

IN NEW YORK

New York, Mar. 25.—All beauty is not stifled in New York's temperate life. It buds and flourishes and seems the brighter because of its background, like a red rose growing in black loam.

Out of the dark byways of the fountains have come some of our greatest artists. But those left behind are not without their beauty. They plow along from day to day in their dull, drab occupations but with their heads in the clouds—potential Carusos driving trucks, Barrymores laying bricks, poets selling fish and painters digging ditches.

This thought occurs as I become acquainted with William Gowrie. He is a letter carrier, but for 20 years he has been an amateur actor, playing some of the greatest roles of all time in the out-of-the-way halls and parlors. Just now he has a leading role in Bret Harte's "Samson Kneie," being presented by the Cedar Players. It is the first revival of this classic in New York for many years.

The Cedar Players have been organized about 8 years. The membership of 48 includes truck drivers, piano movers, clerks and stenographers. The plays are presented at the Hudson Guild, a settlement house on the fringe of Hell's kitchen.

These amateurs have little or no hope of fame and care little about that. They are satisfied that they are creating something of beauty for themselves, something in life beyond bread and butter.

Settlement workers always remind me of gardeners tending plants. They take young plants of humanity, prune them and show them up for hardy growth. The men children of immigrant immigrants into cultured citizens. Walk through the congested district and you'll find dozens of these greenhouses for humanity, the Henry Street Settlement, Madison House, the White Door Settlement, Jacob Hill House, Lenox Hill Settlement, Harlem House and many, many others.

A song writer named Pano made a mistake the other night when he broadcast from a local radio station. His wife heard him. They had been separated for 5 years and she wanted back alimony. She located him through his radio talk.

One of the most popular crossword puzzles along Broadway is "Wag" is a three-letter word for something that comes from a tree and buys clothes for a chorus girl? The answer, of course, is "Sap."

Large Attendance Is Expected at Farmer's Meeting

Joseph Greenfield, city market master, is confident that a large crowd of farmers will attend the meeting, Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock in the city hall, when various topics of interest to the sellers of produce on the market will be discussed. Mr. Greenfield is arranging an excellent program of addresses which are sure to be helpful. One of the matters to be taken up will be the problem of disposing of produce which is not sold to shoppers at the curb.

Roller Skating on Pavement Dangerous

Although the city's smooth "black-top" pavement, recently cleared of snow, furnishes a tempting surface for roller skating, the practice is exceedingly dangerous and can not be permitted, Chief of Police John J. Tolan stated emphatically yesterday. "We have had numerous complaints from motorists who have narrowly missed you roller skaters in the streets," the chief said. "We now permit roller skating with us in our efforts to halt the practice."

Robins, "Bobbies" Make Appearance

If the appearance of some of our birds here is a real spring sign, spring is here. There were a half-dozen reports of robins yesterday. A bobolink was observed just south of the city, and one untraced the Press office to say he thought he saw a thrush.

SELECTION OF WOODLOCK TO OPEN NEW ROW

Senate Not Expected to Approve His Appointment to I. C. C.

BY DAVID LAWRENCE Copyright 1924, by the Escanaba Press. Washington, Mar. 25.—President Coolidge has started another fight with the United States Senate the outcome of which will not be known till congress meets again but in many respects the case resembles that of Charles B. Warren, twice rejected for the portfolio of attorney general.

Mr. Coolidge was twice advised by his friends in the senate that Thomas F. Woodlock of New York, could not be confirmed as member of the Interstate Commerce Commission. The president was not shaken in his determination. The nomination did not come to a vote after the March 4th or in the special session of the senate held immediately afterwards but the votes were there to reject it. And if the senate were to meet tomorrow it would reject Mr. Woodlock's name.

Recess Appointment. The making of a recess appointment therefore for Mr. Woodlock has back of it unusual circumstances. First of all recess appointments whose names were rejected by the senate when in session cannot draw pay for work they do unless a special resolution is passed to compensate them. There have been several cases of this kind and congress probably would not hesitate to pay Mr. Woodlock next December even if it did reject his nomination.

Mr. Woodlock is a democrat. The spectacle of the democrats fighting one of their own number will, in the opinion of Mr. Coolidge, give the country an example of partisanship which will not reflect credit on the democrats if they together with the insurgent republicans reject the nomination.

Opposition Sectional. The opposition to Mr. Woodlock as publicly expressed by the democrats is due to the fact that they felt the south should be represented in the particular variety of the commission being filled. The president offered it to two men in the south who declined for private business reasons. Having tried the south and having also read the statute which does not specifically bind Mr. Coolidge to pick a man from the south, the president went ahead with the appointment of Mr. Woodlock.

There are other things besides southern representation involved in the controversy. Mr. Woodlock has been a financial writer in New York and has spent a good deal of time in Wall Street. The democrats think he will naturally reflect the views of the financial and railroad world rather than the shippers and farmers. They do not openly say this but that will be the reason why the western insurgent republicans will fight.

Mr. Woodlock's confirmation. Authority on Finance. Mr. Woodlock is an authority on railroad finance. His views have been praised by the railroads. The railroads have always felt that the interstate commerce commission should contain at least a few men who understood railroad finance. There are some important financial operations pending. The interstate commerce commission has become the regulator of American railroads and approves some of the security issues made by railroads. All this is taken into consideration in making an appointment. President Coolidge feels that in Mr. Woodlock he has found just the man for the job. It all depends, of course, on the point of view. The democrats who have revived their coalition with the insurgent republicans are getting ready to blame the administration for the condition of agriculture due to high freight rates and the Woodlock case naturally gives them something to talk about. On top of all of this are the sacred rights of the president and the senate with respect to appointments, a subject which affords an outlet for oratory and argument. Woodlock May Be Victim. When congress convenes, it will start about where it left off with a fight over the rights of the senate. Mr. Woodlock may be the innocent victim of another war between the executive and the legislative branches of the government. Mr. Coolidge has suffered two defeats on this score but still feels he is right. Maybe by next December there will be more important issues overshadowing this one. Anyhow Mr.

Woodlock enters the duties of his job with a full realization of the fact that he may lose it but at the persuasion of the president has accepted the post. A successful fisherman of Leicester, England, uses a bait of paste mixed with beer instead of water.

MICHIGAN MISREPRESENTED.

Ninety per cent of the people of Michigan are prepared to admit that this state was never more thoroughly misrepresented in the United States senate than at the present time. Michigan's senators, Couzens and Ferris, have succeeded in reducing the prestige formerly held by this state in the upper house of congress by several hundred per cent. It will be freely admitted that Woodbridge N. Ferris made for Michigan a good governor, but as a United States senator he has failed miserably to measure up to the standard. Senator Couzens has eminently qualified as a willful, self-centered egotist, who succeeded in elevating himself to a high place merely because he happened to possess money.

Neither of Michigan's senators have even pretended to represent in the senate the wishes of Michigan's people. There has been a consistently contrary course that has won for Michigan anything but an enviable place in the councils of the nation. And it's two long years before we can even begin to clean house.

JUST BY WAY OF COMPARISON

Without in any way attempting to detract from the splendid governmental record established by the city of Marquette, under a straight commission form of government, it is interesting to note that while Marquette has been paying off that city bonded debt at a rate of a little better than $30,000 a year, over a period of ten years, Escanaba, under a council manager government, has been paying off this city's bonded debt at the rate of approximately $45,000 a year, over a period of three years. And if present plans are not disturbed Escanaba's rate of bonded debt reduction can be materially increased in future years.

In addition Escanaba has found it possible to reduce the city tax rate for the past years, while the city of Marquette has found it necessary to slightly increase the rate for that city in the past two years. The city of Marquette has served as an outstanding example of the benefits derived from a straight commission government over the old aldermanic governmental form, but it will also be held that Escanaba's example is equally as eloquent with proof of the benefits derived from a council manager government.

LET JOHN DO IT.

Recent checkups of the news printed in a representative group of metropolitan papers show that a little less than eighteen percent of the news space was devoted to stories about crimes, courts and the police. These figures should be illuminating and depressing to the censorship advocates who have been shouting that newspapers print nothing but crime stuff.

More than four-fifths of the news in these papers was material to which even the most rabid purifiers could offer no objection. And the critics are not by any means in the majority when they object to the other one-fifth.

Old John Q. Public has been censoring American newspapers for a long, long time. He buys what he likes and he reads what pleases him. Newspapers are made to sell. If they don't sell, their makers limp into the bankrupt courts.

If John can't be trusted to handle the job, he can't be trusted anywhere, representative government has been a failure and the king business is due for a revival.

On the other hand, if John may be depended upon to continue exercising his likes and dislikes, the censorship advocates are wasting their time and energy.

You can lead John to the public library but you can't make him drink Horatio Alger, Jr. and the Elsie books.

Well, glory be! The prosecuting attorney at Iron Mountain went out and found some nineteen or twenty-nine booze joints in his home town, without the aid of federal officers. Wonders will never cease.

Wayne county staged an unsuccessful attempt in the house at Lansing on Wednesday to reduce the amount of the primary school fund distributed under the Bohn bill, from five to three per cent. Two years from now, when school officers from fifty-two counties in the state will be down there fighting to raise the ante to ten or twelve per cent, Wayne county will wage her battle just as unsuccessfully as she did this week.

One doesn't like to be a kill joy, but it might be well for amateur gardeners to remember that the month of March is still with us.

Gerald Chapman has been described, by some writers, as "a modern Jesse James." Isn't that rather unjust to Jesse?

Americans will spend $450,000,000 in 1925 for radio sets, according to a recent survey. Electric light companies of the nation will have a prosperous year.

France wants the United States marines moved out of Haiti. So do the Haitians, so do the marines and France just about makes it unanimous.

When the papers say a New York clubman is worth a million dollars, they may mean only that he has that much.

"A Smothering Angel"

BY JANE PHELPS.

A CALIFORNIA BUNGALOW Chapter I.V. It was too late to call Lucile, to see Dorothy that night. But the first thing in the morning Reed telephoned her, asked if Dorothy were with her. "She will be in an hour," Lucile told him. She had been taken into Mrs. Drayton's confidence regarding Margaret and thought it unwise to let Reed know the hotel at which they were stopping. Lucile called Dorothy at once, told her she had heard from Reed, and that she had promised he could see her in an hour. "Dorothy!" Reed said, standing just inside the door of the library as he had when Lucile had managed their first meeting. "No, don't come to me - not yet. Not until I have confessed. Then you shall decide." In spite of Dorothy's objections, Reed told his story from the time she had left him, blaming her not at all, glossing over nothing he had done. He told her of Margaret, of her wonderful help, of how their friendship had ripened under their close companionship. He blamed himself entirely, exonerating Margaret. When he had finished Reed said: "Can you forgive me, Dorothy? Margaret has left, gone away. I think we had been growing apart for some time, that we worried each other. Can you forgive me, dear? Come back to me, let me prove my repentance!" "If you can forgive me, Reed, it has been my fault - all that has happened. I don't blame you - I can't blame Margaret either. Dorothy whispered from the shelter of his arms. "I've a surprise for you, dear," Dorothy said after they had talked a while longer and were more gether, that Dorothy had faithfully kept her promise. Mrs. Drayton had extracts from Dorothy's letters to her, always what she said about Reed Junior. Pictures of the boy were in every room, and often as Margaret looked at them she thought of how the baby fingers had unlocked the door of her success; had led her to be strong enough to try to right the wrong she was doing. Hunt Radcliffe, a young business man of Los Angeles, had fallen in love with Margaret, but for a long time she had repulsed him. Then she told her story. Only to have Radcliffe insist that they were soon to be married. A bungalow was now being built with a big studio for Margaret, a suite of rooms for Mrs. Drayton who had promised to divide her time between Dorothy and Margaret. Dorothy had become to Reed all he could desire. At times he scolded her for effacing herself too effectually. His writing had gained in strength, in power, and he would say laughingly: "I have to do twice as well. I have two to work for now instead of one." The time would come when Reed would have to know the truth, know that Dorothy had seen Margaret - what Margaret had demanded as the price of his release. But when it came time would have healed all feeling of embarrassment with them all. So we leave them, each working out their own destinies on a better, a brighter plane than in the earlier years before sad experience showed them the way.

THE END

Police Organize A Country Club Los Angeles - A country club composed entirely of members of the Los Angeles police department was organized recently. The Oakhurst Mountain Club, as it is named, is located in the

David Belasco Dean of American Theatrical Producers

Such popularity must be deserved. AMONG the many factors contributing to Mr. Belasco's success is his knack of anticipating changes in popular taste. And this knack is just as important in other fields. For example, Chesterfield was first made in anticipation of a change in cigarette taste.

TOM SIMS SAYS

Walking the golf links is better than walking the floor. It's hard to tell what's in a man. In New York they found 14 pins and a few needles in one. And in Charleston, S. C., they found booze in the cemetery, which, since it was bootleg, was where it belonged. Thirty youngsters with whooping cough were given a party in Fairmount, W. Va., none eligible unless they gave a whoop. South America is showing progress. Chile has just deported five former government officials. They are discussing another cut in the income tax, which if passed, will probably be accepted without a word. While very few women make their way there are very few who do not have their way. One of these optimists tells us we must be up and doing, or we are liable to be down and done. Why don't some of these chronic uplifters get jobs as elevator boys and be quiet for a while? Modern girls may not get red when they kiss, but the men do. A woman tells us her husband won't buy a washing machine because he thinks he married one. Isn't it too bad the road hogs are protected during hog-killing time? Oysters are famed for their silence. And you seldom see one in the soup. If, as fashion says, she tops are lower, then bottoms are higher. Our income tax argument is, we certainly are glad they don't tax us on what we think we are worth. You can't tell if money makes fools or if fools make money.

AMUSEMENTS

AT THE DEIFT. The Beach-Jones Stock Company will be seen tonight in "Little Old New York," the feature play of the organization's week's engagement here. The scenery, effects and costumes are featured. The story is laid in New York City a century ago, on the eve of the Civil War. The first member of the prize fight scene with M. T. Jones and Guy Beach as the pugilists is said to be one of the highlights. Miss Elvada Sitzer is "Pat O'Day," played in the pictures by Marian Davies. AT THE STRAND. "Classmates," Richard Barthelmess' new First National picture, which will be shown today at the Strand theatre, has a cast of typical Barthelmess excellence. Unlike many motion picture stars, Barthelmess believes in surrounding himself with able players. For "Classmates" he selected Madge Evans, who was the first child star of the movies. For five years she starred with the old World Film Company. Then she retired from pictures to go to school. Now, at fifteen, she is back on the silver sheet. One of the important roles of "Classmates" is played by Charlotte Walker, who has starred on both the stage and the screen. Among her greatest football successes were "The Warrens of Virginia" and "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine." Other distinguished members of the picture's cast are Reginald Sheffield, a Young English actor; Beach Cooke, who has scored a number of stage hits with Leo Ditricheer and other stars of the speaking theatre; James Bradbury, Jr., Herbert Corbell, comedian; Claude, Brooke, Antrim Short and Richard Hallan. The entire student corps of West Point appears in "Classmates."

HONTULA MAY NOT RECOVER

Woodsman Who Was Beaten on Head with Club in Bad Condition

Arvid Hontula, 32 of Hants Spur is in a very serious condition at St. Francis hospital, from wounds he received about two weeks ago when Frank Pola, a fellow woodsman, beat him with a heavy birch club. Hontula has not spoken since he was brought to St. Francis. For a few days he was able to walk around a bit, but his mind was a blank and he has never recovered his mental faculties. Early in this week he began to utter high-toned utterances, and for the last few days his condition has been critical. The fight between Pola and Hontula occurred in a lumber camp near Hants Spur. The men had been drinking heavily. Pola's jaw was broken, it is alleged, before he
