A PANAMA MONTE CARLO.

A concern which boasts an English earl as chairman of its executive board has sent out an alluring prospectus of a gambling palace to be erected in Panama. It is declared that the little republic has given assurance of absolute noninterference for a period of twenty-five years. The establishment is to be more magnificent than that of Monaco, and will pay larger dividends to its stockholders. Panama is to be boomed as a winter resort. But even if no one comes to Panama to sojourn all passengers on boats using the canal will have twenty-four hours at their disposal, and most of this time they will, it is predicted, spend at the casino. The prospectus may or may not be dealing in facts. It is to be hoped that it is merely the ruddy dream of a seafaring promoter. It would be altogether disagreeable for the United States to have to endure this disreputable adjunct to its great work. But if the sovereign republic of Panama decides to grant the concession it is difficult to see how the United States is going to prevent it. That is one drawback of an independent protegee for which a big nation stands sponsor but whose morals it cannot definitely regulate. A comedian who appeared in an unsuccessful London production of an American musical comedy, is wrot at the London critics because they asked him why he didn't stick to his native American dialect. The fact that he was born in London and had played there many years, appeared to be overlooked by the fault-finders. But, then, one can't convince a critic against his will. A French military balloon carrying eight passengers remained in flight thirty-five hours and twenty minutes. According to the intrepid Lieut. Porte who intends to fly the Atlantic, forty minutes more would be all he requires for his own venture. He has discovered and needs it.

Serious doubts are expressed by scientists whether it will ever be possible to cross the ocean in an aeroplane. However, laymen remember that a few short years ago serious doubt was expressed by scientists whether it would ever be possible to fly across a ten-acre lot.

An Ohio man accused of shooting and killing his wife, has been sentenced for carrying concealed weapons. Presumably, if he had not been thoughtless enough to put his revolver in a pocket the slight offense of murdering the lady would have been graciously overlooked.

A physician ordered the colonel to give his throat four months complete rest. "But in four months the campaign will be over!" cried the colonel. And the doctor, a Republican, refused to retract.

A Philadelphia lady arises to protest against the movie kisses, which she thinks should be confined to a yard of film, at most. Oh, very well. A lot can be done, even in a yard.

Just to show that it takes all kinds of men to make a world, the case may be mentioned of the New York man who beat his wife because she could not learn to tango.

A Leavenworth convict used a fifty-line poem as a petition to the president for pardon. Here's a case in which the apology is worse than the offense.

Now a physician says meat and coffee cause cancer, from which one gathers that if a person never ate anything he would not die of cancer.

The opinion seem to be that since Villa has employed an attorney, the beginning of the end of his acceptance is in sight.

After a while the mediators might move on to Detroit and try to settle Ty Cobb.

It seem it was a very average June after all. Oh! well, let bygones be bygones.

WILSON'S WORK HELPING TRADE SAYS GOV. BURKE

Jeanue, Wis., June 3.—Ex-Governor John Burke, North Dakota, treasurer of the United States, the principal speaker at the Dodge county home-coming does not believe that business conditions will have any effect on the fall elections. His reason are that the completion of President Wilson's legislative program will act to clear up business conditions. "I think the president struck the keynote the other day when he said business conditions had been disturbed for ten or twelve years," Mr. Burke said. "In that time we have had one panic—that of 1907. The legislation now pending has been coming and has been expected for many years and as soon as it is passed it will settle business conditions. Laws Will Help Business. The trust legislation will be accepted by business men as was the tariff and the currency laws when they were passed. Bankers, while the currency bill was pending, opposed it very strongly, but as soon as it was enacted they made arrangements to comply with its provisions, and the effect was to relieve business conditions. The same will be true of the trust legislation, and it will have a very good effect. "Besides getting this legislation out of the way, the trust outlook is helping to give a firmer tone throughout the country. There is no question that the president's trust bill will pass. No one can tell how long the debate will last, but the bill will be enacted without question." Ex-Gov. Burke will not touch politics in his homecoming speech. Shake Off Your Rheumatism. Although business continued small in volume the tone displayed was strong with small advances recorded. It would look like the market had discounted everything unfavorable and with the rate decision out of the way there will be a revival of business and higher prices.

DAILY LETTER

The betterment produced in the stock market recently has seemingly not made a deep impression, but the generosity of traders or investors, and while perhaps a further upturn may be prompted as a consequence of technical conditions, still for our part we prefer to await something tangible before advising a firm stand on the buying side of the market.

MARINE

The Port List for Escanaba Arrivals: Mather. Cleared: Princeton, Manalco, Australia, Polynasia and Walsh. Weather for the Upper Lakes Moderate variable winds, mostly south; generally fair Saturday. LAKE ORE TRAFFIC IS NOW ON BASIS OF 3 YEARS AGO Cleveland, O., July 3.—Iron ore shipments to July 1 were approximately 60 per cent of the shipments in the same period of 1913. Shipments to July 1 amounted to 9,634,116 tons as compared with 16,125,942 tons. The figures indicate a movement for the season of about 23,000,000 tons. The June traffic was approximately 60 per cent of that in June, 1913 and totaled 5,562,367 tons, as compared with 7,974,444 tons. By comparison only can anything like a true meaning of the figures be obtained. There is no comparison between the shipments of 1914 and those of 1913 or 1912. In 1911 the season's ore movement amounted to 23,137,056 tons and the season opened more like the present season than any other of recent years. The amount carried in 1911 is approximately the same as the estimates that are current for the season of 1914. In April, 1914, the shipments from upper lake ports totaled 249,696 tons; in April, 1913, 232,292 tons. In May, 1914, the shipments totaled 5,687,943 tons as compared with 2,677,721 tons in May, 1913. The June (1914) movement aggregated 5,562,367 tons and in June, 1913, 4,919,296 tons. The total shipments to July 1, 1914, were 9,634,116 tons against 8,339,274 tons in the corresponding period of 1913. From June 30 to the end of the season of 1911, 24,238,314 tons of ore were shipped from upper lake ports. Should the season of 1914 see shipments of the same volume from the last of June to the close the total movement would be approximately 34,000,000 tons. July shipments in 1911 amounted to 5,232,195 tons, August shipments 5,550,229 tons, September shipments 5,231,669 tons, October shipments 5,769,965, and November shipments 2,523,258 tons. Those who are familiar with the iron ore business yesterday were of the opinion that the June movement this year was too large for the volume of ore sold and unless the sales of ore were larger before the close, the season would be over so far as ore is concerned late in October. They said that if the ore sales do pick up the shipments probably would not more than equal the 1911 movement the rest of the season. Were the coal mines of Ohio shipping, the traffic on the lakes would be very much improved. While coal shipments for the season are not expected to be more than 75 per cent of 1913, the fact Ohio is shipping no coal largely accounts for the lightness of the movement. Without grain the traffic on the lakes for bulk freighters is in the neighborhood of 55 per cent of the capacity of the lake fleet. Grain shipments will tend to relieve the situation beginning with the movement out of Chicago the latter part of this month, but grain shipments will not keep the idle fleet even moderately busy. Proved Most Satisfactory. Policewoman Lulu Parks of Chicago was sent to New York to bring back a young woman accused of taking money from her family. The substituting of a woman for a man in this case proved most satisfactory, and the young girl was so glad that she did not have to travel with a policeman that she gave Miss Parks no trouble at all. The girl told her entire story to the policewoman, and the result is that she will probably not be prosecuted at all. Cleanliness. Cleanliness may be defined to be the emblem of purity of mind—Addison. Huckleberries or blueberries, as they are called in New England, may be served in many ways. Huckleberry pie is the most generally popular. Ways of serving these tempting berries are suggested here. These are simple and delicious methods of serving them: Layer Cake. Huckleberry Shortcake.—Make a nice shortcake dough. Bake in a sheet as for any shortcake. When done pull apart, butter each part and pour real maple syrup over all of it. Be generous with your butter and sirup. Then cover one part with nice ripe huckleberries, then put on the other part and butter top. Pour over the berries, then more maple sirup and serve with or without whipped cream, according to taste. Rich Batter Cakes. Huckleberry Pancakes.—Beat two eggs separately, add the yolks to two cups of sweet milk, then add two cups of flour into which has been sifted two teaspoonfuls of baking powder and a little salt. Beat this batter smooth, then add the beaten whites and two cups of well-soured huckleberries. It may be necessary to add a little more flour. Bake on a hot, well greased griddle. Stewed or Baked. Huckleberry Dumplings.—Roll out rich crust, cut into six inch squares, dust with flour, heap half a cupful of blueberries in the center, sprinkle with flour, add a tablespoonful of sugar and a bit of butter. Pick up the four corners of the crust and pinch together, then moisten and close each to knit into each division near the top to let out the steam and bake. Single Layer Cake. Huckleberry Cake.—Take two and a half cups of flour, one-third cupful of sugar, three teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one egg, one-half a teaspoonful of salt and one-third cupful of milk, one-fourth cupful of butter, one cupful of huckleberries. Sift the flour, salt and baking powder, rub in the butter and add the sugar and the berries. Beat the egg until light and use with the milk to moisten the dry ingredients. Pour into a greased shallow pan and bake in a moderate oven about half an hour. Annas Thompson!

Announcements of the Churches

The First Methodist Episcopal Church. This church affords you two opportunities for Public Worship this Sunday, and heartily invites you to share in the inspiration and strengthening of these and all its meetings. Sunday Morning Public Worship begins at 10:30; the pastor of the church will preach from the topic: "The Way Home," the quartette choir will have charge of the music. The evening public worship begins at 7:30 and lasts for one hour; the topic of the pastor's sermon will be "Afraid to be a Coward," and will be patriotic in nature in keeping with our national celebration; the large chorus choir, assisted by a quartette of violins, will lead the music; the old gospel hymns will be sung. Both these meetings are well attended, and are for you. The Bible School, which is devoted to the study of God's Word, meets at 9:30 Sunday morning. Washington, July 2.—Treasury figures completed tonight showed that the federal government went through its first fiscal year under the Wilson administration with its income exceeding the ordinary expenses by $32,784,452.07. Nearly thirty-three and a half million dollars pouring into the treasury yesterday, the last day, brought the total receipts for the year up to $734,343,200, a million and a half above Secretary McAdoo's original estimate and turned into a surplus what had promised the day before to be a substantial deficit. Corporation and income tax payments furnished the stream of gold at the finish. From this source came $26,161,782.82 between the opening and closing of the treasury yesterday and tonight Secretary McAdoo and other administration officials were pointing proudly to the total figures as proof of their promises as to what would be accomplished under the new tariff. The treasury surplus this year will be wiped out by the Panama canal expenditures.

Chicago, July 3.—That Max Kleist, a gardener, who married Juliet Hretung, daughter of Edward N. Brettung, Chicago millionaire, will have to fight to win his suit for $250,000 for alienation of affections against his father-in-law, became evident today when an answer to his bill was filed in New York by Brettung. Kleist sued his father-in-law in May, alleging that he had persuaded his daughter to leave her husband because of his humble origin. Brettung asserted then that his gardener son-in-law would never get any money from the suit. "My daughter is able to decide for herself," Mr. Brettung said at that time. "I have not attempted to sway her in the matter."

The MAID of the FOREST

RANDALL PARRISH
ILLUSTRATED BY D. J. LAVIN

SYNDICATED

Joseph Hayward, an agent in the United States army, on his way to Fort Harmar, meets Elmon Girty, a renegade whose name has been connected with all manner of atrocities, also headed for Fort Harmar, with a message from the British general, Hamilton. Hayward guides him to the fort. At General Harmer's headquarters Hayward meets Rene D'Auvray, who professes to recognize him, although he has no recollection of ever having seen her before. Hayward volunteers to carry a message for Harmer to Sandusky, where Hamilton is stationed. The northwest Indian tribes are ready for war and are only held back by the refusal of the friendly Wyandots to join. The latter are demanding the return of We-pa-tee-tah, a religious teacher, whom they believe to be a prisoner. Hayward's mission is to assure the Wyandots that the man is not held by the soldiers. Rene asks Hayward to let her accompany him. She tells him that she is a quarter-blood Wyandot and a missionary among the Indians. She has been in search of her father. She insists that she has seen Hayward before, but in a British uniform. Hayward refuses her request and starts for the north accompanied by a scout named Brady and a private soldier. They come on the trail of a war party and to escape from the Indians take shelter in a hut on an island. Hayward finds a murdered man in the hut.

What is that? I asked. "A French officer, killed in battle." "And her mother?" "A woman of the Wyandots, but a half-breed." "D'Auvray! The same as the dead man yonder! And he was a soldier. 'Tis an odd case. What else do you know about her?" "Precious little, indeed, for she seemed an adept in deceit. She even pretended to know me, and actually spoke my name before it had been told her. How she ever learned it is more than I can guess. The little mix is full of tricks, but plays them so saucily it was not in my heart to become angry. By heavens! one glance in her eyes would disarm any man—"

"Yes," he interrupted, "but whence came she there, and for what purpose?" "I told him all I knew, and he listened eagerly, his eyes on Schultz pattering about the fire. "She must have jested in her threat to travel with the renegade." "I fear it was not jest," I said soberly. "She was in a mood to do even that, and I do not think she feared the man. They may be on our trail now; ay! close at hand, Brady, for they both know these woods better than either of us. 'Tis my thought, now, the dead man yonder was the lass' father, and she would turn his cabin." His eyes turned to the door, and then to the food Schultz was placing on the table before us, but whatever he thought it remained unuttered. As we sat there eating, he was apparently turning it all over in his mind, trying to draw the tangled ends of the skein together. As we finished the meal, some newly awakened curiosity caused me to glance out again into the rear room. It was gloomy with shadows, the bodies of man and dog beyond view; yet what I perceived brought from my lips a sudden exclamation. "Brady, some one has been in here! The outer door is unlatched—yes—and the soldier's coat is gone!" We searched the room carefully, but discovered no sign of its having been entered, except for the door standing slightly ajar, and the disappearance of the red coat. We dare not carry a torch into the open, and the night was too dark for us to trace marks on the ground. Brady stood in the glow of freelight, looking to the priming of his rifle, his face shadowed. "I am going out awhile, Hayward," he said finally. "Yes, I am all right now. I mean to take you along, but I reckon, it will be safer not to leave the Dutchman here alone. However, I don't think there will be any more visitors tonight."

I stood staring at it, and then down into the face of the dead man. D'AUVRAY: Her name! The same name she had given me! The face of the girl came back instantly to memory, distinct, living. There was a familiarity, a resemblance, now that I thus connected the two together. She had told me her father was a French officer—but dead, killed in action. Perhaps she thought so; had been deceived into this belief. Yet I was convinced now that this was the man; that he had been living up to a few hours before, and had met his fate here in the wilderness by a foul and treacherous blow. Her father! The knowledge seemed to shock me, to leave me mindless; I could not divorce my mind from the remembrance of the daughter. Where would she be that night? Safe at Harmar! or in the dark woods with Girty? Did she know about this hidden cabin? This island rendezvous? Surely this could be no mere coincidence of name and history, yet what was the mystery that enveloped both? Why was this Captain D'Auvray hiding here, and why did she deny that he was still living? The more I thought, the more tangled grew the skein. Brady called me, and I stepped back into the other room, still dazed, grasping the medal in my hand. "Well, what is it?" he asked gruffly. "What have you found out?" I told him briefly, describing the appearance of the body, and handing him the medal. He turned it over in the light of the torch. "French, ain't it? What does it say?" "An army decoration for gallant conduct given to Capt. Rael D'Auvray, Fifth Cuirassiers."

"You think it belonged to him?" "Beyond doubt; it was pinned to his shirt—the one thing he treasured in his exile." "D'Auvray," he repeated, as if the name had a familiar sound. "I've heard of him before. Wait a bit; now I have it—he commanded Hamilton's Indians at Vincennes when Clark took the town. I saw him once." He got to his feet with my help, and braced himself in the doorway, looking intently at the upturned face, as I held the torch extended. "That's the man," he said soberly. "I remember the white beard; some one told me the Wyandots called him the white chief. And he was in the French army! An officer! Poor devil! I wonder what happened to drive him to this."

I Stood Staring into the Face of the Dead Man.

He stared about among the shadows at the miscellaneous articles littering the shed, his trained eyes noting things I had overlooked in my excitement. "He was murdered all right, lad," he commented slowly, "and by a white man. This was not an Indian work. Here is the imprint of a boot heel; you can even see the nails. That's odd; I didn't suppose there was a boot worn in this place."

CHAPTER VII.

Mademoiselle Meets Her Father. There was evidently no use of my groping longer in the dark. The girl was in earnest; she firmly believed me to be another. There could be no understanding between us until this mystery of identity was cleared away. Her discovery of me here had only served to increase her hallucination. "Mademoiselle D'Auvray," I said earnestly, and I stood bare-headed before her, "there is a serious mistake being made. I am not willing you should deceive yourself any longer. I am going to be perfectly frank with you, and in return I ask you to be equally frank with me. Who do you believe me to be?" She gazed straight into my face, answering: "Monsieur Joseph Hayward."

"Of course," smiling, "you heard the name at Fort Harmar." "But I did not; it was never mentioned in my presence. I recognized you." "Which would imply that we had met before, yet I have no recollection, not the faintest, of such a meeting. You are not one it would be easy to forget."

"Unless one particularly desired to do so," she replied swiftly, "and that I am beginning to suspect is the case." She straightened her slender figure, throwing back her shoulders and using a clearer English than before, as if throwing off disguise. "You ask me to deal with you frankly, monsieur; very well, I will. Down in my heart I have never trusted you—never! My father did, and I made pretense to please him. But from our first meeting I heard a quick breath of surprise, almost an exclamation; the stock of the rifle sank to the ground, but the hands still clung to the barrel, as the startled figure straightened up. I could not distinguish the face, only the white outline shadowed by the hat, yet the short, slender form was that of a boy. The relief at this discovery brought a laugh to my lips. "What does this mean, lad?" I asked. "Have children gone to war? Come, answer me; you are no savage."

"'Tis not a lad with whom you deal, Monsieur Hayward," replied a soft voice, trembling a bit nevertheless, though attempting boldness. "You know me now?" She swung the concealing hat into the grass, the silvery light of the stars on her face. "You here! you!" I exclaimed in swift surprise at this unexpected denouement, and feeling the hot blood flush my face. "You came with Girty?" She ventured to laugh lightly at my tone and manner. "We traveled together—yes. What of that, monsieur? The wilderness is not a parlor where we can choose associates. Did I not warn you I would come with him when you refused me? An' you think I did what was wrong?"

"I?" puzzled by her direct question. "What is it to me, mademoiselle? You would not care what I think. Yet were you sister of mine I would speak plainly enough; we all know what Simon Girty is." "Oh, no, monsieur, the Americans do not," and her voice rung with earnestness. "He is to them an enemy, a fiend. He wars on the other side, and as the Indians make war. Why not? He has lived in our wigwams, and sat at our council fires. He belongs with us, save for the birthmark of a white skin. To me he is not enemy, but friend. I have known him always, from childhood; there is no fear in my heart; did he desire, he would not dare harm me—I am a Wyandot."

"The swift words were a defiance, a challenge. "Have it as you will," I said coldly, "but nothing you may say will ever make me think well of that renegade." "You!" she exclaimed passionately. "Why do you say that, Joseph Hayward? Why do you keep up this masquerade with me? We are no longer at Fort Harmar where it was safer for you to guard your speech."

"You!" she exclaimed passionately. "Why do you say that, Joseph Hayward? Why do you keep up this masquerade with me? We are no longer at Fort Harmar where it was safer for you to guard your speech."

SAY O'SHAUGHNESSY MADE GOOD IN MEXICO

Nelson O'Shaughnessy has made good. That's the opinion official Washington maintains with regard to the man who during the past several months held the most trying job in the diplomatic service of the United States.

The difficult character of O'Shaughnessy's job is revealed when it is remembered that he represented Uncle Sam during three administrations in Mexico, all bitterly antagonistic to each other; first, the old regime of Porfirio Diaz, then the administration of Madero, and finally the regime of Huerta. O'Shaughnessy was first appointed by Roosevelt in 1904 as secretary to Copenhagen at the age of twenty-seven. He was one of those rich young fellows in New York city who ran to clothes, tennis and money. His family was anxious for him to get into the diplomatic service. The appointment was contrary to the judgment of the Republican senators from New York, but Roosevelt pushed it through anyway. In 1905 he was transferred to Berlin as third secretary and played tennis with the crown prince. Two years later he went to Vienna, where he stayed four years. He was offered the appointment as Minister to Bucharest, but his friends were displeased with this and held the appointment up. For discipline he was given the second secretaryship to Mexico, a distinct step downward, so it was then thought.

But this was O'Shaughnessy's great opportunity. A month after his arrival in Mexico City things began to warm up. It was just at that time that Diaz fell and the Mexican people elected the most democratic president in the history of the country. O'Shaughnessy's view seemed to be that with the fall of Diaz the American trade with Mexico, they always should have in him a friend at court. In other words, he was forever trying to establish an influence with the Mexican government whatever that was. After the removal of Henry Lane Wilson as ambassador last July, no one was appointed to succeed him, and O'Shaughnessy became charge d'affaires. It is believed he made no representations as to the policy of recognizing the Huerta government. Certainly if he did they were never known outside the state department and cabinet. But all during this trying period his personal relations with Huerta remained friendly, though, of course, political relations frequently came near the breaking point. John Lind was sent to Mexico as the president's personal representative, but except for ten days in the capital he remained at Vera Cruz, 390 miles away, and negotiations with Huerta were carried on directly through O'Shaughnessy. There were dozens of times when an open break meaning war with the explosive alcoholic old Indian dictator might have been precipitated, but O'Shaughnessy realized this was what the home government did not then want and staved it off.

have advocates of peace who are fluent in speech regarding the horrors of strife," he continued. "Yet, while one must sympathize with those who have lost dear ones in battle, are we as eloquent and active as respects the many that are slain in industry? We mourn the death of Vera Cruz, but in the first three months of this year there were slain several times that number in the industries of Massachusetts without great public grief, while the grisly list of dead from automobiles makes our occupation of Vera Cruz look relatively like a pleasure excursion. "I doubt if either state or nation is as yet sufficiently effective in thought on these matters to provide at once, let us say, as many millions for public health as we would provide for a railway in Alaska, or for additions to our navy. I approve both the railway and naval additions, but it seems to me effective thinking would place at least as great weight upon the value of our men and women."

ACCEPTS WHAT IS GOOD IN AMERICAN STYLES

Enter now Mrs. K. Fu Shah, wife of the Chinese minister to Washington, in a Persian walking suit ruffled and frilled, with a turned-up hat which would do credit to the wax lady in the show window. Mrs. K. Fu Shah takes not the slightest trouble to cover her dusky locks and twists them in the conventional way which fashion dictates at present. "I am so much of an American," she said, "that I have not the sense of novelty which makes one's first impressions so vivid. You see, I lived in New York, where both my father and my husband were connected with the consular service, but we were in Peking during the revolution which overthrew the ancient empire and from my windows I could hear the cannon booming over the capital. I could even see the smoke and hear the awful din which accompanies war. "I must confess that I have been always curious about the mysteries of the American woman's toilet, the confusing number of garments, the endless accessories. In New York, of course, I wore our national dress, and I must admit that I still cling to my old way whenever I am desirous of being really comfortable. "You see, we have learned the philosophy of being always at our ease and our soft, flowing robes make for it more than the curious fashions which are now in vogue. Even ceremonial dressing with us is a brief labor compared with the ordinary dressing in the western garb."

But he studied up parlor magic and I believe the children consider him quite entertaining now. And Mommie, as they call me, is almost as good as a real playmate. nearly nine. "No, no one ever thinks that they are mine," she admits, "but you see my eyes and hair are dark and they are all fair. They think of me more as a sister than a mother, anyway, I'm afraid. But I don't mind climbing fire ladders and being captured by Indians if it makes them happy. ONE OF THE FRIENDLY FAN

From where I sit and work away, No meadows that are wide and green Delight my soul from day to day. I walk beneath no spreading trees Nor sit beside a sparkling pool, But there is a delightful breeze That serves to keep me calm and cool. All day I hear the city's roar, The room I occupy is small, And when I let my fancy soar

It bumps against a lofty wall, Instead of scents of new-mown hay, I sniff the fumes of gasoline, But cooling breezes all the day Assist me to remain serene. I may not sit upon a fence While watching busy harvest hands; Each morning early I commence The work necessity demands, But while I strive with all my might To do my part as best I can, I hear with undisturbed delight The hum of my electric fan.

Let others hurry far away In search of scenes that may be fair, Or in the harvest fields all day Attempt to rid their souls of care, My brow is kept from burning by Cool breeze wafted from a shaft— By soothing, friendly zephyrs I Can regulate to suit myself.

How Nice. "And so," said Mrs. Honeywell, "your husband is going to California to stay three months! Dear me, how can you ever stand it to be parted from him so long? Why, my husband has never been away from me even for a day since we have been married. Whenever he has to go out of town he always takes me with him." "Indeed," replied Mrs. Oldson, "that's very nice of him. How long have you been married?" "Nearly three months," the happy young woman said, with a delicious sigh.

THE "OLD BATCH" AGAIN.

"Ab, yes! He was disappointed in love, poor boy." "You must have a grudge against him." "Why?" "You seem to be sorry that he wasn't married before bumping against his disappointment."

Difference 'Twixt Great and Small. The difference 'twixt great and small is very little, after all. The man who labors by the day Or by the month for meager pay Is, when he fails to satisfy His master, merely told to go. The one whom fortune raises high Receives, when he neglects to show His fitness, a polite, benign Request to graciously resign. And this, observe, is, after all, The difference 'twixt great and small.

The Glorious Prince. "Yes," he said "I once saw a prince." "Oh," she said, clasping her hands and looking with awe into the eyes that had gazed upon royalty, "what was he doing?" "Trying to balance a feather duster on his nose for the amusement of a chorus girl."

His Dangerous Altruism. "Oh why, why," asked her weeping mother, "did you consent to be his wife?" "Hush, hush," the fair girl answered. "I think I hear him in the hall. He's so kindhearted I'm afraid he might give me up, terribly as he would have to suffer, if he knew it would make you happier."

Rescued From a Horrible Fate. "Say, dusty, I'm goin' to apply for a slice of dat Carnegie hero fund." "Wot you been doin'?" I ain't heard about you resculin' anybody." "I carried Saunterin' Slim nearly three miles yesterday when he fainted because six men had him surrounded and was goin' to put him to work."

The Difference. "I was greatly interested last night in watching your daughter and my son dance together." "Oh, I suppose you were. If it had been my son and your daughter I might have been interested instead of horrified."

His Favorite Subject. "Doesn't your father ever talk to you about his Maker?" asked the Sunday school teacher. "I guess he does," replied little Albert. "Pa claims he's a self-made man."

Worth Remembering. "You're good you may be loonesome, But 'tis only fair to say That if you refrain from slandering You'll not have to be beginning With a headache the next day."

A PANAMA MONTE CARLO.

A concern which boasts an English earl as chairman of its executive board has sent out an alluring prospectus of a gambling palace to be erected in Panama. It is declared that the little republic has given assurance of absolute non-interference for a period of twenty-five years. The establishment is to be more magnificent than that of Monaco, and will pay larger dividends to its stockholders.

Panama is to be boomed as a winter resort. But even if no one comes to Panama to sojourn all passengers on boats using the canal will have twenty-four hours at their disposal, and most of this time they will, it is predicted, spend at the casino.

The prospectus may or may not be dealing in facts. It is to be hoped that it is merely the ruddy dream of a zealous promoter.

It would be altogether disagreeable for the United States to have to endure this disreputable adjunct to its great work. But if the sovereign republic of Panama decides to grant the concession it is difficult to see how the United States is going to prevent it. That is one drawback of an independent protegee for which a big nation stands sponsor but whose morals it cannot definitely regulate.

A comedian who appeared in an unsuccessful London production of an American musical comedy, is writ at the London critics because they asked him why he didn't stick to his native American dialect. The fact that he was born in London and had played there many years, appeared to be overlooked by the faultfinders. But, then, one can't convince a critic against his will.

WILSON'S WORK HELPING TRADE SAYS GOV. BURKE

Juneau, Wis., June 3.—Ex-Governor John Burke, North Dakota, treasurer of the United States, the principal speaker at the Dodge county home-coming does not believe that business conditions will have any effect on the fall elections. His reason is that the completion of President Wilson's legislative program will act to clear up business conditions.

"I think the president struck the keynote the other day when he said business conditions had been disturbed for ten or twelve years," Mr. Burke said. "In that time we have had one panic that of 1907. The legislation now pending has been coming and has been expected for many years and as soon as it is passed it will settle business conditions.

Laws Will Help Business. The trust legislation will be accepted by business men as was the tariff and the currency laws when they were passed. Bankers, while the currency bill was pending, opposed it very strongly, but as soon as it was enacted they made arrangements to comply with its provisions, and the effect was to relieve business conditions. The same will be true of the trust legislation, and it will have a very good effect.

Besides getting this legislation out of the way, the trust outlook is helping to give a firmer tone throughout the country. There is no question that the president's trust bill will pass. No one can tell how long the debate will last, but the bill will be enacted without question."

Ex-Gov Burke will not touch politics in his homecoming speech.

LAKE ORE TRAFFIC IN NOW ON BASIS OF 3 YEARS AGO

Cleveland, O., July 3.—Iron ore shipments to July 1 were approximately 60 per cent of the shipments in the same period of 1913. Shipments to July 1 amounted to 9,624,116 tons as compared with 16,125,042 tons. The figures indicate a movement for the season of about 32,000,000 tons. The June traffic was approximately 60 per cent of that in June, 1913 and totaled 5,502,367 tons, as compared with 7,974,444 tons.

By comparison only can anything like a true meaning of the figures be obtained. There is no comparison between the shipments of 1914 and those of 1913 or 1912. In 1911 the season's ore movement amounted to 32,137,066 tons and the season opened more like the present season than any other of recent years. The amount carried in 1911 is approximately the same as the estimates that are current for the season of 1914.

In April, 1914, the shipments from upper lake ports totaled 269,686 tons; in April, 1913, 332,292 tons. In May, 1914, the shipments totaled 3,687,063 tons as compared with 3,687,721 tons in May, 1913. The June (1914) movement aggregated 5,502,367 tons and in June, 1913, 4,919,366 tons. The total shipments to July 1, 1914, were 9,624,116 tons against 8,839,274 tons in the corresponding period of 1913. From June 30 to the end of the season of 1911, 24,298,314 tons of ore were shipped from upper lake ports. Should the season of 1914 shipments of the same volume from the last of June to the close of the season, the total would be approximately 25,223,198 tons. August shipments 5,550,229 tons, September shipments 5,221,600 tons, October shipments 2,223,228 tons.

Those who are familiar with the iron ore business yesterday were of the opinion that the June movement this year was too large for the volume of ore sold and unless the close of the season would be over so far as ore is concerned late in October. They said that if the ore sales do pick up the shipments probably would not more than equal the 1911 movement the rest of the season.

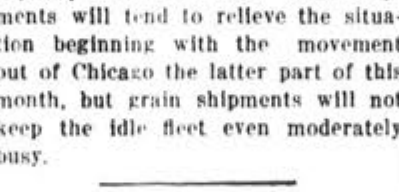

Were the coal mines of Ohio shipping, the traffic on the lakes would be very much improved. While coal shipments for the season are not expected to be more than 75 per cent of 1913, the fact Ohio is shipping no coal largely accounts for the lightness of the movement.

Without grain the traffic on the lakes for bulk freighters is in the neighborhood of 55 per cent of the capacity of the lake fleet. Grain shipments will tend to relieve the situation beginning with the movement out of Chicago the latter part of this month, but grain shipments will not keep the idle fleet even moderately busy.

Proved Most Satisfactory. Policewoman Lulu Parks of Chicago was sent to New York to bring back a young woman accused of taking money from her family. The substituting of a woman for a man in this case proved most satisfactory, and the young girl was so glad that she did not have to travel with a policeman that she gave Miss Parks no trouble at all. The girl told her entire story to the policewoman, and the result is that she will probably not be prosecuted at all.

Huckleberry Shortcake.—Make a nice shortcake dough. Bake in a sheet as for any shortcake. When done pull apart, butter each part and pour rich maple syrup over all of it. Be generous with your butter and syrup. Then cover one part with nice ripe huckleberries, then put on the other part and butter top. Pour over the berries, then more maple syrup and serve with or without whipped cream, according to taste.

Rich Batter Cakes. Huckleberry Pancakes.—Beat two eggs separately, add the yolks to two cupfuls of sweet milk, then add two cupfuls of flour into which has been sifted two teaspoonfuls of baking powder and a little salt. Beat this batter smooth, then add the beaten whites and two cupfuls of well floured huckle berries. It may be necessary to add a little more flour. Bake on a hot, well greased griddle.

Steamed or Baked. Huckleberry Dumplings.—Roll out rich crust, cut into six inch squares, dust with flour, heap half a cupful of blueberries in the center, sprinkle with flour, add a tablespoonful of sugar and a bit of butter. Pick up the four corners of the crust and pinch together, then moisten and close each of the openings. Stick a sharp pointed knife into each division near the top to let out the steam and bake.

Single Layer Cake. Huckleberry Cake.—Take two and a half cupfuls of flour, one-third cupful of sugar, three teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one egg, one-half a teaspoonful of salt, one and one-third cupfuls of milk, one-fourth cupful of butter, one cupful of huckleberries. Sift the flour, salt and baking powder, rub in the butter and add the sugar and the berries. Beat the egg until light and use with the milk to moisten the dry ingredients. Pour into a greased shallow pan and bake in a moderate oven about half an hour.

STREAM OF GOLD POUR INTO U. S. TREASURY

Washington, July 2.—Treasury figures completed tonight showed that the federal government went through its first fiscal year under the Wilson administration with its income exceeding the ordinary expenses by $33,784,452.07.

Nearly thirty-three and a half million dollars pouring into the treasury yesterday, the last day, brought the total receipts for the year up to $734,342.9, a million and a half above Secretary McAdoo's original estimate and turned into a surplus what had promised the day before to be a substantial deficit.

Corporation and income tax payments furnished the stream of gold at the finish. From this source came $26,161,782.82 between the opening and closing of the treasury yesterday and tonight Secretary McAdoo and other administration officials were pointing proudly to the total figures as proof of their promises as to what would be accomplished under the new tariff.

The treasury surplus this year will be wiped out by the Panama canal expenditures.

'SEPTEMBER MORN' BY 'FAINTING BERTHA'

Milwaukee, Wis., July 3.—Nothing but a pool of water in a suitable setting was all that was needed this morning for the "September Morn" visualization offered by "Fainting Bertha" at a window on the second floor of the county jail.

"Fainting Bertha" said she took the devil along when she went to the house of correction later to serve the ninety days' sentence for vagrancy which was imposed upon her by Judge Page; for Bertha admits that the devil still haunts her.

"They tried to scare the devil and drive him away in Omaha," the notorious shoplifter said. "The entire congregation of 500 persons prayed and held services for my reformation from the hands of the devil, but their efforts were of no avail, for they said, 'with me or I would not be here.'"

The woman will attempt to obtain her freedom by appealing her case to the municipal court. She has retained Attorney E. A. Mock. Judge Backus will not hold court until Monday and for that reason action was delayed.

"I guess the world is too big for me, because I have no friend that I know of," she said in speaking of the appeal. "I don't know of anyone who will give me money so that I can get out on bail."

The officials in the jail availed themselves of the first opportunity to send her to the workhouse because she was an obstreperous prisoner during her short stay in the county bastille. Several male prisoners were held at the jail so that room could be found for her in the Black Maria.

"I would have had money had I been at liberty twenty-four hours more," she said to Detective Mauger and Dolan.

BREITUNG WILL FIGHT GARDENER SON-IN-LAW

That Max Kleist, gardener, who married a girl Breitung, daughter of Edward N. Breitung, Chicago millionaire, will have to fight to win his suit for $250,000 for alienation of affections against his father-in-law, became evident today, when an answer to his suit was filed in New York by Breitung.

Kleist sued his father-in-law in May, alleging that that he had persuaded his daughter to leave her husband because of his humble origin. Breitung asserted then that his gardener son-in-law would never get any money from the suit.

"My daughter is able to decide this for herself," Mr. Breitung said at that time. "I have not attempted to sway her in the matter."

SYNOPSIS.

Joseph Hayward, an ensign in the United States army, on his way to Fort Hammar, meets Simon Girty, a renegade who has been in contact with all manner of atrocities. The Indian band led by Fort Hammar, with a message from the British general, Hamilton. Hayward guides him to the fort. At General Hammar's headquarters Hayward meets Rene D'Auray, who professes to recognize him, although he has no recollection of ever having seen her before. Hayward volunteers to carry a message for Hammar to Stendusk, where Hamilton is stationed. The northwest Indian tribes are ready for war and are only held back by the refusal of the friendly Wyandots to join. The latter are demanding the return of Wa-pa-tee-tah, a religious teacher, whom they believe to be a prisoner. Hayward's mission is to assure the Wyandots that the man is not held by the soldiers. Rene tells Hayward to let her accompany him. She tells him that she is a quarter-blood Wyandot and a missionary among the Indians. She has been in search of her father. She insists that she has seen Hayward before, but in a British uniform. Hayward refuses her request and starts for the north accompanied by a scout named Brady and a private soldier. They come on the trail of a war party and to escape from the Indians take shelter in a hut on an island. Hayward finds a murdered man in the hut.

CHAPTER VI.—Continued.

I stood staring at it, and then down into the face of the dead man. D'Auray: Her name! The same name she had given me! The face of the girl came back instantly to memory, distinct, living. There was a familiarity, a resemblance, now that I thus connected the two together. She had told me her father was a French officer—but dead, killed in action. Perhaps she thought so; had been deceived into this belief. Yet I was convinced now that this was the man; that he had been living up to a few hours before, and had met his fate here in the wilderness by a foul and treacherous blow. Her father! The knowledge seemed to shock me, to leave me helpless; I could not divorce my mind from the remembrance of the daughter. Where would she be that night? Safe at Hammar? Or in the dark woods with Girty? Did she know about this hidden cabin? This island rendezvous? Surely this could be no mere coincidence of name and history, yet what was the mystery that enveloped both? Why was this Captain D'Auray hiding here, and why did she deny that he was still living? The more I thought, the more tangled grew the skein. Brady called me, and I stepped back into the other room, still dazed, grasping the medal in my hand.

I stood staring into the face of the dead man. And he was in the French army? An officer? Poor devil! I wonder what happened to drive him to this.

country except by the Indians. "What is that red garment lying on the box? I thought so; an English infantry jacket, made in London, and it never belonged to D'Auray." He held it up. "It was a big fellow who wore this coat, about your size."

I drew up the bench, and sat down. "There is more to this than you have discovered, Brady," I said, determined to explain. "Did you chance to see a French girl back at Fort Hammar?"

He shook his head. "Not as I remember; who was she?" "That is what I would like to know. I hoped you might have picked up some information. She was at General Hammar's office—a young girl, not much over twenty, I should judge, with dark eyes and hair, speaking broken English, her dress half Indian and half border French. She was one in a thousand, to my thought. What name do you suppose she gave me?"

His eyes, interested, questioned me, but he sat silent. "Rene D'Auray; and she explained her father was a French officer, killed in battle."

"And her mother?" "A woman of the Wyandots, but a half-breed."

"D'Auray! The same as the dead man yonder! And he was a soldier. 'T is an odd case. What else do you know about her?"

"Precious little, indeed, for she seemed an adept in deceit. She even pretended to know me, and actually spoke my name before it had been told her. How she ever learned it is more than I can guess. The little mix is full of tricks, but plays them so saucily that it was not in my heart to become angry. By heavens! one glance in her eyes would disarm any man—"

"Yes," he interrupted, "but whence came she there, and for what purpose?"

I told him all I knew, and he listened eagerly, his eyes on Schultz pattering about the fire. "She must have jested in her threat to travel hither with the renegade."

"I know you would be here, that was why I came alone—that we might talk to each other, and no longer lie." I stared at her face in the starlight, my memory suddenly reverting to the dead man within.

"You knew I would be here?" "I guessed it, and my instinct was true. Why not, monsieur? You alone knew the house was here, and who lived in it."

CHAPTER VII.

Mademoiselle Meets Her Father. There was evidently no use of my groping longer in the dark. The girl was in earnest; she firmly believed me to be another. There could be no understanding between us until this mystery of identity was cleared away. Her discovery of me here had only served to increase her hallucination.

"Mademoiselle D'Auray," I said earnestly, and I stood bare-headed before her, "there is a serious mistake being made. I am not willing you should deceive yourself any longer. I am going to be perfectly frank with you, and in return I ask you to be equally frank with me. Who do you believe me to be?"

She gazed straight into my face, answering: "Monsieur Joseph Hayward."

"Of course," smiling, "you heard the name at Fort Hammar."

"But I did not; it was never mentioned in my presence. I recognized you."

"Which would imply that we had met before, yet I have no recollection, not the faintest, of such a meeting. You are not one it would be easy to forget."

"Unless one particularly desired to do so," she replied swiftly, "and that I am beginning to suspect is the case." She straightened her slender figure, throwing back her shoulders and using a clearer English than before, as if throwing off disguise. "You ask me to deal with you frankly, monsieur; very well, I will. Down in my heart I have never trusted you—never! My father did, and I made pretense to please him. But from our first meeting"

"I heard a quick breath of surprise, almost an exclamation; the stock of the rifle sank to the ground, but the hands still clung to the barrel, as the startled figure straightened up. I could not distinguish the face, only the white outline shadowed by the hat, yet the short, slender form was that of a boy. The relief at this discovery brought a laugh to my lips."

"What does this mean, lad?" I asked. "Have children gone to war? Come, answer me; you are no savage."

SAY O'SHAUGHNESSY MADE GOOD IN MEXICO

Nelson O'Shaughnessy has made good. That's the opinion official Washington maintains with regard to the man who during the past several years of his career in the diplomatic service of the United States.

O'Shaughnessy was first appointed by Roosevelt in 1904 as secretary to Copenhagen at the age of twenty-seven. He was one of those rich young fellows in New York city who ran to clothes, tennis and money.

His family was anxious for him to get into the diplomatic service. The appointment was contrary to the judgment of the Republican senators from New York, but Roosevelt pushed it through anyway.

In 1905 he was transferred to Berlin as third secretary and played tennis with the crown prince. Two years later he went to Vienna, where he stayed four years.

He was offered the appointment as Minister to Bucharest, but his friends were displeased with this and held the appointment up. For discipline he was given the second secretaryship to Mexico, a distinct step downward, so it was then thought.

But this was O'Shaughnessy's great opportunity. A month after his arrival in Mexico City things began to warm up. It was just at that time that Diaz fled and the Mexican post became the most delicate in the diplomatic service.

During Madero's rule O'Shaughnessy became extremely friendly with him, but when Madero was overthrown he cultivated a personal relationship with Huerta.

It is believed he made no representations as to the policy of recognizing the Huerta government. Certainly if he did they were never known outside the state department and cabinet.

But all during this trying period his personal relations with Huerta remained friendly, though, of course, political relations frequently came near the breaking point.

John Lind was sent to Mexico as the president's personal representative, but except for ten days in the capital he remained at Vera Cruz, 390 miles away, and negotiations with Huerta were carried on directly through O'Shaughnessy.

There were dozens of times when an open break meaning war with the explosive alcoholic old Indian dictator might have been precipitated, but O'Shaughnessy realized this was what the home government did not then want and staved it off.

REDFIELD IS A CRITIC OF "STRENUOUS LIFE"

"The strenuous life is in most cases the least effective," William C. Redfield, secretary of commerce, told the Brown university students the other day, in an address on "Effectiveness."

"It is an infantile view of industry which measures its results by either the duration or the extent of the effort," he said. "Both the hustler and the apostle of strenuousness have become back numbers in their methods. They are today in the same category with him who 'also ran.'"

"We deplore lives lost in war, and have advocates of peace who are fluent in speech regarding the horrors of strife," he continued. "Yet, while one must sympathize with those who have lost dear ones in battle, are we as eloquent and active as respects the many that are slain in industry? We mourn the death of Vera Cruz, but in the first three months of this year there were slain several times that number in the industries of Massachusetts with great public grief, while the grisly list of dead from automobile makes our occupation of Vera Cruz look relatively like a pleasure excursion."

ACCEPTS WHAT IS GOOD IN AMERICAN STYLES

Enter now Mme. Kai Fu Shah, wife of the Chinese minister to Washington, in a Persian walking suit ruffled and frilled, with a turned-up hat which would do credit to the wax lady in the show window.

Mme. Kai Fu Shah takes not the slightest trouble to cover her dusky locks and twists them in the conventional way which fashion dictates at present.

"I am so much of an American," she said, "that I have not the sense of novelty which makes one's first impressions so vivid. You see, I lived in New York, where both my father and my husband were connected with the consular service, but we were in Peking during the revolution which overthrew the ancient empire and from my windows I could hear the cannon booming over the capital. I could even see the smoke and hear the awful din which accompanies war."

"I must confess that I have been always curious about the mysteries of the American woman's toilet, the confusing number of garments, the endless accessories. In New York, of course, I wore our national dress, and I must admit that I still cling to my old way whenever I am desirous of being really comfortable."

"You see, we have learned the philosophy of being always at our ease and our soft, flowing robes make for it more than the curious fashions which are now in vogue. Even ceremonial dressing with us is a brief labor compared with the ordinary dressing in the western garb."

SAYS RICH CHILDREN NEED MORE LIBERTY

The children of the rich need more liberty rather than less luxury, according to Mrs. William Randolph Hearst, who helps her two boys to run away from their tutor and plays fire engine and Indians with them.

"I doubt if either state or nation is as yet sufficiently effective in thought on these matters to provide at once, let us say, as many millions for public health as we would provide for a railway in Alaska, or for additions to our navy. I approve both the railway and naval additions, but it seems to me effective thinking would place at least as great weight upon the value of our men and women."

No snow-capped mountains may be seen. From where I sit and work away; No meadows that are wide and green. Delight my soul from day to day; I walk beneath no spreading trees. Nor sit beside a sparkling pool. But there is a delightful breeze. That serves to keep me calm and cool.

fantasy soar. It bumps against a lofty wall. Instead of agents of new-mown hay, I sniff the fumes of gasoline. But cooling breezes all the day Assist me to remain serene.

I may not sit upon a fence. While watching busy harvest hands; Each morning early I commence The work necessarily demands. But while I strive with all my might To do my part as best I can, I hear with undisturbed delight The hum of my electric fan.

Let others hurry far away. In search of scenes that may be fair, Or to the harvest fields all day. Attempt to rid their souls of care, My brow is kept from burning by Cool breezes wafted from a ceiling. By soothing, friendly zephyrs I Can regulate to suit myself.

How Nice. "And so," said Mrs. Honeywell, "your husband is going to California to stay three months! Dear me, how can you ever stand it to be parted from him so long? Why, my husband has never been away from me even for a day since we have been married. Whenever he has to go out of town he always takes me with him."

"Indeed," replied Mrs. Oldsog, "that's a very nice of him. How long have you been married?" "Nearly three months," the happy young woman said, with a delicious sigh.

THE "OLD BATCH" AGAIN. "Ah, yes! He was disappointed in love, poor boy." "You must have a grudge against him."

"Why?" "You seem to be sorry that he wasn't married before bumping against his disappointment."

Difference 'Twixt Great and Small. The difference 'twixt great and small is very little, after all. The man who labors by the day Or by the month for meager pay Is, when he fails to satisfy His master, merely told to go. The one whom fortune raises high— Receive, when he neglects to show His fitness, a polite, benign Request to graciously resign. And this, observe, is, after all, The difference 'twixt great and small.

The Glorious Prince. "Yes," he said "I once saw a prince."

"Oh," she said, clasping her hands and looking with awe into the eyes that had gazed upon royalty, "what was he doing?" "Trying to balance a feather duster on his nose for the amusement of a chorus girl."

His Dangerous Atrium. "Oh why, why," asked her weeping mother, "did you consent to be his wife?" "Hush, ma," the fair girl answered. "I think I hear him in the hall. He's so kind-hearted I'm afraid he might give me up, terribly as he would have to suffer, if he knew it would make you happier."

Rescued From a Horrible Fate. "Ray, dusty, I'm goin' to apply for a slice of dat 'Carnegie hero fund." "Wot you been doin'? I ain't heard about you rescuin' anybody."

"I didn't know how to play boys' games at first, but William, the second boy, was very delicate for a time and had to have a trained nurse. George, the oldest one, had an English governess, and the first thing I knew both children were afraid to speak aloud."

Worth Keeping, Anyhow. "You have some remarkable paintings." "Yes," replied Mrs. Cumrox. "The art dealer said they were old masters, but to my eye some of them look as good as new."

Worth Remembering. If you're good you may be loquacious. But it's only fair to say That if you refrain from slandering You'll not have to be beginning With a headache the next day.

ASSASSIN SHOTS THROUGH WINDOW

Freeport, N. Y., July 3.—White pointed in a chair in the office of Dr. Edward Carman, a prominent physician, tonight, Mrs. Louise... killed. Her husband... through the window... the break... the door.

...thirty-seven years old, resided with her husband at the home of her mother, Mrs. Annie Dwyer, in Hempstead, five miles from Freeport. Tonight she left Hempstead by trolley, came over to consult Dr. Carman and was seated in his private office when killed. The bullet struck the woman in the right shoulder and traveled downward, piercing her heart. She died instantly.

Directly after the shooting, the Freeport police surrounded the premises of Dr. Carman and began search for Mrs. Bailey's murderer. At a late hour tonight their efforts had been fruitless. Mr. Bailey was at his home in Hempstead at the time of the shooting. He was horrified when he learned of the death of his wife.

FIVE MEN TRAPPED IN BURNING MINE

Williamson, W. Va., July 3.—Miners were trapped in a shaft today, digging a shaft into the workings of Mine No. 1 of the Sycamore Coal company near here, in the hope of reaching the surface, who were trapped in a shaft.

The shaft surrounding the pit reached the surface after dark, but the men were trapped in the shaft. The direction of the shaft was not clear and their progress was slow. They were trapped in the shaft for several hours. The flames with sand, crews being relieved every half hour, but they made little progress. Dense volumes of smoke poured from the openings and it was feared the fire was spreading rapidly.

The fire broke out in the fan house and that structure was destroyed. Alarmed by the failure of the air, twenty-five men made their way to the surface, but five were caught in the entries far from the opening. The nearest rescue crew of the United States bureau of mines was at Roanoke, Va., and was expected to reach here during the day.

The entombed miners, George Schold, James Collins, Benjamin James, Henry Lyons and Marion Lyons, were believed by Deputy Mine Inspector Edward Lambert to be in a part of the mine not yet touched by the fire. He said they probably had been cut off by the flames and had taken refuge in a room about a thousand feet from the mouth. If they could live during the day there was some hope of saving them, experienced miners declared.

Lines of hose were run into the main entry and water was kept playing on the flames, while seventy-five miners were detailed for work in the excavation. One hundred men were usually employed in the mine at night, but many of them did not report Tuesday night.

DEMOCRATS SERVE NOTICE ON THE NATION

Washington, July 3.—In conference late today, Democrats in the senate adopted a resolution declaring their purpose to stay in session until the trust legislation passed by the house has been acted upon by the upper branch of the nation's legislature. The resolution does not bind the senators to vote for the bills without change.

The resolution is designed to serve definite and final notice to the business of the country that anti-trust legislation is to be passed before congress quits Washington. It was proposed by Senator Stone, after a talk with President Wilson and with other Democratic leaders.

Senator Stone said it was intended as an answer to the propaganda for the immediate adjournment of congress. If the party leaders decide in the future that it will be necessary to make party measures of the three house bills or the substitutes offered for them, another conference will be held for the purpose of binding the Democrats to definite legislation.

Originally, it was intended that the resolution declare that congress stay until the "passage of the bills," but this was changed to read until the "disposal of them." The argument for this change was that passage might be taken to mean that the three house bills must be the ones to receive senate approval and "disposal" would leave the senators free to do as they pleased.

Senators were not inclined to agree with a theory that this substitution leaves the way free for congress to adjourn by voting down these bills, although it was pointed out that disposal need not necessarily mean approval.

Some leaders are hopeful that adjournment can be taken, with the program completed, by Aug. 29 or certainly by the first of September.

SERVES TWENTY YEARS STOLE FIFTY CENTS

Mobile, Ala., July 3.—Fifty years for stealing 50 cents was the sentence that a Hale county, Alabama, jury imposed on Frank Williams, a negro, who in 1894, robbed another negro of a half dollar. After serving twenty years of the fifty-year sentence, Williams has been paroled by Governor O'Neal, the governor extending clemency to the negro last night.

DEMOCRATS WILL PLAN CAMPAIGN

Lansing, July 3.—Chairman Edwin C. Shields, of the Democratic state central committee, has called a meeting for July 14 in Lansing when plans will be made for the convention and arrangements for the campaign will be discussed.

Governor Ferris arrived in Lansing today and said that Mrs. Ferris was considerably improved in health and during the last 48 hours has been more comfortable than she has been for several days.

The governor again refused to state whether or not he would be a candidate for re-election and it is believed here that the filing of his petitions the latter part of July will be the formal declaration that he is in the race. However, in 1906, the Democrats secured more than enough petitions to nominate Ferris, but just two years previous to that time he had been defeated by Fred M. Warner and refused to make the race again. It was necessary for the Democrats to call a state convention that year and Charles H. Kimmerle was selected as the nominee.

JOB SEEKERS GIVE RAILROADS PROBLEM

Jefferson City, Mo., July 3.—Freight traffic over the Missouri Pacific between St. Louis and Kansas City has been rendered so hazardous to human life by men beating their way on freight trains in quest of jobs in the wheat fields that policemen have been employed at Kirkwood to put them of according to John Cannon, division superintendent.

Picked Up a Car of Men

Emmett Meyers, freight conductor on the Missouri Pacific, said that every one of his trains during the past several days has carried from twenty-five to seventy-five "harvest hands." He said the train crews could hardly do the necessary switching so fearful were they that some of the "load" would be killed.

DEMOCRATS WILL PLAN CAMPAIGN

VOTE ON FOUR AMENDMENTS

It is now assured that at least four amendments to the constitution will be voted on at the coming fall election. One amendment is proposed by the New Era association of Grand Rapids, under the initiative amendment to the constitution passed April 7, 1913.

COCAINE 'FIEND' BLAMES DOCTORS

Chicago, July 3.—Charles Powers, a victim of cocaine, tried to hang himself with his belt in a cell at the South Clark street station.

Walter Perry, the lock-up-keeper, rescued the youth. Searching Powers' pockets for possible instruments of suicide, he found a pencil-written indictment of cocaine.

This unusual statement reads: "The greatest detriment of the human race is cocaine—even if in its mildest form. It possesses power to wreck body and soul and the poor unfortunate who becomes enmeshed in its devastating power.

"The scientist know. They are afraid to tell. Responsibility lies almost at their door. I, as one of the thousands who have become addicted to the drug habit, wish to say that 90 per cent of the victims of cocaine and morphine have been made so by our surgeons and physicians.

"It is not quacks—it is our best doctors and family physicians generally that start the victim on the road to ruin. My cellmate here is a morphine fiend. He is 20 years old. He was born of respectable parents. He was hurt in a railway accident near Chillicothe, Mo. Doctors in the hospital gave him six injections of morphine. He didn't need it; he was only badly bruised in the accident, and now he has the drug habit.

"Every cent he can get right or wrong goes for morphine. He is friendless, broken body and soul, and there is no fear of death in his mind. At the age when he should be entering a business career he is on the way to hell. And he is riding a faster train than the limited on which he was injured, and the speed is ever increasing faster and faster.

"The only stop is the end of the line and that is hell. Had the doctor treated him as he should he would never know, as he does today, the nerve racking pains induced by the cravings for drugs.

"There ought to be a national law forcing a doctor to get a permit to use cocaine and morphine. This law ought to carry a penalty demanding a public accounting to a governmental bureau on such drugs as cocaine and morphine. That would check the creation of drug-fiends and end a large amount of crime."

ers of the state. Under present conditions this number amounts to a little more than 54,000.

Of the other three amendments, the first refers to the issuance of bonds by the state to pay for improvements for wagon roads. There is now no constitutional provision which can include road money issued by bonds in the $250,000 bond limit allowed to the state.

The third legislatively proposed amendment is the one giving traveling men the right to vote no matter whether they are in the state at the time of the election or not.

There have been several petitions filed for an amendment providing state-wide prohibition, but the necessary number of names has not been reached.

BRIEFS FROM OLD COUNTRY

Interesting Items From the Three Great Kingdoms of the North Selected for Scandinavians and Their Descendants.

By MARTIN W. O'BRIEN

Sweden.

The following from a New York paper will be read with interest by Swedeb-Americans and others. One of the largest coins ever struck, being 2 3/4 by 1 3/4 inches and weighing 31 pounds, has come into the possession of the American Numismatic society, at One Hundred and Fifty-sixth street and Broadway, and is now shown in one of the glass cases in the main exhibition room. The piece is of copper and its coinage value in 1659 was eight Swedish dalers—equivalent to about $5.20 American money. As a curiosity and rarity its value has now multiplied at least one hundredfold. In general appearance the coin is a rectangular ingot, with five large, round stamps punched in it, one in each corner and one in the center. Stamps were placed in the corners to prevent "clipping." Each corner stamp carries the Swedish crown in the center and the date, 1659. Around the edge is the inscription of Carolus Gustavus X, the reigning king. The center stamp states the value at $8 in silver. This coin was struck in Avesta, Sweden. While fresh from the mint it fell overboard in the harbor of Riga, Russia, from which a dredge fished it ten years ago. It came finally into the ownership of Emerson McMullin, who has presented it to the Numismatic society. Coins of this kind were called "plate money." Sweden turned them out continuously for 110 years, beginning in 1649, in the reign of Christina, daughter of Gustavus Adolphus, in denominations of eight, four, one and half daler pieces, with pieces of five and three dalers in one year. The coinage had been in progress ten years when the specimen now here was struck. In 1715 the Swedish government melted down 116 bronze cannon and made them into 86,760 plate money dalers. Such large pieces of pure copper were issued as money in order to find an outlet for the products of the Swedish copper mines without depreciating the value of the metal. All plate money is becoming rare. Daler and half-daler pieces are most often found; two and four are scarce and the eight-daler pieces are no longer to be seen in Europe except in the large museums.

For the first time since 1720 has one of Sweden's pastore been condemned to execution. Rev. C. O. Nystrom has been sentenced to death for the murder of Rev. Aastrand, his superior. The deed was inspired by revenge against Aastrand for ordering an investigation of Nystrom's conduct as a pastor. Nystrom shot Aastrand with a pistol at the latter's office and was arrested for the crime. In 1720 Rev. Brenner, a Swede, was executed on the grounds of high treason against the Swedish king, and in 1855 Rev. Anders Lindback, a Swedish pastor, accused of putting poison in the sacramental wine, committed suicide in his cell.

Dr. Peter C. Clemensen of the Chicago board of education, has completed his study of the Ling system of gymnastics in Sweden and Denmark, and will recommend its introduction in the schools of his home city. "Our present alleged physical culture," he said, "has the shortcoming of demanding expensive apparatus, consequently when a pupil leaves school he is unable to continue the exercises and profit by his school training. The Ling system utilizes every set of muscles without straining the heart and without the use of apparatus. The pupil trained in this system has a gymnasium in a few square feet of space."

The industrial situation in Sweden is not of the best, strikes being probable. Especially is this the case in the tobacco industry, where negotiations between the conflicting elements have broken off. It is possible, however, that actual strike measures may be averted until the riksdag has acted on the tobacco tax question.

The exposition at Malmo opened on schedule time May 15. The king was to have formally opened the fair, but owing to illness was unable to appear and deputized the crown prince to perform this function for him. Over 2,500 people were present in the exposition hall at the opening exercises.

Prof. Hans Bendts of Lund, one of the leading medical authorities of Sweden, is dead at his home in Lund. He was born in 1851 and graduated from Lund university, with which he later became connected as a professor. He was the author of several standard works on medical subjects.

Last month Mr. Lindgren, a young man employed in a Stockholm bank, disappeared in company with an actress, and it was discovered that he was short in his accounts the next morning of $9,000 crowns.

Norway. A week or two ago I mentioned the killing of Consul Batt of Norway on a railway train in Tunis. The murderers, it was supposed, took his life in order to rob him of his money and then threw him off the train. It is now reported that Consul Batt's murderers have been apprehended. Acting on information furnished by a station agent, the detectives started in pursuit of a party of three, two men and a woman, who were making their way to an interior village. When questioned by the officers, one of the two men suddenly drew a revolver and fired a shot at one of the detectives. The other man then fired at his companion. The other man killed the assailant. The other suspect was arrested, and although he refuses to make any statement the police are confident that he is implicated in the murder of the consul. Further details concerning the murder indicate that Consul Batt had put up a desperate fight before giving up his life. His clothes were torn and disordered and numerous wounds were found all over his body.

What will be the fate of Captain Falk and the steamer Fanny, the vessel that smuggled an enormous consignment of arms into Ireland under the very searchlights of British war vessels, is a problem discussed in Norwegian newspapers. According to the latest reports, the ship was anchored off the German coast. The captain has no clearance papers and he cannot enter any harbor without violating the international maritime laws. What will he do with his ship, is the question asked. Sooner or later Captain Falk must bring his ship into port in order to take on coal and provisions, if he wishes to continue sailing the vessel. When this is done, he will be liable to arrest. If he does not choose to run this risk, he may sink his vessel outside the international boundaries, and then trust to his boats to get to shore. Or he may contrive to dispose of the vessel to some other concern, and bring it into port under another name. Another possibility is pointed out—that Captain Falk is preparing to carry another cargo of arms to Ireland. In this event, he will have to take on coal and provisions in open sea and also his consignment of arms.

A Christiania correspondent writes that among Norway's emigrated sons who have attained fame and success in foreign lands and are this summer visiting the land of their birth are Haas P. I. Erichsen of Chile, South America, general manager of the Amelita Nitrate company of London, which conducts a vast business in Chilean fertilizer. Erichsen came to America over forty years ago as a poor immigrant, but has now attained a position of great responsibility. Erichsen was the man who a number of years ago fitted out a steamship at his own expense to search for a missing Norse ship in the southern Pacific, and discovered the entire crew marooned on a lonely isle in the Galapagos group.

Orjan Olsen's Siberian expedition left the middle part of May by the way of Stockholm and St. Petersburg. Beside Olsen himself there are three other scientists in the party, Henrik Printz, geologist; Anders K. Olsen, geologist; and Fritz Jensen, zoologist. These three men are all under twenty-six years of age.

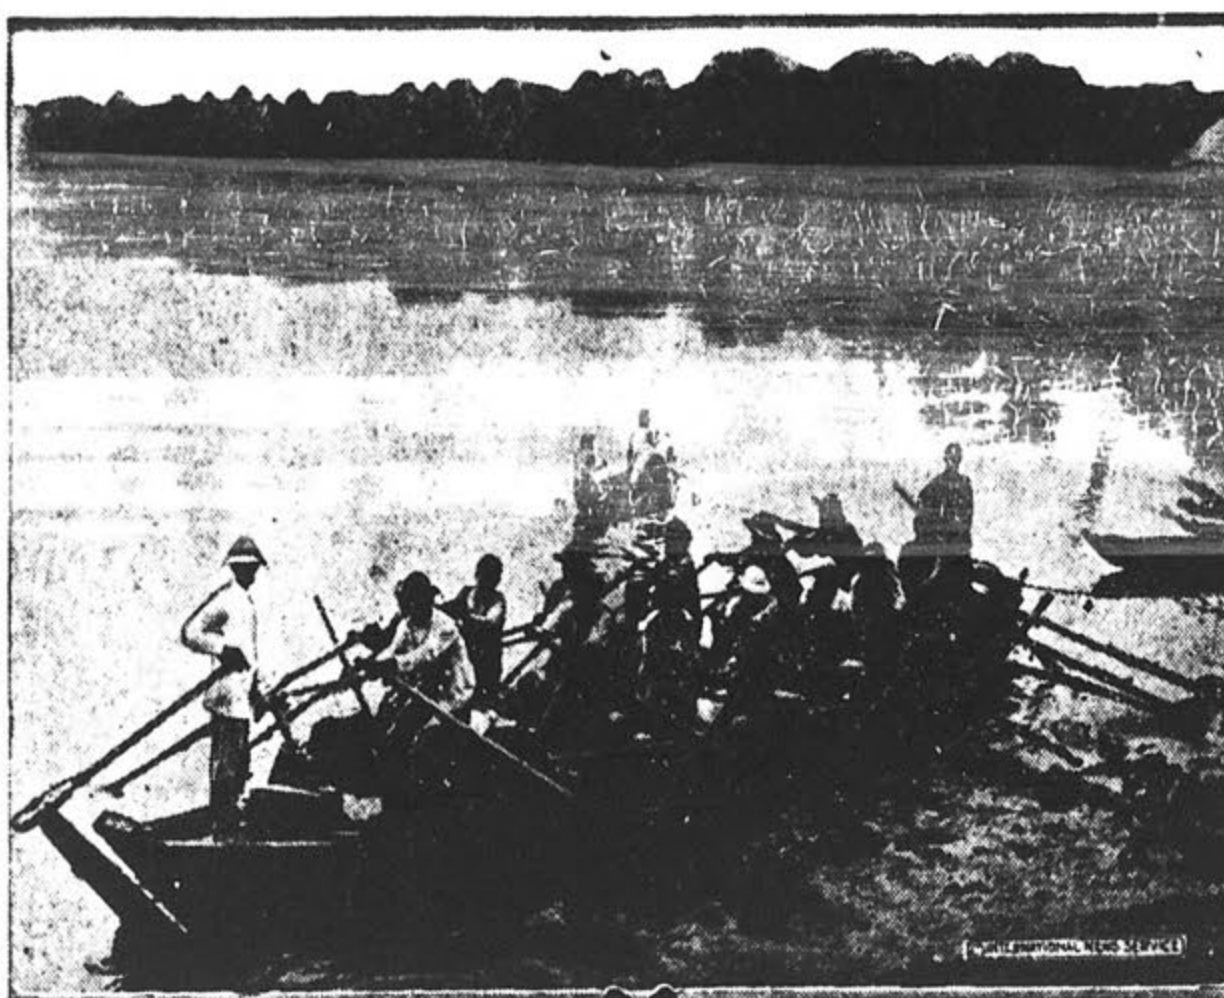

Trygve Gran, who accompanied Captain Scott on his South pole expedition, is taking a course in aviation and is planning to cross the North sea from Aberdeen, Scotland, to Stavanger, Norway. Under the most favorable circumstances it will take him at least four hours and a half to make the crossing.

Gibson's Good Points. The old man had given his son a very fair education and had taken him into his shop. The young fellow was over-vice about a great many things, but the father made no comment. One day an order came in from a customer. "I wish to goodness," exclaimed the son, "that Gibson would learn to spell."

Peace Congress in September. The twenty-first universal peace congress will be held in Vienna, September 15-19, it being the twenty-fifth anniversary of the first congress in 1849 and the hundredth since the peace of Vienna rearranged Europe and sent Napoleon to Elba. The congress will meet in the Austrian Parliament building.

Fly Doesn't Wipe His Feet. If your boy, after running about in the wet grass, comes into the house without using the door mat you are pretty likely to be cross with him. But what about the fly? He crawls about in the street or the stable yard, and with his feet laden with the filth he delights in, passes over your door mat and alights in your butter or on your plate. Not a pleasant thing to be told, but maybe you'll remember it the next time you see a fly buzzing about and will swat him.

BLOODY DEEDS DONE

Pirates, Pestilence and Storm Have Scarred Vera Cruz.

Buccaneers of the Spanish Main Have Plundered and Burned and Committed Other Atrocities Repeatedly in Ancient Port.

New Orleans.—Bloodshed is not new in Vera Cruz. In fact, no city on the continent has witnessed such devilish cruelty, such plundering, burning and ravaging, as has this place of the "True Cross." Since Cortez landed, in 1518, there has been a succession of strife and pestilence which can be paralleled in few cities in the world. Heptastoid buccaneers, in all their awful glory, have raided the port time and again; it has been a point of vantage which has called forth the lustiest fighting in the many civil wars that have swept Mexico and it has always been selected as the landing point for foreign foes, writes Paul Norton in the New Orleans Times-Democrat-Picayune.

Whenever any of the numerous pirates who preyed on the rich shipping of the Spanish main wanted to "slice the beard of the king of Spain" they would attack Vera Cruz. Lorencillo, a famous pirate of the early days, with 500 of his cutthroats, slipped by the sleeping cannoneers at the fort, surprised the town, killed thousands, outraged its women and stripped the city of its valuables. Hundreds of persons were driven into the cathedral, men, women and children, black and white, and held prisoners. When the doors were opened four days later most of the inmates were dead from suffocation.

As the gateway through which all the commerce with Spain was conducted, there always were great stores of valuable property on hand. This was true particularly just before the sailing of the galleons, which usually traveled in fleets owing to the menace of pirates. By learning of the schedule of the galleons the buccaneers generally dropped in when the supply of treasure was great. Nicolas de Agramonje, another highwayman of the deep, pillaged the town some years after the visit of Lorencillo. He enriched himself with $700,000 in silver awaiting transportation to Spain. By way of appreciation he took prisoners 300 of the citizens of the town and marooned them on the Sacrifice Islands, patches of sand not far from the coast, where they died of starvation. The anniversary of this calamity is observed by memorial services to this day. While the blood of thousands has flowed through the streets of this ill-fated port, the toll of war and violence is insignificant in comparison with the deaths that have come from pestilence.

Until 1850 the city was surrounded by a mighty wall. This great bulwark may have saved the city on a few occasions from attack, but cutting out the healthful sea breeze made it a pest hole compared to which Guayaquil is a health resort. Yellow Jack in all its terrors was never absent. Smallpox, bubonic plague and the other offspring of the dirt and squalor of the middle ages were always present. It was only in recent years that modern sewer and drainage systems were installed, which, with other sanitary precautions, has changed the place from a death-dealing focus to a health resort.

The harbor at Vera Cruz has little natural protection. Before the building of the present breakwaters the northern coast dealt the struggling city almost as severe blows as did the pirates and the diseases. Modern engineering now protects the city and gives a limited area in which the ships can anchor behind the seawall. Due to the hatred of the Spaniards, Vera Cruz once was ground to powder. At the close of Mexico's war for independence, in 1821, the Spaniards still held the fort of San Juan de

Many of Blackfeet Tribe Pay Reverent Respect to Memory of Great Man at Philadelphia.

Philadelphia, Pa.—A dozen Blackfeet Indians from the Glacier National park reservation, in Montana, visited Philadelphia recently en route home from the Shriner's convention, which they attended in Atlanta. Electric Creatures Besiege Ship in Gulf Stream, Sailors Assert on Reaching Port.

Boston.—A remarkable story is told by the crew of the British freighter Rochelle. According to stories by several of the men, the delay was due principally to electric fishes, otherwise known as torpedo fishes, which were attracted by the steel plates of the vessel, and fastened themselves by hundreds against her bottom and sides. The steamer was in the Gulf Stream, north of Cuba, when she began to slow down. The officers were unable to explain the change in the progress of the craft. Several sailors said they felt a tingling sensation about their feet and finger tips. The steamer was held back strangely. Members of the crew became alarmed. A sailor looked over the side and says it was plastered with strange-looking fishes. They were two or three thick along the port side under water. The starboard side also was covered. As the Rochelle moved north and got out of the warm waters of the stream the fishes dropped off and the vessel resumed her speed.

FOR FIRELESS COOKER

EXPERT ADVISES SOME NEW AND DELICIOUS DISHES.

How Requisites for Any Meal May Be Prepared Through the Agency of the Latest Kitchen Labor Saving Device.

Some new things which may be prepared in the fireless cooker were presented by Miss Phyllis M. Hart at the recent dinner at the Hotel Marlborough. What a success! A loaf of cracked wheat in five cups of cold water two hours. Put over flame and bring to the boiling point, add salt and let boil for three minutes, stirring constantly. Set pan into a larger one containing boiling water and cook in a fireless cooker over night. Serve with sugar and cream. Smothered Haddock.—Cut fish into fillets and season with salt, pepper, and lemon juice. Arrange fish in kettle, cover with prepared tomato soup; over this put a second layer. Place kettle in a larger one containing boiling water and let water continue to boil for three minutes. Cook with or without radiator about 45 minutes.

Roly Poly.—Remove fat, skin and bones from a loin of lamb. Remove meat from eight veal chops, arrange the eight pieces of veal, separated by a thin piece of fat salt pork, close to the lean meat of the loin. Season with salt and pepper and sprinkle with a rounding tablespoonful each of finely chopped carrot, celery and parsley. Roll as tight as possible, put over a few strips of very thin fat salt pork and fasten with a string to keep meat in shape. Dredge, roll with flour and brown in a pan placed over gas flame. Cook between two radiators two and one-half hours.

Scalloped Egg and Potato With Cheese.—Arrange alternate layers of cold sliced boiled potatoes and sliced hard boiled eggs, and on each layer of egg arrange one-half of thin sliced onion which has been parboiled for one minute. Pour over a thin sauce flavored with cheese, salt and pepper to taste. Cook over one radiator one and one-half to two hours.

String Beans With Cheese.—Remove strings by cutting entire length of each side, then cut beans into two-inch lengths. Plunge into cold water and allow them to remain until all the beans drop out, which may afterwards be discarded. Cook pods in boiling water, allowing one-quarter teaspoon of soda to two quarts of beans, for five minutes; then cook over one radiator two hours. Drain thoroughly, put in serving-dish, season with salt and cayenne, add one-half cup of graded rarebit cheese and one-quarter cup of heavy cream. Stir until well mixed, sprinkle generously over top grated Parmesan cheese and dot over with one tablespoon of soft butter. Reheat in hot oven or under gas flame.

Nut Butter.—Mix and sift two cups of bread flour, one cup of graham flour, one cup of brown sugar, two teaspoons of baking powder and one teaspoon each of soda and salt; then add two cups of sour milk and one cup of chopped or coarsely cut English walnut meat. Turn into bread pan and bake in fireless gas range with the gas on for 16 minutes and about an hour after gas is turned off.

Black Eyed Susan.—To one cup of brown bread crumbs add two and one-half cups of scalded milk and let stand until mixture cools; then add two eggs slightly beaten, one tablespoon of butter, one-half teaspoon of cinnamon and one-quarter teaspoon each of clove, nutmeg and salt. Bake between two radiators. Serve hot with sugar and cream.—Boston Transcript.

Fruit. A delightful way of serving oranges to an invalid is to press all the juice into a glass with a lemon squeezer; add pulverized sugar to taste and serve with chopped ice. If fresh fruit is denied a patient, stewed fruit may be substituted. In order to secure the very best flavor in apple sauce, which invalids will relish, wash and quarter the apples, remove the cores and stems and stew gently without paring. Then press the soft mass through a colander and beat either with or without the white of an egg until it is light and foamy, sweetening to taste.

What to Do With the Covers. Save the covers of cocoa or mustard boxes to use for cleansing frying pans and saucapans. Hammer down sharp side. Scrape with the sharp lower edge. The rounding corners of the covers fit in the round pans much better than anything you can buy for the purpose.

Regent's Punch. Three lemons, 1 pound sugar, 2 quarts pineapple juice, 1 quart very strong orange juice and 1 quart carbonated water. Served in the center of a large block of ice, hollowed out to make a bowl, it is very attractive.

Strawberry Sponge. Try this dessert: Take sponge cake, cut in slices, put preserved strawberries between slices and pour the juice over it, then cover with whipped cream and dot over the top with strawberries.

French Chef's Advice. Soup should never be salted while cooking until it has been thoroughly skimmed, as salt prevents the scum from rising.

LIKE ALL OF THEM

Harold Found Girl He Adored Differed Little From the Rest of Her Sex.

"Oh, for the days of good old-fashioned womanhood!" The exclamation sounded only amusing, coming as it did from the lips of a very modern young man. His friend on the other side of the fireplace laughed.

"I believe you were rather fond of the young women of 1850, judging from your attention to her, individually and severally." "That's just it. It's a case of safety in numbers—a vain struggle to find one out of thousands who isn't interested in fads or politics or business, or any one of a thousand other things. I prefer a frivolous woman. A woman has no business being serious about anything in the world but her home and her husband and her babies; but every girl of my acquaintance has some particular fad and goes in for it with all her might. I thought I had found my ideal in Mary Jenkins, and behold! she is a collier fancier, with kennels that are famous and a husband in the perspective not half as interesting to her as a man with a good dog that she can add to her stock. Every other girl is doing settlement work, or newspaper work, or sculpturing, or painting, or writing stories, or attending suffragette meetings. I want a wife, and I want her to be just a loving little fool woman, who will be extravagant if she feels like it, or silly, or anything she pleases, just so she loves me, and kisses me when I come home at night, and fusses about my slippers and my flannels."

His friend pondered a moment. "I know just the sort of a girl you'll like. Shall I arrange an introduction?" "Surest thing you know! What's her name?" "Peggy Perkins. Like it?" "Sounds promising. If I had a name like that I'd never change it. Do you suppose she would?" "Mrs. Harold Clark might sound better to her. You're not such an ineligible rascal, you know."

Billy's sister, Margaret Wilde, happened to be at home and idle when her brother called. They spent a merry hour conspiring, and Billy bore away with him the promised dinner invitation which Clark lost no time in accepting. If ever any one looked like her name sounded, it was the vision which greeted Harold Clark when the evening of the dinner brought them all together. Little, dark, vivacious, merry and utterly charming was his verdict after five minutes. In ten he had found her the very kindest, sweetest and most sympathetic woman he had ever met. She had an appealing way of looking into his eyes while he talked that quite won him. Here at least was a really old-fashioned girl, whose husband would be actually lord and master, not merely the nominal head of the household. Here was the woman who would always be womanly. She talked of teas and receptions and dressmakers to Margaret; of books and plays with Billy; and of art and poetry with Harold. Her views were her own, undoubtedly, but she was not opinionated, just sweetly feminine. Only one thing puzzled Harold. Billy and Margaret and Margaret's husband seemed half convulsed with laughter most of the evening, and especially when Harold began some tirade against the doings of militant suffragettes, and went on to score women who persisted in entering fields of endeavor belonging to men. Miss Perkins only smiled, however, and made no comment, and Harold was already too much in love to mind.

Weeks went by, and he became a frequent caller at Miss Perkins' home. Here she seemed the stay and comfort of her invalid mother and certainly the pet of her devoted father. Mrs. Perkins wore delightfully made and embroidered costumes. "My Peggy's work," she called them, proudly, and the house was full of flowers, books and kittens, all of them Peggy's. Only one thing worried Harold. He could never find Miss Perkins at home in daytime, and now and then her mother made vague allusions to "dear Peggy's tasks," but Clark never dared ask questions. Finally, one beautiful afternoon in early spring he met Peggy just outside the door of her home. She was dressed in a most businesslike costume, and instead of the pretty basket her arms were full of papers and documents, and she looked a bit tired, but she greeted Clark cordially, and they went into the house together. "I want you to marry me, Peggy, darling," he said, as they stood in the little drawing room odorously with early violets. "But you won't interfere with my work when we are married, will you, dear?" she asked a moment later, raising her head from his shoulder. "Visions of a sweetly charitable wife filled Harold's brain. "Certainly not, my own. But you haven't told me yet what your work is."

"Oh, I thought you knew, dear. I never talk about it out of business hours, but I am a lawyer, you know, and just now I have three big cases on that will have to have all my attention until Christmas. Will that do?" Harold gasped, but recovered himself manfully. "It's a long time to wait, dear, but I'd wait a lifetime for you. Christmas it shall be, then."—Buffalo Express.

MAJORS TO RAISE $450,000 FUND

New York, July 3.—A fund of $450,000 is being raised by the National and American league teams, according to the announcement here today, for the purpose of carrying on a bitter baseball war with the Federal league.

Each of the sixteen clubs in the major league circuits is handing in 5 per cent of the gross receipts of each game, says the report. The plan went into effect on April 14, the date of the opening of the championship season, and it was secretly adopted at the suggestion of the commission has been accumulating another big fund in the shape of 10 per cent of the world's series. In this way $189,000 has been collected, out of which the expenses of the commission have been paid, leaving a balance of about $160,000, which will be added to the new war fund.

LANSING OUT OF SOUTH MICHIGAN

Detroit, July 3.—A special to the Detroit Tribune from Lansing says: Lansing has seen its last Southern Michigan baseball game. President Frank last night announced that the club would be taken from Lansing immediately and put on the road until the franchise could be placed in some city where the fans would support the club.

"Business men who had endeavored to sell 150 season books at $10 apiece to hold the club here, reported they had been able to sell but 80 books and when President Frank was told of his over the long distance telephone he said it was all over with the Lansing club. Owner and Manager Morrissey addressed the meeting and said he had sunk as much money in the club as he could possibly afford. He said the attendance receipts had not been large enough to pay the guarantees of the visiting clubs, let alone the expenses of the home team.

"Lansing played at Battle Creek July 1 and 2. South Bend is looked for here July 3 and 4, but these two games will be transferred to South Bend and from then on the club will be on the road, filling in dates whenever possible.

"Mount Clemens and Charlotte have been mentioned as possibilities for the franchise, but nothing definite has been decided on.

"Lansing has been a member of the Southern Michigan league for seven years and did as good as break even until last year when the club became a losing proposition.

START FIGHT TO GET CHASE BACK

Buffalo, N. Y., July 3.—A motion will be made in supreme court here Monday for an order vacating the injunction granted on June 20 restraining Hal Chase, the former Chicago American league first baseman, from playing with the Buffalo Federal league were filed in the county clerk's office yesterday.

In the affidavit, which covers thirty typewritten pages, Chase seeks to show that all his contract relations with the Chicago team were lived up to and that he was a free agent when he sought employment with the Federal league.

Chase declared his salary from the New York team was reduced from $8,000 to $2,000 without previous notice and that the only notice of his transfer to the Chicago team was when he was told by the Chicago manager to join the team at Boston. He protested to Owner Farrell of New York against the ten days' clause in his contract and was told by Manager Callahan of Chicago that the clause was to be stricken out.

EXPECT $100,000 FOR RITCHIE-WELSH BOUT

London, July 3.—England is fight-mad. Bombardier Wells and Colin Bell drew a house of $300,000 for their fight on Tuesday. The two fought in the same place in which Willie Ritchie will meet Freddie Welsh next Tuesday night, and there is sure to be a record breaking house.

Promoter Cochran expects the house will run to the $100,000 mark. Cochran always has been a most conservative person and when he talks such big sums he means it. The Olympia is a mighty big place and at the prices which will be charged it will be easy to figure up to that amount if the boom in the old sport continues to thrive in England.

So far nothing has been heard about the betting. Chances are, however, that Ritchie, because of the fact that he is the holder of the world's championship, will have a little in his favor in the betting.

Odd Sport.

At the Halterophille club in Paris not long ago one Poladeau achieved a record by tearing a pack of playing cards in one pull—time, two minutes and thirty-two seconds. The events in this card-tearing contest were: Tearing the greatest possible number of cards tied together top and bottom—time allowed, three minutes; tearing a pack of 50 cards in the quickest possible time; tearing the greatest possible number of cards in four. This is a form of "sport" wherein many Frenchmen specialize. The men who enter the contests are not necessarily powerful, but they possess enormous strength in their fingers—a strength that is further developed by careful training.

SAYS LOOK OUT FOR GREEN BAY

Oshkosh Northwestern: Look out for Bobby Lynch and his conquering Baymen.

'Tis the cry of the entire Wisconsin league right now, for the Baymen from their long road trip, have won eight out of their last nine games, and are today less than one full game behind first place.

The climb of the Lynchmen has been the sensation of the season. Smiling Bob got away to an abominable start, and for the first month they all kicked his bunch around. On June 8 Green Bay was at the bottom of the percentage column, apparently down and out; today the brown-shirted Bays are in a position to strike out for first place.

How did they do it? you ask. By winning seventeen out of their last twenty-one games, an 810 pace. Lynch's great pitching staff, Joe Benz, Reggie Moran, Lefty Burnham, Deacon Scanlon and Sticks Bryant, are the key to the situation. If this widely-feared quartet had only been in the archduke's car at Sarajevo the other day!

Although the Green Bay sport is menacing the Indians' lead, there are some fans right here in town who would not be sorry to see the Bays take the lead. The sentiment here is: If we can't win, let Green Bay. For Oshkosh and Green Bay are the only two of the original six state league clubs left in the circuit and Green Bay has yet to win its first pennant in the league.

EVEN MONEY ON RITCHIE-WELSH GO

London, July 2.—One of the most interesting battles in the long and honorable history of the British prize ring is expected when Willie Ritchie the American, defends his lightweight title against Freddie Welsh at the Olympia stadium in this city next Tuesday night.

Interest in this conflict is as keen, if not more so, than that which was felt in the Johnson-Moran championship battle in Paris last Saturday because so many persons suspected that the Paris fight had been "framed."

Ritchie and Welsh are evenly matched and reports from their respective training quarters today said that both are in the pink of condition. Each is in shape for the battle of his life, and when they hop into the ring each will carry a grudge in his heart that he will attempt to settle in the old-fashioned way.

The betting odds are shifting without favoring either man very much. It is believed that, as the fight grows nearer, most of the wagers will be made at even money. Americans are favoring Ritchie, not alone through motives of patriotism, but because they believe he is the better man. On the other hand, the British backers of Welsh are equally confident of his prowess.

BALTIMORE CLUB TO BE CHANGED

Richmond, Va., July 3.—A deal was closed here last night contingent upon the sanction of the International and Virginia leagues whereby the Baltimore team in the International Baseball league will be transferred to Richmond. Money has been raised by the local capitalists backing the project to buy the Richmond franchise in the Virginia league and transfer it to Lynchburg, now without professional baseball.

A meeting of the Virginia league will be held here today, and if the offer is accepted the Baltimore team is expected to play its first game here on Saturday. Jack Dunn, owner and manager of the Baltimore team, left last night for New York to attend a meeting of the International league, which he expects to approve the transfer.

Cincinnati, O., July 3.—August Herrmann, chairman of the National Baseball commission, when informed here today of Federal League President Gilmore's statement that the Sherman anti-trust law might be used against organized baseball, said:

"The Federal league leaders probably have forgotten that we invited investigation along that line, and did so long before the present condition was thought of. We would welcome such an investigation at any time. On the other hand we are even now contemplating action against the Federal league along the line of conspiracy because of their actions toward our players who are under contract. It is possible that such a course will be taken shortly.

"We are not restraining Marans and Chase from playing, but are trying to get these men to play. It is the Federal league who are keeping them from playing, if any one is."

Alvin Pearson has returned from Iron Mountain to visit at his home in the city.

JAP INVASION FEARED BY SOME

Lansing, Mich., July 3.—The announcement that 400 Japanese laborers from California were coming to locate in Alger county in this state started an anti-alien land law agitation here and it is reported that an attempt will be made at the next session of the legislature to enact an anti-alien law similar to the one in California. The Japanese will engage in vegetable farming.

Lansing, Mich., July 3.—An anti-Japanese movement, backed by the state agricultural authorities and state labor organizations, burst here today following the confirmation of reports that a colony of 400 Japanese farmers will be established in Alger county in the Upper Peninsula.

Secretary A. M. Brown of the state board of agriculture, sees great danger to Michigan farmers in the impending Japanese invasion and he will lead a fight to bar the Japanese from the state.

Michigan labor organizations will also join the anti-alien campaign.

This statement was made by President O. L. Hildebrandt, of the Michigan farmers in the impending Japanese invasion and he will lead a fight to bar the Japanese from the state.

Michigan labor organizations will also join the anti-alien campaign.

This statement was made by President O. L. Hildebrandt, of the Michigan federation of Typographical unions. He declared that every labor body in the state would be warned of the threatened "invasion" and would be asked to lend support to the campaign to stop the coming of the Japanese, or, if this fails, to back the legislature in putting through a law which will enable the state authorities to cope with the situation.

Letters have also been sent out from Lansing asking the support of farmers' clubs and commercial and business associations.

Opponents of the Japanese colonization plan say the fight will be carried to a finish.

The announcement that a colony of Japanese was to be located in Alger county, was made several weeks ago. The fact became known when arrangements were made with immigration officials for their entry into the United States via the Soo. It is not yet known here or in Alger county as to who is responsible for their coming, but it is believed to be either a railroad company or one of the big land companies operating out of St. Paul. Two big St. Paul companies own land in Alger and Luce counties. The land is largely swamp but parts have been drained and work on other large sections is now under way. One company is digging a ditch 15 miles long that in parts it will be more than 30 feet wide it is said. Much of this land is excellent for all kinds of garden truck. So it is said to be peaty, in fact there are stretches of excellent peat, reports say.

The Japs are to raise truck and produce it is announced.

HOW NATIONALITIES CARRY THEIR MONEY

It is interesting to observe how men of different nationalities carry money on their persons.

The Englishman carries gold, silver and copper all loose in his trouser pocket, pulls out a handful of the mixture in an opulent way and selects the coin he needs.

The American carries his money in pretty much the same way, although the "wallet" has always been a favorite of perhaps too liberal tendencies are wont to say that the carrying of a pocket book is indicative of a "tight" disposition on the part of the owner. Then, too, there are those who declare that a pocket book is more easily lost than a roll of bills.

The Frenchman makes use of a leather purse with no distinguishing characteristics, but the German employs one gaily embroidered in silks by the fair hands of some Lotchen.

Many South Americans carry their dollars in a belt, with cunningly devised pockets to baffle the would be thief. Some of these belts are quite expensive.

The Italian of the poorer class ties his little fortune in a gaily colored handkerchief, secure with many knots which he secretes in some mysterious manner in his clothes.

A similar course is followed by the Spaniard, but the lower-class Russian evinces a preference for his boots or the lining of his clothes as a hiding place for his money.—Washington Star.

Standing Up and Sitting Up.
Lady de Bathe (Mrs. Langtry) once made the piquant remark that she was "a foe to dissipation or anything of that kind, and I would urge every girl to say 'No' to the dissipated man who would marry her. The man a girl is obliged to stand up for before marriage, she will have to sit up for afterward."

You see it first in The Press.

Bell System

It is seldom that a business man, no matter how large his interests may be, is too busy to talk to the telephone caller.

Bell Service not only insures an interview in nearly every case, but saves the time of a personal visit.

The Bell telephone is the magic key to every business door.

"GOD HELP WIS. BANKS" PRES. IS A FAILURE AS LAWYER, ADMITS IT

Madison, Wis., July 3.—They have thrown the state open to the Lorimers and the Mundays and others of their kind.

This was the comment of Commissioner of Banking A. E. Kuoit today on the action of the referee board in overruling his denial of a charter for a new bank at Mosinee. The board consists of the governor, attorney general and secretary of state. It decided that the law would be unconstitutional as a wrongful delegation of legislative power.

"God help the banking business in Wisconsin now," added Mr. Kuoit with no little warmth. "Here I have some fifteen or twenty applications for new banks all of which should be denied. But I can't deny them now under this decision. I must grant charters to all. We have tried hard to make the Wisconsin banking laws the best in the country and now find our efforts set at naught by this decision.

"If it is true that politics played a part in this matter, I suppose the people must stand for it, as they have had to do in Illinois these many years."

Arthur W. Pehn of Wausau, whom Governor McGovern appointed member first of the board of agriculture and then of the Panama-Pacific exposition commission, was attorney for the men promoting the new bank. Mr. Kuoit, claims one of the promoters was a bankrupt who tried to hide his assets, and that another has several judgments against him copies of which the commissioner holds.

Atlanta, Ga., July 3.—President Wilson admits he was not a success during the year he practiced law in Atlanta. The President was a member of a law firm here in 1882. He made his confession of failure in a letter to P. C. McEluff, an Atlanta lawyer, who read it before the Georgia Bar Association. In his letter President Wilson said in part:

"After graduating from Princeton I went for a year and three months to the law school at the University of Virginia. My health broke down and I went to Atlanta in May, 1882, and was very soon thereafter admitted to the bar of Georgia by Judge Hillier. I formed a law partnership with Edward Ireland Renick. We struggled with indifferent success to attract attention and gain a little law practice. "This is practically all there is to tell, because I made up my mind during the year I was in Atlanta that I could best accomplish the objects I had in view in life by returning to the teaching of law and politics."

Land-Owning Peers.
It is stated that there is not a member of the British house of lords who does not own one thousand or more acres. None of the land owners is a real farmer, but all rent their land in small lots, generally on long leases, to men who make the most of it. It is not uncommon for one family to live on a rented farm for more than a hundred years.

INTEREST AWAKENED

Of the increased attention being bestowed upon Cloverland by officials of the Michigan Agricultural college, the Mining Journal of Marquette says editorially:

The upper peninsula counties can be grateful for the increased attention they are receiving from the state agricultural board and the experts of the Agricultural college. For years the board apparently grudged every dollar that it permitted to go north of the straits, and the most tangible evidence of its expenditures in this region was the inadequately supported state experiment farm at Chatham.

The protests of the upper peninsula press, calling attention to the great disproportion between the expenditures in this district and the amount paid in taxes by the U. P. counties for the furtherance of agricultural work, along with the efforts of the Upper Peninsula Development bureau, however, finally bore fruit and now there is no question that the state board and the Agricultural college realize that the upper peninsula is on the map.

From the college there are now detailed to the district three experts who will make a special study of potato culture. They will counsel the farmers wisely on the subject of seed. They will watch for potato diseases, and will be prepared to stamp them out before they have done much damage, and they will suggest how greater returns from the crop can be obtained by care in marketing. In this work they will back up and support effort by the Development bureau along similar lines.

The increased recognition being given the upper peninsula by the state board and the Agricultural college is gratefully noted for there can be no question of its ultimate effect in making agricultural in the district both more general and more profitable. And as the Agricultural college is brought more and more back to agriculture the value of its work in this district will increase.

REPORTS ARE ENCOURAGING

Reports from the trade centers in the East indicates a considerable improvement in the iron and steel industry the past week. A tendency to increase the active mill capacity is noted in the Chicago and Pittsburg districts.

It is intimated that orders for finished steel product placed with the mills this month were about 50 per cent larger than during May. The bulk of the business is for July shipment. As a result the plants are operating at around 65 per cent capacity or 5 per cent better than thirty days ago.

Orders placed for structural steel have shown a slight betterment, and the buying of rails and equipment by the railroads has also been better during the last few days. Car orders passed out during the first half of the year are estimated to have aggregated 60,000 cars, which is considered gratifying in view of the fact that all the transportation companies have been endeavoring to hold everything down to the lowest notch pending a decision by the interstate commerce commission in the rate case. The bumper winter wheat crop, however, forced the roads to make efforts to place themselves in shape to handle it.

The mills of the Republic Steel company at Youngstown, Pa., are working on an increased basis this week, with sufficient orders in hand to assure operations on that basis for some time ahead.

Three additional departments have been placed in operation at the Youngstown Sheet & Tube company's. Nearly all the tube mills and the entire fourteen sheet mills are reported to be in commission there. For the first time in many months the Farrell tin plate mill at Sharon is working full capacity. Up till the present it had been running four days a week. The lower mill of the American Sheet & Tin plate company at New Kensington, Pa., has started working full time for the summer and the company's upper plant is expected to be placed on a capacity operating basis within the next couple of weeks.

The market in steel products is said to be steadier as a whole than in several months back. It is regarded as significant that quotations for forward delivery are based higher than those for prompt shipment. In general an advance of $1 a ton is being asked on third quarter contracts and $2 on fourth quarter delivery.

AT THE ROYAL HOLD FUNERAL OF YOUNG BUSINESSMAN HERE TODAY

If you would see a delightful picture, go see Miss Pickford in "Caprice" at the Royal Theater, Monday matinee and night. In the introduction we are given a diamond in the rough. At the conclusion we see the polished gem. For ever facet in the stone Little Mary gives a new definition of caprice. Mercy is a child of moods—we laugh with her, and as suddenly check ourselves as we see the cloud pass over her face. Through out the four parts it seem as if the hearstrings are under the influence of a hair-trigger control.
