CONCERTS ARE BEING URGED BY CITIZENS

Interviews Secured from Prominent Citizens of City Show Desire for Music

MANY IDEAS GIVEN

Scores of Different Thoughts Blended Into One Public View Is The Result.

Indicative of the general demand for the continuation of the Sunday afternoon band concerts at the City park, by the people of the city of Escanaba, are the interviews secured by the Press yesterday with former mayors of the city and heads of the chief civic organizations of the city. No more satisfying evidence that the general will of the people is for the continuation of the Sunday concerts than the following interviews, secured from people who are and have been closely connected with the city's welfare during the past decade.

The interviews are from residents of every section of the city and given in their own language and it is believed that the feeling of the entire city is voiced therein. No councilman has been criticized or praised in the interviews but merely the desire of the population is given. The concerts on Sunday afternoon have already advertised the city of Escanaba to a large degree. One of the first band directors in the United States conducts the local band. Expert musicians have been brought here from outside. The business men have freely and gladly supported the band but the city council has refused to allow the bill of the band for Sunday afternoon concerts. Is the band to fall into deterioration now, after it has been fostered by the business men of the city? The solution to this problem lies in the hands of the aldermen of the city and will probably receive their decision at the next council meeting.

The interviews follow: Of the Sunday band concerts at the City Park, Cheever Buckbee, president of the Escanaba Business Men's Association said: "It would be a shame to discontinue the public band concerts now being held at the City Park. Traveling men who Sunday here attend these concerts and talk of them wherever they go. The public band concerts are advertising Escanaba more than almost anything the city has ever done.

I would offer a suggestion, that in as much as a large population chiefly composed of workmen living in the north part of the city, known as North Escanaba, the City Council should not only continue the present band concerts but should hire the band at least once every month to play either on a Sunday or some week day evening in North Escanaba.

The officials of the Business Men's Association have received some very flattering comments on the public concerts being given here. Since the action of the City council in tabling the bill for these concerts, the action of the city council has been freely commented on. The Soo, Iron Mountain, Norway and Upper Michigan paper's comments do not help Escanaba. There is nothing commercial in these band concerts and there should not be anything commercial. Escanaba has the finest park of any city in Upper Michigan, and the city council and the people in general should realize this fact and make the utmost use of it."

CHEEVER BUCKBEE, President Business Men's Association.

Mrs. C. E. Andrews, president of the Woman's Club says: "One of the most attractive features of the peoples enjoyment of the City Park has been the Sunday band concerts, recently instituted. These have drawn their audiences from all parts of the city and have been thoroughly enjoyable, both in the pleasing productions rendered by the band itself and the quiet orderly attitude of the listeners. If there must be economy, let it not be in civic music. By all means let us encourage the band."

MRS. C. E. ANDREWS, Ex-Mayor Dr. W. A. LeMire, when approached, gave out the following interview: "My opinion is that the band concerts at the City Park should not be discontinued but I believe, too, that a concert of the same nature should be provided for the residents

A NIECE IS SOUGHT

(Special to the Press.)

Mineola, July 15.—The grand jury from which two members withdrew because of their friendship for the Carman family, resumed today its deliberations in the case of Mrs. Florence Carman, held in jail for the murder of Mrs. Louis Bailey in the office of Dr. Carman of Freeport. It is expected that the jury will complete its work today. A subpoena has been issued for Mrs. Ellen Corby, a niece of Carman's. It is understood that she is one of the two women sought since the murder, as having been in the doctor's waiting room and who fled when he heard the shot.

It was learned today that Celia Coleman, Carman's negro maid, told the grand jury yesterday that Mrs. Carman hurried through the kitchen from the back yard immediately after the shot that killed Mrs. Bailey. The maid, it is understood, said that Mrs. Carman wore a kimona at the time. Mrs. Carman herself has said she wore a kimona but insisted she was in her bedroom.

SOCIALISTS HAVE TICKET

For the first time in the history of Delta county, Socialists of this county are to have a complete ticket of candidates for county offices in the field for the fall election. Nominations petitions for a complete list of candidates were filed at the office of County Clerk John A. Semer yesterday.

The nominees of the Socialist party are: Elias Ahola, Rock, sheriff; Hugh Crawford, Escanaba, county clerk; Sigler Swenson, Gladstone, treasurer; August Olson, Gladstone, register of deeds; Charles Roberg, Escanaba, drain commissioner and John Maki, Rock and Claus Stroved, Escanaba, coroners.

HARRY BICHLER TELLS HIS STORY

Harry Bichler, of Groos, who was severely bruised in a collision between his motorcycle and an auto driven by O. Charbonneau, of Flat Rock, yesterday denied that he assumed all of the blame for the accident. "I was riding back of Mr. Charbonneau's car for fully a quarter of a mile and did not know who was the driver," said Mr. Bichler yesterday. "I whistled for him to give me a part of the road to pass and he turned over to the left instead of the right as he should have done. I know that I could not pass him on the right but he kept to the left side of the road and as I had no thought that the machine was to turn into the Charbonneau place, I attempted to pass at the entrance to that place. Just then the machine turned into the place and caught me. I was thrown and the auto caught me and dragged me for a considerable distance, the driver apparently becoming confused and failing to put on his brakes immediately."

Mr. and Mrs. Herman Salinsky and family left yesterday for an auto trip to Chicago.

Mrs. August Jacob of Ishpeming is visiting with friends in the city.

of the west portion of the city, as many workmen make their homes there who are unable to go to the bay shore to listen to the music on Sundays. I believe that the Escanaba Military band is one of the biggest "ads" the city has ever possessed and I believe everyone, rich and poor alike should boost for its continuance."

DR. W. A. LEMIRE, Ex-Mayor.

When asked yesterday whether or not he was in favor of the Sunday band concerts at the City Park, Ex-Mayor John S. Lindsay said: "Yes, I am decidedly in favor of the Sunday band concerts at the City Park and if I were mayor, I would urge the council to endorse such. In the past the city has appropriated money for celebration and other things and I see no reason why a band cannot be paid on the same basis for Sunday concerts. The business men of the city have surely done their share toward supporting the band and the few cents that it will add to the taxes of the taxpaying public should only show the public spiritedness of the city at large."

SAW BIG ROUND UP

During his recent trip through the west George M. Mashek, of this city, enjoyed the privilege of witnessing a big "Round Up" program at Miles City, Mont., on July 4. The contests that made up the program were typical of frontier life and attracted hundreds of visitors to Miles City from a wide radius of territory.

W. F. Raven, field agent for the Michigan State Agricultural College in the peninsula, who was commissioned by Mr. Mashek to purchase two carloads of sheep to place on his Cornell farm, was unable to find sheep of proper grade and age either for Mr. Mashek or other peninsula men who had contracted for sheep to place on Cloverland pasture. It was found that all of the sheep of the grade and age wanted are now being grazed in the mountains where feed is still plentiful because of an exceptionally heavy rain fall throughout the spring weeks. Later sheep such as are wanted by the peninsula men will be available and a Miles City stock commission merchant will purchase the number wanted for this district.

SEE GAME AT ELKS' PICNIC

The main topic of conversation in baseball circles last night was the game today between Allos All Stars and Byrns Cardinals at Maywood. The only material difference between a regular baseball game and the one of today is that the contest today will be staged with a soft ball.

"Buck" Allo will do the twirling for his team and while Allo lays claim that "Con" Driscoll is to do the receiving for him, Byrns also lays claim to this man Driscoll. As a result Driscoll last night stated that he would play with the team that offered him the most money. Just who Byrns will pitch is yet a question but there is sure to be a nigger in the fence somewhere.

GLADSTONE WOMAN DIED LAST NIGHT

After being ill for more than a year Mrs. C. J. Galbreath of Gladstone passed away at the St. Francis hospital here last evening at 9 o'clock. Although the woman had been ill for more than a year, her condition was not serious until a few days ago when she was brought to the hospital here where she submitted to a surgical operation.

Immediately following the death the body was removed to the undertaking parlors of J. A. Allo from where the remains will probably be shipped to the woman's former home at Traverse City. Mrs. Galbreath is survived by her husband, five daughters and one son. The daughters are: Mrs. Albert Ziegler, Traverse City; Mrs. Wm. Cummings, Portland, Ore.; Mrs. Julius Thener, Soo, Ont.; Mrs. W. D. Nucomb, Detroit and Miss Nellie Galbreath, Gladstone. The son is A. N. Seeley of Gladstone.

CANTILLON SURPRISED BY THREE OF HIS PLAYERS

Minneapolis, Minn., July 15.—Manager Joe Cantillon of the Millers yesterday caused a shakeup in the makeup of the Minneapolis club. Peever over the poor showing of the club the past week and the failure of Otis Clymer to join the squad as ordered, Joe yesterday suspended Clymer indefinitely without pay for failing to report as ordered. Pitchers Jack Gilligan and Bill Case felt the wrath of the doctored pitcher and they, too, were suspended. Gilligan and Case left for Columbus for Minneapolis last night. Gilligan was instructed to get in condition before he attempted to pitch again, while Case will be sent to the Fargo club of the Northern league.

Mrs. B. D. Stebbins of LaBranche, is in the city visiting with her daughter, Miss Annabelle Stebbins.

Mrs. S. W. Kirstin of Milwaukee is in the city visiting with friends and relatives.

John Dillon, known as the youngest old traveling salesman to make this territory, is in the city on business.

HUERTA WILL RECEIVE AID FROM POWERS

U. S. Soldiers and British and English Marines May be Rushed to Mexico City

HUERTA ABDICATES

Resignation of Mexico's Provisional President Filed With Congress. Constitutionalists Not Satisfied.

(Special to the Press.)

Washington, D. C., July 15.—American troops with marines from British, German and other foreign ships at Vera Cruz will be rushed to Mexico City to protect the capital from looting and rioting what threatens to follow the abdication of Huerta—the moment such a step becomes necessary. It became known today, though not officially confirmed, that Huerta's object in repairing the railroad between Vera Cruz and Mexico City was not for the purpose of getting himself and family to safety, but to get the American and other forces into the capital to preserve order and to protect the city from the excesses of the victorious constitutionalists.

The call for these troops will come from the new President, Carbajal, when the situation becomes threatening.

It remains to be seen whether the abdication of Huerta and the transfer of authority to Carbajal, will bring order out of chaos and result in the termination of the civil war in the Mexican republic. There is no assurance that the constitutionalists will accept Carbajal as president of Mexico. On the contrary the constitutionalists have maintained repeatedly that they will not recognize any person or form of government which derives its authority from Huerta. Carbajal is plainly in this class. Under the circumstances it appears that the only way the Carbajal government can be maintained is for the United States and other powers to send armed forces to the capital to check the advance of the constitutionalists and compel them to accept the situation.

Whether this will be done depends on the administration. President Wilson's entire ambition has been for the elimination of Huerta personally. It is now for him to determine whether the man to whom Huerta has turned over the reins of government should also be eliminated or supported, or whether the way shall be left open for the constitutionalist to enter the capital and take over the authority of government by sheer force of arms.

(Special to the Press.)

Mexico City, July 15.—President Huerta sent his resignation to congress this afternoon. With the announcement of his withdrawal from Mexican affairs, the dictator sent a statement declaring that in abdicating he had taken no thought of his personal fortunes or safety but had decided to quit through motives of patriotism. Amid cries of "Viva Huerta" the resignation was read and referred to a committee. Francisco Carbajal, foreign minister, is prepared to take the oath as provisional president whenever President Huerta's resignation should be acted upon.

(Special to the Press.)

Juarez, Mexico, July 15.—"The resignation of Huerta and the naming of Carbajal as president will not stop the war. Carbajal won't do," declared General Villa here today. "We must make our victory complete," he continued. "My men now are getting ready for an advance and Huerta's resignation will not stop them. I think you will find that Huerta intends to take the field. The war has just begun."

(Special to the Press.)

Mazatlan, Mex., July 14.—(Wireless to San Diego)—Insurgents are sweeping the Pacific coast of Mexico. Evacuations, armistices, and exchange of prisoners everywhere are reported by Admiral Howard, commanding the American fleet. Indications are that within a week the Federals will be in possession of only Mazatlan and Salina Cruz among important garrisoned seaports at Santa Rosalia and a mining port on the outer coast of lower California. The Federals and Constitutionalists held a conference yesterday and decided to

PREMONITION DISREGARDED

Disregarding a premonition that came to him yesterday morning, Archie Ashland, 35 years, went to his work at Wells yesterday morning. Shortly after 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon a heavy log toppled from a car and caught Ashland on the head crushing him to the ground. Other logs fell from the car upon the victim's body, crushing out the last spark of life. Although Dr. A. S. Kitchin was summoned immediately, no sign of life could be detected and it was found that the unfortunate man's backbone had been crushed, causing almost instant death.

According to a story told by Mrs. Ashland last night, when her husband arose yesterday morning, he told her that he felt that he should not go to work. Twice before he left the family home on Murray avenue he mentioned the fact that something seemed to tell him that he should not go to work, but finally he decided that his family needed the day's wages and he went to Wells, where for several years he had been employed in unloading logs from the cars. He worked through the morning without incident, but shortly after beginning work in the afternoon the accident occurred that cost a life.

After Coroner A. J. Carlson had been summoned to the scene the body was removed to the undertaking rooms of J. A. Allo, where it was prepared for burial and this morning will be taken to the home of James Ashland, a brother at 306 North Jennie street.

When the accident occurred Mrs. Ashland was spending the afternoon with friends and her whereabouts could not be learned until late in the afternoon to tell her of the death of her husband.

Mr. Ashland is survived by his wife and one son, together with his mother, who resides at Brampton and four brothers and four sisters.

The body of the unfortunate man will lie in state at the home of his brother until the hour of the funeral, which will be held on Saturday.

COMMITTEES APPOINTED

President W. A. LeMire of the Board of Education yesterday appointed his committee for the coming year yesterday. On the committees Mrs. Frost, the first woman ever to hold an office on the school board, has received a position on some of the most important ones. The committees named follow: Teachers and Textbooks Brennan, Spencer and Abenstein. Building and Grounds—Chaffield, Frost and Abenstein. Administration Frost, Chaffield and Brennan. Supplies and Purchasing—Abenstein, Brennan and Frost. Finance—Spencer, LeMire and Chaffield.

At the meeting of the board of education on Tuesday night the board decided to petition the council to extend the sewer from the Webster school to the Hartnett avenue storm water sewer.

bury the hatchet and make joint cause with Carranza. The same procedure is expected to take place in Lapaz, another Lower California port, while in Guaymas, the most important point in the Gulf of California, an armistice has been agreed upon to extend midnight, July 20.

7 MEN CRUSHED

(Special to the Press.)

Alpha, Mich., July 15.—Seven men lie dead on the first level of the Bidwine mine, buried deep under unnumbered tons of sand and water. About 8 o'clock last night, without warning a sand slide occurred in the first level, almost directly over the heads of the seven men and they were engulfed with practically not an instant's warning.

It is reported that there was little or no knowledge of the bad condition of the roof of the first level, and that, although it was apparent that there was no good rock roof, the appearance of the top was such as to assure safety.

Whether the men got away from their working places is not known. All that is known is that when the sand came down, men in other parts of the mine, hearing the grinding, fled for safety.

A stream of water running through the earth above the first level was diverted into the mine and added its difficulties against immediate work to reach the bodies. The mine pumps were at once set going and by midnight it was found that the pumps were taking care of the inflow. This morning the pumps were gaining steadily while there were indications that the flow of water was much reduced.

There is yet little opportunity to determine how soon the work of recovery of the bodies will begin.

The dead men were Austrians, Italians and French. Four of them are said to be families.

READY FOR PARK PARTY

Every detail is in readiness for the regular weekly dancing party to be given by members of the Escanaba Military Band at the South Park pavilion this evening. An entirely new program of musical numbers has been prepared for this evening and because of the success scored at former parties it is expected that another monster crowd of guests will be attracted. For the benefit of Wells residents who desire to attend the party, if more than six passengers are in attendance from Wells, a special car will be run to the suburb after the dancing program has been completed at midnight.

WEEK END TRIP IS ATTRACTIVE

A delightful week-end excursion to points on Big Bay de Noc is to be offered residents of Escanaba on Saturday aboard the steamer Saugatuck. The boat will leave the Stephenson dock at 2:30 o'clock on Saturday afternoon and will run to Big Bay touching at all of the ports and returning to Escanaba at 10 o'clock on Saturday night. Those who desire to do so will be offered a few hours, enjoying a picnic luncheon and the attractive scenery that is offered at the northern lakes most beautiful resort place. Others will remain aboard the boat for the entire round trip. The fare for the trip has been fixed at 75 cents.

MANIQUET MAN MARRIES PRETTY GLADSTONE GIRL

Clarence E. Cookson of Manistique and Miss Pearl Madden of Gladstone were united in marriage at the St. Stephen's rectory last evening by Rev. W. J. Datson. The groom is a rising young lumberman while the bride has taught in the public schools of Gladstone for a number of years and during the last year at Hiawatha. The couple will make their home at Uno.

COUNTY SCHOOL COMMISSIONER ATTENDS BIG MEET

County Commissioner of Schools, P. R. Legg of Gladstone, has returned to his home at the upper bay city after attending a meeting of the National Educational Association at St. Paul. Commissioner Legg was the only representative at the big educational meet from this section of the peninsula.

Mrs. C. G. Swan entertained at a theater party at the Royal last night. George Roberts has arrived in the city to take a position at the John Hughson barber shop.

Miss Albertine Trondahl has returned from Ishpeming where she attended the Hyttinen houseparty.

BIG MILLION DOLLAR MILL FOR ESCANABA

Great Paper Box Factory may be Located Here as Result of Year's Negotiations.

TO BUILD NEW DAM

Work may be Started This Fall on Construction of Escanaba River's Third Dam at Chandler's Falls

Unless unexpected hindrances develop, a large paper box mill will be constructed here within the next year.

Power for the operation of the big plant will be furnished from a new dam that is to be constructed by the Escanaba Traction company at Chandler's Falls.

If the complete plans of those interested are carried out as now arranged, the work contemplated will be constructed at a cost of approximately $1,000,000.

It is expected that work on the new dam will be started this fall. M. C. Fuller, president of the Wisconsin Trust Company, Clement C. Smith, president of the Green Bay, Oshkosh & Fond du Lac Traction Railroad Company, and Mr. Edgar, of the firm of Edgar, Ricker and Company of Milwaukee, representing the interests who have taken steps for the construction of the big plant in this city, were in Escanaba yesterday and inspected the railroads and water power dams of the Escanaba Traction Company.

Negotiations for bringing the important industry to Escanaba have been pending for nearly an entire year and the announcement yesterday that work would probably be started this fall on the construction of the third dam on the Escanaba river was the first authoritative announcement that negotiations have practically been closed.

At the big plant to be constructed here paper boxes and packing cases will be manufactured from wood pulp. By a secret process all of the rough woods to be found in great abundance in this district will be used in making the pulp.

The plant will give employment to a large number of men and will prove one of the most substantial industries in Escanaba's roster.

The announcement of the probability of the construction of a plant here at a cost of approximately $1,000,000 will have a powerful influence in lending impetus to the already improved business sentiment in this city and the surrounding district.

USED NAME WITHOUT GIVING AUTHORITY

The following communication was received by the Press yesterday: Editor Morning Press,

Escanaba, Mich.: "I noted the report and result of the school meeting at Bark River, in the Morning Press and that my name was dragged in for a member of the board. To this I beg to announce that when this act on the program was up for performance, I was absent. I am not looking for trouble and the entire vote cast for my name for the office would be objected to. Sincerely yours, MARTIN ROOD."

JUDGE YELLAND AT CONVENTION

Judge Judd Yelland is in Bay City attend the annual convention of the Michigan State Association of Judges of Probate, which opened in that city on Tuesday. Judge Yelland each year attends the annual convention of the association and through the discussion of matters that constantly develop in the office of the probate judge much information of value for the people of Delta county is gained. Judge Yelland will probably return to Escanaba late in this week.

Mrs. Pearl McCourt of Buffalo left for her home yesterday after a visit with her sister, Mrs. M. B. Graham.

ESCANABA TO LEND ALL AID

Trustees of the Carnegie Public Library in this city, has written to the committee in charge of the convention of the Michigan State Library Association to be held this month at Menominee, assuring the committee of the cooperation of the local librarians and officials.

The board of trustees for the Carnegie public library of Escanaba wishes to assure you of its hearty cooperation in making the convention of the Michigan Library Association at Menominee as great a success as possible and a benefit to all interested in library work.

From all indications, the joint meeting to be held here and in Marquette between the Wisconsin and Michigan associations will draw a large number of people to the two cities.

The meetings have been arranged that the attending librarians may have opportunities to become acquainted with prominent workers in the library field, and to discuss problems of general interest to librarians.

Several Detroit librarians will attend, and three Detroit library workers will make addresses at different meetings.

Wednesday evening, July 29, in Menominee library, the address of welcome will be given from the Marquette and Menominee libraries, the president's address will follow and a reception will be given to the visitors.

Thursday, July 30, the principal address of the afternoon will be given by Adam Strohm, librarian of the Detroit public library, on 'The Old and the New.' The evening program includes a business session of the Michigan association and an address on 'The Growing Librarian,' by A. S. Root, of Oberlin.

Friday morning, July 31, in Menominee, Miss Elizabeth Manchetter, branch librarian at the Huribut branch in Detroit, will speak on 'The Relation of the Library to the Boy Scout and Campfire Girl Movement.'

In the afternoon, a boat ride on Green Bay will entertain the visitors; and at Marquette, Friday evening, Harry M. Nimmo, of the Detroit Saturday Night, will deliver an address on 'The Library as a Moulder of Public Opinion.'

This Misses Katherine and Hattie Ansell have returned from a visit in Menominee and left yesterday for their home at Garden. They were accompanied to Garden by Miss Ella Norden of Perkins. Miss Minnie Larson left last night for a visit at different points in Pennsylvania. Axel Dellin and Axel Norden have returned from Perkins where they were called to attend a funeral.

Ashtabula west breakwater pierhead light, to be established on pierhead of extended west breakwater. Light to be flashing white of about 350-candle power, about eighteen feet above water on a white frame support with inclosed base; visible ten miles, flashing every three seconds, thus: Flash, 0.3 seconds; eclipse, 2.7 seconds. Illuminating apparatus is to be a 300 mm. lens lantern burning acetylene. This light is to be temporary, pending moving of Ashtabula west breakwater light station to this location.

Ashtabula east breaker pierhead light, 93 degrees true (E. 11 1-5 S. bag.); Ashtabula inner breakwater light, 179 1-2 deg. true (S. 3-8 W. mag.); Ashtabula west breakwater lighthouse, 210 deg. true (S. W. 15-10 S. Mag.).

Ashtabula west breakwater extension gas buoy, maintained by the war department, will be discontinued on the same date. Ashtabula east breaker light, to be established on the pierhead of the new east breakwater. Light to be flashing red of about ninety-candle power, about thirty-seven feet above water, on a white, square, pyramidal, skeleton steel tower, with inclosed base; visible ten miles, flashing every three seconds, thus: Flash, 0.3 second; eclipse, 2.7 seconds, illuminating apparatus is to be a 300 mm. lens lantern burning acetylene.

Ashtabula inner breakwater light, 198 1-2 deg. true (S. S. W. 1-16 W. mag.); Ashtabula west breakwater lighthouse, 226 deg. true (S. W. 1-2 W. mag.); Ashtabula west breakwater pierhead light, 273 deg. true (W. 11-16 N. mag.).

Ashtabula east breaker gas buoy, maintained by the war department, to be discontinued on the same date. Ashtabula inner breakwater light. Color to be changed from white to red, reducing intensity to about 50-candle power, without other change.

WILLIAM LINTON NEW CANDIDATE Saginaw, July 15.—In a formal statement to the Saginaw county Republican committee, which at a meeting May 22, adopted a resolution urging him to permit his name to go to the Republican primaries as a candidate for the nomination for governor, William S. Linton, former congressman from the eighth district, and for 16 years postmaster at Saginaw, consented to become a candidate. Mr. Linton lays stress on the development not only of commerce and industry, but the things particularly that "promote real happiness and the comfort of living to which every human being is entitled."

TIMBER LANDS IN HANDS OF A FEW Washington, July 15.—Concentration of timber lands in the United States in the hands of a few owners is discussed at length in the second and third part of the report of the bureau of corporations on the lumber industry, submitted to President Wilson yesterday by Commissioner Davis. Two men hold 49 per cent of the timber in southwestern Washington, the report says: five men hold 36 per cent in western Oregon; six have 70 per cent in northeastern California; ten have more than half in the redwood area, and in north central Idaho four holders have 50 per cent. "The control of our standing timber in a comparatively few enormous holdings, speculatively held far in advance of any use thereof, and the great increase in the value of timber, resulting in part from such speculative holding, are underlying facts that will become more and more important elements in determining the price of lumber as the supply of timber diminishes," says the report. "The main fact shown is that 1,694 timber owners hold in fee over one-twentieth of the land area of the United States."

CHAPTER XVIII—Continued.

"A soldier of England; an aide to Hamilton! You lie. When Hamilton knows what I know he will tear you limb from limb. You come here to frighten us with your threats—you! I spit upon you! Sis-ot-wah, warriors, hear me; you know who I am; I travel with you on the war-trail; I go with you into battle. Now I speak with the straight tongue. You do not know this man, but I do. See; he dare not face me; watch him shrink back afraid. Well! there is reason."

"I fear you, Jules Lappin!"
"Ay! and with cause. Know you ever the time I failed to pay my debts? or break my vengeance? I have you now, and will crush the white-livered heart out of you with these hands. Listen, Shawnees, Miami, Ojibwas, while I tell you who this fellow is. Then give him to me—I ask no more."

He stopped, bent forward, his fingers clinched. The ring of Indians pressed closer, but the old chief waved them back, standing motionless.
"Speak, Englishman," he said with dignity, "we will hear."

Lappin half turned to face them, one hand gripping the knife at his belt. Like a white ghost mademoiselle slipped silently in between the two men. I saw it all over the brown barrel of my rifle, my heart throbbing fiercely.

"He is a renegade, a traitor," and Lappin's hand pointed at the man he accused, "the uniform he wears a lie. How do I know? Because he fought me yonder in the woods on the island; because he was in the cabin with the others. This is the man who was left for dead, who escaped. Do you recognize him now?"

I saw the red faces, and heard the scream of voices.
"Ay! you do; and the woman, the Wyandot squaw, helped him. I said so before; now we have the proof. You drove her out, afraid to treat her as an enemy, and she goes to him, thinking his uniform will frighten you into sparing the hunter from torture. She brings him here to threaten you with what England will do. What say you, Shawnees, to the dog?"

The voices burst into a wild yell that seemed to split the night, but the fur trader fung up his hand.
"Back all of yer!" he roared savagely. "I claim this man as mine! Who has better right? I'll throttle the life out of him with my bare hands before yer all. Have your warriors give us space, Sis-ot-wah."

The chief of the Shawnees, his eyes blazing under tangled hair, uplifted his arms.
"Tis the white man's right," he ordered grimly. "I have spoken."
"I drew in my breath deeply, yet what could I do? The rifle trembled in my grasp, but I dare not use it. The unfortunate Englishman stood in my place, was mistaken for me, but if I revealed myself it could serve no end—would only leave me helpless to aid the girl. I could not think of him at that moment, but only of her."

It was all the work of an instant. Lappin whirled on his victim, flinging his gun to the ground.
"Face me, you cur, you spy!" he shouted. "Come out from behind that squaw. You got me once when my foot slipped. Let's see what you can do now. What! you won't! Well, you will!"

CHAPTER XIX.

In the Hands of Savages.
I saw the red welt on the white cheek left by the fur trader's rough hand, his arms flung up, a sudden passing of anger darkening his eyes. This was more than flesh and blood could stand, and not retaliate. Wild rage usurped the place of courage; his lips snarled like a cornered wolf; he had forgotten all but hate. It was not a man, but a maddened animal who crouched for a spring.

"Fight you! I will! Yes, to the death," he snapped out hotly. "But you lie when you say I fought you before; when you say I was in the cabin—you lie, you dog of a white savage—you lie!"

"Messieurs, it is a mistake," I caught the girl's protesting voice in the hush. "It was not—"

"A lie, hey! Lappin broke in crazed with rage. 'What am I—lied! I saw you, you bound, with my own eyes. Shut the squaw up. Oh! you will; then have it now!'"

"They met like two enraged bucks in the forest, clashing at each other in blind, deadly battle. They were big men, evenly matched, fired with hatred. Never did I witness such fighting, such mad barbarism, the ferocity of which stopped at nothing. The soldier I knew was unarmed, but a knife dangled at Lappin's belt. Either he forgot it, or in his rage declined to use the steel. Oh! how they fought—like two cats, snarling and snapping, throttling each other, occasionally an arm breaking free to send a clinched fist crashing into an exposed face. Once the soldier went down to his knees, and Lappin kicked him, only to be gripped himself and swung headlong. But they were up together, bleeding both, panting for breath, clothes half ripped off their bodies, cursing fiercely, as they rushed at each other once more.

Merciful Mother! What a sight that was! I, a soldier, and border-bred, hid my face in my arms—and yet I looked and saw. The very ferocity of it was a fascinating horror—the black, black night above, around; the forests shutting them in; the howling dogs snapping at their heels; the red glare of fire, and that ring of yelling savages, dancing back and forth to give the combatants room. Rene had disappeared—forced back into the half-crazed mass, as the savages urged forward; of Brady I caught no glimpse. That was no scene to ever forget, to blot out with passing years. The wild savagery of it burned in on the brain; those dark faces, with wild eyes and dangling hair; the waving arms, and leaping bodies, the gleam of weapons tossed aloft, the jangle and din of excited voices in jargon of unknown tongues. How the red flames danced over them all, now in shadow, now in glare of light, making them appear fiends incarnate. And those two battling in the midst, huge men in death grapple, fighting as tigers fight— remorseless, merciless; tearing each other's flesh, battering each other's faces, gripping, clutching, straining in effort at mastery. Again and again they crunched into the crowd, reeling from blows, or hurled back by sheer strength of muscle; they sobbed forth curses, staggering with weakness. I saw Lappin drive his head into his opponent's stomach as though it were a battering-ram; I saw the soldier stink his teeth into the fur-trader's hand, as if he were a mad dog. 'Twas then the brute reached down and fumbled for his knife—found it, and, with one hoarse cry of triumph, sent the bright blade home. Twice he struck, and they went staggering down together, locked in each other's arms, the soldier dead ere he struck the ground.

It was bedlam then, followed by a breathless hush as Sis-ot-wah pressed forward with uplifted arms. Two warriors lifted Lappin to his feet, and, as his gripping hand plucked out the knife from the wound, I saw the gush of blood crimsoning the dead man's side. An instant the victor stood glaring down, reeling in weakness, upheld by others. Then he laughed, waving the dripping blade.

"Ah! good!" he cried. "There is one more recruit for hell. Bring me the girl here. 'Tis time she had her lesson also."

They brought her forward, a red brave grasping either arm. I caught sight of her face, white, drawn, but not with fear, and sighted my rifle across the log at the white ruffian's breast. With clinched lips I lay, finger to trigger. Yet I waited—thank God, I waited. I know not what restrained me, only it was no fear of consequences to myself. It must have been the expression of the woman's uplifted face, the quick glance she cast about, as though in silent warning to me. I took it as a signal, a message of restraint. The fur trader, burly and brutal, still panting for breath, yet able to stand alone now, and conscious of his victory, thrust his reeking knife back into his belt with a coarse laugh.

"How do you like that, you Wyandot squaw!" he asked, leering down into her face.

"When you have these men release my arms I will answer you," she returned quietly.

"Oh, you will, hey! You'll be glad enough to talk before I am through. Let go of her there—yes; that's what I mean. Now look here—there lies your English officer. He's paid the price of being a fool. Look at him; are you ready to speak now?"

"He was nothing to me," she said slowly, "nothing. But he fought a man's fight, and was killed by cowardly treachery."

"What! You squaw, you dare—"

"Of course I dare. Do you suppose I fear you, Jules Lappin, or your gang of outlaws? No, I will answer you."

"Why challenge you to lay hand on me. You know who I am; you have eaten in the house of my father. I know who you are, and I despise you. You call me a Wyandot squaw; threaten what you will do; point me to this dead man whom you have murdered. Why? To frighten me—me! Very well, I'll answer you. I am a Wyandot; I am Running Water; but in my heart I am a man of blood."

France. Mine is not a race of cowards and murderers, thieves and traitors. I will not be called a squaw. You—

"You cur of the forest, you—"

"Touch me, Jules Lappin, if you dare; I challenge you. Come, I wait for you to lay hand on me."

He stared at her sullenly, angry enough, yet with the bullying look gone from his mottled face. Something about the girl—her sharp words, her cool defiance—had left him uncertain.

"More than that, Jules Lappin," she went on passionately, "you are going to pay for all this," and she pointed down at the dead body, "pay for it, do you understand! That man was what he claimed to be—an aide to Hamilton, England pays her debts, Monsieur Lappin. Ay, and so do the Wyandots; have you forgotten that so soon? Have you forgotten what befell the Frenchman, Philippe Bridau? Have you blotted from memory already the fate of Michael Cosard? You were in our village when the chiefs of the Wyandots dealt out justice to these renegades. Answer me!"

The cool boldness of her words stunned the fellow. I could see him glance about into the dark woods, and then at the faces of the savages pressing about them. Few among them understood what was said, and their gestures, the fierce expression of their eyes, gave the renegade courage. He had already gone too far for retreat; his only chance now was to proceed—to browbeat this girl, frighten her, and trust to the wilderness for a hiding place.

"Stand aside, all of yer, get back and give us room, yer red scum!" he roared, his rage increasing as he gave it vent in words. "Well, I've heard yer talk, all of it, you breed, an' that's what I care for your threats," and he snapped his fingers in her face. As she stood silent, motionless, looking straight at him with scorn unutterable in her eyes, the brute clinched his red fist, stepping forward as if he would strike.

"Curse yer! I'm a mind to let yer have some of the same medicine I gave him. You'll laugh at Jules Lappin, will yer? Oh, he! but I know a better way than that to make yer cry. By all the gods, we'll roast that Yankee friend of yours to a turn, and you'll stand by and watch. That'll fetch the two of yer to yer senses. Here Shawnees, two of yer come here. Pick up this carrion, and throw it out of the way, over there in the edge of the wood. We'll want this place presently. Sis-ot-wah!"

"The chief is here," with dignity.
"Twas your vote that the hunter die by torture?"
"It was so spoken."

"Then he shall—to spite this squaw a Wyandot, if for no better reason. Bid your warriors tie the dog up."

For the moment, in the confusion, the noise and rushing back and forth of figures dimly seen in the red light, I lost sense of what was being done. There was a babel of yells, a wild mingling of half-naked forms dancing about through the shadows. Those whose identity I could comprehend had been swallowed up by the rush of bodies. Occasionally Lappin's voice sounded above the din, as he cursed out some order. Then, forth from the surging, excited mass of savages, two braves came directly toward where I lay concealed, staggering under the weight of Hayward's dead body. I drew back my rifle, sinking lower behind the rotten log. The weight of the dead man caused them to shuffle forward, grunting to each other, glad enough to be rid of the burden. In the first dark shadow they let go, flinging him down against the very log behind which I lay, holding my breath in fear.

Even as I gazed with eyes of horror, my mind a chaos, every nerve throbbing in physical pain, there came to me the one hope, the one chance for me to meet alone the situation.

CHAPTER XX.
The Ghost of the Lieutenant.
With eyes on those figures blotting out the fire, their discordant yelling descending all other sound, their whole attention centered now on savage vengeance, crept over the log, and crouched low beside the motionless body. Ugh! but I dreaded to touch it, to feel the awfulness of clammy flesh. As the upturned face, with staring dead eyes, revealed indistinctly by the red glimmer, met my gaze, it was like looking into my own. For an instant it seemed as if I stared down at myself, bent above my own insensate body. A shudder ran through me, my hands shaking as with palsy. Yet I rallied, crushing back the benumbing horror of that vision, as the hateful voice of Lappin rose above the din.

Recklessly I stripped the red jacket from the body, ripped in the struggle with Lappin, and showing clearly the rent made by the knife, and crawled back over the log, to put it on. Beyond my cover, not a dozen feet away, was a shallow ravine, and the light streaming through tree branches, fell upon a clay bank, gleaming a yellowish white. I reached it on hands and knees, streaking my face with moist clay, until it must have been ghastly, and plastering even more on my hair in horrible representation of the scalped victim.

Still unsatisfied, yet knowing of nothing else I could add, and warned by the shouts that I must act without delay, I took to the woods, pausing there a moment to muster my courage, and take one last glance at the scene revealed by the firelight. All the center of the opening seemed alive with Indians crowding forward about the prisoner, who stood bound to a stump, facing me. Other savages were running swiftly back and forth bearing armful of dried wood, which were cast down at Brady's feet, the mass already rising above his knees. Excitement was evidenced in shouts, and wild cries, in frenzied leaping, dancing, and mad stared silent, while Lappin grasped mademoiselle's shoulder, holding her to place in the front rank of those red demons, his voice shouting forth orders, or taunting the motionless hunter, who made no reply. Kneeling on her knees, her face hidden, but I could see the white gleam of the crucifix as she held it forth in the gloom.

"I'm a mind to let you have some of the same medicine I gave him."

Of light. Brady's face was not toward me, nor revealed clearly by the fire, yet he held his head erect, his eyes roving over the devilish faces. The wounded jaw was bound about with a strip of bloody rag. Without speaking, it yet seemed to me he mocked them. Once he twisted in his bonds, and gazed at her as if he would utter some word, but changed his mind, and, for the first time, a look of pain swept into his face. Lappin saw the effort, called out some foul insult, and a warrior sprang forward, striking the defenseless man across the lips, and driving his head back against the stump.

The vicious act drove me mad, and I stepped forth into the open, flinging my gun down in the underbrush. No eye in all that swarm was turned my way. In silence I moved forward until I was within a few yards of the struggling mass. Then I stopped, full in the red glare of fire, my arms uplifted, and gave utterance to a deep sepulchral groan. God alone knows how awful was the apparition. To them, in startled horror, I was the dead man, standing there with ghastly face, and arms outstretched, my appearance rendered more terrible by the fitful gleam of fire, revealing features and form, glowing on torn red jacket, and head slashed by scapling knife, behind me the night and the black woods. No doubt it was a sight to bring fear to any heart, but to those murderers, their minds poisoned by superstition, it brought panic—a terror too terrible to resist. They knew me in the instant. I was the spirit of the dead; I had come back for vengeance; with clammy hands I was clutching for them; with sightless eyes I was seeking them out. There was one yell, breathing forth the terror of their souls; I saw eyes, wild with horror, staring at me; I saw men run and fall, scramble to their feet, and run again; I saw leaping bodies fight like fiends in an effort to get free. Sis-ot-wah, struck by the rush, shrieked like a woman, stared toward me from where he lay on the ground, found his feet and ran. I caught glimpse of Rene's face uplifted, the cross still before her eyes; of Lappin, hurled over by the rush, trampled into the earth by flying feet, finally regain his knees, his face white as death, as he stared back toward me with protruding eyes.

Again I groined, the unearthly sound rising even above the din, seemingly echoed by the great forest and flung back to earth again by the black curtain overhead. Ay! it was an eerie sound! It even made my own flesh creep. Crazed by the terror of it, red-arteries by the fears of others, the fur trader leaped to his feet, flung forward his rifle and fired. The ball sang past my ear, and I walked straight toward him, my ghastly face exposed to the fire, my hands reaching out in blind clutching. With one yell, piercing, the yelp of a frightened wolf, he turned and dashed for the woods, starting back over his shoulder even as he crashed headlong into the underbrush. For fear they might pause when once under cover—the first spasm of terror gone—I ran forward to the forest edge, giving utterance to another groan to spur them on. But this was not needed—terror, awful terror had struck into their very souls.

Some Jump.
Bix—They say a flea can jump over a thousand times his own length. Fancy if a human could do that!

Dix—He can. I know a man who jumped his ball in New York and landed in Liverpool, 3,000 miles away which divides the food into small particles, and by the muscular contractions of the stomach and intestine, which help to mix the digestive juices together.

The parts of the food which the digestive juices can not dissolve are periodically given off by the intestine, together with waste material from the internal activities of the body.

Digestibility is often confused with the degree of digestibility, which is the degree to which the food is broken down by the person who eats it. In the case of a horse, for example, the degree of digestibility is high, but the person who eats it is not able to digest it.

pleasant and injurious, especially if they are not broken down (as they normally are) before they have an opportunity thus to act. Different persons may be differently constituted with respect to the changes which their food undergoes, so that it may be literally true that "one man's meat is another man's poison." Milk is for the most part a very wholesome, digestible and nutritious food, but there are some who are made ill by drinking it. Some persons have to avoid strawberries. Every man must learn from his own experience what food agrees with him and what does not.

Not only the amount of nutritive ingredients which a food contains, but also the proportions which can be digested and utilized by the body determine the real nutritive value of a food material. As a general rule, the carbohydrates are more completely digested, and hence more fully available for use in the body than protein and fats. Protein of animal food is more digestible than that of vegetable foods, while fats are probably less digestible than most forms of protein and carbohydrates.

The structure of most food materials is so changed by cooking that they are more easily chewed and more readily and thoroughly digested. Cooking also makes the food more appetizing by improving the flavor and appearance. Food which is attractive to the taste quickens the flow of saliva and other digestive fluids, thus aiding digestion. Another use of cooking is to kill by heat any disease germs, parasites or other dangerous organisms the food may contain.

After All.
"I want you to remember always," he said when they parted, "that you have made me happier than any other woman ever has."

"I shall not waste time remembering anything about you," she replied, without trying to conceal her contempt for him.

"And remember, too," he added, "that no other woman has ever made me as unhappy as you have made me."

"Then a glad look came into her eyes and as he went away she drew a long sigh and murmured:
"Dear fellow. There was something good about him, after all."

ALAB! THE CITY OF IT!
"My husband used to assure me that he would be my willing slave."
"Why are you complaining? It is the general understanding that he is your slave."

Real Strength.
There are many men who never get a chance to go astray. They must work away forever. Getting very little pay. They have freedom from temptations. So they keep from doing wrong. Mastering their inclinations. Though they may be weak or strong.

That Was Different.
"I never believe anything one woman tells me about another," he said.
"I was just going to tell you," she replied, "that your wife had given me to understand that she considered you the handsomest, bravest, best and wisest man in the world, but I suppose it is useless, for you will not believe she ever said it."

"Oh, of course, there always are exceptions."

Pride.
"I pride myself upon the fact that I never have gone home in a condition that made me fear to face my wife at the door."
"What about that time when several of your friends had to carry you inside after they had lifted you from the back?"

"Well, I wasn't afraid to meet my wife at the door or anywhere else."

Some Women Never Learn.
"You never put anything where it belongs," he complained.
"Why are you scolding me again, George?" she replied. "What have I done now that is wrong?"

"Every morning I find my knife and my keys in my right hip pocket. Won't you ever learn that I prefer to wear them on the left side?"

Then He Would Need More.
"How much of an income do you think you could live on comfortably?"
"I think I could manage to be very comfortable on about $10,000 a year until my wife found out that I was getting that much."

No Fun for Him.
"So you are not going to have any vacation this year?"
"No, my wife broke her ankle a few weeks ago and will not be able to go away alone."

LESSONS IN DOMESTIC SCIENCE

Prepared by the Agricultural Department WASHINGTON, D. C.

FOOD VALUES.

The chemistry of cooking has a mysterious and rather terrifying sound to many women, and the mere mention of a "carbohydrate" or a "protein" will make them skip over the page or drop the book, to turn to some more familiar subject. As a matter of fact, the fundamental principles of nutrition are quite simple, and may be easily understood by all. Farmers' Bulletin 142, which will be sent on application to the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., discusses the general principles of nutrition, as well as a number of the more important phases of the subject, with special reference to the results obtained in the department investigations and the closely related work of the agricultural experiment stations.

Our bodies may be likened to an engine, and the food we eat to the fuel used in the engine. We all know that engines must be supplied with coal, wood, or some other fuel before they can be made to perform any work. When the fuel combines with oxygen of the air, the familiar process of burning heat is liberated, and the energy which was stored up in an inactive form in the fuel is changed into an active form, giving the machine power to fulfill its purpose. In a similar way our muscles, tissues and organs gain power to accomplish their various functions from the energy stored up in food.

Of the many varieties of fuel to be had, some produce more energy than others. For example, coal containing a large amount of slate is not capable of supplying as much heat and power as coal which is free from slate. Similarly, some foods have an advantage over others in their ability to supply the body with a maximum amount of heat and energy. Again, engines with large gears require large lumps of coal, while those with small gears burn small pieces to better advantage. The same principle holds true for food, a man at hard labor needing a diet quite unlike that required by a man leading a sedentary life.

Food as we buy it consists of an edible portion, which contains water and the nutrients, and of refuse, such as bones, entrails and shells. The nutrients are classified as proteins, fats, carbohydrates and mineral matters. Protein is familiar to us in the lean and gristle of meat, the white of eggs, and the gluten of wheat; fats occur chiefly in the animal foods, as meats, fish and butter, but are also found in olive, cotton seed, nuts, and in such cereals as oatmeal and maize; carbohydrates include such compounds as starches, different kinds of sugar and the fiber of plants, and are found chiefly in the vegetable foods as the cereal grains and potatoes. These nutrients when taken into the body furnish the materials for the repair and growth of the various tissues, and also supply our bodies with heat and our muscles and organs with energy, or the power to do work.

In its building function protein is the most important ingredient of food, as it is the basis of muscle, bone and almost all the tissues and fluids of the body. Mineral matters are also needed in the body structure, though in smaller quantities. Protein, fats, and carbohydrates may any of them produce heat or muscular energy, but protein has another and very important function, namely, to build and repair body tissue. We depend on the fats and carbohydrates chiefly to supply the heat and muscular energy, and use protein for its indispensable work of tissue forming, though it does even then supply energy also.

Food as we eat it is not generally in a condition to be used by the body. It must first be digested, a process which takes place partly in the stomach, but more in the intestine. The useless portions of the food are separated and rejected, while the parts which can serve as nutrient are changed into forms in which they can be absorbed through the walls of the stomach and intestine, taken into the circulation and carried by the blood all over the body to supply to the organs and tissues, the materials and energy which they need to perform their various functions. At the same time the wastes which the exercise of these functions has produced are carried away by the blood to the kidneys, the bowels, the lungs and the pores of the skin, through which they are removed from the body.

The saliva has some power of changing insoluble starches into soluble sugars, but as food stays in the mouth only a short time, there is generally little chance for such action there, and the necessary change takes place later in the intestine which is also equipped for this purpose. The saliva, also makes the food easy to swallow and helps to fit the food to be more easily worked on by the stomach by moistening it. The gastric juice of the stomach acts upon the protein, and the pancreatic juice of the intestine upon the protein, fats and carbohydrates. The action of all these juices is aided by chewing,

HENRY HOWLAND

ACCORDING TO PRECEDENTS

The arm that is the strongest may not have the farthest reach. And the man who talks the longest may not make the finest speech.

The rose that is the sweetest may not have the sweetest scent. The man whose strut is proudest may not be most prominent.

The woman who has jewels that she measures by the peck may not have the slightest fingers or the most delightful neck.

The man who works the hardest may not draw the highest pay. The one with deepest knowledge may not have the most to say. But the man who is the most modest gets the last seat in the rear. And the one who blows his bugle is the one whom people hear.

After All.
"I want you to remember always," he said when they parted, "that you have made me happier than any other woman ever has."

"I shall not waste time remembering anything about you," she replied, without trying to conceal her contempt for him.

"And remember, too," he added, "that no other woman has ever made me as unhappy as you have made me."

"Then a glad look came into her eyes and as he went away she drew a long sigh and murmured:
"Dear fellow. There was something good about him, after all."

ALAB! THE CITY OF IT!
"My husband used to assure me that he would be my willing slave."
"Why are you complaining? It is the general understanding that he is your slave."

Real Strength.
There are many men who never get a chance to go astray. They must work away forever. Getting very little pay. They have freedom from temptations. So they keep from doing wrong. Mastering their inclinations. Though they may be weak or strong.

That Was Different.
"I never believe anything one woman tells me about another," he said.
"I was just going to tell you," she replied, "that your wife had given me to understand that she considered you the handsomest, bravest, best and wisest man in the world, but I suppose it is useless, for you will not believe she ever said it."

"Oh, of course, there always are exceptions."

Pride.
"I pride myself upon the fact that I never have gone home in a condition that made me fear to face my wife at the door."
"What about that time when several of your friends had to carry you inside after they had lifted you from the back?"

"Well, I wasn't afraid to meet my wife at the door or anywhere else."

Some Women Never Learn.
"You never put anything where it belongs," he complained.
"Why are you scolding me again, George?" she replied. "What have I done now that is wrong?"

"Every morning I find my knife and my keys in my right hip pocket. Won't you ever learn that I prefer to wear them on the left side?"

Then He Would Need More.
"How much of an income do you think you could live on comfortably?"
"I think I could manage to be very comfortable on about $10,000 a year until my wife found out that I was getting that much."

No Fun for Him.
"So you are not going to have any vacation this year?"
"No, my wife broke her ankle a few weeks ago and will not be able to go away alone."

RASPUTIN STABBED BY WOMAN AVENGER

St. Petersburg, July 15.—The lay monk, Gregory Rasputin, a notable figure in the emperor's court, was stabbed recently by a woman avenger.

Siberia. This developed in the attack upon Rasputin has incited intense interest in court and official circles here. He was recently recalled to the emperor's household, after an absence of several months, and was credited with exercising an influence over the emperor far more potent than any of the ministers. He was regarded in some quarters as the supreme power behind the throne.

The woman Guseva had been tracking him for a long time. She finally approached him in the guise of a beggar and stabbed him in the abdomen with a dirk. She was presented from, stabbing the monk a second time as he lay on the ground by his son, who seized her and held her until the police arrived.

When arrested the woman declared she wanted to avenge one of Rasputin's girl victims, who is now in a convent. After being lodged in a cell the woman attempted to commit suicide by cutting her wrist with a piece of glass.

menting on the attack of Rasputin, the Daily Mail says:

"It will be a grim irony of fate if this mysterious monk meets death at the hands of a woman, for it was by his uncanny ascendancy over women of every class from the highest to the lowest that he raised himself from obscurity to the position of implicitly trusted counsellor of the Russian emperor.

"The names of an almost endless series of the best known women in St. Petersburg social circles have been linked with that of this mysterious peasant's son. Women of unblemished reputation have fallen under the unexplained, but irresistible spell which Rasputin seemed to exercise."

LOS ANGELES, CALIF., IS CHOICE OF ELKS

Denver, Colo., July 15.—Substituting Los Angeles for Seattle with quick precision, the southern California

Elks for 1915 back to the Pacific coast when at the first session of the grand lodge today it seemed bound eastward to Chattanooga, Tenn.

Los Angeles was selected by a vote of 809, Chattanooga received 141 votes and Seattle thirty-one. district surrounding Escanaba in successful farming, dairying and poultry raising region is to have all the assistance that the government can give by provision for an easy and cheap shipment of the products of the farm by parcel post. Postmaster Doherty recently received a letter from the postoffice department directing attention to the bulletin issued by the postmaster general pointing out the practicability of shipping butter, eggs, dressed fowl and such products in varying quantities over a large area at a very small rate. The Escanaba postoffice is, as a result, already noting increased shipments.

The weight limits upon such shipments in the beginning of the parcel post service made the service of little use to farmers, but by the latest rulings of the department butter, dressed fowl and other perishable articles may be shipped anywhere in the first and second zones in crates or boxes sufficiently strong to prevent the escape of anything from the package, even though they exceed the twenty-pound limit. Such packages are transported outside of mail bags, and by this provision farmers are enabled to send dairy products anywhere within a radius of one hundred and fifty miles at a small expense.

Many containers for eggs have been patented since the advent of the parcel post, and the government is doing all that it possibly can to popularize the shipment of eggs through the mails. It has been successfully demonstrated that eggs can be marketed in this way, usually at a better price for the producer and with a fresher article for the consumer than could otherwise be secured. Tests conducted by the postoffice department over a period of five months showed clearly that the parcel post is of especial benefit to the man whose flocks are too small or who lives too far from express service to use the ordinary commercial case, which contains thirty dozen eggs.

In these tests it was found that the percentage of breakage was small, only about two per cent of all the eggs shipped during the five months being broken. This percentage will be materially reduced, it is believed, when the farmer learns better how to pack his product, and the postal clerks become more proficient in the handling of perishable articles.

GREATEST GUN IN WORLD IS NEARLY READY FOR CANAL.

Washington, July 15.—The sixteen inch gun, the biggest piece of ordnance in the world, destined to protect the Pacific entrance of the Panama canal, will be practically ready for service when the breach loading device is perfected in the Watervliet arsenal. The gun is 50 feet long, weighs 142 tons and its projectile, six feet long, weighing a ton, which is discharged by 665 pounds of powder, is calculated at a distance of 11 miles, to pierce 12 inch armor or the side armor of any battleship afloat.

SEEK TO DEFAUD THE WORKING MAN

TREASURER WHO SKIPPED WITH $600 IS NOW ARRESTED

The authorities of Osceola county this state today received requisition papers from the governor's office from William Scully, now under arrest at Winfield, Winn county, Louisiana. He left this afternoon for the southern city to get his man and upon his return one of the most noted cases of upper Michigan will be once more in the public eye.

Scully, a republican of Cummins Osceola county, was serving his second term as township treasurer, when in February 1912, he disappeared. He went away on a trip for a time and it was not until two or three months later that it was discovered that he was shy some $600 in his accounts as township treasurer. At the time of his disappearance Miss Grave Quinnell, a school teacher in the same township dropped off the earth. Later it was learned that they had left the country together.

A reward of $150 was offered by the township authorities for the apprehension of Scully and all of the detective agencies in the United States took up the case. It was only last week, however, that the Osceola authorities were notified that the Winn county, Louisiana, officials had him under arrest. Consequently Sheriff Hochstetter prepared the papers, came to Lansing and this morning secured the governor's signature.

According to Hochstetter the detouring of Scully and the school teacher was one of the mysteries of Osceola county two years ago. But had been well thought of and Scully particularly was honored in his election as township treasurer. Miss Quinnell boarded at the Scully home.

Scully is 60 years of age, and a farmer by occupation. His wife is living in Chicago where she has been since he left Michigan.

21 STATES GIVE AID TO MOTHERS

Washington, July 15.—Laws relative to the mother's pension in the United States, Denmark and New Zealand, just issued by the committee of the U. S. department of labor.

In her letter transmitting the work to Secretary William Wilson, Miss Julia C. Lathrop, chief of the bureau calls attention to the rapid development of this new type of legislation last year more than half of the state legislatures in session had under consideration bills providing for the support of dependent children in their own homes. No less than 21 states have now in operation laws providing aid to mother in varying sums and under varying conditions. The earliest of these laws was secured in 1911.

"Thus it will be seen," said Miss Lathrop, "that in two years there has come into existence in state embracing half the population of the country a type of legislation whose purpose admittedly uniform, namely to secure for young children home life and the personal care of a good mother. No one quarrels with this purpose. On the other hand, the opinion of experts on social betterment do not agree as to the wisdom of trying to secure this purpose through so-called pension legislation as will be seen by an examination of the discussions referred to in the bibliography.

"The methods and standards prescribed in the different states vary, it is impracticable for the bureau to equally valuable in securing their common purpose. At the present time it is impracticable for the bureau to undertake any field study of the operation of these laws even were it not premature, but in view of the immediate legislative importance of the matter and of its various bearings, it is believed that the compilation of American state, together with the New Zealand law passed in 1911 and a translation of the Danish law passed in 1913, added for purposes of comparison, will prove timely and useful. The bibliography, while not exhaustive contains most of the significant recent material."

TRANSIANT FIELD DAY IS ORDERED FOR MARQUETTE

R. Campbell, grand commander, Knights Templar of Michigan, announces a grand commandery field day to be held in Marquette probably during September. Each commandery in the state has been assigned this year to a field day at the nearest available point. These points have been distributed so that they will be most convenient to the largest number of commanderies, and Marquette has been chosen for the next most of the U. P. commanderies. Harry T. Emerson, of Menominee, grand marshal, will be in charge of the meet.

This field day will be one of two held during the year. The grand commander of Calumet is a communication to J. H. O'Meara, of this city, eminent commander, says, that the copper country will be sent from 100 to 120 Knights to the field day here.

The meetings here will be in a measure, preparatory to the grand commandery convolve in Calumet in June 1915, in which all Upper Peninsula Knights Templar are particularly interested.

A possible feature will be furnished by Detroit Commandery No. 1, which contemplate bringing its tent equipment and holding a regular military encampment on that occasion. The meeting here will be the first held in the Upper Peninsula for about ten years, the last one being held at the Soo. It will be the second Upper Peninsula meeting in the history of Michigan of Templarism in Michigan.

The last Grand Commandery convolve was held in Lansing, last month and was largely attended by members of the order from all over the state. These were 25 commanderies in the parade with a total of 1,607 Knights. There were also 14 bands with a total of 350 musicians, giving some idea of the importance and size of these convolves.

The Arab patrol drill of Ahmed Temple, which is being conducted regularly every Wednesday evening is followed by a sword drill of Knights Templar, adding variety and interest to the events.

ESCANABA MAN AT CONVENTION

Cornelius G. Gallagher is in Milwaukee attending the annual convention of the International Longshoremen's Association which will be in session in the Cream City throughout this week. Of the opening session of the convention a Milwaukee newspaper says:

Better times because of the bumper crops are expected soon by the International Longshoremen's association which opened its twenty-second annual convention in Walker hall of the Auditorium this morning.

John J. Joy, president of the Atlantic coast district, expressed this opinion in a short address in behalf of the longshoremen of the east.

"Last winter was one of the worst in the history of Atlantic coast ports," he said. "Industry was stagnant, but I hope to see the end of this exaggerated poverty with good crops and a better state of trade that should come soon."

Mr. Joy in his address urged the convention to take action in the matter of "Safety First" on the docks.

"Safety first has taken hold in many parts of the country," he said, "but movements of this kind never reach the docks. When only speed is considered in loading or unloading a boat, life and limb of the longshoremen is never thought of. I hope that this convention will take action in the matter. We need dock inspection laws and compensation laws. Something must be done to prevent the accidents that occur all too often."

Even the ten or more colored delegates from the south felt the excessive heat and formality was thrown to the winds when President T. V. O'Connor granted permission to remove coats. Most of the 200 or more delegates took advantage of this and sat in their shirtsleeves. Electric fans hummed and the Bakers' International union was thoughtful enough to provide fans for every person in the hall.

D. W. Hoan, city attorney, gave the address of welcome. Frank J. Weber spoke on organization generally in behalf of the unions of Milwaukee. John J. Carney of the Detroit Tobacco Workers, union, Joseph Schmitz of the Bakers and Confectioners, J. A. Matzen, secretary of the Pacific coast district; J. H. Fricke of the southern district, Martin Cole of the marine branches and J. A. Woodlough of New Orleans, representing the colored locals, were among this morning's speakers.

The convention in Milwaukee this year is bigger than any previous meeting, over 200 delegates being present. The convention will close on Saturday.

ALL BOATS MUST DISPLAY LIGHTS

Government officials are strictly enforcing the lake pilot rules, requiring craft of all kinds to display proper lights when navigating at night. The Soo Evening News says:

One of the revenue patrol boats on Saturday night reported a canoe from the Canadian side that was in American waters, which contained a man and three women, being loaded almost to the water's edge, for being without lights and with no life preservers or other safety appliances.

The pilot rules of the Great Lakes require all open boats to have a white light ready for display when necessary in navigable waters, and while there is a disposition on the part of the owners of such open boats to place a liberal construction on this rule, canoes and row boats crossing the river and channels after dark are positively required to have a lantern or flash light or some other white light to display, both for their own safety and the safety of others.

It is understood that the local government officials of the revenue department fully intend to enforce this rule as far as possible.

LIZARDS' VENOM IS FOUND TO BE BABIES ANTIDOTE.

Paris, July 16.—Reputile poison is suggested as a cure for hydrophobia by Madame Phisalix, a scientist. In a paper read before the Academy of Science by Edmund Pirrer, director of the natural history museum, the experiments were described. Knowing that the mucus secretion of some lizards is an antidote for snake bites she experimented with a serum of such venom and the mucous secretion of the salamander. Rabbits inoculated with this were immune to injections of rabies microbes for about two weeks.

HUERTA OBLIGATIONS WORRY THE POWERS

Washington, July 15.—The state department was informed by the Brazilian minister at Mexico City, who represents the United States, that Huerta will resign not later than Wednesday, leaving the Mexican government in the hands of Francisco Carbajal, newly appointed minister of foreign affairs.

The A. B. C. mediators have been enlisted by other foreign governments to present their insistence that Carranza recognize the national obligations created by Huerta. The A. B. C. powers have been delegated by the other foreign nations to convey word to the United States and the constitutionalists that if Carranza refuses to sanction the acts of the Huerta government they will refuse to give Carranza government recognition.

Will Not Pay War Debts.

The attitude of the constitutionalists has consistently been that they will not in any way recognize the Huerta regime as having ever been lawful, and will treat as null and void every national action of the Huerta government. It was stated by one of their representatives that Carranza is willing to modify this to the extent of paying loans contracted by Huerta which have been shown to have been used for the legitimate purpose of carrying on a defactor government, but will not pay any sums that were used to purchase supplies for the federal army or put to the purpose of hindering the revolution.

No Mediation With Huerta.

Gen. Carranza has notified the United States, through John R. Silliman, formerly American consul at Saltillo and now personal representative of President Wilson there, that under no circumstances would he sanction conferences with representatives of Gen. Huerta to draft terms of peace. He told Mr. Silliman that only the unconditional surrender of the authorities at Mexico City would be accepted.

MAN WHO FAILED, IS TO VISIT CANAL

New York, July 15.—Thirty years ago the project of a canal at Panama was first considered seriously and one of the most eminent of French engineers, Philippe Bonin Varilla, the leading spirit of the engineering forces has been interested in the undertaking ever since. His name appears often in the history of the disastrous French to build a canal, and since the United States undertook the problem his opinion has always received serious consideration by our engineers.

He arrived in New York yesterday on board the France, of the French line, on his way to Panama for the purpose as he expressed it of just seeing steamships pass from the Pacific to the Atlantic after thirty years.

He said he expected to remain in the zone for about five or six days and at the end of that time would return to New York to see some of his many friends here.

The engineer said that the United States acted as belittled a dignified nation in precluding American vessels from a lesser toll than was exacted from foreign ones.

"The United States," he said, "can take from its own Treasury and give to its merchant marine, but it cannot, with dignity, take from foreign shipping to give to its own as would be the case if preference were shown in the charge of tolls. As for the ratification of the treaty with Colombia it is not right. I hope it is not done, for the United States has no reason to do it."

TRAGIC RESULTS OF DRUG HABIT

The Drug Traffic at the Bijou Tonight.

A more pathetic tragic situation or climax would be hard to conceive than is had at the close of this two-reel, vivid melodrama, depicting the awful and inevitable end of those poor victims of the drug, morphine. The traffic as it is carried on in the takes hold of and finally destroys its the drug victims, the great profits that lead men to take chances in the traffic; the way in which the drug takes hold of and finally destroys its victims are all graphically shown in this sensational film. It is a picture that every man, woman and child, whether they are interested directly in suppressing the drug traffic or not, should see; there is a big lesson back of it that will cause an awakening and some serious thinking. Again it is a splendid drama, combining gripping situation with big climaxes and swift action.

GIVES CREDIT TO GORGAS

"America will get all the credit perhaps for completing the Panama canal, but in giving praise where it is due, the work of the French engineers and those engaged in the early digging of the canal ought not to be overlooked," remarked Henri Borgia of Paris, an engineer, recently. "The French overlooked the most important requisite in the Panama canal zone—that of proper sanitation. Had our engineers been supported in their work by a Colonel Gorgas, the American nation might not have had the opportunity to buy the canal."

"I think it only justice that some tribute be paid the French for their share in this great project. It is true they failed, but not through lack of funds, as is proved by the beautiful palace, the magnificent gardens, and the record of sumptuous living of the officials. Neither was failure due to the unwillingness of the French peasantry to contribute of their brain, evidence of which is seen in the overfilled graves."

"The success of the American was not wholly due to his greater knowledge of engineering nor to his improved machinery; neither was it due to his ability to get into his hands large amounts of money, but to the victory over the humble mosquito. The strength of this tiny enemy the French neglected to appreciate. This, then, was the cause of their ignominious defeat in the work."

"The Panama canal is one of the greatest engineering undertakings in the history of the world. There can be no question of that."

BRIGADIER GENERAL SHARPE'S BIG JOB

More armies have been destroyed by starvation than by battles. The Duke of Wellington once said that he did not consider himself a general, but that he prided himself on being a first-class commissary officer. "Many can lead troops," he remarked; "I can feed them."

The big job of feeding Uncle Sam's fighting men is in the hands of Brig. Gen. Henry G. Sharpe, commissary general of the United States army.

In war there is unavoidable waste of food supplies, and for this reason it is necessary to furnish much more than is actually eaten. American soldiers in the field waste quite as much as they eat. The waste of our troops in the Philippines fed half of Aguinaldo's insurgents in a way that surpassed their wildest dreams of luxury.

The quantity of stores required for one day's subsistence of half a million men in the field is: Hard bread, 500,000 pounds; bacon, 262,500 pounds; sugar, 100,000 pounds; dehydrated vegetables (potatoes and onions), 37,500 pounds; coffee (roasted and ground), 40,000 pounds; beans, 75,000 pounds; tomatoes, 50,000; jam, 33,750 pounds; vinegar, 5,000 gallons; salt, 20,000 pounds; pepper, 1,250 pounds. These supplies have a total net weight of about 1,300,000 pounds, and to transport them requires 50 freight cars of 40,000 pounds capacity, or 214 army wagons.

ALFONSO'S PRIVATE BARBER

An undersecretary of the Spanish legation told at a dinner party a little story about the king of Spain, according to the Rebooth Sunday Herald.

"King Alfonso," he began, "is fond of taking motor trips Incog. He motored recently through a wild region of Castile. He put up with his modest entourage at a more than modest inn. "I am sure," he said, laughing, "that they won't know me here!"

"Well, they did not know him there. They treated him like an ordinary traveler. So much so, in fact, that when he went to shave the next morning he found there was no mirror in his room. So he went down into the inn yard in his shirt sleeves and there a chambermaid brought him a broken piece of mirror, which he set up beside the well and proceeded to lather cheeks and chin.

"The girl stood chatting with him. Finally she said in an odd voice: "You are not just an ordinary traveler, are you?"

"Why do you ask me that?" laughed the king.

"I don't know," said the maid. "But there's something about you—perhaps you belong to the royal court at Madrid?"

"Yes, I do," he answered.

"Perhaps you work for his majesty himself?"

"Yes, I do."

"And what do you do for him?" asked the pretty chambermaid.

"Oh, lots of things," the king replied. "I'm shaving him just now."

LOVE WINS KAISER'S SON

German nobility, society and officialdom, are astonished at the announcement that Prince Oscar of Prussia, fifth son of Kaiser Wilhelm, is to marry Countess Ina Marie, daughter of Count Basowitz of Mecklenburg.

It is the first instance on record where a man of the reigning branch of the Hohenzollerns has been organically engaged to wed. While the young countess is a woman of rank, she is not of royal blood.

It is assumed that the emperor, who consented to the engagement, will confer a higher rank in the nobility on the young countess. The emperor's consent is said to have been granted owing to the lack of an available German princess and to his aversion to a foreign marriage for his son.

The countess met the prince while she was a lady in waiting to Empress Augusta Victoria.

By faintly announcing his intention to marry the girl of his choice, regardless of Hohenzollern precedent and family tradition, Prince Oscar won the instant admiration of the German public.

Talks on Heart Topics

THE PRICE SHE PAYS.

They say our hands may grasp but joys destroyed. Youth has but dreams, and age an aching void. Whose dead-sea fruit, long, long ago has decayed. Whose night with wild tempestuous storms is rife. And yet a little hope can brighten life.

Of course, it is the nature of young girls to wish to enjoy life. The girl who works hard all day long seems to be the most eager in her pursuit of pleasure. I was at a ribbon counter in one of the large stores the other day. While waiting for my change I could not help hearing this conversation between two of the pretty salesgirls, and I couldn't help getting wonderfully interested in their girlish pranks and plans.

Said one to the other, "Sadie, are you going out tonight?" The answer came promptly, "You must be crazy to ask such a question as that, Lida. I'd die of loneliness if I had to stay home an evening. I'm going to a dance." "I thought you went to one last night," remarked Lida. "I did, indeed!" returned the other. "As for that matter, I could go to a dance every evening in the week and stay until 3 o'clock in the morning and be here the next day."

"I couldn't do that," declared Lida. "I'd have such a headache I couldn't stand up." "I don't mind telling you I take a glass of wine between the dances if I feel real tired and it's getting awfully late," explained Sadie, lowering her voice to a whisper. "I go with a lively crowd and I can't do different from the others."

I went into the store yesterday. Sadie was not at her post. The girls behind the counter were talking in awed, low tones.

"Didn't you read about Sadie in this morning's paper?" said one to the other, adding excitedly: "It seems, she was found wandering on the street, and, oh! in such a state. They arrested her, and put her in a cell, charged as being a common drunk. Her folks sent her word she must never come there again. The manager sent her notice that she was discharged."

Every girl who reads this should beware of the lure of the dance, the midnight hour and wine. No working girl can afford to make such a demand upon her health and strength and be in a fit position to attend to the duties for which her employer is paying her. The road downhill is steep and slippery as a toboggan slide. The girl who respects herself advances. Every girl can make her own future either bright and prosperous or dark and disgraceful. When pleasure is healthful, it is recreation. Young girls are as weak as rosebuds swinging on a branch. A constant rough wind will shatter them. No girl can burn the candle at both ends and expect to prosper. "All work and no play makes Jill a dull girl." Yet if the girl who must earn her own bread does not look out for her own health and strength the price she pays will be to fall by the wayside.

NO NEED OF A WIFE.

Though cruel brief be Love's bright hour of song. Yet let him sing his full! For other hearts the echo shall prolong. When Love's own voice is still.

Whenever you hear a man say he has no need of a wife don't contradict him, but you may think as you please. Because he has a home and a father and mother anxious to gratify his every whim he thinks it will always last. He is popular with the girls. The sweetest, most desirable welcome him warmly when he chooses to call. Bright eyes grow brighter and dimpled cheeks blush rosy at his whispered words. He thinks that's going to last, too. He finds girls soon tire of the fellows whose intentions are only to jolly them.

The man who has gone round quite a bit, always seeking fairer faces and new scenes, loses without realizing his greatest charm—the buoyancy of early manhood, so appealing to young women. He thinks the repartee which was so interesting to the dashing widow should amuse everyone else whom he meets. He dubs the girl stupid if she fails to have the widow's keen perception of the joke. He fairly lives at his club. The society of the half-fellows-well-met will always be a pleasure that he can enjoy.

But, one by one, the happy-go-lucky club fellows drop out. He finds himself the last bachelor there. The men with lovely young daughters and marriageable young sisters have ceased inviting him to their homes for dinner because of his expressed views that he's not in need of a wife. He finds when the old fellows leave him and gray hairs commence to thread their way among his dark locks—for old Father Time uses his scythe to some purpose clipping him bald—and his mightn't each time, rendering him near helpless, that there is a void in his life, a want up to that time that he never knew existed—the need of a sympathetic companion. He knows at last there is no human being on earth so near and dear as a wife; some one to console him and help him laugh away dull care.

No man grows old so fast as the bachelor, who has frittered away his best years. He sees his comrades of other days with big, strong manly sons and loving daughters, who are frightened to death if father has a pain in his little finger. But the man who has no need of a wife all these years might have such a burning pain in his head that he nearly collapses and there would be no one interested save, perhaps, his niece, who, instead of asking, "How is poor uncle?" anxiously propound to each other the query, "I wonder how much he has saved up?" The man who has all his life declared that he was not in need of a wife at length is obliged to call in a nurse.

It's always the man who thinks he has no need for a wife who has the greatest need at last. If relatives could know of the lonely ending of the young man of the family who was encouraged to believe he was better off without a wife, they would encourage single men who were healthy, strong, capable of taking care of a helpmeet, to wed young and have a happy home life, such as all men are entitled to enjoy.

TAKING A CHANCE ON HAPPINESS IN WEDLOCK.

Happy, happier far than thou, With the laurel on thy brow, She that makes the humblest hearth Lovely but to one on earth.

There are very few girls who are blessed with a model lover, a man who has no faults. From the time his visits indicate serious intentions, the family of his sweetheart begin to speculate as to what faults he may have. Love is blind, they concede, declaring among themselves that it is wisest and best to point out his shortcomings. Then she will not jump blindly into matrimony.

Her father insinuates that a man's a sponge who comes calling on a girl Sunday afternoons and remains until the dinner bell rings, accepting her invitation to dine. Company dinners are more expensive than the plain, wholesome meals the family sits down to. Mother thinks daughter has made a happy choice of a suitor, insisting that not one young man in a hundred would be so considerate of her daughter as to provide a carriage when he takes her to the theater, even if it's only a few blocks off. And he dresses with such perfect taste, and sends her flowers evenings he does not come.

"That's sheer extravagance!" cuts in Uncle Ned. "It may do for a millionaire not knowing the need of money. It isn't the proper caper for a man who earns thirty per, or so. I'd think more of his counting his pennies if he thinks of marrying."

Aunt Ellen fears he's inclined to flirt. She has seen him walking with young ladies and each one he seemed to pay marked attention to. One or two of the girls she mistrusted to be dreadful coquettes. Her brother was of the opinion that he wasn't a stranger to the wine cup. He had run across him at a bar in a cafe! A chorus of "What took you there?" he silenced by a lame excuse—he stopped to buy a package of cigarettes! The way he looked from one to the other said plainer than words that he hoped the cigarette part would be believed. By the time the family sum up the lover's faults they made it appear that the girl would take a hazardous chance on matrimony if she married him.

There are maidens who accept these insinuations as truths. Other girls demand stronger proofs of the shortcomings of the man in whom they placed faith and love. She valiantly defends the absent one. If he visits her Sunday afternoons she knows he is with no one else. The hours are all too short. Manlike, he does not stop to consider the extra preparations for one more at the table. Didn't he bring a cane for father, a sewing basket for mother, an expensive pipe for Uncle Ned, a book for Aunt Ellen and a charm for brother Tom's watch chain? The cash for these peace offerings would more than set their table for a week.

Can he turn his head the other way, pass by his women friends, if they go in the same direction without a few words of pleasant greeting? I couldn't care for a man who would show discourtesy to my sex. As for extravagance, a lover should be pardoned for indulging the whim of a girl he loves once in a while, even if it is a strain on his pocketbook. Both understand tacitly that it will be trolley cars for them after marriage. Some men have but one fault. If it does not lead to excess it can be broken up, if his love for the girl who condemns it is of sufficient strength. What can be expected from the man who conceals his follies? She can decide if it is safe to take a chance in wedlock with the man who is open and aboveboard in all he says and does.

Few if any men have the wisdom of Solomon. Love is a corrector of follies. The good qualities of a lover should be found out, given credit. If only perfect men went to the altar nearly every girl would live and die a spinster.

IN THE LAND OF ARABS

VIEW OF ALEPPO

"EFFENDI, it is time to get up." "Don't want to get up. Let me dream again."

"Effendi, it is daybreak; the muleteers are already beginning to swear at the mules. Here is your coffee and a biscuit."

Thus abruptly recalled to realities by my rascally dragoman, I stretch myself and yawn. It is too cold to wash, and there is no water obtainable unless you go outside the hut, let down your portable filter in a puddle, lie on the ground, and suck up the water. In the gray dawn, it seems too early for such a mindless proceeding, writes G. B. Burghin in Queen.

"I want a bath," I ejaculated sleepily. "Haven't had a bath since I left Stamboul."

"Effendi," the dragoman protests, "you shall have a bath, a beautiful bath, when you get to Aleppo—a bath that will last all day."

"When do we get to Aleppo?"

"If Allah will, tomorrow, Effendi." "And if Allah doesn't will?"

"The day after, Effendi."

That settles it. I get up, drink my coffee, put on my riding ulster, an ingenious garment, the tails of which can be buttoned round one's legs, and resign myself to the inevitable. Then, my mule is brought round minus his saddle cloth.

"Where's my saddle cloth?"

"Effendi, the captain of the escort has stolen it."

"Do you think I am going to let my mule get a sore back because that rascal takes my ummah?"

"It is the will of—"

"No, it isn't. Go and tell him I'll blow his brains out unless he gives you the cloth at once."

Mule Has a Fit.

The dragoman reluctantly departs on his errand and returns with the saddle cloth.

"What did he say?"

"He says he must have taken it in his dreams, Effendi."

"Tell him if he dreams again it will be for the last time. All ready?"

"Yes, Effendi."

"Very well, then, off we go."

But we don't. One of the mules has a fit, and the muleteers, who are paid by the day, sit round and wait until he recovers. Then the poor beast is dragged to his feet, a load put upon him, and we start through the cold wintry dawn, with a thin layer of snow on the mountain path. Every one is muffled up to the eyes. Some of the escort have an extra pair of socks over their riding boots. The drawback to this is that the stirrups are too small to contain the feet and the legs hang down all day. The wind smites our noses as we follow the bell mule through the gray light.

When we are a little way up the path the saddles begin to slip back and we have to walk to the summit of the mountains. This continues for hours in a sort of dream. As soon as we are mounted again, the mules go along the edge of frightful precipices within an inch of the brink. A pull at the bridle would precipitate us into eternity. But the obstinate animals don't care, for they are all pack mules, and accustomed to hug the edge of the precipices lest the rocks on the other side should catch their load and twist them over.

At 11 o'clock the dragoman tells the escort to halt. "Why?" I ask, as I get off my mule.

"Effendi, I have spread a beautiful carpet on the ground by the side of this rock."

"Why have you spread a carpet here?"

"The Effendi's ague will come along in five minutes."

I remember; and my knees won't grip my mule when it comes. Resignedly, I become conscious of a dull pain in the back of my head, swallow a dose of quinine, and lie down on the carpet. Presently, my teeth begin to chatter, my limbs shake. The ague seizes upon me.

The dragoman watches my suffering with sardonic indifference. "Shall I sit on the Effendi's chest to keep him warm?" he asks, with the air of a benefactor.

But the ague goes so suddenly as it came, and we climb into the saddle

Steamship Baltic Institutes Chicken Farming During Trip Across the Atlantic.

New York—Chickens have gone to sea as part of the live food supplies of ships from time immemorial, but the Baltic is the first of the big transatlantic craft to provide accommodations for "setting" hens.

JERRY TAKES TWO PLUNGES

Diving Horse Makes a Lot of Trouble for Longshoremen at North River Pier, in New York.

New York—Trouble was made for the longshoremen on Pier 53, North river, while the Anchor line steamer Campania, from Glasgow, was docking, by Jerry, the diving truck horse, taking a header off the end of the pier to cool himself. After swimming around and giving two or three powerful neighs to let all hands know where he was, Jerry came back to the pier and waited to be hauled up.

This was accomplished after much labor, by putting big slings under Jerry's huge bulk and heaving him up with two electric winches. When it was all over, the men let go the equine diver for a minute, and Jerry went over again with a loud splash, nearly taking three men with him who were holding on to the ropes. This time Jerry started to swim out toward Hoboken until he was scared by the weird moans of the siren on the fireboat Thomas Willett, and he swam back quickly to the pier, where he was finally hoisted up again, high and dry, and made fast with heavy ropes to a stout iron pillar.

Jerry is a tall, well-built steed, and usually is occupied in hauling broken stone from the dumps along the river front. When he is unharnessed for a time he loves to sneak down to the Cunard pier and jump into the water. This is his third bath this summer, Bill, the watchman, said.

Says Snake Attacked Him With Ax.

Daretown, N. J.—Gilbert S. Shute, a reputable Salem county farmer, declares that a six-foot snake attacked him with his own ax while he was at work on his farm. Shute was trimming out fence corners, so he says, when he stirred a white-throated blacksnake. The snake showed fight and Shute buried an ax at its head. The snake, he says, coiled around the handle of the ax and lunged at him, and all Shute says he killed the snake with a fence stake.

Town Untaxed Ten Years.

Fargo, N. D.—For nearly ten years the village of Wolf, with a population of 150, has been escaping taxation, according to C. R. Koestky, secretary of the state tax commission. Although the town was platted ten years ago the owner failed to record the plat. The state tax commission will begin suit to recover back taxes.

Seeks $25,000 in Alienation Suit.

Jersey City, N. J.—Mrs. Beatrice M. Van Dersperre, who is being sued by Mrs. John P. Oldrin for $25,000 for alleged alienation of Oldrin's affections, testified that Oldrin left his wife because she kept pictures of former lovers in conspicuous places about the house.

COLLINS AN EASY MARK FOR JOHNSON

If Connie Mack knew his business he would send Eddie Collins away on a fishing trip just about the time Walt Johnson was due to work against the White Elephants. This may sound rather startling to the untutored fans, but let the doubtful ones gaze on the report that Mr. Collins has stacked up when facing the big hurler, who is the pride of Washington, and C. Griffith's best bet.

Now Eddie Collins is a most consistent 300 hitter, as most every sane hurler will vouch for, but if his batting average is reckoned by his work against Walter Johnson, he would be anything but a consistent swatsman, and in all likelihood Connie Mack would attach a large sized can to him and turn him loose.

Collins' batting average in the eight seasons he has been in the habit of facing W. Johnson is a perfect scream and Ed. should disown it. One day he made two hits in one game when batting against the Idaho "Canno ball express," and one happened to be a homer. That was the best day's work Ed ever put in when laboring to master the Johnson curve. After that game Collins faced Walter about twenty-five times before he even got the smell of a hit.

These may be hard words, but E. Collins has made the poorest showing against Johnson of any batsman in Ban Johnson's league, save the hurlers and possibly Billy Sullivan. It is about as hard to find when Billy made a base hit off the pitching of the great Walter as it would be to find a tooth in an old hen, but then Sully has faced the big star a little over thirty times.

Collins, in the eight seasons he has had the pleasure of, or agony of, batting the curves of Johnson, made a lamentable showing. In the 110 times at bat he made sixteen hits, an average of .144, which would hardly hold him his job if he didn't have the goat of about all the other pitchers in the league.

Emil Norden returned to his home at Perkins yesterday after transacting business in the city.

SUBS SOMETIMES BAFFLE MANAGERS

St. Louis, Mo., July 15.—While the annual spring training trip is supposed to develop the minor league phenom; give the manager the chance to pick out his regular and select the "farms" for the youngsters who fall. Manager Huggins of the Cardinals, was crossed completely this spring.

The biggest change in the makeup today is having Zim Beck on third; Cosy Dolan in the outfield and George Whitted traded to the Boston Braves. When the training season opened at St. Augustine last February Hug threw the third base position open to Whitted and Dolan. When he discovered Hauser was through with baseball he placed Beck alongside of Art Butler at shortstop. Third base wasn't the worry for Hug. It was shortstop. From the first practice game to the last Whitted appeared to be a star; he was hitting line drives down the left field where, in 1913, he was a right fielder. George was grabbing everything in his direction and Huggins was satisfied that Whitted would be a wonder in 1914.

Before coming north Whitted contracted a sore arm and Dolan opened the season at third. Cory's wild throws from the far corner sent him to the bench and Whitted was given a trial. In the big circle, out of the exhibition games, George Bostock cracked entirely.

Down south, with Dolan and Whitted starring and Butler gaining the shortstop job, Huggins decided to retain Beck for utility purposes, because he believed the Indiana lad would develop with experience.

And in the season when Whitted and Dolan failed Huggins made the switch—sent Beck back to third; he has been there every day, and today he hasn't a superior in fielding. If Beck can hit but 250 he'll outclass Mike Morrey and any other guardian of the third base.

DIAMOND DUST.

Gladstone goes to Ishpeming today for a series of two games against the Hematites this afternoon and tomorrow and then will stack up against Negaunee in two games on Saturday and Sunday.

Out of eight times to bat in the week end games against Muskegon, Raleigh Baum, of this city, outfielder for Cadillac, drove out two two-baggers and two singles.

Dutch Lippold, former Twin and local infielder, is a hero with the fans at Manistee. He broke up Sunday's game against Traverse City with a home run with two on the paths. He drew two bases on balls in the game and was robbed of another hit by a sensational fielding catch.

Eddie Scott, former Ishpeming hurler, pitched shutout ball for Flint against Adrian on Sunday, letting the opposition down with five scattered hits and winning 5 to 0. He whiffed six and gave two passes to first.

After this continuous four game series, those Gladstone pastimers will return home Monday, feeling like regular leaguers. Let's hope it won't be cellar champ leaguers.

Those Aronson and Olmsted families are gobbling up the batting honors in the local league squad, so its up to the Bourkes, Lantz's Hoffmans, Boyles, Murrays and others to sort of prod on their relatives on the squad, just for the protection of the family names.

Here's hoping that this Gladstone crew will be lucky enough to tame that sorrel topped Mahoney on the present mid-week invasion that this said Mahoney may be in a property receptive mood when he comes to face the leaders on either Saturday or Sunday.

It is almost too much to hope for, but four straight wins for Gladstone would look good in that old percentage column.

Rube Gilligan, former hurler, is being disciplined by Manager Joe Cantillon of the Minneapolis American Association team. Gilligan has been sent home to get into condition with orders not to report until he is in shape to pitch real ball again.

COOKS NEWS.

Mrs. Hardy left this morning for St. Ann Beaupre, Canada.
 Mr. Bellows and family are moving to Gladstone to the regret of the Cook people.
 Mrs. James O'Brien went to Manistique to transact some business.

 Mrs. Poupome autted to town this morning.
 Mrs. Messenger leaves for her new home today.
 Mrs. J. A. Rivers and child went to Manistique.
 Raymond Foster of Vans Harbor, was a box of chocolates yesterday in O'Brien's store.
 The sewing circle will meet on Thursday at Mrs. Jos. Rivers.
 Mand Deloria went to Garden to visit her parents.
 Clayton Norden of Perkins is visiting with friends in the city.

SHELTER PLACE IS SOUGHT FOR ELKS

Holma, Mont., July 15.—At the grand lodge meeting of the Order of Elks at Denver this week, it will probably be decided whether Montana is to have a national elk preserve, a movement originated by Deputy Game Warden Peter W. Nelson of Livingston, and which has spread over Montana and is being considered by every lodge of Elks in the United States.

A committee consisting of Deputy Nelson, M. R. Wilson of Bozeman and Ronald Higgins of Missoula was appointed at the last convention of Montana Elks at Missoula to investigate the proposed site of the preserve. The report will be favorable and will urge that the site be selected.

The purpose of the preserve is to provide a place where the animals may pass the severe winters of the higher altitudes on the Yellowstone park boundaries on the north, and find not only shelter, but ample food. While the winter of 1913-14 was mild, previous ones in that region claimed hundreds of elk by starvation and exposure. The idea of the preserve is solely a humane one.

In the proposed preserve there are approximately 1,400 acres, located in Park county, consisting of sections of railroad land and a section of government land which have been taken off the market by option pending final action of the Elks' grand lodge.

This preserve may be procured for $50,000. The plan is to assess all members of Elk lodges 25 cents, by which method $125,000 can be raised. There will be a remainder of $75,000, and the plan is to place this at interest, the income derived to be used in maintaining the preserve.

BIG TIMES IN SIGHT FOR US

New York, July 15.—The Times presents the results of a nation-wide inquiry as to business during the period ended June 30 as compared with the same six months last year and the prospects at the opening of the second half year.

Facts and opinions have been gathered from bankers all over the country from the heads of leading railroads and manufacturing concerns; from merchants in various lines and in scattered localities and from Times correspondents who have canvassed the situation in localized industries.

Naturally there is a wide range of opinion as to the prospects and marked differences in the record of the last six months. However, there is apparent, running through the entire mass of reports, a feeling of confidence in the immediate future.

True Optimism.
 This is not the perfunctory optimism that is easily tapped, but rings true and is supported by conditions cited in the replies. Of course, the record-breaking crops that are now assured constitute the chief elements in the conditions.

With a grain crop valued by the government at $3,418,000,000 and with cotton showing rapid improvement, although its final output cannot be closely estimated for another month, the business men of the country, especially those in mercantile and manufacturing lines, foresee a big expansion in trade this fall, which in some lines has already begun.

Money to Spend.
 Except in the southwest, where both corn and cotton suffered last year the crops of 1913 were big, too, and the farmers were enabled to pay their debts. This liquidation has been in progress ever since, as shown by the reports, and with a still finer crop this year the expectation is that the farmer, now out of debt, will have much money to spend on the things he needs and wants.

This may not extend to parts of the country where the crops were a disappointment last year, as big crops this year may do little more than permit the farmer to go through the liquidation process that his more fortunate fellows have already traversed so that in these sections confidence is not so strong as elsewhere.

The general feeling of confidence is most marked among the business men who will first feel the effects of these expenditures. Except in spots there is no falling off in the business of this year from that of 1913, and in some cases they report an improvement, so that they are in no slough of despond out of which to be dragged.

RITCHIE WILL MEET UNITED STATES BOXERS

London, July 15.—Willie Ritchie, de-throned lightweight champion of the world, will start home on July 23. The former title holder today, before starting for Paris, booked passage on the Vatriand, sailing from Hamburg. Ritchie hopes to battle Charles White and eight or nine other lightweights in his native land and in this way mold for himself another match with the champion.

Freddie Welch returned to Cardiff today, where he will spend a fortnight in being lionized by his admirers and will then come to London to get some music hall money.

Dan McKetrick today virtually closed a deal for Frank Moran to meet Bombadier Wells for a purse of $25,000.

TO START CAMPAIGN AGAINST TUBERCULOSIS

Lansing, Mich., July 16.—At a meeting of the state board of health recently it was decided to wage a campaign against tuberculosis in the state the coming year and the secretary was instructed to arrange for a campaign that will relieve any ever carried out by the board.

Particular attention was given to the press of the state during the meeting, and all members expressed themselves as being of the opinion that the work of the press during the past year in which several papers carried on a special campaign was worthy of more than ordinary notice, and that such a campaign was most helpful to the state-board in the work it proposes to engage in an effort to stop the inroads of the white plague.

Gov. Ferris appeared before the board and gave a earnest talk relative to enforcement of laws governing quack doctors and "remedies" that should be prohibited. The governor will recommend some additional legislation along these lines in his message to the next session of the legislature.

Some members of the board favor county health officers, a plan defeated at the last session of the legislature and the governor is considering taking some sort of action along this line.

92 DISTRICTS TO GET NO MONEY

Lansing, July 15.—The first apportionment affected by the amendment to the constitution relative to the apportionment of primary money, was made July 15, 1912. In that year 492 districts forfeited their share of the $5,515,000 primary money distributed to the various schools in the state. In 1913, this number had been decreased by 299. In the apportionment to be made July 15, 1914 only 92 districts will be barred because of having a surplus balance of primary money at the close of the year.

The total amount of primary money on hand in the district treasuries of the state at the close of the year 1913 was $28,361.00, as against the $2,700,000.00 on hand previous to the year this amendment went into effect.

Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Carlson and family have returned from a visit at Perkins.

WANTED RING NOT MR. RING

Marquette, Mich., July 15.—"It was the ring she wanted and not Mr. Ring," said Paul Ring, a picture salesman of Chicago, who recently began suit in justice court to recover a diamond engagement ring which he gave Miss Jennie Lewinstein of this city. Miss Lewinstein refused to give up the ring after her engagement with Ring had been broken off by her relatives, Ring alleges.

Ring made a business visit to Marquette last summer and became acquainted with Miss Lewinstein. Their acquaintance developed into a love affair and before Ring left the city the girl promised, it is alleged, to become his wife. When he returned in April he presented her with a $100 diamond ring, "to bind the bargain," and said, "We will be married in January." The girl was satisfied, he declares, and everybody was happy until her relatives troubles began, according to his own story.

"You must marry the girl in September or not at all," the relatives are alleged to have said. Ring would not consent to this arrangement and the engagement went to smash. "Give me back my ring," said Ring; but the girl refused, and the court proceedings followed.

Justice Byrne gave Ring a judgment to recover the ring or $100, giving the girl five days to "come across." The girl says she will not give up the ring and Ring and his attorney are now puzzled as to what course to take.

KILLS DOCTOR AND HIMSELF

Chicago, Ill., July 15.—Anton Trubekowski walked into the reception room of Dr. Harold H. Steere on the second floor of the Flat building last night. A woman carrying a baby was in the doctor's office at the time. While Trubekowski was waiting another woman with a baby entered the reception room.

Dr. Steere dismissed his patient and motioned to Trubekowski to enter. A moment later three shots were heard in the inner office. Frank Szarkowski who happened to be in the hall, and Edward W. Beckler heard the shooting and ran into the office.

They found the physician lying in one corner of the room. Diagonally across the room in another corner lay Trubekowski's body. There was a bullet hole through his heart.

"Come right in," he said. "There's the man that did it. He shot me and then killed himself."

The physician then lapsed into unconsciousness. The police arrived and found two bullets on the floor. It was found that both had pierced Dr. Steere's abdomen. He was rushed to St. Anthony's hospital, where he died three hours later.

Later the police came across records in Dr. Steere's books showing that he had received $435 from Trubekowski since December 24, 1912, for treatments of a hernia.

It is believed the man may have become dependent upon his condition and blamed the physician for failure to effect a cure.

PUNISHING FOR THE SINS OF A FEW

The New Orleans Picayune says: "There is nothing that condemns the use of wine or liquor in moderation and it is a fact that of the great mass of people that use such beverages, the total number that abuse such use and become inebriates is quite small. To punish vast numbers of people because of the sin of a few is both illogical and unjust."

CONCERTS ARE BEING URGED (CONTINUED.)

terday praised the Sunday park concerts most flatteringly and in part said: "I believe the Sunday band concerts at the City Park is one of the best things that has ever been done for the people at large of Escanaba. The band concerts have done much to keep the young of the city away from evil and adds materially to the refinement and enjoyment of everyone. I do not believe that there is a person in the city, who, after listening to a band concert but that will say, "the day has been well spent." All cities in all sections of the country are doing the same thing which, as everybody knows is the best possible "ad" that they have. The band concerts on Sunday afternoon provides the people with some place to go and really make life worth living.

SOLOMON GREENHOOT, Ex-Mayor.

Pros. Atty. T. E. Strom said of the Sunday band concerts yesterday, as follows:

"I have enjoyed the free band concerts in the park. The music seems to add wonderfully to the cool breezes from the lake to give a charm to the pleasure of resting there in the idle hours of a hot summer afternoon. The park is beautiful for recreation purposes and I like to see the 'Community spirit' that seems to draw families, and children especially, to this spot for their clean and innocent diversions. I do not criticize the council if they disapprove of band concerts for lack of legal authority to spend the money of the city. But if the authority is admitted on the ground that the expense is incurred to advance the general welfare of our citizens, and the concerts denied as a matter of policy, then as a citizen, I believe the action taken is open to criticism. A park without free band concerts, might as well be without shadd, lawns, gardens, play grounds, bath-house, or other proper means to interest, amuse and entertain the people. It is like a stream without fish, or a plant without a flower. The park is the city's front yard. The people have a right to gather there in one big family. Let them be happy while they may."

T. E. STROM, Prosecuting Attorney.

Former Mayor J. J. Sourwine expressed himself in the following manner when asked his position on the band question:

"I believe that the band concerts at the City park on Sunday afternoons should be maintained if for no other reason than for the pleasure and benefit of the women and children of the city. Two thirds of the audiences at the concerts thus far given were women and children. The band should be the pride of the City council and the city at large rather than a burden and unless there is one united effort to boost for it how can it long exist. I wish to go on record as a former mayor of the city, as being for the Sunday band concerts, first, last and all the time."

J. J. SOURWINE, Ex-Mayor.
