The Mango Tree.

BY CHARLES KINGSLY.

He wiled me through the fury crest,
He wiled me down the sandy lane,
He told his boy's love, set and oft,
Until I told him nime again.

A soldier and a soldier we met—
A soldier and a soldier we met;
We signed for many a gallant plan;

We signed for many a gallant life.

But his—feel kept it safe from harm,
He told, and dared, and earned command;

And those three stripes upon his arm
Were more to us than gold or land.

Why he would win some renown;
Our lives were strong; our hearts were high.

One night the fever struck him down,
I staid, and stared, and saw him die.

I had his children, one, two, three,
One week I had there, blithe and sound;

The next—beneath this mango tree,
In his bark burning-ground.

There was a rustling of silken draperies and a twitter of soft voices, and Haidee knew the embrasure next to her was occupied, but only separated by a clinging ivy vine.

"A perfect shame," said the soft voice, which Miss Cony recognized as that of one of the leading belles "and his poor wife fretting and dragging her life out."

"And she flitting and carrying on," said another voice, "just as if he wasn't married."

"But they are old friends," murmur ed a sweet, pleasant voice; "they have grown up together, and I suppose Haidee sees in him in flirting with all the locality and detached from all others. He occupied two rooms on the second floor as a bed chamber and library and between the two was a double wall the space between which was utilized as closets, with doors opening into each room. Any one passing from one room to the other necessarily went through one of these closets. On the ground floor and directly underneath the bed room was a room communicating with the main street by an alley. While the officers of the law were searching the rooms, a gendarmerie stepped into one of these closets and at once found him rapidly descending and finally safely landed on the ground floor of a room or dungeon. We copy the following from the process verbal made by the sergeant in charge of the party to the inspector of the district:

"See, Oliver," she said, "you to your past fully shall never be brought to light."

She held the paper over a wax taper until burned up, and nothing but a gray mound of ashes remained. She blew out the eyes, and said:

"Oliver, the past is only the past, let your future make amends for it."

"Haidee," he said, "I not only love you tenfold more, but appreciate your delicacy. May you never discover in after years, as I have, the curse of unrequited love."

"Caroline Levine," she said, slowly.

There are no end to the circulars received of late, from the Victoria League, advocating the claims of Mrs. Victoria Woodhull as a Presidential candidate in the coming campaign. If Mrs. W. receives from every quarter the support she will receive from us, she will be nominated and elected to stay where she is.

FORGE prospects continue to wear a bright aspect, and business seems to take a fresh impetus, on what has already been done. No efforts will be spared for the early completion of the building, and a greater part of the machinery will probably be put on the ground this Fall. The proprietors of the enterprise are all first class, go-ahead business men, men that always weigh well any project before they undertake it, but when once they put their hand to it, never turn back.—MESSRS. HARTMANN, BAGLEY and others of the party started eastward Thursday evening to contract for the necessary machinery &c., and also, to expedite its completion.

New explosive compounds are becoming numerous, each more powerful than the other. The latest is a European discovery, and is called "little-fleur-de-ceil" the literal meaning of which is stone-breaker. It is said to resemble putty in its consistence, and to explode with immense force when ignited by a certain kind of percussion fuse—Pounding in the ordinary manner, however, has no effect upon it, and when inflamed by a hot iron it only burns away rapidly and quietly.

The Good Templars will hold another Social at Clark's Hall next Tuesday evening. They have changed the programme this time, by the introduction of a novelty in the shape of calico tickets. Each lady makes an apron, which she is to wear during the evening, and a neck-tie from the same piece of calico. The neck tie is placed in an envelope, and each gentleman buying a ticket receives one, which he is required to put on before entering the hall. On entering the room he will immediately hunt up the lady wearing an apron like his, who will be his partner during the evening. After the usual entertainments of Ice Cream, Cake, &c., the guests will, if they desire, be allowed to select their own amusements.

THE BILL RINGERS.—We attended the entertainment of the Peak Family, given at the Tilden House Hall last Monday evening, and in common with all others there, enjoyed ourselves hugely. The present company is composed of members of the original senior Peak family, the junior Peak family, and Berger's Bell Ringers, surpasses in talent any troupe that Mr. Peak has ever yet assumed the management of and each and every one did so much to amuse the people, that it is almost needless to particularize. "Jeppe" and Miss Fannie were treasures to the mirth loving, while the songs of sentiment were well received, as rendered by Miss Stevens and Messrs. Peak and Lavake. Owing to the Fish Creek expedition, the troupe did not reach here until Sunday morning, thus disappointing the people Saturday night.

To make up for this, Mr. Peak has kindly consented to give another entertainment at the Tilden Hall, next Wednesday evening.

The steamer R. W. Shillinger, on the Guyandotte shoals, Saturday night, struck and sank a coal barge. She did this in getting off the bar, where she was fast. The Shillinger was not injured.

Jerome Wooley is about to start a new Hardware store in the old Post Office building. In fact he has already taken the initiatory steps towards so doing, having already put in a fine stock of tin-smith tools, and commenced the manufacture of tin ware. He is daily expecting the arrival of a well assorted stock of stoves and general hardware, selected with special reference to the wants of the locality. He will speak for himself through these columns upon the arrival of his goods, so be on the lookout and see what he has to say.

The Tribune Office is respondent with new signs, written up in first class style. Henry, the new sign painter done the work, and in consequence it is well done. BROOK TROUT.—Charlie Blake is membered in the other day with two fine ones as we ever saw, each one weighing upwards of three pounds. Heretofore we have always been a little skeptical as regards these fish having so much flavor than others, but we are now a convert, and would be willing to have have our wind-pipe compressed slightly by the Marinette Eagle man, if we could only have the pleasure of putting such fine fishes out of the water.

A serious accident occurred on the Construction train on the Pen. Div. last Wednesday, by which Mr. Phillip Rossiter, a brakeman, lost one of his limbs. The train was working between Little Lake and Negauke picking up iron; all the cars were loaded, with the exception of the one next the engine, on which there was only a single rail; it being the intention of the conductor to finish loading with fish plate iron. While running, Conductor Dolan and young Rossiter were watching the train, when they noticed the rail on the forward car was being jarred off. Rossiter started to prevent it, but was late, the forward end of the rail had already dropped off, striking in the ground, bending it in the shape of an ox-bow, and in some way, it is not exactly known how, changed ends, and came back on the car, striking young Rossiter just below the knee as it came down. His limb was broken in three places, the arteries all severed, and was so fearfully bruised it was found necessary to amputate it the following day.

SCENES of a very grotesque nature
are constantly occurring in Paris before the special tribunals appointed to decide between landlord and tenant. "What is your trade?" said a justice

"Bad trade, indeed!" exclaimed the landlord; "this piece of soap cost him

bad; and who ever thought of washing only remit rent in cases where it can be shown that the tenant was a heavy loser through cessation of business.

THE BLOOD OF HARRY LEE.

The Remarkable Ancestry of a Saratoga Waiter—A Romantic Episode of Very Troublesome Birth—Cathleen Helped Wm. Jackson to a War.

Saratoga Correspondence of the Commercial Advertiser.

Year after year Robert Jackson has been the second waiter at the Grand Union; but the careless crowds that frequent the mammoth hotelcy have not known that through his veins courses the proudest Virginia blood.

Robert is a small, well-made quondam, fashioned, perhaps, in about the same mold as Stephen A. Douglas, for his head closely resembles that of the Little Giant. His grandfather was Gen. Harry Lee, of Revolutionary light-horse-cavalry fame, and his mother was a slave woman named Jenny, a maid of Mrs. Lee. Soon after the birth of William Jackson, the head
waiter's father, Jenny was sold to Col.
Stewart, of Frederick county, Maryland.
The boy William showed extraordinary intelligence, and became a pet of his master, and on the death of Col. Stewart found himself free by a clause in the will. William went immediately to Washington, where he had been many times with his master. There he met John McLean, Postmaster-General under Martin Van Buren, and a friend of his old master. Judge McLean appointed him a messenger in the Post Office Department at a salary of $600 per annum.

WILLIAM FALLS IN LOVE.

While a messenger in the Postoffice Department, William Jackson met a beautiful long-haired octogenarian, the slave of old Judge Stewart of Baltimore. The slave girl's name was Rachel, and she came to attend Miss Stewart, one of the fashionable belles of Baltimore, at one of President Van Buren's receptions. William lost his heart with the dusky maid, and soon
went to Baltimore to get Judge Stewart, who owned her, to consent to their marriage.

"No, sir," said the Judge, indignantly. "Rachel is a slave, and she must marry a slave. If she marries a free negro, she will be running away herself; and, besides, I don't know when I may want to sell her to the New Orleans traders."

"Then I can never marry her?"

"Never, until somebody buys her from me," returned the Judge.

THE STERN RESOLVE.

Rachel was sent to the Frederick county farm, and thither William went in the night to hold a consultation with her. First it was resolved to run away.
But there was no chance of success.

The Fugitive Slave Law was in effect; passes were required by the slaves of the plantation, and to run away was surely to be caught, returned, and then a dreadful whipping to follow.

"What can we do?" sobbed Rachel.

"I know," replied William, "I will buy you myself."

"But you have no money."

"I can work and earn it," replied the determined lover.

"How much will you take for your freedom?" asked the Judge.

"Well, a thousand dollars will buy her," replied the hard-hearted Judge.

William went to work—every cent was saved, he even going foot into Frederick county by night to see Rachel, where they held solemn consultations and hoped only for the time when they could buy her and own her and make her his wife.

Think of that, mercenary beau-
hearts! fortune-hunters of Congress
Hall—think of toiling night and day, and then think of paying your last cent for the love of a woman.

OLD JOHN MCLEAN TO THE FRONT.

Two years rolled around and nine hundred dollars gladdened the sight of William Jackson. Caristmas came.

"What shall I give you for Christmas this year, William?" asked the good old Postmaster-General's trusty messenger.

"Anything, Mr. Secretary."

"But what would you like most?"

Then William told the story of his and Rachel's troubles—how he loved her dearly, and how he lacked still a hundred dollars to buy her.

The old Postmaster General took off his spectacles, wiped his eyes, then put them on again. Then he fumbled in his pockets. "Five—ten—twenty—fifty—hundred," he counted, and then he handed William a hundred dollars.

A CRUSHING BLOW.

Too happy to live, William started for Judge Stewart.

"Here, Master John," said he, his eyes all aglow with joy, "here is the third hundred dollars—I now want Rachel."

"My God, William! you don't tell tell me so!" exclaimed the Judge.
"Why, I sold Rachel yesterday for $1,200, to go to Mobile."

"When is she going?" asked William, nervously.

"She's gone already—wrote yesterday.
She'd been in Lynchburg in three days
by the boat."

Brook leaped and crashed in spirit.
William hurried back to Judge McLean in Washington. The Judge heard his story. Daniel Webster and John C.
Calhoun were in the Judge's room, and they both took a deep interest.

"Let's raise the money and send William after her," said the generous Webster.

"He would be seized a dozen times
as a fugitive," said the Judge, "and then'd sell him, too."

"I'll send my private secretary," said
Mr. Webster, and so did.

There was no telegraph. Men, nor cars, but the Secretary took the Potowmack river boat, and with $1,200, contributed by the Wm. Jackson's friends in the Department, overtook Rachel.
Robert showed Mr. Calhoun's letter, endorsed by several Virginians, bought her, and brought her back. Calhoun, Webster, and Judge McLean saw them married
next week.

THERE'S SON, ROBERT JACKSON.

Robert Jackson afterward waited on Webster and Calhoun in their old age at the old Indian Queen Hotel in Washington, now called the Metropolitan Hotel, where in 1831 the Mrs. Joseph
C. Luther, the present habitué of Congress
Hall, took Robert to Swansea, Massachusetts, on her wedding tour. Robert had the pleasure of a visit to the home of E. Stilson, who resides only four miles from Oshkosh. Twenty years ago this man came here and started
