the auspices of the Lake Michigan Yachting association. Commodore F. F. W. Greene and the members of the local yacht club appreciate fully the honor of being asked to take part in this event but have been forced to decline because they are arranging to hold a regatta of their own on the same date. This bit of news has been received with much pleasure by the lovers of yachting in Escanaba and if the present plans of the club are carried out, the regatta will furnish an important feature of the Independence Day celebration.

years later are not known. When finally brought to trial and convicted, Howgate was sentenced to 8 years in prison. Good behavior brought this down to five years and last December he was released and returned to his home at Washington to live with his daughter. Captain Howgate was born in England. In 1862 he was appointed a Second Lieutenant in the 22nd Michigan regiment and served through the rebellion with distinction, winning fame and promotion for gallant service at Chickamaugua and in the Atlanta campaign. He was known as a scientist of ability and would doubtless have made a name for himself wrong doing.

Captain Howgate was the originator of what is known as the Howgate colonization plan for reaching the North pole by means of stations established along the route, starting 400 miles from the pole and building a station every fifty miles. Howgate endeavored to have Congress adopt this plan in 1876 and was so firmly convinced that it would succeed that he purchased a vessel and fitted out an arctic expedition at his own expense. The expedition failed and shortly after Howgate's shortage was discovered and his downfall

REWARD FIREMEN.

City of Gladstone Sends Check for $25 to Escanaba Department.

That the people of Gladstone appreciated the assistance rendered them by Escanaba's fire department during their recent conflagration is proven by the following letter re ceived Thursday by Chief Tolan:

"Clerk's Office, City of Gladstone, June 5, 1901; James Tolan Esq; Escanaba, Mich., Dear Sir:-Enclosed pls. find order No. 81; amt. $25.00 as a slight remembrance for you and fire May 8th, 1901. Thanking you once more for your promptness in AMERICAN UNITY.

At the Hague conference all the powers gave at least the consent of silence to the Monroe doctrine, yet European publicists continue to scheme its overthrow. The London Saturday Review recently argued at length for European "partition of the South American continent," and sought to egg on Germany to begin the work. The Berlin Deutsche Post recently suggested that the German colonists in Brazil secede and hoist the German flag. There is a constant European effort, of which the recent Latin-American conference at Madrid was the outcome, to persuade the South American republics that the United States threatens their independence.

That the South Americans are not deceived as to Europe's motives was well shown by the messages sent by some of their Presidents for the dedication of the Buffalo exposition. "I know," wrote President Roca of Argentina, "it will be another tie of solidarity among the nations of America." "I desire," said President Questas of Uruguay, "that it may be another tie of union and harmony between the Americas." " hope," added President Aceval of Paraguay, the only South American state we ever fought, "it will be a new tie of American unity."

What was the answer of the United States to these aspirations for American unity? "The Monroe doctrine," said Vice President Roosevelt, "should be regarded as the great pan-American policy, vital to the interests of all of us. If we are wise." he said to all the American states, "we will make it a cardinal feature of our joint foreign policy." "The United States," said Senator Lodge, "seeks nothing but the welfare of the republics of South America, and asks in return that they share with her in jealously maintaining the doctrine of Monroe." The keynote of all the speakers, from Boston to Buenos Ayres, was "America for Americans." Their master thought was "America as a unit against European interference or aggression." "Under no conditions," said Senator Lodge, "can the smallest island or the most barren promontory on either continent ever be ceded or sold to one of the great powers of Europe." And had President Roco, Ruestas, and Aceval known in advance what Senator Lodge would say, their messages could not more accurately have responded to the spirit of his words. These demonstrations of American unity may well give pause to the European agitators against the Monroe doctrine. The Latin-American states know their enemy is not here, but east of the Atlantic. They know that in unity with the United States is their safety. They believe in America for Americans. No matter what temporary disagreements may arise, they are united on the Monroe doctrine. To Henry Howgate, former signal officer in the United States army, it makes no difference now what is published about him, whether of praise or blame. His long life, which ended Saturday last at Washington, was filled with what might justly call forth either. As a Michigan schoolmaster, as an officer of a Michigan regiment of volunteers to put down the great rebellion, he acquitted himself with honor and glory. Later, as a regular army officer, detailed to the signal corps, and entrusted with the disbursement of the entire annual appropriations therefor, he was given further opportunity to add to the honors he had already achieved. But the weakness in his moral fibers developed here and he was unable to with-. stand the temptations of his financial surroundings. High living and a craze for rapidly acquired wealth were accompanied by unfaithfulness to his trust, though it was some time after his resignation that his defalcations and the extent thereof were discovered. Then a fugitive from justice for many years, he was finally captured and landed in prison after he had passed the alloted span of life, and spent his remaining days in the penitentiary except the five months since his release on the eve of last new year's day. He was a man of ability in other -lines than

The production of pig iron in the United States is now for the first time in excess of 300,000 tons per week. As compiled by the American Manufacturer, there were in blast May 1, 256 furnaces with weekly capacity of 307,611 tons, as against 253 furnaces and 299,205 tons weekly capacity April 1. Nevertheless, the furnace stocks during April show a decline from 476,000 to 442,-000 tons. An interesting fact is that the number of furnaces now in blast is considerably less than a year ago, 256 against 292, yet the output is nearly 10,000 tons greater. A number of new furnaces of large capacity have gone into blast, while the small furnaces have retired. The average weekly capacity has made in a year's time the wonderful gain of 195 tons, or from 1,006 tons a year ago to 1,201 tons at present. The average capacity two years ago was fully as large as now but the idle small furnaces had not at that time generally resumed operations.

Racing automobiles, when pushed to their utmost limit of speed, are not far outstripped by fast express trains. On the Continent of Europe, one of these vehicles ran 112 miles in 130 minutes. That was an amazing performance. Ancient armies made extensive use of chariots drawn by horses or other animals. Is it not possible that the armies of the future will find steelclad autos carrying light artillery or the bearers of rifles and moving at tremendous speed, formidable agents of destruction when great battles are fought on extensive plains, as so many of the most famous battles of the world have been fought in the past?

Disquieting reports come from Georgia, the chief watermelon producer of the world, that the crops will be smaller hereafter than in earlier years, because the melons exhaust the soil. New land must be planted season after season, and the available melon acres are diminishing in number. If the South is to fall off extensively in the raising of melons it is to be feared that many estimable colored persons will seek new fields in Liberia or elsewhere. There is not much prospect of tontine companies operating in Michigan hereafter. The new bill passed by the legislature provides that they muss deposit $100,000 with the secretary of state, if they desire to carry on their business. SUPERSTITION IN THE SOUTH.

One Negro's Horrifying Experience with a Demoniacal Black Cat and a Rabbit.

"I reckon our southern 'darkies' are about the most superstitious race of people in the world."

The speaker was a Virginia gentleman in Chicago on business, and his remark was addressed to a little group sitting in one of the hotels and swapping stories, says the Inter Ocean. No one disputed the southern man's assertion, and he continued:

"Our darkies see signs and omena In everything imaginable, and the greater part of their life is spent in trying to live up to these omens. This superstition of theirs is undoubtedly a heritage from their forefathers, brought from Africa in the old slave days, and even when the present-day darky gets a little education he never gets quite enough to dispel his superstitious beliefs. They have, among their many other queer ideas, a horror of black cats, which they think are the abodes of wicked spirits, and this reminds me of a story.

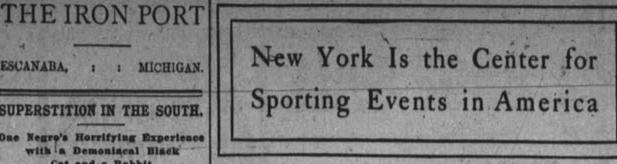

"Down in the country where the white sulphur springs are situated there are numerous other springs, all of which possess more or less medical properties in their water. Some years ago a company built a hotel near one of these springs and invested about $250,000 in the enterprise. It was opened with a great flourish of trumpets and a large number of guests. Unfortunately, on the opening day one of the guests dropped dead. This seemed to hoodoo the place, and at the end of the first season the company was bankrupt and the hotel closed.

"It got the reputation of being haunted in the few years it stood vacant, and you couldn't get a darky to race track men. go near it at night. Finally it was bought by a physician, and he sought a caretaker to live in the hotel until he was ready to open it. He finally got hold of a tough darky, who said he wasn't afraid of anything, and he was installed. According to the darky's story this is what happened to him:

"The night he took charge he thought after dark that he wanted to five-pound ax? have supper. He made coffee, fried eggs and bacon, and sat down to the table to eat. Just as he had begun a big black cat jumped up on the table, York sporting and, grinning at the darky, said:

"'I reckon we two's the only ones here!" "The darky almost turned white

IN THE GARDENS AT OSBORNE. Reminders of Her Younger Life

Among Which Queen Victoria Spent Her Last Days.

It seems appropriate that the last days of Queen Victoria should have been passed at Osborne House, the home that knew the happy years of her young wifehood and motherhood. Everything there reminded her of the past. The house itself was planned by Prince Albert. She could not step out into the garden, presided over by a head gardener formerly in the service of Lord Beaconsfield at Hughenden, without being carried back to the time when her children were young, says Youth's Companion.

The children's tool house, built by the prince of Wales and the duke of Edinburgh in 1857, still stands. It is It fills the spheres with purest light kept exactly as it was when the prince, and princesses were young, the bary rows and garden tools being in an ex cellent state of preservation. Each child had a perfect set of tools, with a barrow and wagon, and the queen Thy fountains are to us unknown, had a special wagon for herself in which the children often drew her about.

The initials of the royal children are painted on the backs of the implements, with the exception of those of Princess Beatrice and the duke of Albany, who were then very young and had to put up with a toy horse and cart and a very small barrow.

A miniature fortress, where the little princes and princesses used to fight miniature battles, is kept in exactly the same condition as it was when it was erected. Close to this fortress grows a tree which has an interesting history. It is a myrtle some five feet high, and of luxuriant growth. It was grown from a sprig of myrtle taken by the queen from the bouquet of the princess royal on her marriage with the late emperor of Germany.

The inscription under the tree reads: Myrtle grown from a sprig of the Princess Royal's Marriage Nosegay, January 25th, 1858. Planted by Queen Victoria February 18th, 1878, in honor of the marriage of her granddaughter, Princess Charlotte of Prussia." Sprigs from the myrtle have done duty in the bouquets of other royal brides, and, to judge by its condition, the tree will provide bouquets for many years to come.

The Swiss cottage, which has often been mentioned in connection with the queen's visit to Osborne, is situated at the back of the myrtle tree. None but the immediate friends of the queen were ever allowed to enter the cottage. HIS CALL TO PREACH.

How a Young Man Decided His Course in Life-A Text That Was Helpful,

Dishop Matthew Simpson has told in a most touching manner the story of the early struggles that led him to the ministry. As he left boyhood behind, the conviction grew upon him that he must preach. But how could he? He was halting in speech, with a harsh voice, and with an impossible manner of declamation-the last one to face an audience.

After turning the question over in his mind many times, with increasing discouragement, he at length reluctantly dismissed it, and took' a three-years' course in a medical college.

But the idea of entering the ministry haunted him day and night, so that it almost seemed to him, as he said, that if he "did not become a preacher he could not be saved."

This led him to pray over the matter, and as a result, the morbid anxiety that had grown upon him vanished entirely one day at the sight of a Scripture text: "Trust in the Lord with all thine heart." The words had been written on purpose for him he said to himself. as

SIN AS DANTE SAW IT.

Wahing Sense of Guilt the Most Ominous Phenomenon of the Day.

The significance of a recent article n the Atlantic, by Rev. Charles A. Dinsmore, pastor of the Phillips Congregational church, South Boston, on Dante's Quest of Liberty, is not only that it confirms the impression of Mr. Dinsmore's gifts as an interpreter of literature, but that it also calls upon the Christian public of to-day to hold as clear and distinct in its consciousness, as Dante had it in his, a doctrine of explation for sin, and the punitive as well as the corrective quality of the penalties which follow

The article is significant, too, in that it recognizes the Dantean rather than the Christian conception of sin and its explation which is dominant in the greatest works of modern fietion. While it may be useless as well as undesirable to expect that the Christian consciousness of to-day shall swing back to a concept of sin and its effects which will emphasize as exclusively as did the thought of the middle ages the punitive aspects of penalty, still it is possible that the Protestant church in recoiling from one extreme has gone too far to the other, and that in dwelling justly on God the Father it has unduly disparaged God the Creator and Judge. The highest ideal of human fatherhood certainly admits of both concepts of punishment, as does the most scientific system of penal administration.

Mr. Gladstone, it will be recalled. shortly before he died,, gave it as his opinion that the waning sense of sin was the most ominous phenomenon of the day; and certainly he had much-and we even more-social data to furnish a basis for such a diagnosis of peril to society. If, therefore, by way of the path of lotters, men of culture and altruistic purpose can, whether led by Dante, Hawthorne or Hardy, be led to see the inevitableness of penalty and the agony of expiation, the church should welcome that method of approach to a great human, eternal problem, even though it be conscious that there are depths and heights of the matter which neither poet nor novelist have touched. For, as Mr. Dinsmore pithily puts it, Mary Magdalene, with her loving devotion to Christ, walked in a better way than Hester Prynne.

WHITTLING YOUR LOG.

Don't Be a Will-o'-the-Wisp in the Serious Business of Building a Character.

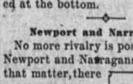

An Indian went to the forest to a log out of w to make a canoe. Dragging it home he began his work. A stranger came by and criticised the curve on the log, and said that if the cut were deeper, the canoe would ride better. He made the cut deeper; but while engaged at this end of the log, another man came by and suggested yet more cutting in another direction. Willing to act upon all the advice given to him, the Indian cut this way, and that, until he discovered that he should never make a canoe: he had received so much advice that all he had left was a whittled log, fit for nothing but firewood. All the while he had a canoe in his mind; he felt that he knew just what way wanted, but he was obliging and wanted to be at peace with his neighbors, so he followed their advice to the destruction of the log. Again he started for the woods after another log; this time, however, determining to make a canoe according to his own plans, and not after the whim of every critic who happened to pass by and watch him at work. It is amazing how much people know who watch others at workthey themselves the meanwhile being idle. He will surely be led astray who seeks to follow every will-o'-thewisp who lures him from the purposes of his heart. A hearty belief in one's self is necessary to successful prosecution of a given task. The reason so many people are like wooden figures on a chessboard, moving only when others move them, is because they are nothing but-wood! A real live man, with red blood in his veins, who knows what he is aboutor thinks he knows-will do his best work if he steadily holds to his purpose, and insists on his right of working to a certain end. Do not be stubborn, or imagine that wisdom will die with you; but do not whittle your log to suit every passer-by .-- Baptist Union.

REFINING PETROLEUM.

The Official Census Report of One of the Great Industries of the Country.

The development of our manufactures in the past decade is as interesting as our growth in population. The information on this subject, collected for the twelfth census, is just beginning to be distributed. For the next two years or so the results of these investigations will be continually coming from the census office, says the New York Sun.

The third bulletin on the manufacturing industries relates to the refining of petroleum. The fact is well known that while we sell a larger value of some other commodities to the rest of the world, our refined petroleum has a wider distribution than any other commodity we sell, for it is sent to nearly every corner of the earth.

One of the most striking facts in this report is that to produce refined petroleum in 1899 to the value of $123,-929,384, raw materials to the value of $102,859,341 were consumed. The difference between these amounts by no means represents the profits of the industry, for no account is made of interest on the capital invested, the cost of selling products or other charges. It is evident that the difference in value between the raw material and the finished ' product ' is much smaller than is common in industries of a more complicated character.

The report also shows that we sell to foreign lands a larger proportion of the refined petroleum we produce than of any other commodity we turn out, Of the 42,234,664 .barrels of refined petroleum produced in 1899 not less than 16,666,809, or nearly 40 per cent., were exported to foreign markets.

It is also interesting to note that the cost of crude petroleum has been increasing, while at the same time the price of refined petroleum has been decreasing. The value of the crude oil used in 1880 was a little less than $1 a barrel; in 1889 it was worth $1.46 a barrel, and in 1890 it was worth $1.55 illuminating oils, was generally lower. This shows that the large economies introduced into the business, such as pipe lines and so on, have made it pos-sible to sell the manufactures from crude oil at lower prices than former-ly, though the cost of the raw material has advanced.

To utilize the phonograph in teaching languages was the happy thought of a well-known teacher. He had more pupils than he could attend to personally. that time he felt content to let God decide his course.

A day came when his obedience to the Divine direction was tested. The impression came upon him very strongly that he ought to speak at a certain prayer meeting, because the minister was away. "But how am I?" he said. "I shall make a fool of myself, What will my friends sayand my uncle?" Above all people, young Matthew dreaded that old uncle. Afternoon came. He was trembling with indecision. To his amazement his uncle looked up and said: "Don't you think you could speak to the people to-night?" "But do you think I ought to?"

"Yes. I think you can do good." was the grave peply.

The young man spoke. He carried the crowded audience with him. His words had power because they came from a full heart.

The experience of that evening was like a revelation. After those three years of unwilling study, he recognized his "call," and in no uncertain voice. But even now he was troubled, so that he did not dare to decide "yes," His mother was a widow, and Matthew felt that it would break her heart to have him change his profession and leave home. After many struggles he deeided to tell her what he thought God required of him.

"Never," he said, "shall' I forget how my mother turned upon me with a smile, and said: 'My son, I have been looking for this hour ever since you were born.""

Then she told him how she and his father-who was then a dying man -kneeled beside the infant in the cradle, consecrated him to God, and prayed that he might become a minister. And she added that not a day had passed but that the repetition of that prayer had mounted to the thone of God.

And yet that mother had never intimated to her son the secret of her heart's desire. She was one of the reserved women of the elder times. That talk crystallized the young paid by the government and nothing man's purpose, and young Simpson went forth to his wonderful career .-else, but these have never resulted in? Youth's Companion.

Doan's Kidney Pills are what overworked kidneys need.

They strengthen and invigorate the kidneys; help them to do their work; never fail to cure any case of kidney disease.

Mr. Albert Mohr of 210 Jackson street, dealer in horses whose stable is at the Wausau says: I had more or less backache for about a year. At times I was quite free from it, then again if I caught cold it went to the kidneys and my work causing a strain on the back was sure to make me worse than usual. I do not know whether I had kidney complaint or not but I know I had a aching back, one of the symptoms when these organs are not right. I read about Doan's Kidney Pills for such ailments and got a box at a drug store. They are a pleasant remedy to use and they did the work. There has been no return of the trouble and there is no indication of it at the present time, so 1 consider myself cured. Tomorrow afternoon the Escanaba ase ball club will play its first way-from-home game of the season nd there is little doubt but that his game will be the hardest propoition they have yet tackled. The tame will be played at Green Bay, Wisconsin, and the Sand pipers, a lozen strong, including Manager Reinger, will leave on the C. & N. W. rain tonight for the Badger state. The line up of the local team will be changed somewhat for this game. Nolden will be given his first trial in the box and if his south paw is equal to the task will be allowed to pitch the entire game. This will put Henry Olmsted on short stop and with Coons on third base our infield should be stronger than at any time this season. The Escanaba boys will return on the early morning train Monday.

The failure of the Isbpeming club to keep its engagement for a game on the local grounds last Sunday was the source of much keen disappointment among local fans. The day was an ideal one despite the threatening aspect of the weather Saturday night and a large crowd Jacobs, $3; J. Robinson, 1; J. C. M. would undoubtedly have attended Berkson, Chicago, $1; H. Rosenthe game, had it been played. The only reasons for their failure to come were contained in the following lan, $1. letter which Manager Reinger received Sunday morning:

"Isbpeming, Mich., June 1, 1901. J. E. REINGER :- Say, we could not on Sunday evening June 30. At make the train tonight. Our pitcher and third baseman couldn't come and there was no use for us to go down without them, and the tickets

In view of the flimsiness of these excuses it looks very much like a clean back-down by the boys from up-the-line. The locals, however, improved the day but putting in several hours of good stiff practice, winding up with a rattling good game of ball between the regulars and a pick-up niue. Olmsted and Clinger formed the battery for the regulars and Nolden and Aubin did like service for the "scrubs." The score by innings was as follows: Pick-ups 001100000..... Henry Wilkie acted as umpire and the crowd of men and boys, present eemed to enjoy the game immensely.

The Ishpeming correspondent to he Marquette Mining Journal explains matters as follows: Owing 'to combination of circumstances, the firsts did not go to Escanaba. Ruez did not feel equal to the task of pitching the full game and no other nember of the team could be relied on to hold up his end. Carr could not get away from his work and rather than go to the Sand City with patched team, Manager Erickson reluctantly called the game off. He hopes to be able to arrange a game with that city in the near future.

Judging from the practice game put up by J. E. Reinger at the base ball park Sunday, it would seem advisable upon his part as manager to become one of the active members of the team. Joe never missed a chance during the afternoon, hit the ball four times and performed the uncommon feat of stealing three bases in succession. Oshkosh Times Shows That it Has Been an Active One.

In an account of the Memorial Day address, delivered by the subject of this sketch at Oshkosh last week, the Times of that city has the following to say of Rev. H. W. Thompson, formerly of this city and the father of Harry A. Thompson, of the Bank of Escanaba, and Mrs. John P. Symons:

"For twenty-five years he has been a minister of the gospel; and he has been a member of the Michigan state legislature, and chaplain of the state department of the G. A. R. At present he is pastor of the People's canaba Steam Laundry Dye and Christian association of Fond du Cleaning works during their opening Lac, where he has been for the past three years. For about twenty-two years previous he was a Methodist dresses, or other clothing and minister, holding pastorates at Fond du Lac, Janesville, Green Bay, DePere and in Michigan. He has been prominent in G. A. R. circles. He has been senior vice-commander of the G. A. R. under department son. commander W. D. Hoard; and he is now commander of the E. A. Brown Post No. 130, G. A chronic borrower is personally and officially a nuisance. Where it is brought to the attention of some chiefs that one or more of his clerks annoy the others by their importunities, they will be quietly admonished to cease, and if the clerk proves obdurate he find himself transferred. Other chiefs consider it a personal matter between the clerks and decline to interfere.

"The department borrower has a method distinct from that of the borrower we meet outside. If a clerk receives $1,200 a year he may increase his salary $25 a month by borrowing every month $50 and paying back only $25. In this manner he has the actual use of $150 a month, and is permanently. ahead $25 per month by arranging his payments with the semi-monthly pay days. On the other hand, the clerks from whom he regularly or infrequently borrows are working for the bortionately decreased. I once loaned a noted down-town house had a pair of could be transformed into a hat that clerk an average of $15 a month for nearly a year. He would borrow this a few days after the last pay day. While he repaid me at the close of the month he had the use of my money every month, and I didn't. When I shut down on him he considered it an insult. "Each year the borrowing habit is growing less in the departments. The old clerks are 'op' to the chronics, and new ones are quietly tipped off when they come in the office. Many clerks who were chronic borrowers have from time to time lost their places, and the different sums they owed their fellow clerks, which must amount to a large one in the aggregate, have been dead losses. If it proves that a new clerk develops into a borrower; the old clerks soon tire of accommodating him, and he finds himself quietly shunned by his companious. He notices the coldness, and it has the tonic effect of aiding him or her to live within his or her means. Women as a rule do not constitute the borrowing class, yet one of the most persistent borrowers in my division was a woman, whose farge acquaintance contributed many borrowed dollars toward her comfort, collected from men and women clerks without discrimination as to sex. When she died we mourned our loss and her loss with like regret."

"Perhaps there are few things more competent employea, these undesira- interesting to watch than the modern ble clerks have gradually been weed- dodges used by shopkeepers to attract attention. Some of them are of the most simple device. There is a downtown cigar store that depends for its crowd on a rubber ball that is mysteriously suspended in air. A round hole, three inches in diameter, is cut into the top of a cigar box, and in this rests a rubber ball about an inch more indiameter than the diameter of the hole. Instead of resting on the box, however, the ball is suspended over the hole by an inch or more, and bobs back and forth in a way that attracts a crowd of puzzled pedestrians. The secret once known the device failed to attract, of course. The idea was that the ball was suspended on a blast of air, exactly as a ball may be suspended in the nozzle of a water hose.

"These, however, are mere tricks, 'vaudeville advertising,' as it were, and there are many who go in for the 'legitimate'-anything to attract a crowd's attention. ' Thus it is that a tailor will exhibit in his window a reproduction of a late work of art, or, perhaps, specimens of a mineral taken from the latest discovered gold or cop-

REMOVING GREASE.

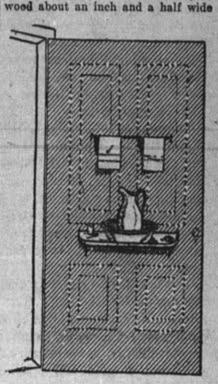

Gasoline Usually Does the Work, But Where It is Ineffective Chloreform May Be Used.

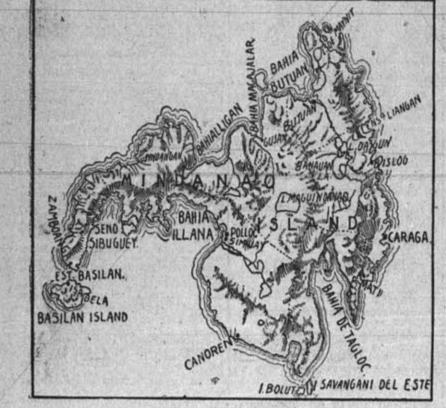

Ordinary grease spots yield readily o gasoline and clean cloths. Put a layer of clean cloths under the spot and rub it repeatedly with a cloth dipped in the gasoline; as the cloth becomes discolored, change it. Final-ly air the spot, and it will be found eradicated. When a little liquid grease has been poured over cloth and hardened there, it is more difficult to take the spot out, but with patience this may be done. The goods on which the grease is hardened must be first steamed until hot had the good fortune to go there a and the grease melted. It must then be cleansed out. Chloroform is a turned to the German capital with a very good cleaner, if gasoline does not do the work. To apply the chloroform, dip a clean cloth in it and rub the spot quickly. Take care not to breathe the chloroform, but hold the head away, and do the work in a room with the windows open. Keep the grease melted in the cloth by steaming it often, and lay a thickness of clean cloth under the spot while it is being rubbed. Gasoline can be applied in the same way as chloroform. It is wise to keep the windows open when using gasoline, because the cloth must be kept hot while cleansing, and the fumes of the gasoline cannot be allowed to reach near the fire .-- N. Y. Tribune.

Convenient and Economical Way of Getting a Washstand Out of a Living Room.

A washstand is a very ugly thing to have in the bachelor girl's cramped quarters. Occasionally the closet is large enough so that it may be accommodated there, but when such is not the case, the following is a most" convenient, simple and cheap device: Get a carpenter to fasten with strong brackets to the inside of the closet door a rounded shelf. For the next 100 years but little was done toward conquering the native tribes on the island; but at the beginning of the sixteenth century the pirates who made Mindanao, Basilan and the Sulu islands their headquarters became unbearable and Spain made an effort to drive them from the southern seas. During the struggle that ensued the town of Zamboanga. located at the extreme southern point of the peninsula of the same name, was fortified and garrisoned by Spanish soldiers and marines. A penitentiary was also built at this point, and for many years Mindanao figured prominently as a penal colony for the northern islands of the archipelago. Here also is located the southern naval station, second only in importance to Cavite.

From the time the fortifications at Zamboanga were built until the Spanash-American war put an end to Spanish sovereignty in the Philippines, each new governor at Zamboanga regarded it as essential that he should add another effort at quelling the warlike Morros to the already long list of unsuccessful ones, and by this course Morro hatred of the Spaniards was kept at a high pitch.

Worcester gives a good illustration of the extent of this hatred in his account of his journeyings in the southern islands. He relates the adventures of himself and party at the little native town of El Recodo, in Mindanao, and says:

"We were fortunate enough at the out-t to win the friendship of the mandarin he ruled the village, and were soon wan-ring about at all hours of the day and ght without so much as sticks in our inds, to the great amusement and ad-iration of the grim Moslem inhabitants, ho never wearled of giving us very sig-scant illustrations of how they would thour throats if we were only Spaniards."

It waters a region of unusual fertility, which the Spaniards were never able to acquire undisputed possession of. The Butuan rises near the southeast coast and flows almost directly north emptying into Butuan bay on the north coast.

The extent of the mineral resources of the island is practically unknown. Gold is known to exist in paying quantities in a number of places, and has been mined in a crude way by the natives for more than two centurles. It is expected that further develop will prove the island a veritable El Dorado.

The Two Pests Meet.

"It appears that we are discovered," said the Mosquito, resignedly, meeting the Rat, who was fleeing across the swamp.

"Yes," replied the Rat, sighing, "I am even now leaving my happy home to escape death at the hands of a few wise guys of sceince." "But you carry with you the bubonic plague?" queried the Mosquito, slyly.

"Well, I should gnaw!" retorted the Rat, smiling. Then he went on good-humoredly: "By the way, how are malarial germs this spring?"

"Now you stop! You naughty, taunting thing!" pouted the Mosquito, pretending to be offended. The Mosquito's face grew grave, "When does the extermination begin?" she asked.

"Now you have me holed," answered the Rat.

"Well," went on the Mosquito, we'll give 'em a run for their money, anyhow."

"Yes, continued the Rat, "we'll be peddling bubonic plague and malaria after the wise guys are dead."--Ohio State Journal.

M. Noel Bernard, a French botanist, says: "Perhaps you think the potato is an organ of the potato plant. Not a bit of it; the potato is a disease. It is no more a legitimate offspring of the potato plant than the oak apple is of the oak." Your first impulse on hearing this, particularly if you have made a study of botany, is to write down M. Bernard is a crank. Possibly, however, he is right and you are wrong. The potato is a disease, a sort of cancer of the roots, caused by a fungus, the "fusarium solani," which flourishes abundantly in diseased potatoes, but is found on healthy potatoes, says a London News Paris telegram. M. Bernard took 16 tubercles of the variety called in France Marjolin, and planted them in flower pots filled with fine siliceous sand. Eight flower pots were put aside under a glass frame. The other eight pots, in the suil of which a few chips of potato had been sown bearing fusarium fungus, were placed in another frame house. Every one of the latter brought forth potatoes after a couple of months, while the eight flower pots of the first lot were found to contain long, slender roots. Persons who have experience in potato growing are aware that the tubercles usually make their appearance in the first year without having flowered. M. Bernard says this probably happans because potatoes, being grown all over Europe, the soil is every-where "infested" with the fusarium solani. But this was not so when the potato was first brought to Europe. In a book printed in 1602, "Bariarum Plantarum Historia," the author, De L'Escluse, says that it is Impossible to count upon potato seeds to propagate that plant, and he adds this most remarkable passage: "I sent seeds to several persons. They grew and flowered in the course of the year, but no potatoes ever came.' It is suggested that early potatoes might be obtained by sowing the soil with cultures of fusarium solani.

That very evening, therefore, he obtained a sample cap and examined it closely. He found that its foundation was of straw, and that on it was built an amazing and gorgeous superstructure of cocks' and peacocks' feathers. In front, too, was a small framed mirror and round it were several silver coins and two of gold. Next day he made further inquiries and learned that sometimes the foundation is an ordinary fez instead of straw; that an embroidered kerchief is invariably worn with the cap, falling down from it at the back, so as to protect the neck, and that the headgear was introduced from

Servia in Bosnia about 20 years ago. What surprised him most, however, was to learn that it is only married women who wear this cap, and that it is their fixed rule to strip it of all its feathers after they are married one year, and thenceforth to wear only the foundation of straw or a plain fez.

With three or four Bosnian caps carefully packed in bandboxes he returned to work, and now his firm is anxiously debating whether it would be possible to model from this picturesque headgear hats that would commend themselves to the fashionable women of Berlin.
