COPPER NOW BEING EXPORTED FOR CASH

Washington, Jan. 23.—Copper valued at $1,039,000.21, was exported last week from the United States department of commerce, it is announced. One of the most prominent men in the copper industry, speaking of the present highly interesting situation in copper says: "The foreign demand for copper is enormous and spot cash is being paid for it. Whether it goes to France, Russia, England or Japan, we know not. Millions of pounds are being taken by foreigners for quick delivery. The American demand is relatively light. If American buyers should come into the market for large quantities of copper it would compel an increase in production to 100 per cent of capacity in order to prevent a runaway market." The copper metal market was rather quiet today. Heavy transactions have been effected at 14 1-8 cents for electro, and while many of the large producing and selling companies are asking 14 1-4 no actual business has been done at these figures.

RURAL CREDITS BILL IS URGED

Washington, Jan. 23.—Rural credits legislation was up for consideration at a meeting today of the senate banking and currency committee, with a view to reporting a bill as soon as possible. The meeting was called by Chairman Owen pursuant to the action of the Democratic caucus Monday night in adopting a resolution declaring it the sense of senate Democrats that a rural credits bill be pressed at the earliest practicable date. The committee had before it particularly for consideration what is known in the senate as the Hollis bill framed by the joint banking and currency sub-committee of the two houses last summer. This measure provides for the creation of a rural credits system under general control of the federal reserve board. An executive officer of the system would be known as the farm loan commissioner, and loans would be made on first mortgage and first liens on farm lands, through associations to be organized in the farming sections. Although some Democrats in the belief that an extra session cannot now be avoided are urging that rural credits legislation be taken up before March 4, on the ground that there is no necessity for immediate disposition of the big supply measures; administration leaders do not interpret the decision of the caucus as demanding immediate action. The proposal however, will be urged at a party caucus to be held soon.

C. S. Sullivan, Presents IN SIX PARTS "THE HOUSE OF BONDAGE"

At the Grand Theatre, Monday, Matinee and Night.

This famous feature is taken from Reginald W. Kauffman's startling book, the film story being as follows. PART ONE. Max Crossman receiving a commission from Rose Legere, goes forth to ply his trade. He lands in a little town in Pennsylvania, and puts up at the best hotel. Pretty Mary Denbigh, a high school girl, has been detained in school by the teacher for deficiency in lessons, and as she saunters by the hotel, Max attracted by her youth and beauty, follows her. She resents his approaches, but Max is persistent. Later Mary thinks herself badly abused by her parents, and while in a perturbed state of mind, she again meets Max and is soon in the spider's web. With a promise of marriage, he urges her to leave home. Right here is a strong warning to young girls. We point to this moral. Never pick up with a stranger and thus suffer the fate of Mary Denbigh. PART TWO. Max takes the girl to New York and explaining that they cannot be married until the license has been issued, under pretense of his desire to protect her, takes her to the home of a woman presumably a friend of his mother's, for the night. By this clever ruse the innocent girl falls in the clutches of the notorious Rose Legere. The awakening and realization of the morning is for Mary a sad one, one to cause the spirit of true manhood and womanhood to rise in storms and indignation and protest, and to demand that such practices be forever effaced from the civilized world. Let every man with virile blood in his veins buckle on the sword of salvation, and lend a helping hand to forever stamp out this awful disgrace to the entire universe and humanity. PART THREE. This shows the heroic struggle of the innocent victim to escape from bondage and her efforts to secure honorable and respectable employment. It also shows the strong contrast between young girls who have had an early religious training and Katie Flannigan, a poor East Side orphan, who lives midst of squalor and crimes, oftentimes without food and necessities of life, and yet has instilled in her frail little body a religious training which rears up in time of temptation as strong as Gibraltar's rock and gives her the moral courage to resist the temptations of the underworld and walk the straight and narrow path of respectability and honor. Again we point to the powerful moral to unthoughtful parents. Don't neglect your children's early religious training, regardless of what your creed may be. PART FOUR. We follow the misfortunes of poor

Say A Good Word

Say, Friend, whoever or wherever you are, will you do us a favor? Will you say a good word for us this week And keep it up say a good word for PETERSON'S to some friend every little while. We've tried to merit this friendship on your part by selling Quality Meats and selling them right, just as well as we know how. If we've made good, here's your chance to come back at us. And we'll appreciate it, and make us feel that life is worth living and that the straight, clean way of doing business is worth all its costs. Incidentally, you might figure out the difference in profit to you or your home between Peterson's Quality Meats and other markets, not per individual order, but on the aggregate orders. Remember that the family that stands by Peterson's stands by Quality Meats. That spells more profit all around. "Also increases the cost of living," some one says. Yes, and so do street cars and electric lights, candy for the kiddies, and automobiles. But they increase the joy of living a great deal more, and after all, that's what most of us are here for. We don't want to presume on your friendship. But if you feel that we have it coming—just follow this suggestion whenever the opportunity occurs give us your order and— Say a Good Word for

LENTEN SEASON STARTS FEB. 17

Wednesday, February 17, Ash Wednesday, will be the first day of Lent, which will continue until Easter Sunday, April 4. The forty days of fasting previous to Easter will be observed especially by Catholics, Episcopalians and Lutherans. Sundays are not included as fast days. During this time it is customary to do penance and make sacrifices of pleasures. No marriages will be performed during this time in the Catholic churches. Special Lenten services will be held every Wednesday night in Catholic churches. Good furs were never before priced like this—an opportunity that deserves immediate attention. At 1-2 regular price for Monday. The Ed. Erikson Co. 1485-24-11

"THE HOUSE OF BONDAGE"

It would kindle again the smouldering fires of chivalry toward women and smite a man into a sense of responsibility. —Rev. Alexander Irvine. "I believe that the conditions with which the book deals must be generally known before they will improve, and that the publicity thus given them, will be of great value." John D. Rockefeller, Jr. "A book that blurs the eyes and stirs the heart with the pity of it. With nobility of manner, with a passionate sincerity that touches the subject as by fire in a purity that burns away all impurity." Edwin Markham. "I feel that the story is a strong indictment against our boasted twentieth century civilization and it is an excellent contribution to woman suffrage campaign literature." —Maud Nathan, President of the Consumer League. "The book itself we are moved to recommend to the reading of every man and woman, boy and especially of every girl, in these United States." Rowland Thomas. "But it is not a sensation-seeking story and it is not a curiosity-pandering story, it is not written in the wheedling tones of the drum-conductor, but in the challenging voice of the Moral Surgeon." J. B. Kerfoot. "I wish that more people would read it thought the conditions it describes would doubtless be considered impossible in a civilized land by that great majority of people who do not know. It was painful to read because the author describes the conditions that are. One might be able to read it with less suffering, if there was more doubt of its truth." Lillian D. Wald, Headworker of the Henry St. Settlement, New York. "The novel is artistically, cleanly and beautifully written. Mr. Kauffman gave much pains and unusual talent to a noble purpose." The Hartford Courant. "It shows sincerity of purpose and resorts to no clap-trap or sensationalism." The Chicago Evening Post. "It is safe to say that this novel will be more effective than if it were a portentous sociological treatise. It carries on every page an impress of truth—a triumph of knowledge a dartistle sense." The Boston Evening Transcript. "It is one of the strongest books on the particular phase of the social evil problem which it covers that I have ever read. It typifies the situation in general and I can earnestly recommend it to fathers and mothers and others interested in the subject." Mr. Edward W. Sims, United States District Attorney at Chicago. "The sweet reasonableness of that upsidown solution of life's difficulties we have no disposition to discuss just now; the book itself we are moved to recommend to the reading of every man and woman and boy, and especially to every girl in these United States. Such modest limit we set for the present to the carrying power of our voice." Collier's Weekly. "A great book at least; A terrible book, an epoch-making book; The Uncle Tom's CABIN" of WHITE SLAVERY. The Photo Drama Motion Company have faithfully and within reason adhered closely to Mr. Kauffman's story, which has been pronounced "the only UPLIFTING FILM STORY EVER PRODUCED ON THE SUBJECT, WHO THE PRODUCTION WOULD WRING THE HEART OF A STONE AND DRIVES A MORAL HOME. Mary Denbigh, through her illness and then on through her efforts to secure an honorable livelihood. With strong men's hands and hearts turned against her as though she were a viper or some low thing of the world her struggles for righteousness and honor are pitiful and heart-rending. With not a helping hand held out to aid her, with rebuke of her every honest effort, poverty creeps and overtakes her. Feast on poverty, comes crime—and there comes to the clean mind that lesson which has been repeated over and over again from time immemorial. "Let us who can give aid and employment to those in dire need" and let us be not swayed by appearance, but rather by honor of intention." PART FIVE.

Mary Denbigh in her desperate efforts to secure honest employment and a home is tempted by an employment agency to appropriate a reference under the name of Bella Nimick and with it secures employment in the household of Mrs. Chamberlin. Shortly after she has begun her duties, her mistress' wayward son, who had met Mary at Rose Legere's house, recognizes her as the girl who had appealed to him at one time to aid in her escape from bondage. Realization and fear of a possible scandal which might arise from such action had prevented him from acting.

Confronting the poor and unfortunate girl he demands that she go and go at once. This was the last straw to break the girl's hope and faith in mankind. How much better it would have been had this same wayward son of the rich been taught the words of his Redeemer: "Let him who is without sin cast the first stone."

Young Chamberlin's thoughtless action and words sent Mary out into the world to become once more a helpless derelict on life's shores. Shortly after she meets Max, the betrayer, and although a faint smile appears on her face, her heart cries within her for vengeance when she once more gazes on the debauched countenance of the human fiend who had wrought her misery and builded this awful life of misery and degradation.

Judgment will prove that "The Wages of Sin is Death."

SEEMINGLY spurned by the whole world, uncared for, unloved, she wanders alone, a creature of God, forsaken, unknown, she has drunk the deepest dregs from sorrow's cup and at death within her, save the fear of death, again she meets young Beebe, man, as he prowls his old haunts and dives in company with a sailor, he recognizes her and realizing his human act in casting her from his mother's home, tries to redeem himself by giving her money that will

After witnessing a scene of horror, she flees from the den and reaches the home of her father, only to find that there is no welcome there, the home that knew her from childhood was barred against her. In fear of the father's wrath the mother turns her away. "Who shall judge this mother's action? How many women, cowed and browbeaten by cruel, unjust husbands, do acts of this kind against their own heart's desire. Mary returns to New York, and in her despair applies to Rose to take her in. The door that closed upon her and ruined her young life is shut in her face, and she falls sobbing.

The Author, Mr. Kauffman, left her here to drive home his powerful moral. But the producer of the picture felt uneasy and desired to show what the fate of poor Mary was, therefore put her in good hands, and when you view the picture, the verdict will be yours. 1824-25-11

SPORTING DEPARTMENT

WILL C. SOMERS GET HELP FROM PEOPLE?

Fickle fate is just now playing hide and seek with the financial affairs of Charley Somers, the one man who, above everyone else is or was the real force behind the organization of the American league. Just a short time ago a committee of bankers was appointed to take charge of his business. The war and general business depression put his real estate and coal business temporarily on the skids and the Cleveland team lost a bale of money for him. He also had other baseball interests but it was a bad year for baseball and practically all his investments failed to return anything that looked like profits.

Whether the friends he was instrumental in making rich, will come to his assistance in this dark hour, only time will tell. But in the light of recent developments, Somers' part in the formation of the American league is interesting.

A Pioneer Booster.

Something like 14 years ago, when Ban Johnson was acting as Comiskey's agent in the organization of a new league, he found that very few men were willing to risk their wealth in what looked like a big hazard. One of the few men that he did find was Chas. Johnson of Cleveland.

Johnson told Somers what he had to offer. He told Somers how much money was needed. And Somers went deep in his wad in making the American league possible. He took a franchise in Cleveland. He hired high priced talent. He got the best men he could get and he paid huge salaries. Johnson wanted to place a team in Boston. He couldn't interest Boston capitalists. In the crisis Somers came to the fore. He unstrapped his pocketbook and let Ban dip in as deep as he wanted to.

ENGINE HITS AN INTERURBAN CAR

Appleton, Wis., Jan. 23.—The Chicago and North-Western north bound train due here at 8:20 o'clock struck an Appleton-Neenah interurban car due at Neenah at 8 o'clock at the crossing near the depot at Neenah last night. The rear vestibule was taken off and two men injured. They are: Al. Fredericks, Oshkosh, traveling man, right leg cut. Benjamin Schneider, Oshkosh, traveling man. Scalp wound.

Both men were taken to the Theda Clark hospital. According to the street car officials the men were well enough to leave for their homes today.

The car was in charge of Conductor Max Eggert. In speaking of the accident this morning, he said:

"Our car stopped on account of the street being blocked by a freight train. The freight was backed up to clear the crossing and Engineer F. Hackburst told me to come ahead, that the track was clear. I went ahead and could not see the passenger train coming and signaled the car to come ahead. Just as it got under way the headlight of the passenger train loomed up coming around the bend. Two box cars had blocked my view previous to that. Then came the crash."

Quick thinking and action on the part of Motorman Frank Beyer prevented a far more serious accident. There were from twelve to fifteen people in the car, most of them women. When Beyer saw the approaching danger he applied more power to the car and succeeded in getting all but the vestibule clear of the track. But for the extra power he applied the car would have been struck in the middle and most of the passengers would probably have been killed.

Beyer said, "I could not see the headlight of the passenger when I got the signal to come ahead. My view down the track was blocked by two box cars and just south of them is a curve. As I got onto the track I saw the train coming around the curve and applied the 'juice.'"

George W. Weinstein of Neenah was in the rear smoking compartment with Fredericks and Schneider, but escaped without a scratch. His was the most remarkable escape of any in the car as he sat next to Schneider.

Naturally there was much commotion at the time. The other passengers commenced to force their way out thru the front door. Women screamed and crowded in their mad efforts to get out.

The car was run back on its own power, but the vestibule was so badly twisted that it was 3 o'clock this morning before the damaged car was run into the barn here.

SHAWKEY'S HAND BROKEN IN GAME

It sometimes takes news a long time to come out. The world's series have almost been forgotten, and yet it is not printed until this week that Bob Shawkey's pitching hand was broken in the last game of the classic set with the Braves.

In this game Shawkey batted down a terrific line drive and threw out his man at first. The hand pained Bob, but he did not think it was anything more than the usual stinging one gets when he shoves his fist in the way of a hard-hit ball. He forgot the incident in a few minutes.

Shortly after the series Shawkey went to the northern forests of Maine on a hunting trip. He was away for twenty-two days and often he felt a twing of pain in the hand that had been hit by the ball. When he returned to Philadelphia he at once consulted the Athlete's surgeon general, who found that the hand was broken.

The broken hand is mending nicely and Shawkey will have no trouble starting drill with the other pitchers down at Jacksonville next March.

WOULD SIGN PENSION BILL

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 23.—Governor Ferris will sign a bill providing for a pension for school teachers if the present legislature see fit to pass such a law. The governor says he is not entirely familiar with the provisions of the bill to be introduced by Senator Verdier of Grand Rapids providing for the pensioning of school teachers and he did not want to express an opinion of this particular bill.

"On the whole, however, I am opposed to pensions of any kind except to men who have served in the army and their widows when necessity requires," said Gov. Ferris. "The system of pensioning teachers is simply a means of deferring an obligation that should be discharged today. It is somewhat along the plan of buying a set of books and paying at the rate of 17 cents per day for a number of years. The book agent will tell you that you will never miss the money."

"I would like to see the salaries of all competent school teachers advanced at once, so that they would be able to save enough to take care of themselves when they are incapacitated for active service. The state of Michigan has no reason to be proud of the salaries paid to the men and women with whom we entrust the education of our boys and girls, and I believe that the time to give them their reward is the present."

An attempt was made to secure the passage of a teachers' pension bill at the last session of the legislature, but it was unsuccessful. At the same time a bill was passed with a referendum clause providing for the pensioning of firemen. The people voted down the firemen's pension bill by an overwhelming majority.

It is believed that the teachers' pension bill could be passed easily if a referendum clause is attached, but those who backed the bill in the legislature two years ago were anxious that the legislature should settle the question without submitting it for the approval of the voters of the entire state.

PLOT AGAINST WILSON HURTS GOV. FERRIS

Washington, Jan. 23.—In the opinion of Democrats of Washington, Governor Ferris made a fatal move in giving publicity to the rumor that there is a plot afoot to overthrow Woodrow Wilson.

Governor Ferris has been looked upon as a very likely man for vice president to run with Woodrow Wilson in 1916.

It is no small distinction for a Democrat to win re-election as the governor of Michigan, and Woodbridge W. Ferris was a national figure in spite of himself, with the vice presidential nomination or the backing of his party for senator as his reward.

Other Honors in Sight.

Michigan was likely to be honored in other ways during the next two years but Governor Ferris is felt to have kicked over, not only his own chances, but those of the Democracy of Michigan when he gave publicity to the rumored plot to discredit Wilson.

Congressman Doremus of Detroit, regards it as inconceivable that any such plot could exist. He declares Woodrow Wilson to be perfectly sure of renomination in 1916 and says "no power on earth can prevent."

There is a general demand that Gov-

SOLDIER SENT HOME BY KITCHENER TO SEE DYING MOTHER.

London, Jan. 23.—An instance of the human qualities of Lord Kitchener is related in Sunderland, where a soldier was sent from the front at the government's expense to attend his dying mother.

The woman's one desire was to see her five sons, who are all in the army. Four of whom were in the English training camps and obtained leaves of absence through the officers of the Salvation Army. But the mother longed to see the youngest, who was serving in Flanders. Lord Kitchener was communicated with. The lad thereupon received a seven days' furlough, with ration and expense money, and arrived in time to see his mother before she died.

Where Did Money Go A Month Ago?

You people without a Checking Account, can you tell from memory where last month's money went?

Your neighbor with a Checking Account can look at his Check-book stubs and tell accurately his every expenditure of importance.

If it is a perplexing thing to remember where you paid out money in the past, try a First National Bank Checking Account. This will give you a record of today's payments a month from now, a year from now, or as much longer as you care to keep the check-stubs for reference.
