THE CHILDREN.

The following beautiful piece of Poetry, which has been credited to Charles Dickens, was in reality written by Charles L. Dickson, a lawyer from the interior of the Empire State.

When the lessons and the tasks are all ended
And the school for the day is dismissed,
And the little ones gather around me,
To bid me good night and be kissed;
O the little white arms that encircle
My neck in a tender embrace!
O the smiles that are half of heaven,
Shedding sunshine of love on my face!

And when they a e gone I sit dreaming
Of my childhood too lovely to last;
Of love that my heart will remember,
When it wakes to the pulse of the past,
Ere the world and its wickedness made me
A partner of sorrow and sin,
When the glory of God was about me,
And the glory of gladness within.

O my heart grows weak as a woman's
And the fountain of feeling will flow,
When I think of the path step and stony;
Where the feet of the dear ones must go;
Of the mountain of sin hanging o'er them
Of the tempest of Fate blowing wild;
O there is nothing on earth half so hold
As the innocent heart of a child!

They are idols of hearts and of households;
They are angels of God in disguise;
His sunlight still sleeps in their tresses,
His glory still gleams in their eyes;
O those trants from home and from heaven,
They have made me more manly and mild
And I know how Jesus could liken
The Kingdom of God to a child.

I ask not a life for the dear ones,
All radiant, as others have done,
But that life may have just enough shadow
To temper the glare of the sun;
I would pray God to guard them from evil,
But my prayer would bound back to my
Ah! a sereph may pray for a sinner, [self,
But a sinner must pray for himself.

The twig is so easily tended,
I have banished the rule and the rod;
I have taught them the goodness of knowledge.
They have taught me the goodness of God;
My heart is a dungeon of darkness,
When I shut them from breathing a rule;
My frown is sufficient correction;
My love is the law of the school.

I shall leave the old house in the autumn,
To traverse its threshold no more;
Ah! how I shall sigh for the dear ones,
That met me each morn at the door!
I shall miss the "good-nights" and the kisses,
And the gusts of their innocent glee, [see
The group on the grass, and the flowers,
That are brought every morning to me.

I shall miss them at morn and at eve,
Their song in the school and the street;
I shall miss the low hum of their voices,
And the tramp of their delicate feet,
When the lessons and tasks are all ended,
And death says, "The school is dismissed!"

May the little ones gather around me,
To bid me good night and be kissed.

MRS. CAUDLE ON MASONRY.—The following is supposed to be a lecture given to Mr. Caudle by his wife after they had retired to bed, on the night when he was made a Mason:

"Now, Mr. Caudle—Mr. Caudle, I say Oh! you can't be asleep already, I know—now what I mean to say is this: there is no use, none at all, in the matter, but at last my mind's made up. Mr. Caudle, I shall leave you. Either I'll know all you've been doing to-night or to-morrow morning, I quit your house. No, no, there's an end to all confidence between man and wife—and a husband's to have secrets and keep 'em all to himself. Pretty secrets they must be when his own wife can't know 'em! Not for any decent person to know, I'm sure if that's the case. Now, Caudle don't let us quarrel, there's a good soul; tell me what it's all about; a pack of nonsense, I dare say; still—I should like to know. There's a dear. Eh? Oh don't tell me there's nothing in it; I know better. I'm not a fool, Caudle; I know there's a good deal in it. I'm sure I'd tell you anything. You know I would. Well? Caudle, you're enough to vex a saint! Now don't you think you are going to sleep; because you are not. Do you suppose I'd ever suffered you to be a Mason if I didn't suppose I was to know the secrets too? Not that it's anything to know, I dare say; and that's why I'm determined to know it.

"But I know what it is; oh, yes, there can be no doubt. The secret is to ill use poor women; to tyrannize over them; and to make 'em your wives—especially their wives. It must be something of the sort, or you wouldn't be ashamed to have it known. What's right and proper need not be done 'in secret.' It's an insult to a woman for a man to be a Free Mason and let his wife know nothing of it. But, poor soul! she's sure to know it somehow, for nice husbands they all make. Yes, yes; a part of the secret is to think more of the world than of their wives and families. I'm sure, men have quite enough to think for—that is, if they act properly—to care for them that they have at home. They can't have much to spare for the world besides.

"And I suppose they call you Brother Caudle. A pretty brother, indeed! Go and dressing yourself up in an apron like a dumpling man—for that's what you look like. And I should like to know what the apron is for? There must be something in it not very respectable, I'm sure. Well I only wish I was Queen, for a day or two. I'd put an end to Free Masonry, and all such trumpery. I know—

"Now come, Caudle; don't let us quarrel. Eh? You're not in pain dear? What is it all about? What are you laying there laughing about? But I am a fool to trouble my head about you.

"Are you going to let me know the secret, eh? You mean to say you are not? Now, Caudle, you know it is a hard matter to put me in a passion—not that I care about the secret myself, no I would not give a button to know it. For it is all nonsense, I'm sure. It isn't the secret I care about; it's the slight Mr. Caudle, it's the studied insult that a man pays to his wife, when he thinks of going through the through the world keeping something to himself which he wouldn't let her know. Man and wife are one, indeed! I should like to know how that can be when a man is a Mason—when he keeps a secret that sets him and his wife apart.

"Caudle you shan't close your eyes for a week—no, you shan't—unless you tell me some of it. Come, there's a fave. I'm sure, Caudle, I wouldn't refuse you anything—and you know it or ought to know it by this time. I only wish I had a secret! To whom should I think of confiding it but to my husband? I should be miserable to keep it to myself, and you know it. Now Caudle!

"Was there ever such a man? A man indeed! A brute! Yes, an unfeeling bruteish creature, when you might oblige me and do me good. I'm sure I don't forget to your being a Mason; not at all, Caudle, I dare say it's a very good thing, it's only your making a secret of it that vexes me. But you'll tell me—you'll tell me, your own Margaret. You won't? You are a wretch, Mr. Caudle.

"But I know why; oh, yes; I can tell the fact is you are ashamed to let me know what a fool they have been making of you. That is it. You, at your time in life—the father of a family; I should be ashamed of myself. Caudle.

"And I suppose you will be going to what you call your Lodge every night now. Lodge indeed? Pretty place it must be where you don't admit women! Nice going on, I dare say. Then you call on another brethren. Brethren! I'm sure you have relations enough; you did not want any more.

What Has He Been?—Some people are forever asking of another, "What has he been?" What is that to you? It is of no consequence if he has been one of the most depraved and abandoned of his race; he is not so now. We care not for what evil a man has done, provided his repentance is sincere, and he is endeavoring to live an upright, honorable, conscientious life. Instead of looking backwards twenty or thirty years, and tracing out every misstep, every folly, every crime, and saying things to his charge, the question should be, "What is he now?" What character does he hold at the present time?" If you find that his repentance is sincere, and that he laments his past errors, you should take him by the hand, cheer him on his way, and give him a hearty God-speed. We are not de sirs of being cased among the friends of those who would rake up past sins and vices only to condemn one who has resolved to do better. Many a one is driven back into three fold error, who might have been an ornament to the society in which he moves a pride to his friends, a blessing to the world at large, but for the disposition to bring into light every iniquity. Are they any of us so strong that we may not fall? Are there any so pure that temptation may not conquer? Human virtue is a negative quality at the best. We all know what we are, but none know what we may be. As the tide of life ebbs and flows, so do we. A day may cloud the hopes to which we cling.

A week may turn a beggar to a king; A month may circle in it's little span, And turn a virgin to a courtesan.

A little charity to others' shortcomings, a great deal more scrutiny to our own misdoings; a little faith in others' better qualities, and a great deal of doubt in our own self-conceived virtues, and the world and those in it, would be happier in the main, and our judgment allied more closely with common sense and common sympathy.

THE SEVEN WONDERS OF THE WORLD.—Many people don't know what the seven wonders of the world are, and therefore wouldn't recognize them if they saw them. They are:

First—The great pyramid of Egypt, built by an old mutton chop called Cheops, King of Egypt. He was twenty years in building it—he and about 300,000 others whose names we have forgotten. There is no poor amid modern monuments for Cheops.

Second—Babylon the Great. The walls of the city, being sixty miles in circumference and eighty-seven feet thick, they naturally come very high. The walls were very high that year, anyhow. The walls surrounding the palace of Nebuchadnezzar were six miles in extent, to prevent his escape when let out to grass. Hanging wasn't played out in Babylon, for we read of their hanging gardens.

Third—The gold and ivory statue of Jobiter, Olympus, done by Phidias, the greatest living artist now dead. There is some dispute as to the nationality of the Jew Peter Olympus, but the name denotes that he was a Hebrew of Irish extraction.

Fourth—The Temple of Diana of the Ephesians at Ephesus. It is built of cedar, cypress, and gold, with a brown stone front and Mansard roof. It had a hall and side entrance, bath-room hot and cold, water on every floor was convenient to the horse cars, and within five minutes walk of the post office. Diana used to say, if she was to die anywhere, she would prefer to depart from her temple at Ephesus.

Fifth—The Mausoleum, or Tomb of Mausolus, erected at Halicarnassus. Mausolus was a Greek, who invented the mausoleum. His original model of it may be seen at the Patent Office in Washington.

Sixth—The Pyramids of Alexandria an ancient light house, built at Alexandria by one of the Pharaohs. Heavy old light house that, must have been, 450 feet high.

Seventh—The Colossus of Rhodes, giant figure 106 feet high, placed across the harbor of Rhodes, with a stride of fifty feet from rock to rock, of which there are two. The Louisville mail-boats easily pass beneath it without lowering their smoke stacks. A lamp burned in its right hand. It was buried under a hot poker. An internal stair case led to its summit, and around its neck was ascended a glass, in which ships might be discerned as far off as the Egyptian coast. By the aid of the glass you could "P. H. Aunt Betsy" (who lives at Rhodes) as far as you could see her. The Cardiff Giant is a distant relative. The Colossus was thrown down by an earthquake, in a square hold. It was the champion wrestler, and nothing but an earthquake could throw it. The contest now lies between Vanderbil and Fisk for the title of Colossus of Roads.

Byron have any more wonders bring 'em on.—Cincinnati Times.

Curious Bell. There is something beautiful in the sound of church bells—beautiful and full of hope. They speak to high and low, rich and poor, in the same voice. There is a sound in them that should drive away all pride and envy and meanness from the heart of man; that should induce him to look on the world with kind forgiving eyes; that should make the earth seem to him, for the time being at least, a holy place. There is a whole sermon in the sound of church bells, if the ears understand it aright. There is a preacher in every bell that cries, "Poor, weary, struggling, fighting souls, take rest and be quiet. Forget your vanities, your follies, your week day craft, your heart-burnings. And you, ye human vessels, gift and painted, believe the iron tongue that tells you, for all your gilding, for all your colors, ye are the same Adam's earth, with the beggar at your door. "Come away," cries the church-bell, "come and learn to be humble—learn that, however dabbled about with jewels, ye are but grave clay. Come, Dives, come and be taught this: all your glory, as you wear it, is not half so beautiful in the eyes of Heaven as the sore uncomplaining Lazarus. And ye, poor creatures, livid and faint, starved and crushed by the pride and hardness of the world—come, come," cries the bell, with the voice of an angel; "come and learn what is laid up for you. And learning, take heart and walk among the wickedness, the cruelties of the world, calmly, as Daniel walked "among the lions."

Do you believe in forewarners?" asked old Mrs. Quip, of Bob Hastings.

"Yes, ma'am, was the grave reply; "yes, ma'am, I've seen 'em."

"Bless me!" cried the old lady; "do tell!"

"Yes," continued he, in a voice of solemn import, and casting his eyes into a dark corner of the sitting room, "I see one now."

"Mercy! mercy on m! Where, Bob, where?"

"There ma'am, there," pointing where his eyes were directed.

"Why that's the cat."

Certainly, don't she run on all fours? Bob never received any invitations to tea after that.

It is strictly and philosophically true and in reason that there is no such thing as chance or accident; it being evident that these words do not signify any thing really existing, any thing that is truly an agent or cause of an event, but they signify, merely, man's ignorance of the real and immediate cause.—A. Clark.

Love is a secondary passion in those who love most; a primary in those who love less; he who is inspired by it in the strongest degree, is inspired in a greater.—Lander.

If to do were as easy as to know what were good to do, chapels had been churches, and poor men princes, and princes princes, and kings kings. It is a good thing that follows his own instructions. I can easier teach twenty men what were good to be done, than to be one in twenty to follow my own teachings.—Shakespeare.

He that is of a merry heart hath a continual feast.

A LITTLE LEGAL DOCTRINE.—A judge out in Western Pennsylvania, went to the river to bathe recently, and while he was swimming about, some abandoned scoundrel stole all his clothes excepting his high hat and an umbrella. We won't undertake to explain how mad the judge was, because although the English language is copious, its most efficient and vigorous adjectives are entirely unequal to the expression of certain degrees of emotion. But he stayed in the water about four hours, experimenting with the different kinds of imprecations, and endeavoring to select two or three of the sturdiest of ob- jurgations for application to the thief. At last he came out and after mounting the high hat, he opened the umbrella, and tried to cover his retreat up the street toward the house. It appeared that the thief had been captured. The judge is now engaged in writing out his charge to the jury in advance of the trial. Those who have seen the rough draft say it is the most picturesque legal paper ever drawn up in that part of the country.

The scale of a good wife-ship I divide into ten parts: Good nature, four; good sense, two; wit, one; personal charms, namely, a sweet face, eloquent eyes, fine limbs, graceful carriage, (I would add a few warts, too, but that is soon spoilt, you know, all the ones; as to the other qualities belonging to or attending on a wife, such as firmness, connections, education, (I mean education extraordinary,) family blood, etc., divide the two remaining degrees among them as you please, only remember that all these minor propositions must be expressed by fractions, for there is not any one of them in the above scale entitled to the dignity of an integer.—Barns, the poet.

OUR OF THE MOTHERS OF BABES.—A friend who was endeavoring to catch her little daughter, two or three years old, the lion's prayer, a few days since, and proceeded to sit as "give us our daily bread," when the little one, instead of repeating it after her mother as she had done the previous sentences, looked into her face and said, "And but ter too, ma!" How many children of a larger growth seek to amend this commonplace prayer, with less success than this guileless but e!

EARLY RESPONSIBILITY.—Now early responsibility is almost equivalent to early sobriety. If a stick of timber stands upright wavers, lay a beam on top of it, and put a weight on that, and see how stiff the stick beco es. And if young men waver and vacillate, put responsibility on them and see how soon they straighten them up! What power it gives them! How it holds them that is bad in them in restraint! How quickly it develops and puts forward all that is good in them!

Impure thoughts are the seeds of sin; if dropped into the soil of the mind and heart, they should be cast out immediately; otherwise they will generate spring up, and bear the fruit of sinful words and acts.

Settle your disputes yourself, if you would make an end of them; would you prolong them, call in lawyers.

Never open the door to a little vice, lest a great one should enter also.

Good-Breeding is the result of much good sense, some good nature, and a little self-denial, for the sake of others, and with a view to obtain the same indulgence from them.—Chesterfield.

Take care and leave the chaff behind.

Passion is the drunkenness of the mind, and therefore, in the present workings, not always controllable by reason.

The way to gain a good reputation is to endeavor to be what you desire to appear.

A bad custom must not plead its age as a reason for longer life and larger growth.

Aerry vicaried man has said: "The three hardest words in the English language are: 'I was mistaken!'" Frederick the great wrote to the senate, "I have lost a great battle, and I was entirely my own fault." Goldsmith says, "This confession displayed more greatness than all his victories."

Almost any young lady has public spirit enough to be willing to have her father's house used for a court house.

In his "Autobiography," John B. Rough tells of a man in New Hampshire, who when he was about to be married to his fourth wife, and the minister requested the happy couple to rise, remarked, sentimentally, "I've usually sat."

of years ago. The dirt-eaters of Lapland devour the remains of organized life and derive nourishment from the animal matter which has survived countless ages for these wretched beings to feed upon.

All these things come to us through the little tube upon which science has conferred these marvelous powers; and it is still working on to results still more surprising. The last advance, which has just been made in this city, is a very large one. Until now the best microscope magnified an object not more than two hundred million times its actual size, and very few microscopists ever saw such power.

The President of the Royal Society of England last summer showed a shell magnified one hundred and forty-four million times, and this excited the astonishment of microscopists throughout the world. But the new optical combination just completed in this city exhibits the same object under an enlargement of nine thousand million times its natural magnitude. If an ordinary domestic fly should be seen under such magnification, it would seem to cover a space as large as the whole city of New York below Wall street.

A man would appear very small, and reach half way from New York to New Haven.

This wonderful instrument is so sensitive that a loud word spoken near it destroys all distinctness of vision, from the tremor imparted to it by the motion of the air, and a footstep on the floor shakes it out of adjustment.

The field of view—that is, the area which can be seen at once—is a circle only the one twenty-thousandth of an inch in diameter, but it appears to the eye to be eight inches in diameter. A microscope shall called an ophthalmoscope, of which one hundred and forty placed end to end will reach an inch, and which is simply marked with lines of the most exquisite delicacy when examined under ordinary powerful microscopes, exhibits under the new instrument half globes of white silk, whose diameters appear to be an inch and three-quarters, and of which only fifteen can be seen at once.

In reality the point of a cambric needle is larger than the circles upon which these fifteen half globes exist, and yet that circle appears like a desert plain covered with half globes.

These wonders we have seen, but how they are produced by men of science can only explain and understand. The honor of the invention belongs to Mr. Edward M. Dickson, the distinguished lawyer and engineer of this city. As a microscopical expert, however, he is not a student, and not a professional devotee of the instrument, and he has arrived at this marvellous discovery by a profound study of the law of optics, and by elaborate and exhaustive mathematical calculations.

We should like to see a number of the Baltimore Microscopical Club, an association composed of the most skillful microscopists of the country, which is doing much to advance this department of science, so interesting and so useful to humanity.

CHARLES DICKENS AND DEATH. Copied by the New York Tribune. Charles Dickens—Died at his residence 111th Kent, Thursday, June 9, 1870, aged 58 years.

"Dead, your Majesty. Dead, my lords and gentlemen. Dead, Right Reverends and Wrong Reverends, of every order. Dead, men and woman born with Heavenly Compassion in your hearts. And dying thus around us, every day."—[Black House, Chapter 67.]

"The golden riple on the wall came back again, and nothing else stirred in the room. The old, old fashion. The fashion that came in with first garments, and will last unchanged until our race has run its course and the wide firmament is roped up like a scroll. The old, old fashion—Death! O, think God, all who see it, for that older fashion yet of immortality? And look upon us, angels of young children, with regards not quite catalogued when the Swift River bears us to the Ocean."—[Donkey Chapter 17.]

ANOTHER GREAT WAR IN EUROPE.

The Telegraph this morning announces that France has declared war against Prussia, which will undoubtedly draw in other European Powers. Dispatches from Minister Motley to President Grant state that a great battle is expected daily. The Emperor Napoleon commands the French Troops in person, while the Prussians are led by the veterans of former wars. The President has issued a Proclamation extending indefinitely the present session of Congress. Gold has advanced to 1.16 but American securities and commodities are expected to advance in a like ratio, so that the effect on our home market will not be felt much, except in Provisions, which will undoubtedly greatly advance.

The Steamer Dunlap, met with an accident to her machinery at Green Bay this morning which will detain her till some time in the night.

A young brakeman by the name of John Stafford, was badly hurt this morning on the ore dock, by falling between the cars. His leg was broken and it is feared will have to be amputated, besides receiving other less serious injuries.

Loss of Express Sack. - On Tuesday last, as J. G. Manning, Express Messenger between Green Bay and Marquette, was taking the Express Matter from the Car to the Steamer Geo. L. Dunlap, the sack slipped off on the gang plank and the entire load was thrown into the Bay. It was raining at the time, the plank was slippery, the wheels of the truck were loose and one of them slipped off the side. Mr. Antieck, Superintendent of the Wisconsin Division of the Express Co., and Fred L. Clark, Route Agent, were with the Messenger at the time, saw the mishap and remaining here, uniting their efforts with those of many others to recover the lost property, which, up to the present time have failed, excepting one small sack taken out Thursday. The Sack was iron, and weighs 160 pounds, and contained the money, bills, etc., from points above, those from this place however, were not in the sack, and it is believed, the amount it contained is not large. The water at the point where the accident happened is about 18 deep, but it deepens so rapidly that within a stone's throw it is more than three times that depth. A diver has been sent for, and the property will undoubtedly be recovered before another paper is issued. We are glad to know that the officers who were present do not censure the Messenger, simply speaking of it as one of those accidents that will sometimes happen even in well regulated families. From a long personal acquaintance with Mr. Manning, in "places where it tried men's souls," we know him to be worthy of all confidence.

New Vessel - Thursday evening last the fine new three masted schooner, Alva Bradley, Capt. Stone, Com-mander, came into port, and we embraced the opportunity afforded of calling on the genial captain in his new quarters. He takes that pride in his ship which characterizes all good seamen and which we think is pardonable under the circumstances. She is one of the largest vessels on the lakes, capable of carrying 13,500 net tons of ore and having quarters for officers and passengers that would be no disgrace to our first class steamers. She is built in the most substantial manner possible expressly for the iron ore trade and at an expense of $50,000. She is the 10th vessel in the trade belonging to A. Bradley & Co., of which the Ne-ganee, Escanaba, S. J. Silden, Fayette Brown and Alva Bradley, come to this port, while the others are a much smaller class of vessel and run to Marquette. The five named above will carry away from this port about 3,000 tons of ore per week for the remainder of the season. Capt. Geo Stone is heavily interested in the line and has personally superintended the building of all the named vessels therein he having named the "Escanaba" for our town when the vessel was almost as large as the place. We imagine that the "Alva Bradley" however is likely to be his last effort in that direction for some time, as the taste and money expended is evidently done with that intention. She was built by Quail & Martin of Cleveland, and is of the following dimensions. Length of Keel 187 ft. Breadth of Beam 32 ft. Depth of hold 14 ft. 6 inches. Lohr may she float.

SUSPENDED. - We miss from our table the pleasant face of the Marquette Plaiddealer, lately published at Ne-ganee and regret that the office has been closed up by a Chatter Mortgage held by some parties in Marquette. We shall be glad to learn that the financial troubles have been satisfactorily adjusted and the paper again being published.

AGROUND. - The schooner H. A. Richmond, Capt. Wells, ran aground a few miles down the shore of Green Bay on Monday last. A scow was run out to her and after fighting off a small part of her cargo of ore, she floated again.

The Steamer Saginaw loosened some pivots in her Boiler, and failed to arrive on Wednesday. She is usually so regular, and the Telegraph line being down some serious difficulty was feared, but the Rocket came in the next morning and reported her all right. She made her regular trip yesterday.

A new Butcher Shop has been started on the corner of Ludington and Harrison Streets. Bacon, is the proprietor's name, but we understand he deals principally in fresh meats.

Marquette has a population as shown by the recent census of 4,249, Ne-ganee 2,600, Ishpeming, including the Lake Angelina, Cleveland and New York Mines, about 5,000 and the entire County will probably reach 15,000. We will give the total returns for our own County next week.

This paper has been designated by the Auditor General as the one in which the list of Delinquent Taxes of this County will be published.

A few more of our subscribers are in arrears yet, and those who receive their paper with this item marked will please pay a note of it. Gaynor's big Hotel over the way is being pushed ahead by the proprietor with characteristic energy, and we expect to have the pleasure of giving a full description of the house, one of these days.

One of the book-keepers on the dock made an estimate of the number of figures which he is obliged to make in his daily work and finds it averages between twelve and thirteen thousand.

In another column we publish an extract from the Green Bay Advocate in regard to the future prospects of that city, all of which we can endorse. We incline strongly to the belief that if they do succeed in getting up a large city down at that end of the Bay, that we shall feel the effects thereof.

Fishing. - We have got the "big gun" of all fishermen, stopping at the Tilden House now. He was up and caught 24 pounds of pickerel the other morning before breakfast, and has brought back his round hundred Speckled Trout, as the result of a single day's sport. His name is Young, but he is evidently an old hand at this business.

The Peninsula Division have now over 19 miles of side-track, about one-fifth of which has been built this summer, while a considerable amount more is still uncompleted.

Hiller's Soda Fountain is working splendidly, and turning out cooling drinks in large quantities. He sells 13 tickets for one dollar.

A party of the Geological Survey were in town yesterday. This party is engaged in examining the formations along the water's edge and expect to examine the entire Michigan coast on the shores of Green Bay, and Lake Michigan during the summer. We were told by one of the party that the Jackson Furnace Limestone is the best they have found anywhere.

Huckleberries and Raspberries are coming in large quantities and selling at from four to eight cents per quart. We saw an Indian boat come in with over 400 quarts on board. The yield was never so great as it is this season, and the berries are remarkably well developed.

Among the late arrivals at the Tilden we notice Rev. J. Trumble, J. J. Flourley, R. K. & Otis Turner, Horace Loring, A. McMain, J. H. Crowley, D. Wells, G. J. Strong, Geo. H. Bliss, Geo. R. Upton, Rev. H. C. Hiltcock, H. B. Hinsdale, Rev. H. M. Thompson, S. C. Smith, W. J. Baxter and E. O. Grosvenor.

OCEAN. - We call attention to the facts, now more than ever apparent, that the States point to the city of Green Bay to become, at no very distant day, a great metropolis. Being at the lake outlet of the rivers improvement, it must grow largely by reason of the traffic and transshipments at its wharves. And this improvement, will certainly bring in its train others, which will go to swell the volume of business here. For example, we believe that the long contemplated connection of the Rock river with Lake Winnebago will be revived, and in time become a fixed fact.

It will do no harm to call attention again to the site of the city of Green Bay, and its advantages for commercial purposes. The city is laid out on a point of land from a mile to a mile and a half wide, lying between the Fox and East rivers, the rivers running nearly parallel until the river sweeps around and empties into the Fox forming the eastern boundary and running through the northern part of the city. Both rivers are navigable and give dockage room all around - room for at least five miles of docks in Green Bay proper. Fort Howard on the opposite side of the Fox, has dockage room of nearly two miles more.

The Green Bay & Lake Pepin Railroad is another great measure of public importance which we regard as a certain success. It will furnish the shortest route of communication between Lake Michigan and the Mississippi river; and will also probably connect with the Northern Pacific road.

A prudent man will readily see the advantages offered here. We are now a full fledged city of no mean dimensions, with churches of all denominations, the best of schools, public and private hotels, public halls, banks, lines of communication, etc., and we are rapidly growing in population and wealth. We want now men of capital and enterprise - men to take hold and assist us in our improvements; to build and run manufacturing; and to ride with us on the flood tide to fortune. Our county wants farmers, skilled artisans, and enterprising men generally. We want no drones, nor boys, nor men in any business already overdone, but workers to step right in wherever there is an opening, and the places are not a few, and work for their own and the public good. - Green Bay Advocate.

Pen and Scissors,
There is no greater proof of the power of love than that the crimes committed in its interests, are in a measure hallowed.
I can tell exactly how my nabers young ones ought to be fetched up, but I ain't so clear about my own.
There is sum folks in this world who spend their whole time hunting after righteousness, and haint got enny spare time tew prakties it.
Adversity has the same effect on a man that severe training does on the pugilist—it reduces him to his fighting weight.
Natur kan be improved upon often with good effect, but to alter it generally spile the whole thing.
Affliktions are like the summer's sun—they will for the purpasa of ripening.
If ya want to find out a man's real disposition, take him when he's wet and hungry. If he is amiable, then dry him and fill him up and you've got an angel.
The man who has never been tempted don't know how dishonest he is.
There is nothing like a sick bed for repentance. A man bekums so virtuous that he will often repent ov sins he never committed.
When the devil was sick, The devil a saint would be, When the devil got well, The devil a saint was he.
What a man gains in conning, he always loses in wisdom.
Listen tew every man's opinions, disagree with none, but confide in your own. This is a kind ov flattery that wrongs no one.
It don't take much tew prove a truth. It iz only a lie that requires grate argumentatiff ability.
The most difficult thing to remember—the poor.
Troubles are like babies; they grow sigger by nursing.
An actor ought to be a happy man, his work iz all play.
Who iz the largest man?—The lover; e iz a man of tremen'ous sighs.
A good protection against misfortune—Keep out of it.
It iz true wisdom to speak but little of the injuries or the good deeds you ave done.
A California paper says the Japanese will win universal respect by a sort of catholic habit they have of minding their own business.
"Let us remove temptation from the ath of youth," as the frog said, when e plunged into the water, upon ceasing he pick up a stone.
He that loses his conscience has othing left that iz worth keeping.
At one of our neighbor's houses was very bright little girl. It dained one ay that they had a meet, a minister a esteemed friend. Little Anna watcht him closely, and finally sat down beside him and began to draw on her ale.
"What are you drawing Anna?" asked the clergyman.
"I se making your pictur," answered the child.
So the gentleman sat very quiet and e worked away very earnestly for a hile. Then she stopped, compared e original with her work, and shook er little head.
"I don't like it much," she said.— "Taint a great deal like you. I dess ll put a tail to it and call it a dog."
Fanny Fern says when she sees a retty man, with an apple head and a sperry mustache, with six hairs in a pint pot on his cheek, and a little of a gontee on his chin, with pretty ttle blinking studs in his shirt bosom, and a little necktie that looks as if it could faint if it were tumbled, she always feels a desire to nip it with a pair of sugar tongs, drop it gently into a owl of cream, and strew pink rose ares over the little remains.
"There now," said a little girl, tunning a drawer in a bureau, "grand-a has gone to Heaven without his spectacles!"
A little four-year-old, very fond of a rtain dish, when asked by his mother he wouldn't like to be an angel with ings, and fly about heaven like your ttle dead brother, replied after a pause, No Mr. I'd heap rather be a hawk and ive on chickens?"
A debating society has been for some time engaged in the discussion of the question, "if you had to hav' a big where would you have it?" and its members have finally decided, "On another fellow."
"Bill," said one apprentice to another, "my boss is a better man to work for than you'd man. My boss ain't always around his shop, interfering with his own business."
A young woman in O'ie had a button in her mouth when a fellow tried to kiss her, and by injudicious resisting, she swallowed it, and is not expected to revive.
The North Scituate (Massachusetts) stage overturned lately, having three passengers inside, none of whom were injured. An old lady, who does not come to town often, and who seemed to think it all in the play, put her head out of the window, after the coach had upset, and called to the driver, saying that "she guessed she would get out and walk up the hill, if the pesky thing was going to ride so onsteady."
Up jumps the "devil" in a rage, And sets two hoes to fill this page.

"A Complete Fictorial History of the Times."
"The best, cheapest, and most successful Family paper in the Union."
Harper's Weekly.
SPLENDIDLY ILLUSTRATED.
In November, 1870, commenced "Man and Wife," a new story, splendidly illustrated, by WILLIAM COLLIER, Author of "The Woman in White," "No Name," "Armadale," and "Moonstone." New Subscribers will be supplied with HARPER'S WEEKLY from the commencement of the story to the end of 1870 for Four Dollars.
CRITICAL NOTICES OF THE PRESS.
The Model Newspaper of our country. Complete in all the departments of an American Family Paper. Harper's Weekly was earned for itself a right to its title, "A Leader of Civilization."—New York Evening Post.
Harper's Weekly will be unreservedly declared the best newspaper in America.—N. Y. Independent.
The articles upon public questions which appear in Harper's Weekly from week to week form a remarkable series of brief political essays. They are distinguished by clear and pointed statements, good common sense, by insight and depth of view. They are the expression of mature conviction, high patriotism, and strong feeling, and take their place among the best newspaper writing of the time.—North American Review, Boston, Massachusetts.
Subscriptions—1870.

"A Repository of Fashion, Pleasure, and Instruction."
HARPER'S BAZAR.
A Supplement containing numerous full-length patterns of useful articles for every day and every occasion, and occasionally an elegant colored Fashion Plate.
Harper's BAZAR contains 160 pages of the size of Harper's Weekly, printed on expensive calendered paper, and is published weekly.
CRITICAL NOTICES OF THE PRESS.
Harper's Bazar contains better pictures, patterns, etc., a variety of matter of special interest and use to the family; articles on health, dress, and house-keeping in English literature; the editorial matter is especially adapted to the circle it is intended to interest and instruct; and it has, besides, good stories and literary matter of merit. It is not surprising that the journal, with these features, has achieved in a short time an immense success. For something of the kind was desired in thousands of families, and its publishers have filled the demand. The young lady who buys a single number of Harper's Bazar is making a wise choice for her "New York Evening Post."
The Bazar is excellent. Like all the periodicals which the Harpers publish, it is almost entirely well edited, and the class of readers for whom it is intended—the mother and daughter in average families—cannot but profit by its clear and good taste, which we have no doubt, see to-day making very many houses happier than they were before the weeklies began to appear. The personal and household and social management from this good-natured editor.—F. M. Nelson.
It has the merit of being readable, of conveying instruction, of giving excellent patterns in every department, and of being well stocked with good reading matter.—Washington and London.
SUBSCRIPTIONS.—1870.

VILLAGE
FOR SALE.
The sure, steady and rapid growth of the village of ESCANABA, is the best guarantee for its advancement, and we feel assured that its increase in the future will be even greater than it has been in the past, believing that a small beginning has been made. The extension of the U. & N. W. R. R. Westward in Marquette county, the establishment of Furnaces, Foundries, &c., the early building of a Railroad Westward to the Menominee Iron Range, and the erection of ore and other hoists, Great Mills, Planing Mills, &c., all point with unerring finger to an increase of business and population in the village.
We have on hand business and building Lots, excellent for fire, if any that have been sold, and are prepared to dispose of those at fair prices and on the most liberal terms, to parties buying for the purpose of improving.
The village has recently been incorporated by the Board of Supervisors, and contains about 13,000 inhabitants, with five General Stores, one Hardware store, one Jewelry store, two Wholesale Lumber stores, one Drug store, one Tailor shop, one Meat market, three first-class hotels (one of which is the finest in the Upper Peninsula) and five second-class Hotels, one Livery Stable, one Harness shop, two Cabinet and Carpenter Shops, two Barb-chops, one Bakery, one Tin-smith's, one Saddlery and Printing Office, and several saloons, besides the R. R. car shops, one Marble shop, &c. There are also Presbyterian and Catholic Churches, a School, and a considerable amount of literary culture for a place so young. In this and many other respects, it challenges comparison, and it can be claimed for it also, that there are few places if any that have grown up so rapidly to which a gentleman can go with his family, and have the advantages of education and social intercourse that he can find here.
To all therefore who are in search of a good business point, a rapidly growing village, and one that is certain to continue so, we say come on, and we will welcome you with open arms to hospitable Escanaba.
