Torpedo Boats To Guard Way Of U. S. Fliers

Detroit's Daily Robbery Gives Police A Clue

Detroit, July 24.—An unguarded movement of one of the three bandits who held up Jacob Mazer and escaped with diamonds valued at $125,000 today, revealed a belt buckle on which the letter "C" was engraved. On this slender clue, the entire detective force is trying to trace the men whose daring robbery in the Capitol Jewelry Shoppe, adds a chapter to Detroit's holdup history.

First Clue

Plenty of Warning.

Taking the position that the "stop" signs have been in place long enough to be read by all motorists using the Escanaba streets, and that countless warnings have been issued, verbally and through the local newspapers, the department heads decided yesterday that only a campaign, waged on more or less of a wholesale scale would stop the practice.

Showing What "Stop" Signs Really Mean

Horrible Details.

The cold chisel with which young Franks was stunned, the rope with which he was bound, the acid bottle from which was poured the fluid that marred his features, and the wrecked and water soaked typewriter on which was written the ransom letter sent to the boy's father, also figures in the day's proceedings.

(By The Associated Press.) Lansing, Mich., July 24.—Faced with mandamus proceedings if he decides to place the so-called Wardell petition on the ballot next fall, Charles Deland, secretary of state, was undecided tonight as to his future course.

The Wardell petition, presented here some time ago by Robert Wardell, secretary of the Michigan Branch of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, was declared sufficient by Secretary Deland. He announced at that time that he would place the amendment, providing for a change in the state constitution so the Michigan prohibition laws might conform to the federal prohibition laws, on the ballot next fall.

The first move of Superintendent N. Holopie today was to call Secretary of State Deland with a request that he not place the amendment on the ballot. Despite all his wealth, this millionaire manufacturer, polo player, politician, traveler, hasn't been able to get the devotion that the poorest workers on his payroll have enjoyed. But a sportsman all the time, he has taken his luck with a shrug of the shoulders, a laugh, and a trust that he will do better next time.

BRINGING UP FATHER

The Leap to Liberty

The Piffle Hook

By George McManus

PROF. THEODORE APPLI, who evidently belongs to the pipkin family, teaches eurythmics at the University of California. Because he believes that no home is complete without at least one eurythmic, the professor has always of his girl pupils remove their shoes and stockings, slip into something "loose and colorful" and step around on the roof of a tall building, while an orchestra plays soft music.

We are in favor of eurythmics. It—or should we say them—provide a new use for roofs. We long have contended that roofs never have been utilized to the fullest extent. And besides, according to Dr. Apple, "eurythmics, being the interpretation in simple gesture of the scientific study of pure musical rhythm, becomes the roof of a new synthetic artistic education. It isn't dancing."

Think of the research work we can do on the subject, right here in our own little town! Let us imagine that we are attending a dance. Are you ready? Look at that girl over there, hanging to her partner like a wet bathing suit clinging to a clothes line. And that one, who looks like she was being carried from a burning building. There's one over there who is attempting to choke him to death by pressing her nose against his adam's apple.

Now turn to your text book all eurythmics. Read carefully. Then tell the class, Oswald, what "pure musical rhythms" prompted those "simple gestures."

You don't know, but you'll ask the girls? Very well? What did they say? We thought so.

"Corn is backward and uneven" mused the other eugenicologist on the opposite side of the table as his nimble pencil scribbled a single line on a take of market copy. "Fortunately," he added, "most horses' teeth are in the same condition."

THE BOBBING of their hair, according to a Berlin scientist, will cause women to grow beard. "Crowded out of the barbershop, the poor male human soon will be unable to shave at home without waiting his turn.

In response to the questions of three interested persons, we step forward to advise that Abner Bangs has not yet signed his application for membership in the Escanaba Chamber of Commerce. The clean-up squad has been handed Abner's prospect card. The fighting will be sanguinary and the loss of life terrific.

CLOTH OF GOLD. For evening gowns for the coming winter Paris is turning out some very gorgeous gowns of cloth of gold or silver, absolutely untrifled and practically undraped.

IT IS DONE!

Yesterday marked the culmination of what has probably been one of the most intensive periods in Escanaba history. It was and should be a day fraught with the greatest promise for the future growth and development of this city. It was a day of which all citizens may justly be proud.

Why? Because it marked the successful close of a "carry-on" campaign in which approximately 500 citizens have recorded in a most substantial way, their faith in their city.

It hasn't been, primarily, a faith in the Chamber of Commerce so much as a faith in the city itself—and that—it seems—is really the big thing to be considered.

Whenever a town, big or little, can get its representative citizens into an organized movement to start a town growing, or to keep promoting the growth already started, then it may be said with some certainty, that the town is on the upgrade.

That has been what has been happening in Escanaba lately. Three years ago the Chamber of Commerce was organized. It was a little different sort of an organization. Escanaba had had Chambers of Commerce before and we always thought they were something to be handled locally. Nothing ever happened except that members paid dues and in due time the Chamber of Commerce sputtered and guttered out—like a spent candle—but this one was something different. It was sponsored by the same men who had invested and hoped and aspired before—but it took somebody from the outside to come in and explain what Escanaba had—and sell it.

We not only have always felt always have known that as a place of residence, Escanaba has had no superior. One of the most eloquent, convincing, appealing, talks we ever heard, was an impromptu address one evening on the steps of the city hall, made by the late, revered and respected Father Barth, in which in said, among other things, that as a city of homes, Escanaba was most wonderfully endowed by nature. We couldn't think in terms as eloquent, forceful and logical as the expressions of Father Barth at that time, because he was a most gifted and scholarly and far-seeing man—but we now beg to pay the most profound reverence to his vision. He must have known, and we are sorry that he could not be here with us today to rejoice in the proving of his convictions as expressed then.

The big point is that what was predicted then has come to pass. It is not racial or religious—all citizens are united in it. For a little time there may have been a fear that the campaign would not go through, but it has—and such a scale as the most optimistic had not dreamed of.

Escanaba has almost literally reached down, grabbed herself by the bootstraps and lifted herself up and above and free from and out of the mire of commonality in which she had been wallowing for so many years. Not a nice thing to say that a lady has been in that position, but every city is a "she," and that's exactly the position we were in until a few clear-visioned, far-seeing, forward-looking citizens round-tabled themselves a few years ago and said: "Well we've got to do something."

That determination resulted in the formation of the first Chamber of Commerce—and it was with some misgivings on the part of a good many. But in the interim they have been so thoroughly convinced of the wisdom of the thing and the city has given such a comprehensive and outstanding proof of the wisdom of their action, that this second manifestation of loyalty to civic growth does not come as a great surprise.

The Daily Press has been inspired more than once by the accomplishments of the city, to

Helen Lorimore's Legacy

BY JANE PHELPS.

HELEN MEETS WITH AN ADVENTURE. Chapter X.

Helen saddled her pony and started down the trail for a short center. She did not intend to go far. The trouble with the rustlers had increased, and her boys had had several encounters with them. Some of her cattle had been stolen, and Wheelock was hot on their trail. He had again warned her, but the day was so instantly alluring, the sky so cloudlessly blue, the air so soft and enticing, that she prolonged her ride far beyond her original intention.

The spirit of the day caught her in its thrall, and leaving the beaten paths, she made little excursions; first to one side, then to the other, cantering back and forth in zigzag fashion, singing softly to herself.

She dismounted by the side of a little stream that now little more than covered the pebbles lying on its bottom, but which a few weeks before had been a roaring current. Here she tethered her pony, and wandered a little way back from the stream toward a bit of woody land, hoping to find some early wild flowers to take home with her. This bit of woods, as so often happens in the clear atmosphere of the West, looked to be much nearer than it really was, yet she wandered on, loath to give up her quest.

A little weary when she reached them, she sat down on a log to rest before beginning her search for wild flowers.

She found some arbutus and a few other blooms and, returning, once more rested a bit upon the log. She had no watch with her, had forgotten the swiftness with which night fell, so she sat reminiscing over all that had happened to her in the last months, now almost a year since she left home.

Her day dreams lasted until the shadows lengthening at her feet startled her into action. She must hurry! The people at the ranch would be anxious, and old Martha's dinner cold. The girl hurried away with no misgivings as to the direction she was taking.

Where was the stream? Surely she had walked far enough to have reached it! She stood still listening, trying to see if she could hear the water gurgling over the stones, but no sound reached her ears, save the sleepy twittering of some birds in the branches of the trees above her.

Trying to determine the direction, Helen turned and walked on again, this time more briskly. It was dusk, she could scarcely see to pick her way.

Suddenly she realized that she was lost. She had probably been wandering in a circle. She called her pony, but no glad neigh answered her. For just a moment her heart seemed to stop beating, but this city girl was no coward, and in the past months she had learned to depend upon herself. She stood still, pulled herself together, and tried again to figure out the direction, but she was uncertain.

Suddenly she heard a sound of twigs breaking. Someone—a horseman—was coming. The rustlers!

Her revolver, which she always carried, even when using a rifle, she had carelessly left in the holster on her saddle. She smothered a cry as a solitary horseman appeared.

"Can I help you?" a cultivated voice came to her.

"If you will, I left my pony by a little stream on the edge of the woods, wandered too far away, and I—guess I am lost," she laughed a little, nervously.

"I guess you are," he repeated.

Someway Helen all at once felt safe. The man's voice, his quick appreciation, calmed her.

"Will you wait quietly here while I get your pony? I won't be long. Or would you rather go with me? You can ride my horse and I will walk."

"I will wait here," Helen replied.

"Be sure and don't stir. I will be back soon," and he was gone.

It was now dusk, and in the shadow of the trees Helen had not been able to distinguish the features of her rescuer. She liked his voice, wished she could know how he looked.

But as she was thinking of him, he returned.

"I'll help you mount, then show you the way to the stream. Will you be able to find your way from there?"

"Easily. I am Miss Lorimore, from the L. M. Ranch."

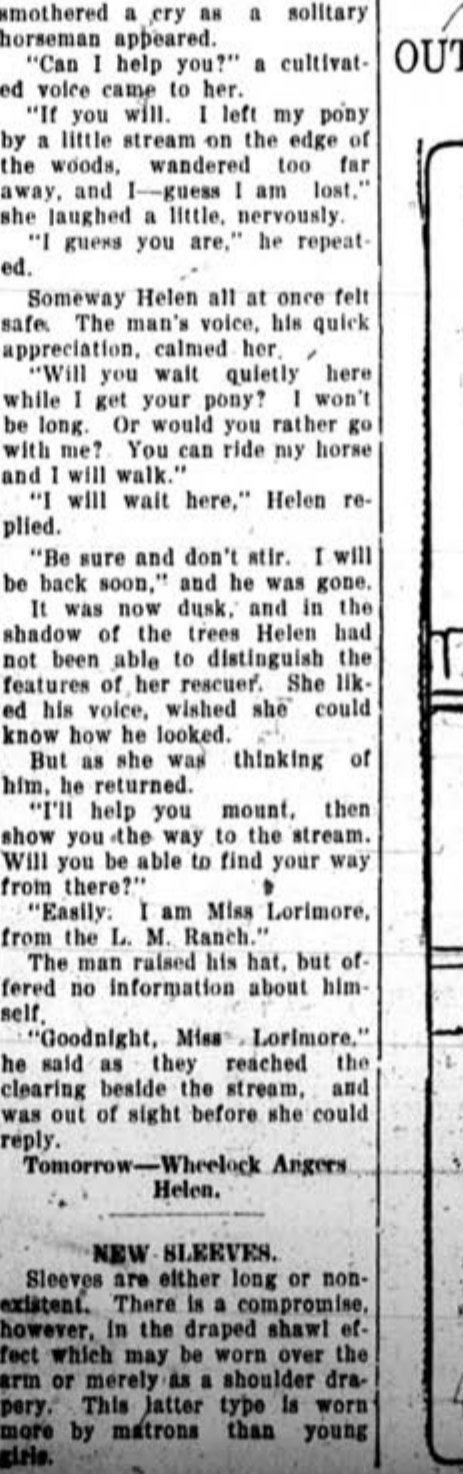

The man raised his hat, but offered no information about himself.

"Goodnight, Miss Lorimore," he said as they reached the clearing beside the stream, and was out of sight before she could reply.

Tomorrow—Wheelock Angers Helen.

NEW SLEEVES. Sleeves are either long or non-existent. There is a compromise, however, in the draped shawl effect which may be worn over the arm or merely as a shoulder drape. This latter type is worn more by matrons than young girls.

MANY FEDERAL RIVER BARGES ON MISSISSIPPI Are Solving Shipper's Problems Of Transportation

BY GEORGE BRITT NEA Service Writer. St. Louis.—"There ain't no such animal," was the attitude of the Mark Twain school of old-time Mississippi River pilots when they first saw the smallish, ugly, oil-burning tonal-type, screw-propelled power boats of the federal barge line.

And the ghostly timbers of the Robert E. Lee and the Natchez probably shiver to this day in their sandy graves when the newcomers puff up and down their river.

But romance is not so apparent as when planters from broad verandas used to watch slim, white packet boats come racing round the bend.

"What is being done now on the Mississippi River," says Theodore Brent, manager of the barge line, "is as romantic as railroad—and no more so."

"Its facilities are as practical as those of the best organized railroad. Its methods are aimed at attaining the best in railroad practice to transportation by water."

Even old "Steamboat Bill" and his mates warmed up to the newcomers when they saw them get behind a fleet of steel barges and walk off with them, 7000 tons up stream or 15,000 tons down stream.

The federal barge line was conceived as a war measure and started in September, 1918, with a makeshift fleet. Now it is operating about ten towboats, two self-propelling barges and more than fifty cargo barges, most of them 2000 tons and some 3000 tons capacity.

It maintains a year-round schedule between New Orleans and Cairo, Ill., and between St. Louis and Cairo, except during the frozen-up months.

Co-operation with hostile railroads has been effected to obtain a connecting feeder service. Barges leaving St. Louis on Friday evenings reach New Orleans, 1154 miles by water, on the following Wednesday night.

Dispatching is by wireless, each towboat reporting its position every three hours.

Big Saving to Shipper. Last year the barge line carried 327,511 tons of freight southbound and 267,604 tons northbound. The charge is approximately 80 per cent of rail rates. Saving to the shipper is estimated at an average of $1 a ton.

AMUSEMENTS

AT THE DELFT. John Barrymore, paragon of actors, and the last word in matinee idols, graces the screen again today at the Delft theatre in the starring role of "Beau Brummel," the screen adaptation of the famed Clyde Fitch play.

This Warner Brothers' Classic of the Screen opened yesterday to an enthusiastic audience who thrilled to the impersonation given of the most vivid character that ever flashed through the social life of Europe.

Flair is what this role requires, and flair is just what Barrymore possesses. As the dandy par excellence, the dandy who dominated the court of the Prince Regent, the exquisite dresser and insolently superb wit, John Barrymore carries off honors.

He seems made for the role, being like the character of the Beau, the perfect flower of a gentleman. Barrymore throws all his unique talent to interpret the gorgeousness of life, the singularity and dramatic quality of Beau Brummel, who began life obscurely, rose like a meteor to social fame, got a memorable snub and retreated to disgrace and poverty.

He is splendid when he ingratiate himself into the good graces of the Prince Regent, admirable when he saves the reputation of a too impetuous young lady, enviable when he collects around him all the cream of English society to listen to his epigrams and examine his cut of clothes, and pitiful when, toward the close, he becomes a parody of his past splendor.

We follow the hectic career of the Beau with rapt interest, and regret the speed with which the picture comes to an end.

The supporting cast, which deserves high praise, consists of Mary Astor, Willard Louis, Irene Rich, Alec B. Francis, Carmel Myers, William Humphreys, Richard Tucker, Andre de Beranger and others. The able direction is by Harry Beaumont.

We recommend "Beau Brummel" as a picture you will like.

Campaign Shows Fine Results. A new record in the campaign by the carriers of the country, to prevent loss or damage to shipments in transit has just been established by the American Railway Express, according to announcement made today by M. L. Lawrence, agent in charge in this city.

Figures just tabulated for the month of June show that only 2.26 shipments in every thousand are involved in claims, giving the express service a performance record of 99.8 per cent. The June claim ratio is the lowest in the history of the express company since its formation six years ago. It is an improvement of over 25 per cent, compared with June 1923.

Agent Lawrence states that he is much gratified by the progress made in solving the claim problem. Local shippers have cooperated by giving more attention to the careful preparation of their shipments.

Local employes are holding monthly "Right Way" meetings to study and discuss various problems of the service and the best methods for handling the current traffic.

The Campaign ends for good just one week from tomorrow night—Saturday, August 2nd, is the closing day, and 10:00 o'clock the closing hour.

Closing Rules of the Campaign will be published in Sunday's paper—Watch for them and read them over carefully.

It's anybody's race up to this time for the Four Automobiles and all the cash awards. The First Capital Prize is a $1,895 Buick "6" Sport Model Touring Car—next comes the Jewett "6" Brougham, and the two Chevrolet touring cars.

Get your subscriptions in before 10 o'clock tomorrow night—they will count many more votes than later on.

Beginning next Monday morning the "Fourth Period" will be in effect—this is the last period of the campaign and the smallest schedule of the entire campaign will be the order.

GET BUSY AND KEEP BUSY.

READ THIS! IMPORTANT!

The attention of all club members is again called to the importance of EXTENSION SUBSCRIPTIONS. This means an extension of any subscription you secured earlier in the campaign. The importance of these EXTENSIONS cannot be stated too plainly and every candidate is strongly urged to get in every EXTENSION POSSIBLE these last few days of the exciting race—just ONE subscription now is liable to turn the tide and register the difference between a wonderful motor car or a smaller prize.

EXTENSIONS COUNT BIG NOW and in putting them on your report sheets be sure to mark plainly "2nd payment" also stating for how long the first subscription was paid for and when it was turned in, 1st or 2nd period. A subscription given on the 1st period will earn first period votes on an extension. The same applies on those given on the 2nd period. A subscription given on the 1st period will earn first period votes on an extension. The same applies on those given on the 2nd period. A subscription given during the first period and extended now for another year would give you 18,000 votes—making the full 30,000 given on a subscription for 2 years.

A subscription given during the first period for one year and now extended for 2 years more, making a 3-year subscription in all, would earn 48,000 votes, plus the "Club" Votes.

But—Be Sure to mark these subscriptions 2nd payment—extension from 1 to 2 years—or whatever the extension may be for. These will then be looked up on the original report and when found correct, the extension votes will be allowed. Fill out the votes on your report sheet and run up the total yourself.

Explain this feature to your friends who have given you a subscription before—explain the tremendous voting power of EXTENSIONS to them and have them extend their subscriptions for at least another year or two. Work EXTENSIONS strongly—it will pay you handsome dividends.

Table with 3 columns: Term, Carrier, Mail, Votes. Rows for 6 Months, 1 Year, 2 Years, 3 Years, 4 Years, 5 Years.

NEW SUBSCRIPTIONS Count 20,000 Extra Votes For Each Year in Addition to the Above Regular Votes. NEW SUBSCRIPTIONS WILL HELP YOU WIN

THIRD VOTE OFFER ENDS TOMORROW

WASHINGTON IS TOURIST MECCA

"Washington Or Bust" Is Slogan Of Many Touring Parties.

BY HARRY B. HUNT.
Washington—Your, my and every American's Capital City is right in the height of its enterprising season.

And, to the casual observer, who has lived in Washington for a term of years, this season is the banner one for auto tourist parties.

On every road entering the capital, and from every nook and corner of the country, they come.

"Washington or bust" some of the touring parties' banners read. They reached Washington, they see the sights, and they return home—busted.

But, in fairness to Washington, I might add that this all depends on the tourist himself. The city doesn't cost any more to see than any other city.

Monument Popular.
One of the most popular places of interest is the Washington monument. When you're in Washington you can ride to the top of it for 25 cents. And you can get the best bird's-eye view of the city that it is possible to get.

If you're not in Washington, here are some facts that you can have for nothing:

The monument, erected as a national memorial to the "Father of His Country," is 555 feet high. The base is 55 feet square, with walls 15 feet thick and the total weight of the structure is 90,000 tons. A stairway, as well as an elevator, runs to the top. At every landing on the stairway there are granite and marble blocks, presented by the various states, and by various organizations.

The monument was dedicated on Feb. 22, 1885. It cost $1,000,000.

Mount Vernon, another popular spot to tourists, is the home and burial place of George Washington, located in Fairfax county, Virginia, 15 miles below Washington. In 1858 the estate was purchased from the descendants of Washington for $200,000. This amount was raised by subscription, under the auspices of the "Ladies' Mount Vernon Association," and it now belongs to the nation.

There is a 25 cent admission fee which is used to pay for the upkeep of the property. Arlington Cemetery is seldom overlooked by the visitors. It is located across the Potomac from Washington and was formerly the home of Robert E. Lee. It was seized by the government during the Civil War and made the national cemetery.

There are close to 19,000 graves on the grounds.

Ranking very high in visitor interest is the Lincoln Memorial which was dedicated May 30, 1922. It cost $2,939,720.

The columns of the colonnade, 36 in number, are made of Colorado-Yule marble and are 44 feet high and 7 feet 4 inches in diameter at the base. The building is 122 feet high. The statue, without pedestal, is 21 feet high and weighs 150 tons.

The figure of Lincoln is 19 feet from the top of the head to the sole of the foot. The head measures 3 feet in height. The statue is of Georgia marble and the pedestal and base of Tennessee marble. It took the sculptor four years to produce the statue.

There are numerous other places and monuments of interest in the Capital City, but the four mentioned above rank top notch. The visitor who misses any one of them hasn't seen Washington.

Two Pay Fines and Dodge State Prison

Ernest Fosterling of Lathrop and William Cardinal of Rapid River, late Wednesday, paid the heavy fines assessed against them in Judge R. C. Flannigan's court and escaped, by the payments, the alternative trip to state's prison. Both plead guilty to charges of bootlegging.

Joseph Barbeau, Charles Morton and Michael Klotz, other confessed bootleggers who were fined $300 and costs, totalling $400 each, have been unable to pay the fines and are in the county jail.

MANY BOOTLEGGED ALIENS AWAIT DEPORTATION AT ELLIS ISLAND

By NEA Service
Ellis Island, New York.—A group of 31 "bootleg aliens"—men who tried to have themselves smuggled into this country in violation of immigration laws—are waiting here, marked for return shipment.

They represent the largest confiscation of "bootleg aliens" made at this port since the new immigration quotas went into effect.

Their fate is a sad lesson. From their barred windows they can see the Statue of Liberty. Farther on, rises the hazy stretch of New York's skyline. They might have had both had they taken their stretches with the quota law.

Extent Unknown.
"It will be two or three months before we can make a good guess at the extent of this smuggling," says Henry H. Curran, commissioner of immigration of the port of New York. "For the new law which went into effect on the first of the month will have a direct effect upon this angle of the immigration problem. It will take a little more time for this law to find its legs."

"Alien smugglers need expect no consideration whatsoever at our hands. They will be caught and deported—sooner or later."

"In the meantime their lives will not be worth living."

Smuggling of aliens has gone on at this port ever since there was immigration. In the past it was limited to Chinese and criminals, debarred by statute. Now the practice is growing among many others who want to avoid the risk of being deported as "excess quota" and run the danger of being caught as smuggled aliens.

Steady Tricking.
There is said to be a steady tricking of this human bootleg through our gates. Most of it has been coming through the Canadian backdoor or southern ports near Cuba and Mexico.

But with the capture of this band of 31, the authorities believe they have the clue to a new ring that has been developing a traffic into the very port of New York.

Two of the operatives of this ring are being held under $5000 bail each. But the ring leaders are still at large.

The method of operation is comparatively simple—for all but the alien. Instead of booking passage on a regular liner he is informed by agents in his native country of a sure-fire way of getting admittance.

For the price of first class passage he is put on board a slow auxiliary schooner, which takes about three weeks to cross the ocean. Out at sea, somewhere near the rum fleet row, he is taken off and deposited on board a sloop with many others.

Aliens Fleeced.
There he is buried in a coal pile, covered with tarpulin, and is told to remain silent for the no-man's sea is about to be crossed. If the plans of the underground, smugglers carry, he is landed at a pier near Rockaway Point, and is then passed on to friends.

In the passing, the alien is usually fleeced of everything he has. All "went well" with the 31 Italians who tried to sneak their way in, until Tony Comardo, captain of the sloop "Susie R." on which they were making their last dash, attracted the attention of a police boat cruising around in search of rum runners.

A fleet of taxis was seen waiting at the pier towards which the sloop was heading. The police officers sensed liquor and boarded the boat. Instead they found the aliens buried in coal heans beneath tarpulin coverings in the hold.

Some of the men were youngsters in their twenties; others were past 50. All wanted to get into America without running the chance of exceeding the quota.

But bootleg is bootleg in either whisky or men—and confiscation is the price that must be paid.
