THE GIANTS' DUEL.
Battering each other with tremendous and horrible weapons, the two great armies which ever met in battle have struggled now nearly two weeks in the greatest military duel of the world history. Men have died in masses, but the individual soldier is of no moment, even though he be counted by hundreds. It is a fight of two giants, each seeking to annihilate the other, each infuriated beyond any thought or heed of the injuries he may sustain in achieving the desired end.
It is, though, altogether improbable that either military colossus will be destroyed. Before the moment of destruction one or the other will give ground, and retire, savagely on the defensive, to choose a new field and await new strength.
There is no doubt that the French enveloping movement directed against the German right wing has proved partially successful. The straight line which was drawn by the Germans when they picked their battle ground has gradually assumed the shape of a sloping crook, but it is still intact, and the bent extremity of the line is still unsurrounded and still in communication with the rest of the army and with the common base. A decided German success on any other part of the line may offset the unfavorable position of the right.
Meanwhile the world is slowly becoming accustomed to battles which are without parallel or analogy. There is being written not only a terrible chapter of military science and practice. Battles of a fortnight's duration may come to be looked upon as quite ordinary by a generation which has already after two months of war, become accustomed to consider armies in terms of millions.

ONE IN THIRTY.
A man arrested for crime stands about one chance in thirty of going to the penitentiary, a Chicago committee finds after investigating conditions in that city. It is not stated what chance one who has committed a crime stands of being arrested. The chance, too, of course, is rather slight.
What is true of conditions in Chicago in this respect is essentially true

In every large city. The harvest of violence is large, but the punished are few. Committing a crime is not a very dangerous undertaking, from the standpoint of the aggressor.
Much is said of the necessity of simplifying judicial procedure, and improvements in this respect are manifest. A word should be said now of the futility of trying to teach popular respect for law and order unless the courts will use some degree of severity against offenders that the police authorities shall bring before them. In the detection of crime, in the detention of criminals and in their punishment there is needed everywhere a firmer policy of justice.
Humane treatment of offenders goes too far when it results in a judicial complacency which permits criminals to go unpunished or winks at the severity of their offenses and inflicts merely minimum penalties. Such an attitude encourages violence and does society a positive harm.
One chance in thirty that an arrested criminal shall be adequately punished is altogether unjust, even to the criminals themselves. We need a sterner view of the responsibilities on the part of those in whose hands rests the enforcement of law.
The government geological survey estimates there is coal enough in Colorado to last the world 300 years at the present rate of consumption. One suggests, therefore—paraphrasing a famous dictum—that Colorado raise more coal and less Cain.

Owing to the censorship, French newspapers are obliged to print each other's editorials in order to fill their columns. French editorial articles must be mostly about the crops and the weather and the need for a new union depot.
The right and left wings of the German army, it is reported, have been pushed back, but the part of the animal that does the goose-step is still marking time.
British and French forces are now reported to outnumber the Germans two to one. That doesn't sound a bit sportsmanlike, but the 1914 rules appear to allow it.
The terrible effectiveness of the submarines calls attention to the fact that heretofore they have been just as fatal, but always to their own crews.
Mount Lassen has erupted thirty times in four months, and yet nobody has suggested that we change its name to "Mount Roosevelt."
If Villa wants to fight all the time why can't he take his army across in a fishing smack and join the general scuffle in Europe?
One of the things one sees every day and pays little or no attention to is a cable from Nish announcing a big Serbian victory.
Ears are coming into style again, says a report which apparently got by the censors in some way.
The engagement on the Aisne begins to assume the appearance of an all-winter run.
Too bad the jackdaw of Rheims cannot be interviewed.

London, Sept. 28. No decisive outcome of the battle on the Aisne has yet been recorded. Correspondents again dwell on the excellent character of the German entrenchments. It seems that in many places along the Aisne a battle front of stone quarries dot the hillsides and the majority of the workings has been in German hands for years. It would appear that during the several weeks before the opening of hostilities thousands of tons of stone was cut in these quarries later to be used for construction, by the Germans of barriers against which the heaviest artillery has little effect.
An Englishman, writing from Maubeuge district, reveals some remarkable preparations, he alleges were made by the Germans for the present war. He says:
"The Germans had installed a long time before the war in certain portions some of their big 42 centimeter guns on a farm under pretext of boring for water. They put in foundations of concrete, so everything was ready. As their guns had longer range than the Maubeuge forts it will not be difficult for them to conquer. The Paris correspondent of the London Chronicle confirms the foregoing statement and adds that all German heavy artillery was placed on concrete platforms selected some years ago as foundations for factories never to be completed.
Lon, Sept. 28.—A Besancon dispatch to the Daily Telegraph, dated Sept. 21, says:

"The first German army to be thoroughly whipped on French soil was that of the crown prince. Its rout saved Paris. At the time of their victory, the French did not know the extent of the damage they had inflicted on the enemy. Actually, they had smashed the flower of the German military power.
"General von Kluck's misfortunes were due directly to the route of the crown prince's left wing on the night of Sept. 6. It actually retreated twenty-four miles during that night. In the plan of the German operations, the path that promised the greatest glory was reserved for the crown prince, but the French army opposed him with splendid strategy. They fought stubbornly over every inch of the ground and, when the time came for the offensive, they assumed it in the most effective manner."
Describing the battle on Sept. 6, the correspondent says:
"The battle began at daybreak and continued until dusk. The artillery fire exceeded anything in history. The shells were timed as falling thirty in thirty seconds. The losses, especially to the Germans, were enormous. One estimate by a trained observer places as high as one hundred thousand the German casualties, of which twenty thousand were killed.
"It must be remembered that the battle front extended for nearly forty miles. It was largely of marsh land, and here the enemy suffered most. The French also suffered heavily. One corps was entirely wiped out. When night came, neither side could claim much advantage in position gained and a tremendous quantity of ammunition had been expended."
On the Battle Front, Sept. 28.—Desperate attempts made by the Germans on the western end of the long line of battle to break through the allies' forces, which are engaged in a turning movement have resulted in the most furious fighting which has taken place since the beginning of the campaign.
After fighting without respite night and day, corps after corps of Germans were hurled against the flower of the French and English armies, only to be thrown back.
Paris, Sept. 27.—The official communication issued tonight says that the Germans continue night and day attacks of unparalleled violence, but have been unsuccessful.
London, Sept. 28.—The British official statement given out tonight relative to the battle in the north of France says:
"The situation is satisfactory, and the counter attacks on the British front have been beaten with heavy losses to the enemy.
On the Battle Front, Sept. 28.—While the infantry has borne the brunt of the incessant fighting of the last twenty-four hours, the artillery of both armies has continued to bombard each other's position ceaselessly. Hand-to-hand combats occurred at many points and bayonets were freely used.
The French colonial infantry, most of whose men wear many medals for bravery displayed in colonial campaigns, was to the fore, and beside these men fought the black Senegalese troops, while farther along the line the British troops held an important line with the greatest determination.
The French troops showed more than their accustomed dash in attack, and everywhere acts of wonderful courage were performed. The cavalry also participated in the engagements at many points, the allies' forces having enjoyed a long rest which enabled this part of the service to distinguish itself.
Another prominent officer, General Marquet, has met death on the field.
The famous Scots Greys, finding that the color of their horses offered a prominent mark for the German riflemen, have dyed their mounts brown.

My friends expected me to die as I had been unable to get relief for so long a time. This remedy went directly to the seat of the trouble cured me in a few hours' time." For sale by all dealers.

REPAIRED IN 1859.
Only twice has it ever had to be repaired—and then a thorough cleaning was all that was necessary. In 1859 it was sent to clock repairer, L. Reich, Platt City, Mo. And fifty years later, in 1909, it was sent again to him. Although he was then an old man his hands were still skilled in repairing of delicate machinery.
However, the old clock was once more merely in need of cleaning and it was soon sent back to the home of Mrs. Nash where it is now ticking as cheerfully as ever. There is no indication that it will cease soon. It requires winding every twenty-four hours. There is also an alarm, which is as good as ever. The clock has outlived its first owner by many years, as well as a number of others in the family.

SAYS U. S. ARMY IS INSUFFICIENT
Madison, Sept. 28.—Military preparedness was urged for the United States by Lieut. Philip G. Wrightson, U. S. A., commandant University of Wisconsin battalion, addressing university students. Militarism he decried, but he declared that the United States should have a standing army large enough to hold an invading foe at bay until the militia and volunteer forces could be utilized.
Switzerland, he said, with 3,500,000 inhabitants, can immediately put 300,000 soldiers into the field, fully equipped. The United States has a population of 100,000,000, but could not put 100,000 regulars into the field.
"You may draw your own conclusions as to what would happen in case the United States had trouble," he said.
He declared that two years ago, when it was necessary for the United States to mobilize 16,000 men on the Texas border, it took six weeks to gather the men and then they were not properly equipped to take the field.
Have Little Artillery.
"Of three-inch field pieces, the United States has ninety-eight," he said, "while France has 3,000. Even Mexico has 300. Our largest siege gun, the kind that an army would take into the field with it, is a seven inch piece, and of these our army has only eight.
"There is not a single coast fortification in the United States not open to attack from the rear. The millions of dollars spent on the coast defenses of New York, San Francisco and other seaports are practically wasted because troops could be landed twenty miles away from these forts, and attack them from the land side. The forts at San Francisco are garrisoned by 2,000 men. From hostile battleships and cruisers 20,000 could easily be landed in one day and in one more day could take San Francisco.
Trained Troops Count Most.
To show the efficiency of trained troops against volunteers, he asserted that during the revolutionary war the rolls of the American army showed 395,000 names, while opposed to them were only 41,500 British troops; in the war of 1812 there were 500,000 names on the American muster rolls 236,000 more than in 1813, yet the British had no more than 16,500 men in the field. In the campaigns against the Indian in Florida after the war of 1812, 1,200 Indian warriors were pursued by 48,000 soldiers, and it took these seven years to end the war.
"In the Mexican war," he said, "we had 104,000 soldiers and the only reason we defeated the Mexicans was that they had even fewer trained men than we had."
Americans Never War-Eager.
He read from the letters of Gen. Washington and Gen. Schuyler to indicate that even during the Revolutionary war it was hard to get the people to enlist. Washington complained of "the extraordinary lack of public spirit" in Massachusetts, and Connecticut was even less patriotic.
Lieut. Wrightson declared that it was the duty of every American to take every possible opportunity to learn military needs of his country. He praised the training of the regular army.

RUSSIA MAY MAKE COMMERCIAL PACT

Washington, Sept. 28.—Russia's manifestation of friendship for the United States expressed in her announced intention of signing a peace commission treaty may lead to negotiations for a new treaty of commerce and navigation between the two countries to replace the one abrogated during the Taft administration.

This was the view of many diplomats and officials when it became known Secretary Bryan had received word of the intention of the Russian government to negotiate a treaty along the same lines as those with Great Britain, France, Spain and China, reported favorably by the senate today.

These treaties would submit all disputes that cannot be settled by diplomacy to a permanent commission for investigation during a period of one year, and are regarded by the Washington government as a practical safeguard against the sudden outbreak of war.

Officials expressed the view that Russia's reported modification of stringent regulations against the Jews, because of their loyalty to the government in its struggle in the present European war might pave the way for an understanding for a new treaty. The treaty was denounced by congress and became inoperative Jan. 1, 1912, because it was interpreted by Russia as permitting the exclusion of American Jews from her dominions.

Afterward Russian remained inflexible and it came to be understood here that any negotiations for a new pact must be initiated by the United States. The Russian government gave no indication it would recede in its practice of excluding American Jews from Russia, and it was intimated that should a new treaty be entered into it would omit any reference to free travel of Americans in Russia.

Secretary Bryan announced tonight Sweden had agreed to sign a peace commission treaty along the lines of those previously signed with other nations. This brings the number of peace treaties up to twenty-eight, including those negotiated and in process of consummation. Neither Germany nor Japan has signified a willingness to sign similar pacts as yet, but the subject is under consideration by them.

The new peace treaties recently signed with Great Britain, France, China, and Spain were recommended to the senate for ratification today by the foreign relations committee. Little opposition is expected.

REFUSES TO LEAVE LEPER HUSBAND

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Sept. 28.—Mrs. Joseph Norman has persuaded the city health authorities to permit her to go home and live with her husband who is stricken with leprosy. She said she would rather risk becoming a victim of the dread disease than leave him alone to his fate.

Norman came to this county from Syria several years ago and recently left Wilkesbarre for Philadelphia in search of work. There he became ill. No knowing the nature of his disease, he appealed the physicians of a hospital when he walked into the outpatients' room and asked for a remedy for a skin rash. He was sent back here by the Philadelphia authorities and confined to his own home, his wife being forbidden to enter.

The wife obeyed the order at first but her love for the stricken man was too strong and she pleaded to be permitted to return to his side. At first the health officials were obdurate, fearing she would leave the house and spread the infection, but Mrs. Norman finally carried her point.

She pointed out that there was no one to wait on her husband and no one to give him the little attentions he needed. She would do all in her power to alleviate his sufferings, she said and keep his path to grave from being wholly gloomy.

ATTY. YOCKEY IS HONORED

The current issue of the monthly bulletin of the Milwaukee lodge of Elks, carries as its frontpiece a large cut of Attorney Chauncey Yockey, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Yockey of this city, and Exalted Ruler of the Milwaukee B. P. O. E. lodge.

The Bulletin says: Chauncey Yockey was installed into office as Exalted Ruler of Milwaukee Lodge of Elks on April 4, 1912. He was re-elected and again installed into that high office on April 6th of this year.

He was three times elected and filled the station of Esteemed Leading Knight during the year of 1910-11-12.

Though well known to the membership of No. 46 as a strong, forceful and capable executive of this great lodge, a brief sketch of this young man will be of interest to all Brother Elks.

Born in Waupun, Wis., thirty-five year ago of good old Irish and German stock, he inherited much of his aggressiveness and fighting courage from his Irish mother and his Bohemian nature from his Teutonic father.

His early education was received in the public and private schools of Escanaba, Michigan, supplemented by a four year's course at the Christian Brother's College in Dayton, Ohio, and later graduating from the University of Notre Dame, with the degree of L. L. B.

He immediately established himself in the practice of law in this city where he has become a successful lawyer and a well known public citizen.

He served as a member of the Common Council during the years 1906-1908, and represented the Third Milwaukee District in the Wisconsin Legislature in 1911-12. He has been active in various fraternal organizations for years and is past Grand Knight of the Knights of Columbus.

He thinks rapidly and acts quickly, of splendid physical power, a ready debater, a good parliamentarian, he is a forceful orator and pleasing speaker.

Chauncey Yockey is a type of Exalted Ruler of which any lodge might well be proud. His enthusiasm is catching and his energy and efforts in behalf of No. 46, has endeared him to Milwaukee Lodge of Elks.

He was the representative of No. 46 at the Grand Lodge Session held at Denver, in July last and took a most active part in all proceedings of the convention. His speech nominating William F. Schad for the office of Esteemed Grand Lecturing Knights was the hit of the convention and many were the compliments bestowed upon it by veterans of the Grand Lodge body.

Wishing our members to enjoy the brief summary of home praise, personal eulogy and eulphony of this speech the same is printed in another column of this bulletin.

He is democratic, yet esthetic; a many sided man whose companionship and association with men brings pleasure to them.

SOLDIERS FIGHT UNSEEN DEATH

London, Sept. 28.—The terror of modern warfare in fighting with long range guns and facing fire from an invincible enemy is vividly described by many of the wounded who have reached here.

A lance corporal of the Connaught Rangers told the troops he was with being in the line of battle for three days before they saw a German.

"The disconcerting thing in the present fighting with modern weapons is that you may be in action for hours without seeing the enemy," said the corporal.

"One day we lay for 10 hours in the trenches with shells dropping about us like rain. We could see puffs of smoke along the horizon and heard the constant roar of the guns, but that was all. Only when you got a bullet in the arm or leg did you realize that you were really in a battle. Though we were under fire constantly, it was three whole days before we actually set eyes on a German. After that there was plenty of hand to hand fighting.

Find 1,000 Dead and Wounded.

The corporal commented upon the utter disregard German officers feel for the loss of men. He said that the Germans advanced in close formation against one position from which the British had to withdraw because it was dominated by a German battery that could not be located. The infantry came forward with the British guns opening great holes in the ranks, and Red Cross men said they picked up 1,000 dead and wounded Germans in front of the position. The British loss did not exceed 20.

"I have seen our cavalry thrown into confusion," said the corporal, "merely because the horses shied at heads of dead they had to tread over when attempts were made to clear our front of advancing Germans."

LAD'S HASTY FALL OFFERS A LESSON

Of the hasty fall from rectitude of Earl C. Sanders, released by Judge Flannigan at Marquette on probation and arrested in this city four days later on a charge similar to that on which he had first been taken into court the Marquette Mining Journal says editorially:

In connection with the case of Earl C. Sanders, the young man convicted of forgery, who was released last Saturday by Judge Flannigan on probation and who was arrested at Escanaba within four days for the commission of more forgeries, is printed a hard luck story of bad conditions in the family and an unsympathetic father that suggest palliation of his offenses. We are, furthermore, told that the forgeries Sanders committed in Marquette were the first of which he was guilty.

Sanders' ready lapse from good behavior with the words of a kindly, if stern, judge still ringing in his ears suggests, however, that too much importance can easily be attached to his recital of extenuating conditions, and warrants a conclusion that he is a graceless young scamp of criminal bent who had found the way by which easy money can be picked up by skillful penmanship and effrontery long before he ever saw Marquette. Nor can it be asserted that he was forced back into crime by hard circumstances. A four days' struggle to be honest would not have exhausted a very large stock of good resolutions, no matter how difficult the outlook might have appeared.

But one thing worthy of attention stands out in the recital of Sanders' case. It is related that he left Marquette because he was unable to secure work. When a man is paroled from prison it is usually the case that his first friend has secured work for him before he is released. Thus he is provided with that primary assurance of a full chance to make good—a job. It would appear that no less should be done for a man released on probation in circuit court.

If the reformatory influence of the probation system is to have the greatest chance of working out good results a weakling like Sanders should be definitely placed where he can earn his way without the immediate temptation to drift. Guarantee of employment by friends of the prisoner, if he has friends, should, it appears, be a condition precedent to letting him go on probation, and if the prisoner has no friends the probation officer should be required to find him a job. It is not such a difficult matter to do this. Usually there are many men who are willing to help straighten out a wrong doer who has slipped, but may be braced up. Often it appears as if it was easier for a man who has been in prison to get employment than for many men who have never offended against the law.

TREAT INJURED WELL, SAYS ENGLISH NURSE

London, Sept. 28. British wounded who fell into the hands of the Germans were not spitreated, says a British nurse, Miss Montfries, who has just returned to England from Berlin, according to today's Evening News. The nurse worked with the German Red Cross and helped care for the wounded daily in the hospital at Potsdam.

"There were fewer than ten wounded German soldiers in Berlin when I was there," Miss Montfries said. "In the third week of the war wounded Russians were brought in and there were many British wounded there."

"The greatest number of the British were wounded at Maubenge and St. Quentin. They all speak gratefully of their treatment on the battle field and in the hospitals after being taken prisoners by the Germans. They said nothing about the shooting or bayoneting of wounded."

"They could not be better treated if they were Germans. The empress visits them and German officers' wives send English magazines and books."

"Berlin is as usual except for the crowds of recruits. Everyone gives them hospitality. They are quartered in the hotels, boarding houses and dance halls. The second batch trained since the war began are just now ready for service. The Germans are now accepting men, who previously were rejected three times as medically unfit."

SILLIMAN RUSHES BACK TO CONFER AT CAPITAL.

Laredo, Tex., Sept. 28. Rushington back to Washington as a result of the break between Villa and Carranza, J. R. Silliman, special representative of the United States at Mexico City, arrived from the Mexican capital and immediately left for the east.

Mr. Silliman was ordered back to the United States by President Wilson and left Mexico City on a special train furnished by Carranza. He refused to discuss the situation in advance of the conference he will hold with the president.

How to Cure Cholera Morbus.

Many cases of this disease result fatally before medicine can be obtained or a physician summoned. It is easily cured when the proper remedy is at hand. Mrs. Charles Stewart of St. Collins, N. Y., says: "When my husband had cholera morbus last summer he used Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and it cured him promptly." Every family should keep this remedy at hand. It only costs a quarter. For sale by all dealers.

TICKLE ME AND I'LL TICKLE YOU POLICY

Washington, Sept. 28.—Washington politicians are not surprised that there should be a scramble for membership on the Democratic state central committee of Michigan, in view of the fact that so many of the members of the old committee have obtained fat positions. One politician has figured out that more than half of the old committee has obtained jobs under the national or state Democratic administration. A glance over the list will show that four members were successful in landing important Michigan postmasterships from President Wilson. Others have obtained federal appointments or jobs from Governor Ferris. Members of the old committee, according to the well-informed, have universally endorsed each other for these jobs.

Among the jobs out to the faithful during the last two years are: Postmasterships, Charles E. Lown at Saginaw; Edward Austin at Battle Creek; Edward E. Kidder at Ionia and H. A. Sanford at Mt. Pleasant. A. R. Canfield, secretary of the committee, holds a good job as tally clerk of the House of Representatives in Washington. W. W. Todd of Jackson, was appointed an internal revenue agent. Herman O'Connor of Holton, is slated to be United States marshal for the western district of Michigan. State Chairman E. C. Shields is a member of the commission to compile the state laws, while John E. Kinnane of Bay City, and Mary W. Stevens of Flint and J. Earle Brown of St. Johns have high-salaried positions with state boards.

Diarrhoea Quickly Cured

"I was taken with diarrhoea and Mr. Yorks, the merchant here, persuaded me to try a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. After taking one dose of it I was cured. It also cured others that I gave it to," writes M. E. Gebhardt, Orle, Pa. That is not at all unusual. On ordinary attack of diarrhoea can almost invariably be cured by one or two doses of this remedy.

MAN KILLED IN FIGHT.
to circuit court for trial. In his statement Miller stated that he had made but two trips with Gustafson and knew him but little, but had had some trouble with him about cleaning out fires. He told of trying to catch a ride on a switch engine and later of packing his suit cases. Of how he had attacked Gustafson from behind on the gangway, of the brief struggle, of knocking Gustafson off the walk and of going to the boat to get his money and starting to make a getaway. He said that his home was in Chicago and that he had been arrested once before there for being drunk.
Gustafson has a cousin in Jamestown, New York, who has been notified of the untimely death of his relative. His parents live in Gotland, Sweden.
At the post mortem examination conducted last night by Doctors Fenelon and Kitchen, the skull was found to be terribly crushed and the jaw driven into the skull of the dead man. Clots of blood were naturally found on the brain. The doctors in the case worked over the body from early in the evening until nearly midnight and at the close stated that the man had come to his death through severe compacts with some immovable object.

WHISTLES SOUND; SAILORS WEEP
Manitowoc, Wis.—The Goodrich line side-wheel steamer, Sheboygan, pioneer boat of that fleet, was "buried" here this evening amid elaborate ceremonies.
In the presence of President Goodrich, General Supt. Thorp and party from Chicago, the boat was towed a mile north of the harbor piers by the tug Arctic, which escort had towed it thousands of times in years past, and set adrift. Thousand of persons along the shore and from the city's building tops witnessed the "death" of the old craft, at one time pride of the lakes. It died of old age.
As the tug Arctic towed the side-wheeler, minutes its wheels out of the harbor for the last time, factory whistles, locomotives and craft at the dock bid farewell by blowing three long and one short blast. The little tug responded.
The only surviving captain of the Sheboygan, as far as is known, Capt. Edward Carus of this city, was a spectator of the "funeral."
The steamer Sheboygan was built at the local shipyards in 1869. It plied Lake Michigan continually until the winter of 1912, when it was laid up river. Two months ago it was turned over to the Manitowoc Iron and Metal company which concern dismantled it.

All Rests on Fate.
During a prolonged study of the lives of various men both great and small, I came upon this thought: "In the web of the world the one may well be regarded as the warp, the other as the woof. It is the little men, after all, who give breadth to the web, and the great men firmness and solidity, perhaps also the addition of some sort of pattern. But the scissors of the fates determine its length and to that all the rest must join in submitting itself."—Goethe.

T. Leduc left yesterday for a business trip to Stephenson.

WOMEN AND BANKING

No development in modern business methods has been of more practical value to women than their widespread use of banking facilities of all kinds.
In handling the daily expenses a Checking Account affords safety and convenience, while for the building up of a surplus fund there is no better plan than that of making regular, even though small, deposits in a Savings Account.
Women's accounts are especially invited by this bank.
