THE PERSONNEL OF THE NEW BOARD.

The Standing Committees .- A Committee Appointed to Investigate a Late County Officer's Accounts .- Other Notes,

The board consists of D. Campbell, mayor, P. J. McKenna 1st ward, J. S. Rogers 2d-ward, A. Clement 3d ward, N. Walch 4th ward, J. O'Boyle 5th ward, owned by his brother at Williamsport, E., Ryan 6th ward; M. O'Donnell 7th ward, M. Hitchcock assessor, of the city of Escanaba; F. Filkins 1st ward, F. Huber 2d ward, G. T. Hammer, 3d ward, entered the office of Zebulon Beard, at L. Nicholas 4th ward, of the city of Glad- La Fayette, then one of the ablest lawstone; G. T. Burns of Wells, R. R. Campbell of Garden, Wm. Dausey of Escanaba, G. J. Farnsworth of Nahma, H. B. Hazen of Sack Bay, H. L. Hutchins of Fairbanks, J. B. Kleiber of Maple Ridge, G. E. Merrill of Masonville, P. Nelson of Bark River, S. D. Perry of Baldwin, C. J. Stratton of Bay de Noc and T. V. Ward of Ford

The standing committee are: Finance; Walch, Nicholas, Farnsworth. Auditing; McKenna, Filkins, Merrill. Poor; Huber, Kleiber, Ward. Supplies and expenditures; Hammer, Campbell of Garden, Dausey. Appropriations; Burns, O'Boyle, Nicholas. Building; Nicholas, O'Boyle,

Among the first of the proceedings of the board was the appointment of a special committee to investigate county officers' accounts and the chair appointed Supervisors Burns, Nicholas and O'Boyle. Soon thereafter a direct charge having been made that the accounts of the extreasurer last in office were not correct, that a sum of money-$56-receipted for by him was not specifically accounted for by him, another committee was ordered and appointed-Supervisors Stratton, Hammer and O'Boyle. This committee, after such investigation as it could make on the spot, immediately reported an apparent discrepancy of the amount stated, and asked for further time. The time was given and two were added to the committee, Supervisor Mc-Kenna and Assessor Hitchcock. The chairman of the Auditing committee beng engaged, to the exclusion of duty with that committee, upon the committee on Equalization, on motion Supervisors Hazen and Kleiber were added to the Auditing committee, in order that its business might proceed without delay. A report of the Equalization committe, is ooked for during the day on Thursday, and if rendered before 2 p. m. an abtract thereof will be found in our columns.

A Sunday Seance. In another column will be found the advertisement of an entertainmen entirely new to our region. Prolessor Slade and Miss. Fox, persons whose lives and associations are partly within and partly without the veil that sunders living men and ghosts; in whose presence and through whose powers the departed again visit the scenes of life and communicate with the living, will be at the People's and so will their familiars, and the latter will make their presence known in a manner to strike skepticism dumb. Now, we do not state these facts as of our own knowledge, but from evidence given by others, and we acknowledge a little incredulity with regard to them, to the overthrow or confirmation of which it will be necessary to take in the Sunday night seance. Let's all go.

The Australian Idea. A novel plan for extinguishing achurch lebt has been hit upon in Melbourne.

The church committee-or vestry, as he case may be-divide the total debt among themselves and each man insures his life for the amount that falls to his share. The policies are transferred to the church, and the annual payments on them are made out of the collections. Then, of course, as the members of committees "drop off," the sums insured on their lives drop in, and later, whe then last committeman is dead, the last installment of the church debt will be paid. The plan has the merit-if merit it be-of throwing the whole responsibility for the continuance of the indebtedness upon Providence.

They Want Some Like It. Marquette folks who have seen the pavement on Ludington street are stirring up their neighbors at home to demand "a little of of the same" for their town, The Mining Journal of Tuesday

"Now that Marquette has a city system of electric lighting, a thoroughly modern water plant, a first-class sewer system and an electric street railway the next improvement in order is the paving of streets. The Mining Journal believes that the city is losing money steadily by neglecting to pave Front street hill at least, and were Front and Washington streets paved it would be a grand thing for the

He had, however, before he began to be a saddler. announced that he intended to be a lawyer, and, boy as he was, and saddler as he was designed to be, bent all his studies toward making a lawyer of himself, following steadily the course which should Nothing Now Stands in the Way of the give him a college education, so that at the age of 17, when he finished his trade, he was prepared to enter Wabash college in the highest classes He studied there and at Asbury (now De Pauw) university at Greence-tle three years, supporting himself in part by saddle-making and in part by teaching school between times. Then came a year in a country store Warren county, and then in 1842 began the study of law, not more earnestly than it had been done, but of itself alone. He yers in the state. In the spring of 1843 he was admitted to the bar. He held office-public prosecutor, congressman, attorney-general of the state, and senator of the U.S., and was candidate for governor against Oliver P. Morton. Always a democrat, he was not (like too many of the leaders of his party in Indiana) a half-traitor. Nor was he at any time a victim of the "greenback" craze; Greenbackers held the "balance of power" in the legislature. After McDonald had been chosen by the caucus, and the evening before the election, he was waited npon by a delegation of Greenback-Inflation-Fiat Democrats and informed that unless he would swear allegiance to flatism he would never see the inside of the United States Senate chamber except from the galleries. McDonald squared off at his, and "hoped he was too well known for it to be supposed that any exigency ould make him change his honest convictions. For a definition of his financial views he referred them to his Logansport speech (a hard-money speech). The views there expressed he would not exhauge for forty senatorial positions." And he didn't. The Greenbackers conluded as the mountain wouldn't come to hem, to go to it, and next day they rose n their places one by one, recanted, and oted for McDonald. His position in the enate on the various public questions that came up during his six years is a natter of public record. He had opinions and the courage of them.

That Fifty-six Dollars-

he circuit court commissioner some weeks since, disclosed an apparent discrepancy in the accounts of the late county treasurer, P. M. Peterson. Certain fines, agregating $56, which were receipted for by the treasurer do not appear (so as to be identified) upon the debit side of his ash account, and the county board, by a committee is trying to find what became of the money. That they may suceed the Iron Port earnestly hopes and confidently expects. That the labors of the committee and board will result in mirching the character of Mr. Peterson it does not for one moment, believe. It has not consulted, Mr. Peterson it does not care to do so, but has no hesitancy a declaring that the utmost that can be shown will be an accidental omission, which the lack of cross-checking between the accounts of the various county officers would serve to leave undetected, and in further declaring that, should the board find any balance due from the ex-treasurer to the county there will be no kick, the 'argent will be counted out and the treasury made whole without a word. And its confidence is shared by every man in the county; nobodynot even the noisiest of the fraud hunters, believes that Peter M. Peterson is or ever was, knowingly, in default to the county.

PETITIONERS

THE COCHRANE PORTION OF THE WORKS WILL GO.

Deal Proposed by the Directors, and the Concern Will Soon go to Basic Cy.

After hearing argument by counse Mr. Gallup for the petitioners and Mr. Ball for the directors-last Wednesday, Judge Stone held against the petitioners and dissolved the temporary injunction, so that the deal with the Cochrane company at Basic City may be concluded and the removal thither of the movable portion of the plant proceeded with. The only consolation local investors can have is the transfer of the real estate to some party who will occupy it and put into the big shop machinery and men to be employed at some industry which can be conducted at a profit and so, permanently and uninterruptedly. That this will be done we confidently hope. It may happen that the Virginian concern will be successful and the stock therein which our folks will receive become valnable, but we know of no shareholder who hopes much in that direction, or cares much to receive the stock, with the liabilities attached.

Miss Kitty Marcellus made a clever "Bettina," and Miss Josie Intropidi a charming "Fiametta." Phin Nares as "Fippo" and Harry Nelson as "Prince Frederick." completed the sextette of very capable principals, and the pretty music and abundant fun kept the audience pleased and roaring with laughter from rise to fall of curtain. STORMED AND LOOTED THE CAMP. Irish and German Laborers at St. Louis Drive off Italians. Where is Fava?

ronage from the Marquette public.

St. Louis, June 23.-A race riot between laborers employed by Contractor. Workley at Henen's camp, at the Chain of Rocks, a point about five miles up the river where the new water works are being constructed, occurred between 1 and 2 o'clock Sunday morning, in which one Italian was stabbed, twenty-two of his fellow countrymen driven from their camp and their valuables and money confiscated by a gang of American and other laborers.

The riot was principally caused by the admittance to the camp of a lot of Italian laborers and the report that Contractor Workley had gone to Chicago for more. All Saturday a feeling of revolt against the employment of Italian labor had been gaining in strength and bitterness. As soon as the laborers were paid off in the evening they congregated as usual at a saloon just outside the city limits where bad whisky is dealt out to the men, who pass the time in gambling away their hard earned money. About 1 o'clock Sunday morning the gambling party broke up and sixty or more men, crazy drunk, started for their sleeping quarters. On the way over a man named William H. Blair sprung theidea of "driving out the dagos." It took like wild fire and with muttered curses against the Italians the drunken mob hurried toward the camp.

"B-the dagos." This was the cry when the attack began on the sleeping Italians. The drunken crowd sprang into the tent amidst the foreigners, armed with sticks, clubs, knives and whatever else they could get their hands on. The fight did not last long. The Italians were at a great disadvantage and after a brief resistance they fled in terror, leavbehind all their belongings. They carried away one of their comrades dangerously wounded by a cut in the breast which threatens to result fatally.

The Italians made their way to this city where they reported the matter to the police and the injured man was taken to thecity dispensatory where his wounds were dressed. Their departure was followed by a scene of pillage. Their valuables, bundles and packages were broken open and the contents taken. The police at once began a rigid investigation and the following arrests were made: Edward Manley, John Jones, Michael Cahill, Wm. H. Blair, William C. Brooks, Fred Leader and John Shiller. These men professed ignorance of the attack on the Italians and say they were awakened by a commotion and merely aided in driving from camp the disturbers of their slumbers.

A broad-shouldered passenger who boarded the train at Franklin avenue on Thursday morning remained on the car platform with the brakeman. He threw his arms over the gate and looked gloomily at the sidewalk below. Very soon afterward the brakeman touched him on the shoulder, when the passenger gave a start and said:

"I'm not going to commit suicide." The brakeman was too astonished to

"So do I," was the laconic response.

Nationality and Suicide.

"In the course of my practice," says a criminal lawyer, "I have noted that there are two classes of citizens who rarely take their lives-Hebrews and Irishmen. I don't know why, but such is the fact, and the records will bear me out. The negro seldom commits suicide; he's happy and light-hearted under all troubles. The average American will blow out his brains under stress of some great misfortune, as the loss of family or property. All of the west, including Kansas City with its nearly two hundred thousand inhabitants, will not support a circus longer than one day .-Chicago Times.

Are the Eyes Ever Safe?

Beware of the electric light. This is a warning sounded by a correspondent, and a warning that should be heeded. The use of the incandescent lamp is apt to be highly injurious to the eyes if precautions are not taken with regard to shades or globes. Plain or cut glass is particularly noxious. In all cases the little illuminator should be shaded with a green or thick white shade, and the glass should be frosted. It is said that a number of men in the clubs are suffering with sore eyes, entirely due to the improper shading of the club lights. -London Letter.

SOME POINTS ON FLANNEL

A Manufacturer Telis How It Is Shrunken and About "Buying at a Bargain."

Apropos of the approaching summer season and the quantity of flannel that will be worn by both men and women, as it will be far more fashionable than ever before, some interesting informa-tion concerning the shrinking of the material was given the other day by a prominent manufacturer.

He said that little of the flannel used in the manufacture of tennis suits was produced in this country, as the factory owners up to the present time have found it unprofitable. Cheap flannel, however, an imitation of the English article, is made all over the United States, and where possible it is sold as the genuine article.

"Practically, all of the white flannel used," said he. "in the making of flannel suits for tennis, cricket and other outdoor costumes, is imported from England. Only the best qualities are used by reputable dealers, and the best qualities are all subjected to a shrinking process unknown in the ordinary manufacture of common goods. The reason for this is that the flannels require more cleaning than any other material while in the tailor's hand. Cheap flannels would warp and draw out of shape the moment the wearer happens to wet them. "The shrinking process is carried on mostly in the west end of London by the most experienced cloth workers.

"The flannels are placed between heavy wet sheets first and left in that position from twenty-four to thirty-six hours." When removed they are spread out on specially prepared rails in a drying room heated by hot steam pipes, where they are allowed to remain until thoroughly dry.

"The next process is to place the lengths of the flannel in folds between layers of glossy paper and subjected to a pressing by hydraulic machines.

"The more pressure they are subjected to the more valuable and heavier the flannel becomes.

"There is a large sale of the cheap material in America, and for that very reason there are so many complaints made against flannel clothing. A cheap white suit becomes a burden to the purchaser within a week after he has begun to wear it. It loses shape, and although made for a large man, after the first wash it will comfortably fit a medium-sized boy."-N. Y. Herald.

WILLYUM WAS CLEVER.

He Fixed Up Uncle Jack's Account with the Newspapers.

In almost every seaside town there is some thriftless ne'er-do-well, who, although he never has any regular occupation, is generally a good skipper and is always at the service of the summer and Frenchman seem the most impres- resident for any job which does not bear the aspect of regular labor and includes an occasional drink, "Uncle Jack," of Ryemouth, was one of these characters, and he was engaged one day for a fishing trip by a Boston gentleman who was a native of the seaside

"Willyum," said Uncle Jack, who, with a pipe between his teeth, was keeping a lazy watch over the tiller, "my gals subscribed for the Home Garland awhile ago and them Bawston fellers sent me a bill the other day for ten dollars, four years' subscription. Naow, I hain't got no ten dollars, Willyum. Don't you think you could fix this for me when you go up to taown?".

The Bostonian promised to do what he could, and Uncle Jack handed him the bill from a greasy piece of leather which he called a pocketbook.

Shortly after, being out on another trip, the old man asked:
"Willyum, did ye fix them ere newspaper fellers?" and Mr. R. answered:

'Yes, I did, Uncle Jack." With a pleased grin the other in-

"An' haow aid ye manage it?" Looking at his inquirer with a sober face, Mr. R. responded: "Well, I went in there and told them that you were a miserable, drunken old loafer, without a cent to your name, and they settled for three dollars." The old man's jaw dropped a little, and after a pause of fully fifteen minutes, he said: "That was clever of you, Willyum, but don't you think you kinder raised Cain with my reputation in Bawston?"

"Is it real entertaining?"

How Generously He Treated the Family of His Old Master.

"I see that Elbert Head, a negro of Americus, Ga., has offered five thousand dollars for the location of a state negro educational institution in that town," said a southern man to a St. Louis reporter. "I know Elbert Head, and the story of his life, together with that of another negro of the same town, Jim Ellis by name, gives the lie to the oft-repeated tales of the terrible treatment of slaves by their masters. Had such been the case Head and Ellis would been the case Head and Ellis would never have taken part in the stories I am about to tell. They live almost in the shadow of Andersonville prison. Elbert Head is now about sixty-five years old. He is a tall, very dark negro, with an air of keen shvewdness. He has no children. He was the stave of Dr. Head, of Stewart county, Ga. Of course he had a slave wife. He was shrewd and intelligent and saved whatever money might have and saved whatever money might have been given him. In 1856 he rented him-self and wife from Dr. Head and went to Americus, where he opened a laundry. He did well, and saved enough money to have bought his and his wife's freedom, but he did not care to do so. After his freedom was declared by the events of the war and he could buy land he invested his savings in different ways. Early in 1870 he bought a big tract of land in Americus, known as McCoy hill. Upon this he began gradually erecting negro cabins, until now there are hundreds of them there. It is here he made his fortune. He is probably worth one hundred and fifty thousand dollars, for he pays taxes on over one hundred thousand dollars, and is the third richest negro in the state. After his wife's death he adopted several girls, educated them as school-teachers, and gave them a start in life.

"Now, while Elbert Head was steadiformer master, like in many southern families, was steadily going backward. The war had ruined him in every way. The neighbors could not assist him for they were bowed down in misfortune equally as great. But Elbert had watched the course of events. Secretly at first he gave aid to his old master, and finally furnished his entire support, released the old plantation from debt, sent his 'young master,' as he calls him, to eastern medical colleges and provided for him. Then old Dr. Head died. The boy came back a physician, and Elbert announced that his fortune would go to his master's son, outside of such a sum as he might set aside for the education of the negroes."-Chicago

LOST THE SALE.

The Old Gentleman was Too Penurious for Walton.

A good story is told of Oliver Walton, who in his day was the greatest dealer in good horses near Boston. On one occasion he went into Maine and bought an extra good horse for his offer, three hundred dollars, says an exchange. The old farmer was one of the niggardly kind (we hope there are none there now), and he says: "How are you going to lead the horse away? "With that halter which is on him, to be sure," said the elder Walton, as he was busy counting the money out for the horse. "No, sir," said the farmer, "the halter don't go with the horse, it belongs to me. I did not sell you that." "What, not let me have a halter after I have given your price for the horse?" said old Oliver, a little surprise L "What do you want for it?" "A dollar, sir," said the farmer. "All right," said Walton, "here is the dollar. I want the halter." He put the rest of his money in his pocket, stepped quickly to the horse's head and remarked: "I will take the halter, but I guess I will not take the horse." He took off the halter and let the horse go loose. The farmer had probably many a long day in which to repent of his sharpness.-Horse and Stable.

Not So Easy as It Looked.

I never tried but once to step off a moving tramcar," said a lady in conversation with a friend. "Did you get a fall?"

"I heard my busband say that you must jump off in the direction in which the car is going, and as it reached the place where I wanted to stop I just skipped out as if I had been accustomed "Was it as difficult as you supposed?" "It was ten times harder. I ran a few steps and it seemed to me that the whole planet was turning round. I sprawled all over to keep from falling, and when I stuck the footing, I nearly knocked two men down who were passing, in my attempt to preserve an equilibrium. As I reeled away I heard one of them exclaim: 'It's a shame to see a woman in such a condition on the public streets -she ought to be arrested.' I could not run after him to explain matters, but I have never had the slightest ambition to jump off a tramear in motion since. Yet it does look so easy when John does it."-Jury.

Insects in Commerce.

Everyone is familiar by hearsay with the cochineal insects, which furnish the dyer with his most highly-valued material. They are found on a kind of fig and are secured by shaking the trees, beneath which sheets are spread. The cosmetic known as "rouge" is a preparation of cochineal. Not less widely used and for similar purposes is the "lac" insect, of India, which is likewise a tree parasite. These little animals are employed in the manufacture of varnishes, japanned ware, sealing wax, beads, rings, bracelets, necklaces, waterproof hats and many other things.
Mixed with fine sand they are made into grindstones, and, added to lampblack dissolved in water, they compose an ink of much value. They are also used as a substitute for cochineal for dyeing.-Washington Post.

-A Pensioner .- "And I suppose, like a brave soldier, you followed your col-ors." "Yes; whenever there was a bat-tle I noticed that the colors were flying, so I fled too."-Buffalo Express.

It may be true that certain of the so called lower animals are more susceptible of the higher emotions than others, but there is abundant evidence to show that even those lowest" in the scale of nature are at all events capable of evincing gratitude in a manner which is not excelled by the human species. The celebrated naturalist, Dr. D—, during his travels, saw in the forest of Florida a couple of rattle-snakes engaged in deadly combat. The larger of the two, a huge fellow, seemed just on the point of terminating the existence of his weaker confrere, when Dr. D— interfered on behalf of when Dr. D- interfered on behalf of the smaller combatant, and, with a well-directed blow, sent the bully to join his ancestor who tempted Mother Eve.

When the doctor reached his encampment what was his surprise to find that the smaller snake, whose life he had saved, but who was from sneer exhaustion utterly incapable of mischief, had crawled after him. He succeeded in extracting the reptile's fangs, and then proceeded to feed the creature, placing it in a basket, and thus taking possession of what he thought a valua-ble addition to his collections.

off, they were captured, the doctor was liberated, and the character of the rat-tlesnake vindicated. And so ends the tale of the rattlesnake.-Light.

When either a British official or a physician called upon the rajah of Ulwar, he was shown into the reception or throne room, where sat the rajah, surrounded by the great state officers. Even when a doctor may have performed some serious opertion upon a rajah, who, being grateful, wishes to give-exclusive of a money fee varying from $1,000 to $5,000, according to the operation performed-a present of a shawl, golden cup or some similar valuable, the doctor must obtain special permission from the viceroy before he dares accept the present. If an official accepts a gift of any value without such permission, he may have to resign. In the old days, when the East India Co. governed India, an officer's pickings and the presents, often extorted from the rajahs, were worth more to him than his salary. It is not rash to calculate Warren Hastings' pickings, if I may call them such, during his long reign as governor-general, at fully $5,000,000. — Jewelers'

Double-Skinned Dogs. Lovers of pet dogs will be interested in the visit of an American lady to the store of a "dog modiste" in Paris. The sights were amusing. The place was not so much a store as an establishment, with halls and rooms richly furnished. Ladies tripped in and out all day long, most of the visitors having with them pugs or terriers. The pet dogs were scattered through the rooms, each waiting its turn. Many small mats and rugs were around the waxed floors, and every bit of carpeting of the kind was occupied by some pretty creature. Those dogs have various dresses. The robe used in the morning is a garment of dark-blue cloth. It is called a paletot, and is lined with red flannel. From a leather collar little bells jingle as its wearer walks along. Sometimes a bunch of violets is fastened on the left shoulder of a dog. On very cold days the pet is clad in sealskin of the same pattern, the collar being in fur, mounted in

A RATTLING TALE.

The Story of a Rattlesnake That Didn't Get

When he returned to his home he brought the rattlesnake with him. By degrees the snake grew quite tame, and became almost a domestic pet, taking its meals frequently upon a chair in the doctor's study. Last summer, when the doctor was with his family in Waukesha, the rattlesnake, who had received the name of "Toby," was perforce left behind in town. Dr. D-, after a few days, took a train in on business, and passed the night at his own residence, quite alone, except for Toby, who slept under his bed. Curiously enough, this 'Now, while Elbert Head was steadily advancing in the way of wealth, his burglars for cracking the doctor's domicile. They succeeded in entering, bound the doctor hand and foot, stuffed a gag into his mouth, and commenced to pack up the valuables, confident that they would be able to get clear off. But they reckoned without consulting both their hosts, for Toby waking up just as they were leaving the bedroom, stretched himself to his full height, and taking a cursory glance and a hasty review of the situation, although recognizing that he was utterly unable to cope with three armed burglars, without either arms or hands or feet, and with his venomous weapons extracted, yet darted to the window through which the burglars had entered, and which was still open to the extent of about two inches, swung his tail out upon the window-sill and rattled for all he was worth. In about half a minute no less than three policemen were upon the scene, the burglars' escape was cut

She follows the example of her husband, and the tray and its contents were then returned

There is a big group of spots coming into sight around the edge of the sun. Their appearance is very formidable. The bright surface of the solar globe seems to have been torn and broken through in a wonderful manner. All around the black spots the glowing surface is heaped up into vast mountainous elevations that shine much brighter than the surrounding parts of the sun. It needs but a glance to see that a tremendous convulsion is occurring there. Enormous masses of vaporized matter, includ in ; metals turned into clouds by heat, are being hurled tens of thousands of miles high. In a few days the rotation of the sun will have brought this disturbed region nearer the center of the disk. It will be worth watching, for daily and hourly marvelous changes will take place there, the explosions may become weaker, and the spots gradually disappear, or there may be a far greater outburst that will shatter the brilliant shell of the sun over millions of square miles.

If, in the meantime, great storms and tornadoes occur on the earth, they will no doubt be ascribed to the influence of this disturbance on the sun, but nobody should jump to the conclusion that the solar explosions really do produce storms. If it can be proved that electricity is an important olement in the generation of tornadoes, then the storm-producing influences of sun spots will probably be admitted by many men of science who doubt it at present, for the earth always responds with a magnetic thrill to the convulsions that skake its mighty ruler in the sky.

To an outsider it seems ridiculous that a railway company, in order that it may make a trifling change in its rate of charges, in a matter entirely local, must petition a "traffic association" for permission to do so, but that is the way of it. The C. & N. W. finds that, as lake freights now run, freight on iron ore from Marquette county mines goes to Lake goes before the "Western Traffic Association," to which it belongs, asking permission to reduce its rate from 70 to 65 cents a ton, to even up the through rate. The Mogul of the association considers the matter and decides that the C. & N. W. "may insist" upon the addition of the five cents to the rate of the D., S. S. & A. and advances now), and, if the South Shore refuses, may reduce its rate, to "make the differential." Pretty soon, as things are working, it will be necessary to get an act of congress before a railway company can "run a special" for an excursion party or give a parson a half-rate fare. Loading business with all this red tape, by congress, by the state legislatures and by the companies themselves (with their "traffic associations") will result disastrously, one of these days. An "alliance" congress is a possibility, and such a body would be a terror to railway stocks. Meanwhile, the C. & N. W. rate on ore will probably come down five cents on the first proximo.

In this region voters are, as a rule either republican or democratic-third party organizations do not find a congenial soil and, if planted, have an existence like Jonah's gourd only. That the Farmers' movement, so called, should take root and trish in this peninsula. where there are so few farmers' is less probable than that prohibition should have gotten a foothold, but we know that it has never succeeded. Nevertheless, the following, by ex-speaker Carlisle may prevent some republican from being coaxed into that side show, and for that reason we clip and publish it. Mr. Carlisle knows that the "third party" will not hurt democratic chances, and he knows, too, and so does every observer from the outside, that it was not intended to hurt them:

"I do not think that the third party will have much influent upon the result of the elections of 1892, even if it should determine to nominate a candidate of its own. It will certainly not carry any democratic state nor seriously embarass us in any democratic state. If it carries any state or affects the result in any state it will be in the Republican Northwest, and the very most it could accomplish would be to throw the election of president into the house of representatives. In that event a democrat would certainly be chosen, as we have control of the delegations in that body from a large majority of the states.'

A democratic side show is the third party. Keep out of it. Follow the old flag.

The senatorial redistricting represents the very worst that the democrats can do in the way of a senatorial gerrymander. Wherever possible they have made little districts for the democrats to carry, and where the republican vote is the heaviest they have made the districts as big as possible. The population basis should be 64,431 for each district. Wayne has been so divided into four districts that it will be impossible for the republi-cans to elect a single senator from the county. In order to accomplish this result the second district has 69,156 people and the third but 54,423. The fifth senatorial district, which is made up of Lenawas and Monroe, and which is republiheavily republican, has 74,160 people, but in the seventh district, made up of Kalamazoo, St, Joseph and Branch, the three republican counties have a combined population of 91,470.

Again, the eleventh and twelfth disricts-Washtenaw and Oakland-are democratic and have but 42,210 and 41,-245, respectively. Other instances are Kent county, which is split into two districts of 54,916 each, and Saginaw county, which makes two districts of 41,-136 each. The grossness of the outrage is apparent in the latter case, where the twenty-second the twenty-third dictricts combined have a population smaller than either the ninth district the eighteenth, the twentieth, the twenty-fifth or the twenty-seventh, all republican districts. The two Saginaw districts combined have a population of but 82,272, while the twenty-seventh district, every one of whose nine counties is republican, has a population of 97,400! The practical result is that 30,000 people in the latter district are disfranchised on the vote for state senator. Such is the outrage the people of Michigan are called on to submit to at the hands of the present legislature-Tribune, Detroit.

To come nearer home; the 30th, which it is hoped to keep democratic, has 53,-068; the 31st, which must be republican, has 82,219; and the 32d, which they think fighting ground, has 54,993. Marjuette and Houghton and Alger, all republican, bunched in one district.

Very little can be said of the market in general except that the signs of an impending change are not wanting, although no one seems to be able to make much of a forecast of the coming events. The only thing that may be stated with any degree of certainty is the fact that no two men in the business can be found to agree upon any one question affecting both, either of fact or of speculation. Among the ore men no less than among the makers of pig iron every shade of opinion can be found, embracing every hue of possibility, from a deep and gloomy black to a luminous, bright chrome. Yet, after all, it is not going much out of the way to state that the prevailing color is in the latter direction, and that the kaleidoscope is turning in the direction of the roseate. There are ore men who do not want to sell their possible output Erie ports via Marquette at five cents | because, as they say, there is no use givper ton less than via Escanaba, and it ing it all away when there is more than a probability of getting better prices later on, and, moreover, because large sales, at the ruling low prices, would simply mean the impairment of their working capital, the mine, without any adequate return. Then, again, there are those who, having settled the question among themselves whether or not they meant to be road (as though the ore traffic could "in it," have resolved to be in the proession, if only to keep their trade. One such firm, that has found that by selling a hundred thousand tons of ore they would lose money where they would make a small profit by selling four times that amount, has gone into market, cut its price until nothing remains of it but rags and tatters, and is bidding for business, while another firm, quite similarly situated, is holding off, preferring the advance that some are hoping to realize later on. Those who, having materially cut down their output of ore, are not materially affected, and are therefore no factors in the market, all hold to the latter opininion. Almost every ore firm reports a number of similar sales, at the old price made a month ago. Quite a good deal of Chapin oreis sold; more than three hundred thousand tons, and some of it at four dollars. The sales at Ashland are also quite large, the probable output failing but slightly behind last year's production. It is a notable fact, however, that those Mahoning Valley furnaces that have started up, are by no means fully supplied with Bessemer stocks, while they all report full purchases of other grades of ore. The furnaces are getting all the coke they need, but there is a dearth of ore, owing to the prolonged dock strikes.-Iron Trade Re-

> We would not take the Tribune's account of the scrap at Lansing last Sunday but waited for the Free Press account. That, we might wait for indefinitely, it does not appear, so we clip from the Journal: "Nester opened festivities by calling on Dr. W. K. Prudden, with whom he has lond been at outs. He called the doctor a number of hard names and then left, Later he resumed his mouth warfare at the Downey house, and Dr. Prudden's patieuce became exhausted. A bit of comfort for the democratic freetraders was the death of a horse which was running in the "Derby" at Chicago. The horse was called "High tariff," and they take his death as an omen. Poor fellows; they grasp at straws, as drowning men are said to do.

Australia is the greatest wool producer of the world. It appeared that Austra-lian scoured wool declined from 44 cents a pound in February, 1890, to 39 cents in March, 1891. On the other hand, the McKinley tariff has so stimulated the domestic markets that the prices of American wools have not gone down with this universal fall in foreign markets .-American Economist.

Can the Ohio republicans afford to abandon Mr. Sherman and surrender to the Farmers' Alliance? "Better risk defeat, which can be but temporary," said Major McKinley in his speech before the Republican State Convention, "than capitulate with the demagogue or surrender to dishonesty. The misguided citizen never forgives the party that misguides him." To refuse to re-elect John Sherman because he is disliked by the representatives of Pufferian political economy and wildcat finance would be a capitulation to the demagogue and a surrender to dishonesty.-Sun, N. St. Joseph, Mo., June 22.-The Mis souri river is higher than for several years and is still rising. The rapidity with which the waters are cutting away the Kansas bank can best be imagined when it is stated that half-acre lots of earth have been tumbled into the river ever since yesterday morning. At the rate the river is now cutting it would require but a short time to place Elwood suburb on an island and leave St. Joseph two miles from the river. This would leave St. Joseph's $1,000,000 bridge standing over a dry spot.

Yours for Business,

The Corgans of Sight.

To take great care of the eyes should be one of our foremost duties. Very many eyes might have been saved if the owners had only know how to care for them. A blind man is a charge upon the community at large. He is not a producer, as a rule, but a consumer.

The money annually spent in the

The money annually spent in the United States for the support of the blind is sufficient to pay the interest on the public debt. "Pity the blind!" Pity we may, perhaps, for we can not al-ways help. We must also condemn; and whom shall we blame? Not the poor unfortunates themselves, but the gnerance of many parents and nurses; for they, in many instances, are the re-aponsible ones.

The eyes of the new-born child are extremely delicate and very sensitive to irritants. Mothers and nurses should be exceedingly careful to avoid exposing the eyes of their charges to the light. Nature is aware of this and usually ushers in the new-comer at night. They should also be very careful when washing the infants, for matters from the body may get into the eyes and there set up an inflammation which, at this age, fragmently results in ontice this age, frequently results in entire loss of vision. One-half of all the blind become so through this cause.

Children under seven years of age have eyes which are too imperfect to admit of close application. If used at this age they are very apt to give way under the strain, becoming longer and hence short-sighted or, if there be any inherited trouble, it is readily developed. If only for this reason children under the eighth year should not be set to their books, and if sent to any school this should be a kindergarten. The normal adult eye in a healthy person can stand an immense amount of work if properly used; but many ayes are normal; some are too long, some too short, and in others some part of the complex machinery is out of year. The old eye becomes worn with ase and is not fitted for fine work; the media transparent in the adult, are plouded, and degeneration shows in svery structure.

School-room desks should be of sufficient helpht so that the pupils will not have to bend over their tasks. In reading or writing, in either the standing or the sitting posture, the head and body thould be erect. The act of bending constricts the veins of the neck, hindering the return of blood from the head, thus increasing intra-ocular pressure. This is one of the most common causes of myopia, or short-sight. Teach the shildren to read and to write without leaning on their desks. Bend the tree while it is young, and when it is old all the king's horses can not straighten it. The book should be held not less than ten inches from the eyes. If it be noticed that a pupil habitually holds his work closer, the fact should be reported to the parents, who should take the shild to an oculist.

The light should come from one side, preferably the left. There should be no windows in the wall of the schoolroom that the students face. That end should be a blackboard. Pupils should face the desk when writing, holding the paper with the edges parallel to the edges of the desk-top. Many systems of writing teach the false position of having one side of the body nearer the desk than the other. In such a position the eyes and body soon become tired.

The same rules should be followed in drawing and other close work. The best plan is to work continuously ten minutes or so and to look up from book or task at some distant object for a moment, then continue the work. The eyes are rested, the thoughts concentrated and the mind reviews what has been done. Thus more work can be accomplished without fatigue. Engravers, who follow this method, save their eyes; while others who do not, are invariably affected, sooner or later, by their fine work.

At home or in office a few more admonitions are needed:

Don't work by twilight or by a flickering light. The rapidly diminishing light between sunset and dusk is most fatal to the eyes. Fine needlework, especially colored embroidery, should be pursued only in a good light.

Don't read lying down, as then there is too much blood-pressure in the eyes and the external muscles become more readily tired.

Don't read in direct sunlight, as the glare is a direct irritant to the retina. In reading by artificial light, the back should always be turned to the source of illumination, allowing the light to pass over the shoulders. When working by artificial fllumination, the light should either be high enough to permit shading of the eyes by the brows, else an opaque screen, or, better still, a translucent shade should cut off the glare of the light from the eyes, and yet permit illumination of the work. The light of an oil lamp is, as a rule, better than that furnished by the average corporation gas-burner; and yet the latter may be greatly improved by attaching one form of the incandescent wire apparatus that are now on the market.

By following these suggestions many congenital defects will never assert themselves, and many others will never be acquired. No time should ever be thought other than wisely employed which is given over to the care of the eyes. The eye is not only the lighthouse to the soul, but it is undoubtedly the most valuable member of the human body, and I except none. It therefore behooves us to exercise every possible precaution for its preservation, and no words are too strong to serve as warning to those who wrongfully use or abuse the eye.—Dr. H. V. Wurde-mann, in Ladies' Home Journal.

A VETERAN hunter of Danforth, Me., in attempting to kill a huge bear with a knife, was carried three miles on the animal's back before the wild beast died from the loss of blood.

"Throw up your hands and cash!" yelled a highwayman with, a gun to Patrick Matthews, of Shenandoah, Pa. Matthews gave up a package he was carrying, then knocked the man down with a stone, and, recovering his package, escaped.

A TERRIBLE method of suicide was adopted by a machinist of Waldheim, Westphalia. He put the engine at its highest speed and then threw himself against the fly-wheel, which struck his head off at once and tossed his body against the wall with crushing force. Rather violent, but dead sure.

A Box containing a big snake, consigned to King & Franklin's circus, fell and broke open in the Southern express office at Birmingham, Ala The snake, seven feet in length, drove the other oc-cupants from the office, and compelled the night clerk to take refuge in the vault, where he spent hours before the snake was recaptured.

ONE of the largest devil fishes ever caught in Puget sound was caught near Port Madison the other day by some fishermen. When first caught it would measure, spread out, fifteen or twenty feet across from tip to tip of its arms. On each of its eight arms were over two hundred suckers, making in all upward of sixteen hundred.

THE latest fish story comes from Ocala, Fla., where the cook at a restaurant is alleged to have found a diamond ring in a fight's stomach. The ring is of handsome design and contains seven small stones set in a circle, with one larger than the rest in the center. Inside the band on the lower side are engraved the letters S. E. L. The ring is a valuable one, probably worth from one hundred to one hundred and twentyfive dollars.

In Charleston, S. C., where the population is about equally divided between whites and blacks, there are two deaths of blacks to one of whites.

More than one-fourth of the people of this country live in cities of 8,000 inhabitants or more. The urban population is set down at 18,235,670, or 29.12 per cent. of the total (62,622,250).

FOR SALE.

Railroad Lands in Southern Illinois,

The Illinois Central Railroad Company is offering lands at so low a price that it seems absurd to tell what they are capable of producing, yet it is a fact that the crops from apple orchards are yielding from $300 to $500 per acre, There are many farmers, fruit growers, who are realizing each year-from $150 to $500 per acre for their fruit and early vegetables, and some who are realizing $1000 per acre. These of course are successful men of business, who study how to do it. Do you want the same chance to make money? You can have it by going into this country and buying some of the same lands from the Illinois Central Railroad Company, and by applying the ability you have in a business manner to their improvement and cultivation, you can have in a short time as valuable land as that of a successful fruit grower, on the line of this railroad, who said the other day, "I have brought my land to such a high state of cultivation that no one can buy it from me for $500 per acre, as I can net $100 per acre off it every year.

Most of the lands offered for sale by the Illinois Central Railroad Company can be made to produce the same results. They lie along the line of this railroad at a distance of from 3 to 13 miles, and the country is traversed-by many other railroads, thus affording every facility for transportation of early !fruits and vegetables to any market that may be selected, fruit express trains being run daily to Chicago, St. Louis, and other points. Sheep raising is as profitable on the hill lands as in any place in Ohio. Address or call upon

MURRELL THE MURDERER.

He Slew Steamboat Crews and Burned and Sank the Crafts.

The name of John A. Murrell stands to-day among the blackest on the criminal record of the south, and to visit one of his haunts either in Tennessee or Arkansas is not a pleasant thing. When gazing into a yawning cave where once this red-handed assassin dwelt a thousand ghostly visions seem to leap into the air, and as many echoes ring out for

Murrell was bold in his operations. He possessed a promptitude of decision that was wonderful and a tendency of purpose that was equally noted. In his earlier days in Arkansas he was known for his brutality. There can yet be seen in Lee county a little mound on Crowley's ridge which bears the name of Murrell. It was one of his favorite resorts. The mound is about forty feet above the top of the ridge, and will measure probably fifty feet at the base. The center was dug out by Murrell, and the hole will measure in circumférence about ten feet, while it is fully twenty feet in depth.

It was in this place that the noted outlaw perpetrated some of his most flendish crimes. The little mound is situated in the eastern part of Lee county, and the St. Francis river struggles along at the base of the ridge upon which it stands. It was here that Murrell would sit in solitude and gaze upon the little stream below, watching anxiously for some boat to appear, that he might murder the crew and capture the cargo, and how well and how often he succeeded in this need not be retold.

But probably the most striking illustration of the man's brutality and fearlessness can be found in the adjoining county, Phillips, only a few miles be-low the mound. Just north of Helena, about eight miles, can be seen a very large lake, spreading over several hundred acres of ground and reaching from a towering chain of hills on the west to the great Mississippi river on the east. Just before the body of water joins the river it narrows into a channel of only a few yards in width. Murrell and his assistants, for he certainly had confederates, although but few of their names have been learned, would force steamboats through this neck and into the lake. After compelling the crew to run the boat into the lake the outlaws would murder and throw them into the water. The boats would be finally destroyed and would sink into

To-day a visitor to that portion of Arkansas can see the upper parts of the boats captured and wrecked by Murrell and his associate robbers. And it is an ugly scene. At morning when the sun, peeping from behind the trees that | Fine Fresh Prunes, per pound 121/2c. skirt the eastern bank of the broad Mississippi, pours a warm light upon the lake, the dilapidation, and wreck, and ruin are mournfully apparent. The jackstaffs, half rotten and rusty chimney stacks, decayed pilot-houses, and splintered bows, all go to form a spectacle that is forbidding to the eye, and yet there is about the scene a something strongly fascinating to the spectator.

From this ugly scene the mind is taken to another, where in later years the wild vines have wound around a little pine bush which is mirrored in a crystal-like spring on the west side of Crowley's ridge, but a few miles south of Mariana. Not far from this pine tree. half covered by a tangled mass of weeds and grass and vines, can be seen a grinning skull. It has remained there for years, and has been bleached in the blazing sun. It could tell its own story if it were given a tongue. Nothing has ever been known of it, except that it is the skull of one of the assassin's victims. Where this white symbol of horror, around which loathsome vipers wriggle and squirm, now lies, once could be seen Murrell, ferocious and thirsty for blood, bathing his hot lips in the little spring that bubbled from the mountain's side. The cave he occupied during the day can yet be seen at this place, and the pine tree is as green as in the years agone.

It was in 1878 that a box of money was found in this cave. Some time during the same year a box similar to the one found in this cave was dug out of the mound near St. Francis river. Each of the boxes contained but a small amount: of money. The finding of the money but strengthened the belief that the outlaw had buried all of the money he obtained in Arkansas in some of his secret haunts. There are many yawning caverns in the hillsides in which, perhaps, there are skeletons to tell their own stories of midnight murder, each leaving a new horror to swing above the sepulcher of the man whose flesh has long since furnished food for the grave-worms.-Memphis Commercial.

ment Exercises of St. Joseph's Cath-

The exercises of this school were too much for a single evening and so were divided, the boys' exercises being given on Tuesday evening and those by the girls on Thursday evening (after the Iron Port for Friday is printed). The following was the program Tuesday evening:

Entrance March. T. Golden. Ave Marie, Schubert,

The Class. Solo,..... R. Finley. .A Boy's Hopes.

Oration J. E. Glavin. "For You We Are Praying at Home," Esterbrook,

J. Bucholtz, A. Killian. Drama, "From the Sublime to the Ridieulous," .Haydu. ."Home." Song, J. Connaghan, R. Power, S. Cleary, T. Vincent.

Recitation,...... 'The Painter of Seville,' with tableaux,... P. Brandenberg, E. Yockey, A. Roddy, E. F. O'Connell, A. Hughes, W. Golden. Calisthenics,

Boys of Grammar Dep't. ... "Two Faces, Essay,... P. S. Power. .. "Fareweli." Cornet Solo,

H. C. Barr. .. "The Dandy Comic Song, Colored Waiters,"

The Class. .Mendelssohn Impromptu, ... "Crusaders," Valedictory,... H. Lyons, J. Hirt, E. O'Connell. Conferring of Honors,

March Finale. The house was full and appreciative; the lads were "letter perfect" and well drilled, and the exhibition a success: vouching alike for the patient painstaking of the teachers and the willing efforts of the pupils. Especial mention would be, perhaps, invidions, when all did so well, but we may say that Master Glavin's oration was as good a number as any on the program, and elicited hearty applause, as did, also, Master Barr's cornet solo.
