

THE DANUBE'S IRON GATES.

Crowning Ceremonies of the Buda-Pesth Millennium Fete.

The Yankees of Eastern Europe—New Magnificence of the Hungarian Capital and the Progress of the Hungarian People.

(Copyright, 1894.)
The Yankees of eastern Europe, as the Hungarians have a right to be called, have every reason to be proud of the progress they have made in the last 50 years.

Not to be backward about claiming for their nation a respectable antiquity, they are celebrating the 1,000th anniversary of its founding by Arpad, the Magyar George Washington; but it is the last half century which has been best worth while.

It was Maria Theresa who conceded home rule to Hungary while she was fighting Frederick the Great and needed Magyar swords. In the days when big fair in Chicago. Last Sunday the great statue of Arpad was unveiled on Pestasser plain, the Magyar Runnymede. Next Sunday a monument will be unveiled at Munkacs; August 2, at Pannopolis; August 16, at Brassó; August 30, on Mount Zabor; September 23, at Zimony; October 15, at Devesy. August 30 will be another great day. Then the foundation of the proposed St. Stephen's monument in Buda-Pesth will be laid. At about the same time the splendid new law courts will be opened, fronting the houses of parliament, and some of the statues will be placed in the great triumphal arch which the government is erecting in Andrássy street to rival the arches of Napoleon and the Roman emperors.

The best is almost the last. That is the formal opening on September 27 of the new canal at the Iron Gates of the Danube. Four kings, a combination hard to beat, will smile upon the ceremony—the emperors of Germany and Austria and the kings of Servia and Roumania. All of them have a share in the glories of the Danube and an interest in its traffic, but the Hungarians alone are digging the canal and blasting the rapids above. The Berlin treaty of 1878 stipulated that Austria and Hungary were to divide the work. In reality, Hungary has done it unaided and will take toll from all the world.

Hungary's great novelist, Jokai, has given in "Timar's Two Worlds" a thrilling account of the dangers of passing the Iron Gates. The current is ferocious, the bottom shallow and rocky and tortuous. At one point there is, at low water, a decided waterfall which is obliterated in time of flood. Vessels going in each direction have been for more than 2,000 years swung from point to point by ropes, and accidents have been frequent. The traffic which has had to endure these vexations is enormous, comparable to that of the Mississippi.

American methods have been used in the work at the Iron Gates. The plans of Herr Wallandt, the government engineer, were entrusted for execution to Herr Luther, of Brannschweig, the contractor, and he in turn, with characteristic German thoroughness, sent his own engineers to study river work methods in every country and especially in our own. For the details in the work which follow I am indebted to William L. Saunders, secretary of the Ingersoll-Sergeant Drill company, one of the very few Americans who have ever seen the Iron Gates and are technically trained to describe such work. Mr. Saunders pictures the scene as one man now old were young, heroes like Kosuth, Deak, Georger and Andrássy were fighting to preserve and enlarge the liberties. The constitution of 1847-48 decided popular suffrage based in part on taxation, and provided for the first time that the nobles should be taxed as well as the commons. It wasn't until June of 1867 that the emperor of Austria accepted the inevitable, was crowned king of Hungary, and swore to maintain its practically republican constitution. It was almost as great a defeat as Sadowa in the same year.

The 29th anniversary of the coronation was celebrated only the other day. Modern Hungary is 29 years old.

The Yankee of the western world ought to take pride in the Yankees of the eastern, and especially in the fact that Hungary prospers because it is as purely democratic as the United States itself, and more independent of Austria than Canada, is, for instance, of Great Britain. Franz Josef is an amiable figurehead; Hungary makes its own decisions, projects its own improvements, and, with true republican pride, is willing to concede that nothing is too good for its own use. The visitors to Buda-Pesth have found that out. They have found it a city in size comparable to Brooklyn or Manchester, but far more magnificent than either; they find perfectly appointed electric cars, taking their power from a conduit underneath the street level, and supplied with the most efficient life-saving apparatus; they admire the new Parliament building, erected at a cost of almost 16,000, of wild and singular beauty. The river is shut in on both sides by a range of mountains, rising higher on the north, and running diagonally across the country something like the Highlands at West Point. There are in all 20 miles of river which have been dredged and deepened. The town of Orosva lies near the lower end of this stretch and below that is the new canal, near the line of Roumania. In a single day's excursion one may pass into Roumania, where on the left a gigantic white sign "Roumania" is seen on the mountain side, may cross the river into Servia and even picnic on a little island claimed by Turkey. Belgrade is some hundred miles above, Buda-Pesth 350 miles, Vienna 500 miles.

The work will not be finished until next year. It will have cost about 15,000,000 florins, the canal alone 5,000,000, and there is a suspicion that the contractors will lose money on the job even at these figures. But they will have finished a work which was attempted as long ago as Emperor Trajan's time, and that ought to be some comfort. The canal portion of the work is only about a mile and a third long, but it is 72 meters or about 235 feet wide, where the Suez canal is only 27 meters and the Baltic (Kiel) canal but 32. There will be plenty of space for vessels to pass it any point. Twelve million cubic feet

Some Summer Fancies for Outdoors and the Home.

A Bicycle Cape to Be Worn When It Rains—For Unexpected Visitors—A Relief from the Picture Hat—For Summer Baths.

(Copyright, 1894.)

It has come about in the evolution of the bicycle and the bicycle girl that the paraphernalia and accessories necessary to a rider cost more than the bicycle itself. The greatest argument in its favor as a rival to the horse has been that it does not require feeding.

FOR CYCLING IN THE RAIN.

But of late there are those who confess that the cycle manages in one or another way to eat up a great deal of money. A certain young woman who has saved up enough of her earnings to buy a wheel is still hesitating, because she says she has no suit to ride in, and that that is only the beginning of what one actually needs.

BATHING SUITS FOR OLD AND YOUNG.

To be sure, an all-wool suit, with leggings and cap, can be bought for nine dollars, but one really needs a special kind of underwear for cycling which one would find too warm for ordinary wear.

If the cyclist is starting out for a trip through the country she must be prepared for all kinds of weather. It is very disagreeable to ride one's wheel in the rain, but it is sometimes a necessity when one is a long distance from shelter. To protect the rider in the case of sudden rainstorms, a special cape has been devised which is long and wide enough to hang over the handle bars, and serve to protect the rider quite effectually from the storm. If one happens to be going down hill it is rather pleasant than otherwise to take one's feet from the pedals and coast down hill, provided the rain and wind come from behind, and do not blind the eyes. The cape can be folded very small and strapped to the bars, like any luggage.

Something new in an indoor gown that can be worn to receive one's friends and still be comfortable and easily put on is what every woman is constantly looking for, but rarely finds. Unless one's material is very elegant, it will not do to have a loose, flowing gown, for it is sure to appear like a morning wrapper, intended only for one's own boudoir.

A wrapper which is pretty enough to be seen by anyone, but which would not be good form to wear to receive in, is made of lawn in a Persian pattern. There is a light green stripe, and one in a pale fawn, and between these is the stripe in Persian figures. It is made slightly low and square in the neck, with a tiny edge of Valenciennes around it. The front is shirred into a piece of Hamburg insertion with a lace heading. Wing-like pieces hang over the shoulders and fall in points at each side of the front, nearly to the waist. But the beauty of this gown is the fetching little gold belt fastened just under the bust, giving an empire effect to the dainty little gown. The sleeves are loose and have ruffles at the wrist.

The gown shown here is a dress, that is, it fits in at the waist and has a belt, but nevertheless it is all sewed together so that it can be quickly donned in case of unexpected callers. The ruffles around the bottom of the skirt have two rows of lace insertion and one of lace. The sleeves are composed of graduated puffs and bands of insertion. The fichu may be worn with any dress, and can be bought ready-made for four dollars.

The summer bather has progressed many degrees since the days when a loose wrapper and a petticoat were considered a sufficient costume for the sport of wading out in the shallow water without any thought of learning to swim. Nowadays all members of a family who live within any reasonable distance from the sea are provided with bathing suits, from the oldest member of the family down to the two-year-old, who has hardly learned to walk yet, much less wade. All the same, no one enjoys the water more than this very two-year-old as soon as he gets over his first fright about it.

Very simple flannel bathing suits for little folks can be bought at a low figure, and the enjoyment that they get from them more than pays for them. Very often, when one has a private beach, the children are allowed to wear their bathing suits to play in the sand—an arrangement which is a great relief to their clothes and a great relief to those who have them in charge.

time is relieved by a large lace jabot starting from a couple of chiffon rosettes at the neck.

Small hats have carried the day against the very large ones, though we still see the nose hats with their brims turned up and banked with flowers at the back.

A pretty little brown hat with a Tam o' Shanter crown and a two-inch lace straw brim is trimmed with heavy SYMPHONY IN BROWN AND WHITE—brown satin ribbon, black quills and white roses, and it goes with a striped grass linen dress made over golden brown silk.

THE LATEST SUCCESSOR TO THE MAHDI.

Awful Cruelty, Sensuality, Love of Luxury, Display and Flattery.

A native of southwest Darfur, the strong individuality and resoluteness of his character developed with the exercise of unlimited power into the worst traits of the despot. Pride degenerated into a blind belief in his own infallibility, and he did not scruple to adopt the successes of others—whether it was the architecture of the mahdi's tomb or the victories of Zeki—as the results of inspirations given to himself from Heaven. An innate cruelty grew to proportions unrivaled even by the late emperors of Rome. He gloated over the massacre of whole tribes, in the death, by lingering torture or starvation, of his most able and most deserving generals and advisers. His degeneration of character was, of course, accompanied by an inordinate sensuality and love of luxury, display and flattery. His harem consisted of 400 women, his bodyguard of 12,000 warriors, clad in armor, with horses decked in quilted caparisons.

His policy was, in brief, to exterminate the Nile valley tribes and to introduce the western tribes in their place, so that the Gezira and other populous districts became depopulated, while he crushed the Ashraf (mahdi's relatives) and took all power from his brother caliphs. The coinage was debased by successive stages until it became a fifth of its normal value. Mock justice was administered by the cadis, who were his creatures, whose duty it became to call out his decisions, however grossly unjust, and to make them appear as far as possible to accord with the Moslem law and the mahdi's "instructions." Religion became a mockery, and his wretched subjects ceased to believe in its tenets. Pilgrimages to Mecca were forbidden and replaced by visits to the mahdi's tomb; commentaries on the Koran were suppressed and the religion of Islam was made the vehicle of all that was evil.

Education ceased and trade—except the trade in slaves, which assumed vast proportions and was conducted with unspeakable cruelties and incalculable loss of life—became practically nonexistent. A veto was placed on trade in feathers, that in gums was taxed prohibitively, tobacco was contraband and ivory, coming only from the south, dwindled as those provinces leaped from the caliphs' control. A small and desultory trade continued with Egypt, but a rigid prohibition of the export of slaves left but little for merchants to convey out of the country. Industry suffered in like proportion and because limited to a little weaving of common cloths and some leather work, while the immorality bred of chaos, of the wholesale depopulation of vast districts by the slave trade and by the rupture of all social organization, became fearful in its extent and was accompanied by the increase of the diseases which usually accompany it.—National Review.

Effect of the African Climate.

It must be fully recognized that the Matabele murders of unarmed whites, merely because they are whites, put them almost out of the pale of mercy, and the absence among them of any leader who can answer for their conduct makes general arrangements for peace exceedingly difficult. At the same time we regret, if only on grounds of policy, to see the tempers of the white settlers hardening, to notice a certain readiness to execute as well as to slay in fighting, and to read exulting expressions as to the number killed. We do not want dead bodies in Rhodesia, but quiet subjects who will work for wages and ultimately become taxpayers. Lenity is good policy in Africa as well as in Asia, but it is very seldom that it is displayed on the former continent. Something in the climate of the surroundings seems to make all Europeans, Germans, Dutchmen, Portuguese, and even Englishmen, abnormally hard.—London Spectator.

Searcher—Thirty dollars, eh? That's nothing. I had a bicycle suit that cost $1,000.

Tandem—Who took your measure?

Searcher—A jury.—Truth.

For President—
WILLIAM MCKINLEY.
For Vice-President—
GARRETT A. HOBART.

Every time a race occurs between fast steamboats on the lakes or elsewhere in this country, we hear a great deal of talk about government laws against racing. Usually this argument is resorted to by the weaker fellow in the controversy, or the fellow who has been beaten and refuses to acknowledge it. As a matter of fact there is no law in the United States against steamboat racing any more than there is against a race between sailing vessels. All the officers of the steamboat inspection service in this country might be aboard two vessels that were actually known to be engaged in a race and still be powerless to prevent it or to punish the officers or owners of either vessel afterward. There is no law of the United States against the speed of vessels, excepting in fog or in canals or other narrow waterways over which the government exercises special jurisdiction. The steamboat inspection laws provide that in thick weather vessels must proceed at a moderate rate of speed, but they do not even say what this moderate rate of speed shall be. Ten or twelve miles an hour would be a moderate rate of speed for some passenger steamers, while it would be a high rate for the ordinary freight carrier. But, of course, it is well understood that the steamboat laws specify the steam pressure to be carried in the boilers of every ship of the United States that floats. In this respect the law is a safeguard against the danger of explosion due to recklessness that might accompany racing, but only when this pressure has been exceeded is the law violated. What ever may be said about instructions from owners, or the rules of corporations owning ships, it may be taken for granted that every time there is a meeting of two steamers, between which rivalry exists, a race is sure to result and the full limit of steam will be used when it can be had. There is little danger in this full use of steam, however, as government rules for the construction and inspection of boilers make big allowances for safety.—Marine Review.

The campaign is on; the issues are clearly defined; protection and honest money on the one side and free-trade and free-silver on the other. It is now with the people to decide upon which of the two lines of policy the government shall be administered after next March and the Iron Port banks on the sound common sense and sturdy honesty of the American masses and so is confident of the result. That Wm. McKinley will be elected and with him a congress holding to the policy inculcated in the republican platform it does not doubt. But to that end every republican and every sound money man (whatever his former political bias) must contribute by his voice until November and by his vote at that time. We have no walk-over; the unthinking and the impulsive, the followers of the men who went wild last week, at Chicago, over the rantings of Tillman and the florid oratory of Bryan, are legion and in strenuous earnest. The contest will be hot and, in many states heretofore republican, close. We are right and ought to win. We can win if we work. We shall deserve defeat if we do not.

The N. Y. World publishes the following excerpt from a letter written by the nominee of the Chicago convention:
"I am not a believer in either free silver or gold, but am an out-and-out bimetalist. It is clearly apparent to me that financial stringency does not hinge on the amount of money in circulation but rather on the influences that control circulation. The very best times we ever had occurred when there was a very low rate of money per capita in circulation."
It will go far to prevent the populists' endorsement of his nomination.
To correct a misunderstanding the Delta of last Saturday had this paragraph:
"It has been reported that Senator Mason is not a candidate for re-election. This is untrue. While he is not working the thirtieth district for support, his name will be presented at the senatorial convention. The work which he did in the last legislature is such that the party cannot reasonably deviate from its custom of giving a capable man a re-nomination. His record was and is satisfactory to the voters of the district and his friends confidently expect that his claims will be recognized. This statement is made so early only because of the fact that his position has been misrepresented by interested parties and it is unjust to the senator and to the district that such misrepresentation should travel about in the guise of truth."

The Iron Port had been informed that the senator did not desire a re-nomination and it may be noted that the Delta does not contradict that statement; it asserts only that his name will be presented to the convention but admits that he is doing nothing to bring about a re-nomination, an admission that goes to confirm the assertion that he does not desire a second term.

Intelligent Democrats all over the country know, and many of them frankly admit, that their party's tariff policy has proved a lamentable failure, and that it must be changed before the government can have sufficient revenue to meet its expenditures, and before there can be a healthy and permanent revival of the industrial interests of the country. They know this, for the policy now in force has been given a fair and thorough trial and its weakness has been fully demonstrated. Knowing this, they cannot in their hearts or in their deliberate judgments any longer honestly condemn the republican policy of protection. And, as a matter of fact but few of them are now doing so. They are disarmed not only of their weapons, but of much of their prejudice by the failure of their own tariff policy to vindicate itself.

This makes it very easy for sound money democrats to support the sound money republican ticket this year. They will take it for granted that the tariff will be revised, because they know it must be revised on the lines of protection to restore the revenues and industrial prosperity.

The Mirror is sorely exercised concerning the management of the republican party, (which it will do its utmost to defeat no matter how managed) and tenders its advice to republicans as to the course they should pursue. The matter of representation in the coming county convention is what troubles it at this time; it fears that Mayor Gallup may be unable to dominate that body, and make the delegations to the state, congressional, senatorial and representative conventions to suit himself, and stigmatizes republicans who do not view the matter as it does as "a few designing politicians," and threatens, in case its advice is disregarded, "disruption of the party." The gentlemen who compose the county committee of the republican party will, unless the Iron Port entirely misjudges them, pay very little attention to the advice of the organ or the populists but will regard rather the desires of the republicans of the county. So guided they can not go far wrong.

If the republicans have carried the election by overwhelming majorities in 1893, in 1894 and in 1895, it has been because the people were sick of the free-trade policy and desire a return to the protective policy of the republicans. There was no currency question involved in the issue upon which the republicans recaptured control of congress in 1894, or in the campaign that terminated in the sweeping republican victories of 1895.

The speeches with which the Chicago convention killed time are a prophecy of what the country will be called on to endure in the next few months. There is to be such a riot of demagoguery, perversion of history, bald assertion and stark financial madness, as shall make the greenback craze of 20 years ago seem mild and sane.—Iron Trade Review.

The workingmen of the United States are more interested in iron than in silver or any other metal. When iron is once more sent to the furnaces and mills it will make little difference whether silver is sent to the mints or not.

Mayor Pingree's work for three-cent railway fares must be done over again, probably. A dispatch from Detroit dated the 13th said, "The Detroit Street Railway, which started largely through the exertions of Mayor Pingree in his fight for cheaper fares, has been sold to Tom Johnson, the mayor's opponent." Hazen may as well drop his gubernatorial candidacy; Detroit is all (or more than) he can handle successfully.

Watterson won't have the Chicago platform or ticket at any price. He cables from Geneva, Switzerland, to his paper, thus: "Another ticket our only hope. No compromise with dishonor. Stand firm."

It is not a cheap dollar that the laborer wants but an opportunity to earn a good one. To that end he should vote for "the advance agent of prosperity," Wm. McKinley.

"Posterity will not rank Mr. Cleveland as a brilliant statesman," says a writer in the July Forum. No, only as a stubborn, opinionated ass.

Wilson, of the Copper Times, Lake Linden, says that he has no use for populist platform or candidate falsely babbled democratic.

The Chicago convention nominated Arthur Sewall, of Maine, for vice-president, because he has "a barrel."

An "Expert" Opinion. Hon. E. S. Miner, who represents the Green Bay district in congress, has this to say concerning "Our Sam": "The 12th congressional district can not afford to do otherwise than renominate Mr. Stephenson. It is no time to turn down good and thoroughly well-tried business men in order to turn up some untried and inexperienced man, and then expect of him the same efficiency and faithful service that Mr. Stephenson has rendered during the past six years. It matters not how bright and otherwise capable the man may be, he can only attain the commanding position Mr. Stephenson occupies in the house, after serving equally as long a time. I know and realize this fully, because I have learned it by actual experience."

Half Rate to St. Louis, Mo. On account of the National Populist Convention and American Silver Convention, the North-western Line will, on July 19th, 20th, and 21st, sell excursion tickets to St. Louis, Mo., and return at half rates—one fare for the round trip—good for return passage until July 27, 1896, inclusive. The new steamer Henry Bessemer took out 4,011 gross tons of ore from Ashland last Tuesday, the largest load ever moved on Lake Superior. Mrs. Rhodie Noah, of this place, was taken in the night with cramping pains and the next day diarrhoea set in. She took half a bottle of blackberry cordial but got no relief. She then sent to me to see if I had anything that would help her. I sent her a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and the first dose relieved her. Another of our neighbors had been sick for about a week and had tried different remedies for diarrhoea but keep getting worse. I sent him this same remedy. Only four doses of it were required to cure him. He says he owes his recovery to this wonderful remedy. Mrs. Mary Sibley, Sidney, Mich. For sale by Bert Ellsworth, Druggist.

THE "LONGSHOREMEN." Their Fifth Annual Convention Held Here This Week. A MEETING TUESDAY EVENING.

The Local Bodies Parade; Good Speaking at Reception and Mass Meeting; Action Harmonious; New Officers Elected.

On Tuesday morning last at 8.30 the local labor unions—trimmers and lumber-shovers—paraded at the west end of Ludington street and marched, carrying the national flag and banners inscribed "Welcome to our visitors" and "The likes of Conners and Kennedy must go" and led by the City band, to the New Ludington hotel where the visiting brethren and the officers of the International Longshoremen's Association were received and escorted to the hall of the A. O. U. W.

There an address of welcome was delivered by Mayor Gallup and replied to by President Kelly, of the association, and F. J. Weber, 1st vice president. After that interchange of courtesies the convention was called to order and a committee on credentials appointed, and a motion to adjourn until 2.00 p. m. was made and carried.

The afternoon session was devoted to completing the organization and routine business of no special interest to the public. In the evening a mass meeting was held at the Peterson, presided over by Mayor Gallup and addressed by President Kelly, M. P. Cannon and Vice-president Weber, each of whom set forth strongly the necessity for and the benefits of labor organization.

Wednesday's and Thursday's sessions of the convention were occupied by matters concerning the working of the organization. The "Buffalo business" was taken up and discussed at length and its settlement referred to the incoming executive board with authority to take such measures as it may see fit. Amendments to the constitution and by-laws of the organization were proposed, discussed and adopted. Officers for the coming year were chosen as follows: President—Charles Kelley, of Waahburn, Wis.; First Vice-President—Frank J. Weber, of Milwaukee; Second Vice-President, James Martin, of Buffalo; Third Vice-President—Frank Foster, of Escanaba; Secretary-Treasurer—H. C. Barber, of Detroit; Daniel Keefe, of Chicago, was elected as delegate to the annual convention of the American Federation of Labor.

Cleveland was selected as the place for holding the next annual convention. The convention closed its labors and adjourned yesterday.

Episcopal Ladies' Entertainment. The Woman's Auxiliary of St. Stephen's Episcopal church will give an entertainment at the Peterson opera house on Thursday, Aug. 6, of which the following is the program: 1. Minuet, Eight Little Girls; 2. Song, Miss Gurler, of Chicago; 3. The Modern and Medieval Ballad of Mary Jane; Mrs. H. M. Stevens, Masters Stafford Conolly, Samuel Atkins and Robert Oliver; 4. Song, Miss Braithwaite; 5. Good Things from Life: Gipsy types represented by young men and maidens of Escanaba, opening with "An Escanaba Hop," and closing with "A Bachelor's Supper." Ice cream, tea and cake will be served by young ladies, in costume, in the opera house hall at the close of the entertainment.

Accident, Murder or Suicide. The body of Benjamin G. Johnson, who lived on a farm near Daggett, was found in the log-pond of Christenson & Son's mill Wednesday morning. He had been missing and diligently sought for two days. From marks upon the body and clothing the opinion gains ground that he was murdered. He was a farmer, doing cedar jobbing occasionally and was in good circumstances. He was not known to drink nor was he a man of bad habits. Coroner Mason, of Menominee county, is investigating the case.

Missing from Gladstone. Hans Anderson, an employe of the Cleveland Cliffs Co. at the furnace near Gladstone, is missing since Tuesday and supposed to be drowned. The report comes via Negaunee, where Anderson formerly resided; the Gladstone Tribune of Thursday makes no mention of the occurrence.

He Was Cool. A Massachusetts congressman who was on board the train which was wrecked at Hyde Park, Mass., last fall, says when the shock came on, one of the passengers was pitched over several seats just in time to receive the contents of the water cooler, which tipped over and soaked his clothing with ice water. A highly excited passenger rushed up to him and told him to keep cool. "Go away," said the wet man; "I am the coolest man in the car. I have just had two buckets of ice water emptied down my back."

Presbyterian Services. The usual services will be held in the Presbyterian church to-morrow. In the morning the Rev. Dr. Todd will preach on "The Straight Gate." In the evening the sixth address of the series on Apocrypha will be given, on "Matthew, the Politician." The Sabbath School will meet at the close of the morning service. The Y. P. & C. E. will meet at 8.30. A cordial invitation is given and a welcome extended to all strangers.

Dancing Party. A farewell party, in honor of Misses Gertrude and Minnie Wade, was held last evening at Perous hall. A good time was had by the young people present, dancing being the principal feature of the evening. Refreshments were served.

Gun Club Shoot. The Menominee and Delta Gun Clubs will shoot a match on the grounds of the latter next Tuesday. Sport may be anticipated; there are good shots in each team.
