The ex-burster is wearing a Louisville uniform for the '15 campaign and his work on the training trip has made a hit with Manager Hayden. He still can wield the willow and demonstrated the fact when he lined out a single on his initial trip to the plate. With the old whip working well he ought to hang up a good average.

COMBINATION IS FAVORED

Delegates from the North Star lodge of this city have returned from Ironwood where they attended the district convention of the Scandinavian society, which was attended by representatives of the lodges in all parts of the district. The sentiment of the supreme officers of the organization was reported to be strongly favorable to the plan of uniting the society with the Scandinavian Brotherhood of America, which has the eastern states as its principal field of organization. The proposed consolidation would give the Scandinavians a strong organization and one that would cover a large part of the country. The question will be up for action at the supreme lodge meeting in June.

Erick Hager, of Iron Mountain, president of the supreme lodge, spent a few hours at Ironwood, and went from there to Hibbing to attend a meeting of the Minnesota district, at which other supreme lodge officers were present. Mr. Hager is urging the members to work for the consolidation. Oscar W. Samuelson, the supreme secretary, also spoke at the Minnesota meeting in favor of consolidation. Mr. Samuelson visited the lodges in Marquette county a few weeks ago.

The Brotherhood is a larger organization than the Scandinavian Society. It has more than 200 lodges, and a membership in excess of 18,000. The Scandinavian society has a large membership in the Western states. Some of the strongest lodges are in the Pacific coast cities. It also has lodges in Canada.

Shipping is the birth place of the organization, which is the oldest Scandinavian fraternal beneficiary society in the United States. It was founded more than forty years ago. Some years later lodges were organized on the Menominee, Gogebic and Mesaba ranges, and the supreme lodge was instituted in 1888. Since then each year has shown a substantial gain in membership, and during the past few years many new branches have been organized.

Until 1908 the activities of the order were confined to the Lake Superior region, but since then the supreme lodge officers have been organizing branches wherever within the jurisdiction any considerable number of Scandinavians are to be found. There are now sixty-four lodges, with a membership of more than 6,000 and with cash resources of about $140,000.

During 1914 the supreme lodge paid in sick benefits $19,131.14, in funeral benefits $9,000 and miscellaneous $20,070.62, a total of nearly $50,000. Since 1900 there has been paid funeral benefits of approximately $82,000, sick benefits $175,000, and miscellaneous, $203,000, making a grand total of almost one-half million dollars.

MAC KILLIGAN IS SUPPORTED

NON-PARTISAN CANDIDATE FOR MAYOR RECEIVES FLATTERING ASSURANCES OF SUPPORT

Entering on the last week of the municipal campaign, B. J. MacKilligan, Non-Partisan candidate for the office of mayor, is prepared to make an aggressive canvass for the office that will be carried on up to the eve of the election.

Mr. MacKilligan was prevailed to become a candidate for the office of mayor on the Non-Partisan ticket by voluntary pledges of support from all quarters of the city. He did not seek the nomination but having accepted it has prepared plans for a campaign that will be straightforward and aggressive from this time forth. Mr. MacKilligan has spent all of his life in this city. He is widely and most favorably known. For a number of years he was engaged as a conductor for the North Western road and several years ago engaged in the clothing business in this city, to which business for the past few years he has given his entire attention. He is known as one of Escanaba's most energetic and enterprising businessmen and was selected by taxpayers in all parts of the city as an ideal man to place in the city's chief executive office. From the support that has been coming to Mr. MacKilligan with each day, it is now believed that he will be elected by the greatest majority ever given a mayoralty candidate in this city. Mr. MacKilligan has announced his platform, on which he seeks the votes of the electors of the city. He believes that the people of this city should immediately take steps to either purchase the plant of the North Michigan Water Company or to construct a new system when the franchise of the private corporation expires next year. The matter is one of the most important that the people of Escanaba have ever been forced to meet and to have a man in the Mayor's office of the ability and known honesty and integrity, possessed by Mr. MacKilligan is an insurance that the proper steps will be taken to safeguard the interest of the people. Mr. MacKilligan is firmly pledged to the carrying out of plans for the construction of a sewerage system that will offer adequate service to all sections of the city. He is pledged to an endeavor to place the affairs of Escanaba on a basis such as he has established for his own business and saving the money of the taxpayers and running the city for the benefit of those who furnish the funds for the support of the city government. In this campaign Mr. MacKilligan is supported by no faction nor division of voters. He is being supported by taxpayers who desire to see in the mayor's office an energetic businessman of unquestioned honesty and ability; one capable of dealing with the important situations that will develop within the next year and one in whom all of the people of Escanaba can place implicit trust.

All that's the matter with this kind of spring weather is that it isn't.

It should have been said she succeeded to the extent of $17,000.

A partisan of the Allies has traced Gen. Geoffrey's genealogy back to the year 980, but the present head of the French forces is just now more interested in tracing his lineage forward for a mere two weeks.

The report from Lansing that the railroads of the state had raised a slush fund of $300,000 to "aid" the passage of rate legislation through the legislature, must be unfounded. The railroads, themselves, have said they were financially embarrassed.

It sure does take a lot of winters to make a single spring.

GERMANS.

The following compliment to the legislature for the passage of the Odell bill is paid by the Muskegon Chronicle.

SMALL POTATOES.

The legislature Thursday afternoon completed its work of playing politics of the size expressly denominated "peanut" in its passage over the veto of the governor of the bill abolishing the office of state game fish and forestry warden and merging that office in the public domain commission. The move was of such large size that our solons can doubtless stand off and survey it with considerable pride. Doubtless they are bringing it home today to display to admiring constituents.

We are excessively in doubt whether or not the solons will find the people back home as enthusiastic about this piece of peanut politics as they are themselves. Not that the people of the state are particularly concerned over whether or not a democrat loses the chance at a job after July 1. But the pettiness of the move on the part of the republican majority of the legislature reminds us unpleasantly that we still have a long way to go before real regard for the welfare of our state is reckoned the paramount job of our public officials, and measly little matters of pap are lost sight of.

And the leaders in the movement did not even have the honesty to be candid about it. Senator Odell presented a long statement the other day calculated to show that the office had always been used as a political depository and that efficiency of administration has been impossible because of the constant changing of officials as soon as there is a change of administration, thereby removing an incumbent so soon as he had had time to become acquainted with his job. But the senator from Shelby did not see fit to explain why he did not take advantage of his place in the legislature to introduce his measure for the abolishment of the office long ago, instead of waiting until there was a prospect that it would be a democratic instead of a republican political debt that was to be paid with the appointment.

It is hard to maintain even a reasonable degree of patience with the hypocritical pleas that were offered on the floor of both the house and senate Thursday—that the governor had been "partisan" in filling the offices since he has been in the chair. Great Scott! Does it lie in the mouth of our good-republican office holders in Lansing to find fault with the "partisanship" of Governor Ferris' appointment? Can Senator Fitzgibbon or Senator Odell point to the record of a single republican republican governor who has been as non-partisan in his appointments as has Governor Ferris? "As republicans we should believe in republican principles and republican policies," declared Senator Fitzgibbon Thursday—but he did not explain what republican principle or republican policy was at stake in the burning question of whether or not there was danger that a democrat might land a lucrative job after July 1, unless it be the policy of getting all of the pap in sight, and that is a policy that is totally "nonpartisan."

The attitude of the legislature on this subject has been distinctly disappointing at this session. The harmony with which the governor and the legislature worked the first term was something that does the heart of the man who is a citizen first and a partisan afterward good. It seemed to indicate that a better day was with us here in Michigan, when men could work together for the good of their state, regardless of differences of opinion on national policies. But this session of the legislature has gotten down to a level of petty political hacking that is discouraging.

SAYS U.S. FACES ISSUE OF BONDS

Adrian, March 29.—Speaking at the reunion of Lawrence of Lenawee county Progressives and Republicans at the annual dinner of the McKinley club here Congressman Patrick H. Kelley, of Lansing, assailed the financial program of the Democratic national administration and declared the Democrats would either have to revise the tariff again, impose another deficiency tax, or issue bonds.

"The last six months we ran behind at the rate of $13,000,000 a month. The present prosperity is due to the success of the farmers who can ask big prices on account of the demand for food in Europe. New England and Pennsylvania are not prosperous. Michigan is the richest state in the country just now because we are getting $250,000,000 a year in cash from the automobile industry.

"The return of L. Whitney Watkins to the fold afforded me great pleasure" said former Congressman G. J. Dievema. "I am sure his example will be followed by the majority of those still outside."

Mr. Diekema declared he was a Republican, "because the Republican is a party of noble original that men might be free; it is patriotic and has been true to the flag; it believes in the protection of American labor and industry; in constitutional balance between the three departments of government; in the maintenance of an independent judiciary; because of its foreign policy, which has been courageous and patriotic and has maintained our prestige abroad; because the Democratic administration always brought and still brings industrial disaster."

DESCRIBES MANNER IN WHICH MEN DIED

San Francisco, March 29.—A graphic description of the manner in which he believes the men of the submarine F-4 went to their death was given here Saturday night by J. B. Howell, former submarine commander of the United States navy and holder of the world's submarine record. There was no doubt in Howell's mind that the men were dead. He formerly commanded a submarine of the F type and said that when he established his record of 283 feet in the F-1 casting were leaking.

With reports from various officers that all was in readiness, Lieut. Edes probably ordered the automatic plow set for 70 feet," said Howell, "and the dive began. With increasing momentum, the boat passed the 70-foot mark and then reached 100 feet. The automatic plow must have clicked. The crew waited.

"One hundred and fifty feet! 'Blow auxiliary, forward and middle main ballast,' Lieut. Edes probably ordered. Then 230 feet! The momentum could not be stopped. Something had gone wrong. Too much water had entered the tanks at the beginning of the dive. Two hundred and fifty feet. The pivots and seams began to leak. The torpedo hatch casting gave way.

"Three hundred feet! The tanks tore away from the skin of the vessel and salt water rushed over the batteries. A short-circuit. Darkness! The air became terrible. Chlorine gases from the sulphuric acid and salt water filled the vessel. The crew became unconscious and as the little vessel reached the bottom they passed into eternity.

Howell declared that had the F-4 been raised within 24 hours there would have been a chance that some of the imprisoned men would have been rescued alive. As the submarines are divided into three compartments some of the crew might have saved themselves by crowding into the front compartment, the smallest and strongest. Men able to get into this compartment might have been able to live for 24 hours, despite the fact that there would have been little air space, Howell stated.

FRIDAY
Robert Warwick

AMONG THE THEATRES

THE BIJOU
Robert Warwick in "Allas Jimmy Valentine."

On Feb. 22, the World Film Corporation offers the five part photoplay "Allas Jimmy Valentine" based upon the drama of Paul Armstrong, who conceived the idea from a story by O. George Hyler, of Liebers. It is the credit of discovering the dramatic possibilities of Henry's story; sent for Paul Armstrong and that artist "fixed up" the play in, it is about 96 hours.

Henry had the instinct of the dramatist, as well as the short story writer and the instinct is shown in the neatness of construction of this film. In which Robert Warwick plays the desires of the detectives. For you go crooked and try to reform. It is a sure thing that the police officers will let you do so. Some of the detectives who were after Jimmy Valentine in his honest endeavors to straighten were cold blooded hirelings who were cut after "cases"; they were just fools and therefore easily put off the scent; one, in the last resort, when Jimmy's fortunes hung on a thread, "had a heart" and refused to arrest him, although he was sure of his guilt as a bank safe looter, in fact he was the most expert hand at the game in the country.

This is a feasible kind of crook play; it has the minimum of miraculousness; it is likely to happen, O. Henry seldom diverged fatally from the probable; there was always a substratum of the matter-of-fact in what he wrote. And "Allas Jimmy Valentine" is a very matter-of-fact play, conceding for convenience sake the wonderful power which the safe-opener possessed in his digits. Everything else might have happened in real life.

In order to "get into the skin of the part"—Robert Warwick went to Sing Sing prison for three days, associated with the prisoners there and was mistaken for one of them; the exigencies of modern motion picture making demand that every possible attempt is made to give the action, realism of a kind that shall make perfect the illusion to the audience.

The thrills in "Allas Jimmy Valentine" are spontaneous, and not manufactured; the spring from the natural action of the story. The great scene of the offering is an ingenious idea at the climax of the demonstration of his skill as the most expert and formidable safe opener in the world, whereby he saves the life of a little girl, the sister of Rose Fay, to whom he is engaged, he is in imminent danger of being arrested for past offenses.

But he escapes and he is remitted to happiness instead of imprisonment, a conventional ending, it is true, but a neutral and pleasant one. Bijou Theater Friday.

THE DELFT

Coming to the Delft Theater, Tuesday night, April 6th, is the original Studebaker Theater production of "The Winning of Barbara Worth," whose central character, Barbara Worth, bids certain to become a fixed character in dramatic literature. In no other work of fiction than the one in which her life story is told, has there been pictured a woman so characteristic, so typical of Western America. She is the woman who, while saturated with the wisdom of ages, is none the less clean, wholesome, unspotted, untainted by worldliness. Child found in "The Hollow of the Hand of God," imbued with the spirit of the desert, the mystery of nature inspires her soul and keeps her in harmony with the infinite. She is the super-woman. The future rests in her keeping. It is never of the present she thinks, but her eyes are fixed ever on that time to come when her desert shall become the abode of thousands of prosperous farmers, the home of well-doing men and women whose children will grow up out-of-doors warmed at the heart of Mother Nature, strong, wholesome sons and daughters to form a working leaven in society.

Like the author, Harold Bell Wright, the dramatist, Mark E. Swan, drew with unflinching hands a figure which must ever stand as a symbol of all that is strong and clean and wholesome in womanhood. He made Barbara Worth the daughter of the West, a woman well worth winning, such a one as in olden times men went to battle to win. So Willard Holmes must go to battle. He must meet and conquer Nature in an ugly mood before he proves himself fit to mate with the child of the desert. Barbara is strong in her own right, she is almost plain looking as the desert was even ugly at times, yet there is in her features that beauty which comes from within, from goodness and sincerity. Few novelists, or dramatists, have dared to so confront the readers and theater-goers' demand that even the heroine shall be a creature of faultless beauty, but in this case there was to be something above mere beauty driving the hero to battle.

THE BIJOU

This evening the "Photoplay without a Name" will be shown at this house and the public in general is invited to make a suggestion for the name and there is a big chance for Escanaba people to win the big $50 prize offered by the film company for the most appropriate name.

HAS BO.Y BURNED TO COMPARE BONES

Saginaw, March 25.—Expert testimony usually interesting scientific to laymen was the most dramatic feature in the trial of Charles Kimbrough charged with murdering 8-year-old Rose Laundry and burning her body.

Dr. Rolla E. McCotter, head of the department of anatomy at the University of Michigan, swore that specimens of bone submitted to him which had been taken from the furnace of the candy kitchen where Kimbrough was employed were those of a child between 7 and 10 years of age.

Pressed for proof, the expert attested the court room. He testified that when he received the samples of bone, he ordered burned the body of a girl of 12 years, which was being used at the university for experimental purposes, that he might compare the bones.

Samples of bone were then displayed and the similarities were pointed out. Dr. McCotter then showed bones of a number of animals and described the essential differences of each. The nature of the professor's testimony came as a surprise to the prosecution as well as the defense.

7 PERILED AS TUG DRIFTS 30 HOURS

At 1 o'clock Capt. Dionne notified Captains Barr and Gunderson of the fishing tug Fearless and Harvey, and their crews were immediately called and started out about 2 o'clock to search for the Sunbeam.

The Fearless ran east, southeast for six hours, until in sight of the Michigan shore, and then circled about, running from off Montague almost to Ludington before returning to port at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon. Capt. Barr found no trace of the Sunbeam, but saw fish corks where it was supposed to have placed its nets, thus leading many to believe that the tug met with an accident before making its lift Saturday morning.

At 11 o'clock Sunday morning the big tug Peter Reiss was placed at the disposal of Capt. Dionne of the coast guards, and he immediately started out with Capt. Barry and Groh, and crew, but returned about 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon, having found no trace of the missing boat.

The wives and families of the members of the crew were prostrated. Two years ago in February the Sunbeam, with the same crew, except Halvorson, broke down in midlake and drifted about until rescued by the Fearless twenty-four hours later. At that time the crew suffered a great deal from cold and exposure. Ice formed when the waves lashed against the boat, and all day and night it was necessary to chop the ice away to keep the tug from being overweighted.

Paul Horstmeier, son of the Rev. W. F. Horstmeier, had made the trip twice before for an outing. Friday night he told his mother he wanted to go again, but she begged him not to do so on account of the cold, and did not know he had gone until she arose Saturday morning.

PLAN 25,000 MEN AS NAVY RESERVE

Washington, March 29.—Rear Admiral Victor Blue made public today plans of the Navy Department for building up a reserve of 25,000 men who have had one or more terms of enlistment and who have been honorably discharged.

This reserve, it is expected, can be called to the colors within twenty-four hours if the Nation is confronted with a crisis.

The reserves will be paid $3 to $100 a year, according to the time they were under enlistment in the regular service, and they will get full pay when they are again called to serve. Charges have been made repeatedly that the present navy is at least—15,000 men short; that the Atlantic reserve fleet, which is not out of commission, could not be used in the case of war and that the navy is in a precarious condition on account of this shortage.

The reserve is expected to meet this situation without incurring the expenses that would be added to the Nation's budget if 25,000 additional sailors were added to the service.

Each sailor in the service costs Uncle Sam approximately $600 a year, so that 25,000 new men would cost $15,000,000.

The reserve system will be operated at a nominal cost, and officers insist that the experienced men will be of more value to the navy in time of actual war than so many younger men.

THE GOOD JUDGE SAVES THE BAKER FROM AN ANGRY MAN.

A "Right-Cut" user knows what he is talking about when he tells a man that a little of the Real Tobacco Chew is more comforting than the old kind.

He gets steady comfort from a small chew—and you bet he knows it.

A little chew of pure, rich, mellow tobacco—cut fine, short shred—seasoned and sweetened just enough, cuts out so much of the grinding and spitting.

Take a very small chew—less than one-quarter the old size. It will be more satisfying than a mouthful of ordinary tobacco. Just nibble on it until you find the strength chew that suits you. Tuck it away. Then let it rest. See how easily and evenly the real tobacco taste comes, how it satisfies without grinding, how much less you have to spit, how few chews you take to be tobacco satisfied. That's why it is the Real Tobacco Chew. That's why it costs less in the end.

It is a ready chew, cut fine and short shred so that you won't have to grind on it with your teeth. Grinding on ordinary tobacco makes you spit too much.

The taste of pure, rich tobacco does not need to be covered up with spices and licorice. Notice how the salt brings out the rich tobacco taste in "Right-Cut".

One small chew takes the place of two big chews of the old kind.

WHY THERE IS THE "THE STATE OF MIND"

TO WHICH PRESIDENT WILSON RECENTLY REFERRED.

NATION IS HOMESICK

A Large Majority of the American People Are Longing to Return to National Policies That Have Always Been Successful—Treasury Deficiencies and Emergency Taxes Are Strange Experiences.

President Wilson recently declared to a group of business men whom he had summoned to the White House to advise with touching some phase of the present depressed industrial situation that he was greatly puzzled by the continued stagnation in the realm of business movements and that in his opinion the existing unfortunate condition of affairs was in great part psychological, that it was due to a state of mind rather than to any actual causes that could be remedied or removed.

And even from the viewpoint of orthodox republicans it will be admitted that there is a great deal of truth in President Wilson's statement.

If President Wilson has ever been homesick; if he has ever been so far away from familiar scenes and friendly faces as to wish himself back again with the old home conditions; if he has ever worried through the days and spent the nights awake because of unhappiness over his strange surroundings and through his longing to be again with those he better knew, if the President has ever undergone this experience he can realize something of the force and effect of a "state of mind," and he can sympathize with a very large majority of the people of the United States over their present homesickness.

President Wilson knows it to be true, of course, that he was not the choice of a majority of the voters of this country for the office he now holds.

He knows it to be true that only through an unfortunate division of a great body of voters, who were actually united in sympathy and in purpose on the more important policies of national management and national legislation, was it made possible for him to become the nation's chief executive.

It is therefore true that almost every political action taken by President Wilson has been in opposition to the sympathies and the wishes of a large majority of the people of this country.

They respect him as a well equipped scholar and as a high minded gentleman, and they recognize the deference and the loyalty due to him as the honored occupant of our country's first official position.

But most of the people of the United States believe that Mr. Wilson's political theories are not capable of successful demonstration.

They know that all efforts in the past to "copy" the policies and principles of President Wilson's party to the business and governmental affairs of our nation have resulted in failures and disasters.

The great body of the American people are homesick as far as the important affairs of our government are concerned.

Perhaps it is true that those now in control are honest and earnest, and it will not be questioned that they are hoping for success. But their ways are different; their methods are peculiar and the policies they are insisting upon are not those which through years gone by have been accompanied by national prosperity and national happiness.

They want to go back to the better American ways and the happier American days.

They are disturbed through days and nights by national treasury deficiencies and emergency forms of taxation. They are distressed by idle factories and silent mills; by hearing the appeals of the needy for employment and by observing the increasingly long bread lines.

They remember, the great body of the American people do, that at other times in the history of our country there have been treasury deficiencies and emergency taxes and idle working men and long lines of the hungry and the distressed.

And they recall that these were times when President Wilson's party was experimenting on a nation, as he has been doing, with its peculiar policies and its political theories. And in the other days as in the present days these experiments created the nation-wide "state of mind" to which he recently referred, the condition of national homesickness.

Is it to be wondered at that the people of the United States are anxious to vote again?

That they are eager to return with their country as a whole to the surroundings they better know; to policies more familiar and more fortunate and more in harmony with the genius and the spirit of American life?

President Wilson is insisting upon subjecting the people of the United States to the results of political policies they have always opposed and have found to be undesirable.

They are away from home, and most of them are very anxious to have our country retrace the steps of its last unfortunate political pilgrimage and to begin again along a pathway not so troubled with discontent and with lack of confidence and with all the ills and worries that accompany individual and national travelers in wrong directions.

With a single exception, the Republican candidates for state offices are now holding the official positions for which they have been named again, and in every instance they represent tested ability and thorough adaptation for the different lines of state service that will be required of them.

Why Our Coffees Are Better

This machine is equipped with steel knives which cut the berry into uniform clean cut particles, instead of grinding and crushing it as by the old method.

This is the reason why a pound of Our Fresh Roasted Coffee cut in this mill, will make from twelve to fifteen cups more of full strength coffee than will any coffee ground the old way. The Lover of good coffee finds here a richness of flavor never found in coffee ground in the ordinary way as any price.

SECRETARY McADOO HAS LOST HIS APPENDIX TWICE.

Washington, March 29.—It was announced by the treasury department March 11 that Secretary McAdoo had been taken to a hospital to undergo an operation for appendicitis. Mr. McAdoo is now at home recuperating from some sort of an operation.

Sept. 16, 1910, New York newspaper editions published that Mr. McAdoo, then president of the Hudson River Tunnel Co., had been operated on for appendicitis.

Physicians acquainted with the facts in regard to the first operation are as to the ability of McAdoo's appendix to reappear after it once was removed.

NAVY QUARTERBACK WOUNDED IN EUROPE.

Sprantaburg, S. C., March 29.—Lieutenant Montague Nicholls of the British Royal artillery was wounded at the front in France, March 21, according to a cablegram received by his family here. He went to England to enlist when war was declared and was commissioned a lieutenant.

Nicholls resigned from the United States naval academy just before graduation in 1913. He was quarterback on the football team two seasons.

CONVICT NEGRO AS MURDERER

Saginaw, March 28.—Charles Kimbrough, the negro charged with slaying eight-year-old Rose Fernier and burning her body in the furnace of the Valley Sweets Candy factory on the night of January 3, was found guilty in the circuit court this morning of murder in the first degree. The jury had been out since yesterday noon.

Kimbrough was immediately sentenced to the Ionia reformatory for life. He showed no emotion when the verdict was rendered or when sentence was pronounced.

Kimbrough put up a remarkable front throughout the case, including his trial, never once weakening or showing the slightest sign of remorse. He went on the stand and told the story of his movements that night, asserting he left the factory before the girl went to the store, and was in a moving picture show two miles from the scene when the crime was committed.

Kimbrough was convicted largely on the testimony of Professor R. E. Comer, anatomical chemist of the University of Michigan, who analyzed fragments of bone taken from the furnace and discovered them to be the bones of a child of about the age of the Fernier girl. The Fernier girl disappeared while on the way to a store.

The 1915 Harley-Davidson Three-Speed Twin Will Climb a 60% Grade.

THIS powerful machine has taken the Harley-Davidson sidecar up a 45 per cent grade without a murmur, a grade nearly twice that of the steepest hill to be found in most localities.

The 1915 Harley-Davidson twin motor is guaranteed to develop eleven actual horsepower (37 1/2% more than the 1914 Harley-Davidson twin). This exceptional power in conjunction with the new Harley-Davidson three-speed gives the rider more power than he really needs. If the going is rough, sandy, snowy or muddy, he can shift into intermediate gear and run mile after mile without overheating the motor.

The Harley-Davidson transmission is as silent as a mouse or intermediate gear as in high gear.

It is possible to shift from intermediate to high gear or to shift into low gear, any time, anywhere, without fear of clashing or stripping of gears. This is positively prevented by an ingenious device.

There are many other features which add to the comfort, durability and economy of the 1915 Harley-Davidson.

If you can't come to see the 1915 Harley-Davidson we will be glad to arrange a demonstration any time convenient to you.

Now Is the Time You Must Use Judgment in the Styles You Select

When we were checking up the style situation in the New York market—a certain style of suit treatment came under our notice with the information that it had been accepted and largely ordered by some stores. Our information led us to think the life of this particular style would be very brief indeed and we rejected it.

No less than five ladies who bought suits of this type have commented to our suit people upon the absence of this particular style in our stocks.
The plain fact is that commencing four weeks ago even before our opening, these suits were bought at a score of Manufacturers in New York "at a price—priced for one reason only—those stores who buy "price" rather than style were interested in them.

The selection of Easter Garments here is an assurance of style correctness without your purchases, no matter how much or how little the prices paid can bring only passing satisfaction.
