers, but there are several here who have had a great deal of experience in that work and

DOYLE WAS IN CITY

YOUNG MENOMINEE ATTORNEY WHO RECENTLY SHOT SELF IN CHICAGO VISITS HERE.

Completely recovered from the effects of a gun shot wound, which it is now admitted was self inflicted, Atty. Gerald Doyle of Menominee was in Escanaba yesterday. He came to the city to meet his fiancée Miss Helen Jones, of DePere, who stopped here on a return trip from Mackinaw Island where she had been spending a week. The couple escaped from all acquaintances in the city and quietly left the city last night for Menominee at 8:45 o'clock.

Young Doyle was shot while walking through a park in Chicago two weeks ago. At first he claimed that he had been shot by an enemy from ambush but later he admitted to his father that he had shot himself through the shoulder that his wedding with Miss Jones might be deferred until he had recuperated his losses on the stock market. It is said that Miss Jones is still firm in her determination to marry the young attorney but the date for the postponed wedding has not yet been announced.

ANNUAL MEETING CLOSED MONDAY

The annual convention of the Young Peoples societies of the Swedish Mission churches of the Lake Superior District which was held at Iron Mountain came to a close Monday noon and in the afternoon the majority of the delegates in attendance went to Spread Eagle Lakes where they are being entertained at the summer home of the Rev. Isaac Skog, pastor of the Iron Mountain church. The meeting was a most successful one in every way. During the meeting a great many different articles and speeches were read by the home and visiting delegates. The societies appropriated for mission work $20 to Gwin, $15 to the Home of Mercy, Chicago and $15 to the school at North Park, Chicago.

EX-CITY CLERK GOES TO IOWA FOR NEW JOB

Ex-City Clerk M. J. Lyons left last night for Deborah Ia., where he will serve as bookkeeper for Brogan & Rich, contractors now engaged in extensive work at that place. The contractors are now engaged in building the dam and pulp mill here, have work in progress at a number of points in the west and Mr. Lyons is to take charge of the book work at one of their most important stations.

WILLIAM WALTERS TAKES A BRIDE AT NEGAUNEE

Announcements have been received in Escanaba of the marriage at Negaunee on Saturday evening of William Walters and Miss Ellen Collins both of Negaunee. The groom is particularly well known in Escanaba having frequently visited with friends in this city.

Of the wedding the Marquette Chronicle says: "Will Walters, the youngest son of Capt. Thos. Walters of this city and Miss Ellen Collins, the youngest daughter of Mrs. Michael Collins were married Saturday evening at 4:45 at the parsonage of St. John's church. Rev. J. A. Keul performed the ceremony. Mrs. Howard Heyn, sister of the bridegroom, attended the bride and Henry Collins, a brother of the bride, supported the bridegroom. Mrs. Heyn and Mr. Collins were the only witnesses present.

BOARD JUMPER IS ARRESTED

Charged with leaving Menominee without settling a board bill amounting to $55, George Maas was arrested here yesterday morning by Officer Keenan of Menominee. It is charged that the man who came to Escanaba but a few days ago escaped from his Menominee boarding place without settling his account.

APPROPRIATION TURNED DOWN

ESCANABA CITY COUNCIL WILL NOT CONTRIBUTE TO COMING COUNTY FAIR

A resolution to appropriate $500 for the Delta County Agricultural Society to aid in giving a successful county fair in Escanaba this fall, was killed in the council last night. In spite of a fight for the measure by Ald. C. G. Swan and the statement of other members of the council that they would favor such an appropriation if it could legally be made, only Ald Swan voted in favor of the appropriation when the motion was put to the council members. The resolution asking for the appropriation was first placed before the aldermen at the last session and was referred to the finance committee. Last night the committee reported that in spite of their desire to aid the fair it had been held by City Atty. A. H. Ryall that such an appropriation could not be legally asked for. Attention was called to the appropriation that was made by the council for the recent Fourth of July celebration and it was admitted that the appropriation at that time was not legally made.

Pros. Atty. T. E. Strom, secretary of the society appeared before the council and pointed out the benefits that will accrue to Escanaba from the fair as well as the far reaching benefits from a county agricultural show. Mr. Strom asserted that he did not ask the council to commit an illegal act in making the donation that was asked for but believed that under the general laws the aldermen were permitted to make the contribution without any legal question. City Atty. Ryall held that the aldermen had no legal right to make an appropriation of any kind and his view with that of the finance committee was finally accepted by a majority of the aldermen.

NEW AUTOMOBILE ORDINANCE IS NOW PROPOSED

An ordinance which will make ten miles an hour on the business streets and 15 miles the maximum speed for autos in the residence district, was submitted to the council last night.

In addition it is proposed in the ordinance that when a street car stops at a crossing an auto must come to a full stop at least 20 feet from the rear of the car where the passengers are sitting. A fine of $25 or imprisonment for 30 days at the county jail is fixed as a penalty for violating the ordinance. The document was last night referred to the ordinance committee to report at the next meeting.

FIRST WOMAN IS NOW MEMBER

Mrs. Margaret Manion, of Statenville, Ga., is the first woman member of the Upper Peninsula Development Bureau. Mrs. Manion owns nine forty acres of land in Maple Ridge township and her interest in the development of this portion of the peninsula therefore is keen. In a letter received by Treasurer H. W. Roade of the association yesterday the membership fee was received from Mrs. Manion and she is now registered as a member in good standing and the first woman member of the peninsula's booster

AMENDMENT PROPOSED

POOL AND BILLIARD HALL OWNS ERS PRESENT PETITION FOR MORE OPEN TIME

A petition signed by 300 tax payers of the city asking the council to amend an ordinance recently passed to allow pool and billiard halls of the city to remain open until 12 o'clock each week day and from noon to midnight on Sundays was presented to the aldermen last night. Without discussion the proposed amendment to the ordinance was referred to the ordinance committee for a report at the next meeting.

Recently an ordinance was passed by the council requiring pool and billiard halls to be closed at 11 o'clock on each work day of the week and all day on Sundays. The ordinance has met with considerable criticism about the city and the amendment proposed will receive the earnest consideration of members of the council's ordinance committee.

In addition to asking for an extension of the open hours the petitioners ask that the city police officers be instructed to enforce the present provisions of the ordinance relative to the prevention of schools boys from frequenting the pool rooms of the city.

SOME WORK TO BE DONE

Because of the fact that some detail work is yet to be completed in the construction of the new concrete bridge over the Escanaba river at Wells, that structure was not formally accepted by the Delta County Board of Road Commissioners yesterday. Instead a payment of $7,500 on the remaining contract price was allowed the Delta Contracting company. The underworks of the bridge in some places are still to be touched up with concrete and some work remains to be carried out on the roadway over the structure.

All of the remaining work will be completed before the next meeting of the board of road commissioners.

COUPLE TO TAKE VOWS

In the presence of a number of friends and relatives Miss Lillian Frechette, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Frechette of Bark River, and Frank Hirm, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Hirm of this city, will be married at St. Joseph's church of this city on Tuesday morning of next week. The bride-to-be came to Escanaba a year ago to serve as pianist at a local theater. The friendship with the groom-to-be was quickly formed and the ceremony of next Tuesday will be the result. The bride has a host of friends in this city as well as at Bark River. The groom is a master baker employed at the shop of his father and has spent his entire life in this city. Like his bride-to-be he numbers his friends by the score and all of whom will appear to offer their congratulations immediately following the wedding ceremony.

YESTERDAY WAS A HOLY DAY

Yesterday all Catholics of this city and in fact all over the world observed the Feast of the Assumption. It was a feast day of obligation. At St. Patrick's and other churches of like denomination, there were three masses, at five, seven and nine o'clock. On Monday evening confessions were heard, while at the two early masses yesterday Holy Communion was given and at 9 o'clock Mass was celebrated

STATION AGENT IS ASSAULTED

Sault Ste. Marie, Aug. 15.—A sheriff's posse is scouring the district of West Algona, for trace of an armed bandit who last night assaulted and held up Station Agent James Walsh at Desbarth, a village ten miles from Sault Ste. Marie, Ont. Sitting beside an oil lamp with his back to the door, Walsh was struck over the head from the rear by the bandit and knocked unconscious. Simultaneously the lamp was blown out and the highwayman failed to discover about $100 that was hidden in the back of the cash drawer. Walsh was found lying on the floor in a pool of blood by a neighbor who chanced to pass by.

by a cure defying stomach trouble that baffled doctors, and resisted all remedies he tried, John W. Modders, of Moddersville, Mich., seemed doomed. He had to sell his farm and give up work. Its surely a grand remedy for stomach trouble." Just as good for liver and kidneys. Every bottle guaranteed. Only 50c at all druggists.

Frazer had been shadowing Juhl as John Lewis, suspected of being a "plume thief" and did not recognize him as the escaped convict. As the street car neared the central police station Frazer placed him under arrest and Juhl shot him through the abdomen.

NEGRO MEETS AWFUL END AT HANDS OF MOB

Coatesville, Pa., Aug. 15.—Zachara Walker, a negro desperado, was carried on a cot from the hospital here tonight and burned to a crisp by a frenzied mob of men and boys. The fire was ignited half a mile from town.
The negro, who had shot and killed Edward Rice, a special policeman, last night, was first dragged to the scene of the shooting, begging piteously for mercy. He had been arrested by a posse late this afternoon after a search which had stirred the country-wide. When the posse finally located him, he was found hiding in a cherry tree, and with the last bullet in his revolver shot himself in the mouth, falling from the tree. He was taken to the hospital and placed under police guard.
A few minutes after 9 o'clock last night a crowd numbering about one thousand persons appeared at the hospital. The leaders smashed the window frame and crawled through or the corridor. A policeman guarding Walker was seized and while several took charge of him others took hold of Walker's couch and carried the negro out. After its work was done the mob quickly dispersed.
Durant, Okla., Aug. 15.—A mob of five hundred whites today captured and shot to death an unidentified negro who yesterday shot and killed Mrs. Redden Campbell, near here. The negro was killed after a running fight lasting more than an hour and in which he exhausted his ammunition in returning the fire of his pursuers.
When the colored man fell, volleys of bullets were poured into his body by the advanced mob. The corpse was then taken to the home of his victim and was identified as that of her assailant. The mob then burned the remains and dispersed.

SILENT ROOSTER DISGUSTS HENS

Tarrytown, N. Y., Aug. 15.—Can a rooster come back? This is the question that is worrying John M. Fulton, who lives in an exclusive section of Elmford. Mr. Fulton owns a fine domineer rooster, whose crowing used to surpass anything ever heard around Elmford. His neighbors complained, saying sleep in the morning was impossible.
A few weeks ago Fulton read the suggestion of the Chicago chief of police to place a board over the rooster's head, so he could not spread himself, and thus prevent him from crowing. The scheme worked, and the neighbors are again on speaking terms but Fulton's rooster is a most crest-fallen creature. The hens refuse to associate with him and have gone so far as to place mourning bands on their legs with oil and tar scratched from the roads.
Mr. Fulton has named his crowless rooster Caruso. It is really pitiful to watch the rooster trying "to come back." Even the hens cackle at him.

5TH AVENUE MODISTES' PLUNGED INTO GLOOM

New York, Aug. 15.—It became the opinion of some Fifth avenue modistes today that Miss Madeline Force, the young fiancée of Colonel John Jacob Astor, is to be very economical in the arrangements for her wedding trousseau. It was learned on the avenue that she and Colonel Astor drove in a taxicab to five shops this afternoon and that the young woman made it plain that $1,000 would be the limit of the expenditure for her wedding finery.
In contrast to the $100,000 which a recent society girl is said to have spent on her trousseau, including $2,500 for a single gown, it was said that Miss Force objected to a $250 creation which one modiste showed her today and found one at a shop which pleased her just as well for $100.

SAFEGUARD LIVES ON LAKE MICHIGAN

Chicago, Aug. 15.—The operators of the United Wireless company are standing at their keys at nearly all of the shore stations on Lake Michigan to protect steamer passengers and crews, although many are penniless and some are hungry. None have been paid a regular salary since June.
Sheldon Bacon, the receiver recently appointed by the federal district court in Maine, where the legal fight involving the company originated, is expected to relieve the situation in a few days. He has departed from New York and upon his arrival in Chicago will at once pay of the faithful operators.

While none of the operators will accept commercial business, at almost every station there is a man at a key with a receiver strapped on his head awaiting to catch the "S. O. S." distress signal from any of the lake boats.

An ordinary case of diarrhoea can, as a rule, be cured by a single dose of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. This remedy has no superior for bowel complaints. For sale by Groos Drug Store and Farrell and Lohmiller.

The Mystery of the Persian Heiress

By ROBERT NAUGHTON.

(Copyright, 1911, by F. L. Nelson.)

It was Die Walkure night of the Nibelungen Ring series at the Metropolitan Opera House, four years ago, as I remember distinctly, that this unusual entanglement came to light. Rand and I were in the company of General and Mrs. Edward Blashfield, and were chatting in the box after the second act, when an usher came up behind Rand and said:

"Mr. Lawrence Rand? There is a gentleman in the next box who wishes to see you for a moment."

With an apology Rand left us, and almost immediately I heard the sharp click of a rubber band against the palm of his hand, a little innocent-appearing signal which we often used, and supposing that he wanted me, I too left the box and entered the next one.

With his chair hitched up close to the one in which sat Rand was a man of remarkable appearance. Of medium height and slender, with a dark olive skin, flashing black eyes and a wealth of straight, black hair, splendid teeth and extremely fine features, he was easily recognized as an Oriental of high caste. His forehead and certain facial lines indicated a fine mind and a delicate, romantic, sensitive nature. His age was about thirty-eight.

Rand was endeavoring to repress an excited out-pouring of some narrative, evidently until I could hear it also.

"Mr. Duncan, this is the honorable Khan Nadjian, whom you will recall as the importer and expert in Persian rugs. His place is just around from the club. He has a difficult problem for us, and as he speaks Italian better than English I need you badly. Otherwise, I should not have called you away from our friends."

Reducing the statement of the noble Persian to important facts in their proper proportion, the story was as follows:

For ten years he had occupied the second and third floors of a house in East Sixty-third street, sub-letting it from the owner, a Mrs. Terrance Malvern. At present, Mrs. Malvern had been gone from the house for a period of four months on a visit to a married daughter, leaving the establishment in charge of her brother, a middle-aged person named John Coughlan, a helpless, dependent sort of individual, likely to do the most childish and foolish things.

The first floor of the house was occupied by a bachelor surgeon, Dr. Justin Huntley, a specialist in gun-shot wounds. There was an old colored maid-of-all-work who came above first floor each morning to care for the apartments of the two bachelors. She never left the basement after ten o'clock each day, unless summoned, and Nadjian never left the house until after eleven.

For three months his apartments had been entered in his absence by some unknown visitor as regularly as he left the house, the unknown nearly always disturbing, very slightly, some of the small objects in his library, as if looking for papers among his private documents. Several times he had returned in fifteen minutes with the purpose of catching the intruder, only to find that the unknown had come and gone. There were but two means of entrance to the house, the basement door opening on the arway at the street, and the door to the doctor's floor, approached by the steps from the street.

There was a vacant lot on the east side of the house, and an air shaft ten feet wide on the west side, between the house and a towering apartment structure, which shut off access to the roof.

For a week a trusted clerk from the rug store had seen no one coming or going from either of the front doors. Yet signs of visitation were apparent when Nadjian returned each day. It was proof conclusive, therefore, that either Dr. Huntley or John Coughlan was clandestinely endeavoring to get possession of something valuable which they knew, or imagined, Nadjian to have among his effects. There were many rare tapestries, pieces of Damascene plate, paintings on ivory, antique jewels and other articles, both large and small, of high value, yet nothing had ever been taken away.

"And now, you see, gentlemen," Nadjian concluded, "I have told you everything. I have absolutely nothing that either my dear friend, the doctor, or the miserable Coughlan could want that they have not had every opportunity for taking, but one of the other persists in coming to my rooms secretly. If Coughlan—poor, he is a slow fool, and I do not care. If Dr. Huntley, I am grieved; I am hurt, I am mortified to the depths. I should not want to live, for he is more to me than my brother. Such a friend as the heart of man could hope to find once out of a million of these human wretches—so I will not give up my course—Mon Dieu, but I must know, or I shall go mad. I must know at once!"

Rand and I exchanged glances. Nadjian's shrewdness and feeling were evident.

"If we returned home with you to-night, Khan Nadjian, we should reach your home after twelve. Where would John Coughlan be in the natural course of events?"

"In bed in the basement."

"And Dr. Huntley?"

"He always retires at eleven, unless we play at cards."

"Very well, with your permission we will go home with you. Yes! Duncan, will you telephone to Tom Rahway to pack a suit case with our clothes for tonight and tomorrow, and take his post opposite Khan Nadjian's house, watching who comes and goes, and waiting our arrival."

Rand then begged Mrs. Blashfield's permission to have the Khan join our party, and after the opera we three drove to Sixty-third street. We found the house quite as Nadjian had told us, distinctly detached, with the two entrances.

In the Khan's apartments privacy had been sacrificed to art and there was no means of shutting them off from the hall. The doors had been removed and the doorways hung with jade and steel bead portieres. His first floor, the second floor of the house, consisted of four rooms, all furnished in an Oriental taste that was most luxurious. The Khan's own bed chamber, in an alcove of which he had his bath, was decorated as the interior of a Cingalese house. The front chamber on this floor was fitted to represent a bazaar in Turkestan. The dining room was paneled with carved black woods in imitation of the cabin of an ancient Chinese war junk. The library, which was the first room entered off the hall and which then led, by three doors, into the dining room and the front and rear bed rooms, was the most fantastically decorated of the four. It was designed to represent the forest camp of some northern sheik, the trunks of trees being book-cases, while the vistas in the walls were sliding panels with books behind them. The desk in the center of the room was a huge sandstone rock, hollowed out to accommodate drawers which opened up at the touch of a knob. Grass mats carried out the effect on the floor and in one corner of the room, as if supported on a rock and a fallen tree was a bed roll of rich stuffs, making a surprisingly solid and comfortable couch.

"What cigarettes do you smoke?" asked Rand suddenly.

"Always Teofani. So does the doctor."

"Does Coughlan smoke a Greek Theopopoulus? Here is the butt of one, still warm."

The Khan's eyes seemed about to start from his head. He could scarcely answer that he did not know what Coughlan smoked, but stood with his eyes fastened on the bit of cigarette, following Rand's gaze at the smoke still floating about the ceiling.

"Have you a spool of black silk thread?" inquired Rand.

The Khan said he had not.

Rand walked slowly through the rooms of the floor until his eyes lighted on a red silk cord supporting an ancient Tartar dagger.

"May I take that cord?" said he.

The Persian loosened the cord and gave it to him.

Rand led the way back to the library, and cutting a section three feet long from the cord, unrolled the twist and gave us each a strand.

"Let us sit down here under this strong light and carefully separate each thread of the smallest possible division. I want fifty threads of silk as nearly like a spider's film as I can get them."

For an hour we worked at the difficult, tedious task in silence. The threads then lay stretched on a sheet of blotting paper, clinging lightly to its fuzz.

"I hope you will understand me, Khan Nadjian, when I say that for perhaps some days I must have absolute control of these two floors, your movements inside the house, and, in fact, every detail of your establishment, if you wish me to solve this problem for you. Are you willing to undergo some probably severe inconveniences?"

The Persian vowed he was willing to endure torture if need be.

"Very well, then," answered Rand.

"Sit down at your desk and go over your papers and correspondence just as you usually do; in fact, as if you felt yourself perfectly safe from intrusion, while Mr. Duncan and I make a detailed survey of the other rooms. First, however, conduct Mr. Duncan to the skylight, which I noticed was reached by a closet doorway, and allow him to look at it carefully."

I knew Rand had some little plan which he was not willing that Nadjian—perhaps I also—should know.

We returned in about ten minutes and he was still sitting smoking, apparently just as we had left him. I observed, however, that almost all of the little quasi invisible threads of silk were gone from the blotting paper. There were ten, perhaps, left.

"Remember, work for the next half hour over your private papers exactly as you would if you felt yourself in the most complete security. At the end of half an hour go to your room and retire. In the morning go out by the hall door. Do not enter this room on any mission. Remain at your store until you hear from me or from Mr. Duncan. Leave your papers carefully on the desk. If you wish, Mr. Duncan will occupy the bed room on the floor above, for I shall shortly leave the house. So, I shall bid you good-night. Now, we will go upstairs, Duncan. Good-night, Khan Nadjian."

The Persian bade us a gracious good-night, and we went upstairs. "Now," said Rand, "if he follows my instructions we are safe from intrusion. We will go down and see what evidence he has supplied us. Please do not enter the library but stand in the doorway until I have finished."

We went down to the library and I stood in the door as Rand had requested while he took out his lens, turned on all the lights and went over the room like a beagle on a fresh scent; examining the floor, the strange furniture, the trunks of the imitation trees and finally the papers on the table. For fully five minutes he stood gazing at these papers. Then he got down on his hands and knees on the floor and began carefully stroking his hand back and forth, moving backwards until he came to one of the tree bookcases in the wall. There he drew himself up with that relaxed look of satisfaction on his face that I had so often seen there when the day's work was ended and to his satisfaction. He then came to the doorway in which I was standing.

"Come on, Duncan," he said. "We're all right now. Wait till I stretch these remaining threads across these bead curtains. Now no one can enter the library without leaving a record. In the morning I will appear at the basement door and keep the old servant below stairs. You remain in your room until you hear Nadjian go out and then stand your ground until you hear sounds in the library. I am going to leave to you the honor of capturing this intruder but I shall not be far away. It depends upon your own ingenuity to read the story you will find written in the threads."

Then throwing his coat over his shoulders and putting his opera hat rakishly over one ear he waved me good night, and was gone noiselessly down the heavily carpeted stairs.

I slept well, waking about nine o'clock when that strange, confused sense one has upon opening the eyes in unfamiliar surroundings. Going to my doorway I could hear Nadjian stirring about in his bed room, some one walking up and down on the doctor's floor and in the basement, a man's and a woman's voices, presumably Coughlan and the housekeeper, engaged in some trivial discussion. The acoustic properties of the house certainly were marvelous, but many of the older New York houses are so built that one can hear anything from bottom to top, but not vice versa.

In about an hour I heard Nadjian leave his room, go downstairs and out. Sometime later, it seemed like an hour, although on consulting my watch I found it was not more than twenty minutes, I heard the doctor's door open and close. Then I smelled the strong odor of an Oriental cigarette wafted in from the hall. I heard no ascending footsteps but, it may have been my imagination, I thought I heard a light step on the stair from my floor to the Khan's first floor.

I waited a few minutes and then noiselessly tip-toed down the stair to have a look at the silk thread.

It was carried away. The intruder was trapped. But where was Rand? My two hours were not up. Should I enter the Khan's apartments and confront the visitor? The smoke of the Oriental cigarette rolled out of the doorway. I heard nothing of Dr. Huntley on his floor. I was sure now that he was the trespasser. My anger at this evident treachery of the Khan's trusted friend rose at the thought and, regardless of what effect it might have on Rand's plans, I brushed aside the portieres and stepped into the Persian's library, my hand on my revolver, and fully expecting a disagreeable encounter.

The library was absolutely empty. I could see from the doorway into each of the other three rooms and I was equally sure no one was there. Yet the room was full of blue smoke that hung in wreaths and rings in the sunlight. The papers on the table were untouched, as far as I could see, but in the tray lay a fresh Theopopoulus, but I touched my finger up to it. It was still warm.

I stood perfectly motionless for fully ten minutes, trying to think what my next move should be, when, suddenly, I saw one of the threads lying at my feet where the light struck it strongly. Looking more closely I saw they were laid systematically about the floor.

A great feeling of relief rushed over me. Rand, thinking I had followed his bent the night before, had merely said "read the story in the threads." I had thought only of those on the portieres and in the halls, and I had very nearly bungled the entire scheme.

I began my survey, moving around the room to the left. Where the threads were straight they had been undisturbed, and where disturbed or carried away, the mysterious visitor had passed. Rand had thus tracked Nadjian's movements in the room during our absence the night before, and the stroking he had done had been merely to once more straighten the threads.

I found nothing disturbed until I came to a certain tree. It had evidently been opened to examine the books within. From it a pathway of disturbed strands extended directly to the Arab campstool before the desk.

my lighted cigarette on the grass mat beside the couch. It had begun to smolder, and out of the corner of my eye I caught a glimpse of a hand thrust out to hastily extinguish the incipient conflagration. Another cigarette; another fire; another appearance of the hand in self-preservation, and I would get a look at the hand. That would be enough.

Acting my part carefully, I rattled my paper, tossed about, and missed fire on two matches as I lighted my cigarette. I enjoyed it for about five minutes, and then dropped it with a red coal on the end, fairly in front of the knot-hole. As soon as the grass nap began to smoke a hand shot out and smothered the fire—a little hand bearing many jewels—the white, slender hand of a woman!

I had no trouble in lying still for some minutes, paralyzed by sheer amazement. Then my brain began to work. The whole hypothesis had been wrong—our whole hypothesis, no, Khan Nadjian's and mine, for though I had not the remotest idea what Rand's had been, I had every reason to be sure now, from the process he had pursued that it did not coincide with that of the Persian. But, whatever the explanation of this affair, I was in a deeper quandary than I had been before I hit on the expedient of the burning cigarettes. I had as game for the chase an unknown woman to whose identity there had not been indicated the slightest clue in anything I had seen or that Nadjian had said. Doubtless Nadjian would not know who she was if I hauled her out and held her until he could be summoned. Again, he might be either guiltily or innocently involved in some plot or scandal which any precipitate action on my part might bring to a crisis that would be bad for him. I

"Mr. Duncan, will you be so good as to rise from that divan, lift the side and assist Mademoiselle Melenon from beneath it? My dear child, please come out. It is no further use to attempt to conceal anything."

A soft sobbing broke out under the couch. After fumbling a moment with what I had supposed was the solid tree side, I found it was hinged at the top and swung out easily. The instant I opened it there rolled out and sprang to her feet a very angry and beautiful girl of a marked Greek type. There was no mistaking here nose and brow. She would have darted out the doorway, but Rand, with a long spring, intercepted her and gently forced her to a seat. Her tears dried instantly and her eyes blazed defiance. She began some hot speech in broken English, but he interrupted her:

"Wait, wait, just a moment, mademoiselle, you are not to talk. I will tell you the story of this matter."

With tightened lips, clenched hands, and her splendid eyes changing in expression from fear to entreaty and then to proud anger, the girl sat silent, and waiting while Rand turned over the papers on the desk. A step sounded on the stair. He covered the scraps with a folded newspaper just as Khan Nadjian, wonder written on his face, stepped into the room.

"You sent for me?" he asked of me, not recognizing Rand in the plumber at his desk.

"I telephoned half an hour ago for you to come at once. I was talking from this young lady's apartment," said Rand.

From her apartment, half an hour ago! How was that possible when he had been in the house, as I knew positively, ever since he came in when I lay on the couch?

"Who is this young lady?" asked the Khan, eyeing her with very evident admiration.

"Sit down and I will tell you. You can supply the final explanation. Her name is Ione Melenon. She is twenty years of age; was born in Beirut, the daughter of P. Melenon."

"Peresene Melenon's child?"

Rand disregarded Khan Nadjian's breathless exclamation.

"For three months you have watched Khan Nadjian leave his house and have then entered his rooms, always remaining as long as you wished or dared, searching his books and papers for the few old scraps of rough notes and maps which you knew he possessed and which contain the secret of wealthy turquoise mines near Nishapur, Persia."

The Khan leaned forward in his chair as if about to leap on Rand.

"We would have worked more easily if he had confided these facts to us. I suspected he was holding something back and last night allowed him to point out the way to his own secret by tracking his steps on the floor. Then I found the papers and here they are."

"You were hoping, Miss Melenon, that some day he would leave them out, but you were not careful about putting everything you disturbed back in its exact place. When you were trapped you hid until you could make your escape, under that couch where Mr. Duncan caught you. You were also very careless about cigarettes and ashes for, when on the next floor listening, you dropped many ashes in one spot, and you left cigarette stubs at least twice too often. I cannot quite understand why you smoked so steadily in these rooms. You smoked very little in your own."

"Because when smooke is in they room and frawn door open, smooke blows queeck."

"Ah, very clever. The upward draught, as well as your ears, warned you. That is good, isn't it, Duncan? It was the movement of the smoke that attracted my attention to your means of entrance. You see, Khan Nadjian, she has been on your track, has taken apartments on a level with your roof, in the bathhouse neighboring you, has a light steel extension crane which she thrusts out from the top of her window after she has seen your departure from the house, and then she daintily swings over to your roof on a short rope. How did you get this key which you left in the skylight lock?"

"I find out they locksmeth of they hour and pay heem."

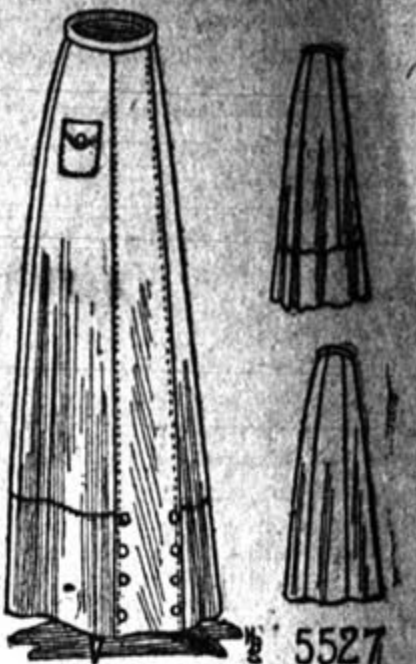

"You are a clever woman, Miss Melenon, and a brave one to cross that gap between this house and the next. I have just used your method twice in the last hour. Please forgive my disturbing your little things in your room to get the information I needed. Now, Khan Nadjian, the case is ended so far as Mr. Duncan and I are concerned. You may call in the police if you wish and we will give the needed testimony. I would like to hear, however, since you seem to know, who Peresene Melenon is, or was, for by the mourning frame on his picture in mademoiselle's rooms I take it he is dead."

"Yes, he is dead, almost as many years as this poor girl has been alive. She may have been born since he died before the mouths of the guns in Teheran. He was my best friend, though many years my senior. We were prisoners together after he had found those turquoise fields—prisoners on false charges, and I escaped. I did not know he had a child, though I found his wife's grave in Damascus ten years ago. I am an exile, but I will go back to the turquoise fields some day. No, Mr. Rand, there is no need for the police; this poor girl and I will settle this matter between ourselves."

And they did, for about a month later they were married, and not long since I saw a paragraph in the Engineering News saying that an English syndicate had paid a huge sum and would exploit the fields.

When He Was Quiet.

A quarter of a century ago, John T. Raymond, the famous comedian who starred in America as Colonel Sellers, and whose dramatic success was the yet well remembered, "There's Millions in It," decided to present the play, "The Gilded Age," in London, says M. A. P., London.

The story goes that, directly after Raymond's arrival, he entered Gillig's American Exchange, then a famous resort and banking place for Americans, and saw that the office was well filled with many who knew him.

"So, in a loud tone, he called to the manager: 'I say, Gillig, how does one send money to America?'"

A week after his opening in the piece he again presented himself at the exchange, and, slinking noiselessly over to Mr. Gillig's corner, with his hand shutting off his tones, quietly whispered: "I say, Gillig, how does one get money from America?"

They Generally Do.

"I began on the lowest round of the ladder," the self-made man proudly declared.

"Yes," replied the man who had just been pressed into a corner by him, "and you proceeded as soon as you were through with it to kick it out."

His Sine.
"He calls his wife his sine."
"What an odd idea."
"Not so very. He doesn't dare to attend a poker party because he says she will end him out."

AN INNOCENT YOUNG KING.

According to the cabled descriptions of the House of Lords committing har-kari, "Lord Halsbury drew a pathetic picture of the young and inexperienced King at the mercy of an astute lawyer, who told him that the creation of Peers was the only solution of the problem of the veto bill."
 King George, the little innocent referred to, was born in 1865, forty-six years ago. He received a good education, was apprenticed to the sailor business, in which he rose to the rank of read admiral. On the death in 1892 of his elder brother, the Duke of Clarence, he became heir-presumptive to the Throne and learned the king business from his father, then Prince of Wales. On the accession of Edward VII, George became Prince of Wales, and virtual assistant to the King. He has been twice around the world, and has visited more parts of the British dominions than any other individual who ever reigned over them. Thanks to the assistance he had given his father in routine matters, he brought to the Throne a good knowledge of all current questions. He had also been specially instructed in constitutional law. The assertion of Lord Halsbury that King George is guilty of extreme youth and innocence takes on, in view of these facts, a rather humorous aspect.
 Baltimore, having properly neglected him during his life, is now planning to erect a memorial to Edgar Allan Poe. A Poe Memorial association, formed in 1907, already has a fair sized fund and more is forthcoming.

International arbitration is under way, but knowing the U. S. senate as we do, the work on the Panama Canal fortifications goes right on.

The Fatal Ring.
 An amazing story is told by the late head of the Paris morgue. Five times within his experience dead bodies brought to the morgue were found to be wearing a certain ring easily distinguishable by its strange design. It bore in Eastern characters the legend: "My whomsoever wears this ring die a miserable death." M. Maco, his chief of the Paris police, reaches for the truth of this.

DEMONSTRATE APPLIANCE

Washington, D. C., Aug. 13.—Thirty thousand miners are expected to attend the great national Mine Safety Demonstration to be held in Pittsburgh, Pa., October 26 and 27, under the auspices of the Federal Bureau of Mines, the American Red Cross, the Pittsburgh Coal Operators' association and the United Mine Workers of America.
 The date, which was originally set for September 16, has been changed so that President Taft may be present on the second day, October 27, to witness a mimic mine explosion in a temporary steel gallery on Forbes field, an exhibition of rescue work by helmeted miners following an explosion, and to review the parade of miners.
 The President will make an address and will present souvenir prizes to the miners taking part in the first-aid-to-the-injured and rescue work exhibitions.
 The demonstration, the purpose of which is to teach greater safety in mining, will begin the morning of October 26, at the experiment station of the Bureau of Mines, Fortieth and Butler streets.
 The first day will be devoted to the interests of the mine operators, mine owners, mining engineers and superintendents of mines. There will be an explosion of coal dust in the experiment gallery and tests of mine safety lamps in gas. The dangers of electric sparks in gas and coal dust will also be shown in one of the galleries.
 A class of miners will be trained in the use of the oxygen helmet which permits breathing in poisonous gases for a period of two hours. The oxygen helmet has proved a valuable aid in entering mines filled with fire damp following an explosion.
 In the afternoon, the operators, engineers and superintendents will witness an actual mine explosion in the experimental mine of the Bureau at Buncheon Pa., twelve miles from Pittsburgh. Coal dust will be allowed to accumulate in the mine and black powder, the use of which is strongly urged against by the Bureau in mines where there are dangerous conditions, will be used. In other words, the Bureau's experts will carry out in this mine all the bad practices which they believe lead to explosions.
 The next morning, October 27, the demonstration will take place on Forbes field, the Pittsburgh baseball park, in the presence of the President of the United States and other distinguished visitors. A temporary steel gallery will be erected on the playing field and the cause of the recent great explosions in coal mines will be dramatically shown in an explosion of coal dust. Immediately following the explosion, members of one of the rescue corps of the Bureau, in their oxygen helmets, will rush into the smoke-filled gallery and go through the work of rescue. Supposed victims of the explosion will be brought forth and given first aid to the injured.
 Expert rescue teams from the principal coal mines of the country will give friendly exhibitions and then the miners will pass in review of the president. The parade of the miners will continue downtown to the river front where a special pier has been assigned them to witness the marine parade in honor of the centenary of the beginning of steam navigation on the Ohio river. The miner's demonstration will conclude at noon and the remainder of the day will be taken up with the river centennial.

Growth of Atlantic City.
 Atlantic City was incorporated in 1854, the year when the first passenger train was run from the Delaware river to the Atlantic ocean. At that time the village consisted of half a dozen families which had increased to a population of 1,043, in 1870, according to the United States census. Ten years later it had grown to 6,477; in 1890 it was 13,955, and in 1900 there were 37,333 residents.

WORK OF GEN. BOOTH'S ARMY

Salvationists Give an Impressive Exhibit in London, Depicting Scenes From Life.

London.—Ten thousand people attended the demonstration given recently by the Salvation Army at the Albert hall. Old, white haired and almost blind, General Booth presided in person. "Only with my inner sight have I been able to witness these transformations and miracles that the love of God has wrought," he said after patiently sitting through the different scenes that were played before an attentive and interested audience.
 First was depicted a night on the Thames embankment at one of the army's shelters. Gradually the great arena in the hall filled with hundreds of destitute and homeless men, to whom food and encouragement were given by the officers present, in illustration of their nightly task in various cities. The same men were seen later busily sorting out great sacks of waste paper, showing how employment of some description was found for even the most unpromising material.
 Work among the little ones was demonstrated by a parade of forty gray gowned, white capped nurses, carrying in their arms tiny babies, some only a week or two old and many of them prison born. A crowd of hungry, ragged children followed, dancing round an Italian hurdy-gurdy and fighting and playing with each other. Food and coffee were distributed to the boys and girls, who had been brought up from the slums that very afternoon as actual specimens of the raw material upon which the army is working.
 Then came the children of "The Nest," as the girls' home at Clapton is called. As the neatly dressed brigade, consisting of about fifty little girls—all of whom have been rescued from drunken and brutal parents—trooped into the hall, where they danced and formed themselves into a zebra, loud applause resounded throughout the building. A number of woman officers followed, visiting women prisoners in jail—realistic demonstrations being given of refractory cases who refused to go back to their cells.
 The industrial and land colony at Hadleigh, Essex, where more than 1,000 acres of land is being farmed and intensive garden culture is carried on, was represented by a procession of gardeners, beekeepers, shepherds, poultry and dairy farmers, carrying poultry or dairy produce, fruits or vegetables or the implements of their labor. The farm proper carries more than 1,000 head of horses, cattle, sheep and lambs and pigs, grows large quantities of grain and roots and will soon be busy haymaking and harvesting.
 The work of the emigration department was also indicated by means of tableaux and statistics were given showing that the army now carries on its social agencies in fifty-six countries and preaches salvation in thirty-nine languages, while it possesses 954 social institutions, 421 day schools and twelve military and naval homes, in addition to more than 100,000 officers of all ranks.

MURDER IS SUSPECTED

Menominee, Mich., Aug. 15.—A sensation developed yesterday in the little village of Pound, Wis., which promises to reveal a dark domestic tragedy and possibly murder in the first degree, when the body of John Wertelgski, aged 55 years, who died on Wednesday last, supposedly of heart failure, was exhumed by the Marinette county authorities, acting under the direction of Sheriff A. E. Schwittay, revealing evidences of abuse sufficient to excite suspicion of foul play and resulting in the arrest of the man's wife, who is today charged with the crime.

The story told by the woman, at the time of the death of her husband, is that she found him at the foot of the stairs, where he had fallen.

A burial certificate, alleged to have been signed by Dr. Dohearty of Pound, is said to have been procured, which gave heart failure as the cause of the man's death. He was buried on Friday with the customary ceremonies.

It is declared, however, that the suspicions of the neighbors were aroused and they made a complaint to Sheriff Schwittay, which resulted in an investigation being made.

A post mortem examination was made today, when it was found that the man's skull had been fractured, and his chest and arms bruised. A charge of murder was made against Mrs. Wertelgski and she was arrested and placed in the Marinette jail.

A hearing was called by Prosecuting Attorney Morgan and Assistant Attorney Miller before Justice Bernardy, of Marinette. Formal complaint was made against the woman, charging her with murder and the hearing was adjourned for two weeks, the prisoner being remanded to jail without bail. She is a woman of 55 years and the couple have seven children, all of whom are held as witnesses in the case.

W. J. BRYAN MAPS OUT HIS PROGRAM

Columbus, O., Aug. 15.—"I intend to devote all my time between now and the nomination to find out things about the candidates for the Democratic nomination for president," said William Jelmalaga Bryan to a large audience here today. "I know all the leading men of the party, those who have hindered and those who have helped it. When the time comes to name the man for the candidacy, I will not be silent.

"I am going to give the Democratic party all the information I possess about the prospective candidates, so it may choose the right man for the head of the ticket," said Mr. Bryan.

"I am not going to mention individuals now. The country has many available men. Recently I mentioned some of the men I believe to be tolerable as political candidates and I am as glad as I was then that the Democracy is so fortunate to have so many."

The men whom Mr. Bryan mentioned some time ago did not include Governor Harmon.

JUDGE FLANNIGAN HAD A HARD TRIP

Norway, Mich., Aug. 15.—Afternoon of Saturday last, Judge R. C. Flannigan and wife, the Rev. Fr. Joisten, Clement Flannigan and two others, arrived here from Flannigan cottage at Browns Lake, after an auto journey fraught with much excitement and considerable danger. The heavy rainfall had flooded the swamps and filled the creeks and rivers to overflowing. In many places it was necessary to ford the low ground, while at others the approaches to the bridges had to be made through water reaching to the machine axles, and the bridges themselves were nearly all afloat. The trip which is usually no of little better than two hours' duration this time was more than five hours of most strenuous work.

Rumors had reached the city during earlier days of the week of the flooded condition of the Sturgeon valley country and of the almost impassable condition of the highways, but no one fully appreciated the extent of the trouble until the arrival of the bespattered, bedraggled and weary motorists on Saturday last.

CHICAGO PRELATE TO BE A CARDINAL

Chicago, Aug. 15.—According to a cablegram received here today, formal announcement of the elevation of Archbishop James Edward Quigley to the post of cardinal is being deferred pending the recovery of Pope Pius X. The message received here today of the official elevation of the archbishop to the cardinalate. The selection of the Chicago prelate for the eminent American position was, it is said, made six weeks ago and has been confirmed by the vatican council.

ELOPERS RECEIVE PARENTAL BLESSING

Springfield, Mass., Aug. 15.—The parental blessing of the mother and father of the bridegroom was received today by Mr. and Mrs. John Edward Geraghty, who eloped from Newport last Wednesday. Although the former Newport automobile demonstration did not make public the letter he received from his parents, he intimated that it was perfectly satisfactory. Both Geraghty and his society bride said today that they expected that in due time they would receive the good wishes of the latter's family.

A second marriage by a minister of the Episcopal church is being considered by the eloping couple. No definite plans, however, have been made. Mrs. Geraghty is an Episcopalian, while her husband is of the Roman Catholic faith.

A smile played over the features of "Handsome Jack" today when he admitted that he had stoped smoking at the solicitation of his bride. Mrs. Geraghty appeared greatly pleased as her husband made the admission.

LAW MAKERS ARE ANXIOUS TO GET HOME

Washington, Aug. 15.—The whole question of tariff revision legislation will be settled during the coming week, which in all probability will mark the closing of congress. Almost all of the members of both houses are anxious to get home.

All the power of the Democratic party that now controls the house and of the effective Democratic progressive Republican coalition of the senate will be centered on quick action on the trio of the pending tariff measures. This means, in the belief of the leaders of both parties, an adjournment possibly by the end of the week or at any rate within a few days thereafter.

Out of the present tangled situation, with the three tariff bills—wool, free list and cotton—in various stages of legislation, the wool measure will be the first to emerge. An agreement between the two houses has been reached on this piece of legislation, and it will be rushed past its final stage in the house by the adoption of the conference report on Monday and then hurried over to the senate for adoption there, if possible, on Tuesday, and then on to be expected presidential veto which awaits all the tariff revision bills.

The free list bill and the cotton bill are still hung up. The conferees on the free list have disagreed on the single house amendment, that adding lemons to the free list, and to the Kern senate amendment limiting the free importation of meats and cereal products to those countries which have reciprocal trade arrangements with the United States. They have agreed on all the other amendments and the conference report will be presented to both houses to-morrow.

Senator LaFollette of Wisconsin, who was chosen by the conferees to represent the senate in the adjustment over the differences over the wool and cotton bills, has expressed the belief that the cotton measure, which already has passed the house, can be put through the senate. The Democrats are not so confident.

There is a variety of miscellaneous legislation to be cleared up. The campaign publicity bill has been agreed to in conference and will be reported to both houses tomorrow. Its companion piece—the proposition for the direct, popular election of United States senators—has failed in conference and will go over to the mercies of the regular session of congress.

A red letter day in what has come to be known as the Wiley-Remsen board pure food investigation by the house committee on agricultural department expenditures is promised for tomorrow, when Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, chief of the chemistry bureau of the department, will testify. Some sensational testimony is expected.

The life of the national monetary commission is at stake on a vote which the senate will take at 1:45 o'clock to-morrow afternoon on the Cummins' resolution calling for that body to submit its final report and dissolve by Dec. 4. There have been strenuous attacks on the commission, based on alleged extravagance and delay in submitting its report to congress, but its defenders have sparred for a little more time.

Confirmation of the arbitration treaties with Great Britain and France—part of the peace pact program promised in the president's policy—bids fair to go over until the next session. The matter of an investigation of the alleged irregularities in the election of United States Senator Isaac Stephenson of Wisconsin of Wisconsin, already probed into by the legislators at Madison, will come up again in the senate probably tomorrow on Tuesday, with assurance of the senate providing for a thorough inquiry.

The New Mexico-Arizona statehood bill, which the president is expected to veto, will be considered on a possibility of passage over the veto. The outcome of this plan of the statehood advocates, however, is problematical.

Disregarding a telegraphed request from President Taft for a contrary course, the senate committee on foreign relations yesterday agreed upon an amendment to the British and French arbitration treaties, eliminating the provision conferring special powers on the proposed joint high commission. In this form the treaties were reported to the senate and the president's wishes that action be postponed until next December were set at naught.

The senate almost immediately gave two hours to consideration of the treaties, during which the danger of in the minor league this afternoon commission was discussed. Incidentally there was considerable talk about a criticism upon the senate contained. "The American Commonwealth," written by Ambassador Bryce long before he ever thought of coming to this country on a diplomatic mission. In that work Mr. Bryce attacked the upon the ground that it kept diplomatic trouble alive so long as there was any political advantage to be gained by so doing.

Both President Taft and Secretary of State Knox have taken the position that the paragraph which he committee on foreign relations purposes to amend is necessary to the proper operation of the agreement. The president gave senators to understand that he would not yield without a severe struggle.

There is considerable mystery about the manner in which the views of Ambassador Bryce, as expressed in his book, were brought into the present controversy. Each member of the foreign relations committee received by yesterday's mail a neatly printed two-page pamphlet, quoting an extract from "The American Commonwealth" in which the opinion was expressed that a minority of the senate may control the action of that body adversely to the will of the majority in "a narrow, electioneering spirit."

Both in committee and in the senate fear was expressed that the ratification of the treaties would have the effect of throwing open the doors of arbitration to all questions involved in dealing with such Oriental nations as China and Japan and involving immigration and admission to the public schools.

COPPERDOM TEAMS TAKE THE HONORS

Houghton, Mich., Aug. 14.—Senator Proctor's Blue Sox baseball team of Elkhart, Ind., fared poorly in the copper country. The nine is a professional organization and plays excellently, but it found itself outclassed by the amateurs of Houghton and Keweenaw counties. The Sox lost all three games of their copper country trip.

Mohawk won Friday, Calumet Saturday and the "All Stars" Sunday. The latter game, played at the Larium park in the presence of a big crowd, was a walk-over for the home team. The score was 14 to 3. One feature was a home run by Nick Kaiser in the first inning.

The score: R. H. E. Blue Sox 3 All Stars 14 The Blue Sox lost to Mohawk Friday, 9 to 4, and on Saturday to the Calumet team by a score of 2 to 6.

The feature of this latter game was the weak batting of Eaton, Calumet's star heavy hitter. Eaton fanned out four times out of five times at bat, the poorest showing he has ever made on the Calumet diamond. The Sox lost in the sixth inning, Calumet scoring four times on a couple of hits and several bunched plays by the visitors. Kaiser of the Double H. team played at second for Calumet and he and Romberg were the star hitters for the home team. All the men played faultlessly in the field. Renwick pitched an exceptionally fine game. The visitors played good, consistent ball with the exception of the sixth inning.

The Score: R. H. E. Elkhart 3 6 3 Calumet 5 10 3

NURSE PRO TEM

By MARY EASTWOOD KNEVELS

(Copyright, 1911, by Associated Literary Press.)

On his knees in the mud under a driving rain Robinson carefully examined the overturned car. Lydia, his coat wrapped round her, sat on one of the cushions under a tree and wept. She was unburied but unwept, from the result of the accident which had occurred—she knew—entirely through her own reckless driving. She recalled Robinson's quietly uttered warning just before they had turned that last corner where they had lost the tire—it was the only thing he had said since she had interrupted his stammering, somewhat abashed, declaration of love by an abrupt and scornful, "No!"

Robinson rose from his knees and came to her. "We'll leave the car where it is," he said, "and go on a bit till we find a house. Come, can you stand?"

He helped Lydia to her feet and they trudged along the road half a mile or more till they came to a small white house, the only habitation in sight. Half a dozen chickens huddled on the back steps for protection against the rain which still fell in torrents. There was no bell and Robinson knocked in vain.

"There can't be any one at home," sobbed Lydia. "Oh, dear, what shall we do?"

"Don't worry." In another moment he had found an unfastened window, crawled in, and opened the back door for Lydia. She entered a cleanly whitewashed kitchen with a stove, a dresser, and an oil cloth covered table for its principal furniture.

Lydia smiled through her tears. "Oh, I'm so glad to get somewhere out of the rain," she said.

"Evidently no one's at home," said Robinson, "and I came in the regulation way." He showed her the key hanging on a piece of string just outside the door. "Now, take off that wet coat," he ordered, "and make yourself as comfortable as you can. These good people won't object. By Jove, I've a mind to make you a cup of tea while we wait—I see there's a fire in the stove." He helped Lydia off with her coat. "Hallo—what's this?" He had caught sight of a scrap of paper on the corner of the dresser and he brought it to Lydia.

"Johnny—the note ran—'Ma has sent for me to fetch Benny so you look after Baby. Bee sure and don't leave the house. The milk is down cellar. Minnie.'"

"At this moment Lydia and Robinson heard a piercing wail from close at hand.

"A baby!" cried Lydia, almost jumping out of her chair. "What a ghastly situation!"

"Poor little chap. I'll look him up!" In a moment Robinson returned with a yellow-haired, red-cheeked baby about a year old and dumped him down on Lydia's lap. "Isn't he a jolly little fellow?" Robinson remarked. "I do like babies. I say, if you don't mind, I'll take off my coat; my shoulders are getting chilly. Now, if you'll look after the infant, I'll see what I can do about tea."

Lydia held the baby as if he had been a hot potato, although she was trying her best to act as if she knew what to do with him. But this frightened-looking girl with arms like sticks did not suit the little chap at all, and he set up a loud yell. Lydia could not do thing with him, and when Robinson had silently observed this, he took the child out of her arms, set him on the floor, and taking out his handkerchief, with three knots and a twist, made him a beautiful rabbit which hopped.

The baby stopped crying and gurgled with joy. As Lydia watched Robinson in his shirt sleeves in the homey kitchen playing with the fat, red-cheeked baby, she hardly knew him for the same ultra-fastidious Englishman she had danced coiffures with, snubbed, teased, almost considered a coward because he had disapproved of a girl running her own car. All at once it came to Lydia that he was made of better stuff than she was.

Robinson, with the baby balanced on his shoulder, was filling the kettle and setting it on to boil. "The milk up the milk from 'down cellar,'" said he, "but first I'll step out to the barn. You watch him till I come back, please."

Left to herself, Lydia had the brilliant thought of setting the table. By the time she had collected cups, saucers, plates and a bowl for the baby Robinson returned bearing cold ham, butter, and a pitcher of milk.

"The table's ready," she said gaily. "Where's the baby?" asked Robinson.

He was gone. After an anxious search Robinson found him in the sitting room wood box and carried him back to his high chair at the kitchen table, while Lydia, much ashamed of herself, made the tea.

"There's a good horse in the stable," said Robinson as they sat down, "and one of those—or—buggies. But of course we can't leave this poor little chap here alone, and we can't take him with us."

"Good heavens, no," said Lydia. "Will you take sugar in your tea? What do you suppose these people will think when they get back and find us making ourselves at home?"

"Oh, you leave that to me," said Robinson easily. "I'll explain." He broke a piece of bread into the baby's bowl of milk and sprinkled sugar over it. "By Jove," said he, "we are rather snug here, aren't we?"

He beamed cheerfully upon Lydia who in her heart agreed. The comfort of the simple meal was not spoiled by the coarse china, the oilcloth, or the presence of the ridiculous baby spilling milk all over his bib. There they sat in the cozy kitchen like one family—and the face she bent low over her place went scarlet at the thought. Coupled with the lateness of the hour and their long distance from home the situation was becoming embarrassing, and yet—and yet—she was enjoying it!

"You don't know how pretty you look with your hair like that!" said Robinson suddenly. He drew his chair closer to Lydia's, but his tender speeches, if he had intended to make any, were destined to be interrupted for the second time that day. A boy's head was thrust through the window. "Geel!" said the head. "There's folks here, Minnie, 'n they've got baby 'n they're eatin' supper off'n our things!"

Minnie, a fourteen-year-old girl, huddled into the kitchen, with Johnny behind her. Explanations ensued. It developed that Johnny had been "swimming."

"An' baby would have been all alone if you folks hadn't come," said Minnie, her maternal heart wrung at the thought. "I don't know how to thank you."

"By letting us borrow your horse and buggy," said Robinson promptly. Arrangements were soon made for their departure. Before Lydia stepped into the buggy she stooped and kissed the baby's very dirty little face, then she and Robinson shook hands with Minnie and Johnny, and drove off toward the nearest railroad station.

"I'll never run a car again," said Lydia mournfully, as they passed the wreck at the side of the road.

"Oh, yes, you will," said Robinson cheerfully, his arm stealing around her. There was a moment's silence. "Lydia," stammered Robinson at last, "could I—may I—ask you something all over again?"

And this time he was not interrupted.

JACKSON'S FAITH IN GOD

Confederates' Greatest General Fought the Fight of Christ With the Same Fury as Other Battles.

Religion took possession of Jackson, not suddenly, but with a gradual, fierce encroachment that in the end grasped every fiber of his being. Like a very similar nature in a different sphere John Donne, he examined all creeds first, notably the Catholic, but finally settled in an austere and sturdy Calvinism. Not that his religion was gloomy or bitterly ascetic; for it had great depths of love in it, and sunny possibilities of joy. But it was all-absorbing, and he fought the fight of God with the same fury that he gave to the battles of this world. There must be no weakness, no trifling, no inconsistency. "He weighed his lightest utterance in the balance of the sanctuary," writes one who knew him well. Christians are enjoined to pray. Therefore Jackson prayed always, even in association with the lightest act. "I never raise a glass of water to my lips without lifting my heart to God in thanks and prayer for the water of life." They must remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy. Therefore Jackson not only refrained from writing letters on Sunday; he would not read a letter on Sunday; he even timed the sending of his letters so that they should not incur the mails on Sunday. It was the same with a scrupulous regard for truth. Every statement, even indifferent, must be exact; or if inexact corrected. And Jackson walked a mile in the rain to get right an error of inadvertence.—Gamaliel Bradford, Jr. in the Atlantic.

Is suicide a private, personal affair?

The American Academy of Medicine says it is in an official report of a committee unanimously adopted in a recent San Francisco convention of the country's best-known physicians and surgeons.

"Suicide is a private and personal affair," the report reads. "There is no more justification for the publication of suicide accounts than for publishing other private matters. If, however, the members of the press are still skeptical of the fact that they are now accessories to the crime, we suggest that they assist in the study of the conditions that promote it. The committee emphatically requests the American press to refrain from further publication of suicide reports, because:

(1) The rapid increase in the suicide death rate in the United States is due to the suggestion inculcated by newspaper stories of other suicides. (2) Your committee finds alienists practically unanimous in the opinion that suggestive published details of suicides are a powerful factor in the causation of suicides among susceptible men. (3) Newspapers reply that it is their province to publish the news. Attempts to prevent such publications are invasions of the liberty of the press. They say the people demand the news and it must be given them. (4) Attempts to reform legislation are practically useless, unless preceded by popular education. (5) We must appeal, then, to the doubtful conscience of American newspapers, if they have one, in the present decadent condition of the press of the United States."

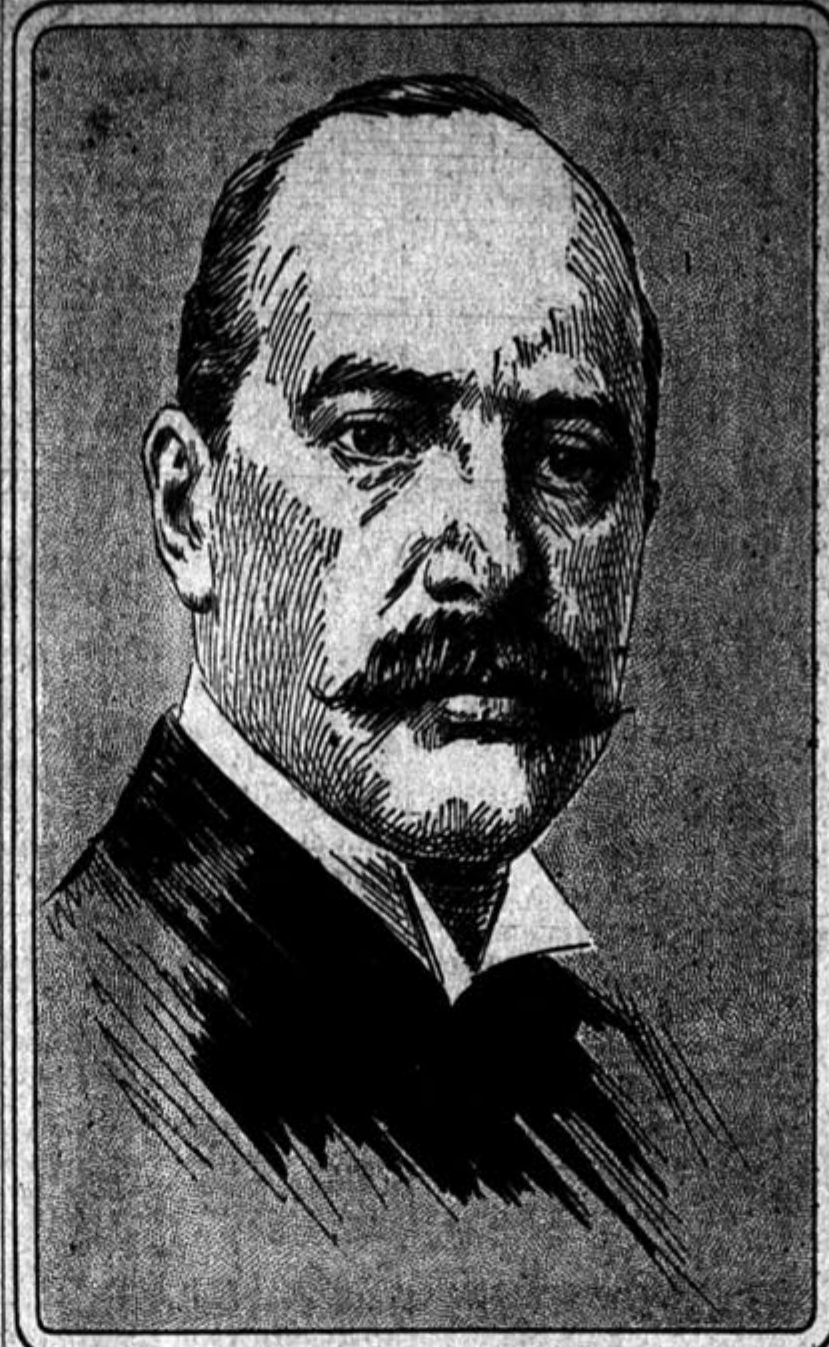

"I am frank to say," said Judge Warren W. Foster, New York's bench expert criminologist, "that there would be no profit to any man taking sides in any controversy between medical and newspaper men. His would be the fate of grain crushed between two millstones."

"Out of my study of crime I have concluded that the press would better help social reform by playing up discoveries of new means to it than by emphasizing crime itself. Still, I have no press experience on which to base advice as to how newspapers should be run."

Ask for Suppression of News.

"The law makes attempted suicide a felony, and an accessory to suicide a felon, too. A maximum sentence of two years and a maximum fine of $1,000 are the same in both cases. Several prisoners have been jailed, you will find from the records, for encouraging other persons, particularly their wives, to kill themselves. To get a burial permit is a death case a physician is, of course, required by law to report on the cause of death, which includes suicide. After their charge, it is worth notice that those medical men add a frank appeal to the newspapers for help to suppress suicides."

In the homicide bureau of District Attorney Charles S. Whitman's office it was said: "Suicide cases are not so important a problem in this office as you might think. We get a few suicide reports each year, but the numbers are insignificant and almost unnoticed by us as compared to more important crimes. A discussion of whether suicides are suggested by newspaper reports of other cases would require a careful study of our books and the newspaper reports for many years. We are frank to say that we couldn't help your controversy on either side if we dug through our books. Severe and successful prosecutions of attempted suicides, or their accessories, when played up in the press, have usually reduced suicide reports. A poll of our staff would probably show that most of us believe prosecutions to have a deterrent effect. It is for the alienist to say whether press suicide reports tempt others. But if we were not so modest we might suggest that bank looking is a much less popular pastime in New York today than it was a few months ago. Well advertised punishments for suicide might effect a similar distaste in those tempted."

Suicides Decreasing.

The 1910 United States bulletin on the suicide death rate put suicide at No. 17 in its list of "Twenty Leading Causes of Death." Such diseases as tuberculosis, pneumonia, heart disease and fevers head the list, with cases running from 10,000 to 81,720 deaths in 1909. The census report shows 8,402 suicides in the country in 1909, with 8,332 cases for 1908.

"This merely numerical increase in 1909 is due to the greater accuracy shown in the 1910 census taking," the report continues. "The wide disproportion between our large population gain in 1900 and this small three per cent. increase in suicides reported proves a steady and real decrease in self-murder in the United States."

The Chicago Tribune's annual poll of the country, published on January 1, 1910, cited 10,852 suicide cases in 1909, and 10,230 in 1908, or a decrease.

"The suicide death rate has decreased in cities," admits Frederick Huffman in his annual careful Spectator report for 1909. Huffman has collected data for 15 years in America's 65 largest cities, based on the suicide percentage in every 100,000 population unit. He found the suicide rate for every 100,000 population unit in 1894 to be 16 per cent. His 1909 report, which tallies closely with the census bulletin on city suicides, shows the decrease in the 65 cities to be 19.7 for 1909. New York city had the still lower rate of 18.9 in 1909, the greatest city of the country having reported 116 cases less in 1909 than in 1908.

Suicides in Election Years.

The Huffman statistics for the 15 years covered show a suicide percentage which rises and falls, the highest figure being 21 and a fraction. Several years saw it rise higher than 1909, and these were notably the years of presidential elections.

"That physicians and surgeons head the list of suicides" all these reports agree, the census bulletins included. That report goes on to say: "We find, contrary to superstition, the agricultural population at the foot of the suicide death rate. Lawyers, especially younger ones, stand next to physicians. Other professions and trades contribute cases as follows: Agents, bookkeepers, salesmen, servants, waiters, barbers, and agricultural laborers. The most common causes of suicide in 1909 were found to be despondency, 4,769; unknown causes, 1,467; insanity, 559; domestic infidelity, 324; ill health, 936; business losses, 81; liquor, 150; disappointment in love, 243. It is noted that the 81 suicides in 1909 for business despondency show a decrease from 600 suicides for that cause in 1908. The most common means of suicide used was poison, in 2,246 cases; then followed, asphyxia, by gas, 539; cutting instruments, 536; drowning, 507; jumping from high places, 158; crushing, 84; unspecified means, 58."

The Huffman report explains the city suicide as "produced by the intensity of modern life and generally attempted by sane but desperate men, because they think death is better than life. Our figures show the above cause to be more common than mental diseases or by any industrial pressure on labor. Generally speaking, the American leisure class produces more suicides than the working and middle classes. Bankers and brokers, after careers of fraud and dissipation, consider suicide as the only alternative. So do tired society people, like Mrs. Pierre Lorillard, Jr., who asphyxiated herself in her Washington home because she was tired of it all. Statistics show suicides to be most common in new boom cities, such as the Pacific coast, with its French atmosphere. Here again it is the gambler and the speculator who commit suicide. In short, suicide in this country, or at least the cities of it, is almost monopolized as a remedy for life's troubles by social parasites, who tire of life, and, having no other experience offered them to excite their jaded nerves and senses, kill themselves—just kill themselves."

SUICIDES THAT MAY SAFELY BE PRINTED

Cases of Whittaker Wright, Hector MacDonald and Baker Pasha Not Barred by the Doctors.

Dr. Antonio Stella, world-famous physician, cited the suicides of Whittaker Wright, Gen. Hector MacDonald and Baker Pasha as cases fit to print even in the English press, which advertised them as widely as did the American press.

Whittaker Wright, the once powerful, wealthy and successful promoter of American financial schemes in England, forgot for a minute that the man who publishes the Yankee press agent type of prospectus to attract investors may have to prove the accuracy of every statement he makes. The alternative is a jail sentence for swindling. So the shrewd English protect their pounds, shillings and pence against financial exploitation. Whittaker Wright, backed by popularity in London society, with his riches supporting him and a beautiful wife and children to make his fine, big London mansion a real home, was tempted to issue just one prospectus on Yankee press agent lines. This was to be his final wildcat speculation. If it succeeded, and he never doubted that it would, he would restrain himself always afterward, he resolved, to every legitimate business.

But certain Scotch investors, after investigating the fables in that Wright prospectus, started to get action out of him. Wright faced them serenely, but he thought he had an influence in his hands which no prosecution or evidence could break. It was his friendship for the Prince of Wales, but at the critical time the Prince failed him.

Death Rather Than Jail.

"I fear your sentence will be too late, your honor," Wright said, smiling, when called upon to stand up for sentence. No sentence was ever pronounced on Wright either, for he dropped as he spoke, dead from a small tablet of the swift-acting cyanide of potassium.

The Baker Pasha, General MacDonald and another case or two, cited by Dr. Stella as printable suicide stories, had the military law of suicide for foundations. Sir Valentine Baker, a decent English officer, was charged many years ago with insulting a woman of a rather poor social standing in a railway compartment. His suicide was reported, but, years after, in the last Russian-Turkish Balkan war, Baker Pasha bobbed up serenely as one of the Turkish empire's greatest generals in all its history.

MacDonald's End Still a Mystery.

A similar report was circulated about Gen. Hector MacDonald, who rose from the ranks of a Scotch regiment to high command, and became the hero of the Boudan. He was reported to have killed himself in a little French town, but the sealed coffin supposed to hold the hero's body was never opened. Tommy Atkins will rush you, his Beta active and his breath hot with rage, if you and MacDonald was guilty of the charge made against him.

ANTHONY MELIGNI

PRIME MINISTER OF PERSIA

The ruler of a country which has so wedded to ancient customs as to fall far behind in the progress of the world may be ever so intelligent and progressive and ever so desirous of adopting modern systems, but he can accomplish little unless he can bring his advisers to his way of thinking. That is the position in which the young shah of Persia has found himself. Realizing that the financial system of his country is archaic and that there can be no real progress for Persia until the country's money affairs and credit are put on a firm and modern foundation, some months ago he invited W. Morgan Shuster and a corps of Americans to come to Persia and take full charge of the country's finances for a period of years. Mr. Shuster and his companions are in Persia now, but both they and the shah found great difficulties in their way.

The plan was bitterly opposed by many of the shah's most powerful advisers. Among these was Sepahdram, prime minister, whose portrait is shown. That official was so opposed to the Americans taking the finances out of his hands that he left Teheran, the capital, and the reform was at a standstill. Recently, however, he has become converted to the new idea and has returned to his post of duty. The prime minister is a very able man, but it is difficult for him to abandon the semi-oriental ideas of government to which he has been trained.

DR. WILEY ON THE CARPET

Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, pure food expert, chief of the bureau of chemistry of the department of agriculture and one of the most widely known officials in the government service, was recently condemned by a committee on personnel of the department of agriculture, with a recommendation to President Taft that he "be permitted to resign." In an opinion on the case, submitted to the president, Attorney General Wickersham recommended approval of the committee's action.

It is charged against Dr. Wiley that he permitted an arrangement to be made with Dr. H. H. Rusby, a recognized pharmacognosist of Columbia university, New York, for compensation in excess of that allowed by law. It is asserted that the arrangement was to put Dr. Rusby on the pay roll of the department at $1,600 a year as an employe of the bureau of chemistry.

An agreement was made with Dr. Rusby that he should be called upon to perform only such services as this salary would cover at the rate of $30 a day for laboratory investigations and $50 a day for attendance in court. Attorney General Wickersham held that the law permitted the payment of only $9 a day, this being increased later to $11 a day.

The chief chemist's friends declared he could show conclusively that he had the full sanction of Secretary Wilson for the agreement made with Dr. Rusby of New York for expert services to be compensated at a higher rate than the $11 a day, allowed by law. Dr. Wiley, it is stated, took no step toward making this agreement until Secretary Wilson had given his approval. Floyd W. Robinson, a member of the staff of Dr. Wiley, was dismissed from the bureau recently on charges of insubordination. He was a member of Dr. Wiley's staff of experts in New York City and came originally from Michigan.

FIGHTS CHOLERA INVASION

Dr. Alvah H. Doty, health officer of the port of New York, who is engaged in fighting the threatened invasion of cholera, is regarded as an efficient and watchful public official. He is a lecturer on quarantine sanitation at Bellevue Hospital Medical college and a fellow of the New York Academy of Medicine.

Dr. Doty says that the cholera germ can be received in one way only, through the mouth, and that there is no danger in ordinary contact with persons who have the disease.

However, Charles Dushkin, counsel for the complainants at the investigation of Dr. Doty's official conduct now in progress, declares his belief that the cholera patients recently placed in the hospital caught the disease not on the steamer but at the immigration station, where all the passengers were detained after landing.

The danger, or rather the understanding of it, is further increased by the comparatively recent medical knowledge of "cholera carriers." These persons, Dr. Doty says, may transmit the germs, although themselves absolutely free from their ill effects, and be as great a menace to others as a man dying from the disease.

The entire public health machinery of the government has been put in motion to fight off the cholera invasion from Europe. All ships are being watched here and abroad and special instructions have been issued throughout the service. A public health service expert hurried from Washington to New York City and is expected to work in co-operation with Dr. Doty.

HOLDS THE MARRYING RECORD

Recently tying the matrimonial knot for his five thousandth couple, Justice William B. Hendryx of Bloomington, Ill., now claims to hold the world's record. The famous agent of Cupid was given a reception by his friends in recognition of his extraordinary showing and the couple who happened to be the lucky persons to mark the culmination of the 5,000 record were given an ornate marriage certificate, even more elaborate than those customarily given.

Squire Hendryx, who has made Bloomington known the country over as a Gretna Green, is one of the city's most unique characters. Forty years a justice of the peace, he was recently honored by his fellow citizens and elected police-magistrate, one of the most profitable offices in the gift of the people.

Although kept busy in looking after the municipal lawbreakers, he has not closed his remarkable marriage parlor, and sandwiches in the police court trials, with marriage. He is now marrying the granddaughters of persons who he married shortly after the Civil war. He has hopes of being able to marry the fourth generation, which would make another extraordinary record.

SPORTING DEPARTMENT

The Only Local Newspaper with a Reliable Sporting Department ...

COBB THE GREATEST STAR THE GAME HAS PRODUCED

Not so very long ago the controversy as to the greatest baseball player in the world was one rampant among the fans of the country. This discussion had its fling in the big circles then was chased to the country and was talked of in every small town and hamlet.

Larry Lajoie and Hans Wagner have been the two players most often compared. Most every loyal partisan of the American league would declare the big Frenchman had it over the big German. The National league followers could not see how any one with any sense of fairness could possibly compare the graceful Lajoie, wonderful as he was and is, to the mighty slugging Wagner.

Going back even further, Kink Kelly, the original $10,000 beauty, before the days of Marquards, the Russels, the Blackburns, and the O'Tooles has been considered by some the greatest baseball players ever produced in this country.

A man with a head full of brains, Kel turned perhaps more smart tricks and originated more brilliant plays than any man who has ever played baseball. The brains of Kelly made him great.

But now we come down to a young man who has done more to make baseball history than any the game has ever produced. It won't take you long to guess his name—Ty Cobb.

If it were to believe the Eastern papers, never in the history of the game has so wonderful and so brilliant exhibition of fielding been given by any player as that given by the wonderful Georgian against the Philadelphia Americans in the series that was last week played between the two teams.

Heretofore Cobb has been chiefly famous for his hitting and daring and speedy baserunning. Always fast, he has been considered a great fielder, but perhaps not so great as he is held at the present time, for during the present season he has shown some of the greatest fly chasing ever seen on the baseball diamonds of America.

Take Tyrus Augustus Cobb away from Detroit and that team would flounder helplessly in the swift current of the American league race. Never in the history of the game has there been a player who by his individual efforts did so much to not only keep his team in the race, but also to win three pennants for that team.

Stop and think for a minute of the greatness of Cobb. He is playing in the major league, and against the best players in the world. There is hardly a day goes by that this young man from Georgia does not pull off some brilliant play that either makes the opponents of the Detroit team look foolish or his own teammates and opponents alike seem mediocre by comparison with Cobb.

Think how great a player must be the man who can make other great men in their chosen line seem ordinary, and even, at times, dubs.

Cobb is the greatest batter in the world. He is not the simon pure slugger that the late Ed Delehanty was for old Ed probably had it on any player who ever lived; and yet as a scientific batsman Cobb ranks far and away ahead of the late lamented Philadelphia player. On the bases the game has never produced anywhere the equal of the Georgian, notwithstanding the fact that Eddie Collins of the Athletics is a great baserunner. Added to his wonderful batting and speed and head work on the paths, we had the brilliant fielding of the speed marvel, which the present season is making the name of Cobb stand out with new luster.

Great is Eddie Collins. Great is Hans Wagner. Great is Tris Speaker and great is Larry Lajoie. But greater than all these is the slim young man from the Southland, who is by all odds and every measurement the most brilliant player the great American game has ever produced.

Years after Cobb has ceased to play, stories of his feats will be told. Even today we are constantly hearing of the brilliant plays performed by the great King Kelly. Great as Kelly was Cobb is greater, and in the years to come you will hear if you still continue to take an interest in baseball, stories of brilliant plays by a marvelous player.

On the ball field they scrap like Kilkeny kittens; off the ball field, Damon and Pythias were like spiteful neighbors compared to them.

Take Charles (Red) Doolin, for instance. He the fighting red-headed manager of the Philadelphia National baseball team and he is laid up with a broken leg. The accident happened in St. Louis when Doolin stood up in front of "Rebel" Oakes, when the Cardinal outfielder was trying to score.

Doolin was the third 300 hitter that Philadelphia lost just when hitters were needed most. First, Titus, then Sherwood Magee, then Doolin—and the team in second place and fighting like a cage full of wildcats.

They carted Doolin off to the Frisco hospital in St. Louis and put his leg in a wood frame that reached to his right arm pit. Doolin smiled when they picked him up.

Doolin's smile is something to talk about. It is one of those sweet, happy smiles that are scarce enough. It brightens his face wonderfully, makes his freckles fairly radiant and casts a dull, sunset glow upon his red hair.

It is the smile of an optimist, and he takes his accident like an optimist. He is doomed to be out of the game for two months, but he has made his plans to keep his team in the race. He has gone back to Philadelphia with his leg in a plaster cast. As soon as his team goes back to play at home, Doolin will be on the bench running things.

Doolin smiled while lying on his hospital bed in response to the question: "Do you think the Phillies will stay up in the race now?"

"You can't tell," he said. "It's a big blow to lose three 300 hitters, but I know the boys will fight."

"But they're going to let Magee back in the game," was the retort given Doolin.

He smiled. But he didn't alter nor wave his arms for joy.

Doolin smiles often and he was once known to weep. When the Philadelphia players came to say good-bye to him at St. Louis before leaving for Chicago he shed tears.

But we started to tell how those Lithuanians stick together on the ball field.

TEAMS BATTLE TO A TIE IN 12 INNINGS

Boston, Aug. 15.—Brooklyn and the locals battled for 12 long innings today and when the game was called the players could scarcely see the ball. The final count was 9 to 9. Both Barger and Weaver were hit frequently. The former allowed 15 and the latter 14 hits.

McFARLAND IS MUCH PEEVED

"This bout is a certainty as far as we are concerned," Tom Jones said in Chicago yesterday, "but I believe McFarland will funk out of it, just as he has on three other occasions. McFarland may be a boxer and may look good when he is fighting a second rater, but he is not a fighter, and if he steps into the ring with Wolgast he will soon find out what I have said is true.

"Wolgast will do part of his training at Cadillac, but in the final week or ten days of work will be put at some resort outside of Milwaukee."

McFarland indignantly denied the charge.

WAGNER AND COBB LEAD THE LEAGUES

Hans Wagner of the Pittsburg club having played an even 100 games, leads the National league in batting with an average of .359. Schudts, the home run hitter of the Cubs, has averaged .327.

In the American league Schmidt of Detroit is at the top with .429, but he has played in only sixteen games. Ty Cobb, who is second with .419, has played in 104 contests.

PITCHER MARTIN O'TOOLE LEAVES ST. PAUL TO JOIN THE PITTSBURG NATIONALS

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 15.—Martin O'Toole, the sensational young pitcher of the St. Paul African association team who a few weeks ago was purchased by the Pittsburg Nationals for $22,500, left tonight to join that team. O'Toole wound up his career old world dominance of any joint high when he held the Kansas City team to three scattered hits and one run. He will arrive in Pittsburg on Monday night, in time to leave with the Pittsburg team on its Eastern trip.

TOWER OF PISA IS SAFE

The whole world was startled some time ago by the report that the great leaning tower at Pisa, Italy was falling. After an exact expert investigation, the report comes that the tower is not falling, but will keep leaning forward as of yore. It's just the same with the great leaning of the public for golden grain belt beers, which are another world wonder because of their health giving tonic effect, and exquisite tang. Don't forget to order a cube before you are out.

MARQUETTE BATTERS SUFFER A SLUMP

Marquette, Mich., Aug. 15.—The Marquette team's batting average suffered badly at the hands of the Escanaba pitchers this week, every member of the team, excepting Riley, now having a lower average than a week ago. Last week there were six in the 300 class. Now there but three, Riopelle, Hynes and Caesar. Tiffany had about the hardest luck of anyone, not getting a hit in either game. Others who did not connect safely in either game are Ryan, Caesar and Dixon. The team batting average is now .254. Individual averages are as follows:

Riopelle	75	26	.346
Hynes	80	27	.337
Caesar	12	4	.333

THOUGHT HANS WAS TOO-BOW-LEGGED

Old Honus Wagner, the most famous bow-legged player in the world, is back at his old job of leading the regulars in the National league. He is hitting this year as well as ever, although due to slide into obscurity. Much talk has arisen about Honus going to first base because of his advanced age, but the Pittsburg club has not been able to find any one to take his place at short. He is still lumbering around there, making those brilliant plays which rank him as one of the best all-around players that ever broke into baseball.

The story is told of Wagner that the first time he was looked over by a major league scout he was rejected because he was so bow-legged the scout thought he would never be able to stop a ball. Away back in the prehistoric period Honus was an outfielder, but did not amount to a whole lot there. On the suggestion of a newspaper man he was moved to short and has lived happily every since.

WILL TRY TO SWIM ATLANTIC OCEAN.

Springfield, Ill., Aug. 11.—To swim from Liverpool to Boston is the aim of Dr. Julius William M. Demmer, known as the world's champion long distance swimmer. His intention was announced here today, where he is temporarily located. The date for the start is set for February 13, 1913.

Demmer will give himself 200 days in which to cross the Atlantic. It will be a continuous but not sustained swim. The 200 days will give him allowance for storms, during which no attempt will be made to swim. It will be the swimmer's plan to make an average of twenty-five miles a day. Demmer will be accompanied by a three-mast barque, manned by a crew of eighteen men.

Curious Sect.

The Tbarys, dwelling in the Himalayas, are a curious sect, who believe in self-destruction, to please the gods, but compromise by sacrificing one of their fingers. When the eldest son or daughter is married, the mother is expected to cut off two joints of two fingers, but princesses and wealthy people are permitted to offer gold substitutes.

OLD CY YOUNG IS GOING BACK

Cleveland, Aug. 15.—Cy Young is slowly slipping back. His retirement, at least from the Cleveland club, seems to be an event of the near future. A rumor to that effect came from Washington and was partly confirmed by Vice-President Barnard of the Cleveland club. The rumor also stated that Turner and Butcher were slated to draw releases.

MARQUETTE WON GAME
Special to the Morning Press.
Marquette Mich., Aug. 15.—The Marquette league team downed Senator Proctor's Elkhart Blues by a score of 12 to 5 thus winning the distinction of being the only team of the Marquette Delta County league to trim the Hoosiers.
Jackson was on the mound for Marquette and held the visitors safe until the local team had run up a strong lead when he eased off and allowed the Blues to come across with a final score of five tallies. Drexel worked in the box for the Blues today and his work was not up to that of former appearances since coming to the peninsula. In addition his support was ragged giving the locals ample opportunity to accumulate tallies.

GEORGIA BOASTS OF 411 HOKE SMITHS
Atlanta, Ga., Aug. 15.—There will be no lack of Hoke Smiths in Georgia for years to come if all the babies named for the Governor and Senator-elect thrive. In a little book in which the record of Gov. Hoke Smith's namesakes is kept, there are now 411 Hoke Smiths in Georgia, most of them named after the Governor and Senator-elect during the past five years, but some of them christened way back in the '90s and grown to young men. The book was brought out for consultation Saturday morning, when an immense watermelon from Carroll county arrived at the executive office as a gift to the governor from Hoke and Smith Chappell, husky four-year-old twins, between whom the name had been divided. Gov. Smith remembers the youngsters distinctly, having made their acquaintance while Governor.
Hoke Smith likes babies to be named for him, and he sends them remembrances as their birthday anniversaries roll around.

STATEHOOD BILL VETOED
(Special to the Morning Press)
Washington, D. C., Aug. 15.—In a special message to congress today, President Taft vetoed the resolution of both houses which provided for the admission of Arizona and New Mexico to statehood. The President gave as his reason for the action his disapproval of the recall of judges clause in the constitution drawn up for Arizona and New Mexico in practically the same predicament it is very doubtful whether either one of the territories will be admitted unless Congress downs the President's veto by a two-thirds vote. The President was very strong in his condemnation of the recall clause.

MISS ELLA NORDEN, TEACHER AT PERKINS IS POPULAR.
About 100 friends and wellwishers of Miss Ella Norden, teacher at Perkins, surprised that young lady at her home last Saturday night. Vocal and instrumental music and dancing was the features of the entertainment. A sumptuous repast was served after which a purse of over $70.00 was presented to Miss Norden, showing the appreciation of the donors for the excellent work done by that young lady and the esteem in which she is held in by her Perkins friends. Miss Norden will leave in a few days for the State of Washington where she will continue her chosen vocation.

BUILDING BOND WAS RELEASED BY THE COUNCIL

Members of the fire and building committees of the Escanaba city council last night reported that Kratze Brothers had complied with all particulars of the agreement made to place the building recently moved by them from Jennie and Ludington streets in a fire proof condition. As the company has fulfilled all of the promises made to the city and has made the building one of the best store structures in the city the bond given by the firm was last night released.

BRULEY IS TO CATCH

An independent team which would measure up with any amateur aggregation in the northwest yesterday held a spirited workout at the yellow diamond. The aggregation is made up of a number of the old stars of the city and a strong inclination is held to challenge the city's league team at the close of the present schedule. Clarence Shaffer was in the box and William Bruley, supposedly crack Watersmeet catcher was tried out. With the exception of one bad inning when he twice stubbed his toe the work of the Watersmeet man was perfect. Last night a meeting of the directors for the independent team was held and it was practically decided that in spite of the errors of the Watersmeet man Mr. Bruley will be retained.

MICHIGAN UNIVERSITY FIRE PARTLY DESTROYS BUILDING; INCENDIARISM SUSPECTED.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Aug. 15.—The western half of the medical building one of the three oldest structures on the University of Michigan campus, was destroyed last night by fire, thought to be of incendiary origin. The flames originated on the fourth floor, which was unoccupied at the time. The eastern section of the building is to be equipped as a medical museum by funds now being raised by alumni in all parts of the world, was saved. No estimate of the loss is made.

Deep Mourning.

The manager of the theater racked his brain in vain. "We must do something," he repeated, bitterly. "People will expect us to do something to show respect to the proprietor, now that he is dead." "Shall we close for the night of the funeral?" suggested the assistant stage manager. "With this business? You're a fool, jaddie, a fool. No; put the chorus in black stockings." And it was even so.

LAST BOAT IS SOLD

STEAMER CHARLES McVEA IS SOLD TO BENTON TRANSIT COMPANY OF BENTON HARBOR.

Green Bay, Wis., Aug. 15.—The steamer Charles McVea was sold twice within a few hours between Saturday night and yesterday morning and has seen her last days of service on Green Bay, it is believed. The sale of the boat takes away the last steamer which a Green Bay company has operated between this port and ports on the bay and Lake Michigan.
The new owner of the steamer is the Benton Transit company of Benton Harbor, Mich. Irwin E. Schilling first purchased the steamer and sold it to the Benton company. The new owners will operate the McVea in the fruit service between Benton Harbor and Chicago. She will make daily trips across the lake.
After the arrival of the McVea in port Saturday evening negotiations were completed for her sale and she was taken from port at 10 o'clock yesterday morning. Capt. P. S. Roulette, the chief engineer and purser, were retained in the service by the Benton Transit company. They are expected to assist in operating the boat between Benton Harbor and Chicago.
The steamer McVea was owned in 1906 by the Waggoner-Roulette company and sold at marshal's sale in October of 1909 to the Bay Shore Steamboat company. The boat was operated on the bay during all of 1910 season and since July 18 of this year she has been used by the Arnold Transit company on the Green Bay-Escanaba run.
Manager Irwin E. Schilling of the Arnold Transit company stated today that the Arnold line intended to put another boat on the bay run to take the place of the McVea.

HIS ESCAPE WAS EXPENSIVE

Globe-Trotter Haskin Keeps Store-keeper Good Natured While Chinese Mob Waits.

Frederick J. Haskin, globe-trotter, man of the world and humorist, on one occasion struck Shanghai when the feeling among the natives was strong against Americans. The people of the Celestial empire were boycotting American goods and stoning Americans whenever they could get away with it.
Haskin was warned not to take any risk.
"These people won't bother me," he remarked airily. "If any of them tries to hurt me, I'll hand him a swift wallop under the chin."
Ten minutes after he left his hotel he was hooted off the street while a gang of Chinese used him as a target, and pelting him with anything they could lay hands on. Finally, out of breath, and looking like a cyclone victim, he ducked into a store. The mob waited for him with admirable patience. At the end of every fifteen minutes the traveler would ask the owner of the store:
"Are they still there?"
They were there.
Then, just to keep his savior in good humor, Haskin would make a purchase. He started out on a $30 overcoat, but the mob waited so long that he dropped in his expenditures until the articles he bought were worth only a dollar or two apiece.
He was imprisoned for half a day and the price of his escape was nearly $200.—Twice-a-Month Popular.

The Small Boy and His Hat.

He flings his hat across the dining room when he comes in from school, or leaves it in all manner of places in the house; in the coal-bin, or on sister's bureau. He loses it just at church time, and spoils the spirit of family reverence and piety. As the family enters the church the anthem is being sung, and the disgrace of being late again is laid on the innocent headpiece clutched in the hand of the small boy who has already forgotten the confusion of which he was the cause twenty minutes ago. In this stage also one's hat is removed on the way to school by the hand of one's bosom friend, passed down the line of surrounding boon companions, stuffed into others' pockets, while dire thoughts of ultimate loss hold one in their grip, and the reckoning to be paid at home wraps the world in tragedy.—George L. Parker, in the July Atlantic.

WESTS CARRY OFF THE VICTORY

The Wests defeated the Easterners by the score of 9 to 11 on Monday afternoon. One of the features of the game was a home run made by D. Murphy for the Wests. The teams were tied in the ninth inning, until the Wests whalloped the Easterners' pitcher for four hits. The batteries are as follows:
Easterners: Peterson and Souers.
Wests: Lyons and Degnon.

JUST TAKES IT FROM ONE POCKET TO THE OTHER.

It is rather amusing to read in the Baltimore papers that Connie Mack paid Jack Dunn $7,000 for Catcher Egan, when the fact of the matter is that Mack loaned Egan to Baltimore under an agreement which gives him the privilege to recall him before August 20.
Mack has used Baltimore for a farm for several years, and he does not have to pay any cash for anything he gets from that club. The story that he paid some fabulous sum for Lefty Russell last year was shown to be erroneous, for Russell was secured in exchange for a lot of superfluous material which Mack handed Jack.

PUT OIL ON MANY STREETS IN MILWAUKEE

That Escanaba could well adopt the system of applying oil to its macadam streets is shown by the experience of Milwaukee where a big mileage of streets is being treated with oil each season.
Of the work in the Cream City a Milwaukee newspaper says:
The street department has oiled sixty-eight miles of city streets this summer. Supt. Handley expects to cover 120 miles more before cold weather. The oil treatment costs the abutting property owner about 2 1/2 cents per running foot. It means a saving, however, as the oil lasts two years, during which time sprinkling is unnecessary.

HEAVY CUT IN PROSPECT

George King has returned from Baraga where he served for several months as head sawyer for the Nester Lumber company when the biggest cut in the history of the company at Baraga was turned out this season. Next season the company is to prepare for day and night runs and Mr. King will probably return to the mill for the season.
Of the operations of the company the Baraga County Journal says:
Captain Bellwood of Duluth, J. H. Rice of Houghton, J. A. Johnson of Detroit and John Nester of Baraga, constituting the board of directors of the Nester Lumber company, held an important meeting at the general office of the company at Baraga on Tuesday.
While no definite action was taken regarding the matter it was practically concluded to begin lumbering operations early this fall and it is probable that a vast amount of timber will be put in and the large mill here stocked for a day and night run next season. Much depends on the condition of the lumber market before the directors finally decide to operate extensively. The company owns a large amount of timber and it is understood that the directors have options on several million feet of hemlock and hardwood. Before the directors meet again cruisers will have prepared estimates on timber and cost of logging operations.
It is probable another meeting will be held the latter part of August.

LaVine will visit here about a week with their brother.

DETECTIVES' JOKE COSTS TWO LIVES

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 15.—Frank J. Cook, aged 35, and Daniel Vreeland, aged 30, special detectives for the Lake Shore railroad, were shot and killed last night by Special Officer William Burnett, aged 33, of the Michigan Central railroad, on the Michigan Central tracks near Junction avenue.
The men met death as the result of a joke that they attempted to play on Burnett. They were all on the best of terms and met at the junction of the two roads every night. Last night, Cook and Vreeland knowing that Burnett had had trouble with two car breakers, decided that the would hide behind a car and spring out on him as he passed.
Burnett, not recognizing either of the men, drew his gun and shot four times at them, three of the bullets taking effect. One went through Cook's heart, the other two striking Vreeland in the head and chest. Burnett then ran down the tracks to Junction avenue where he met Patrolman Dan O'Connor, who was hastening toward the scene of the shooting.
"I've just shot a couple of car thieves, he said. The two men then went back and looked at the bodies. When Burnett saw who the men were that he had shot he broke down. O'Connor took him to the fourth precinct station where he was locked up. In telling the story of the shooting to Coroner Rothacher, Burnett said:
"I was walking down the tracks and had just examined a car when the two men sprang out on me. I fought them off and stepped back. They came at me again, saying: 'Don't worry, we'll get you.' I pulled my gun and shot. How many times I do not know. I then ran down the tracks until I met a patrolman.
"When we went back and I saw that the men I had killed were Cook and Vreeland, I could hardly think it was such a shock. I had never had any trouble with either of them. We were all good friends."
Burnett stated to Lieutenant McNamara at the fourth precinct station, that he would not have shot at the men had they not shouted that they would "get him." He said that about a week ago two prowlors on the tracks had sworn to "get him."
The men were so near him when he fired that their clothing was burned by the discharge of the revolver.

FOLLOWER DISAGREES WITH VICTOR BERGER

Milwaukee, Wis., Aug. 15.—City Attorney Daniel W. Hoan addressed the national conference of socialists here today and took issue with Congressman Victor Berger, who yesterday predicted that in ten years the federal Constitution would be rewritten.
"The bill of rights is in that document," he said. "The right of trial by jury, the right to vote, security in your homes—all these are in the Constitution. The bill of rights is the law of the people and will remain the same, even under a socialistic government."
As a receipt for a good judge he offered this: "Get a socialist, make him a good lawyer and elect him judge. That is one way to get the Constitution interpreted right."
