

NEW YORK KILLS PROHIBITION LAW

AGED FRIEND OF DAUGHERTY DIES, SUICIDE

JESSE SMITH, ATTORNEY GENERAL'S PAL, KILLS SELF.

BY DAVID LAWRENCE.

Washington, June 1.—Jesse Smith is gone—Jesse of Presidential travels and recreation, a man of status unlike that of any one else in this or any other administration, a man of such unbounded personal devotion to Attorney General Harry Daugherty that no one could understand why he should have given the attorney general the shock of suicide.

No One But "Harry."

"You see it's this way," said Jesse one day to this correspondent on the recent presidential trip to Florida, "Harry Daugherty and I have grown up together from boyhood. We are like two brothers. What's his mine and what's mine is his. I have hardly anybody but Harry left in the world. I've buried practically all my relatives. Years ago I was married for a short time but divorced. I had a good department store business at Washington Courthouse but I sold that at a profit a few months ago. I have all the money I want. I don't need anything. Now why shouldn't I look out for Harry? He would do the same for me."

Worried Over Health.

Commander Joel T. Boone, U. S. N., one of the naval physicians, who has been on duty at the White House and who has been treating the attorney general, thinks Jesse became suddenly dejected through worry over his health. It is true he was constantly asking Dr. Boone about his physical condition and his friends recall that on many an occasion in the past Jesse Smith talked about his health as if it were an obsession. He had diabetes. His mother and father died of it. He was apprehensive that he would not live long. His friends kept telling him there was a cure for diabetes. But Jesse didn't seem to be able to grasp the possibility. In the last three days he was pre-occupied. Even though he made his will on Monday and bequeathed most of his property to Attorney General Daugherty, he did not give anyone a hint of his purpose, if indeed he had one even so late as three days ago. He played golf on Tuesday with Commander Boone and the attorney general. He played listlessly. When the game was over, he complained of being tired but made an engagement to play golf on Memorial Day but he shot himself early the same morning. No one ever knew Jesse to possess firearms nor were there any about the attorney general's apartments. Few people ever knew what Jesse

TARIFF RATE ON SUGAR NOT TO BE CHANGED

President Insists Lower Rate Injury to Industry.

Washington, June 1.—President Harding will not consider a modification of the tariff rates on sugar, as a means of bringing down the price of that commodity, it was said today at the White House after the executive had discussed the general tariff situation with Chairman Marvin of the tariff commission. Modification of the sugar schedule, in the opinion of the president, could not affect the present situation to any considerable degree, and moreover, would discourage further developments of the American domesticated sugar industry which the president believes provides the surest way to remedy conditions that now obtain in it.

FATHER OF STUDENT MAKES PUBLIC CONFESSION.

Ludington, Mich., June 1.—Details regarding what was contained in reports said to have been stolen from the Burns' Detective Agency and a letter delivered to Doris Fuchs, friend of Leighton Mount, Northwestern University student, who disappeared in the fall of 1921, at 6:30 on the night he disappeared, were given to representatives of the state's attorney's office of Chicago, at a conference here today. This information was given out after the conference by Virgil A. Fitch, county prosecutor here.

Charge Third Degree.

At the conclusion of the conference, assistant State's Attorneys Charles L. Wharton and John A. Scarboro, were served with two suits asking $10,000 damages each. The assistant state's attorneys were here as representatives of the state's attorneys of Cook County, Ill., and damages were asked in connection with the alleged "forty eight hours of third degree" given Roscoe Conkling Fitch when he was first questioned by the state's attorney's office.

MAKES SUICIDE CERTAIN.

Prosecutor Fitch said he did not feel authorized to give out full details of the information revealed at the conference, but said Assistant State's Attorney Wharton asserted when he had heard the statements of Fitch, that he was "convinced Mount committed suicide." The two assistant state's attorneys probably will arrive in Chicago some time tonight.

STRICT APPLICATION OF DRY DECISION IS DECIDED UPON.

Washington, June 1.—Strict application of the recent supreme court decision barring liquor from territorial waters of the United States has been practically decided upon by treasury officials, who hold out no hopes of meeting the views of foreign powers through regulatory provision.

NO WAY OUT FOUND.

Indications were given that no new promulgation may be expected of regulations carrying out the court's findings. It was said that no way had been found by which the rigidity of the court's ruling could be tempered, even the elastic provision affording exemption for medicinal liquors, falling to offer means by which liquor for crew rations could be encompassed and the conflict with foreign laws avoided.

ANN ARBOR LAD WINNER STATE ORATORY TEST

Muskegon Carries Off Honors in Declamation Meet Here.

Escanaba landed among the winners in the state oratorical contest for the second time in two years last night when Lawrence Hartwig, with his oration, "The Tragedy of Today," won second place for oratory. First place was won by Leslie Butler, Ann Arbor, who delivered "America and France."

Hartwig Scores Highly.

Hartwig, a lad in knee breeches, looked like a mere child in comparison with the older orators from below the straits, until he rose to deliver his speech. The complete self-possession he displayed and the holding power which he exercised over his audience marked him as one who will go far in the world of public speaking.

Look For Joint Action.

The suggestion was made in some circles that joint action may be contemplated by the foreign powers, which have made their position known to this government. While there was no confirmation of this, it appeared probable that the diplomats would communicate with their respective governments for instructions in view of the government's inability to find ways to meet the views already expressed.

Decisions Approved.

While the loyalty of the Escanaba audience to their entrant could not fail to show itself in a concerted expression of disappointment at the announcement that Hartwig had been awarded second instead of first place, there was not once heard a word of disagreement with the decision of the five judges. E. E. Gallup, secretary of the oratorical association and chairman of the contest, summed up the general opinion of the audience with the statement that none had really lost, some merely winning a little higher than the others.

Intervals Between the Declamatory and Oratorical Contests were Filled out with musical and vocal selections by the high school band, glee club and chorus. Community singing preceded out the time while the judges were making up their reports and cheers for the winners, led by Capt. "Maggie" McGuire of the football squad comprised the rest of the entertainment "fillers."

Mr. Gallup expressed his thanks to the Escanaba high school and the Escanaba civic clubs and the city in general for the excellent treatment accorded the contestants here. Summing up the history of the association and the development of oratorical work in the schools of the state during the last 20 years he pointed

VOLSTEAD ACT IS DENOUNCED BY GOVERNOR

STRIKES NOTE FOR RETURN OF LIGHT WINES AND BEER.

Albany, N. Y., June 1.—Gov. Smith this evening signed the legislature's bill wiping the Volstead act off the statute books.

And he went further. Acknowledging to the urging of his friends that he strike a note in a campaign for the return of light wines and beer, he denounced the one half of one per cent alcoholic beverage content, provided in the Volstead act as "the work of fanatical drys," calling on congress to modify it to a "common sense" maximum, and then he signed this state free to set a figure below that maximum if it so desires.

Yields No Point.

"I yield to no man in my reverence and respect for the constitution of the United States and I advocate nothing which will infringe upon the provisions of the eighteenth amendment," the governor said. "It is, nevertheless, the fact that the definition of an intoxicating beverage contained in the Volstead act is no honest or common sense one. It is impossible to divorce from the public minds the impression that the definition of an intoxicating beverage as containing more than one half of one per cent of alcohol, as written by the fanatical drys is in defiance of the general experience of mankind and of actual fact. It seems to be that common sense, backed up by good medical opinion, can find a more scientific definition of what constitutes an intoxicating beverage."

Should Fix Definition.

"Such a definition should be adopted by congress as a proper and reasonable amendment to the Volstead act and the maximum alcoholic content should be prescribed by congress which should admit all states to traffic in liquors which are in fact non-intoxicating, within the meaning of the eighteenth amendment. Subject to that limitation each state should thereafter be left free to determine for itself what should constitute an intoxicating beverage. State which then wishing to limit traffic to beverages containing more than one half of one per cent of alcohol should be free to do so and all which desire to extend a traffic to the maximum limit allowed by federal statute would be equally free to do so."

No Effect on Amendment.

The governor emphasized, however, that the repeal of the Mullan-Gage act, did not alter the effectiveness of the Volstead act in its present form as long as it stands unmodified and served notice on officers of the state that they would be expected to "enforce the Volstead act in its strictest letter."

The governor's action on the Mullan-Gage repeal measure was dramatic in its simplicity. Summoning into his office at six o'clock the army of newspaper men who had waited about the state house all day, he smilingly lifted a blotter from his signature and said:

"Boys, I have just approved the bill."

Harding Withholds Comment.

Washington, D. C., June 1.—President Harding, when informed of the action of Gov. Smith in signing the repeal bill, which makes the Mullan-Gage prohibition law a dead letter on the New York statute books refused to comment upon it. It was said at the white house that the president would issue no statement.

Prohibition Commis sioner Haynes likewise refused to commit himself on the approval of the repeal bill.

Prohibition officials expressed disappointment but were not surprised over Gov. Smith's action. The policy of the federal government relative to the enforcement of prohibition in New York now a single-handed prohibition state is yet to be determined.

Enforcement Considered.

Two avenues high officials tonight, appeared to be open to the government. One is to make an intense drive for enforcement in New York state, even to the extent of depleting prohibition forces in other sections of the country, to demonstrate the government's determination and power to uphold the constitution and federal law despite the refusal of New York to assist in the enforcement.

The alternative course, if followed in official quarters, would be to continue enforcement

With the present staff of federal agents in New York state with knowledge that they probably would be unable to enforce the law rigidly alone.

First Course Probable. The indications, however, that the course would be adopted and all available agents would be sent to New York with other agents of the government upon as far as possible cooperate in enforcement measures.

Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel for the anti-saloon league, in a statement, declared "they only class to be benefited by the repeal is the boot-licker and the illicit dealer."

The party was given at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Herman LeFave, at Wells. Games were played and a delicious lunch was served.

WILL MAKE WAR ON DESTROYERS OF WILD GAME

A movement is under way to protect the game of this section by enlisting the aid of sportsmen in shooting game destroying animals and birds before they have an opportunity to cause destruction during the nesting and maling season. Plans are being made to have every sportsman interested in game protection, spend some time ridding woods, field and marsh of predatory hawks, owls and crows, weasels and others who annually kill ten times as much game as all gunners combined. It has been stated that the red squirrel alone will kill 200 birds a season, while the great horned owl destroys annually covey after covey of quail. Special efforts are being made to enlist the aid of game lovers against the crow who is described as destroying individually more birds of all kinds, more birds' eggs and young poultry than any other bird that ever flapped a wing.

To Organize Clubs.
All game destroying animals and birds are classed by sportsmen and game lovers as vermin, and it is expected that vermin hunting clubs can be organized here and that members of established gun clubs will join in the movement by going into the woods and shooting as many game destroyers as they can find.

The Piffle Hook

THE JOB GROWS interesting. The interest sorta adds up, growing bigger and bigger with each succeeding day. Finding the copy for the "day hook" features for Friday was like an old fashioned game of "hide the thimble." "The Puritan Wife" was discovered hanging upside down on a spindle in the phone booth. Jiggs was sequestered underneath a stack of syndicate matter in the back room. Salaman Sam, The Duffs, Freckles and Marshal Otey Walker with the Red Wheelbarrow were discovered in the addit'ors private letter file. It did appear for a time as if we were forced to look in the office Bible for our daily "Thought" but the mailman, at the last minute, threw in a special delivery letter wherein Tom Sims' baseball chatter and the religious advice rubbed shoulders in peaceful association. Tonight the only other Detroit fan in town sauntered in and suggested that he be assigned to write the "Hook" for today. He escaped by half a hop as the "pitch hitter" tried to hold him to his offer.

"Hank" is a low down, plagiarizing parasite of a no account "Camp Inspector" if he has attempted to claim the glory for this epic of the rivermen," he said. "While I am not certain of the authorship, I know positively that the song was sung at a shindig down Bangor way twenty years before Haywire Henry saw light of day. It is my suggestion that a committee of three, consisting of Stewart Edward White, Doug Malloch and Charley Carr be appointed to conduct some real research work in this important matter."

because he is so the sincerity of his purpose on the tax problem is called in question by demagogues here and there, but his critics are confounded by the revenue exhibit. Far from setting up devices whereby the rich man may be moved so to avenge his financial affairs as to evade his proper share of the tax burden—a thing which he is able to do despite the law that confronts him—Secretary Mellon wishes to adjust the law so that the rich man will have no interest or much less in evading its terms, and he further wishes to tighten up some loose places in the existing laws.

High surtaxes sound well in the ears of the casual thinker, but it is not a question of how they sound; it is a question of what they yield, and this latter is the test Secretary Mellon abides by. For the man of great wealth who chooses not to deliver under present rates there is a refuge in the tremendous volume of tax-free securities in which he can invest and thus smile at the importunities of the income tax collector.

A man with a house full of kids can go to a show and sleep through a shooting act.

In the middle of the afternoon an automobile drove in, and the impatient honk-honk called her to the door.

"I passed a runaway horse and found him in the road. This was the nearest house, so I brought him here," a big ranchman said as he lifted the limp form of Hugh Norton in his arms.

"Oh, is he badly hurt? Bring him right in," Ann said distressed.

"He's pretty bad. Anything I can do?" the man asked, as under Ann's directions he laid Hugh on the couch.

"Wait until I telephone the doctor, please," Ann said, "if I don't get him on the telephone, you can stop and leave word to come right over." Then, as Hugh groaned, she bent over him. "Are you in much pain, Hugh?"

He smiled, but the smile quickly changed to a contortion of pain.

"Here," he said, laying his hand on his chest.

Ann asked the man to loosen Hugh's clothes while she called Doctor Grayson. Fortunately he was at home, and would be right over. The ranchman, after again offering his services, went on his way, and Ann and Nora made Hugh as comfortable as possible while waiting for the doctor. He was only partly conscious, and Ann feared he might die before the doctor came. Dear Hugh, he had been so kind to her—always. He had tried to help her.

"A PURITAN WIFE"

BY JANE PHELPS

A QUARREL AND AN ACCIDENT Chapter LXXI.

For the remainder of the evening Ann never once spoke to Grace, although she compelled herself to chat with Ned and Bessie. She had been terribly frightened, and Bessie, seeing the effort she was making, proposed an early departure. Dick urged them to remain, but as Ann said nothing, they rose to go.

As she stood talking to Bessie, while waiting for Ned to bring up the car, she heard Grace say to Dick:

"The idea of Ann's blaming me for what Jackie did. You know I love him, Dick. I never knew anyone to act as Ann does. How you stand it is beyond me. Poor Vikings!"

She had spoken in a low tone, and Ann hadn't stopped chatting with Bessie, but she had heard every word distinctly. Sound carries easily and far in the still California nights.

"Good-night, Ann!" Grace called. "Get out of the right side of the bed in the morning and forget your grouch."

Ann made no reply.

Before they retired for the night, Ann and Dick quarreled bitterly. All Ann's pent-up feeling against Grace Edmunds was given vent to, all her jealousy and dislike. She criticized Grace caustically, declared her common, and unworthy anyone's friendship.

Dick became violently angry and took Grace's part, even saying that if Ann was half as dainty and lady-like as Grace she would be able to understand her.

"You're such an infernal stick yourself you can't see that a fellow likes a little fun once in a while. You should have married some long-haired schoolmaster, one of your own kind, then he would have been satisfied to sit opposite your sour face, and have no friends. But I'm not that kind, and the sooner you realize it the better." He unlocked a drawer in his desk, and for the first time took a drink in Ann's presence without a remonstrance from her.

In the morning they breakfasted in silence. Then Dick left at once, making no response to Jackie's cry for his usual romp.

Ann sat at the table, big, slow tears dropping unheeded on the cloth. She was sorry she had quarreled with him, but over and beyond was the feeling that the end had come—that they could not go on. She took Dick's talk of Grace as another sure proof he loved her, that nothing would change him.

Nora came in, and laying her hand on Ann's shoulder said:

"Please don't cry, you'll make yourself sick." The tender touch broke down the last bit of control Ann possessed, and she sobbed bitterly without restraint, her arms about the maid, little Jack clinging to her skirts and begging her not to cry.

"I'll fix her!" Nora said, after she had quieted Ann, and once more gone about her kitchen work. "I'd almost kill her for Mrs. Beiden."

Dick did not come in to luncheon. At first Ann thought she would send Nora to call him, then decided not. It was the first time he had remained away since they had been married. He was angry at her because she had not been friendly toward Grace.

She ate her luncheon, then went about her work in a dull, listless hopeless way. Never before had she failed to blame herself when they disagreed, to pray for patience and forbearance, and to acknowledge herself as in the wrong. But the danger to Jackie had hardened her, she saw only her own unhappiness, her dark future.

In the middle of the afternoon an automobile drove in, and the impatient honk-honk called her to the door.

Now, a Quick Quaker Oats Cooks in 3 to 5 minutes The quickest cooking oats in the world

Now your grocer has Quaker Oats in two styles. One the kind you have always known—the other is Quick Quaker.

Quick Quaker cooks in from 3 to 5 minutes. And it cooks to perfection. So it is almost like a ready-cooked dish.

No other oat flakes on the market cook anywhere near so quickly.

The two styles are identical in quality and flavor. Both are flaked from the finest grains only—just the rich, plump, luscious oats. A bushel of choice oats yields but ten pounds of these delicious flakes.

But in Quick Quaker the oats are cut before flaking. They are rolled very thin and partly cooked. So the flakes are smaller and thinner—that is all. And those small, thin flakes cook quickly.

Ask for Quick Quaker if you want this style. Your grocer has both. But always get Quaker Oats for their delightful flavor.

Aged Resident Passes Away At Family Home

Peter Haring, one of the oldest settlers in this city, passed away at his home, 1198 Eighth avenue south, at 5 o'clock Friday morning. Mr. Haring had been confined to his bed for five months, suffering with the infirmities of old age. He would have been 88 years of age had he lived until September.

Mr. Haring was born in September, 1835, and lived in Beaver Dam, Wis., for many years. His mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Van Houghton Haring, was born in the house where Gen. Lafayette made his headquarters during the Revolutionary War. In 1847 Mr. Haring's father was killed in a railroad accident and she married J. B. Demorest at Beaver Dam, Wis. She lived to be 100 years of age. A long life seemed to be the characteristic of the family, Mr. Haring's grandmother having lived to be 92 years old and his grandfather reached the advanced age of 99. His great grandfather was one of the heroes of the Revolutionary War. He was married to Miss Margaret Johnson in 1860 at Beaver Dam, Wis. They came to this city in 1879 when Escanaba was a mere hamlet and have made their home here continuously.

He leaves to mourn him his wife and the following sons and daughters: C. H. Haring, Milwaukee, Wis.; Miles Haring, city; Ned Haring, city; D. R. Haring, Spokane, Wash.; E. C. Haring, Nolden, Wash.; Mrs. Wm. Brown, city, and Mrs. H. K. Anderson, Kenton, Mich.

Mr. Haring joined the Masonic Order at Beaver Dam, Wis., in 1860 and later was transferred to the local order. He was a devout member of the First Baptist church and had a large circle of friends in this city.

He entered the employ of the C. & N. W. Ry. Co. shortly after his arrival in the city and worked in the round house until 1910 when he was pensioned and retired from active service.

The body was taken to the Allo Funeral Home where it will lie in state until Sunday morning when it will be removed to the family residence where the funeral services will be held Sunday afternoon at 2:30 under the auspices of the Delta Lodge, No. 179, F. & A. M., Rev. H. C. Skinner, officiating. Burial will be in Lakeview cemetery in the family lot.

MARKET REPORTS

NEW YORK STOCKS

New York, June 1.—Stock prices sustained a sharp setback in today's more active market. The rapidity of the recent rise and the disinclination of operators for the advance to extend their commitments at current levels, induced rather extensive short sellings by bear traders, which was aided by heavy liquidation for the account of curb houses, which were forced to sell stock on the "high board" to meet obligations arising from bankruptcy of the largest curb house. The reaction covered the entire list, losses in a number of the active shares ranging from one to nearly five points.

GEORGE DAUSS PITCHING WELL. BY HILLY EVANS. Is Dame Fortune about to smile on George Dauss late in his pitching career?

George Dauss for years has been a member of the Detroit staff of the American League. His pitching efforts have met with varying success. Never has he quite reached the heights of stardom. I have always regarded Dauss as one of the best pitchers in the American League.

Dauss is Great Pitcher. Dauss has excellent speed, which he delivers with a peculiar side-arm motion. Side-arm pitchers are always troublesome. Coupled with a good fast ball, Dauss presents a fast breaking curve that is almost unhitatable when properly controlled.
