THE OVERLAND movement of coffee from California has fallen off very much within three years. In 1873, 926,000 pounds were sent east from San Francisco; in 1875, 1,281,000 pounds, and in 1876 only 106,000. The ambition of San Francisco has aspired to reach two-thirds of the way across the continent and lay a heavy hand on the whole coffee trade of the Mississippi Valley, but the irresistible argument of freight is against her. It costs her from 37 to 50 cents more per 100 pounds to land coffee in Chicago than it does New York.

JAMES F. ATKINSON, EDITOR.

Our Correspondence from the Menominee Range Railway.

Sec. 42, May 17th, 1877.

Mr. Horron.—We have for some time been trying to collect our scattered thoughts, with a view to enlightening you as to the progress of railroad business, and other matters connected with this place, but have just returned from a short stroll, with the conviction that we have not been rewarded in a measure to compensate us for our untiring efforts; for, although the construction of the Menominee Range railroad is being pushed with the usual vigor, yet the general hard times have not changed one particle, and good whisky cannot be procured for less than ten cents per glass. We are a temperance man ourselves, but as we take an interest in the welfare of our fellow-citizens, it is their sad condition that we consider so deplorable. Several car loads of iron rail are shipped up the road every morning, and everything looks favorable for the completion of the road somewhat sooner than has been anticipated. All that will be lacking to make this place a city at the completion of the road, will be a blast furnace and saloon, but we think the latter-named institution is at present kept on the European plan somewhere in this vicinity. It has been hinted to us that a certain pounder or compounder of medicines hereabouts is selling forty rod, and we would caution the gent, least the broad and untiring hand of Michigan law lays its vice like grip upon his carcass. We have as yet had no rain in this locality this month, and if the heavens do not soon open and pour upon us their refreshing element, we have little doubt, but that the coming season will be a sickly one in this place, as the land surrounding us is composed principally of cedar swamps, and spruce and tamarack bogs.

Mr. J. A. Crozier, of the Menominee Herald, made us a pleasant call on Tuesday last.

In my hurry, I had almost forgot to mention that we have been surrounded by fire for nearly a week, and it is still holding on to the dry earth in some parts of surrounding country.

With a special regard to the editor, we remain, as ever.

RACKETT.

FLAT ROCK ITEMS.

The warm, dry weather of the past week or two, has been very favorable for clearing land, and we notice that the farmers have improved their opportunities, and as a result, all farm work is ahead of the usual time. A larger area of land has been cleared than any preceding spring, and the area devoted to crops will be fifty per cent greater than last year. The prevailing drought will affect our hay crop very unfavorable.

Fires have been running through the woods for several days past, but the damage thus far has been very light.

Joseph Watson had the misfortune to lose his house by fire on Friday of last week. The facts, as near as we can ascertain, are these: Mrs. Watson had placed a kettle of ashes near the corner of the house; some of the neighbor's children found it and upset the kettle in their play; a portion of the ashes fell under the house; a brisk wind blowing at the time, brought them to life, and set fire to the building, which was destroyed, together with nearly all the contents.

Last Sunday, a woman who has been very much excited by the fire of the last few days, lost all control of her reason, and ran around the town, shouting, "Reno's house is on fire!" in less than twenty minutes all the men in the town were there, but found everything quite the reverse, the fire being half a mile from the house, with no prospect of getting nearer.

Howard & Dansey had an old-fashoned barn raising this week.

Angus Fox and Joseph Martin moved from this place to Escanaba last week.

Geo. Lanceigne and Geo. Sampson, of your city, visited our town last week.

Chas. Brotherton surveyed Section 27 last week, which materially interfered with the old lines, some gaining, and others losing all their clearings.

ST. MARTIN'S ISLAND.

This island is situated about ten miles due east from Washington Harbor, and about fifteen miles from Point de Tour. It is nine miles in circumference, and has a population of about 125, who are mostly engaged in fishing.

The steamer Neptune, fully repaired and fitted up, started from here Wednesday noon, May 9th, for Red River, to engage in carrying wood for the Menominee Iron Co. for several weeks, after which to carry pig iron from here to Chicago, and returning bring ore from Escanaba for the National Iron Co.—DePere News.

Our mail facilities are frequently interrupted during the winter. If the weather is cold and the ice makes solid, we are all right, but during an open winter we have to content ourselves with communication with the world but two or three times. We however keep our courage up and while away the winter as well as we can, by little social gathering, &c. Part of our time has been given by an awakening in religious matters, but I am sorry to say that quite a number have forgotten their promises, and have slid back again into the old routine.

ORE SHIPMENTS.

The shipment of ore so far, has been very light, probably owing in a great measure to the long log blockade in St. Clair river, which has prevented vessels from coming in from the lower lakes. The following is the amount of ore shipped from this port, up to May 18th, 1877:

Our timber contractor Mr. John O'Callaghan had his assets increased for a few hours last Tuesday morning, by the addition of $3000 in solid greenbacks. It seems John took his breakfast at the eating house in Fort Howard and when through picked up his hatchet as he supposed and started homeward on the train. Now Mr. Whitehead had a hatchet in outward appearance just like Mr. O'Callaghan's, but instead it failed to resemble it exactly from the fact that it contained $3000 in currency, which he was taking to squander among his men, on the Menominee Range R'y. By one of those queer things which will sometimes occur, the two hatchets got together and as the sequel appeared, failed to identify their separate owners after breakfast. John never discovered the mistake until informed by telegraph through conductor Doton, at Sunnico, and had no idea of the bonanza reposing so quietly at his feet. Mr. Whitehead was very much gratified to recover his pile. All's well as ends well.

WEATHER.

Mr. John M. Miller, for a long time in the employ of the Ford River Lumber Company, has changed his base of operations, and is now a member of the engineer corps on the new railroad.

Capt. John Lynch, a wealthy lumberman of Oshkosh, connected with the Ford River Lumber Company, was drowned in Wolf river last week.

Forest fires are now raging all around us.

Last week the farm of Mr. Joseph Watson was surrounded, and it was by great exertions that his barn was saved.

His house and contents was consumed, with part of his fence.

A subscription was circulated for his benefit, by Mr. Mathew Stephenson.

The war in Europe is the current topic of the day.

The Marquette legal fraternity has been represented at court this week, by Messrs Healey, Ball, Clark, Cochrane, Owen and Dalliba.

"Which av the sides in this war, do ye take, Mike?" "The Toorts, ay coorse, Dennis; for they're fond of tobacco and ladies."

A. P. Swineford, of the Marquette Mining Journal, was observed on our streets on Wednesday evening last.

Last Wednesday night chicken roasts were locked up, and whisky advanced to 15 cents a drink.

It was on Wells Avenue. Time,

Sunday evening. He went to see his sweetheart, and was ushered into the parlor. By mistake he sat down on the cat; the recognition was mutual.

A critical examination of the cat's claws revealed the fact that the cloth in his pantaloons was all wool, and cost about $2.50 per yard.

Dr. Crawford, of Menominee, the popular dentist, will stay in our village next week, and will make his departure for other claims, and will not appear in our midst again until August. All who have aching molars, should not delay in getting them filled, or "yanked out."

Mr. C. Rodgers, General freight agent for the Marquette-Houghton and Ontonagon Railway called upon us on Wednesday last.

Judge E. S. Ingalls of Menominee, made a very pleasant visit of an hour, last Tuesday. He was attending to business in the Circuit Court.

F. O. Clark and John L. Cochran, have been in attendance at the Court this week.

New Deal.

Frank Baker has made a new departure, and has opened up in the old stand, a select assortment of Ci-am thankful for your past favors and patronage, and hope to be still more thankful in the future, when those outstanding accounts are paid up.

J. Roark.

Mr. John W. Hamacher one of our old citizens passed away last Monday. He came here in 1868, nine years ago and has been engaged in the Hotel business ever since, and has led a very active life. He was naturally a man of rugged, strong constitution, but disease fastened upon him over a year ago and finally forced him to succumb to the dread messenger. He was buried on Thursday in the Catholic Cemetery.

Concord Grape Vines.

Now is the time for planting your grape vines. The Concord variety is the most hardy of any and perfectly suited to this climate. Mr. Pool, at Cabin Content Gardens has a large quantity, two years old, for sale at only 25 cents each. Call early and procure this perfectly reliable grape vine.

THE LONE ONE.
What time I sat alone, I will trust in Thee.
PSALM 13:6.

Hush! Hush! 'tis quiet, the Sabbath hour,
And the stillness has filled mine ears,
What is it that thrills me with its power?
To shake it off I must arise,
The stars are bright in the night sky;
Perchance the stars will glad mine eyes,
No star I see to comfort me,
The night is dark and can be.

Lid! lid! I seem to hear a rustling noise!
Not so! the wind was wailing by—
No screen! it was the Sabbath day!
It is the Sabbath day,
And to my children three repair,
No child I see to comfort me,
They sleep in sweet and sound酣睡.

Dear babies! they trudged all the day
And now the Sabbath comes to rest,
And yet, amid their silent play,
They raised their father's fond eyes,
With a smile, "I'll be thy eyes,
And I repeat it with a sigh,
I long for thee to comfort me,
The grave is home to lone me.

Now dark again! to rest I'll go—
The stars are bright in the night sky;
How dark! 'twill be beneath the ground!
Dear! dear! I shall be buried there,
I long for thee at the cold, dark bed-side,
No star I see to comfort me,
The grave is home to lone me.

Little birds! Shine on, bright star!
The river is not so bright as you,
And sleep is settling on my brow,
Loud, thou art noise till the small bell,
My heart is full of thoughts of friends far,
I'll come to thee to comfort me,
And when afraid, I'll trust in thee.

From Harper's Magazine

ROMANCE OF A BARN-YARD.

We were all sitting on the piazza, except those of us that were swinging in the hammocks among the trees; the sea-wind was blowing over us, the birds were darting low here and there, and the bantams and the spring chickens and the big black Cochins were clipping and picking in the grass, watched over by the old King Charles, who referred us from vulgarity, and it was a scene of domestic comfort, as Aunt Helen said. Aunt Helen, by-the-way, became a very pleasant addition to the comfortable appearance of the scene, as she said it. She was just as plump as a woman ought to be when her next birthday is half past forty. She had a soft flush on her cheek, where the dining-room was yet fresh, as when the girl, and the flush deepened sometimes into a red打算; her teeth were like rows of seed-corn for whiteness, and her eyes were just as brown as brook water; only half that was quite white. Lovely hair, though, for all that; she parted it evenly over her low level forehead and above the yet black eyebrows; and we all declared, every day of our lives, that Aunt Helen was a beauty. "I used to be," she had replied; "but that's all gone now. I have put my youth behind me."

Perhaps she had. But we young people used to think differently when we saw Mr. Thornton coming up the road, and Aunt Helen's eyes twinkled with pleasure at her work, but the color mounting and mounting, till the reddest rose that ever burned the sunshine was not so rich. Mr. Thornton was it too, no doubt, for he always looked and looked intently all the way by. But the truth was—I shall have to tell you all about it if I tell you anything—that when Aunt Helen was twenty years younger, she and Mr. Thornton were lovers ever since they could remember. They had built their home at last, and her wedding dress was made. If she was a beauty, he was every inch her mate—I know he was, because he is today—one of the men it does good to see, who look as if they could hold up the world if need be, and inspire your confidence in their power. And what in the world do you suppose, that with their house furnished with the cake-baked, and a dozen years of intimate affection to bind them? Aunt Helen and Mr. Thornton found a square about it! She declared she wouldn't keep him! And he declared that then he wouldn't keep house! That was the whole of it, to condone the statement; one word led to another, and another led to more, and finally, in a towering passion himself, he told Aunt Helen that she had better learn to control her temper if she didn't want to be a vixen entirely, and Aunt Helen took the ring off her finger and laid it on the table without a word and sailed out of the room, and refused to let him in. He called in the maid, and sent back his letter unopened, and the next wedding cake went round on the tea-table, and went round to the fair. Perhaps, on the whole, Mr. Thornton might have been right. Exactly one week from that night Mr. Thornton was married to Mr. Mayhew, and inoffensive little body who would have married anybody that asked her, and she went into the house that had been furnished, and immediately afterward a bethouse of the most hateful description of architecture, with gilded vases and scarlet chandeliers bristling all over it, rose in the hill behind his house, full of fancy fowl, and the little lawn was alive with its overflow, and you couldn't go by the path without meeting a flock of crows crowing, or partridges, or pheasants, or black Spanish drying up on each separate piece of feather to cover out Mr. Thornton's triumph—reversing the old tradition of the "crown" and crying, "No women rule here!"

They say Mr. Thornton grew very old in a few years. His inoffensive little thing of a wife turned out to be a smart termagant who led him a pretty dance. Perhaps she was dissatisfied with her piece of a heart; but then she knew that was all when she took it. He treated her always gently—perhaps feeling he had done some wrong in marrying her—and gratified her every wish, although having card nothing for her in the beginning; it is doubtful if he cared any more for her than for the old dog that came after eighteen years, when Mrs. Thornton was killed in a railroad collision, and her husband was left with four children on his hands—drab, amily, ill-faring wife, as all the neighbors said. If Mr. Thornton had ever impatiently chanced to think that his punishment had lasted long enough, he thought now that it was just beginning, when he found himself alone with those children. He wondered that his wife had left any temper left at all. He grew more bold, more vexed, and worried every day, and would hardly have recognized people said the dark and spotted Stephen Thornton of his youth in this middle-aged, gray-haired man; but still, an old man was still quite as venerable looking as he was more so, from an associating him with the poetry in Aunt Helen's life, and making him an object of wonder as to whether or not now he would ever come together again.

But there was little chance of that. We had met Mr. Thornton elsewhere, but he had never come across our threshold since the day he went out with his bride's ring. And Aunt Helen's personality was that she never forgot. Could she then, forget the words he had spoke to her in his anger? Could she ever forget his marrying another woman in less than a week? It had been in that week and a few following that her heart had turned white; she had suffered ingrediately, and had never slept right, looking up at the sky for peace. People also said he was growing longer if it had not been for growing up about her. Her life was thus filled, every moment of it; she had but very little time to be lonely, to brood, or mourn. She forgot herself in us. It gave her a quiet happiness, and kept her comely. And then there was no pride; when she thought the world up to her head, she shut the thought down, as you may say, and seton it.
