July Term of Circuit Court Lasts but Two Days.

FOUR DIVORCES GRANTED

Chicago & Northwestern Company Consents to Judgment of $1,-000 in Suit by John B. Hamelin Estate.

The July term of circuit court for the county of Delta was an unusually short one, convening on Monday morning and reaching an adjournment by noon Tuesday. It was a non-jury term and most of the causes on docket were continued for trial at the October term. The session Monday morning was devoted to the calling of the calendar by the presiding judge, John W. Stone.

The case of the People vs. P. M. Peterson for violation of a city ordinance requiring the payment of a license for theatrical performances, was ordered discontinued on motion of the city attorney. This was intended as a test case. George E. Merrill of Rapid River, City Department Kept Busy Satex-school treasurer of Masonville township, pleaded not guilty to the charge of embezzlement brought against him by the state and a continuance was granted until the October term. Merrill's bail of $500. was furnished by Alex Caswell and Joseph Savoie. The case of the People vs. Clayton Vcorhis, of Gladstone, charged with selling liquor without having paid the required license was continued under present bail. The reports of work done during the year 1900-01 as given at the late county convention held here, show the advantages of organized effort, in a marked degree. There has perhaps never been a year when so much has been known about the Sabbath school work in the county, and the very fact that the county Sabbath schools expect to come together at the annual convention to learn of each other, to get into friendly touch with each other, exchanging ideas and methods and sympathizing with each other's struggles, stimulates the work. What must powerfully affect the Chinese mind is that the court returns to Pekin. The forbidden City has been despoiled and profaned, but the rule of the Empress Dowager has only been disturbed, not broken permanently. The powers set out to free the legations and avowedly to remove the empress from the throne and from all influence on the throne. They have done the one at a cost in money and reputation for fair dealing that is at least as great as the material loss the Chinese have sustained. But they have not done the other.

Chinese contempt for all the remainder of the world cannot have been decreased by the stay of the allies in Pekin; rather it has been increased. The Chinese now know only that they must bereafter protect the legationers or be better prepared than they have been in the past to make war on all the nations

The marriage license was not returned at once by Justice Donovan but things at the Deau domicile went along smoothly and the returned wanderer seemed content to spend the remainder of his days within the precincts of his regained home. A week later the magistrate who officiated at the wedding called at the home of Mrs. Deau and tendered her the marriage certificate. Imagine his surprise when he was informed Trinity Episcopal church at Gladthat it was not wanted as there was no longer any use for it. Mr. Deau had again been seized with that unconquerable desire to shift his position and after brooding for a few days, refusing to be comforted, he had informed his wife that it was utterly impossible for him to content himself longer in Escanaba and that he must go away.

Deau seemed to deeply regret his inability to settle down but said it was out of the question and after bidding the members of his family a fond adieu he left for Duluth to again enter upon his life as a drifter in the country's population. The children seemed pleased that their parents are again legally united and Mrs. Deau appears content to go on with her duties at the restaurant as though the even tenor of her way had not been interrupted so recently with the unexpected recovery and almost immediate loss of a husband.

Without glancing at him Parker pocketed the change handed him by the barkeeper and started toward the door. But Mack, by this time beside himself with rage, leaped forward and struck him in the face. In an instant all the aristocratic calm vanished from Parker's features. His face grew purple and his veins stood out like whipcords as he turned on his adversary. A dozen men leaped between them, and it was all they could do to prevent Parker from hurling himself upon his foe. Presently, however, he calmed down and walked deliberately to the door and went

Some weeks later Peter Mack was found dead on the highway, killed by a knife which had reached his heart. Instantly the name of Philip Parker was connected with the affair, but investigation developed the fact that Mack had a large sum of money with him at the time he was murdered and that it was gone when the body was found. This served to dissipate the theory that Parker was involved. A tramp named Tim Maloney was apprehended near the scene of the murder, Kaving on his person more money than seemed to the authorities compatible with his dress, Philip Parker did not deign to make any statement regarding the affair, nor did he evince the slightest interest in it. Maloney was convicted and

About this time Parker took into his employ Millard French and made him his business agent. He called him his private secretary, but gave into his hands nearly all the details of his estate. Never sociable with his neighbors, he became, after the murder of Mack, more taciturn than ever. He spent most of his time in his library even avoiding his daughter, who formerly had been his one companion.

Attractive Bathing Costumes for the Summer

The Shapeless Bathing Suits of Previous Seasons Have Been Discarded.

Ye Summer Girl Prepares

for a Dip in the Sea HE season of the bathing suit is near at hand. The coming season will see a variety and elaboration in these suits that was unknown in past seasons. But they go well with other extravagant fashions that the times have brought, and the girl on the sand and in the water will be quite as attractive as the golf girl, the tennis girl or the dancing girl who will reign supreme in the evening.

Materials for bathing suits are much the same as in former years, but thanks be to fate and fashion, the shapeless blue bag bathing dress, which in past seasons brought the society belles into ridicule, and also the equally shapeless and shining black mackintosh coat, have both been discarded, and we have in their place the prettiest and most practical of bathing costumes.

A mention of the materials must include serges, flannels and silks. Of these the favorite seems to be silk, for the reason that they do not cling when wet, and the bathing girl of the present season proposes to do more than spend an hour on the sands. She expects to get into the water.

In patterns there are some faintly checked, others in stripes, and many in solid colors, and nearly all of these are trimmed with white braid. The fascinating robes that are worn to and from the beach are made of striped toweling, as a rule, and with the bathing costume is worn a waterproof silk cap as a protection for the hair. .

One of these dainty bathing costumes is of pink and white silk. The costume is patterned alternately with broad and narrow stripes, but the pink stripe predominates on the kilted skirt, and the sides and back of a slightly bloused waist. A pink silk vest, sailor collar, and scalloped revers, with a braided border, and four braided strap-pings across the vest. Puffed sleeves and full knickers to match. Adainty cloth, on to which they are stitched little cap of pink waterproof silk draped in front in a large bow.

A second charming costume for the water is of white serge. The waist is cut with a square yoke, which is, bordered with a band of white braid embroidered in pink. At the waist line is the same trimming, and also at the hem of the skirt. A small puff over the arm, bordered with the trimming. With this costume is worn a long wrap of striped toweling in blue and white. This is held in at the waist line and neck by a knotted cord. A tam-o-shanter cap of blue and white checked waterproof silk, and white shoes with an embroidered anchor complete the costume. An unusually attractive costume that is very picturesque is in blue serge, trimmed with white braid. It has a sailor blouse, with a low pointed neck, having a white tie, and anchors embroidered on each side of the collar. A white belt of the braid, and a finish of the braid at the hem of the skirt.

A Tendency to Crinoline Effect in Light Weight Skirts.

CKIRTS of light weight materials will be more troublesome than usual this summer. The fashionable outline for these garments is exactly that of a reversed lily. The calyx fits as tightly and closely as possible round the hips, and the groups of tiny buttons will be placed petals swing out from just above the knees, swirling widely round the feet. This arrangement renders it very troublesome to hold up a skirt effectually; and yet it is impossible to walk in it without lifting it, except by a slow gliding movement, pushing the skirt before one's feet, as it were. Besides the inconevience of this sliding manner of progression, considerations of hygiene and cleanliness forbid trailing a wide skirt in the streets or public parks; only on a well-kept lawn or in the house can the newest cut of jupon he worn with any propriety and comfort sweeping its fullwidth around the wearer.

What will be the next step? It is expected to be the introduction of some stiffening into these flowing flounces, so that they may stand out around the leet sufficiently to allow of walking inside their "sphere of influence," so to speak; so that the flowing folds may surround without encumbering the feet. Let us hope this does not mean the insidious first lous and inartistic crinoline.

Often the foot of the skirt will be a frou-frou of flounces under a sheathlike tunic. When it is all in one the great increase of fullness round the lower part of the skirt is not generally accomplished by the cut, but the seams are opened to allow of a few folds of material being invisibly introduced at each seam. These folds start from about the knees, where they are closely held together by stitching, and, widening fanlike thence, they are eaught on two or three graduated tapes, to display their full width round the feet.

Quite a feature in the new gowns is to leave themseams open to the waist, holding them together, from the point at which the flounces are introduced, by a one-inch to-two-inch wide trimming. This may be, for the light materials, a jour, showing a different color beneath the meshes of open passementerie; or it may be lace, equally laid over a contrasting tone that gleams through. This is a period in which a dress demands a lining at least as expensive as the outer robe itself. A silk lining, sometimes merely a luxury, is simply a necessity with the voiles, crepes, mousselines, and the rest of the transparent stuffs.

For dresses in the more firm materials-satin cloths, wool crepons, and what the dressmakers call "fancy mixtures" - the seams are also trimmed from the waist to the evasement, but more usually with a strap of silk or material in a contrasting tone laid on over the seams and stitched down; or else the seams do not quite meet, but are folded at their edges and laid on a strap of silk or by one or more edges of visible machine-stitching; for else the edges may be invisibly caught on the slip of un-dertrimming, and in that case usually on each side of the seams to "make believe" to fasten them down on the strap beneath. This narrow line of trimming for the seams, however it be arranged, should be lighter than the gown itself. SARAH DAVIDSON.

RARE STONEWORTS.

Botanical Garden's Valuable Collection, Which It Has Taken Forty Years to Gather,

It is not a mark of ignorance not to know what stoneworts are. They are not objects of beauty, to attract amateurs, and even scientists have until recently known comparatively few specimens of this somewhat remarkable family. The New York Characeae, which ranks among the three or four best in the world, reports the New York Tribune. The gift was made in February by Dr. Timothy Field Allen, who has devoted more time to the study of the species than any other man in America. For 40 years he spent his spare moments in searching in pools and lakes for the thin grasses which grow in the ooze of the bottom-for these are the stoneworts-and in gathering them in from all parts of the world.

Looking at the sprawly brownishgreen "water weeds" which make up a collection highly prized by the garden authorities, the outsider wonders why a scholar should have devoted his life to accumulating so much unattractiveness. The grasses look well enough in the water from the side of a boat, but are hopeless when plastered on sheets of paper. The explanation of it is that these same "water weeds" are of great value to scientists; forming, as they do, a family more or less apart from the rest of the plant world, with unique and remarkable habits. Dr. Allen has made known to science at least as many new specimens of stoneworts as were known when he began his studies, so it is no wonder that the botanical garden feels itself of which it is not necessary to enenriched by the possession of this collection. As for those who have gazed upon it and seen the respect in which it is held, they will treat with more respect the weeds which their oars turn up in their summer outings this year. The slippery things do not "handsome much," as they say in New England, but they are eminently respectable and distinctly exclusive.

Curious Mexican Stone Work. One of the curiosities of the old city of Guadalupe, Mexico, is a great column of stone sails rising from the upper walls of the cathedral. There are three sails, one above another, each with reef points and showing a stone mast. On the top is a niche containing the figure of a patron, saint. This curious piece of stone work has an interesting history. One of the old hidalgos was at sea with his whole family when a terrible storm arose which threatened to destroy the ship. The don bowed in prayer to the Virgin of Guadalupe, and vowed if she would save the ship he would make an offering to the church. The ship was saved and this curious tower built. It can be seen a long distance at sea, and looks like a ship under sail.—N. Y. Herald. His Badness Explained.

THE TSANG-PO.

Highest of All Navigable Streams, and Its Outlet Not Definitely Known.

The Tsang-Po is in several respects the most remarkable river in the world. It is the highest of all . called the hostess, "what in the navigable streams, flowing for nearworld are you doing, child? It's ly 1,000 miles at an elevation of 11,enough to give you convulsions. Why, | 000 to 14,000 feet. During the greater part of its course its current is sluggish, but for 100 miles or more daughter, who was breathing easy, the mighty river, in its descent to the coast plain, runs with the speed of a mountain torrent. Though one of the largest of central Asian streams, looked sheepishly at each other and it has never been followed from its source to its mouth, and until reer looking girls used to be than cently it was doubtful of which of two well known rivers it was the head waters. The attempts to solve its mysteries have been attended with an almost unparalleled heroism, endurance, steadfastness and selfsacrifice. For the principal explorers of the Tsang-Po have been animated, not as those who sought the fountain spring of the Nile, by the hope of the world's applause at their success-that was denied them-but for a simple daily wage and the consciousness of loyalty to duty, says the National Geographic Magazine.

The physical history of the Tsangquired a collection of stoneworts, or Thibet, close to the sources of the Ganges, the Indus and its great affluent, the Sutlej, at a height of nearly 15,000 feet. Receiving the dramage of the slopes of the Himalayas and of a little known Thibetan range running parallel with these mountains, it soon becomes a stream wide and deep enough to be navigable. There is a considerable boat traffic upon it, at an elevation but little below the summit of Mont Blanc. It flows due east for some 800 miles, receiving numerous large tributaries from both south and north, and when near Lhasa it is, at low water, nearly a third of a mile wide and 20 feet deep; in flood, two miles wide and of unknown depth. In longitude 94 degrees east it makes a sharp bend to the south and passes through the Himalayas in a course known only to the savages who dwell upon its precipitous banks.

When last seen by an explorer it is at a height of from 8,000 to 11,000 feet, but when it emerges in Assam it is only 400 feet above sea level. From this point it pursues its sluggish way for another 800 miles as the Brahmaputra to the Ganges and the Bay of Bengal. There has been a long controversy, into the details ter, as to whether the Irawadi or the Brahmaputra is the continuation of the Tsang-Po. Though there has been as yet no direct evidence-the last expedient of throwing in. marked logs in Thibet having failed -the general consensus of scientific opinion is in favor of the Brahmaputra, and the latest English gazetteer describes it under this name,

It is hardly to be expected that pure science will be much benefited by the lifting of the veil which hangs over this part of the river's course. But there can be little doubt that it hides scenes of magnificent beauty and grandeur which will thrill the expectant world and give it new and nobler conceptions of the sublimity of nature.

Remarkable Tree in Germany. Naturalists in Germany are much interested in a wonderful old tree which has been discovered near Homburg. It is an oak, and is notable not only on account of its great bulk, but also for the fact that at the base of the trunk it is entirely hollow. The trunk, indeed, is not more than eight or nine feet high, but it is more than 20 feet in circumference. Some idea of the size of its interior may be gathered from the fact that four persons recently found ample room in it. In winter the old oak looks very bare and gaunt, but, according to peasants in the neighborhood, who have known it for many years, it regularly puts forth new twigs and foliage every spring, so that, ancient and decayed though its trunk may be, it is nevertheless crowned and surrounded with masses of green leaves, just as it was do not believe in it to the extent of in the days of its youth. Peterson he Opera house announces the following bookings for the months of August and September: Imperial Dramatic company, August 8, 9 and 10; "Two Merry Tramps" August 17; "The Little Minister" August 22; "A Convicts Daughter, August 27; "Where the Laugh Comes In," August 31; "William Devere," September 'The Dermster,' September 'Sandy Bottom' September 14 'Fast Mail," September 18; "Si Plunket," September 21; "The Eleventh Play, September 25; Alice will unload its crowd at the depot in | ber 28; "The Minister's Son," September 30.

Du Souchet's clever farce, "My Friend From India," was presented at Peterson's opera house Saturday night last by the Strickland company to a very slim audience, due largely to the heavy rain storm which came up shortly before the performance opened. The play is an exceedingly good one full of amusing situations, keen satire and delicate bumor. The strickland sisters, Helen, Mabel and Etbel, are clever actresses and the company is well balanced. They were booked to play two nights but on account of the disagreeable weather canceled Sunday's engagement and announced Along with the crowd from Gar- that they would play a return date den Bay will come the baseball team here next season when "For Love's baseball team will cross bats with Although forty people in Gladthe Sand-pipers on the South park stone had purchased tickets to "My grounds at 3 o'clock in the Friend From India" only seven came afternoon and a close and exciting over on the Lotus to witness the contest is anticipated. The only performance Saturday night, owing to the rain storm. The Lotus did a view to entertaining the city's not make the return trip and those who braved the storm to see the show were compelled to remain over night in the city.

> Clarence Burgderfer, the humorist and impersonator who was to have given a performance at the High school anditorium Saturday evening, did not perform owing to the lack of attendance on account of the very inclement weather.

In Their Desire to Defeat the Sand-Pipers Sault Ste Marie Players and Citizens Act Like Untutored Savages.

The best we could get was the worst of it." This familiar phrase, in the slang of the day, expresses the sentiments of all who went from this city to Sault Ste. Marie, Sunday, to witness the game of ball be-When such conservative men as Judge Emil Glaser, Selomon Greenhoot, John Tolan and Charles Joegers together with every other one of the sixty people who went from Escanaba to witness the game, pronounce the conduct of the Soo players and citizens alike, as disgraceful, mean, outrageous and uncivilized, there for all the trouble. The Sault certainly must have been good cause News-Record calls Henry Olmsted for the feeling of profound disgust "the dirtiest ball player in the U. with which the scenes enacted there P.," abuses Deputy-sheriff Olmsted impressed all of our people and some and says: "our players were the vic-of the better element who reside in time of the most ungentlemanly, the Soo.

Of the games, let it suffice to say that Saturday's was won by the Soo's by a score of 7 to 3. Nolden pitched for the Escanabas in the start but was hit so regularly that he was relieved by Henry Olmsted in the fourth. Curry occupied the box for the Maroons and is said to have pitched a splendid game. Dr. Knight, the umpire, evidently knew what was expected of him for he is accused by those who saw this game, as well as that of Sunday, with being a daylight robber and was so unfair in his decisions that even the sport loving people of his own city became disgusted with his conduct. However the Soo team won the game and was therefore entitled to sixty per cent of the gate receipts.

Sunday's game was attended by going from this city to witness it. names and assaulted both on the dia-Olmsted went into the box for the Sand-pipers and from the start was a target for all sorts of vindictive epithets from the onlookers and brutal assaults by several of the ball players. Barber of Big Rapids pitched for the Soo's and to his everlasting credit let it be said that he and he alone of the nine men deported himself in a gentlemanly manner. In the eighth inning-when the game broke up in a free-for-all fight -the score was five to one in favor of the Maroons, but not an earned run had been made and the alleged larceny of Dr. Knight was responsible for the advantage held by the Soo team. Not satisfied with having won the games by such cowardly, means, the managers of the Soo team added injury to insult by refusing to pay the Escanaba players the forty per cent of the gate receipts to which they were entitled and which should have amounted to something more than $150.00.

So much for the results, anything else said of the games must redound to the shame of Sault Ste. Marie so long as the memory of those who witnessed Sunday's disgraceful melee lasts. It was evident from the opening of Saturday's game that the Soo people had decided to win both games by either fair means or foul and had also planued to satiate their desire for brutal sport, by heaping as much abuse upon the visitors as possible. Both games were played upon the government grounds near Fort Brady and the crowd that rooted for the Soo formed a line from the home plate to first base and threw sand into the faces of the Escanaba players who were running bases. From the grand stand and bleachers the hoodlums shouted epithets more vile than one might expect from a crowd of drunken sailors. Even some women of the Soo so far lost their sense of decency as to call the visitors vile names and stooped to even greater depravity when they kicked and buffeted two young ladies, from this city, who were occupying seats in the grand stand.

That men should lower themselves to the level of untutored savages but little above brute creation simply for the sake of winning game of baseball or venting their spits seems almost beyond belief but when women stoop to such shameful last of the matinee races for the seaacts as those referred to above it reems utterly incomprehensible.
Twice during Suuday's game Pitcher
Olmsted was assaulted by Watson, the Soo's first-baseman and all the tricks of "dirty ball" known to the Socites were practiced. In the eighth inning the Escanaba's had two men on bases with no one out.

Olmsted ran to second and pushed over the player who attempted to block him. Watson ran down from first base to take a hand in the struggle which ensued and in another moment the field around second ond base was a sea of struggling, cursing and fighting men. At this juncture Policemen Haller rushed into the fray with drawn club and struck 'Gene Longley, of this city h blow over the head that rendered him unconscious for several minutes. The officer then hit Klinger a rap on the head and would undoubtedly had injured others of the Escapaba boys had not some of the cooler heads interfered and quieted the riot.

This ended all attempts to finish the game but did not put a stop to the insults of the Soo rowdies and, while on their way down town, Olmsted was again assaulted by Watson. Even when the Escanaba party took tween the Sand-pipers and Marcons. | the train for home they were followed to the station by a crowd of about fifty toughs who tried repeatedly to start a fight. This is but a brief review of the shameful story brought back from the Soo and the worst of it all is that the press of that city defends the actions of their players and rowdies and blames the visitors cowardly and disgraceful treatment imaginable on their recent trip to Escanaba, but took their medicine like men." The facts of the matter are, their players were treated like kings and proved themselves such boorish rowdies at the hotel where they stopped that the proprietor had to call the police and the only thing that saved the entire party from arrest was the promptness of their manager in getting the players out of the hotel before the patrol wagon put in an appearance. During their stay here the Soo players were quartered at a $2 a day hotel, were entertained at a party, given partially in compliment to them, and were shown every courtesy by our citizens until they themselves were profuse in their thanks. At the Soo, our players were sept to a $1 a day hotel, more than 1,000 people, fully sixty were hooted and spit at, called vile

Mrs. E. Arnold of 717 South Charlotte street says: Rackache, headache, dizziness and stomach trouble for a year indicated some derangement of my kidneys and when diagnosed by a physician he pronounced the symptoms kidney complaint. Exertion of any kind brought on attacks of backache, weariness and languor were ever present, and my general health was far from the best. Reading one night in a local paper about Doan's Kidney Pills, it struck me if they only performed half what they promised in the advertisement they might help me. Procuring a box at Mead's drug store I used it and obtained good results. I followed it up with a second and the improvement continued. Now I don't want my acquaintances in Escanaba to think I am radically cured for kidney complaint is apt to return but I can conscientiously say that Doan's Kidney Pills did me a world of good and I have no hesitation in recommending them to anyone annoyed with overexcited or weaken ed kidneys.
