

The MAID of the FOREST

By RANDALL PARRISH
ILLUSTRATED BY HENRY HOWLAND

SYNOPSIS.

Joseph Hayward, an ensign in the United States army, on his way to Fort Harmer, meets Simon Girty, a renegade whose name has been connected with all manner of atrocities. He is accompanied by a scout named Brady and a private soldier, Sandusky, who professes to recognize him, although he has no recollection of ever having seen her before. Hayward volunteers to carry a message for Harmer to Sandusky, where Hamilton is stationed. The northwest Indian tribes are ready for war and are only held back by the refusal of the friendly Wyandots to join. The latter are demanding the return of Wa-pa-tah, a religious teacher, whom they believe to be a prisoner. Hayward's mission is to assure the Wyandots that the man is not held by the soldiers. Here he meets Hayward and leaves him. She tells him that she is a quarter-blood Wyandot and a missionary among the Indians. She is in search of her father, she insists that she has seen Hayward before, but in a British uniform. Hayward refuses her request and starts for the north accompanied by a scout named Brady and a private soldier. They come on the trail of a war party and to escape from the Indians take shelter in a hut on an island. Hayward finds a murdered man in the hut. It proves to be Raoul D'Auray, a former French officer who is called by the Wyandots "white chief." He appears and Hayward is puzzled by his insistence that they have met before. He recognizes the murdered man as his father, who was known among the Indians as Wa-pa-tah. Brady reports seeing a band of marauding Indians in the vicinity and with the Simon Girty, Brady's evidence convinces the girl that there is a British officer by the name of Hayward, who resembles the American. They find escape from the island out. Reconnitering around the cabin at night Hayward discovers a white man in a British uniform and leaves him in the cellar of the cabin. Hayward discovers a half-breed cowering in the cellar. They engage in a fierce fight which ends when the negro accidentally butts his brains out against the low roof of the cellar.

I saw him now clearly, and he must have got his first fair glimpse of me, for he stared at my face in startled surprise that, for the moment, held him dumb. It was like looking at my own reflection in a glass—the eyes, the hair, the nose, the contour of the face, the massive figure, all alike the counterpart of my own. I would not have believed, except for the witness of my own eyes, that such similarity was possible. Even though fortified with sudden impression that this was the man for whom mademoiselle had mistaken me, the actual resemblance was so startling, as to leave me voiceless. We would have passed for each other anywhere, and yet as I stared at him, meeting his eyes fairly, I perceived a difference, faint, elusive, yet noticeable enough—his skin showed marks of disintegration; there was a peculiar insolent sneer to his mouth, and he must be older than I by five years. My mind seemed to grip all this in a flash, before his voice broke the silence.

CHAPTER XVI.

I held a prisoner. He dropped back against the wall, but much of my old strength had returned, and I remained standing, leaning on my rifle. The man continued to stare up at me as if half doubting his own eyesight.

of you there at the entrance, and sang out I don't even feel certain who I am, let alone what I may have been up to."

CHAPTER XVII.

"No, no! There was but one way of doing that, and it chances I possess a dislike for Indian blood. I mean the Wyandots to our scheme. 'T was Hamilton's plan, that I suggest to her a visit to the Wabash tribes, for she was ready for any sacrifice to spread her faith among the red-skins. Ay! and by good luck the scheme worked."

CHAPTER XVIII.

"I care nothing for the excuse. There was no war, and it was murder. Don't call me friend! I am no friend of yours. Though you may be of my own blood, of my own name, the act was murder—foul, treacherous murder. Yes! I wish I had left you to rot there in that hole."

CHAPTER XIX.

"I did not," he burst forth. "I did not even know he was dead. I am not afraid of you, or your threats, but I will tell you what occurred here. I'm ready enough, as you will discover yet, to answer for whatever I do, but I am not going to bear the blame for the dastard act of another. I was friendly enough with D'Auray, even if I did seek to trick him in this matter. There was no intent to take his life."

CHAPTER XX.

"I held him prisoner here," he said sulkily, "although there was no violence or threat. The man did not even realize he was under guard, yet I saw to it that he retained no arms, and was never out of my sight. 'T was my orders to hold him quiet until I had my message from Hamilton. He suspected nothing, and there was no trouble; not so much as a word of controversy between us. Once a day I made circuit of the island to assure myself we were alone. Occasionally he went with me, but the last time I left him in the cabin asleep. It was dusk when I returned; I had seen nothing suspicious, and was careless. I remember approaching the rear door, without thought of danger. I must have passed the opening of the cave here, when suddenly I was struck down from behind. I saw nothing, heard nothing of my assailant. When I returned to consciousness I was lying here. That is all."

He discovered the entrance to the tunnel, and dragged you into it, thinking to escape himself. To make sure you were he crept into the cabin, and recovered your jacket—you left it there, didn't you?"

CHAPTER XXI.

"I had finished, where you can land a job most suitable to your peculiar talents. This fellow, Hagan, who is playing 'Julius Caesar' at the Grand Opera house, is shy a couple of centurions."

gling his long legs above the water while he watched the afternoon shadows play hide-and-seek among the spars of the fishing fleet at the next wharf.

His bullet-shaped head was crowned with an aureole of fiery red hair; his protruding jaw gave the impression of dogged determination; but, to offset this, his watery blue eyes, one of which had a decided cast, roved restlessly here and there with an air of melancholy indecision.

"Three weeks it was jobless, an' at the end of that time, what with tollin' not nor spinnin', I found myself facin' the terrible possibility of a personal famine in the midst of plenty."

PROFITABLE CHIFFER

Oh, the world's a dreary, dismal place. When things are going wrong, No beauty brightens any face, No gladness any song.

Oh, the world is full of loveliness. When things are going right, Each wisp of hair's a silken tress, And every scene is bright;

Oh, glad the greetings that we get. When we have cause to smile, So why not cease to frown or fret, And cling to pleasing glee?

Had His Honor Guessing. "Judge," said the dance hall hero as he led the eager tangoist into the hall of justice, "we want you to do us a little favor, see? Here's ten bones, and if it ain't enough, spiel, see? Me and the lady wants a quiet little wedding. 'Can you hand it to us?'"

Undying Hatred. "I hate that man!" "Why?" "Because he pittes me."

Ground and Lofly. A pretty girl In fluffs and lace, A hammock in A shady place.

Too Commonplace. "What's your act?" asked the vaudeville manager. "I have trained a couple of apes to dance the tango. It's a great novelty and ought to go big."

No Hope for Them. "Do you agree with the professor who says women get the worst of it in this world?" "I do, but how are we going to change the situation as long as they will not learn to quit stepping off backward from moving cars?"

Plain Enough. "I thought you said you had gone in for light housekeeping?" "We have. 'Can't you see that it is necessary to keep the gas burning or the electric lights going here all the time?'"

THE WORLD FILM CORPORATION Presents In Search of the Castaways

From the Celebrated Novel "The Children of Captain Grant" by Jules Verne Special Feature in Five Reels Jules Verne is a name to conjure with. It stands for that school of prophetic scientific fantasy to which the world is indebted for the inspiration that has led to so many modern inventions. To few writers indeed is it given to fascinate old and young alike, to be all things to all men. Of this rare type the author, Jules Verne is master. For old and young alike his writings have an irresistible charm and appeal. They have been translated into every civilized tongue, and the name of Jules Verne is a household word all the world over. In filming "In Search of the Castaways" the spectator is carried from South America to Australia, thence on to New Zealand, and through a series of bewildering and exciting events. Incident is piled upon incident, in a wealth of variety that is almost staggering, and the incidents are such that are dear to the hearts of all sorts and conditions of picture goers, because they are full of intelligent excitement. They provoke thought just as surely as they fire the imagination; they are as healthy as they are striking. The narrative follows the book very closely and is a masterpiece of the film art.

Ribble of Minneapolis are visiting in the city with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Hector Fish. SISTER'S MURDER THEIR BROTHER Sterling, Ill., July 13.—Emanuel Byers was shot and killed in his hay field today by his sisters, Mrs. Leo Hutton and Miss Lillian Byers. Each woman, it is charged, fired two shots from the same revolver, and leaving their brother lying on the stubble, turned without a word and went to the house of a neighbor, where they were arrested. Ill-feeling among the three, the children of David Byers, a wealthy land owner, has been common knowledge for years. There was a quarrel recently over the calling of a doctor for the aged father. Byers, who was forty-five years old, was making hay on his farm four miles north of here with his son Merrill and a hired hand. According to these two witnesses, the sisters appeared at the field and called to their brother. When he was almost to the fence, Mrs. Hutton took a revolver from the folds of her dress and fired twice. She handed the weapon to her sister, the witnesses said, and Miss Byers then fired two more shots. All of the bullets hit their mark, but before he fell Byers threw his pitchfork at the two, the handle striking Mrs. Hutton in the mouth. The sisters were found by the sheriff at a farm a mile down the road from where the shooting occurred. They gave him the revolver but would say nothing. They were arraigned tonight before a justice of the peace, and held to the grand jury. Byers is survived by a widow and seven children. SEALED BIDS OPENED FOR IMPROVEMENTS TO SCHOOLS. The sealed bids for the plumbing, decorating and carpenter work on the different school buildings of the city were opened Saturday and S. C. Stille was awarded the plumbing contract; F. E. Peterson and Company, decorating Franklin school; Richard Aronson, decorating Jefferson school B. Ronnenberg, painting and decorating at the Barr and Washington schools and the carpenter work contract for all of the buildings was let to Pauline & Burke.
