THEATRES
A LYRIC.
Opening at the Lyric theatre last night "Gold and Grit," the latest Buddy Roosevelt rough riding romance, produced by Lester F. Scott, Jr. for Artclass Pictures, is giving the audience an evening full of thrills. This popular young, riding star never misses an opportunity to put over breathtaking stunts of the most novel and startling variety, and his daring horsemanship and athletic prowess are winning him a steadily growing list of admirers. "Gold and Grit" is the story of a girl and a gold mine and Buddy wins both in a gallop. How he is appointed stag driver and guard of the Golden Eagle Mine, after rescuing the passengers and the mine payroll from bandits, and the rapid series of thrilling events that follow, forms a story that will please the most discriminating picture fan. Ann McKay plays the part of Helen Mason, the girl, whose father is robbed of the mine, which Buddy's nerves win back again, while the comedy background is furnished by Nelson McDowell in the role of Horatio Jefferson Blaas, a stranded ham actor, whom Buddy befriends. AT THE COMMUNITY. A picture that makes light of a serious situation is, after all, the funniest thing there is. You'll find that such is the case today at the Community theatre where the Paul Bern-Paramount production, "Grounds for Divorce" holds marriage and separation up for you to laugh at. By that we mean it is as fine a matrimonial comedy-drama as has come this way in many a long day. "Grounds for Divorce" is a screen version of the Broadway stage hit that packed them in New York for an entire season. Florence Vidor, Matt Moore and Louise Fazenda are featured in the cast. The story tells of a young and happily married couple, who, on their first wedding anniversary hit the snags of wedded life. Maurice Sorbier (Moore) is a successful lawyer who has reached the dizzy heights of fame and fortune by defending charming ladies in their separation suits. LYRIC WILL HOLD MATINEE FOR CHILDREN. In accordance with its custom each holiday season, the Lyric theatre will give a Christmas party for the children of Gladstone and vicinity Thursday afternoon. The matinee program which will be entirely free to the children will begin at 2:30 o'clock. An invitation to all children to attend the matinee has been issued by Manager Cretens of the theatre. M. E. Wyatt arrived last night from Ludington to join his family in spending the holidays here at the home of Mrs. Wyatt's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Moore.

ASKS JUSTICE FOR RAILROADS

G. R. Henderson's Address Thrills Rotary Club.

One of the strongest addresses delivered before the Escanaba Rotary club this year, by a member of the club, was that given yesterday by G. R. Henderson, who made a telling plea for a more constructive attitude on the part of the public toward the railroads of the country. Mr. Henderson's address occupied the full program period, following yesterday's luncheon and when he had concluded, the speaker was accorded an ovation such as has seldom been given any address before that club.

The address was a concise, plainly told story of the ills from which the railroads of the nation have suffered, are suffering and equally as clearly the speaker painted the program that must be followed if the railroads are to continue to play their part in the nation's growth and prosperity.

Aid to Unity of Nation.

To the railroads Mr. Henderson pointed as a tremendous factor in establishing and preserving the unity of the nation, ever extending to provide easy transportation between districts and states for both people and products, until they became an accepted part of the national life.

He sketched the development of anti-railroad legislation and the unthinking attitude developed by the people toward the railroads in many sections.

He showed the rapid increase in a space of but a few years of railroad tax costs; of increased costs for both labor and supplies and the development of an uncontrolled competition in short haul passenger and freight business from motor vehicles. But the government subsidy established in the operation of the Panama canal, Mr. Henderson called the most serious handicap recorded for the railroads operating in the Middle West. The speaker showed by figures that while the people of the Middle West are being taxed for the maintenance of the Panama canal they are also being forced to face increased railroad rates in order that railroads of the Middle West may live, because of the loss of patronage that is now diverted from one side of the nation to the other, by way of the canal. He showed by statistics that while the hooks of the canal, as kept, showed a substantial annual profit for its operation; he showed by similar figures that if the canal plant should be forced to pay taxes, as though privately owned, together with interest charges on the investment, an apparent net surplus would be converted into a serious annual deficit.

Remedy is Pointed Out.

As a remedy to the situation in which the middle western railroads have been forced, Mr. Henderson proposed a modest increase in railroad rates; the application of the same regulatory laws and rules to the operation of motor vehicles, as are applied to the railroads; and an increase in Panama canal toll rates commensurate with rates that would have to be charged if the canal were privately owned.

He pleaded for more careful thought of the status of the railroads on the part of the people; of the important part they have played and will continue to play in the scheme of the nation, if not discriminated against, but given a fair chance with every other industry.

Lightning strikes oak trees most frequently, and after the oak comes the elm, chestnut and pine.

opinion is Dr. Hugo Eckener who piloted the Los Angeles, formerly the ZR-3 across the Atlantic. Dr. Eckener during the war headed the German Zeppelin organization. He is now a director of the Goodyear Zeppelin corporation of Akron which is planning a super-Zeppelin twice the size of the Los Angeles. The experts believe that the airplanes will fly across the populated sections where frequent stops are necessary. In addition, they will act as feeders for the huge airships which will fly across the oceans and across uninhabited portions of the continents.

Glenn Martin, head of the airplane corporation bearing his name, believes that there will also be a sort of super-speed system, composed of special airplanes which will make non-stop transcontinental flights, going to exceptional high altitudes so as to take advantage of the terrific winds which blow continuously at these high altitudes. This last feature, however, will not be realized in all probability as soon as the others.

It is possible to trace the growth of the airplane network both in the United States and in Europe.

In America, the air mail line from New York to San Francisco is the backbone of the system. This links these two cities with 14 others, the largest of which are Cleveland, Chicago, Detroit, Omaha, Salt Lake City and Reno.

Eight More Arms.

The United States postoffice department has already taken bids from private companies for the addition of other arms to the air mail service.

In Europe, development has been rapid because governments, from military considerations, have subsidized airplane developments heavily.

One important route runs from Geneva to Zurich to Munich to Vienna, to Bucharest, to Constantinople. Another goes from Munich to Berlin to Helsinki, Finland.

Soviet Russia has established a line from Leningrad to Moscow to Baku on the Caspian sea.

It is possible to go by plane from London to Paris, Brussels, Basle, Zurich, Cologne, Amsterdam, Hanover or Berlin. It is possible to go from Paris to many cities on the continent, including Constantinople. These planes all run on regular schedules just as do the railroads.

The saving which the airplane is bringing in time in both Europe and America is apparent. Mails cross America by plane in 33 hours. The trip took five days by train. Passengers fly from Paris to Constantinople in 25 hours. It took three days to make the trip by train.

Super-Zeppelins to Link Ends of Earth

AT THE DELFT.

The combination of cast and story in "The Coming of Amos," the Cecil B. DeMille supervised production which will be shown at the Delft again today, makes this offering from the DeMille studio one of the banner pictures of the year.

Headed by Kora La Rocque, who is starring in the title role, the list of players in this Producers Distributing Corporation release is unusually brilliant. Jetta Goudal as a Russian princess in a colorful role, Noah Beery as the villain, and Trixie Friganza, Richard Carle and Clarence Burton in other featured roles make up the excellent supporting cast.

The story, adapted from William J. Locke's season's best seller, is a melodramatic comedy, adapted by Garrett Port and James Greelman, scenarists of recognized ability. The picture swings between tense dramatic situations and humorous incidents, with gorgeous spectacles of life on the Riviera as colorful background for the unusual story.

Paul Sloane directed this piece, which stands to top the work done by him in "Too Many Kisses" and other recent successes that have brought him prominently before the eye of the picture public.

Otto Hoffman and Lee Moran. The very excellent story in this picture is directed by Mal St. Clair. The question of a wife's sharing in the financial prosperity of a husband forms the theme of the story. The story was originally published in Hearst's International Magazine under the title of "Everything Money Can Buy," and was written by Ethel Watts Mumford. This talented woman writer has appeared in many places among them the Saturday Evening Post.
