SUMMERALL ON WITNESS STAND

Veteran Army Officer Refutes Charges by Mitchell.

Washington, Dec. 14—(AP)—Major Gen. Charles P. Summerall, senior officer in the army active service, defended today before the Mitchell court-martial his record as former commanding general of the Hawaiian department and the part he took last summer as commander of the second corps area, in directing the anti-aircraft tests at Fort Tilden, N. Y., and the night searchlight demonstrations at Camp Dix, N. J.

Realized Dangers. Realizing the danger of night aviation flying, he testified he had personally ordered that the planes with sufficient distance between them to guard against any possibility of collision. He added that Capt. Dix had been selected for the tests by air officers. Through the Tilden and Dix tests, he declared, the recommendations of officers were followed by him and they had expressed complete satisfaction with the arrangements at the time.

The general plainly welcomed the opportunity to appear in his own defense before the tribunal which he convened as its first president, a post he voluntarily relinquished after Rep. Frank R. Reid of Illinois, chief defense counsel, had attacked his personal record.

Major McNair Testifies. General Summerall was preceded in the stand by Major Lester J. McNair, former Hawaiian department staff officer, who testified that in service war planes for the Hawaiian defense did not exist when Colonel Mitchell inspected the islands in 1923, and reported that no such planes were in existence. undertaken to pass upon the business or financial merit of any loan as to loans to German states and municipalities, he said "it was believed" these might not be favored by the German government and might raise the question of transfer of funds sufficient to pay the principal or interest on such loans. American bankers, he added, should consider "to what extent state and municipal loans could be made since the Reichsbank was transferred with the consent of the transfer committee." He said the bankers had been advised by should consider "whether such loans were for productive purposes which would aid in procuring funds for transfer."

Explains "Red" Exclusion. The war-time act restricting loans is still in effect under a proposal of the diplomatic and counter-appropriation bill of 1921, the secretary pointed out, but added that the "most important statute" the point was the exclusion bill of 1918 as amended in 1920, which set down lengthy definitions of persons to be excluded as undesirable as those who taught, advocated, or in writing believed in, otherwise supported, or withdrew from the United States government or of all government or forms of law. The speaker read the complete sections of the act and said they made it clear to exclude all persons falling under it.

KNUTE RETURNS TO NOTRE DAME

Rockne Says He'll Stay if College Will Allow Him.

South Bend, Ind., Dec. 14—(AP)—Knute K. Rockne, Notre Dame mentor, was safe within his own hall tonight. Back from New York, the self-styled Indiana "country boy" smilingly "guessed" he still ruled as gridiron mentor of the South Bend team.

Rockne had nothing further to say regarding the New York furor occasioned by the premature announcement from Columbia university Friday that it had signed him. Rev. Fr. George Finnegan, vice president and chairman of the board of athletic control at Notre Dame, said the school had nothing to say. Rev. Fr. Matthew Walsh, president, is in Chicago.

Rockne slipped quietly into South Bend this afternoon. No welcoming demonstration greeted the "country boy" who admittedly escaped the wiles of a "city slicker." It is understood that the college authorities here view the incident as closed. Their stand is that Rockne is under contract with Notre Dame and there is no thought of their parting with the coach. Rockne intimated tonight that he will continue as Notre Dame coach unless the Notre Dame authorities drop him.

Rockne will remain here for several weeks and then will go on a vacation of several months, probably with Jess Harper, whom Rockne succeeded as coach here, on the latter's Kansas ranch.

The conference will spend most of its time on land armament and the problem of industrial control of raw materials used in economic warfare. These questions are vitally related to American industry and the American government is anxious to be sitting at the control table with equal voice with the rest of the powers rather than to attend as an unofficial bystander without the right to vote. If the president makes a strong plea for authorization to send a mission he will get it but not without considerable debate which may mean no action until the spring.

DEMOS START TARIFF FIGHT

House Resolution Urges Downward Revision of Present Rates.

Washington, Dec. 14—(AP)—Democrats opened their fight against the tariff today with the introduction of a resolution by Representative Hull of Tennessee, former chairman of the Democratic national committee, proposing downward revision of the present tariff rates.

Mr. Hull and Representative Oldfield of Arkansas, chairman of the Democratic congressional committee, plan to follow this with bills proposing detailed changes in the various rates.

The resolution asked congress to endorse a policy of reduction in tariff rates and proposed establishment of a permanent international trade congress to hear commercial controversies and to formulate treaty agreements affecting commerce.

The tariff fight has little promise now of getting beyond the debate stage. President Coolidge has declared against any revision of the act at this session and Chairman Green of the ways and means committee, in charge of such legislation, also has served notice he is against change in the present act until it can be gone over completely.

Necessary, Say, Hull. Mr. Hull, on the other hand, said in a statement: "Tariff revision now is not only justifiable, but absolutely necessary if the United States is to maintain a sound, rather than a growing artificial economic structure and if it is to maintain an increasing and healthy foreign trade so as to avoid stagnation in many domestic industries on account of over-production capacity."

The proposed international trade agreement organization would in no sense question or affect the right of a nation to determine whether it desired to maintain high or low tariffs, but is intended to bring about the removal by mutual consent of the many hurtful and unfair discriminations, impediments, restrictions and other barriers in an international trade, finance and commerce and the resulting promotion of fair, equal and friendly relations among commercial nations.

ology of the book of Mormon." Try to Translate. After telling of the finds, the first of which was unearthed, according to the article, on September 13, 1924, and reproducing the Latin inscriptions, the article gives "suggested translation of the inscriptions."

One of these reads: "Benjamin governed the people. To Seine Roma they came of the Gauls, the bravest... Benjamin... imparted of religion to the multitude is slain by Thebans. This I heard 500 years afterwards—after the mountain."

Inscription on another cross bears the date "A. D. 886" and refers to a battle within a walled city, and makes reference to Israel and Jacobus, while the inscription on the third cross begins with the date "A. D. 895" and continues: "Land unknown. O that I could succeed in my attempts to serve the king." Reference is made to war and the inscription concludes "God has disposed of everything."

It is the dates and the references to Benjamin and Jacobus that Spalding considers as exceedingly significant and having a significant bearing upon the Mormon claim that descendants of the Lamanites crossed to the American continent. Mention is made to the discovery in Mexico some ninety miles below Tucson of relics similar to those found near Tucson.

RETURN MORTON TO OHIO PRISON

states for bank robbery and automobile stealing, was splited out of the "bull pen" at police headquarters here this morning 15 minutes after Judge Thomas M. Coffey, of recorder's court, had granted an adjournment of his case until December 29. He was awaiting trial on a charge of participating in the robbery of a Commonwealth Federal Savings bank branch here in September, 1919.

The decision tosharry Morton out of the state followed conversations between Gov. V. D. Hoffman of Ohio and Gov. Alex J. Groesbeck of Michigan, and the receipt of a letter by Prosecutor Robert M. Toms, from Governor Donahay asking the return of Morton to complete a sentence in the Ohio state penitentiary.

Wouldn't Plead Guilty. Morton was released to the Wayne county (Detroit) authorities on the condition he plead guilty to the charges against him here. But Morton demanded trial and since his arrival here, following frequent adjournments of his case, To Governor Donahay's argument that Morton had violated the terms of his conditional release by pleading not guilty Mr. Toms agreed and authorized Morton's release to the state troops.

He was rushed away in a high-powered automobile accompanied by three troopers and W. M. Clinker, a parole officer from Columbus. Mr. Toms explained that the state had a weak case against Morton—with but one witness against the robber and inasmuch as he (Morton) would resist extradition and thus prolong the case still further, considered the secret "kidnaping" the best way out of it.

Morton was convicted in Cleveland in January, 1923, of participating in a $65,000 bank holdup and sentenced to 15 years. Governor Groesbeck offered to send a second car with Morton today as an extra precaution against an attempted release, but the offer was refused by state police. The fact Governor Groesbeck did not issue a warrant of rendition is admitted by Morton's attorney as tying his hands in any attempt he might wish to make in securing a writ of habeas corpus for Morton.

Veteran's Hospital Explosion Probed

Los Angeles, Cal., Dec. 14—(AP)—While a line of men guarded the grounds of the United States Veterans hospital, four miles north of San Francisco, near here, department of justice agents investigated a mysterious explosion which partly wrecked a new $75,000 two-story building and injured three workmen today.

Details obtained by the investigators are being withheld temporarily. It is not even being announced in what part of the building the explosion occurred. The blast shattered the entire structure. The two most seriously injured were found in the basement and they were burned, as if by some scalding liquid. The investigation is being conducted in such secrecy that even the aid of the police and the sheriff's office has been declined.

The building was to have been occupied about January 1.

PINCHOT CALLS MAYORS PARLEY

Pennsylvania Legislature Also to Meet on January 13.

Harrisburgh, Pa., Dec. 14—(AP)—Efforts of Governor Pinchot to bring about a settlement of the anthracite mining controversy took a new turn today when he called upon the executives of cities and villages in the mining region to meet him publicly here Wednesday.

The governor sent telegrams to the mayors and burgesses of more than seventy communities, telling them he wished to consult with them "as the representatives of the people."

The executive's last move followed within a few hours his call for an extra session of the state legislature on January 13, at which one of the subjects which he listed for consideration will be regulation and control of the industry, both by a state agency and by formation of interstate compacts. He indicated his intention of asking the legislature to declare hard coal mining a public utility, making it as such, subject to control by the public service commission.

One purpose of the meeting next Wednesday was understood to be a desire on the governor's part to ascertain sentiment of the mining communities towards these obligations as well as on the general effect of suspension and the governor's previous proposals for settling the differences between operators and miners. Mr. Pinchot made no statement as to his plans for the meeting other than to say it would be open to the public.

CO-EDS CATCH TYPHOID GERM

State College Girls Ill After Dinner at Eaton Rapids.

Lansing, Dec. 14—(AP)—Eight Michigan State college co-eds, two Lansing women and several Eaton Rapids residents are believed to have contracted typhoid fever as the result of a church dinner served in Eaton Rapids, November 18, Dr. R. M. Olin, state health commissioner, announced today.

The co-eds were members of a party of 70 girl students who went to the neighboring village for the affair. There is no cause for alarm, he stated, as examinations have revealed that there is little likelihood of a further outbreak. No quarantine will be ordered at the college. All of the cases have been traced more or less directly to the Eaton Rapids dinner.

Three representatives of the state health department are investigating in an effort to determine the cause of the outbreak. The Eaton Rapids water supply is said to be good. According to Dr. Olin a typhoid carrying person or contaminated food may have been responsible. All of the co-eds who were exposed will be examined again before they are permitted to go home for the holidays, as an extra precaution. Dr. Olin stated.

FRAUDS IN TAX CASES SHOWED

Washington, Dec. 14—(AP)—The tax cases of the Kerr Navigation company, New York; the estate of former Vice President Charles W. Fairbanks; William Randolph Hearst, publisher; the General Motors company and the W. G. Skelly company, an oil concern of Tulsa, Okla., are among those reviewed in another volume of testimony made public today through the senate investigating committee.

In presenting the Kerr case, L. C. Manson, counsel for the committee, declared there was evidence "in this record of considerable fraud and many attempts to defraud the government." He recited that H. F. Kerr and A. E. Klegg, British citizens, had organized companies to take over interned German ships and that in selling their holdings to the Harriman Steamship interests an effort was made to escape American government taxes.

Manson's statement, based on a report by George G. Box, chief auditor for the committee, was that first Kerr and Klegg proposed that they be paid cash for the ships in London, and that when the Harriman interests refused, arrangements were made to have cash payment made at the Chase National bank in New York City. This was agreed to, but internal revenue agents were informed in advance and seized $5,000,000 of the money to protect the government. After this a claim in abatement was filed covering the taxes for the years 1917, 1918 and 1919 and a re-audit of the case was ordered. This showed a tax due of $1,381,530, which, according to Manson and Box, was compromised for $900,000 on recommendation of the solicitor, approved by Deputy Commissioner Bright of the internal revenue bureau.

At present there are approximately 50 labor colleges in the United States.

U. S. RECEIVES LEAGUE LETTER

Invitation to Participate in Arms Parley.

Washington, Dec. 14—(AP)—The invitation from the League of Nations for American participation in the preliminaries for an international conference of limitation of armaments was received by the state department late today by cable from Minister Gibson at Berne.

With Secretary Kellogg in New York, officials declined to give out any information as to its contents, or even as to its length. It could not be determined, therefore how the invitation might fall in with the statements of President Coolidge in his recent message to congress, to the effect that the Washington government was not averse to entering into conferences for the discussion of such questions, provided there was hope that effective agreements would result.

Inclusion of other governments than those which are members of the league in the scope of the invitation, may, however, remove objection to American acceptance, the policy of the government having made it possible to participate in international conferences, which, though initiated by the league, included non-league members, such as the opium conference and that for control of the traffic in arms.

Suggests Means of Combatting Foreign Rubber Monopolists

Washington, Dec. 14—(AP)—Measures of economic retaliation which the United States might adopt toward foreign monopolists of raw materials were described today in a letter to Senator Capper, Republican, Kansas, by Secretary Hoover.

Submitting with the description an estimate that rubber producers alone were taking from American consumers this year $660,000,000 more than a fair price for that commodity, the secretary said the nation faced similar exactions in the case of coffee and several other commodities and had now to consider how to "defend ourselves against trade war being made upon us."

Police received a tip that a negro had been seen in Napoleon, and after scouring the village, found the man on the road on his way back to Jackson.

Calmly, Journey made a statement of the entire affair at police headquarters, blaming his wife for keeping company with other men. Angered, he obtained a revolver, threatening to "kill them all" and went to the home.

HEAVY BUYING OF RAIL STOCK

STOCK SALES AVERAGES

Table with columns for Date, Industrials, and Railroads, showing sales averages for various periods.

New York, Dec. 14.—(AP)—Heavy buying of the railroad shares featured the resumption of the upward movement of prices in today's stock market.

Renewal of selling pressure against French francs forced them down several points to another new low record for the year.

Persistent accumulation of the railroad shares apparently has been on reports of large current earnings, prospects of favorable dividend developments by some of the larger systems and expectations of construction merger legislation by congress.

The average of 20 leading railroad shares, compiled by The Associated Press, touched a record high level at 115.18, as compared with a low of 96.13 earlier in the year.

United States Steel common showed a small fractional gain at 135 1/2, but some of the independents developed outstanding strength.

American Can, which is expected to split up its common stock in the near future, jumped five points to a new record top at 263 1/2.

Other outstanding industrial strong spots were American Linseed common and preferred, Anaconda Copper, Davison Chemical, Foundation Company, General Electric Marine preferred, Murray Body, Savage Arms, United Fruit and Western Union, all up two to six points.

Call money advanced at five per cent and then advanced to 5 1/2, closing at the top. The higher rate presumably reflected the increased demand for funds in connection with income tax payments and heavy government financing tomorrow.

Sex Charms Proves Handicap as Well as Business Asset. BY CYNTHIA GREY. What troubles women in adjusting themselves to what we call vaguely the commercial world, is that it requires them to make psychological changes as well as learn shorthand or learn business rules.

They have not been those conspicuous for the charitable deeds or good work in the community. They have been the ones who received the admiring glances and the favors from the men, conspicuous in community life.

A woman can be as brilliant and clever as she wants to be, she can write or paint or express herself in any art, so long as she isn't too attractive to men. She can go her way unmolested, and become as famous as she likes. Other women will not envy her achievements, or try to take her success.

But let a woman be brilliant and clever and have also a perfect profile and have a come-hither expression in her eyes, so she represents competition in the good old sex game, and she is an entirely different proposition.

There is scarcely a woman who would not rather feel she held a job because she was attractive and people flied her, including her boss, than to feel she held it because she actually was just as good in it as a man.

The girl in an office who are envied are not the ones who do their work superlatively well, unless they are also very attractive and win on their sex as well as their skill. The one to whom the boss says, "Miss Smith, this is a particularly hard matter to adjust and I am going to ask you to attend to it for me," is not nearly so much of a thorn in the side of her sister as the one to whom the boss says, "Miss Jones, you look tired today, you'd better take the afternoon off and rest up."

Women don't resent the tribute to a woman's ability nearly so much as the little personal interest of noting that she is tired, that she seems to have circles under her eyes, and his masculine desire to protect comes to the front so that he offers her a holiday.

And because most women will always value recognition to their charm as women far above any tribute to their intelligence or their brains, most of them will stay where men put them rather than where they may be entitled to get.

By this, I don't mean that every woman wants her employer to fall in love with her, or that the recognition of which I speak, is anything more than casual and incidental. It has nothing to do with the deeper emotions or the heavy sex stuff that fills the pages of our modern magazines. It's elusive, like the well-known feminine intuition, and much harder to get rid of or work against.

Collier's Announces Grantland Rice's All-American Eleven

STARS OF 1889 ARE RECALLED

Five Members of First "All-America" Still Famous.

"How far as intercollegiate football advanced?" asks Davis J. Walsh, the well-known sport writer and critic.

"Yet—how many of the present day stars, barring Grange, will be remembered thirty-six years hence? One might be able to write the answer with a clothespin on the nail of one's thumb."

"The writer will quote the first all-American football team, picked in 1889, and let you draw your own conclusions:

Ends, Cumnock, Harvard, and Stag Yale; tackles, Cowan, Princeton, and Gill, Yale; guards, George, Princeton, and Heffelfinger, Yale; center, George, Princeton; quarterback, Poe, Princeton; halfbacks, Lee, Harvard, and Channing, Princeton; fullback, Ames, Princeton.

Five Still Known. Eleven names and five of them still are as green as the depths of an emerald.

"Pudge" Heffelfinger, with the notable exception of Truxton Hare, of Pennsylvania, has been declared to be the greatest guard of all time.

"They still talk of Cowan as a tackle down at Princeton and on the fact that A. Alonzo Stag is and has been for many years a famous coach, has caused many fans to overlook the fact that he was a wonderful end at Yale, in addition to being a great baseball player."

"Then, there is the immortal "Snake" Ames of Princeton. When they start to talk of great backs, they usually begin with "Snake" and work on down the line.

Conditions Changed. It will be noted, however, that conditions have improved in this important particular: Whereas, six Princeton men, three Yale men, two from Harvard and none from elsewhere composed the 1889 team, the first eleven for 1925 probably will represent exactly eleven colleges, with an excellent chance of the Big Three being unrepresented.

They were the Big Three in 1889 because the rest of the country hadn't yet found out what it was all about. Now, the Big Three are no better—and often are worse—than anybody else. And this is quite as it should be."

Advancing the ball is the main thing in collegiate football, whereas an advance from the paymaster is the Big Idea in the professional game.

Perhaps it would not be necessary to make the golf ball bigger if the boys in the locker room made the highball smaller.

COSTERBAAN MICH.-END CHASE PITTSBURG-TACKLE HESS OHIO STATE-GUARD McMILLAN PRINCETON CENTER DIEHL DARTMOUTH-GUARD WEIR NEBRASKA-TACKLE THAYER PENN-END

THE twenty-seventh Collier's All-American football team and review of the football season appears in the current issue of Collier's Weekly on the news-stands today.

Grantland Rice, well-known sports authority, makes the selections. He succeeds Walter Camp as Collier's football expert.

An army of expert collaborators, making observations on grid-irons in all sections of the country, assisted Mr. Rice in providing the information on which the 1925 selections are based.

These collaborators included leading coaches, prominent sports writers and many of the leading officials of the game.

In his statement of the process of selection, Mr. Rice declares that the choice was determined by the majority opinion of a large group of the leading coaches, officials and football writers.

Nine colleges are represented on Mr. Rice's team. McMillan of Princeton is the only member of the "Big Three" to place. Dartmouth is the only squad with more than one representative.

Five eastern players, four western players and two from the coast comprise Rice's team. The south is overlooked. That section offered Flounroy, Tulane's great halfback, as a strong possibility.

Grange of Illinois is selected for quarterback, which places him in the famous class as one of the few football players to be selected for three successive years on Collier's All-America.

Weir, Nebraska's great tackle, is the only other player to repeat. He was named as one of the tackles last year by the late Walter Camp.

FACULTY "SIX" TRIM BAPTISTS

Cop Six Straight Volleyball Games from Baraca Class Team.

Hugo Swanson's sextette of faculty volleyball players swept the team, flying the colors of the Baraca Sunday school class of the First Baptist church, on their first night and took six straight games from their more youthful opponents.

As one member of the faculty crew said after the game: "It was just like taking candy from a baby. We were ashamed to do it but we had to defend our honor."

The lineup of the faculty crew contains such well-known stars as Cheney, Soderberg, Edick, Stahly and Nichols in addition to Swanson. Among the substitutes who were ready for a call if one of the regulars should falter are Nordling, Roells, Lyle and R. C. Shaw and Loveland. It was not, however, necessary for any substitutions to be made during last night's game which was played at the high school gymnasium.

The two Bowers brothers, Dayton and Russell, played the flank positions for the Baragans. On the inside were Holt, Booth, Embs and Walker. The Baptists late last night conceded a victory to the faculty—six but claimed that they were forced to play under a handicap, insofar as they did not have sufficient substitutes to replace the whole team at the critical moments.

The faculty volunteers, confident after their overwhelming victory, last night issued a challenge to any amateur or professional team in the country to meet them at any time any where. Negotiations can be carried on with Hugo Swanson at the high school.

Columbia Newspaper Comments on Rockne Football Contract

New York, Dec. 14.—(AP)—Assessing that "harm has been done for which no amount of investigation and explanatory statements can atone." The Spectator, student daily newspaper at Columbia University, expressed editorially today the attitude of the undergraduates toward the situation arising from the announcement that Knute Rockne would be Columbia's football coach and its subsequent denial by the Notre Dame mentor.

The Spectator scored the "apparently free rein in dealings carried on by one representative of the university, or rather of that very small group charged with the direction of a certain extra-curricular activity of university students."

"That a bit of sharp desecration has been indulged in," and that "Mr. Rockne, too, was the victim of deception" are other comments made upon the situation by the paper.

PHANTOM'S SUB GIVES VIEW OF GRANGE TRIALS

Johnny (How) Bryan, who has been substituting for Red Grange in the Chicago Bears' lineup, recently wrote to a friend in his home town—Milwaukee—a most interesting letter about the Whistler team. It gives a new and correct slant on the Illinois flanker.

Bryan's letter said, in part: "There have been so many adverse statements made over the press the last couple days about Red Grange, that I thought that you might be interested in knowing the truth regarding his position."

"I think that Red Grange is perhaps the greatest football player in America. However, he isn't a super-man and is not immune to injuries or fatigue. Last night on the sleepers, the day after day playing against seasoned and fresh players has made Red pretty weary. I think that he undertook too large an assignment."

"In every game so far with the exception of the Boston game, Red has been superb. A player singled out by the opposition on every play with the intention of stopping him and 'getting' him, Red has done more than any man I know of. In the Boston game we were never in a position to run the ball while Red was in the game. Due to lucky punts and musical comedy officiating. Even so, Red stayed in the game in an attempt to give the fickle public their money's worth, although his left arm hung helplessly at his side from an injury early in the game.

"A seasoned political campaigner would crack under the strain that Red Grange has so far borne up under. At every turn there are cameras and reporters to be reckoned with, and throngs to satisfy."

"Unless he eats in his room he has to set up a hundred times to shake hands. Girls beg him for autographs, pictures, and even kisses."

"Red is weary of all the publicity. After all, he is a football player, not a three-ring circus."

"I feel that the biggest assignment that I could undertake was when I contracted to substitute for Red Grange, the greatest player in America today."

THE IMMORTAL WHITE

Princeton has had its Poes, DeWitts, Bakers and other grid-iron greats whose sterling deeds on the field of battle will forever hold a high spot in Old Nassau's athletic history.

All were names to conjure with in the realm of competition. But regardless of the esteem in which they were held, it is doubtful if any holds a loftier place in Tiger memory than does the immortal Sam White.

White gained everlasting fame and glory back in 1911. He whipped both Harvard and Yale virtually single-handed that season, scooping up loose balls and turning them into winning touchdowns.

In the tilt with the Crimson, Princeton had found the going pretty tough. In fact, Harvard appeared well on its way to a score when it succeeded in working down the ball close to the tiger goal. But at this juncture the Grange and Black braved, forcing Harvard to try for a field goal.

The kick was blocked, however, and White, gathering up the bounding oval, sped 95 yards for the tally that sent the chesty Cambridge eleven to defeat.

Two weeks later White practically duplicated the feat against Yale, picking up a Bulldog fumble and logging it 60 yards for the winning score.

Recovering loose balls to win a pair of games over a span of two weeks is a bit out of the ordinary in gridiron play. That to turn the trick twice in the two biggest games on the schedule is something even more unusual. And that's why Sam White is ranked as one of Princeton's football immortals.

Squad Starts Work for Friday's Game with Schoolcrafts

Coach Roells yesterday afternoon sent his basketball squad through the first of the week's practice sessions, preliminary to the Escanaba High Manistique High game to be played at the Schoolcraft county seat next Friday.

The team is rapidly rounding into condition and should put up a stiff fight.

"Kid" Smith Wins Coliseum Feature

"Kid" Smith defeated Stephen Lyons in the mile feature of the Sunday night racing program at the Coliseum by a margin of 30 feet. His time was 2:27.

In the preliminary races Orvis Beauchamp won from four contestants, skating 2 1/2 miles. Jack Pfister won the turtle race. In an exhibition half-mile, Francis Pauline defeated Ben Mannebach by eight feet.

Treasury's Buying of Bonds Success

Washington, Dec. 14.—(AP)—The treasury's experiment of buying bonds direct from holders for use in the cumulative sinking fund has been highly satisfactory to Secretary Mellon, who announced tonight that subscription of $66,450,000 had been accepted.

The bonds were of the third Liberty Loan and were bought at an average price, including accrued interest of 101 11/32. All offers above 101 1/4, plus accrued interest, were rejected, and all not exceeding that figure were accepted. Total subscriptions to the offering amounted to about $176,000,000. The average cost to the government of the bonds, accepted, inclusive of accrued interest, was approximately 101 6/32. Payment will be made December 2.

MEDICAL MOVIES

Bermondsey, Eng.—Medical movies are being produced here under the guidance of Dr. R. King Brown. These movies present straight-forward picture discussions of medical matters. The "film advice" is entirely scientific and not wrapped up in stories with imaginary characters.

We all know what we would do if we had a million dollars. We would wish it was two million dollars.

For any sport to be popular with the masses it must have some distinct feature that provides a real thrill.

Baseball has many such features. There is the home run with the bases filled, striking out of the star batter with a hit needed to win the game, some spectacular play in the field that saves the day.

More recently the home run has been the outstanding feature of baseball. The punch that Babe Ruth packed simply revolutionized the game.

Getting distance from the tee, a fine recovery from a bad lie or the sinking of a long putt have helped greatly to make golf such a popular pastime.

The knockout is the real thrill in boxing, while a deceptive serve is a big feature of tennis play.

Until the coming of the forward pass, football lacked an outstanding thrill that carried a distinct appeal to player as well as spectator.

Unless a player got away for a long run in the old game, it was merely a succession of line licks, short gains. Usually the spectator had no idea who was really carrying the ball.

Eliminate the end runs or a center through a broken field in running back the kickoff or a punt and football was rather dull. The team with the weight usually carried off the honors.

Then came the forward pass, which made for uncertainty and added a new and hitherto unknown flavor to the game.

The forward pass is without doubt the most destructive weapon in football. It carries a constant threat to the opposition and incidentally there goes with it a certain gamble as far as the team doing the passing is concerned.

There is always the chance that a well-directed forward pass will be intercepted by an opposing player and, since the field is usually well broken up at the time, he invariably makes a good return.

Unquestionably the season of 1925 witnessed the greatest possible use of the forward pass. Never was the air attack worked so effectively.

Michigan and Dartmouth, considered two of the greatest teams of the year, used the pass as their chief weapon, not merely a threat. In Friedman, Michigan boasted the best passer in the west, while Oberlander of Dartmouth was the leader in the east.

To use the language of the teams that opposed Michigan and Dartmouth, these two players literally threw touchdowns. Passes of from 15 to 40 yards were not at all uncommon, occasionally they would get away a pass for half the length of the gridiron.

The forward pass carries a thrill that is new to football. Watch any bunch of kids who are playing football either in a regular game or merely practicing and you will observe that the forward pass play is used as much as all other plays combined.

To those who believe the pass is spoiling the game because it is impossible to develop a defense for it, listen to what Reggie Brown, backfield coach at Brown University, says:

"The pass has not outstripped the defense, statements to the contrary notwithstanding. There has yet been no aerial attack devised that cannot be stopped by a well-coached eleven that has speed and intelligence."

RICE AND A. P. CHOICE SIMILAR

All-American Backfield Identical in Two Selections.

New York, Dec. 14.—(AP)—Collier's Weekly in its current issue announces an All-American football team selected by Grantland Rice. New York sports writer, who succeeds the late Walter Camp as that publication's Authority.

Dartmouth, which obtained three places on the American team selected by the Associated Press, places two of these stars, Diehl and Oberlander, on Collier's eleven. The backfields in these two selections, composed of Grange, George Wilson, Oberlander and Nevers, are identical.

The selections for Collier's were started by Caspar Whitney, now a resident of Irvington-on-Hudson, New York, and continued by Mr. Camp until his death this year.

The makeup of the 1925 team follows: Ends: Thayer, Pennsylvania, and Costerbaan, Michigan. Tackles: Chase, Pittsburgh, and Weir, Nebraska. Guards: Hess, Ohio State, and Diehl, Dartmouth. Center: McMillan, Princeton. Quarterback: Grange, Illinois. Halfbacks: Wilson, Washington, and Oberlander, Dartmouth. Fullback: Nevers, Stanford.

JUDGE DAVIS CLUB SPEAKER

Iron Mountain Kiwanians Visit Local Club.

Judge Alvin E. Davis of Marinette, lieutenant governor of the Kiwanis district in which Escanaba is situated, was the principal speaker at yesterday's regular meeting of the local club.

Musical for the occasion was furnished by a four-piece orchestra led by Joseph Stoenfeldt. The musical program consisted of playing on the clarinet by Walter Lipson, and on the saxophone by seven-year-old Harland Lippold. R. H. Fryal, Escanaba's most popular monologist, told some of his best stories, and there was some spirited group singing led by E. A. Linkbard.

Judge Davis' topic was "Kiwanis Health," suggesting standards for measuring the spiritual, the physical, the mental, the moral, the hearing, the taste, vision, lung power, and arteries of the Kiwanians.

John J. Bartolla, president of the Escanaba club, presided. The visitors were officially welcomed by Torvald E. Strom and President Logic of the Dickinson county delegation, responded.

CONGRESS MUST SOLVE MARINE PROBLEM SOON

Question to Come Up At Next Session.

BY CHARLES P. STEWART NEA Service Writer Washington—Why can't the United States make a success of merchant sailing?

Congress undoubtedly will try to find an answer to this question next winter, as a result of President Coolidge's quarrel with the shipping board.

A halfhearted attempt to answer it was made through a house of representatives investigating committee about a year ago. Practically nothing was accomplished and finally the inquiry died a natural death.

America's merchant fleet was a great institution up to 60 or 70 years ago.

It gradually dwindled away, due to the fact that there was a greater field for enterprise in opening up the west than in navigation. Thereby the country ran along for decades, being the British and others to do its ocean carrying, until the war broke out.

The war gave the foreign vessels so much to do for their own governments that they couldn't bother with American business, which suddenly found itself with no means of supplying its shipping requirements.

Of course, Americans began ship building at once, but it takes time to create a merchant fleet.

Nevertheless, by the time the war ended, the fleet was on hand, rather crude affair, for the most part, but capable of steaming from port to port with cargoes and passengers on board.

At this point the nation discovered that it had forgotten how to run ships profitably.

The trick of making merchant shipping pay has not to be overlooked. If the United States is to have what it wants, a profitable and efficient merchant marine.

The government can go on operating the ships at a loss, but this isn't a satisfactory arrangement and private concerns won't like over the job, not and for the bills. So congress has to find out why the government can't take the business and return it to its proper owners.

It isn't in reality, much of a mystery though congress probably will make it so.

For one thing, shipbuilding costs are higher in America than anywhere else in the world. No one can ship be managed with expenses except at much the highest cost, and to any sailors on earth and American shipping laws rarely restrict the employment of foreigners.

Most of America's war-built ships, too, are of clumsy design and poor equipment—unduly expensive run.

Finally, operation of the government's craft, by captains, chief stewards, engineers and their subordinates by no means have been worked by the economies in which private owners insist. In the main has been extremely extravagant.

Neither political party has been very enthusiastic about going to the bottom of mercantile marine affairs. Both parties have been fixed up in them and the impression strongly prevails that anything will be about equally unprofitable for them. However, it will be difficult to avoid, as the situation last has developed itself.

MANY SHOOTING STARS.

Washington—November is the month of shooting stars. Toward the end of the month the stars are noticeable than at any other time. The reason for this display of meteors every November is that during this month the earth, in its journey around the sun, happens to cross the path of a meteor.

Transport animals employed in World War numbered about 2,500 in 1914 and $27,500 in 1915.

Mr. Buechner, manager of the city of Gladstone, gave a most interesting account of the history of municipal government before members of the Escanaba Rotary club at the regular weekly meeting of that organization.

Mr. Buechner described the first grade efforts at municipal government recorded in the days when the Green Empire flourished and traced that activity through the medieval era to modern times, showing the gradual improvement recorded in both the scope of government attempted and its application to the best interests of the people.

ARMY FUND IS NOW $1,522.50

Thorough Canvass Needed if Goal in City Is to Be Reached.

Friends of the Salvation Army, raising funds by popular subscription to finance the organization's work here next year, had deposited $1,522.50 in the bank last night.

Four of the thirty district collectors had made no reports, and all but two or three of those which had been turned over to L. M. Boggs, vice chairman of the campaign committee, were inclosed.

It is known that sufficient funds should have been collected to push the total well over $2,000 and the hope remained that when all the work had been completed the goal of $2,500, announced by the local sponsoring committee of business and professional men in a budget for next year's Army activities here, will be attained.

Among the committeemen who have not reported the results of their solicitations are some who are working in districts which are certain to give the cause substantial support, it was said. One of these will turn in more than $400, Mr. Boggs was advised.

Committeemen who have not completed the canvass of the territory assigned to them are being urged to make a very thorough job," said Mr. Boggs. "If they do that, the goal will be reached. Final figures on the result of the campaign may not be available for several days."

THE TOWN WELL GROUNDED

A considerable portion of the people of Escanaba and a large part of the business interests in the city, particularly in the conservative circles, will hardly agree with either the charge or the assertion, made by Congressman T. M. Judson, at recent meetings of the city council, concerning the attitude of the Northwestern Railway Company toward this city and the rights of the corporation in Escanaba. Congressman Judson, vigorously espousing the cause of a grade crossing over the tracks of the Northwestern Company, at Twentieth street, charged that officials of the company had shown no desire to cooperate with the city administration and asserted that the rights and wishes of the people should not be consulted when the rights and wishes of the people were considered.

In that statement the Press does not believe Mr. Judson expressed the view and the attitude of more than a very small percentage of Escanaba's people. The Press believes that a great majority of people in Escanaba fully appreciate the value of the Northwestern Railway company as an industry in this city, and those who know the facts, fully appreciate the effort that is being made by local Northwestern officials to bring additional work to the company's shops here, to the end that a greater number of men can be continuously employed here. The Press believes that officials of the Northwestern Railway Company have shown a greater disposition to cooperate with the Escanaba administration and Escanaba's people in the past few years than ever before in the history of that company in this city.

The Press believes, and we hold that this belief will be backed by a great majority of Escanaba's people, that officials of the Northwestern road are justified in objecting to a grade crossing at Twentieth street, on the grounds that a crossing at that point, where something like seven tracks are located, would not be in the interests of public good, but, on the contrary, would constitute a public menace. In view of the fact that the state highway department is spending thousands of dollars to eliminate grade crossings and in further view of the ruling made but a week ago by the state administrative board that no more grade crossing can be provided in the state of Michigan for trunk line highways, under any conditions, lends additional strength to the position taken by the Northwestern road here and makes it highly doubtful if Escanaba could force a crossing at Twentieth street, even though a united demand from this city might be presented.

The Press believes that another outlet to and from the north will become more and more necessary with each passing year, but it does not necessarily follow that that additional outlet must be at Twentieth street.

The Press believes that objections made by the railway company, and others interested, to a crossing at Twentieth street, are fully justified under the conditions that exist. Indeed, it is difficult to understand why such a furor of demand for a crossing at Twentieth street should be encouraged, in the face of legitimate objection, when the city already has established the needed crossing but three blocks west of Twentieth street.

Any public necessity that exists for another northern outlet for traffic from the city, can as well be supplied at Twenty-third street, as at Twentieth street.

SHALL WE PARTICIPATE?

The League of Nations has invited the United States and Russia to participate in a meeting to arrange for an international disarmament conference to be held some time during the coming year in Europe. There was some uncertainty in the League council as to whether a formal invitation should be extended to the United States on the theory that it might not wish to be represented at a League meeting, so consideration of the League meeting, but the council finally decided that the direct course was the best and issued the invitation. On the same day, President

Coolidge in his message to congress spoke of the importance of an international conference on land disarmament, while the day before the information had been officially given out at the White house that Mr. Coolidge was sympathetic toward the League of Nations plan, although of the opinion that he could not name a commissioner to sit with the League committee. It is his view that this authority rests with congress alone, so that in the end it will be up to that body to determine whether the United States is to participate in the meeting.

We think it will be gratifying to friends of international peace to know that Mr. Coolidge favors the League project, and stands on no false or small points in determining his attitude. It should be understood that the League's invitation is to take part in the work of a special commission to study the possibility of a program of land disarmament. It would seem that the United States could participate in this work without committing itself to any definite military or diplomatic policy, and in which it could not be bound. If that is the case, the country will be able to see no good reason why we should not participate. The idea of having nothing to do with anything the League of Nations originates is rapidly losing force in the United States. It has already lost it with President Coolidge, and we think it has lost it with a great majority of the American people. Eventually it will disappear altogether as a national question.

We are sure no one will think we're casting vegetables at Uncle Mellie when we say that Henry Ford's musical cup will never run over until he hears Escanaba's "Gas House Trio."

When Joe Turner and Jim Wells have completed their feeding schools in the rural areas, perhaps they might be persuaded to tell some of us where and how we're going to get our Christmas turkeys.

Hiduous crimes are sometimes committed under the cloak of charity. Over in Minneapolis, backers of a "goodfellow" boxing show have matched Fred Fulton and George Godfrey.

Producers of "The Lost World" are guilty of gross discrimination against the Cloverland country. They failed to include camera shots of the most interesting of all rediscovered monsters—the Sidhill Gouger and the Modag.

There is only partial confirmation of the rumor that the full strength of the Rockefeller Foundation will be mustered in an attempt to isolate the germ which is producing the epidemic of All-Americanitis.

"Will you or won't you?" Columbia University officials asked Knute Rockne. Knute's answer was simple and direct: "Yes and no."

One undisputed fact stands out among the tangled contradictions of the anthracite coal strike negotiations. The manufacturers of oil-burners don't care how long the suspension lasts.

ANDREW McDERMOTT, the managing editor, is a former friend of her father, BOB JEFFERIES, police reporter, proves friendly. Barbara attends a newspaper dinner at the Lighthouse Inn, with SINBAD SULLIVAN, a press agent. There she meets JEROME BALL, a man about town. The sound of a shot comes from an inner room in the roadhouse. NORMAN HOLLOWELL, a prominent broker, if found dead in the room. A note is found in his pocket, but Barbara finds a woman's scarf under the table and gets a "coop" on the story. She is sent to interview Mrs. LYDIA rooster's tail, and the coat was less black than the trousers. Bob stood grinning at Barbara. "Aren't you glad to see me, Babs?" he asked. "Cause if you're not, I'll just drive Lizzie back into her stall and spend a quiet evening at home."

Barbara started. "Why, of course, I'm glad to see you, Bob. How silly of you to ask! I'll just run and cancel my call for a taxi."

"I'll follow the butler into the drawing room," Bob called after her, seating himself at the old rosewood piano.

Upstairs, Barbara ran into her room, where Mrs. Hawley was brushing her daughter's evening wrap. "Mother," she cried, "Bob has come to take me and he's wearing a Charley Chaplin dress suit. What shall I do?"

From the living room came the strains of "We Won't Be Home Until Morning," the melody carried with Bob's index finger, and the bass an alteration of chords. "Oh, why doesn't he quit that idiotic dum-dum playing?" exclaimed Barbara, flinging herself into a chair. "You must get hold of your nerves, Babs. He isn't doing any harm. You're ready to fly off at any trifle, that's all."

Barbara started. "Why, of course, I'm glad to see you, Bob. How silly of you to ask! I'll just run and cancel my call for a taxi."

Barbara did not reply. Bob was trying hard to be companionable. "They say this Lydia Stacy is a mistress of the gentle art of fascination. Been a widow for a year now. Husband very wealthy and indulgent—so much so that he died and left Lydia all his money, just as she was beginning to get tired of him. Sinbad says her latest quarry is a young architect here—poor but proud young chap and all that. Seems to me he's connected with the Vale Acres crowd."

Barbara was watching the through eagerly, scarcely listening to Bob's words. "I say, Babs," he reproached, "you certainly are giving me the cold and icy tonight. What's the idea?"

Barbara was handed along. She had had her moment. Lydia turned to the next guest. Barbara found her hand in Bruce's. He was silent, and his eyes were grave. She looked up at him through a mist of tears. "Hustle along there, Babs," said a voice at her shoulder. "We're holding up traffic. You can do that Theda Bara stare somewhere else." His voice, intended to be confidential, carried plainly. Bruce stepped back quickly.

LYRICS OF LIFE

By Douglas Malloch MY WEALTH. When people ask me what my worth I'm glad to tell them I am truly One of the richest folks on earth; At that, I do not boast unduly; And neither am I scoffing at A wealth of gold, and things like that; I'm talking simply common sense, Of dimes and dollars, pounds and pence. Whatever thousands I possess, If one or five or ten or twenty, The thing that matters most, I guess, Is this: that what I have is plenty. It may be less, it may be more, But this much I am thankful for: I'm satisfied with what I've got, While lots of other folks are not. A man's as wealthy as he thinks; What matters most is what he wishes. I'd just as gladly dine at Pink's As eat off Copley-Plaza dishes. For some the Drake alone will do, The Astor or the Bellevue, But I can eat from off my tray And never let it spill my day.

BAIRD ADVISES PAUL KNUTH TO RESUME DUTIES

An official order received Monday from Lansing has reinstated Paul Knuth of Manistique as an officer of the state conservation department, and Mr. Knuth will resume his duties December 16.

Resume duties December 16, Commission follows. The local man was suspended just before the opening of the deer hunting season, pending an investigation of charges contained in complaints forwarded to the department of conservation from this city.

Acting in the capacity of conservation officer ever since the title was created here, and serving as local game warden previous to that, Mr. Knuth built up what is considered an enviable record in the enforcement of the game and fish laws.

Authorities at Manistique, on hearing of the local man's restoration to duty, expressed satisfaction in referring to his reinstatement and other conservation officers in this territory were very much pleased with the news.

Immediately after receiving the telegram, the local warden issued a statement, thanking his friends in the peninsula for their support, confidence and assistance given in helping him to regain his position.

This re-arrangement is expected to prove more convenient for the counties involved. Alger county will take care of trunk line M-25 from Wetmore to Seney, and trunk line 77 from Seney to Grand Marais. Luce county will have the portion of M-25 from Seney east, also M-98 from their county line to Gernfask.

CITY BRIEFS

Leaving this week, Mrs. Anna Coryell Dayton of Manistique plans to spend a few weeks at Escanaba, and also at Fort Wayne, Ind. She will resume her work in piano instruction the latter part of January.

Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Perry have moved from River street to Oak street, and are now occupying the former J. Davis residence, opposite St. Francis parsonage.

John Leaf, 89, was given a pleasant surprise Saturday night, on the occasion of his birthday anniversary. A number of friends and relatives gathered at his home in Manistique to help celebrate the event.

On either side a spike-tailed, opera-battered secret service man stood at attention. Various signs were held aloft. A crowd gathered.

He looked like a Chinese, but was a perfect imitation of an Englishman in other respects.

A blinding flash! A strong concussion! A smoke-filled hotel lobby! Steve had pulled the trigger.

With a yell, the prince tumbled backward into the elevator and was at the top of the building in the twinkling of an eye.

Early next morning the prince left for the west and caught the first boat for the Orient. No record shows that Steve was officially thanked by the government but his paper raised his pay.

The answer to "Who won the war?" has been discovered at last. And this answer is, "What war?"

DR. A. R. TUCKER HEADS CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

With a paid-up membership of over 60, and a balance of over $160 in the treasury, the Manistique Chamber of Commerce held its annual election yesterday noon, preparatory to starting out on the sixth year of its existence.

The new officers were all elected unanimously. Following are the men chosen:

President: Dr. A. R. Tucker. First Vice President: W. J. Shinar. Second Vice President: Charles N. Jackson.

Treasurer: L. R. Chittenden. Secretary: W. S. Crowe.

The newly elected officials will be installed at the first meeting in January, falling on January 4. This will be an evening session, and held at the usual meeting place in the Elks' Temple.

MEETS WEDNESDAY The regular meeting of the Presbyterian Women's society will be held Wednesday afternoon in the church parlors at Manistique.

King Rama VI of Siam, who has just deposed his queen for not being dignified enough, wasn't always so dignified himself, as certain musty old reports in the United States secret service files show.

As a royal visitor, two secret service men met him when he landed in New York to guard him until he sailed from San Francisco.

The prince's secret service guards found they had a hard job. The prince was on vacation. His school days were over. His rulership hadn't begun.

The reports his pair of attendant government fly-cops sent to their superiors certainly indicated their ward was hitting only the highest spots.

The Washington authorities were worried. They feared trouble and that they'd be blamed. But what could they do? Crown princes can't be warned to be good.

An unpretentious Chicago photographer solved this international problem which was puzzling trained diplomats.

Steve Wright, camera man for the now defunct Inter-Ocean, had been trying to get the prince's picture during the whole length of his stay in the Windy City.

The prince objected. The secret service men, ailed to gratify his slightest whim, foiled Steve every time.

An evening arrived when, as Stephen knew, his chances were to dine at a certain hour at the Chicago Club. His suite at the Auditorium Annex was so situated that there was but one elevator he could descend to the lobby by.

Steve set up his camera in an inconspicuous corner commanding this elevator and waited.

It was winter time, the hour late, the light bad and the utmost speed necessary. Failing, this chance was the last one.

The moment arrived. Down came the elevator. The door opened.

On either side a spike-tailed, opera-battered secret service man stood at attention. Various signs were held aloft. A crowd gathered.

He looked like a Chinese, but was a perfect imitation of an Englishman in other respects.

A blinding flash! A strong concussion! A smoke-filled hotel lobby! Steve had pulled the trigger.

With a yell, the prince tumbled backward into the elevator and was at the top of the building in the twinkling of an eye.

THEATRES

"THE PONY EXPRESS" The most romantic episode of our frontier west has at last been immortalized in celluloid.

It is the stirring and dramatic tale of the courageous pony express riders, who linked the East and the West in the early days of 1860, and were largely responsible in saving California to the Union cause during that period of political intrigue which preceded the Civil War.

The motion picture which visualizes this glorious phase of American history is James Cruze's historic western epic, "The Pony Express" which shows at the Community theatre for the last time today.

Not only does this monumental film recall the mighty achievements of those heroic young adventurers who carried the fast mail, and recreate the whole vast panoramic sweep of the uncivilized west, but it serves to emphasize the dynamic development and tremendous growth of our country.

In 1860—the Pony Express! In 1925—the Air Mail! In this modern day and age when communication and transportation is ridiculously simple and easy, the exploits of the pony express riders take on a more brilliant lustre.

AT THE LYRIC "Full Speed." Buffalo Bill, Jr.'s latest thunderbolt thriller will be shown here at the Lyric theatre tonight, and those who have not yet seen this popular ride boy, as well as his many friends and admirers, would do well not to miss this feature.

Buffalo Bill, Jr., has gained a wide reputation as being one of the most consistently versatile stunt performers now on the screen, and his past pictures have borne out the assertion that there is hardly any hazard he will not take to give his audience an added thrill.

In "Full Speed," his latest Art-class picture featuring him, Buffalo Bill, Jr., goes through a series of breath-taking adventures that will keep every one on their toes from the first reel to the last.

He stops a runaway team by a flying tackle in the opening scenes, plays Indian and plans an elopement in one "shot," and in another battles with two kidnappers, whom he has trailed to a lonely cave.

Another city basketball team, to be known as the Buckeye team, has been organized with Red Kegel as manager and coach.

The Buckeyes are practising every Tuesday and Wednesday night at the high school gym and they are open to engagements with any team wishing to arrange a game.

The quintet, with some star players, included Vanderwege, Swan, Goodman, Berg, Bonz, Johnson and Staples.

DONATIONS FOR BASKETS ARE NEEDED

While Gladstone as a community is busily preparing for the holidays of Christmas time, secure in the knowledge that its Child's Welfare club will see to it as it has in year's past, that there is a Christmas for everyone, its people are asked to give a few minutes during the next few days to further cooperation with the club.

The preliminary work in preparation for the Christmas baskets, investigation of the conditions and needs in the homes they are for, in charge of the club, is now completed and the filling of the baskets will be started in a short time.

In this connection, the club is making its Christmas appeal to the townspeople in general for donations for the baskets of whatever they may have or may wish to give.

Any donations of clothing, bedding, foodstuffs of all kinds, or of money with which to purchase these needed articles, will find immediate use.

Toys for the children have already been well taken care of through donations of the school children and with the splendid cooperation of the firemen who have been repairing and painting and turning used toys into new playthings, but donations to help fill the baskets with necessities that are of the greater importance are needed.

Continue Cooperation. For this reason the club is asking, as it does each Christmas, cooperation of everyone in filling the Christmas baskets and there is no doubt but that it will receive the usual generous response.

Donations of any kind may be left either at the home of Mrs. W. H. Corbett, the club president or at the J. D. McDonald store.

YOUNG SINGER TOO BUSY FOR LOVE SHE SAYS

Never Even Had As Much as a Puppy Love, Assertion.

BY GENE COHN
NBA Service Writer.

New York—Marion Talley, the 18-year-old Kansas City girl whose bark voice was wafted over the corn belt to the Metropolitan Opera House, will sing the great love aria of opera out of a heart as yet untouched by romance.

"Before I was too young—and now I'm too busy," explained this amazingly poised young miss, whose name and fame have gone across the nation due to the phenomenal achievement of a Metropolitan contract after but four public concert appearances.

"Yes, I have heard the stories that artists must have suffered and loved to put all the proper emotions into the great songs. Myself, I think it's just hard work and study."

"You see I have not even had so much as a puppy love. And as a child I did not have the ordinary toys. I can't say why—but I just didn't want them. I preferred to play the piano. My older sister, who was a very good pianist, taught me. And then I would sing—well, just to sing. No, there was no consciousness of talent or ability. It was just something I wanted to do as much as other children want to play with dolls, or whatever they choose."

"Somehow I kept telling myself that some day I would sing in grand opera—but it was with the same seriousness that a small boy announces that he will be an Indian or a cowboy when he grows up."

"And then, when I began to sing in church I somehow had no self-consciousness about the crowds. Crowds have never bothered me."

"I have heard others say they are nervous because of the crowds and the feeling that crowds are unfriendly, or critical. Perhaps it is because I began to sing in a place where I knew or felt that all were my friends. It was in the church choir at home. They gave me the solos when I was eleven. And perhaps something may be attributed to the fact that I was singing religious music and felt that in church people are not in a critical mood. But, whatever it was, I felt at ease, and I will not be nervous when I face a Metropolitan crowd."

In these girlish admissions, drawn haltingly from the latest discovery in the opera world, may be found the hints of genius by anyone who wishes to study. Certainly the complete self-possession and naive acceptance of circumstances, together with a completely unspoiled girlishness indicate a most unusual character.

Miss Talley is a daughter of a telegraph operator who moved from a corn belt ranch into Kansas City. When Marion was two years old she began to sing, possibly in much the same fashion as do other babies, but the singing seemed just as exceptional to this mother as to any other. And as the voice matured in Sunday school and then in the church choir, it seemed to the mother equally phenomenal—as is the custom with mothers.

But it seemed phenomenal also to one John R. Jones, who directed the choir and led the modest life of an obscure music teacher, but whose musical appreciation was vaster than his place or practice. It was he who placed her voice. Thereafter she rapidly became the town prodigy. Galli Curci, passing through in concert, heard the voice and marveled.

Kansas City gave a great concert, raised $10,000 and sent Marion on her way. She stopped in New York, was heard at the Metropolitan and told to study and come back.

"In three years, I'll be able to sing their roles," she told her mother, and determinedly went ahead. It was three years, almost to the day that she returned to New York and made ready for her first appearance. Meanwhile, in Milan, upon July 4, the American girl celebrated the national holiday by receiving assurance of a contract.

A THREE DAYS' COUGH IS YOUR DANGER SIGNAL

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Company, Atlanta, Ga. (ads.)

ANIMALS, BIRDS BATHE OFTEN

London.—At least a large part of the human race takes pride in personal cleanliness.

But at that these people have nothing on animals and birds. Like human beings they have to "dress" themselves, and many of them refuse to eat before taking a bath and smoothing down their ruffled feathers or fur.

Dogs and cats sit by the fire for hours, washing and dressing themselves. Many birds bathe every morning, and the more particular species will not bathe in a dirty basin nor in dirty water. Swallows bathe only in fresh rain water. Ducks living near the sea have been known to fly far inland to find clean, clear water to bathe in.

The rabbit and the tiger use their forefeet as sponges and their tongues as combs.

Dogs hate dirt and like to keep their paws clean. The antelope, the deer and the giraffe assist one another in washing and clothing their bodies.

Bombay has opened a public library and reading room exclusively for women.

5-YEAR-OLDS EXHIBIT WORK

Excellent Kindergarten Display in LaVogue Shop Window

Initiative, ingenuity and manual skill are strikingly blended in an exhibit of kindergarten handwork installed in LaVogue Shop, 516 Ludington street, last night by Miss Mary Meighen, grade supervisor of the public schools, and kindergarten teachers of the local area.

There are taxicabs and baby carriages and many other things made from shoe boxes, cradles from oatmeal cartons, furniture from spools, rugs woven from rags, straps, some excellent piece-work, sewing, hand-made picture books, hand-decorated match boxes, and an extensive variety of other articles.

In fact, the variety is one of the most striking features of the exhibit.

"These things have not been made to set patterns," Miss Meighen said. "We have tried to encourage the children to find their own materials and make the things they wanted most to make. Initiative and ingenuity are developed much more rapidly in that manner than by giving the children certain materials and requiring that a certain article be made."

"Consequently, a shoe box in a child's hands becomes a limousine, in another it is transformed into a doll carriage or a piece of parlor furniture, or building."

Most of the work on display, consequently, is entirely original with the five-year-old children who did it.

The exhibit will remain at the LaVogue Shop today and Wednesday. It is certain to attract a great deal of attention, those who saw it yesterday believe.

SERIES STARTS BLUE LAW DRIVE IN WASHINGTON

BY CHARLES P. STEWART
NEA Service Writer
Washington—Washington is worried by the threat of an epidemic of blue law enactments when congress, its city council, meets.

Left to its own devices, the capital tends strongly toward worldliness, not to say wide openness. It was a pretty swift town in the old days. It is yet, insofar as up-to-date circumstances permit.

Self-governing, it's safe to say, would be very sparing of restrictions on its pastimes, innocent and otherwise. It's governed, however, exclusively from outside itself.

Now, certain of the outsiders have noticed that many Washingtonians are lax, among other things, in the matter of Sunday observance. Solid outsiders believe much money can be made by reopening the capital in the early morning. They disapprove of Sunday theatrials and movies, to which the population is much addicted. They want on Sunday golf and other sports, and they want the city to be a Sunday city.

Complaints are heard that Secretary of Commerce Hoover is standardizing the color out of life. Assuredly he is a standardizer. For example, the commerce department went to work some time ago on tacks. Manufacturers were turning out 239 varieties.

"Users of 113 of these kinds of tacks," the department found, "could use some other kind just as well." Accordingly, henceforward only 186 kinds will be made.

In multiplicity of patterns of any given manufactured article there is loss, Hoover holds. This loss means higher prices all around. So reduction in the number of different kinds of everything is the secretary's method of bringing down the cost of living. By getting the country's wood industries to stop sawing lumber into so many world-weird shapes, he says he has saved millions of dollars to buyers of articles made from wood.

But standardization reduces everything to a dull, dead level of the commonplace? Secretary Hoover denies it. Persons of original tastes which they wish to gratify can continue to do so, but at their own expense. The man who insists on using one of the 113 varieties of tacks which are no longer to be had can get them, but they'll have to be made to order, which will cost him more.

And so it should. There's no justice in letting him shove off part of the load onto users of the 186 standard kinds. That's Secretary Hoover's reasoning.

Daily Press Worker Seriously Injured, Examination Shows

F. J. Byrne, circulation manager of the Escanaba Daily Press, lies at St. Francis hospital suffering from a dislocation of the right knee and torn leg ligaments, as the result of being struck by an automobile at Ludington and Fifteenth streets on Friday evening. It was not at first thought that the injuries sustained by Mr. Byrne were serious but when submitted to examination by X-ray it was found that the knee joint had been dislocated and main ligaments of the lower leg had been badly torn. Mr. Byrne will probably be confined to St. Francis hospital for several weeks.

John Dahl, 517 South Eighth street, driver of the automobile that struck Mr. Byrne, was relocated by the police yesterday when the extent of the accident victim's injuries became known and what charge will be placed against the driver of the car was not announced.
