ISMAY MAKES ADMISSIONS

MANAGING DIRECTOR OF WHITE STAR LINE ADMITS HE TOOK ONE OF FIRST LIFE BOATS

ALSO TELLS OF SPEED

Boat Owners Rescued at Sacrifice of Other Lives Says Titanic Making 26 Miles an Hour.

(Special to the Morning Press) Washington D. C. Apr. 19.—Senator Raynor of Maryland, in the senate today, scathingly denounced the director of the White Star Line, particularly Managing Director Ismay for the Titanic disaster. He said, in his efforts to escape Ismay permitted over 1700 persons to be drowned and acted in a cruel and cowardly manner to save his own life. Ismay, testifying under oath today before the United States Senate, swore that at the time, when the liner crashed into the iceberg he was making twenty-one knots or twenty-six miles an hour. It had been charged that high speed was responsible for the terrific crash which sent the vessel to the bottom.

Ismay admitted that he leaped into a boat about midship, which was one of the first to leave the ship. He declared, however, that he believed it to be the last one to leave. He admitted in his testimony that he knew that all women were not off the ship.

New York, Apr. 19.—In one of the Titanics life boats picked up by the Carpathia, there were eighteen men and women according to the statement of a steward of the rescue ship, showing that some of the boats were lowered before a full load of passengers were taken on.

Col. John J. Astor died a hero, fellow passengers who were rescued say. Mrs. Fairbank said she saw parting of Col. Astor and his young bride. Mrs. Astor was frantic. Her husband had to jump into the life boat four times and tell her he would be rescued later.

Col. Astor requested permission of the second officer to go with her for her own protection.

"No sir," replied the officer "not a man shall go on a boat until the women are all off."

COME TO ESCANABA

Announcing that the visit of the Detroit Board of Commerce to Green Bay ports during the coming summer will be confined to Escanaba, Mayor John S. Lindsay yesterday received a letter from the secretary of the board, accepting the invitation, extended by Mr. Lindsay when mayor of the city, for the members of the board to come here.

Because of inadequate docking facilities in other cities the secretary of the Detroit board has announced that it has been decided to confine the visit of their members to this port where they will be met by representatives of all of the different cities of the peninsula.

Following is the letter received by Mr. Lindsay:

Dear Sir: It gives me great pleasure on behalf of the Detroit Board of Commerce to accept your very kind invitation to visit your city on our trip north this coming summer.

Owing to the fact that there are insufficient facilities for docking a large boat such as the City of Detroit, $11, at other Green Bay ports, we will confine our visit to the city of Escanaba.

Assuring you of our deep appreciation for your kindness, and thanking you and your city for your hospitable invitation, I am very truly yours, B. H. Mitchell, Secretary.

FIRST BOAT MAY COME MONDAY

Mr. H. J. Robertson of the Northern docks announced that yesterday's boat is at Eschbogan ready to be here at any time that it is needed in the docks to give for a cargo.

ARBUSUS BLOOMS AT MANY POINTS

The first arbusus of the season is now being brought into the city by those who have visited points where the dainty spring flower has its natural habitat. The arbusus has been unusually late in blooming this spring and the blossoms are said to be more scarce than usual, due to it being believed to the light snow covering that was provided in the surrounding woods during the winter.

EXAMINER IS HERE

M. H. Antoni, of St. Paul, naturalization examiner for this district, arrived in Escanaba yesterday morning to investigate the records of applicants for citizenship who will appear before Judge Flannigan at the April term of circuit court. The petitioner will appear before the court on Monday for examination and Mr. Antoni will remain in the city to represent the United States immigration department at the examinations. There is a total of approximately 30 aliens of Delta county who are scheduled to appear before Judge Flannigan on Monday to be tested as to their knowledge of governmental affairs in this country and their desirability as citizens. It is expected that Monday afternoon will be given up in its entirety to the examination of applicants for citizenship and after which time no petitions will be heard by the court.

NEGAUNEE BOARD OF DIRECTORS NAMED

The complete board of directors for the Negaunee baseball team for the coming season, was named at a meeting of the members of the association this week. The Negaunee correspondent says of the meeting:

A meeting of the Negaunee baseball association was held Wednesday evening in the Negaunee club. Several months ago these officers were chosen: President, J. H. Rougs; vice president, J. H. Winter; secretary, A. H. Knight; treasurer, Phil Levine. Mr. Levine later announced that he would not be able to serve as treasurer again and Wednesday night Thomas Pasco was the choice for that office. A board of directors was named as follows: Thomas Fellow; T. A. Thoren; J. M. Perkins; Ernest Klein; J. E. O'Donoghue; A. W. Haldie; B. J. Miller; John A. Wasmuth; Joseph Thomas, A. F. Willman; Peter Trudell; August Allen; Phil Levine; S. R. Elliott; C. V. R. Townsend; Charles Johnson; W. T. Dawe; Chris Hansen; Fred Ware; W. B. Pattison; and Dr. Belhumeur.

MAY RETURN TO THE CITY TODAY

County Clerk J. A. Semer, accompanied by his father John Semer Sr., will probably return to Escanaba today from Rochester Minn., where the elder Semer went to consult the Drs. Mayo of that city. After an examination of the patient it was found that an operation to remedy the ailment from which Mr. Semer was suffering would not be necessary and instead a course of treatment was prescribed and which already, it is reported, has greatly improved the patient's condition.

TWO HEAVENLY PHENOMENA SLATED FOR PRESENT WEEK.

Washington, April 19.—Venus and the moon will be very close tomorrow night, almost to what the astronomers call an occultation, but the phenomenon will be visible in parts of only Florida and Georgia. The weather is clear enough on a line drawn from Texas through Arkansas, Ohio and New York; however, Venus may be seen about eight minutes from the edge of the moon. Astronomers at the naval observatory here say there will not be an absolute occultation.

On Wednesday there will be an eclipse of the sun, visible only in the eastern part of the United States. The New England states, except a part of Connecticut and a portion of New York, will be the only part of the United States to which the eclipse will be visible completely, that is to say the

DAHLGREN IS SIGNED

CLASSY MINNY LEAGUE TWIRLER WILL WEAR ESCANABA UNIFORM THIS SEASON

"Cy" Dahlgren, premier twirler of the Minnesota league last season, will arrive in Escanaba this morning and will wear an Escanaba uniform as a member of the local pitching staff for the coming season. Manager Lehr, who left Escanaba on Wednesday, met Dahlgren in Milwaukee and came to terms with him for the coming season's work. Last night a telegram was received from the pitcher by Sec. R. E. Hodson of the local club, that he will arrive in the city this morning. Dahlgren will take a position on Monday at Jordan's pool and billiard hall.

As a member of the Superior team, of the Minny League, the same organization of which Joey Hoffman was a member, Dahlgren burned up the league last season winning more games than any other twirler in the league. His work attracted the attention of the big league scouts and last fall he was signed up by the management of the Cincinnati National League team. He refused to report for duty this spring because the terms of his contract were not to his liking and recently wrote to Hoffman in this city asking as to the chances that were offered here for getting on the local team. The local club officials immediately got into communication with the pitcher and when Manager Lehr met him in Milwaukee negotiations were quickly closed.

Announcement was made by Sec. R. E. Hodson yesterday that notices have been sent out to all of the members of the local team now under contract to report here for practice work by May 6. Immediately after that date the players will get into action under the direction of Manager Lehr and within two weeks, when the league schedule will be opened, the weeding out process will have been finished and the permanent lineup for the season fixed.

"Dick" Duquesne, a graduate of the Carlisle Indian school and who recently came to Escanaba from Neopit Wis., will enter into competition with other candidates now signed up for the position of catcher. He also has a brother, who is said to be a classy first sacker and who also may come here to try out for that position.

WILL TEST OUT NEW GAS MAINS

That the new gas service, provided through the construction here of a model plant by the city last winter, may be made available at once, announcement was issued by the board of public works yesterday that the work of testing out the new mains will be started on Monday. To allow the testing out of the new mains it will be necessary to cut off the service for two and a half hours of each day and in that time it is believed that the work can be accomplished. On Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday afternoons the service will be cut off from 1:30 to 4 p. m.

In the low temperatures that existed when the new mains were laid early in last winter it was impossible to perfectly seal all of the joints in the pipes and when the service was turned on it was found that there were a number of leaks. It is to determine the exact location of the leaks that the tests will be made next week and when all are closed the gas can be turned on full force and the service given to all parts of the city now reached by the mains.

ARONSON IS SURE OF FINE JOB

Of the signing up of Steiny Aronson as a member of the Negaunee, correspondent for the Mining Journal says:

Steiny Aronson, the former Escanaba baseball player, who has signed with Negaunee, came to town Wednesday afternoon, and returned to Escanaba that evening. His brief visit was for the purpose of signing up the situation, as he had been informed by Escanabans that the copper-iron county league organization was not receiving the proper support. He visited manager Primeau and other officers of the association, and was satisfied that Negaunee intended to go into the league completely, that is to say the

LODGE MEMBERS ENJOY MEETING

Members of the Modern Brotherhood of America last night held one of the most enjoyable sessions of the year when following the regular ceremonial meeting a social program was carried out. Cards were played and prizes were awarded to Mrs. Adelaide Gabourie and to Joseph Russell. A large part of the membership of the lodge was represented at the meeting and all thoroughly enjoyed every part of the program for the evening.

AGREEMENT NOT REACHED

TOP DOCK WORKERS AND DOCK OFFICIALS HELD ANOTHER FTILE CONFERENCE LAST NIGHT

Following a joint meeting of the two Escanaba locals of the two Top Dock Workers Union of the city at Perron's hall last night, Supt. H. J. Robertson of the North Western docks and Supt. J. M. Clifford of the St. Paul docks, met the members of a special committee representing the two unions and were unable to reach an agreement as to the wage scale for the coming season.

The members of the committee will meet with officials of the docks at 10 o'clock this morning in an effort to reach an agreement. Last night it was said that while the situation did not appear to be as critical as early in the week, no agreement had yet been reached on a wage scale. It is hoped by both members of the union and the dock officials that an agreement can be arrived at today.

LOFVANDER GOES BEYOND

A. M. Lofvander, one of the pioneer merchants of the city, died last night at his home at Ludington street, and Harrison avenue, after being seriously ill for but a few hours. Mr. Lofvander had been confined to his home for the past week with an attack of rheumatism. Symptoms of pneumonia developed late on Thursday and yesterday his condition became critical. The attending physician was constantly at the bedside during the day and evening but nothing could be done to check the disease. Shortly after 12 o'clock last night he passed away.

A brother living in Chicago was notified yesterday of the serious condition of the patient and it is expected that he will arrive in Escanaba this morning.

Mr. Lofvander was engaged in the bakery business in this city for a number of years and was recognized as one of the prosperous business men of the city. He retired from business several years ago and since that time had lived a retired life. He owned considerable real estate in the city and but recently had succeeded in placing his affairs in shape to enjoy the remaining years of his life. No arrangements for the funeral were made last night.

K. C. COMMITTEE TO PLAN STATE MEET

Green Bay, Wis., April 19.—The general committee of the Green Bay Council No. 617, Knights of Columbus, appointed to take charge of the state convention of the order to be held in Green Bay, May 14-15, will hold a meeting Saturday night to perfect plans for the meeting. Chairman John P. Hogan has called the meeting and the committee will arrange for the business meetings and the entertainment of the visiting knights.

A class of 25 candidates was initiated into the local council at a meeting held Tuesday night at Empires hall. The first degree was conferred upon the candidates by Judge D. F. Blawit of Fond du Lac, and the second by Rev. F. X. Barth of Escanaba. Both gentlemen were assisted by the officers of the local lodge. Members of the K. C. lodges in Marinette, Menominee, Oshkosh, Kaukauna and other cities were present at the meeting. "Smoker" followed the degree

MARINETTE GETS STAR

WELCOME MEYER, MARQUETTE UNIVERSITY STAR TO WEAR MARINETTE UNIFORM

The management of the Marinette Baseball team is already actively in the game signing up a number of star players that are bound to make the Queen City squad one of the strongest in the league. The greater portion of the Marinette team has already been signed up by Manager Murphy and the applications of a number of stars are under consideration. The Marinette Eagle Star says:

"Dick" Murphy, manager of Marinette's league ball team, is fast getting a line on a bunch of good players who will try for positions on the team.

For the pitching staff the three men now being considered are Meegan of Oconto, Schott, who was here last season, and McMillan, who played at one time with the Peashigo team under the name of Green. He is a professional and a fast man, and may be signed. Schott is a good fielder as well as a utility man for pitcher and likely will be engaged.

Merl Spald of last year's team, will probably be signed for center field. Spald is remembered for his prowess with the stick. He is also a good infielder. His home is at Knox, Ind. Spald is in the city at the present time, and probably will remain here.

Welcome Meyers, who played left field for Menominee last season, may be signed for the local team. He cannot join the squad until June but is willing to come at that time. He is now in Kalamazoo, Mich.

Bauch has been signed for third base. He is remembered by the fans as a member of last year's team. Negotiations have been carried on with Leopold for short stop, but it is not certain he will be signed. Kublan the Milwaukee catcher who played some brilliant games with the local team, will in all probability be the regular catcher for the season. Murphy will play first base again, and Beyers will probably be on second.

For the balance of the team, or for positions that are not filled by the recruits who are coming, it is believed some good men can be obtained from among those released by larger leagues after the training season. Marinette at any rate hopes to have a team that will compare well with any of the four teams in the new league.

PALMER MAN NOT A VICTIM

Matt Kolvisto, of Palmer, one of the owners of the Palmer store that was burned this week and who was thought to have been drowned aboard the Titanic, returned to his home at Palmer on Wednesday evening. A correspondent says:

Despite reports that he had sunk to a watery grave with the ill-fated steamship "Titanic," Matt Kolvisto arrived home safely Wednesday evening, after a three months' absence during which time he visited Finland and other places in Europe.

The friends of Mr. Kolvisto knew he must have sailed for America on about the day the Titanic set out on her maiden voyage and as he went over on the White Star Line steamer "Olympic" it was believed he would return by the same route. Much anxiety was felt concerning his safety when the reports of the disaster were received. However, Wednesday morning a message was received saying that he had arrived safe and sound, and would be home that evening.

Mr. Kolvisto told some of his friends yesterday morning that he barely missed taking the "Titanic." He had planned to sail on her, but he did not like his trip on the "Olympic," and decided to take another line on his return.

Mr. Kolvisto is a stockholder in the Palmer Store Co., whose store building was destroyed by fire Wednesday morning.

NEW CAR HERE FOR ESCANABA

H. A. Gunderson yesterday received for John Peterson, the local shoe merchant, a Regal 25 touring car that was immediately turned over to the new owner. The car appeared on the street for the first time yesterday and attracted much attention from car fanciers of the city.

E. I. Roal of Baraga Mich., is expected here on Sunday after an extended

JOLLY MANAGER OF THE NAHMA TEAM

Joseph H. Jolly of Nahma has been chosen as manager of the Nahma baseball team for the coming season. In addition to the position of manager Mr. Jolly is treasurer of the club while Charles Ward is captain of the aggregation. Nahma plans to enter a particularly fast baseball squad on the diamond this spring and details in the team management are already being fixed.

OLMSTED NOT SIGNED

Monte Olmsted, the crack left hander who last season developed into one of the strongest twirlers ever developed in this district, is visiting for a few days in the city after spending the winter at his home at Garden. Olmsted has not yet decided with what team he will play this season, having refused a contract with the Dayton team of the Central League and failed to come to terms with the local club. Probably no pitcher ever developed in this district "went ahead" faster than did Olmsted last season. When he came to Escanaba two years ago he was a raw recruit and his work for the first season was but ordinary. Last season he started out in whirlwind form with the Menominee club and after playing a portion of the season in that city was signed by Dayton where he finished the season.

He returned to Escanaba and finished the season with clubs of this district and in every game that he twirled showed a wonderful improvement in form and general knowledge of the game marking him as one of the coming pitchers developed in Escanaba.

SURPRISE PARTY WAS ENJOYABLE

Mrs. J. C. Valind was surprised by a large number of her friends Thursday evening in honor of her thirty-second birthday. Those who were present were: Mr. and Mrs. Albert Moran, Mr. and Mrs. Theo. St. Peter, Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Bourdalaes, Mr. and Mrs. Nap Gauthier, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Murray, Mrs. John Murray, Mrs. Edward Murray, Mrs. J. A. Campbell, Mrs. Alex Giraud, Miss Anna Goulet, Miss Alevria Gauthier, Miss Edmona Bodette, Miss Rose Clement, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Valind. Mrs. Valind was presented with a large number of beautiful presents. The evening was spent with music and games, then refreshments were served. All remained at the home until a late hour when they all went to their homes, all having enjoyed a jolly good time.

FARMERS CROSS BAY IN SMALL BOAT

With all of the ice cleared from both Little Bay de Noc and Green Bay, a party of farmers from Bay de Noc township crossed the bay yesterday in Stratton's launch and were able to land at one of the north shore docks without difficulty. All of the farmers brought over supplies of eggs and butter and for a time flooded the city with those commodities, many supplying their regular customers in the city, for the first time since the ice became too dangerous for crossing.

COUPLES' WEDDING TO OCCUR SOON

Announcement has been made of the engagement of Lillian Moersch of this city to Mr. George Sasmann of Great Falls Wash., and formerly of this city. Mr. Sasmann is now visiting in the city. The couple will be married late in this month. The bride to be is a popular young woman of the city with a host of friends here while the groom also has a wide circle of friends in Escanaba where he lived for many years before moving to the west where he has a responsible position.

Mrs. John Goodman, of Sheldrake Mich., who is visiting here and Mrs. Charles Bergeson and son, will go to Masonville this morning to visit with

TERMINAL SITE SOUGHT

OFFICIALS OF ANN ARBOR RAILWAY VISITED CITY YESTERDAY TO INSPECT TERMINAL SITES FOR CARFERRY

That officials of the Ann Arbor Railway are seeking an entrance for their car ferry line into Escanaba, was made certain yesterday when a party of officers of that corporation visited the city and were entertained by members of the Transportation Committee of the Escanaba Business Men's Association.

In four automobiles the visitors were taken to possible sites for a car ferry entrance to the city, being conducted to a site near Portage point and one on the north shore above the St. Paul docks.

The visitors were greatly impressed with the industries here and exhibited a live interest in all of Escanaba's many advantages there were brought to their attention as a car ferry terminal. In addition to being shown possible sites for a car ferry terminal the officials were taken on a tour of inspection to different plants about this city, Wells and Gladstone. They visited the sawmills of the I. Stephenson Company at Wells, the Chemical plant and new charcoal iron furnace; the tanning manufacturing plant, different industries of Gladstone, the power dams and new pulp mill on the Escanaba river and the several manufacturing concerns about the city.

Those in the party of visiting officials were: President Joseph Ramsay; W. D. Holiday assistant to the president; W. D. Danley, general superintendent; J. J. Kirby general passenger agent; J. H. Bradley, general freight agent; J. K. Howard superintendent of maintenance; J. R. Ransay assistant superintendent of maintenance; R. J. Wood, secretary to President Ramsay and E. S. Lyon of New York, representing Strong, Sturgis and Company, bankers of that city.

Members of the party came to Escanaba aboard President Ramsay's private car and were met at the North Western station. After being the guests of the local committee during the forenoon the visitors were returned to their car where they played the part of hosts to the Escanaba men until their car was taken north on the afternoon North Western passenger train.

Members of the party of Escanaba businessmen who entertained the Ann Arbor officials here yesterday were: President A. J. Young of the Business Men's Association, J. C. Kirkpatrick, H. W. Reade, J. J. Cleary, J. E. Byrns, C. W. Cates, W. W. Oliver, M. J. Ryan G. T. Stephenson and W. L. Kennedy.

"BANQUET" WAS SERVED

Members of the public speaking class of the Escanaba high school entertained the members of the Senior class at the high school yesterday afternoon at a mock banquet. Although no banquet was served every detail of a carefully planned affair of that kind was carried out. In addition to the seniors present members of the class were allowed to invite a few friends and there were nearly 80 people including members of the faculty present. Especially designed menu cards were prepared for the event and following the "serving" of the "banquet" several of the members of the class responded to toasts. Many of the short addresses were particularly clever and all were equally up to the standard of the after dinner talks delivered at many prominent functions.

DELIGHTFUL PARTY WAS ARRANGED

Early one of the most delightful dancing parties of the season in this city was that given by members of the St. Agnes Guild of St. Stephen's Episcopal church, at Clark's hall last night. Although informal in nature the party was a strictly invitational affair and was attended by a large number of the young society people of the city. The hall was prettily decorated for the occasion and a particular effort was made by those in charge of the program to make the evening enjoyable for all of those

TITANIC'S COMMANDER VETERAN NAVIGATOR

New York, April 19.—The honor bestowed upon Captain Edward John Smith, when he was selected to command the Titanic and taken from the Olympic for that purpose was considered remarkable among steamship commanders for it is a deep sea tradition that a captain's career is ended when his vessel meets with serious mishap.

The Olympic had twice met with misfortune with Captain Smith as her commander, but the White Star company knew that they were justified in placing every reliance on the man who had ruled over the finest steamships in the world.

Thirty-Eight Years in Service.
Captain Smith has been in the service of the White Star for thirty-eight years. He has commanded the Republic—the old Republic, not the one the Florida sank off Nantucket lightship—the Britannic, the Germanic and the Majestic. He brought over the Baltic when she was the biggest vessel on seas, then the Adriatic and lastly the Olympic. In the White Star service he is known as "the old man."

It is rather more than forty years since Captain Smith first went to sea. He rose rapidly and after having had command of sailing vessels joined the White Star as fourth officer. He is tall and of weight proportionate to his height. His white hair, white whiskers and mustache make him called by those who have voyaged frequently under his care, "the grand old man of the sea." Except the mishap with the Olympic and the trouble at the opening of the ill-fated voyage of the Titanic he has never had an accident.

Careful as a Navigator.
Captain Smith was essentially a careful navigator. He never took chances. He attended himself to every detail of his duty and never left to others what he ought to see to himself. He never did what it was the duty of some one else to do if that some one was at his post. His home is at Southampton, Eng., and he has a charming wife and a pretty daughter, fourteen years old. His hobby is reading and he kept himself closely posted on both American and English politics as well as other forms of news.

TITANIC HEARD ICE WARNING

New York, April 19.—At 8 o'clock Sunday night, Capt. Clark of the Atlantic Transport liner, Mesaba, then only ninety miles ahead of the Titanic, sent word to Capt. Smith that his path was blocked by great ice fields and bergs as follows:

"M. G. Y. Latitude 49 to 41.50 north, longitude 49 to 50.50 west, much heavy packed ice and great number of bergs. Weather clear. (Signed) Clark, Capt. Mesaba."

"Thanks. (Signed) M. G. Y."
"M. G. Y." is the call of the Titanic. The officers of the Mesaba felt relieved, feeling that they had been of service to the liner. The Mesaba continued on her course and her operator changed the adjustment of his instrument to talk to another liner and did not pick up the Titanic's frantic appeal for aid. The first he knew of the tragedy, Capt. Clark said when his ship reached port here today, was when they heard the Olympic talking about it on Monday.

Sunday morning at 8 o'clock the Mesaba ran into what Capt. Clark says was the largest field of ice he ever encountered. The field was from seventy-five to ninety-miles wide and dotted with between 75 to 100 enormous bergs. The Mesaba ran 100 miles out of her course to avoid the ice field.

On Sunday night the operator aboard the Mesaba heard the Titanic talking with Cape Race and later sent the Titanic the message of warning.

NORTH CAROLINA LINE-UP IS EIGHT FOR MR. TAFT AND SIXTEEN FOR MR. ROOSEVELT

Charlotte, N. C., April 19.—North Carolina's representation at the national Republican convention will be divided so as to give sixteen delegates to Roosevelt and eight to Taft. Announcement to this effect was made yesterday by State Chairman John W. Morehead, after a conference of party leaders to arrange a new plan of organization in this state.

WISCONSIN PEOPLE IN LIST OF MISSING

Milwaukee, Wis., April 19.—Out of eight Wisconsin people aboard the Titanic, five names, those of women, are included among the saved, as follows: Mrs. E. G. Crosby and Miss Harriet Crosby, Milwaukee; Mrs. W. B. Blivey, Superior; Mrs. W. E. Minahan, Fond du Lac; Miss Daisy Minahan, Green Bay, Captain E. G. Crosby, president and general manager of the Crosby Transportation company, of Milwaukee; Dr. W. E. Minahan, of Fond du Lac, and W. B. Blivey, of Superior, are yet to be accounted for.

Appleton, Wis., April 18.—George Hart, son of Alfred Hart of Appleton, was a passenger on the Titanic and it is presumed he was among those who lost their lives. Mr. Hart was for many years court reporter at Wausau, Wis.

Racine, Wis., April 19.—Mrs. Jennie Hansen, reported as among the list of survivors of the Titanic, is believed to be Mrs. P. C. Hansen, who, with her husband, was returning home on the ill-fated vessel.

Neshaw, Wis., April 18.—Oscar Jensen of this city was assistant purser on the Titanic. He left here some time ago to join the ship.

MARQUETTE AND ISHPENING TO DEBATE

Marquette, Mich., April 19.—According to an agreement reached between Principal Downman of the Ishpening high school and Principal McNeal of the Marquette high school the negative debating team of the local school will go to Marquette next Monday night to contest against the affirmative team of the Marquette institution. The question Monday night will be the same as that to be debated upon at the dual debate between Ishpening and Escanaba Wednesday night. "Resolved, that all American cities between 10,000 and 500,000 population should adopt the commission form of government."

It was expected that after Marquette withdrew from the Triangular Debating league a week ago that it would not engage in any inter-scholastic debate this year, but the sentiment among the students was so strongly in favor of meeting an outside team that Monday night's contest was arranged.

The teams of both schools have had their arrangements in preparation for several months and as both are composed of clear thinkers and forceful speakers a spirited debate is expected.

The greatest need then is Electric Bitters, the glorious tonic, blood purifier and regulator of stomach, liver and kidneys. Thousands have proved that they wonderfully strengthened the nerves, build up the system and restore to health and good spirits an attack of Grip. If suffering, try them. Only 50 cents. BEULAH, MISS. NOW IN DANGER

Greenville, Miss., April 19.—Flood waters rushing through a rapidly widening breach in the Mississippi river dikes near the town of Beulah, Miss., are spreading over the fertile delta lands today. Practically the entire southern half of Bolivar county is inundated and before its flows back into the Mississippi will flood the counties of Sunflower, Washington and Issaquena, comprising some of the richest cotton lands in the world.

Beloit, Dahomey, Beulah, Cleveland, Pace, Shaw, Choctaw, Leland and Rolling Fork are the larger towns directly in path of the overflow. Gasoline launches were sent from this city and Rosedale early today to begin and exploration of the immediate territory in search of refugees.

If any lives are lost the number will be small as preparations for flight had been made at all important towns. The crevice in the levee occurred late last night on the Hughes' plantation in Bolivar county, four miles south of Beulah an about 40 miles north of Greenville. When the embankment gave way 150 feet of the earthwork collapsed. This morning the gaping chasm is about 1,000 feet wide.

Big Area Under Water.
Memphis, Tenn., April 19.—A break in the main line levee on the Mississippi river four miles below Rosedale, Miss., and another on the Arkansas river added 25,000 persons to the list of food sufferers in southern Arkansas, northeastern Louisiana and northwestern Mississippi, the flood inundating an area of rich cotton country almost as large as the New England states.

The plight of thousands of homeless people is pitiable. Many have been without food for days and scores are suffering from want of clothing.

Another Break in Levee.
Baton Rouge, La., April 19.—The levee at Angola on the east bank of the Mississippi river broke this morning. The breach is at the head of the state convicts' farm. The damage will be confined to a small section of west Feliciana.

NAVIGATION ON BAY IS DELAYED

Green Bay, Wis., April 19.—There is little chance that navigation will be started on the southern end of Green Bay this week. A strong wind has driven a large amount of ice southward this port in the last two days and no boat will venture into the floes.

The Hart Transportation company announced a few days ago that an attempt would be made to run a boat from Sturgeon Bay to Green Bay today, but advice from the office in the northern port is to the effect that no boat will leave there today. It is said that one of the Hart steamers may go out Friday or Saturday if the ice disappears in sufficient quantity to make navigation possible.

A trip was made by one of the Denness steamers yesterday afternoon to Long Tall Point lightstation and a report brought back that a large amount of ice was carried into the "cut" by the wind in a few minutes.

Keeper Hultner will be stationed at Greasy Island lighthouse again this year and his assistant will be Robert McKellog of South Manitou, Mich. Carl Witzman will be the keeper another season at Long Tall Point station and his assistant will be Mr. Weber, who was with him last year. The buoys have been placed in the channel of the bay by the Denness brothers for the season. They have set the buoys for several years.

CRASH WAS AWFUL SAYS A PASSENGER

New York, April 19.—E. Z. Taylor, a Philadelphia, one of the survivors of the Titanic disaster, jumped into the sea just three minutes before the boat sank. He told a graphic story as he came from the Carpathia.

"I was eating when the boat struck the iceberg," he said. "There was an awful shock that made the boat tremble from stem to stern. I did not realize for some time what had happened. No one seemed to know the extent of the accident. We were told that an iceberg had been struck by the ship. I felt the boat rise and it seemed to me that she was riding over the ice."

"I ran out on the deck, and then I could see ice. It was a veritable sea of ice, and the boat was rocking over in it. I should say that part of the iceberg was eighty feet high, but the bigger berg must have been broken into sections, probably by our ship."

"I jumped into the ocean, and was picked up by one of the boats. I never expected to see land again. I waited on board the boat until the lights went out. It seemed to me that the discipline on board was wonderful."

Mrs. Churchill Candee, of Washington, D. C., was taken from the Carpathia with both her legs broken. Mrs. Candee said she received her injuries while getting into a lifeboat. Most of the men saved, she declared, were picked up from the water, having plunged overboard after the lifeboat had been launched.

"Major Archibald Butt and Colonel John Jacob Astor died like heroes," she said, but before she could tell more of the story of their end she was hurried away.

Wilson Potter, of Philadelphia, who was at the pier to meet his mother, who was one of the survivors, said his mother was unable to make any formal statement, but said she related the story to him as follows: "She told me that she was in the first boat with about ten others, and that there was plenty of room for forty more. My mother said she saw Mr. and Mrs. John Jacob Astor standing by the rail and called to them to come into the boat, but they refused, saying it was safer where they were."

At one of the uptown hotels are Mrs. W. B. Minahan and her daughter Daisy of Fond du Lac Wis. No interview with them was available tonight. Dr. Minahan was lost.

Robert E. Daniels, a young broker of Philadelphia, said he jumped into the sea as the boat was going down and was picked up in a life boat.

How President and Mrs. Taft inaugurate New Season, Which Will End With Garden Party--Gossip of Diplomats.

Washington.—The president and Mrs. Taft inaugurated the Lenten season entertainments with a dinner for the governor of Maryland and Mrs. Goldsborough, followed by a musicale at which the principal guests were members of the Congressional club.

Leto this month the president and Mrs. Taft will be the chief guests at a dinner and musicale to be given by Mr. and Mrs. John R. McLean. This probably will serve as a precedent for the entrance of the president and his wife more often into the homes of society.

Society is interested in the programme of the Russian ambassador and Mme. Bakmeteff for the spring. It is expected to begin directly after they take possession of their new house. They arrived in Washington several months ago and have been forced into the rather happy position of receiving the attentions of society without the opportunity of reciprocating.

There will be two important entertainments in diplomatic circles in the spring, official receptions at the Russian and the Japanese embassies. Mr. Bakmeteff has not yet held his reception for his colleagues in the corps, and the arrival this week of the new Japanese ambassador and Baroness Chinda will reopen another important social center in Washington. No date has yet been set for either reception.

Arrangements are even now being made for the summer by the diplomatic and official colonies. Much to the disappointment of the colony on the north shore of Massachusetts, the German embassy will be established in Newport, R. I. Count von Bernstorff, the German ambassador, will go to Europe early in July, but Countess von Bernstorff will precede him, as she did last year, by several months.

Charity is engrossing the attention of every circle of society. Mrs. Christian Hemmick has written another fantastic play, and it is in rehearsal and will be given in the Playhouse, with a cast of men and women of society. It is called "The Love Echo." It will include characteristic and picturesque dances, many of which will be in the Grecian style, and will enlist the services of some of the graceful young women of society.

With two skating clubs, an afternoon dance in some home almost every day, rehearsals morning, noon and night for the various entertainments, theater parties and dances and picnics in the country, Lent in Washington is a most welcome season, the formality of the winter having been thrown aside.

STOCKYARDS CLASSED AS HOG HOTEL.

"We had the 'Hotel For Hogs' case up today," said an attaché of the Supreme court. "It is a case in which the government sought to prove that the National Stock Yards Co. of East St. Louis was maintaining a railroad because it had 28 miles of tracks, a dozen engines and a good many cars."

"Superintendent Jones of the company was on the witness stand in the Federal court, trying to explain the functions of a stock yards company, and said the yards were maintained so that anyone who desired could obtain food and shelter for livestock."

MASTER OF THE RIGHT WORD.

Major Archibald Butt, social aid to President Taft, is a master of the right word at the right moment; steward of small talk and a human ambulance to the rescue of the colloquially injured. Two secret services guard the president from bodily assault, but Archibald Butt is the ...ntful silence is the worst thing there is. The President of the United States is constantly meeting people, and when he meets them it is essential that there be talk. When he goes to a strange city the chairman of the reception committee may be away by the high position of the visitor, and, like as not, can think of nothing to say. The president snatches a tame Angora goat from the man, as the current saying is. Then is when Archibald Butt must put all at their ease, for obviously the president cannot do all the talking.

Again the painful silence may ensue at a meeting between the president and another celebrity. Neither may feel any embarrassment, but there are times when only formal topics are permissible. For example, when the Connaughts were with us the president and the duke each made three or four routine interchanges of remark, and then the line of talk they had started on was exhausted. The president didn't feel like asking the duke what kind of ball team his town had, neither was the duke disposed to introduce the subject of dogs or the shows he had been to. Just as the painful silence threatened, Archibald Butt stepped into the breach with a small kit of words and saved the day.

"PINK ADMIRAL" DEPARTS.

Everyone is sorry to say good-by to Captain Sowerby, naval attaché of the British embassy, whose florid complexion has given him the name among his intimates as the "pink admiral." He gave a farewell dinner the other night at Rauscher's, which was said to be in honor of Miss Helen Taft, but this was his opportunity to pay some attention to the young belle of the White House, as well as to honor some 60 other guests who were present. Captain Sowerby has been noted for his participation in the Chevy Chase Hunt club meets and a number of his friends appeared upon this occasion in pink silk coats and black satin breeches, these men, of course, being fellow-members of Captain Sowerby's in the Chevy Chase Hunt. They seemed to think it more important to say farewell to a fellow-member of the hunt club than to say farewell to a diplomat or another gentleman of their acquaintance, and were therefore costumed accordingly, very much on the same principle that Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan and other members of the New York Yacht club attended yacht club dinners in yachting coats, provided the coats show the gold service stripes. This Sowerby dinner was further discussed because of the report that some well-known New York woman lost a $70,000 diamond necklace at the dance which followed. It such a loss occurred, however, the jewels were quickly recovered, because Captain Sowerby denied the loss the following day.

MAKES BIG DIFFERENCE.

The alphabet makes a big difference in a congressman's quota of leisure. To be born under a letter coming in the last chapter of the alphabet is just as handy for a congressman as being born under a lucky star. Here is an example: One of the big gongs in the House Office building sounded ominously, notifying members that the patriots over in the house chamber were fixing to hold a roll call and that all hands should heave ho. Representative Allen of Cincinnati came scampering out of his office and headed toward the nearest elevator, for inasmuch as his name comes among the first of the A's, he had little time to lose. Two or three doors from Allen's place is the office of Representative Young of Michigan.

"Aren't you going over to vote?" asked Allen.

"Oh, yes, later on I will," replied Young, yawning. "I've got three or four dozen letters to dictate first, and here's a couple of big reports I must read over. What's the..."

Gran'daddy of Fiddles. There are quite a number of people who collect musical instruments. Men have been known to pay tremendous prices for violins of rare make, merely to place these instruments in collections they were making of such things.

One of the greatest fiddles that ever was known was to be seen at the French court in the time of Charles IX. This was a viol so large that several boys could be placed inside of it. These boys used to sit inside this queer instrument and sing the airs that the man who handled the bow was playing on the viol outside. The effect is said to have been very beautiful, though it would seem as if the presence of the boys in its interior would seriously interfere with the tone of the "Great Fiddle," as it was called. Many years after, another huge instrument of this kind was used at concerts in Boston. It was so large that to play it the fiddler had to stand on a table to use his bow at the proper point on the strings. The instrument was called the "Great Fiddle."

CAPTAIN AMUNDSEN A SAILOR SINCE YOUTH

Captain Roald Amundsen, who is credited with the discovery of the south pole, has for many years been considered one of the most daring and competent of arctic and antarctic explorers.

A sailor from his youth, he started polar research at the age of 25, when he participated in the Belgica Antarctic expedition under the command of Captain Gerlach. He was first officer of the vessel and the voyage lasted from 1897 to 1899.

On his return he made up his mind to continue polar research, but this time he decided to go to the north in an endeavor to discover the Northwest passage, which had been sought for 350 years by daring sailors, among them, Frobisher, John Cabot, Sir Hugh Willoughby, Richard Chancellor, John Davis, Sir John Ross and Sir John Franklin.

Captain Amundsen prepared himself for the task by undergoing a course of two years' study in magnetism and meteorology, after which he sailed for the north from Christiania on board the Ojua with a crew of only eight men on June 16, 1903. Proceeding to Lancaster Sound, he sailed past Cape Adelaide and King William Land and Ross Strait. The vessel wintered in that port. For many months Captain Amundsen drifted along and finally on Aug. 26 met an American whaler to the east of Cape Bathurst.

He finally took his little vessel through the Bering Strait and thus, for the first time, accomplished the Northwest passage. On the voyage he determined exactly the position of the magnetic pole. Altogether he was three years away from Norway. He arrived in New York after this expedition on Nov. 6, 1906.

Several years have been spent by him in making preparations for an expedition to the north pole on which he was to start in 1910. He, however, later changed his plans and decided to go to the antarctic instead.

The Fram, which he selected for his expedition, is a most remarkable ship. She has been used for many years in arctic exploration. From 1893 to 1896, during the expedition of Dr. Fridtjof Nansen, she covered a journey of about 7,000 miles in the Arctic Ocean, 3,000 miles of this being accomplished while she was frozen solid in the ice. She was not damaged at all during this voyage.

Captain Amundsen left Buenos Aires on his last trip toward the close of 1910 with a small party of Norwegians, all of them experienced in arctic work. He took with him a large pack of Siberian dogs and his men were all provided with skis, which were thought to offer great advantages in traversing the glacier ice. Captain Amundsen's party made its base near the south pole than his British rival, Captain Scott.

Nothing was heard from the expedition for many months until the arrival of the Fram was reported a few days ago, at Hobart, Tasmania.

PRINCE BORIS OF AGE; FATHER MAY ABDICATE

The coming of age of Prince Boris of Tirovo, the eldest son of King Ferdinand and heir-apparent to the Bulgarian throne, was celebrated February 2. On that day he completed his eighteenth year and the occasion was made a national holiday.

It proved, however, not only a national holiday but an international holiday for nearly all of the civilized countries had honored the occasion by sending special delegates to it. Prince Constantine of Greece, Prince Ferdinand of Roumania, Prince Danilo of Montenegro and Prince Alexander of Servia—all crown princes—were present, while the other nations had sent worthy personages of their race to represent them before the Bulgarian court.

In itself the arrival at age of young Boris was a small affair. Judging, however, from the prompt and cordial response of all the countries, great and small, to send their delegates, it shows that the world thinks of the little country whose existence does not go farther back than 1876. This fact indicates very clearly that the new kingdom of Bulgaria is considered a very important factor in southern Europe. Its phenomenal progress, its stable governments and its army have attracted the attention of all, and political prophets have declared that Bulgaria is destined to play the most important part in the solution of the eastern question.

Five centuries ago Bulgaria was the predominant power in the Balkans. Unfortunately, it fell a victim to the Ottoman hordes and for nearly 500 years groaned under the yoke of the Turks. At the cathedral church of the capital February 2 Prince Boris was declared of age and the announcement was followed by the echo of cannon and the joyful shouts of the throngs. The prince took the oath that he would obey the king and respect the rights of the people. After that his august father took him by the hand and gave him his paternal advice to live, work and fight for the liberties and greatness of his country, to which the son answered: "I shall be happy to follow in the footsteps of my dear father."

Escorted by the local and special foreign representatives, together with the ministers and other Bulgarian men of state, the royal family was conveyed to the court, where a sumptuous banquet was given. There Grand Duke Andras Vladimirovitch of Russia expressed the sentiment of the rest of his colleagues when he said that he was amazed at the success of Bulgaria and had no doubt that it was in a position to realize its great ideals.

Prince Boris was born January 18, 1894. His birthdays should naturally be celebrated on the same day every year, but owing to the fact that his mother died on January 18 the day was changed for the twentieth of the same month (February 2, new style). He enjoys the unenviable reputation of being a very studious and serious boy. His tutors have described him as democratic in his ideas and temperament. In that respect he is more popular with the people than his father, who is aristocratically inclined. He has completed with success his gymnasium course and is now getting ready to pursue his university education. Already he knows Bulgarian, French, German, English, and inherits the Italian and Russian languages. He is now a captain in the army.

King Ferdinand, being quite old and not a little tired of the heavy responsibilities he has borne now for nearly thirty years, may decide to abdicate in favor of his son at any time.

MADAME CECILE SOREL BEST-DRESSED WOMAN

The best-dressed woman in the world? That is the title applied to Mme. Cecile Sorel, the beautiful French actress who will soon visit the United States. Although an artist of recognized power and ability, it will not be because of that that the theaters in which she will appear in this country will be packed. So far as the women are concerned—and we rather think that their husbands and brothers will not be above that motive—their object will be to discover if, after all, Mme. Sorel is so marvelously gowned as to set her apart from her sister-women. On the stage the costumes she wears "harmonize with the character" according to the artists herself. This sounds rather difficult but no doubt she manages to achieve the result perfectly. Mme. Sorel claims to have started the fashion of the narrow skirt, but she had no idea that the innovation ever would be taken up so delightedly for street wear. Personally, Mme. Sorel believes the closefitting skirt should be worn only in the house and she herself wears when out of doors a rather full skirt, which she claims is the only sensible thing for walking.

Close Season. English Tourist in Bloody Gulch Hotel.—By the way, old top, is the grizzly bear common around here? Landlord.—Used to be, but it's extinct now. Why, even Three-Fingered Ike won't allow it in his dance hall.—Puck.

Ever Thus. "Some of the wisest men do not attain wealth." "I have noticed it," replied young Mrs. Torkins. "Somebody who doesn't know nearly as much about horses as Charley does always gets the money that he bets."

No Wonder. "The dinners my wife gets drives me to drink." "I thought she was a good cook?" "She is, but her favorite dish is salt mackerel."

PROPER KIND OF GIRL IS ALMOST IN DESPAIR

Act of Thoughtfulness Won Man's Heart.

Temporary Aid When Host Was in an Embarrassing Position Led to Visit to Parsonage and Two Hearts Lovingly Joined.

Licensed, patent leathered, and flustered, the young couple came to the parsonage and expressed themselves as highly desirous of taking up matrimony as a permanent pursuit. After they had been joined and were about to start away, the bridegroom found that he had left his pocketbook in the everyday clothes. He was greatly mortified not to have a $5 or $10 bill to hand to the reverend doctor for his trouble, but luckily the other half of the sketch had a little nest-egg roll in her hand satchel, and she willingly let him have a bill, which he took and promised to pay back into her own private funds.

"It's altogether fitting that she should stake me to the wedding fee," he remarked. And he went on to relate the brief history of their romance.

He had formerly "gone with" her cousin, he said. One day his present bride came to town to visit her cousin, and he met her for the first time. One afternoon he met them down town and invited them to take dinner with him at one of the good cafes.

Both girls ordered with much abandon, and when the time drew near for the waiter to bring around the check, the young man began to shift about in his chair uneasily.

"I don't know what I'd done," he said, "if I hadn't felt somebody touch me on the knee under the table just then. I looked down and found that this girl here, unbeknownst to her cousin, was holding a five-dollar bill toward me. She had figured out what was biting me, and was doing it for me rather than see me get in wrong with her cousin. Well, you can guess whether I took hold of it or not, and how much gratitude I felt. The thing that impressed me most, though, was that a girl must be a pretty good sort to do a thing like that for a stranger—she didn't know whether I'd ever pay it back or not. So we got pretty chummy from then on."

Truly an Unknown Land. Neither the Chinese themselves, nor the rest of the world, know much of Mongolia or Tibet. Most of those two countries belong to the desert, and although they have been inhabited since the time when the memory of man runneth not to the contrary, the outside world is to them a sealed book, and they to the world an unguessable riddle. The great desert of Gobi that is partly in China, partly in Manchuria, partly in Mongolia, and partly in Siberia, is traversed by the oldest transportation lines in existence. It has a caravan route over which tea and silk-laden camels have traveled toward Europe for these 3,000 years, and yet from the time when Kublai Khan macadamized the road until the time when the Russian railroad paralyzed it by the competition of steam no one of the merchants who traveled over it turned either to the right or to the left to tell Europe and the Occident of the wonders or the terrors of that unknown land.

Duke "Fairly Served Out." An amusing story is related of the recent visit of the Duke of Connaught to New York. During a dinner the duke humorously called a fair American on the liberty taken by Americans in clipping the king's English. Later in the evening his royal highness in course of conversation asked the young American what place in London had most impressed her during her last visit. "Stipul, your highness," was the timid reply. "Stipul?" said the duke, puzzled. "Oh, yes, there is nothing in the town so wonderful to me as 'I am afraid,'" he said kindly. "That you know London better than I do. Stipul? Is it a theater, a cafe—what is it?" "A church, your highness. We Americans call it St. Paul; but as you call St. John, St. John, it seems, must be Stipul." The duke laughed heartily and declared himself fairly served out.—London Tatler.

Modern Improvement Challenged. "The typewriter is a great invention," remarked the postmaster. "I dunno whether it is or not," replied Farmer Cornsossel. "I dunno whether these fellers would make their speeches near so long if they had to sit down an' write 'em by hand. An' even if they did they wouldn't be able to use words any bigger'n they knew how to spell."

Stupendous Yearly Waste. Frank Koester in the World's Work gives figures to cover the enormous amount of waste in money and human life that our American extravagance leads us to annually. The national government wastes $300,000,000 every year, or $3 apiece for every one of our 90,000,000 inhabitants. In accidents and transportation in New York city alone we lose 350 lives; $722,000,000 is wasted in losses of income due to preventable disease; $50,000,000 and 50 lives in forest fires; $238,000 in floods and freshets; $22,000,000 is lost in gases in the manufacture of coke.

We waste $650,000,000 in the mismanagement of railroads, and $40,000,000 a year is lost in the careless handling of eggs.

Tit for Tat. Mrs. Jenkins was standing before the mirror, arranging her thin hair, when her bald-headed husband entered the room.

"Say, Em'ly," he began, "why don't you do your hair the way you used to?" "Why don't you?" retorted Mrs. Jenkins.—Lippincott's.

Rough On the Prince. "When I was abroad I was constantly taken for a certain crown prince whom I believe I resemble." "Must have been expensive for you." "Why so?" "I suppose you had to shell out some large tips."

Dangerous. A cultured boarder from the city was worried over the appearance of diphtheria in the village and discussed the matter with one of the natives.

"Yes, ma'am," said the latter; "it's an awful thing to get those Germans in your cisterns." Exit city boarder.—Lippincott's.

LONDON'S LORD MAYOR

EASILY HIGHEST PAID MAGISTRATE IN THE WORLD.

Head of World's Greatest City, He Performs the Duties of Simple Justice of the Peace in His Official Mansion.

No more violent contrast is to be found the world over than that existing between the various duties of the lord mayor of London. Theoretically, at least, the king of Great Britain and Ireland and emperor of India cannot enter the city of London without his consent; yet he spends the best part of his mornings dispensing Solomon-like justice upon drunks who have broken the peace of the square mile of territory over which he rules.

Of course, the mayor of an American city is its chief magistrate, but he seldom if ever is called upon to waste his valuable time over such humble duties. In London, the greatest city in the world, the lord mayor, unless called away on other duties, is to be found every morning after 11 o'clock in the little justice room of the great Mansion House, his official residence, dealing with the astonishingly small batch of lawbreakers taken in the net of the great police system that makes the city of London proper the safest and most law-abiding stretch of territory to be found in any large city in the world.

The city is only a square mile in extent, the greater part of it being occupied by the great business houses that control the finances of the world. There is located the famous Bank of England, for instance, behind whose eight-foot walls repose at all times a reserve fund of $100,000,000 in gold. Twenty-eight soldiers guard the treasure from within, but from without it is even better looked after. Scattered about the square mile of London, as thick as flies about a honey pot, are 1,800 bluecoated policemen. After eight or nine o'clock at night the silence of the streets in that part of Greater London is seldom broken except by the slow tread of the guardians of the law. Foolhardy, indeed, would be the burglar who attempted to ply his trade in this well-guarded area.

It is not strange, then, that criminals give the city a wide berth and the majority of those who find themselves in the dock facing the lord mayor of London are men and women who have drunk "not wisely but too well." The present lord mayor is a teetotaler, but he is possessed of a delightful broad-mindedness that views with sorrow rather than anger and severity the weaknesses of others. The city of London drunks never had a more lenient magistrate to pass judgment upon them, and dismissals with a kindly word of reproof and encouragement to better deeds far outnumber the fines.

The lord mayor of London receives as much as the president of the United States. His yearly pay envelope is twice as bulky as that of the prime minister of Great Britain. Those who have a leaning toward mathematics can figure out that he is the highest paid magistrate in the world, when one takes into consideration the proportion of his waking day that is spent on the bench. It must not be thought, however, that he has nothing else to do, although it is perfectly clear that his duties, taken as a whole, are largely ornamental.

Prestige of Office. The values of public office have underrdone many changes in the course of our history. Strange as it may seem now, the majority of New York was the great prize for young political ambitions 100 years ago. It was then an appointive office within the gift of the governor of the state. DeWitt Clinton left the United States senate to accept it when it was bestowed upon him by his uncle, the governor. Indeed, in the era the test of attractiveness of office appeared to be its proximity to the people. The United States senatorship, now only a small-er crown for a career than a seat in the popular house. There is record of the resignation of a distinguished Connecticut senator to become secretary of the state board of education. Another left the senate to take a partnership in a commercial firm. The governorship of a territory seemed more desirable than a chair in the United States senate to one man who might fairly claim to be in the second row of prominence in his day.

Shows Work of Filipinos. Miss Frances McGee, a supervisor of schools in the Philippines, is responsible for the collection of laces and embroideries which is being exhibited at Teachers' college, New York. All the lace and embroidery is done by Filipinos, boys and girls, in the public schools of the islands. It is planned by the school authorities to teach these young workers such patterns and stitches as will make their work more marketable. The abaka lace and other of the coarser laces seen in the exhibition are made by boys and girls in third and fourth grades of the school. In the upper grades the boys turn their talents to the making of furniture and to agriculture. These Philippine schools are entirely self-supporting, and according to the latest report of the bureau of education, the number of American teachers is constantly decreasing, their positions being filled by native students as they are graduated by the normal school.

DEATH NEAR SENATOR'S DAUGHTER AND FRIEND.

Marinette, Wis., April 19.—Mrs. Ralph Skidmore, daughter of Senator Stephenson, and a friend, Miss Daisy Dawson, who resides with her, had a narrow escape from death Wednesday when they drank a wine-glassful of what they thought was an aperient, but which proved to be a disinfectant, the chief constituent of which is chloride of zinc. Both were taken violently ill and it was several hours before they were out of danger. The two liquids were in similar looking bottles. Miss Dawson poured out the chloride for Mrs. Skidmore. The latter drank it and then remarked that it was not the purgative. Miss Dawson said it was and hurriedly took a dose herself to prove it. They then found out their mistake and there was a hurried call for physicians. Both were near death for some time.

VOCATION DANGEROUS

Washington, April 19.—The most hazardous occupation known to man is that of life-saver in the service of the United States Bureau of Mines. It is popularly supposed that deep sea diving has the highest mortality rate among all the dangerous callings, but it is not to be compared with rescue work. In the first year of this service two out of the twenty-four experienced miners employed by the bureau in this desperate work have given their lives while attempting to save others. Seven others have fallen unconscious in the poisonous vapors of the mines and have been rescued only after the most heroic efforts of their comrades, and then resuscitated by the use of the modern oxygen apparatus in the skillful hands of the employees of the bureau.

Statisticians have a cold, calculating method of finding the comparative risk of the different industries and they usually figure on the number of men killed per 1,000 employed in a year's time. On this basis, the mortality rate among Bureau of Mines rescuers is eighty in 1,000 men—the highest death rate known to any occupation.

With such a fearful record before them, it might be thought that miners would hesitate about engaging in such a business, but this is not the case. Miners are as brave a body of men as can be found in any industry, and those who have been trained in rescue work by the Bureau of Mines and have sought employment as life-savers, are imbued with the spirit that they are engaged in a great work, which promises within a few years to materially reduce the disgraceful death rate in American mines.

That the life-savers have made a good beginning is shown in the records of the Bureau of Mines. In the period of one year, forty entombed miners have been rescued directly through the efforts of the bureau's men and perhaps as many more by individual miners. Best of all, the Federal rescuers have stopped the death toll among volunteer life-savers at disasters. In the past, it is said that a rescuer has given up his life for every man saved. Forty rescuers were killed at Hanna, Wyoming, two years ago, trying to save fourteen entombed men. At the Cherry mine fire in Illinois, twelve volunteers who went into the mine were brought up on the cage lifeless.

Since the Bureau of Mines took up this great work, but one volunteer rescuer in the last eight or ten disasters has lost his life and this was a hero in Colorado who loaned his helmet to a dying miner. The latter was saved, but the rescuer was found dead where he had given up his helmet.

In the accomplishment of this, as said before, the Bureau of Mines has had two martyrs—Joseph Evans, of Wilkesbarre, Pa., at the Pancoast colliery fire, Throop, Pa., April 7, 1911, and John Ferrell, Ellsworth, Pa., at a fire in Cherry Valley mine, Washington county, Pa., January 19, 1912.

Evans, who had been an experienced miner and mine foreman for years, had been trained by the Bureau of Mines and had charge of the mine rescue car that responded to the call for aid. He lost his life while pressing forward in the suffocating gases to locate entombed miners and bring them to a place of safety. All indications show that Evans died from over-exertion in his heroic efforts to save the lives of men, some of whom he had known personally, having worked as a miner in that section of the coal fields.

Ferrell was exploring a burning mine with the idea of determining whether it was safe for the miners to enter when he met death. He had gone in the mine with another Federal rescuer who had become affected by the gases and who had told Ferrell he intended to get to the fresh air as soon as possible. The second rescuer staggered fainting out of the mine, but Ferrell failed to follow as he had promised. Another bureau rescuer alarmed at the failure of Ferrell to appear went in search of him. Later he returned and fell unconscious. Still another rescuer endeavored to find Ferrell and barely succeeded in reaching the surface before he became unconscious. A second crew from the Bureau of Mines responded and Ferrell's body was recovered. From its location, it is assumed that Ferrell, in the darkness, having failed to note his comrade pass on the way out of the mine, went in search of him. Thus Ferrell gave up his life endeavoring to save another.

At the Banner mine, Littleton, Ala., where a serious explosion took place, J. J. Rutledge, mining engineer of the bureau, and Rescuer John Key, two physicians, two mine officials and two representatives of powder companies were caught without helmets in a body of gas and all became unconscious. Other rescuers from the bureau, assisted by a number of brave volunteers carried the unconscious men from the mine and revived them after hours of work with a special oxygen apparatus which the bureau carries for such purposes. The rescue work was of the most desperate sort and required the highest degree of courage, but it is of such stuff that the heroes of the Bureau of Mines and the average miner of the United States are made.

HIBBING C/NOY DEALERS FINED

Hibbing, Minn., April 19.—State Food Inspector A. D. Sibbeall was here yesterday and as a result two local candy dealers paid fines for keeping adulterated candy in stock. Coal tar was found in the samples taken from each place. Both claimed to be ignorant of the fact they were handling adulterated goods and had bought from wholesale dealers under the impression that they were getting the best.

During his stay in Hibbing Sibbeall visited all the soda fountains and confectionery stores and says the conditions in Hibbing in the main are good. He went from Hibbing to Chisholm and will be in Virginia the latter part of the week. He will return to this city later in the season for another inspection.

SAYS STOCK SOLD UNDER FALSE PROMISE

Marinette, Wis., April 19.—On the promise that he would be made bookkeeper of the company at a salary of $150 per month, according to his allegations, N. E. Burkland, a youth of Daggett, Mich., invested $2,500 in cash in the stock of the Hall-Miller company, which moved from Marinette to Wausau, last October, and gave his note for $2,500 more. Burkland now alleges the stock was sold to him under false pretenses. A considerable number of Marinette people bought stock in the company when it was claiming it would locate here, and a number of them are contemplating actions against the company, which came here originally from Chicago.

Company Here Short Time.
The Hall-Miller company located here and set up some machinery in the old M. R. L. company building in East Marinette. The company announced it would manufacture surgical instruments and other apparatus for physicians. After a brief career here the company moved to Wausau, claiming local people had not supported it sufficiently.

Paid $2,500 in Cash.
Burkland paid $2,500 in cash, and then gave his note for $2,500, making a deal to buy $5,000 worth of stock. The $2,500 note was secured by the 500 shares of stock he purchased. Burkland alleges he was engaged as bookkeeper for a short time and was then discharged.

Chicago Man Sees.
The Hall-Miller company either sold or made a pretended sale, of the note to one John Vandenberg of Chicago, who is the manager of a collection agency. Vandenberg brought suit on the note and on an alleged account against Burkland, also assigned to Vandenberg by the Hall-Miller company.

Burkland Wins First Suit.
This suit was tried in Chicago Monday.

BABY ALONE REMAINS OF ONE FAMILY

New York, April 19.—A three-year-old boy on board the Carpathia is the only survivor of the family of H. J. Allison, a wealthy merchant of this city. Allison, his wife and their daughter, went to their deaths on the Titanic. The wife and daughter refused to enter the lifeboats until Allison could accompany them, but they placed the boy with his nurse in one of the first boats, and he was saved. This fact was developed today by the White Star line officials for W. J. Allison, brother of the drowned man, who has been haunting the offices for the last forty-eight hours, hoping against hope that some others of the family were saved.

ALMOST A MIRACLE

One of the most startling changes ever seen in any man, according to W. B. Hoelsclaw, Clarendonia, Tex., was effected years ago in his brother. "He had such a dreadful cough," he writes "that all our family thought he was going into consumption, but he began to use Dr. King's New Discovery, and was completely cured by ten bottles. Now he is sound and well and weighs 215 pounds. For many years our family has used this wonderful remedy for coughs and colds with excellent results." It's quick, safe, reliable, guaranteed. Price 50 cents and 75c. Total bottle free at all Druggists.

TRIES TO SUICIDE BUT AIM IS POOR

Marinette, April 19.—The fact that his aim was poor, and that he had but one cartridge in the .32 caliber revolver he used, prevented Steven Benoit, aged 17 years, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Felix J. Benoit, 2307 Thomas street, from committing suicide Tuesday afternoon about 1 o'clock.

Joseph Harbick, the drayman, heard a shot fired, and went to the barn at the Benoit home. He smelled powder smoke, but could not find anyone. He then went to the loft of the barn and did not find anyone there either, but he found the revolver from which the shot had been fired.

Steven had gone to the loft of the barn and fired a shot at his head. He missed and then jumped through a hole in the floor to the first floor and ran into his home where he threw his arms about his mother and told her he had tried to commit suicide.

The authorities were communicated with and Deputy Sheriff Oscar Johnson took the youth into custody. He was examined for insanity Tuesday afternoon and was committed to the Northern hospital for the insane at Winnebago by Judge W. B. Quinlan. Steven has relatives who are insane. He had been acting strange for some time before he tried to end his life.

PREPARING PROGRAM

Members of a special committee are now engaged in preparing a program for the meeting of the upper peninsula dentists to be held in Marquette on June 7 and 8. It is expected that all of the members of the Delta County Dental Society, including the Escanaba and Gladstone will go to Marquette to attend the meeting. The Marquette Mining Journal of the coming general says:

A general program committee is at work to insure plenty of interesting and instructive material for papers, clinics and exhibits as well as entertainment for the meeting, to be held in Marquette June 7 and 8, of the dentists of the peninsula to form an upper peninsula dental society. The dentists are also invited to bring their ladies, and a party for their benefit is being planned for Friday of that week.

It has been suggested by the members of the Iron County society that the railroad fares of all the men be prorated, or added together and divided by the number present. There are at present three well organized dental societies in the upper peninsula—the Copper County Dental society, including members from Calumet, Houghton, Hancock, Lake Linden and Mohawk; the Iron County Dental society, with members from Ishpeming, Marquette, Negaunee, Iron Mountain, Crystal Falls, Gwinn, and the Delta County Dental society, including Escanaba and Gladstone. There will be in the neighborhood of one hundred dentists at the meet here in June.

MOHAMMED ALI HERE

J. Mohammed Ali, who is to give his lecture on "The Transformation" at the First Presbyterian church next Sunday evening, is well known in Chautauque circles throughout the United States and Canada. It is interesting to learn that Mr. Ali's father is Dr. Sadiq Ali, physician to His Highness, the Maharaja of Kapurthala State. This is the Indian Prince whose presence at the World's Fair in Chicago created so much comment.

Mr. Ali spent his boyhood and early years of his young manhood in India studying at the Mohammed Anglo-Oriental college, and traveling widely in his native land. Later he attended the Forman Christian college at Lahore, India.

In 1900 he came to America and has lectured in every state of the Union. He decided soon after arriving to remain in this country. His literary taste and his desire to import correct information concerning the country of his birth, have induced him to give a part of every year to lecture work.

As an orator, Mr. Ali is unusually gifted. He has always been a close and intelligent observer of conditions in India and speaks with the authority which only a native can assume. He has a power in vividly portraying his own experiences and observations. His personal appearance is pleasing. He has an excellent voice and a perfect command of the English language. Not the least of his oratorical gifts is his keen sense of humor, which manifests itself in all his public addresses.

While speaking Mr. Ali invariably wears his native dress, the formal dress of an East Indian gentleman.

Mr. Ali is well known here having given his lecture on "Indian Millions" two years ago at the First Presbyterian church.

The committee in charge are greatly pleased that they can give to the people of this city this edifying and helpful lecture through Mr. Ali next Sunday evening without charge. There will be a large audience, it is certain, to hear Mr. Ali again.

SURVIVORS TELL STORY

New York, April 19.—Colonel Archibald Grace, U. S. A., the last man saved from the Titanic, went down with the vessel, but was picked up. He praised in the highest terms the behavior of both the passengers and crew and paid a high tribute to the heroism of the women passengers.

"Mrs. Isador Straus," he said "went to her death because she would not desert her husband. Although he pleaded with her to take her place in the boat, she steadfastly refused, and when the ship settled at the head the couple were engulfed by the waves."

Colonel Grace told how he was driven to the topmost deck when the ship settled and was the sole survivor after the waves had swept her, just before her final plunge.

"I jumped with the waves," said he, "just as I often have jumped with the breakers at the sea shore. By good fortune I managed to grab the brass railing on the deck above, and I hung on by might and main. When the ship plunged down, I was forced to let go, and I was swirled around and around for what seemed to be an interminable time. Eventually I came to the surface, to find the sea a mass of tangled wreckage.

"Luckily, I was uninjured, and casting about, managed to seize a wooden grating floating near by. When I had recovered my breath, I discovered a large canvas and cork life craft, which had floated up. A man whose name I did not learn was struggling for it from some wreckage from which he had swam. I cast off and helped him to get onto the raft, and we then began the work of rescuing those who had jumped into the sea and were foundering in the waters.

"When dawn broke, there were thirty of us on the raft, standing knee deep in the ice waters and afraid to move lest the crazy craft be overturned. Several unfortunately, benumbed and half-dead, besought us to save them, and one or two made an effort to reach us, but we had to warn them away. Had we made any effort to save them, we might all have perished."

The hours that elapsed before we were picked up by the Carpathia were the longest and most terrible that I ever spent. Practically without sensation of feeling, because of the icy waters, we were almost dropping from fatigue. We were a trifle turned around to look to see whether we were seen by some passing craft, and when some one who was a craft astern passed the word that something that looked like a steamer was coming up one of the men became hysterical under the strain. The rest of us, too, were nearing the breaking point.

Colonel Grace denied with emphasis that any men were fired upon, and declared that only once was a revolver discharged. "This was for the purpose," he said, "of intimidating some steerage passengers who had tumbled into a boat before it was prepared for launching. This shot was fired in the air, and when the foreigners were told that the next would be directed at them they promptly returned to the deck. There was no confusion and no panic."

Contrary to the general expectation, there was no jarring impact when the vessel struck, according to the army officer. He was in his berth when the vessel crashed into the submerged part of the iceberg and was aroused by the shock. He looked at his watch, he said, and found it was almost midnight. The ship sank with him at 2:22 a. m., for his watch stopped at that hour.

"Before I retired," said Colonel Grace, "I had a long chat with Charles H. Hays, president of the Grand Trunk railroad. One of the last things Mr. Hays said was this:

"The White Star, the Cunard and the Hamburg-American lines are devoting their attention, and ingenuity in vying with each other to attain the supremacy in luxurious ships and in making sea records. The time will come soon when this will be checked by some appalling disaster."

"Poor fellow, a few hours later he was dead.

"The conduct of Colonel John Jacob Astor was deserving of the highest praise," Colonel Grace went on. "The wealthy New Yorker devoted all his energy to saving his wife, who was in delicate health. Colonel Astor helped us in all our efforts to help her into the boat. I lifted her into the boat, and as she took her place Colonel Astor requested the permission of the second officer to go with her for her own protection.

"No, sir," said the officer, "not a man shall go on a boat until the women are all off."

"Colonel Astor then inquired the number of the boat which was being lowered away, and turned to the work of clearing the other boats and in reassuring the frightened and nervous women.

By this time the ship began to list frightfully to port. This became so dangerous that the second officer ordered everyone to rush to starboards. This we did, and we found the crew trying to get a boat off in that quarter. Here I saw the last of John B. Thayer and George B. Vignener, of Philadelphia."

Colonel Grace said that despite the warning of icebergs, no slowing down was ordered by the commander of the Titanic.

PART AT DEATH'S DOOR ON ACCOUNT OF BABIES

New York, April 19.—Mrs. Edgar J. Meyer, of New York, one of the surviving passengers of the Titanic, said tonight:

"It was a clear and starlit night. When the ship struck, we were in our cabin. My husband went out on the deck to see what was the trouble. He came down and said we had hit an iceberg, but it did not amount to much. I said I was nervous. We went on deck for a walk. More people said the accident was of no importance. It would only delay our arrival.

"I was afraid and made my husband promise that if there was trouble he would not make me leave him. We walked around the deck while an officer came up and cried, 'All women into the lifeboats.' My husband and I discussed it, and the officer said, 'You must obey orders.'

"We went down into the cabin and decided, on account of our babies, to part. He helped me to put on warm things. I got into a boat, but there were no sailors aboard. We called to the ship that there were no men in the boat. They sent a sailor down. An English girl and I rowed for four hours and a half. Then we were picked up at 6 o'clock in the morning.

"We were well away from the steamer when it went down, but we heard the screams of the people left on the boat. There were about seventy widows on the Carpathia, and all were wonderfully brave. The captain of the Carpathia and the passengers did all they could for us. Mrs. Harris says my husband and Mr. Harris lowered the last boatload of persons."

GAME WARDENS SAY PARTRIDGES ARE PLENTIFUL

Trips through the woods in this district dispel the fear that the heavy winter cut down the supply of ruffed grouse. Game wardens reported finding several coveys frozen during the cold period, but of last season's large broods there seems to be numerous survivors. Drummers are heard in almost every wayside thicket.

The snow clings in the swamps and on northern exposures. Streams are extraordinarily high, partly because of the heavy snows and partly because the lakes are still frozen, damming up the outlets to some extent. Trout fishing will be uncertain at the opening of the season unless the next 12 days are unusually dry and warm.—Marquette Chronicle.

PRESIDENT TAFT IS NOT EMPLOYING COMPULSION.

President Taft's letter to Representative Gardner of Massachusetts, which has been made public, is an unanswerable demonstration of the unfairness and falsity of the charge in the interest of the Roosevelt candidacy that the administration is relying to win by reason of the power of federal patronage.

The particular instance of a federal officeholder who is for Roosevelt, but is retained in office, conveys its convincing moral.

The President has removed no one on account of campaign views, and does not intend to begin to do so now. He says—and his declaration is absolutely true, as every observer knows—that—

"There has never been a time with which I am familiar in the history of politics in this country when the political support of the federal office holders, such as it is, has been so divided and at no time has the federal patronage exercised less influence in the national convention than it will in the one to be held at Chicago.

Campaign misstatements of the President's position have been so viciously unfair that there arose indignation in the breasts of fair-minded men.

WAGE INCREASE FOR CALUMET EMPLOYEES.

Calumet, Mich., April 19.—The Calumet & Hecla Mining company officially announced today an increase of 10 per cent in wages for practically all employees of the company and its subsidiaries, as well as forces in stamp mill plants, smelters and explorations. The raise, effective May 1, will affect more than 8000 men. The advance in the price of metal to 16 cents per pound is responsible for the wage increase.

DIFFERENTIAL REMAINS SAME

Within the next ten days all of the large ore shippers who have not yet contracted will do their season chartering.

It became known the other day that chartering has been done between Escanaba and South Chicago at 20 cents net.

Vesselmen charge ore shippers with being the cause of the 40-cent rate, while the shippers, on the other hand, blame the vesselmen.

Those who have gone to ore buyers with rate offers are vessel owners who have not been able to obtain cargoes from the shippers.

Large shipping interests that have not done their season contracting intend to come into the market next week.

BEAUFORD PROPERTY MAY BE REOPENED

John Thoney, principal owner of the Beauford mine, located west of Michigan, is securing the signatures of others interested in the property to an option that is to be granted to Menominee range mining men.

The Beauford mine contains a large body of ore, averaging from 49 to 52 per cent in metallic iron.

The explanatory work will be started at an early hour. The Beauford Mining company owns a considerable acreage near the mine that has not been thoroughly explored.

Mr. Thoney called on a number of his old friends in Ishpeming, with whom he talked over early days in Marquette county.

Those who have gone to ore buyers with rate offers are vessel owners who have not been able to obtain cargoes from the shippers.

SCENE WILL BE IN NEW MEXICO

Chicago, April 19.—Jack Johnson and Jim Flynn will fight forty-five rounds for the world's heavyweight championship at Las Vegas, N. M., on the afternoon of July 4, according to announcement made last night by Jack Curley, promoter of the contest.

"I received a bonus for bringing the fight to Las Vegas," said Curley, "but it wasn't big enough to talk about. The bonus merely will be used to defray the cost of constructing the arena."

Work of constructing the arena, Curley said, would begin May 1. Both Flynn and Johnson have agreed to be on the scene of the contest a month before the fight.

McLAUGHLIN DEMANDS A TEST VOTE

Washington, April 19.—A presidential primary to wipe out uncertainty, and avoid political disaster in Michigan, is demanded by Congressman James C. McLaughlin. He has sent an identical telegram to Gerrit J. Dieken, the Taft manager, and to Governor Osborn, pledging that the party start over fresh, wipe out the Bay City nightmare, and through a presidential primary, give clear and honest expression to its preference.

Congressman McLaughlin's plan is by amicable agreement to treat the contesting delegates at large as though they had never been elected, and by state wide vote to choose others in their place.

Mr. McLaughlin declares that the uncontested delegation from Muskegon, his home, was shut out of the convention by the Taft people.

For the "nomination of President Taft means almost certain Republican defeat next November. This is the lesson of the Illinois and Pennsylvania primaries of New York's failure to fight instruct her delegates, and of the picturesque fight in Michigan.

The wonder is that with rocks ahead of the party under Mr. Taft's leadership the responsible politicians continue to stick to him. But they do stick, and the only sign of sacrificing Taft for party successes originated with Boss Barnes of New York and his personally conducted convention.

But there is little indication now that a dark horse is to be seriously considered. Hughes is not a candidate. Rumor has it that because of recent criticism of the judiciary, he would not accept the Republican nomination if it were handed him on a silver platter.

Despite the result in Pennsylvania and Illinois, it is still probable that the old guard will be able to accomplish the nomination of Mr. Taft. Quite likely it will have a majority of "Machine-made hand-picked" delegates as Senator Dixon calls them.

All of which is immensely pleasing to the democrats.

IMPACT WITH ICEBERG EQUAL TO CONCENTRATED FIRE OF THREE MONSIEUR BATTLESHIPS

Washington, April 19.—A graphic comparison of the probable impact of the Titanic against the iceberg that destroyed her with the projectile force of the guns on a modern battleship was made today by Captain Charles A. McAllister, engineer in chief of the revenue cutter survey.

"The impact from the Titanic against the iceberg was probably equivalent to the simultaneous fire of thirty 12-inch projectiles, or the concentrated fire of three such dreadnoughts as the Florida," said Captain McAllister.

BODIES OF DEAD WILL NOT BE RECOVERED

Baltimore, Md., April 19.—"The bodies of the victims of the Titanic are at the bottom of the deep, never to leave it," declared Professor Robert W. Wood of the chair of experimental physics of John Hopkins University today.

"It is altogether improbable that any of the corpses will ever return to the surface, as is the case with bodies thrown in shallow water," Dr. Wood said. "At the depth of two miles, the pressure of the water is something like six thousand pounds to the square inch, which is far too great to be overcome by the buoyancy ordinary given drowned bodies by the gases generated in time.

"That the bodies sank to the bottom of the sea, there is no question," he continued. "The Titanic's victims who were not carried down with the boat followed until the very bottom of the sea was reached. There was no such thing as their stopping in the downward course a half mile, a mile or at any other point.

"Great changes have necessarily been wrought in the vessel itself by the enormous pressure to which it has been subjected. No effect was produced on any portion, or compartment, or room, to whose inside as well as outside walls the waters had access. In some instances the pressure from one side neutralized that from the other. But wherever there was an airtight or watertight compartment, the six thousand pounds to a square inch pressure of water had crumpled those walls of the vessel as if they were tissue paper."

ISMAI DECLARES HE WELCOMES INQUIRY

New York, April 19.—Bruce Ismay, chairman of the International Merchant Marine, tonight gave out the following prepared statement.

"In the presence and under the shadow of a catastrophe so overwhelming, my feelings are too deep for expression in words, and I can only say that the White Star line officers and employes will do everything humanly possible to alleviate the suffering and sorrow of the relatives and friends of those who perished.

"The Titanic was the last word in ship-building. Every regulation prescribed by the British board of trade had been strictly complied with. The master, officers and crew were the most experienced and skillful in the British service.

"I am informed that a committee of the United States senate has been appointed to investigate the circumstances of the accident. I heartily welcome the most exhaustive and complete investigation that may be made."

Mr. Ismay gave out the following statement: "The ship is collapsible and will not hold its shape."

THE QUEST OF GENTLE HAZARD

Being the Adventures in Love and Chivalry of Lord Jocelyn

By H. M. EGBERT

(Copyright, by W. G. Chapman.)

The Diamond Tiara

Since the miscarriage of his matrimonial plans Lord Jocelyn had rather lost touch with his former associates. Self-obsession is frequently misunderstood, and he found the role of misadventurer to be both unsatisfactory and incongruous. His father had received the news with considerable disgust and urged him in frequent communications to look around for a wealthy bride. But Jocelyn withdrew from social life and spent the best part of his leisure at home in his apartment on Madison avenue, where he found the company of his valet Talbot sufficient for his requirements.

"Talbot," he said, "I am going to devote myself henceforward to the pursuit of adventure. I am convinced that New York city affords opportunities such as are uncommon in our staid London."

"Which you're right, sir," answered Talbot. "Why, sir, the women here has what I'd call a 'go' about 'em that—"

"I was not referring to the female element of the population, Talbot," replied Lord Jocelyn severely.

Yet it is undeniable that the premature termination of his engagement to Miss Squires had not rendered him permanently immune against feminine attractions. Otherwise, why should he have lingered in the vicinity of the girl in sables?

They were real sables, too, and Jocelyn was a connoisseur of furs. Nothing, he was wont to say, adds to his pleasure as to a girl that handles furs well. But in this case there was the element of curiosity that came to complete the spell. For why had this richly clad girl entered a pawn shop at the lower end of Sixth avenue at six o'clock in the evening and come out again without the sables? Was it a sudden need for money to pay her dressmaker?

Keeping a discreet distance, so that he might not be under suspicion of an impudently persistent pursuit, he followed her to the north side of Washington square. She passed the entrance to a large, old-fashioned apartment house, one of those that had been constructed before the days of elevators, and opening the door, disappeared within. As she passed out of sight Jocelyn heard something chink upon the sidewalk. He hurried forward, stooped, and picked up a magnificent diamond tiara.

His first impulse was to hasten into the building and inform the girl of her loss. His second was to remain outside until she missed the ornament and came out in search of it. But, seeing several men upon the opposite corner of the square, looking to him suspiciously like detectives in plain clothes, pointing in his direction and evidently observing him, he decided to yield to the first impulse, and he hurried through a dark passage to a number of flights, reaching the top story in time to hear a door close softly. Which door had he entered? He was sure it was the door upon the left. He looked and saw that it had not closed; the lock protruded against the framework. He knocked and, receiving no answer, entered.

Lord Jocelyn found himself in a large, sparsely furnished room, evidently both bedroom and sitting room, although the exceedingly dirty condition of the windows, which were half covered with a tattered shade, apparently indicated a condition of poverty wholly at variance with the attire which the unknown had worn. From this room a door led apparently into the second of the suite, but it was locked. Jocelyn retreated to the door by which he had entered, with the object of making further search for the owner of the tiara. But this was locked, too. In some way it had automatically fastened itself; he was a prisoner.

The position in which he now found himself was certainly an awkward one. Standing irresolutely in the center of the room, holding the tiara, he felt the guilty consciousness of burglary imbue itself into his brain. If the girl entered and found him there—what would she do, what should she do?

His predicament in the room was a very awkward one. He felt the guilty consciousness of burglary imbue itself into his brain. If the girl entered and found him there—what would she do, what should she do?

patently, "I am afraid that my coming here has had very little effect upon your brother's safety, for the house is watched and may be raided at any moment. I saw the detectives across the street. It is certain that he cannot escape."

"Will you please go?" she cried again, pointing toward the door. "Don't you see that you aren't wanted here? If you are a gentleman you'll leave us."

The sight of distress, especially when the distressed one was of the fairer sex, always aroused intense sympathy in Lord Jocelyn's breast, and the girl was both distressed and fair. Instead of going, as he had been ordered, he stepped forward toward her.

"No, I will not go," he said impulsively. "I believe that your brother's act was but a thoughtless one, due to his youth and not done with criminal intent. Why should we not save him yet?"

Both listened gloomily, but neither seemed unkindly by his words.

"I will give myself up as the man they are seeking," said Jocelyn. "Let them arrest me. I will neither affirm nor deny their charges. And by the time that my own innocence has been established your brother will be far away from the scene. I only ask," continued Jocelyn earnestly, "that he will give up his life, and that he will build up his character again, taking warning by the remembrance of his past."

The young lady stepped up to Jocelyn impulsively and held out her hands.

"Your offer does you great honor," she answered earnestly. "But I cannot accept this sacrifice. No, if it is hissed in his ear. "Many thanks for nothing. Leave me to myself. I don't want your sacrifice, I tell you. I want to suffer the penalty for my crime. What the dickens has it got to do with you, and why should you come here to torment me?"

Lord Jocelyn turned back toward the inner door. But before he could reach it there came a thundering rapping upon the door without.

"Open there," cried voices without. "In the name of the law, open, or—"

A violent crash succeeded. The door cracked open, and the paragon split from top to bottom under the strain of several muscular shoulders. Lord Jocelyn darted forward.

"Stop!" he cried. "I am the man whom you are looking for, I will open the door."

"Open, then," they cried. "And be quick about it."

Jocelyn stepped forward and turned the handle. There came a rush, the frame of the door fell backward of its hinges under the impetus of two men hurled themselves upon him, holding his arms, while a third went briskly through his clothing.

"Hello! There's two of 'em!" exclaimed a fourth man, pouncing on Barrett as he endeavored to make a belated retreat in the direction that his sister had taken. "And armed, he continued, whisking the revolver out of his pocket. "Here's our man, Jenks."

"I'm not so sure," Jenks answered, gripping Jocelyn more tightly. "See here! And he held up the paste tiara.

"Which of 'em is it?" demanded the chief detective, scrutinizing the faces of the two captives. "Best take 'em both—what, Bristow?"

through the interior corridor, the inner door opened, and a man attired in police sergeant's uniform appeared, and, at his side, defiant, stood the girl of the sables. Barrett looked toward her and smiled.

"I guess the game's up now," he said.

"I guess it is," she responded indifferently.

"I hope you're satisfied with what you've done by butting in," said Barrett, addressing Jocelyn with a scowl.

"Where's Walt Barrett?" asked Sergeant Evans, looking upon the gathering in astonishment.

"Ain't this him?" asked Bristow, indicating the captive who had just made his confession of guilt.

"Not by a jugful," answered Evans, and the girl laughed shrilly. "And that ain't neither," he added, indicating Jocelyn. "Barrett's about that build, but he's got sandy hair."

"Then who the devil are you?" shouted Bristow to Lord Jocelyn and Barrett, eyeing each darkly.

"I'll tell you," said the girl. "Walt Barrett's over the Canadian border now and you won't land him in a hurry. As for the gentleman you thought was Barrett, he's been taking Walt Barrett's place the last couple of days."

"You see," she continued, smiling confidently at the detectives, "Walt Barrett and I were married the week before he pulled off that trick on the Bank of New Holland. Twenty-five thousand he got out of it, and I hid him here while we were negotiating with the bank for immunity. But the president was foxy. He pretended to be willing to accept fifty per cent, and all the while you gentlemen were keeping watch on this apartment. You suspected Barrett was in hiding here,

A LEAF OUT OF LIFE

A business man in Washington recently enjoyed a visit from an old college friend, who passed many hours in the office reading and writing letters. The visitor's wants were courteously attended to by a bright young clerk, whose obliging manners and evident affection for his employer attracted the guest's notice. After a few days the visitor asked his friend about the young man.

"I've been waiting for you to notice Jack," was the answer to the inquiry. "He's my 'Man Friday,' and there never was a better one. I want you to know how I was lucky enough to find him."

"Two years ago I was over in West Virginia, fishing. I induced an old man and his wife, who live near the trout stream, to take me in for a week. At first they hesitated; but when I happened to say something about coming all the way from Washington for a few days of quiet and rest, they gave me hearty welcome."

"You see," said the old man, "our son's in Washington, and it makes him seem kind o' nearer home to have somebody from the same place here with us."

"Is he in the government service?" I asked, with perturbed interest.

"Well, we don't rightly know just what he is working at. He don't write quite as often as we'd like, but I s'pose he's pretty busy."

"Here the old wife broke in. 'But we know he's doing well, and more'n likely he's working for the government, because he knows the president real well.'

"He does?" I asked, genuinely interested.

"Yes, just look at that," answered my hostess, going to the shelf above the rude fireplace and taking down a picture postal card which showed a frank-faced youth in the act of shaking hands with the smiling chief executive.

"O!" I said, as I recognized one of those fake photographs which anyone can have taken on Pennsylvania avenue.

"Our Jack was always a great hand to get acquainted easy, but mother and me was some surprised when we got this picture of Jack and the president. I suppose the president likes to know some of the rising young fellows round in the government, don't he?"

"Very likely," I answered, weakly, thinking that perhaps I ought to enlighten the dear old innocents. But I couldn't, and during all of my stay there the kindly old couple talked to me about their boy. Their only trouble seemed to be that he didn't write as often as he ought. They hadn't heard from him since he had sent the postal card, two months before.

"When I left they begged me to look him up, but as they hadn't his address it was a pretty hopeless task. After I had consulted the government registry and found he was not on the payroll I gave it up."

"Well, one night about six weeks later, as I was coming through Franklin square, I saw a young fellow lying on a park bench. Walt got away from me as he was drunk, but I soon saw that he was sick, and I spoke to him."

"Hungry," he murmured, in answer to my question. Well, afterward, when he had had something to eat and a little color had come back into his face, it began to come to me that I had seen him before. There was something familiar in his face.

"Little by little I got his story. He had come to Washington hoping to get a government berth, had failed in the examination, and had lived, or rather starved, on such odd jobs as he could get."

"Why didn't you write home for help?" I asked.

"Oh, the old people have hardly enough for themselves, and, besides, they're terribly proud to think I'm down here with the president." He laughed feebly.

"Jack Stabler!" I exclaimed.

"That's my name," he answered. "How did you know?"

"I told him part of the story, and the next day he went to work in my office. I don't know how I should get along without him now."

"That's just like you," said the visitor heartily, grasping his old college friend's hand. "No wonder the boy loves you."

"The joke of it is," said his friend, "that Jack went to the White House with me a little while ago and made that picture-postal card true by shaking hands with the president."—Youth's Companion.

THE QUIET HOUR

Only Success That Is Clean in the Sight of God

TRUTH, UPRIGHTNESS, LOVE

DYING, Horace Greeley said: "Fame is a vapor, popularity an accident, riches take wings; those who cheer today will curse tomorrow; only one thing endures and that is character." Life's one great task is the making of character, the making of fine manhood. Our world is a college. We all go through it, but only some get much out of the course of instruction. In this college events are the teachers, and character is the diploma which God gives man when he has earned it. There are many forces that help to increase happiness in this world, such as friends and position, and money; but one thing is absolutely indispensable to success, and that is character.

Success, in these days, is a word to conjure with. It is echoed on all sides as the one object of existence, and men are measured by its standards. We fall over each other in our hurry to pay homage to the man who has won success in the world's judgment. But are we not under a delusion as to what we really admire?

—Hera, Worship Tells Much.

If I knew what you admire and who is your hero, I would know what sort of a man you are. This mountain of flesh and bone which has been trained as an ox for the prize ring? Of all the rapid and vacant countenances, nothing can equal that fraternity. Or perhaps you admire this man who has created an extensive business and amassed a fortune, or attained high social position. But does it not make a difference how these things were attained? Or perhaps your hero may be a man who has reached high political rank, the presidency of the United States. But does it not make a difference whether he was squeezed in by party politics, or whether he has risen by his own intrinsic worth, and is the choice of the people?

Success lies not so much in achieving what you aim at, as in aiming at what you ought to achieve. Your one dread should be to pitch the scale of life so low that you can attain perfect success therein.

There is a success which is failure. What effect has success had upon this or that man? Has it made him a better man, nobler and kinder; or has it made him hard and unfeeling and arrogant? If so, then his success has been a failure. I could not congratulate you if you had succeeded in making a fire by burning up a priceless painting, neither can I admire a man who has destroyed his character and soul in making a fortune or attaining a position. That man has made a most terrible failure of his life. Success in business, literature, society, politics, is often purchased by a subtle and sinister compromise with Satan. He takes us up on a high mountain, and shows us all the glitter of the world, and says: "All these will I give thee if thou wilt fall down and worship me."

Failure Sometimes Misjudged.

There is failure which is success. May we learn this lesson of human life, and it is one of its important lessons, that lives which aim at low ends are often redeemed by failure to attain them. Many men owe their souls' salvation to their failures. Misadventure has shattered their plans, and they have been saved from careers which would have led to their ruin. Many a man whom the world counts a failure has attained good success. He may not have much evidence of it in the bank, but he bears about with him the marks of success, in his body in clean living, in a cultured mind, and in an upright soul.

One of the most successful lives ever lived was that of St. Paul, and yet at the end of his life what did he have to show for it? Lying in a dungeon in Rome it does not take him long to count up his assets. He says, "I bear in my body the marks of the Lord Jesus." He had lived a wonderful life, and that was all he had to show.

I hope you are making a success of your life. I do not want to know what your bank account is, nor what position you hold. But I want to know what marks are being stamped upon your body and soul. Are they the marks of indulgence, of uncontrolled temper, of some besetting sin, of envy and avarice, and an evil mind? Or is your life growing sweeter and stronger as you grow older? Are you growing in truth and uprightness and in love? If so, then you are attaining that success which leaves no regrets, which is clean in the sight of God and man, and which God promises to those who love him.

Man would fain find some personal friend who would lead him unto great personal worth. To fulfill that deepest need, Jesus Christ comes to us and says: "Learn of Me." He comes to hasten man's step along the pathway that leads from littleness to greatness, and greatness lies not in titles, but in the qualities of mind and soul raised to the highest power. Jesus is the Divine Husbandman, and good man are the richest fruit which our earth can yield.

"Open, then," they cried.

to be so, let my brother suffer for what he has done. After all it is not right that he should evade the justice of the law."

"Yes, let me pay the penalty," rejoined Barrett in listless apathy.

Lord Jocelyn looked from the one to the other in bewilderment. "But just now you were moving heaven and earth to effect his escape," he cried.

The young woman wrung her hands in desperation. "Oh, will you go?" she cried. "Never mind my inconsistencies. Go, before it is too late!"

Lord Jocelyn turned toward the door. There seemed to be no alternative but to comply. He could not force this sacrifice on them in despite of that determination. But even as he laid his fingers on the handle of the door he heard the heavy tread of footsteps ascending the stairway. They reached the top stair and halted, and others succeeded them. Then all could hear voices of men, pitched in low tones, without.

The girl hesitated for an instant; then, without a word, she darted toward the door that led into the interior room. She flung it wide and flew through, beyond another door, and into a passage terminating in a stairway. Following, hastily, Jocelyn heard the girl hurrying down, and caught sight of her, three flights below, hurrying in hot haste toward the back egress. Some impulse that he made no effort to analyze turned his footsteps back into the room which he had vacated. Barrett stood there alone in gloomy meditation. Jocelyn went up to him and held out his hand.

"I do not know what part I have unwittingly played in this tragedy," he said. "But I repeat my former offer to you. Follow your sister. Though the house is watched, I will voluntarily give myself up in place of you. We are about the same build," he added, measuring himself beside Barrett, "and you can thus go free. And, once free, remember what I have urged upon you."

The young man stepped forward and seized Lord Jocelyn by the arm.

"Will you go, you meddler?" he

"Orders was to take one man," Bristow replied, scratching his head and looking at either captive in perplexity. "Which of you's Walt Barrett?" he continued.

"I'm not," said Barrett. "You'd best let me go."

"What're you doing here, then?"

"I'll answer when my counsel advises me."

"Ah, take him away, Jenks. And now for the other. What's your name? Have we your pedigree?"

"And where did you get this?" added the chief detective, dangling the tiara in front of Jocelyn's face.

"Let me speak," said Barrett. "I'll tell the truth. I don't know who this fellow is from Adam, but I'm the man you want. I've been hiding here for the past week and I'm mighty glad you've got me at last, for it's better to be behind the bars doing my time honest than to be in hiding. My God, captain, if you knew what I've suffered! I daren't go into the streets until after it was dark, and then I'd slippering round corners and cringing past each cop as though I was a hunted animal. I'm mighty glad you've pulled me, and that's the truth. My conscience—"

"Aw, tell that to the judge! I guess you're Walt Barrett, right enough. But who's your pal? That's what we want to know. And where did you get these sables?" he continued, again flashing the diamonds in Jocelyn's face.

"I found that tiara in the street," answered Lord Jocelyn nonchalantly. "And since this gentleman has confessed that he is the man you want perhaps you will allow me to withdraw."

"What shall we do?" asked Jenks.

"Phone for the van and take 'em both along to headquarters," Bristow replied.

"Best wait for Sergeant Evans," said the third of the party. "He'll be round by the back entrance in half a shake."

The "shake" could not have included more than an appreciable fraction of a minute, for almost immediately a tramping sound reverberated but you weren't sure, and the plan was to wait till he'd handed his share over to the president and then to pull him in.

"This gentleman here, who called himself Barrett, is an old admirer of mine, and when he saw I was in trouble he came forward, like the gentleman he is, and volunteered to take Walt Barrett's place. Walt got away two nights ago over the roofs while you were watching this gentleman behind this broken shade and flattering yourselves that you still had Walt Barrett under surveillance."

"You were pretty sure you had him watched, but you weren't quite sure, and Walt was still being watched for on the off chance that he had got away. It was necessary to convince you that this was Barrett, so that you should call off the search long enough to enable my husband to get into Canada. He's there now, for I got a message over the phone ten minutes ago, and you're not likely to lay hands on him."

"This afternoon I went out to raise some money on my furs to help my husband make his getaway in good order. On the way back I saw this other gentleman following me and, like a fool, I took him for a 'bull.' I thought it would be a good chance to bring him up here and have my friend arrested, so that you could be dead sure you had Barrett in your hands. I dropped that phony tiara to bring him in—I had to take chances he wouldn't pluck it and bolt—and the trick succeeded. But I guess we rather overplayed our part, for, instead of arresting this gentleman, he tried to pretend that he was Barrett as well. Three Barretts was more than I could stand for, so I thought it was time to beat it, and unfortunately, I was just a minute too late."

When Lord Jocelyn returned to his apartments later in the evening his first words were: "Fetch me a whisky and soda, Talbot—a stiff one."

"Gad," he muttered to himself, as he lighted a cigarette. "I'm a real tough. I think—"

How Bells Are Tuned

There are few who know how a bell receives its joyful or solemn tones. All bells after they are cast and finished must go through a process of tuning, the same as any other musical instrument, before they respond with a clear tone. Every bell sounds five notes, which must blend together in order to produce perfect harmony. The tuning of a bell is done by means of shaving thin bits from various parts of the metal. It is as easy for an expert bell tuner to put a bell in tune as it is for a piano tuner to adjust his instrument to perfect chords. At first thought it would seem that a bell would be ruined should the tuner shave off too much at the last tuning, or the fifth sound, but such is not the case. He would, however, be obliged to begin over, starting again with the first tone, and shaving the bell till it gave forth its harmonious sound at the fifth tone.—Scientific American.
