

BESIEGED BY WOLVES.

A Plucky Boy's Fight with the Hungry Animals.

Jack Linton, at sixteen years of age, was as sturdy a lad as you would find in a day's journey.

The Linton's home was a humble log cabin. For the sake of warmth it was banked with earth nearly up to the two small windows, one in the front and one in the south end, which lighted the interior.

The winter after Jack's sixteenth birthday was very stormy. So deep was the snow that the lumbering parties working some eight or ten miles further in the woods had hard work to keep the postage road open.

In the month of January one of the "postage" teams brought in word that Mrs. Linton's mother, who lived at the nearest railway station, twenty-eight miles distant, was seriously ill and wished to see her daughter.

There was not a sign of a storm at the time, but soon after noon heavy clouds obscured the sky and the snow began to descend.

Father and mother will have a hard time to get home," said Jack, as he came in from the stable, where he had been to milk the cows and feed them and the sheep.

"We'll be all right won't we, Jack?" asked Kitty, timidly, as she set the milk pans on the table.

After supper Jack barred the door, put the shutters to the windows and heaped the fireplace full of maple logs, which would burn without sparking.

The clock on the kitchen shelf was striking four when Kitty awoke. Baby was restless and she had just soothed her to sleep, when a dismal cry came from out of doors.

"Jack, Jack," she exclaimed, "what's that?" Her brother sat up in an instant.

"That's only the wind," he answered. "My, how it howls."

"Yes. That's the wind; but I don't mean that. Listen! There it is," she added, after a pause, as a long drawn howl came from before the window.

"What do you suppose it is?" asked Kitty, in an awed whisper.

"I don't know," was the hoarse answer. "Some animal, of course," and Jack ran into the kitchen as he spoke.

The scratching on the roof continued, and now another howl was heard, which seemed to come directly down the chimney, as though the beast was contemplating the chances of effecting an entrance that way.

"Why don't you shoot him, Jack?" she cried.

"The rifle's empty," he answered. "Where's the ax, Kitty?"

"Just behind you, by the door." Jack stepped back slowly, watching the wolf all the while; but the moment he turned to pick up the ax the brute sprang forward to seize Kitty.

"Are you sure?" asked his sister, her teeth chattering with fear.

"They can only come down the chimney," was the answer; "and they'll hardly do that while the fire is burning."

"But we'll soon burn up all the wood in the house, Jack."

"But the wolves, Jack?"

"Oh, there's the Winchester, Kitty. I can take care of them with that."

At length a glimmer of daylight came through the cracks in the front window shutter.

four times, Jack could stand it no longer. He sprang to his feet, took down the Winchester and dropped some cartridges into it. Just at that moment a sound of breaking glass came from the window, and the next instant a wolf's nose was pressed close against a crack in the shutter and he sniffed the air furiously.

"There really never was any danger, Kitty," said Jack; "for they couldn't get in the house. I guess they've all gone now."

"Yes," replied his sister, "and it's time we had breakfast; and she went to the kitchen to begin preparations.

"While you're getting breakfast, Kitty, I'll go out to the stable," said Jack.

"Oh, don't go out just now," pleaded his sister. "Wait a little while."

"Well, I'll look out the window, anyway," he said; and, going back to the front room, he cautiously took down the shutter.

"I guess it's all safe to go to the stable, Kitty," said he; "but I'll take the Winchester with me," and, rifle in hand, he opened the door.

At the instant he stood in the doorway a huge wolf sprang toward him. It was not twenty feet distant. Jack's heart seemed to rise in his throat.

"Look, Jack, look!" she screamed, and running to the corner where baby was sitting, caught the little one in her arms.

Before Jack could get in range of the window, the wolf sprang lightly in, and the head of another appeared in the opening.

The Winchester was now empty, for Jack had only put in three cartridges, and, practically without means of attack or defense, he stood facing the wolf, which crouched in a skulking way, as if more than half frightened at its surroundings.

Kitty, watching every movement of her brother and the wolf from the corner where she had placed baby for safety, saw with surprise that Jack did not raise the rifle.

"The rifle's empty," he answered.

"Just behind you, by the door." Jack stepped back slowly, watching the wolf all the while; but the moment he turned to pick up the ax the brute sprang forward to seize Kitty.

"Are you sure?" asked his sister, her teeth chattering with fear.

"They can only come down the chimney," was the answer; "and they'll hardly do that while the fire is burning."

"But we'll soon burn up all the wood in the house, Jack."

"But the wolves, Jack?"

"Oh, there's the Winchester, Kitty. I can take care of them with that."

At length a glimmer of daylight came through the cracks in the front window shutter.

At times a moving form, and at times a loud snuffle would be heard as one of the beasts would put his nose to the window and try to test by scent the probable nature of the longed-for prey within.

Meanwhile matters were assuming a new phase out of doors. On the way out through the settlement, Mr. Linton had heard that a pack of wolves had been seen the day before, and having left his wife at her mother's, had after a short rest started on his homeward journey. It had already begun to snow, and in a short time the snow became so fierce and the road so blocked with drifts, that further progress with the horse was out of the question.

"What's the matter, Linton," he exclaimed? "What are you doing here at this time of night? Nothing wrong home, is there?"

"Up the road," was the answer.

"Hold on, Linton. If you think there's likely to be any danger I'll go with you as soon as I get my rifle and snowshoes."

He ran toward the snarling, fighting group without stopping to think that he was absolutely unarmed.

Kitty heard the rifle shots, but not divining what they meant was only the more alarmed.

"The leading wolf gave a great bound in the air and fell dead at Mr. Linton's feet; the second crawled away with a broken leg; the third turned and made for the woods; but a track of blood upon the snow showed that the last shot also had reached its mark.

She Couldn't Imagine.

"Bridget, what is that child crying so wildly for?"

"Shure, mum, he's just dranked all his soothin' sirup and eat the cork, and I don't know now what ails him, unless it's the bottle he wants to swallow."

MARRIAGE TOPICS.

A THIRTEEN-YEAR-OLD child is an applicant for a marriage license at Scranton, Pa. A NEWLY married Susquehanna (Pa.) couple have separated and reunited three times in four weeks. A BRIDEGROOM in Jackson, Mich., instead of treating his wedding guests to cigars gave to each a bread ticket.

WELL-KNOWN WOMEN

MRS. LANGTRY is said to have won $250,000 at the Derby. MRS. BAYARD TAYLOR has returned from Germany and will henceforth make her home in this country. LADY HARRIS, wife of the governor of Bombay, is an excellent cricketer, and handles her bat in masterly style.

CHEMIST AND CHEMISTRY.

SCIENTISTS say the chemists will dominate coming inventions. All our fuel will presently be furnished in the form of gas. The greatest monstrosity in chemical nomenclature thus far produced is doubtless quinolineparamethenylbenzoxylazoximeparacarboxylic acid.

MUSICAL DEVOTEES.

DIPPEL, the German operatic tenor, is not yet thirty. He is a slender blonde and does not look strong, yet he does an enormous amount of work. FORSYTH COUNTY, in Georgia, has developed an infantile prodigy, who at four years of age can read difficult music correctly at sight.

SINGULARITIES ABROAD.

AN epitaph in a provincial cemetery in France runs as follows: "Here lyeth Mme. X—, my wife. She suffered a good deal. But it is nothing to what I had to go through." THE prevailing Sunday sport in Cuba is cock-fighting, and it is not an infrequent sight to see a Cuban gentleman going about the streets of Havana with his pet bird on the way to a fight.

STATISTICAL SCRAPS.

THERE are about 20,000 cash girls in New York. In England there are on an average 5.88 persons to every inhabited house. The population of India has increased by thirty millions in the last ten years, and it is estimated that the rate will be five hundred millions by 1941.

LITERARY PERSONALITIES.

FLAVEL SCOTT MINES, whose poems are much liked by the public, is twenty-five years of age. He follows literature as a profession. WIGGINS, the weather prophet, has written a scientific novel describing life on Jupiter and predicting what the people of this earth will be like morally and politically twenty million years from now.

WONDERS IN INSECT LIFE.

THE fly spider lays an egg as large as itself. ABOUT 4,500 species of wild bees are known; of wasps, 1,100, of which 170 and 16 respectively live in Britain. The cork worm has come to plague the champagne producer. The insect bores the cork, close to the neck of the bottle, and thus gains access to the wine, releasing the carbonic acid gas and spoiling the wine.

EUROPE IN AFRICA.

FRANCE'S possessions in Africa amount to 7,400,000 square kilometers, peopled with 24,000,000 inhabitants. GERMANY'S possessions in the daric continent amount to 2,900,000 square kilometers of land, on which are located 7,800,000 inhabitants. ENGLAND holds sway in Africa, including Egypt, over 5,000,000 square kilometers, with inhabitants to the number of 22,000,000. LITTLE Portugal has managed to get control of 2,300,000 square kilometers of African land, and its rule extends over a population there of 10,000,000 people.

Alfred Dolge makes wool felt which is used in the manufacture of pianos and for other purposes.

In 1875, wool felt was manufactured by sixteen establishments, employing 2,860 hands and producing annually $5,730,000 worth of goods.

Had not the McKinley bill put a stop to the operations of the German trust, it would have in a short time been able to crowd out the rest of the American wool felt manufacturers and put up the price to suit itself.

The St. Louis Stamping Co. makes a portion of the tin plate it uses and wants to make all—proposes to do so as soon as the skilled labor can be had—and petitions the treasury for permission to import Welch tin plate work.

"That the manufacture of tin plates is a new industry in the United States no one disputes. In order, however, to decide the question whether skilled labor can be found for the manufacture of tin plates in this country, we have announced in the papers of the principal cities of the United States, and herewith renew the offer, that we will employ any American tin plate roller who may apply and pay them 100 per cent. advance per box over what is paid for the same work in England.

If there is one man whose opinion as to matters of national finance is worth more than that of any other it is he whose name is signed to the paragraph we quote below.

The policy of a nation upon economic questions should be fixed and stable. The McKinley law as now framed, though it may be open to criticism as to details, is a strictly protective measure, fair and just as applied to all industries, with ample provisions to secure reciprocity in the exchange of domestic productions for articles we cannot produce.

Here's a "Yankee notion" which ought to take.

Boston has a new dress reform club, which promises to be something. Some 300 women have banded together with the serious purpose of appearing on the streets the first rainy Saturday in October in a short skirt made up of waterproof cloth in dark colors, reaching but an inch or two below the knee, with heavy boots and long gaiters made from mackintosh cloth. If gaiters are not used, then mosquitoire or ordinary riding boots will be worn. The skirts will be killed and heavy so as not to be disarranged by the wind. A reefer jacket or long cloak will cover the upper part of the body and under this a fancy silk shirt or ordinary dress waist will be worn. An ordinary hat will complete what will certainly be a novel costume. It has been decided to have no complete uniformity about the dress.

The democracy, well knowing that the rape of the senate will not bear investigation by the courts, is now accusing the republicans of "plotting to nullify the action of the legislature, which provided for the election of the presidential electors from congressional districts."

Tammany may succeed in giving Mr. Cleveland another chance but it will be a task requiring all its power; the south and west calls for a man more in accord with the Ocala platform and so more acceptable to alliance democrats.

"Grover Cleveland must be sat upon, and that too, instanter. The set of ex-federal officials who are betraying the best interests of democracy for the future hope of a fat office must be relegated to the rear. They prate about Cleveland's unswerving rugged honesty of purpose, etc. What will unswerving rugged honesty of purpose avail, when that same so-called purpose is all wrong? Cleveland's unswerving honesty of purpose is all gammon.

Hon. David Bremner Henderson, member of congress from Iowa, gives his reasons for advocating the "protective system" of tariff duties thus. The paragraphs are as sharp as gunshots:

First—Because the civilized world substantially protects itself, thus forcing us to protect ourselves.

Second—Because all the conditions of men and of women in this country are better than in other countries, and protection is needed to preserve our happier conditions.

Third—Because I want labor to get the best possible wages for its efforts.

Fourth—Because I want agriculture to find a near, sure and rich market.

Fifth—Because I want to keep the capital and labor of this country all actively employed, each helping the other.

At Treves, or, as the Germans name it, Trier, in the Rhein Provinces, in the cathedral there, is kept a garment which the church asserts and the faithful believe to be the coat without seam worn by Jesus of Nazareth, for which when he was crucified the Roman soldiers cast lots. The legend is that the empress Helena, in the fourth century, found the coat in Palestine and brought it to Europe. At any rate it has been for a thousand years in the charge of the ecclesiastical authorities of Treves and is the one thing which gives the little German city its fame.

As to the desire of Mr. Lincoln with reference to the man who should run on the ticket with him 1864, Col. McClure seems to have the best of the controversy between himself and Mr. Nicolay. In his paper of Saturday last he published letters from Judge Pettis, Mr. Hamlin, Gen. Butler, Simon Cameron, Ben Truman, (who was Johnson's secretary), George Jones, Gen. Sickles and others sustaining his statement that Mr. Lincoln preferred Andrew Johnson to Hamlin for the second place on the ticket.

The republican papers of this state, with the exception of one Chicago journal, which is subsidized by English capital, are a unit for protection, and upon protection alone must victory be brought to perch upon our banner at the national election. Since the McKinley bill went into operation its beneficial effects have been felt in every part of the country, and the tariff-is-a-tax crowd has been reduced to the dismal condition of silliness in endeavoring to make a case for the calamity party.—Star, Beardstown, Ills.

Kansas City lies across the state line; on the bluff is Kansas City, Missouri; under the bluff, where the railroad station and yards, and the big packing houses and elevators are, is Kansas City, Kansas. It was the latter which went on a hunt for aldermen last Monday evening with shouts of "lynch them," "hang them;" which took possession of the city hall and, not finding the aldermen (who had prudently gotten out of the way) was content, perforce, to declare the said aldermen and the mayor "thieves" for proposing to pay $340,000 for an electric light and power plant, and "cowards" for running away. It was charged and believed that mayor and council was "in cahoot" with the owners of the plant and that the purchase price was to have been divided, half to the owner and half to the aldermen and mayor.

It is announced that the English exhibitors at the world's fair intend putting up a list of prices in two columns. The first column will give the cost to the purchaser in Great Britain; the second will give the cost plus the duties to the American consumer. The English exhibitors hope they will in this way render valuable assistance to the free-traders in their fight against the protective policy.

There is no doubt that this scheme of helping on free-trade in America would work to perfection if there were not two sides to this question of cheapness. If the thousands who will visit the world's fair were simply consumers who had a settled income, the price-list of the English exhibitors would undoubtedly make such an impression that there would not be a ghost of a chance for the protective policy at the polls.

Parallel columns giving the average wages in Great Britain and the average wages in America would make the vast majority of the visitors to the world's fair lose all interest in these English price-lists. Americans are too sensible not to know that cheapness of the English sort cannot be obtained except by cheap labor, and as the vast majority of them are wealth-producers of some kind they will not feel much attracted by the sort of cheapness that would require a considerable paring off of their wages.—Irish World.

The Cork Incorporated Chamber of Commerce and Shipping lately wrote to the First Lord of the Admiralty, asking if he would receive a deputation with a view to getting the Government to utilize Haulbowline Docks, and thus afford some employment for the people of that district. The First Lord of the Admiralty stated, in reply, "that he thought the creation of a shipbuilding yard in Haulbowline would involve an unnecessary expenditure of public money and would not have the desired effect."

"If necessary, the state troops should be called out to maintain the right of free speech in Michigan. It will be only the cowardice or the subserviency of the local authorities that will require such force to preserve one of the fundamental rights of the constitution which the present governor so dearly cherishes."

So says the Detroit Journal, while depicting the crusade against Romanism. Nobody sustains the city authorities in their surrender to the mob.

The heated term of last week was productive of electric storms which knocked out all the telegraph, telephone, light and motor wires while they lasted; of sudden and violent wind storms, and of heavy rainfalls. Much damage was done to property and much inconvenience resulted, but no great disaster occurred, nor much loss of life.

WITH THE DOCTORS.

"KOCHER" is the name coined by a St. Louis medical paper for the German professor's system of treatment.

DR. MATHEWS, who has been studying suicide, finds that it pertains exclusively to civilized countries, and increases in accordance with the degree of civilization.

The cells of the human lungs are 75,000,000 in number, covering a surface from two and a half to three and a half times greater than the whole body surface of ten full-grown men.

A SURGEON in Manchester, who has operated in 130 cases of cancer of the tongue, reports 119 recoveries and twenty deaths. In Russia there is one doctor to every 100,000 inhabitants. The women doctors number 700.

A PHYSICIAN who has kept a nightly record of his pulse for five years reports that every year it falls through the spring until about midsummer, and then rises through the autumn to November or December. Then comes a second fall and a second rise, culminating in February.

MILITARY AFFAIRS.

MACMAHON and Bismarck are the only prominent actors in the Franco-Prussian war remaining alive.

LONG marches have been added to the training of the French infantry. They are also exercised in the practice of boarding trains for the transportation of troops.

TWO TROOPS of United States cavalry have been sent from San Francisco to the Yosemite valley and Sequoia park to preserve them from depredations. They will remain until November.

CONSIDERABLE numbers of Germans have gone to take service with the Chinese and Japanese fleets. China has ordered several war vessels from German builders and Japan has bought a number of torpedo boats in Germany.

HEREAFTER every soldier in active service in the British army will have a card attached to his clothing bearing his name, rank and regiment. This plan is to facilitate identification in case of death on the battlefield. It has long been in vogue in the German army.

Occupations of Women.

It is remarkable that nearly thirty per cent. of the total female population is employed in remunerative occupations. In the last decade the percentage was only 21.33 per cent. of the whole. Out of the eleven classes of occupations women have increased comparatively in nine, viz.: Government service, professional and domestic service, trade, agriculture, fisheries, manufactures and as apprentices; while they have decreased comparatively as laborers and in personal service. In 1875 there were nineteen branches of industry in which women were not employed; in 1883 the number was reduced to seven.—N. Y. Ledger.
