

FREED ON BAIL HE GOES FROM JAIL TO ALTAR

"Bill" Lovett, Accused of Crime, Asks "Fair Chance."

New York—Romance, that knows no walls, bars or other obstacles, blossomed recently for "Bill" Lovett, one of Brooklyn's picturesque characters. A short time after he had been let out on bail, he was married to Anna Loneragan, daughter of Mrs. Mary Loneragan, recently acquitted of the murder of her husband, John Loneragan. It was the beating John Loneragan gave Anna in his bicycle shop which led to the shooting of Loneragan.

"Bill" had been in trouble with the police in Brooklyn so many times that he has almost lost count. They allege that Bill is the ringleader of one of Brooklyn's worst gangs, but yesterday Bill set folks right.

"Do I look like a gangster?" he asked a reporter who met the bride couple as they were dashing for a Long Island train. "Why don't folks cut that stuff out and give me a chance to show them I'm no gunman? And you can take it from me that Anna here didn't marry any gangster. She saw me for just what I am and not for what the police want to call me."

Anna nodded a quick assent as she hung on Bill's arm.

It was in Loneragan's bicycle shop, standing on the very spot where Loneragan had fallen with two shots fired from his own pistol that the interview took place. Mrs. Lovett proudly showed their marriage license, and the shining gold wedding ring which Bill had bought even before he was able to get out of jail.

"He's got a new boss now," she said, "and I'll see to it that he behaves himself for Bill isn't a bit bad. It's just the name he's got that hurts him every time anything happens and he's around. We're going out to Long Island, to Freeport and Long Beach, for a couple of weeks, and when we get back Bill's going over to New York and going to get down to work in earnest. He's got to now, you know."

The romance between Bill and Anna began when they were just youngsters. Bill lived in the Red Hook residential section of Brooklyn, down Butler street way, and Anna lived within the shadow of the bridge. Despite Bill's various trips to court (14 arrests but only seven months in jail) Anna stuck to him through it all. And during the recent proceedings when Bill was held for alleged possession of a revolver, Anna sat on a bench in the Brooklyn courtroom and watched and hoped for the best.

And when Bill finally got out, when some one raised the $5,000 necessary to turn him loose on bail until the case comes up in September, the two decided to postpone things no longer and called their friends together and announced their plans. One of "the boys" went out and got the greenest taxicab they could find, and the party, about nine in all, set out for the marriage license bureau.

Couple Is Married.

Just as it was about to shut its doors, the party dashed in, and the couple were married by Deputy Clerk Joseph J. McCormick. The bridegroom didn't know that he was carrying five or six bullets inside him. When Lovett got out of Cumberland hospital the doctors gave him less than six months to live. He laughed at them, and is laughing yet. And he has several scars from German bullets which nicked him while he served with the regulars in France during the war.

There's one thing," Lovett said to the reporter after the wedding. "If there's any murder going on in the next couple of weeks, you'll know Bill Lovett

WORLD SERVICE NOT SPURT BUT M. E. STANDARD

Bishop Explains Aims and Work of Methodist Campaign.

Detroit.—"Not a spurt but a standard" is the way Bishop Theodore S. Henderson, of the Methodist Episcopal Area of Detroit, characterized the World Service Program of the Methodist Episcopal Church which was explained to the 24 Detroit district superintendents and about 10 representative area officials in an executive and private session, Thursday and Friday in the Central M. E. Church House.

The program was presented by the Rev. Dr. Ralph E. Diffendorfer, Chicago, secretary of the department of education of the committee on conservation and advancement of the denomination. To Dr. Diffendorfer is given credit for authorship of most of the advance program, adopted by the council of boards of benevolence of the church at a recent meeting in Chicago.

Metholam's world-wide Centenary program, calling for the expenditure of over $100,000,000 in a five-year effort for church extension, closes in May, 1924. This layout of work was similar to that of several religious denominations, in which specific aims were sought over a definite period of time.

A Standard Year.

"The new world service program is a kind of continuation of the Centenary," Bishop Henderson said. "But it is more comprehensive and challenging. We are now at the place where we are furnishing a standard year to be used as a basis for all years."

That is the world service scheme will not run for one year or five years and then be discontinued, but it will be the measure of what a normal year of Methodism should accomplish.

The 1924 work calls for an expenditure of $18,500,000 for missionary, educational and benevolent work at home and abroad. While the approved needs of the church for benevolence and mission activities were $28,045,173, the amount which is being asked is $18,500,000. This is the minimum required to maintain Methodism's interests.

It is divided as follows. Board of foreign missions, $6,800,000; board of home missions and church extension, $6,800,000; board of education for Negroes, $700,000; board of education, $1,500,000; board of Sunday School, $600,000; board of conference claimants, $150,000; board of Epworth League, $175,000; American Bible Society, $200,000; board of temperance and public morals, $250,000; general deaconess board, $90,000; commission on life service, $75,000; committee on conservation and advance, $65,000.

Addressed By Bishop.

Bishop Henderson at the devotional meeting Thursday afternoon addressed the conference on world service of the Methodist Episcopal Church, emphasizing its motto: "To serve the present age." Friday morning the Rev. R. J. Wade, Chicago, corresponding secretary of the committee on conservation and advance, addressed the meeting. The Rev. Dr. Ralph and his wife were out to Long Beach and had nothing to do with them.

"When we get back I'm going to work in the insurance business in New York and I'm going to try and live down this gangster stuff, for it's not so. I've got good folks and that stuff hurts them." Here the bride party dashed for the chugging green cab, and with parting salutations to their friends in the neighborhood, they headed for the Long Island station. As the cab disappeared in the distance one of "the boys" turned to the reporter and said: "Bill's a hell of a good guy. Give him a nice break now and no gangster stuff."

FAYETTE EXCURSION.

The Steamer "Ora Endress" will run from this city to Fayette Sunday, Aug. 12th, when excursionists may enjoy a day's outing at the beautiful spot of which tourists visiting this section of the state are loud in their praise.

The boat will leave this city at the Oliver Docks at 8 a. m., returning it will leave Fayette at 6 p. m., thus giving the people a long day in the open to enjoy fishing, or a picnic and other outdoor sports. This is one of the most picturesque spots on the Bay de Noc and any one who has never seen this place should take advantage of the excursion and enjoy a day's pleasure. The trip aboard the boat alone is worth the price charged for the excursion.

"drunk motor law" and is Act No. 164 of the Public Acts of Michigan for 1917. It makes it unlawful for "any intoxicated person" to drive a motor vehicle within the state. In his charge to the jury, Judge Jeffries interpreted the statute as meaning that "a man shall be chargeable only when he is driving an automobile while drunk or under the influence of liquor to such an extent that he is drunk."

Sees Law Vitiating.

Later in his charge, Judge Jeffries made the following definition of drunkenness: "Now drunkenness is such a state or such a physical or mental condition that a man is off his equilibrium, that he is incapable both mentally and physically, that he is incapable of the power of locomotion, that he is incapable of acting as a normal, sober man would act." It is this definition which Mr. Toms considers as vitiating the "drunk motor law."

The judge's complete language, taken from the court's official stenographic records, was as follows: This man is charged with driving a car while drunk upon the public highway; and unless you find he was drunk, then your verdict should be not guilty. It is not enough to find that he had a few drinks and was under the influence of liquor. He must not only have had a few drinks but he must be under the influence of liquor to the extent of being drunk while driving the car, before you can convict him of this charge.

Now, drunkenness is such a state or such a physical and mental condition that a man is off his equilibrium, that he is unbalanced both mentally and physically, that he is incapable of the power of locomotion, that he is incapable of acting as a normal, sober man would act; in other words, it is such a state that a man is incapable of performing the mental and physical activities of life. In other words, he is off his balance, he is off his equilibrium, he staggers, maybe he does not think accurately; he may be in a state of excitement; in other words, he is not normal, he does not see things normally, he does not act normally. Now, with that and your common experience, gentlemen of the jury, I hope you will arrive at what constitutes drunkenness and apply it in this case.

Defined in Dictionaries. Legal literature, however, affords other definitions than that made Monday by Judge Jeffries. Bouvier's Law Dictionary, the standard legal lexicon which has sufficient authority to be quoted frequently in court arguments and legal briefs, defines the word in the following language: "Drunkenness—The condition of a man whose mind is affected by the immediate use of intoxicating drinks. This condition presents various degrees of intensity, ranging from a simple exhilaration to a state of utter unconsciousness and insensibility. The popular phrase, the term drunkenness is applied only to those degrees of it in which the mind is manifestly disturbed in its operations." Rapalle and Lawrence's Law Dictionary, another standard work, defines drunkenness thus: "Disorder of the mind occasioned by the recent use of intoxicating liquor."

The American Corpus Juris, the legal digest, cites as a leading opinion under this heading the case of Paris and Great Northern Railway Co. vs. Robinson, decided by the Texas Court of Civil Appeals in 1900. In this case Chief Justice Willson declared: "Intoxication is of varying degrees. A person so under the influence of liquor as not to be entirely at himself is intoxicated, yet he may not betray it by either movement or word and his condition may not be discernible by his intimate friends."

Subsequently, the same case was considered by the Texas Supreme Court at which time this definition was adopted and the court further held that: "the term 'drunk' is synonymous with the word 'intoxicate' and is of varying degrees."

Michigan Decision. The Michigan Supreme Court tried its hand at a definition of the word as far back as 1899, in the case of Lafier vs. Fisher, reported in Vol. 121 of the Michigan reports. In this case, the defendant was charged with unlawfully selling liquor to a drunken customer. The charge of the trial judge in Monroe County was endorsed by the Supreme Court and incorporated in its decision, as follows: "It is not necessary that the person should be SO-CALLED 'DEAD-DRUNK' OR HOPELESSLY INTOXICATED. It is enough that his senses are obviously destroyed or distracted by the use of intoxicating liquor."

In the case of The People vs. Lowerie, Vol. 163 of the Michigan reports, the trial judge held that what constitutes drunkenness is a question of fact for the determination of the jury. The case was reviewed by the Supreme court of Michigan in 1910, at which time the opinion of the trial judge was sustained, Justice Moore writing the opinion of the Supreme Court. It is as follows: "It is almost a begging of the question to attempt to define what we mean by 'drunk.' A charge of drunkenness signifies such a condition of a person as is induced from the excessive use of intoxicating liquor. 'Drunk' is a common expression and everybody knows what condition a man is in order to be drunk, and you may determine that condition from the testimony."

WHAT'S DRUNK? COURTS DIFFER ON DEFINITION

Detroit Jurist Tells Jury It Means Incapable of Locomotion.

Detroit—"If being 'drunk' means being 'incapable of the power of locomotion,' then it is impossible to obtain a conviction under the 'drunk motor law,'" said Robert M. Toms, chief assistant prosecuting attorney, in discussing the recent charge to the jury made by Judge Edward J. Jeffries in the case of The People vs. Lester Lamb.

"If a man were 'incapable of the power of locomotion,'" said Mr. Toms, "he would be unable to get into an automobile, let alone drive it. We might just as well stop charging persons with operating an automobile while intoxicated, if that is what the law means."

Lester Lamb was tried and acquitted in Judge Jeffries' court on charges under that law. The statute is commonly called the

Things We Have Always Known

The recent business condition has brought to the forefront of thought many fundamental considerations that have always been known but have been damned with faint praise.

Human nature in the mass is very much like human nature in the individual. One of its dominant characteristics has been summed up in the observation, "You never miss the water till the well runs dry." We never appreciate fundamental things until we have occasion to do without them.

This observation has a special application to the Demand of the public for the products of industry. While the Demand was at high tide and everybody was busy trying to supply that Demand at a profit no one, seemingly, gave a thought to where the Demand came from, how long it might last, or what would happen if it should fail. We merely assumed the permanent existence of the Demand, just as we assume the presence of water, air and fire.

But a day came when Demand began to subside, and in many industries it came almost to a full stop. And then we missed it, and realized, as never before, what an important thing it was. And we began to inquire where it came from in the first place, and how it might be restored.

We always knew—everybody knew—that Desire for things made a Demand for them in the market. That people desired things we accepted as an elemental fact. - But when we discovered that Desire fluctuated we began to appreciate that Desire, as we know it, is a thing created by the art of man. It is a highly specialized form of an elemental need—just as a Louis XVI chair is made out of a tree.

This discovery led to another equally important discovery that the means of refining and specializing that Desire was Advertising. The gigantic work that has been accomplished by modern advertising now stands out in bold relief. It has been the means by which the refinements of civilization have been made known and made desirable, and this desire has been made into Demand. It is a simple fact that a million profitable forms of industrial activity owe their very existence to the fact that Advertising upheld the standards of living which in turn provided the demand for their products.

METHODISTS TO LIFT BAN ON PLEASURE

Rules Against Dancing, Theatre, Circus and Cards to Go.

Chicago—The half century Methodist Episcopal rule prohibiting dancing, theatre going, card playing and circus attendance will be lifted when the Methodist Episcopal Church, North, and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, are reunited.

With removal of the ban, he said, the rule barring actors and dancing teachers from the church also will be abolished.

A copy of the proposed constitution of the union of the two largest divisions of the Methodist Episcopal church was received recently by Dr. Zaring.

Following John Wesley's rule that Methodists should take part in no diversions "except in the name of the Lord Jesus," the general conference of the church, North forbade these amusements in 1872.

AMUSEMENTS

AT THE DELFT.

Accorded unstinted praise by cinema critics noted for their failure to enthuse greatly over most feature productions, "Driven" has just justified the fullest measure of the faith that Carl Loemmle, president of the Universal Pictures Corporation had in it when he broke a precedent of six years' standing and purchased a production made outside of Universal City.

It is an epic of life in the Blue Ridge Mountains, a cross-section of a phase of American life that one knows exists, but scarcely can imagine. It is the story of a mother who forges everything, even family and tribal loyalty, and sells out her husband and three sons to insure happiness for the one real human being in the brood—a timid, shy lad, who longs for the better things of life and who, by some freak of fate, was born into this strange family.

A magnificent cast was gathered by Director Brabin. There is Burr McIntosh, one of the most finished and popular actors on either stage or screen, doing excellent work as the brutal father; Emily Fitzroy, a noted figure on stage and screen in both America and England, and playing with consummate artistry the part of the Spartan mother; Elinor Fair, young and beautiful, as the sweetheart of timid Tommy, and Charles Emmet Mack, the young Griffith find, and loaned for this production by his distinguished mentor, as "Tommy."

Then there are such other well-known players as Ernest Chandler, George Bancroft and Leslie Stowe. The picture is beautiful from a photographic standpoint, having been "shot" in the exact locale of the story—the heart of the Blue Ridge Mountains.

"Driven" opens an engagement of three days at the Delft theater today. Manager Jacobs is confident that it will meet with the same success here as it has in other cities where it has been shown.

AT THE STRAND.

Tom Mix, the popular William Fox star, gathers additional laurels in his latest picture, "Tom Mix in Arabia," a fast combination of thrills and laughter, which will be shown at the Strand theater today. Good as the other Mix pictures have been, this is probably the most entertaining of the lot.

As usual, Mix takes a number of chances that are real thrillers. He descends a mountain, for example, by the simple but dangerous process of lassoing a tree and ground. He does all this very casually, as though it were the regular method of procedure. But his nonchalance did not prevent last night's audience from gasping with fear.

But the thrills, many of them as there are, are outnumbered by the laughs. Mix starts as a ranch owner who, through a series of strange circumstances, goes to Arabia, where he is taken for the heir apparent to the throne. He begins immediately running the harem on a strictly American plan, beats up a sheik or two, and makes a whirlwind getaway with the girl of his choice. A picture, all in all, that you will thoroughly enjoy.

Hiring a New Office Boy

THE ideal business organization is one where, when a member of the Board of Directors leaves, there is a general advance all along the line; a new office boy is hired and the machine is complete in every detail.

It is toward such an ideal that the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) is striving.

In the selection of employees great care is taken to get young men who may be developed for positions of responsibility and trust. The results of this policy are to be seen by taking a careful check of the higher officers of this Company. Every one of these men has come up through the ranks, many from the lowliest beginning. They have won preferment by unusual fitness, by sheer ability and mastery of the particular work entrusted to their care.

It is this spirit of pure democracy which has made the organization of the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) what it is today—a big, loyal hard-working group of men and women, bound together by mutual consideration, respect and ambition.

The men in the ranks of the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) have constantly before them the examples of those now directing the Company's activities. They know that there is an open road ahead, and that for the men who show unusual aptitude in any department of the business; unusual ability to vision the future, or to direct the immediate, there are no limitations placed upon advancement. Such men, taken from the ranks, will be the directing heads a few years hence.

This spirit, permeating every employe from the top to the bottom, keys the entire organization to a pitch of efficiency which enables the Company to render a superior service to 30 million people of the middle west.

The Piffle Hook

A FAIR QUESTION.
 If O'Connell day, as the Irish say, Reflects the great days of yore, Why was it named for a handsome youth From the Delta Hardware store? —ADE

THE GOVERNOR OF Ohio took two lifers with him into the woods for a vacation. After a couple of years association with Ohio politicians, he doesn't care what sort of company he keeps.

TWO MEN, lost for several days on Mount Katandini, have been found. What a weird place to become lost!

BOOTLEGGERS in Oklahoma complain that their patrons are giving them counterfeit currency. That's a thing any honest, law-abiding bootlegger has a right to get all hot up over.

SIR, Speaking, as you and your friends were the other day, about the penny with a hole in it, I beg leave to remark that there's something queer about anything one can buy for nine cents in these days of normalcy. —B. A. M.

In Other Words, the Clerk Sold Him the Article and a Penny With a Hole in It for Ten Cents.

BURGLARS loaded a dye shop in Illinois which one might, if one didn't have an aversion for puns, call a colorful crime.

SIGNOR Luis Angel Firpo, the dainty shoe clerk-apothecary from the Argentine, says he'd rather wait until 1925 to settle his argument with Col. William Harrison Dempsey. We can appreciate his feelings: If it were us, we'd rather wait until 1926.

ONE OF THE greatest modern inventions is an attachment for saxophones which adulterates them so that they don't sound like saxophones.

SIR—The girl in the lawyer's office was complaining of a draft. "Why," asked her boss, "don't you wear a more ample costume?" The only one she possessed with more material in it was her bathing suit and she'd loaned that to her kid sister. Tough, wasn't it? —MERRY ANN

Why Didn't She Have Her Boss Get Out an Injunction Against the Brecca?

PERHAPS THE Chicago man found dead in the lobby of a Minnesota summer hotel had just been told what was costing him to stay there.

MRS. WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST denies that she will run for congress. Mr. Hearst has not, so far as we have learned, denied anything.

Honest burglars . . . red blackbirds . . . over-night hair restorers . . . valueless diamonds . . . puncture proof tires . . . healthful moonshine . . . odorless limburger . . . tasteless castor oil . . . UNIVERSAL PEACE . . .

SIR—Ira Call is the world's biggest liar. I'm surprised that you fell for that Benjamin Franklin stuff. As a matter of fact, anyone knows that Ira couldn't have attended and I know, absolutely, that if he did he wasn't toastmaster. I was. —BINGO BEAN

Well, Of Course, That Makes It Different.

FAMILIAR QUOTATIONS
 "Looks like rain, don't it?" —H. F. A.

UNSUNG HEROES
 The man who never talks unless he knows what he's talking about. —TIM

NOTHING'S IMPOSSIBLE
 But did you ever try to swim in a tank car of molasses? —C. T. S.

"We've gotta have your 'copy' right away," says CHIF, the demon linotyper.

And he wouldn't even wait for the last line. —H. K. R.

WILL-POWER is to human careers what the "B Battery" is to radio.

EIGHTY-FOUR.
 A little man 84 years old wanders into a New York police station in his bedroom slippers and shirt-sleeves. He gives his name as John Burke and says he got lost while running after a fire engine.

On the average, most of us are interested all through life in the things that strike our fancy in youth. The older we get, the more we realize how few really interesting things there are in life, which at its best is dull without the coloring of imagination—delusions.

BUSINESS.
 We Americans are tending to make a religion of business, comments Dean Inge of St. Paul's church in London, after pondering his visit to our country last year.

"Books are published for the devotional exercise of the young business man, and sermons are preached to prove that the practice of the Christian religion usually leads to a handsome income."

HE FASTED 70 days—Jonas Pappo, 74, farmer near Rush Lake, Minn. His purpose? A last-resort attempt to regain his health. It was a losing fight. He died. But he kept on his feet up to the last week. That's what will-power did for a man with one foot in the grave. It suggests the possibilities of what will-power can do for people blessed with good health.

NATALIE HAS A CONFIDENT.
 Chapter XLII.

For the first time in weeks Natalie slept peacefully. She was safe at last for a time, safe from the haunting terror of the job hunter, safe from encounters with those whom she wished to avoid. In no way did Etta and Clyde change in their attitude toward her. She was a helping friend.

Two days after Natalie took up her work with them, Etta's little daughter arrived. Then Natalie knew a sort of happiness to add to her peace. The tiny babe awoke all the mother instinct latent in her: she loved the child almost as if it were her own. Yet occasionally, when she saw Clyde's pride and happiness, she had again the feeling of having cheated Horace. Perhaps if she had not left him and they had had a child, Mrs. Crandell would have been kinder. Horace not so coldly critical.

"It's too late now," she told herself, as she lavished affection on little Natalie, named for her.

Etta and Clyde watched her, and when she was busy talked of how they hoped she would go back to Horace, and in their simple way tried to plan how they might help bring it about.

Often Natalie talked aloud to the baby, giving voice to all that was in her mind, finding relief in speaking.

"He didn't love me enough, baby, to try to help me be more like I should have been—like his kind. And his mother hated me. And he promised he would never leave her, that she should live with him always. It wasn't fair, baby, was it?"

The tiny babe would gurgle and coo, and Natalie, after petting

Queen Alexandra, in her thoughtfulness for birds, has a tree at Sandringham on which in cold weather nuts, fruits, and odd scraps of food acceptable to birds are tied to the branches.

An original and curious way of making a living is that of one woman in Scotland who is engaged in tending and twisting by hand the fringes of tartan plaids which are worn by certain Highland regiments of the British army.

Brain is the most variable in size and quality of all the parts of the human body. "Bessinette" is really a word of French origin, meaning a cradle made of wicker.

CHANGE OF LIFE LOSES TERRORS

For Women who Rely upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Greenville, Pa.—"I took your medicine through the Change of Life and it did wonders for me. I was down in bed when I started to take it and weighed 95 pounds. I had hot flashes and was so nervous and weak that everything would get black and I could not see. I would sit and cry and did not know what I was crying for. Since I have been taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I feel younger than I did ten years ago, and my friends all tell me I look younger, and I owe it all to the Vegetable Compound. I do all my housework for a family of seven now. I will be glad to answer any woman who writes me in regard to my case."—Mrs. JOHN MYERS, Union St., Greenville, Pa.

A Famous Beauty For 40 years—due to a French-type clay

By Edna Wallace Hopper. For two score years I have been a famous beauty. For 32 years a stage star. Yet I still play young girls' parts. And I look as young and winsome as I did when I began.

The clay I now use is based on 20 years of scientific study. It is that rare clay which experts proved to bring the maximum results.

It is refined clay, with the useless mud removed. It is white and clean and dainty. It embodies several added factors which bring multiplied results.

This super-clay, which I call my White Youth Clay, will bring to anyone new ideas of what a clay can do.

New bloom at once. New beauty and new bloom come quickly to the user of Youth Clay. It purges the skin of all
