

LEOPOLD MAKES QUEER EXPLANATION

TELLS COURT HE BELIEVES HE HAS "IMPORTANT WORK TO DO FOR THE WORLD"

Chicago, July 25—Nathan Leopold, Jr., after his confession to a part in the kidnaping and murder of 14 year old Robert Franks, held life dear because he believed he had "important work to do for the world."

Richard Loeb, co-partner in the crime, believed: "Whoever committed that crime should be strung up."

The mental reactions of both youths to the consequences of their conspiracy were detailed today in court.

Loeb, whose life, with that of Leopold, is at stake in the hearing before Chief Justice John H. Cawdry of the criminal court, expressed his sentiment and revealed other processes of his mind to the police officers who guarded him after the first joint confessions to the crime.

Loeb's Version. Loeb gave his idea of a fit punishment for the act in a conversation with a newspaper reporter before his arrest. He also gave reporters "tips" on how to trace some of the activities of the kidnapers, ascribing his circumspection to the reading of detective stories.

James J. Gortland, a city detective sergeant, testified to this at the conclusion of the third day's sessions of the proceedings this afternoon. In rapid fire sentences Gortland detailed the conversations he had with Leopold in an attempt to learn the motive for the crime.

"Leopold told me," said Gortland, "that he would not reveal the motive for the crime. When I asked him this he said: 'You must think I'm a fool. Do you think I am going to tell all? Don't you think I have a right to reserve something for my defense?'

"I asked him what defense he would offer and Leopold said that if his folks wanted him to hang he would plead not guilty and go before a jury which would surely hang him. He said: 'If I plead guilty before a friendly judge I will get off with life imprisonment.'

Important Work. "He then told me that he believed he had important work to do for the world. He said he had carried along his bird studies to an advanced stage and thought he might be able to contribute something through writings and research."

Gortland also testified that Leopold had told him of going to Sunday school regularly as a child, and of being advanced to the confirmation class. The witness added that Leopold explained that his extreme youth kept him from being confirmed at that time in the Jewish faith.

"It was taught conscience until he was eight years old," Leopold told Gortland, "but after that time I drilled conscience out of myself."

"Leopold also said: 'Murder is not a crime in my code. The crime in my code is in being caught.'"

The detective sergeant related that Leopold had no sorrow for young Franks or the latter's family. "I don't give a damn if they croak this minute," the defendant was quoted by the witness.

Figured It Out. Gortland's testimony climaxed the day's proceedings, which took the case into the realm of mental reactions and motives, centering on Leopold. It revealed that Leopold had inquired of instructors in criminal law at the University of Chicago what would be the consequences of a crime like the abduction and killing of young Franks.

"It showed, too, that he had planned suicide by means of poisoned headache medicine as a way out of the dilemma which he foresaw would be his portion if he ever reached the shadow of the gallows. This was revealed in one of his conversations with Gortland, the latter testified.

On another occasion Leopold told Sergeant Frank Johnson, another witness of the day: Preparation. "If I knew that Loeb was going to peach, I could have killed myself and taken a couple of coppers with me."

This remark was made when police searchers found two heavy automatic pistols in Leopold's study. Johnson also told of a remark which he said was made by Leopold when the policeman had momentarily released his prisoner's arm.

"If I thought you fellows would shoot to kill, I would try running," were the words ascribed to the defendant.

That the possible consequences of his crime was upon Leopold's mind was further indicated by the testimony of E. W. Puttkammer, a professor of criminal law at the University of Chicago, and by Max Wester, a graduate student and tutor.

Goes Into Academics. Professor Puttkammer said Leopold, under the guise of seeking instructions preliminary to an examination, used the Franks killing as a basis for an academic discussion of criminal intent. The professor said he was asked by Leopold what the status would be if a kidnaping accidentally killed his victim.

HOWELL SAYS HE WILL SPEAK FOR PRESIDENT

Nebraska Senator Begins To See The Light

Washington, July 25.—President Coolidge was assured today of the support and services in the national campaign of Senator Howell of Nebraska, one of the Republican members of the senate who often has voted against the administration and with the group headed by Senator LaFollette of Wisconsin.

Returning to Washington after a month's stay in his home state, Senator Howell called at the White House to discuss political and agricultural conditions and to offer to Mr. Coolidge his support and his services as a campaign speaker in Nebraska and in nearby states.

Discuss Grain Prices. Advancing prices of grain, Senator Howell declared, had helped the farmers of Nebraska but in view of the present state of the corn crop would not entirely relieve distress in the agricultural sections.

The Nebraska senator while noting it plain that he had not been delegated to speak for his colleague, he said he did not expect Senator Norris to bolt the Republican party.

Mr. Coolidge also discussed politics—particularly Pennsylvania politics—today with Senator Pepper of that state, and E. A. Van Valkenburg, publisher of the Philadelphia North American, who was guests at luncheon at the White House.

Old Friends Call. Other callers were J. P. McArde, field representative of the interstate commerce commission and former official of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, and Joseph Bromley, also a field agent of the commerce commission and formerly connected with the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers.

They came as old-time friends of Mr. Coolidge to tell him, they said, that they had heard many expressions as to his fairness toward labor from the railroad workers with whom they came in contact.

PA COOLIDGE IS BACK HOME

Says The Old Place Looks Pretty Good, Despite Washington.

Plymouth, Vermont, July 25.—Colonel John C. Coolidge, father of the president, returned to the family homestead today after a ten day visit at the White House. Standing on the threshold of his home where he was met by the housekeeper, Colonel Coolidge said that he had had a nice time, but that "home's a pretty place, after all."

Then, looking along the low and irregular roof line of the homestead, a single story and attic house, with barn and other low-ceilinged buildings, he added: "This is simple, but it looks mighty good to me. Now to get the hay in."

Made No Hay. But he did not cut hay today. Instead he greeted 80 persons who came to see the house where the president was born, and where he took the oath of office, and as soon as courtesy would permit went again to the grave in the cemetery on the hill where the president and Mrs. Coolidge buried their son, last week, two weeks ago. There he found the grave under a blanket of flowers. Mrs. Coolidge has sent these wreaths of roses from the White House commemorating since she returned to Washington, and sent also a large wreath of silvered leaves that has been placed at the head of the grave.

Many Are Curious. The pond of water between the house and the cemetery today had the visitors who have worn here the months about the Coolidge lot were still present in numbers.

Colonel Coolidge had little to say about his visit at the White House. He kept his usual hours, he said, and he had all very much, especially a cruise on the presidential yacht Mayflower. He remarked that she was a much better boat than he thought, exclaiming: "Think of it! She carries a crew of 200 men!"

Her cholera will celebrate its 91st birthday in America this year.

Doolittle of McCook Field, Dayton, O., who in 1922 earned the title of "The Flor of the Night" when he made the first one-stop transcontinental flight on record, has asked permission to fly from San Francisco to Honolulu. It is a 2600-mile jump. He is confident he can negotiate it by winging his way in the high altitudes.

15 Miners Are Entombed By An Explosion

Gates, Pa., July 25.—Eleven to fifteen men are entombed in a soft coal mine of the H. C. Frick Coke Company here as a result of an explosion that occurred about 7:30 o'clock tonight.

The mine is reported to have been reduced to debris and rescue crews are endeavoring to force an entrance into the gas-filled chambers.

The cause of explosion has not yet been determined. The rescue men are attempting to dig their way into the wrecked mine but up to a late hour tonight had not been able to effect an entrance. The presence of poisonous gases is feared and the workers are equipped with masks.

The mine is of the shaft type and is 240 feet deep. The regular force employed is said to be 318. None of the men employed in the section in which the explosion took place have emerged and it is feared they have either been killed by the explosion or the gases that formed immediately after.

Physicians from the surrounding towns have been notified and are prepared to care for the men when they are brought out. Gates is a small mining community and practically all the men are employed at the mines.

SLANDER CASE IS WITHOUT A PRECEDENT

TERMINATION OF SIX WEEKS OF LITIGATION.

Lansing, Mich., July 26.—Forty thousand dollars damages for slander was awarded to the Michigan Mutual Wind Storm Insurance Company of Hastings against Leonard C. Miller and William T. Strausbaugh, agents of the State Mutual Cyclone Company of Lapeer by a jury in circuit court here tonight.

The case, originally brought by the Hastings company against the Lapeer company has been on trial here for six weeks before Judge Harry J. Dingeman of Detroit. In his final instruction, Judge Dingeman directed the jury to clear the defending company and eight of the ten agents first named in the action, but to determine first the guilt, and if guilty, then the amount of damage to be assessed against the two remaining agents.

The jury, after being out for twelve hours and a half, returned its verdict late tonight.

Sued for $250,000. The Michigan Mutual Windstorm Insurance Company brought suit originally for $250,000 against the State Mutual Cyclone Insurance Company, alleging that there had been a conspiracy by the Lapeer company, through its agents to utter slanderous statements regarding the financial condition of the Hastings company, its officers and employees, in an effort to have its policy holders change to the Lapeer company.

Among the tales the Michigan company charged the agents of the State Mutual with distributing were that the officials of the company were extravagant; that liquor was kept in a vault of the home office of the Michigan company; that there were too many young women employed in the company and that wild parties featured the work of the huge office force of the Hastings company.

Legal Maneuvering. After much legal maneuvering the case finally was brought to a point where the Michigan company was suing two of the agents, Leonard C. Miller and William T. Strausbaugh jointly, Judge Dingeman giving the plaintiff the right to sue any of the agents individually or the two men jointly. The company elected to try the men jointly.

The case went to the jury at 9:30 Friday morning. After being out for an hour, the jury sent for a transcript of the evidence. The next word from the jury room was at 9 o'clock tonight when it sent word that it had reached an agreement. The verdict of $40,000 against the two defendants was read as soon as Judge Dingeman reached the courtroom.

Seeking Precedents. "The case is absolutely without precedent in the history of American legal cases," said Judge Dingeman, following the report of the jury. "I have read probably 500 cases since this trial started, seeking precedents, but none covered this ground. There have been slander suits by the score, but this was a charge of conspiracy to ruin a business by slander. It stands alone, as far as I am able to determine, in the long history of legal proceedings in this country."

The unusual case was fought out by attorneys of statewide fame. Charles Ward of Grand Rapids and J. Arthur Bole of Lansing representing the plaintiffs. The defense was represented by J. M. Gould of Hastings, Theodore Halpin of Lapeer, William Barnston of Fremont and Edmund C. Shields of Lansing.

"STOP STREET" WAR CONTINUES

Total Arrests In Campaign Brought To 41; Results Noted.

Twelve motorists, who failed to observe the "stop street" regulations, were arrested by police officers, stationed on various corners yesterday afternoon. The total arrests during the police department's "educational campaign" was brought to 41, of which 29 had been arrested Thursday.

The campaign will be continued today and Sunday on an intensive scale.

Results Noted.

Thursday's work had a good effect on thoughtless and willful breakers of the "stop law." The rule was obeyed yesterday considerably better than it had been previously, and a continued improvement may be expected.

There is a probability that a squad of motor cops, in plain clothes, may be assigned to speed violation duty, in an effort to curb reckless driving on residence streets, it is said.

Violators of the "stop street" law have been fined $1 and costs. The police, however, will not recommend minimum fines in cases of speeding, the fines for which, in the past few months, have averaged much higher.

Very Few "Poor Sports."

Virtually all of the men and women arrested agreed with the police that the campaign was a good one, and paid their fines without complaint. Only a few "poor sports" were found in the lot, police said.

Local Firm Has New Furniture On Display Now

G. Arthur Anderson, of the Anderson-Bonefield firm, has just returned from a two weeks' vacation, a portion of which was spent in Chicago, where he spent several days in the furniture market in the "Furniture Mart," a new building just completed. Among other things Mr. Anderson and Arthur Swenson, of Gladstone, were guests at a banquet at which 3300 persons were seated. Incidentally, Mr. Anderson took advantage of the special bargains offered during the entertainment to procure for Escanaba patrons, a line of the latest, most up to the minute and most attractive furniture, which will be on display at the Anderson-Bonefield Co. in the Fair Store.

WHY BE FOOLISH?

Is the public actually foolish? Does it want what it is being fed? Have we reached such a stage in our apparently miscalled "civilization" that in our mad and heated search for some new thrill, we seize upon the latest come to "analyze" it for its psychological values?

Here's this Leopold and Loeb case! People away up here in the upper peninsula of Michigan seem to be frantic for information as to what prompted two high class, high grade, super-educated youngsters to commit a crime and what the result will be.

There isn't anything very difficult about it, apparently. Clarence Darrow, who himself has written some rather interesting stuff on psychology, based upon long experience in criminal law practice, during which most of the human emotions have come under his observation—Clarence Darrow who is defending the murderers,—isn't seeming to give that side of the case any consideration.

He merely enters a plea of guilt for the boys—guilty of murder. The Illinois state law has a penalty for that, as well as other crimes. Why get all "het up" about it?

What's the use of raving to know why these boys acted as they did? Why not go into a scientific and heavy discussion of why a day laborer with a family of nine children keeps on working day in and day out and keeps going straight when he has ample opportunity to make much more money by deviating just a trifle from the accepted path of righteousness?

Columns and columns of newspaper space have been devoted to the home life, the university life, the out-of-school life, of these two boys who have entered a plea of guilty to murder.

For some reason, the people, generally, seem to think it is peculiar and odd and unusual that they should plead guilty to a crime which was absolutely fastened upon them by all the evidence. Their parents are being given great credit, and much importance attaches to their willingness to let the boys plead guilty.

Hunk! When Jim Smith of Escanaba goes out and kills Jack Jones just to give himself a good time, and goes into Judge Flannigan's court and pleads guilty, nobody ever thinks of having the court decide as to the degree of his guilt, or his mental or psychological responsibility.

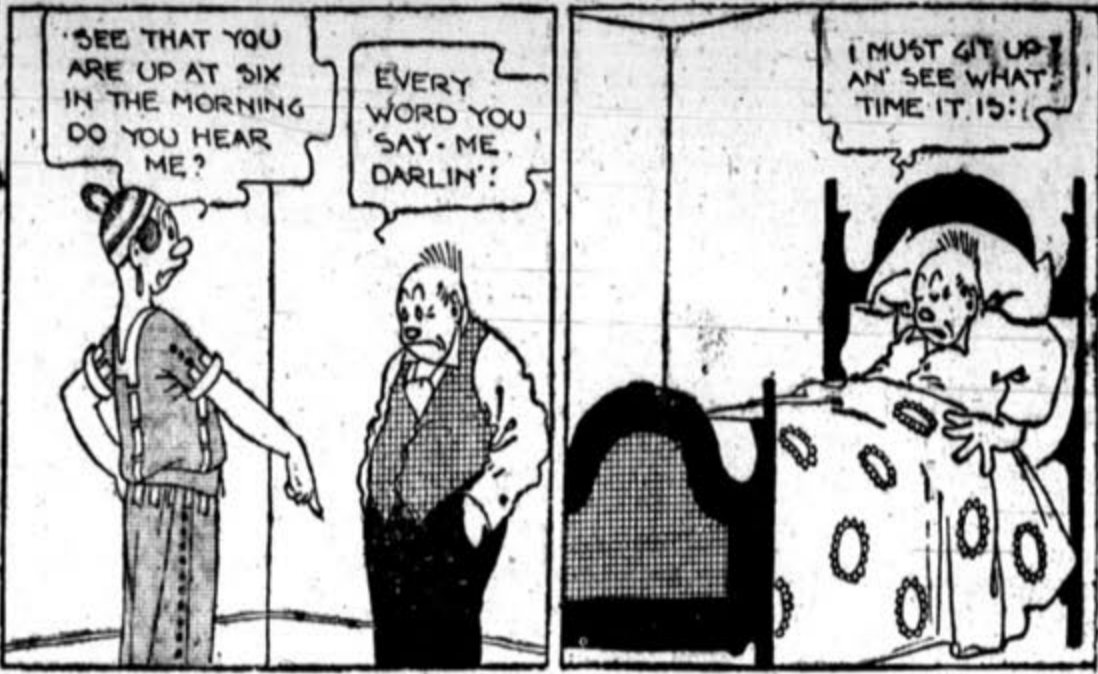

Why, even Darrow—old, wise, experienced, deeply versed in the law and the impulses that impel men to crime—Darrow didn't even offer an excuse. The Chicago newspapers tried to stir up a plea of insanity but it didn't work out. It would be too raw. Darrow's conduct of the case has been a puzzle. Perhaps he feels that he knows enough of public psychology to hope that this apparent candor and honesty and peculiar disregard for preserving their rights, may be finally construed by Judge Caverly, as an evidence of mental incompetency, and that public opinion may eventually drift in that direction.

We doubt it. In the meantime, let's not worry about these two wonderful boys.

Right here in Escanaba are perhaps a dozen youngsters who could use one half of one per cent of the education that Leopold and Loeb had—and use it for the benefit of Escanaba. All they want is a chance. If you have any sympathy or money to invest in psychological research, you can probably find ample opportunity for the outlet of your penchant by calling on Mike Estenheffer. Mike is the city poor commissioner and it wouldn't surprise us in the least to find that he knows of one or two deserving boys who could use your sympathy and money.

Let us think of the things that

Helen Lorimore's Legacy

BY JANE PRELPS.

WHELOCK ANGERS HELEN.

Chapter XI. Helen found the house in an uproar. Martha was crying, the housemaids excited, Wheelock had come in and, finding her gone, had waited until almost dusk; then, with some of the men he had started to find her.

"I wish he'd stop acting as if he must look after me!" she said peevishly. "He acted like a mad man. He's thinking a lot about you, Miss Helen." Martha said.

"A lot of good it will do him!" Helen returned as she dashed off to change for dinner. "I'm hungry, Martha. I'll have dinner at once." She hoped in this way she would avoid Wheelock.

She decided to say nothing of her adventure to the stranger she had met. She rode farther than she intended. That was all she would say. But a smile played about her lips as she changed her clothes. She would go that way again. Perhaps she would see the man whose voice she never would forget. That soft, grave voice. She was sure the man was young. She had dearly finished her dinner when Wheelock came in.

"Haven't found a trace of her," she heard him telling Martha through the half open door. "I'll have a bite and then start out again."

"Lost some more cattle. Mr. Wheelock?" Helen called before Martha could answer. "Damn the cattle!" He strode to the door. "I was looking for you."

"I've told you many times I could take of myself," cooly. "It isn't safe. I won't have you riding around alone! Rustlers!"

"You forget yourself. Mr. Wheelock. I am the owner of this ranch, and I don't take orders from you. I shall go where I please, when I please, and come home when I am ready."

whether she would ride or not. She was surprised to see one of the men hanging around. "Why aren't you at work?" she asked. "Wheelock told me to stay here."

"What for?" "He said if you went to ride I was to follow you and see that you came to no harm."

Furiously angry, Helen ordered the man to his work on pain of dismissal. "Spying on me!" She muttered as she retraced her steps to the house.

All the day she nursed her wrath against Wheelock. She would find another superintendent immediately. Easier said than done, as she realized, yet she was determined to make a decided effort to replace the man. She would ride to the ranch of one of her uncle's friends the next day and enlist his services in finding her a good man.

Wheelock came in to dinner, swaggering a little. They had caught some rustlers just as they were about to make away with her cattle.

"I told you last night I could take care of myself, Wheelock." For the first time Helen omitted the "Mr." "When I want a bodyguard I will choose one myself. It doesn't come under your duties as my superintendent."

WORKERS CHECK DRIVE RESULTS

The clerical staff at the Chamber of Commerce offices began yesterday the work of checking the list of additions and renewals, received during the "Carry On" campaign which ended Thursday, and compiling a new official membership list.

In the meantime, "follow up" squads of workers were interviewing persons who were out of the city or otherwise out of reach during the three-day canvass.

Several persons called at the office, voluntarily, to leave their subscriptions, explaining that they had been misled by the canvassers and wanted to have a hand in the movement. It probably will be several days before the follow-up and check-up work can be completed.

Display Cards.
In the meantime, those who have signed application cards are urged to display them prominently in their business places. It is an honor to be identified with such an organization, and the display of the "I-am-a-member" cards will assist in keeping up interest in the campaign until the last bit of field work has been finished.

Franquemont Goes to Springfield, Mo. for Masonic Drive

E. A. Franquemont, of the American City Bureau, who directed the Chamber of Commerce "Carry On" campaign, left last night for Springfield, Mo., where he will take charge of a drive in that city for funds to finance the erection of a Shrine temple.

Mr. Franquemont made scores of friends during his four weeks in this city. The success of the campaign is sufficient testimony as to his ability in his profession, but the campaign does not, by any means, tell the full extent of the regard with which he is held by the men who were associated with him in it.

He has promised to return to Escanaba next year, "not to work but to play," bringing the family and spending a month fishing and taking a regular vacation.

Farmers Will Meet Here On August 2

Farmers who are interested in the establishment of a municipal market, will meet at the city hall Saturday night, August 2, to discuss final plans for putting the market into operation early next month. SOCIAL Basket Social.

The young people of Bark River are giving a basket social at the Bark River Lutheran church this evening. The public is heartily welcome and are requested to bring a basket. A good time is assured all who attend.

Pre-Nuptial Party.
The Misses Jennie Bowman and Hilma Larson were hostesses at a prettily arranged pre-nuptial party complimentary to Miss Anna Anderson of 1114 First Ave. Co., who is to be married in the near future.

The party which was given Wednesday evening was at the home of Miss Bowman, 226 No. 12th St. The home was decorated in pink and white crepe paper festooning and a number of large baskets filled with white daisies were placed about the rooms.

The paper was arranged to hang from the chandeliers and baby ribbons was wound about the rooms with gifts attached at each end of the ribbon.

The bride-elect began to wind the baby ribbon and found all the gifts which her many friends had chosen for her. To the last piece of ribbon was attached a dozen cut glass goblets and one dozen cut glass wine glasses and pitcher. Other gifts, too numerous to mention, were placed about the home. Bunco was played and prizes were awarded.

A delicious lunch was served and the young ladies who attended the affair left for their homes at a late hour, all voting the two young ladies admirable hostesses.

Surprise Party.
Mrs. Elina Jensen was the guest of honor at a pleasant surprise party planned by a large number of her friends who came to her home on South 15th St. Thursday afternoon and helped her to celebrate her 73rd birthday anniversary. The ladies spent the afternoon in social diversions and partook of a very delicious lunch Mrs. Jensen was presented with silk material for a dress, a gift which was greatly appreciated. Every one enjoyed the afternoon and wished the honored guest many happy returns of the day before departing for their homes.

OLD RESIDENT PASSES AWAY

The passing of another pioneer was recorded at Manistique yesterday when Mrs. Albert Orr, 75, died at the home on Cedar street. Death came at six o'clock Friday morning, following a brief illness. Her only daughter, Mrs. E. R. Westcott of this city, was called from the bedside of her husband in a Rochester hospital, arriving here early Friday morning.

The deceased was formerly Miss Kate Barren, born in New York in 1849. She was married to Albert Orr in 1867, and together the couple came to Manistique in 1879, where they have since resided.

Two children were born to them, a son who died at the age of five years, and a daughter, Mrs. E. R. Westcott. The husband, daughter and a sister, Mrs. Elizabeth Warner of Presho, New York, are the sole survivors.

Funeral arrangements will be made later, after word is received from the sister in New York.

PARK FUND DRIVE WILL START SOON

Plans are being made by the Gladstone Booster club to collect the balance of amounts subscribed to the park fund last year and to solicit subscriptions from those who did not respond at that time, to raise funds to pay for the tourist camp equipment.

Committees to handle this matter will be appointed within the next few days, Attorney Glenn W. Jackson, president, said yesterday, and the campaign for the park funds will be started in a short time.

The Booster club workers will set out to collect the balance of the fund subscribed by Gladstone people last year for the park fund and they will also ask for subscriptions from those who did not contribute to the park fund.

The money to be raised will be used for expenditures accumulated this year in connection with the building of a bath house in the tourist park and the equipping of the tourist camp building with a stove, sinks and other conveniences.

It is expected that sufficient funds will be raised in this way to cover the cost of the tourist park improvements and the bath house cost and thus leave the Booster club money intact for other important work.

The complete list of committees and the territory which their members will cover, will be announced as soon as they have been appointed.

A visit to the vaudeville and musical comedy theatre with the Lippa Amusement company, which comes to Gladstone for the tournament week, beginning Monday, under the auspices of the firemen, convinces one that Bud Riley the producing comedian who heads the company used excellent judgment in selecting his supporting cast.

SUFFERED SINCE YOUNG GIRL

Words Failed to Express Benefit Received from Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Greenville, Texas. — "Words can not express how much good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. Every month I would have cramps and headache, and I felt like I was freezing to death. I suffered in this way from the time I was a young girl, and all the doctors said was 'operation.' For months I had a tired, sleepy feeling all day, and when night would come I would be so nervous I couldn't stay in bed. Our druggist recommended the Vegetable Compound to my husband and he bought four bottles. I have taken every one and I think I have a right to praise your medicine." — Mrs. J. B. HOLLEMAN, 224 E. Marshal St., Greenville, Texas.

For fifty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been used by women from girlhood through middle age.

It is a dependable medicine for troubles common to women. Such symptoms as Mrs. Holleman had are relieved by correcting the cause of the trouble. For sale by druggists everywhere.
