UNCLE SAM'S FLEET SHOWS FIRST PROFITS

REPORT WILL KNOCK SALE TO PRIVATE INTERESTS.

BY DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington, July 23.—There's more than surface significance in the announcement by the Merchant Fleet Corporation that for the first time since the government has owned a merchant marine a profit has been recorded. The announcement comes at a time when a concerted drive is being made to compel the shipping board to sell its vessels to private owners in line with the purposes of the Jones act which declared in favor of private operation and ownership.

Also there has been leveled at the shipping board accusations that it wants to perpetuate itself and that government ownership is its continued objective. So long as the government fleet was being operated as a deficit there was a disposition to argue that the government had better get rid of the ships as well as the expense of future building.

Must Build New Ships. Indeed, the knowledge that sooner or later if the government was to render efficient service it must build new ships really started the controversy. Opponents of the theory of government ownership attacked the new building program as too much of a government ownership idea.

Since the discussion started, however, the shipping board has been able to show a profit. President Dalton of the Merchant Fleet Corporation, who has cut down operating expenses and gone after freight and passenger business aggressively now reports that the profit would have been larger except that more than a million dollars had to be spent in connection with the purchase of the steamer "America" that the prospects for a good year ahead are bright.

When congress reconvenes the fight will be on in earnest for the merchant fleet corporation wants appropriations for more ships. President Coolidge is being urged by the private shipping interests to disapprove such recommendations and to continue to advertise the ships for sale until they are all disposed of.

Geneva Confab Important. Meanwhile there are groups in congress who believe that the Geneva naval conference will emphasize the necessity of a government controlled merchant marine. Great Britain may have a parity with the United States on fighting ships but her merchant marine which can be equipped with six-inch guns can quickly be made into an auxiliary unit of tremendous value. Apart from the national defense group is the element which feels that the maintenance of unprofitable routes is essential to the upbuilding of American export trade and that the government should not be expected to maintain only the unprofitable lines while turning over the profitable ones to private operation.

Can Not Compete. As against this is the contention of the private ownership group which argues that the government should never compete with private business even though it could make a profit and that the record of the Merchant Fleet in the last year is an indication of how much more beneficial to world trade would be the American merchant marine if the ships could be made available at low tonnage prices.

'Whale' Ready to Hop When Storm Clears

CAPT. FRANK T. COURTNEY

SOUTHAMPTON, England, July 23.—(AP)—"We are ready now to get off at the first sign of favorable weather," Capt. Frank T. Courtney told The Associated Press late today after inspection of the "Whale" in which he is planning to hop off Monday on his trans-Atlantic voyage.

The radio installation, which has held up the flight thus far, was adjusted to the satisfaction of a "Marconi expert" and worked successfully in a test this afternoon. Capt. Courtney intends to make a trial flight, his fourth, tomorrow, and is confident that only a continuation of the bad weather reports which he is now receiving will prevent his hop-off on Monday.

R. F. Little, Capt. Courtney's mechanic, said that mid-Atlantic weather was treacherous at the present time. "There is a 50-mile gale from the west, and you can see we don't want to take any unnecessary risk," said Little. "As soon as the weather is good we'll go and we'll get there."

In order to reduce the vibration of the radio instruments, they were dismounted today and were fixed to boards of three ply wood mounted on rubber and then installed in the flying boat again.

AIMEE QUELLS CHURCH REVOLT

Throws Out Her Mother as Business Manager of Temple.

Los Angeles, Cal., July 23.—(AP)—The Angeles Temple inscription was quelled temporarily today by the return of the church's evangelist leader, Aimee Semple McPherson, and her immediate announcement that her mother, Mrs. Minnie Kennedy, principal center of the storm, was replaced by Rev. C. E. Jaynes as business manager.

The revolt of a large number of the church members, led by Reverend Jaynes, was due to their objections to the control by Mrs. Kennedy of church finances and its routine affairs. She announced three days ago, when it became known that her daughter had been recalled from an uncompleted revival campaign in Illinois, that she would sever all official connection with the church.

Mrs. McPherson, in announcing the retirement of her mother, said the ousted church business manager was "going to get her vacation."

She did not deny that she had, by telegram, authorized Reverend Jaynes to represent her in the controversy and to take charge of all church records, books, monies and collections. Concerning her difficulties with her mother, Mrs. McPherson declined to be quoted, saying only: "Mother is my mother, and even if these things were true, I could not say anything about them."

Troops in Shantung Repulse Cantonese

Shanghai, July 23.—(AP)—The Nanking nationalist forces of Gen. Chiang Kai-Shek are being driven from the province of Shantung and are losing thousands of prisoners, says unofficial advice received at Nanking. These advisers stated that the city of Hauchowtu, in the province of Honan, was likely to be captured by the north-erners at any time.

PRINCE CAROL BOWS HEAD TO FATE AS EXILE

REALIZES HE CANNOT BECOME KING OF RUMANIA.

Paris, July 23.—(AP)—Former Crown Prince Carol of Rumania, whose first impulse on the death of his father, King Ferdinand was to return to Rumania, not only to pay his last tributes to the late king, but with the idea of seeking the throne he renounced, has apparently reconciled himself to being an exile, at least for the time being.

Carol remains in seclusion in his Neully home today and now it is too late for him to attempt to reach Rumania for the funeral. It is expected that he will attend the two services to be held in his father's memory tomorrow, in the little Rumanian chapel in Paris. If he does, it will be the first time he has left his place of residence since word of the passing of Ferdinand was taken to him a few hours after the king's death.

Can't Go Home. The Rumanian government, over which Carol's little son, Michael is sovereign, broadcast the world today that Carol would not come to Bucharest—the diplomatic way of saying he will not be permitted to enter the country whatever his own wishes may be. Apparently the former crown prince has assured the French government, which gave him an asylum, that he will not try to make a break for Bucharest, for since he secluded himself in sorrow, the detectives who have watched his comings and goings at Neully for months, have been withdrawn, or else they are making themselves more inconspicuous than is usually the case.

A few newspaper men gathered on the sidewalk in front of the villa today as they have for many days past. Occasionally an automobile stopped in front of the high iron gate, and some personal friend of Carol's went into the three-story house, but no one stayed long. Cause is Hopeless. Those close to Carol admit that his cause at the present moment is a hopeless one and that for some time at least he will have to swallow the medicine he prescribed for himself in electing to leave his wife and child for a freer life outside of regal restrictions.

DISCUSSES PLANS. Bucharest, July 23.—(AP)—Queen Marie sent for the Associated Press correspondent tonight and in a long interview, which took place in a room adjoining the improvised chapel where Ferdinand lay dead, discussed her present and future plans for carrying on the work which death had forced the king to abandon.

With marked emphasis the queen declared she never had sought, nor would seek in the future, the regency of Rumania. "Had I desired to become regent," she said, "I need only have told the king and he would have arranged it either immediately or in his testament. As his widow and one who shares the responsibilities of the throne with him for 13 years, it is my duty to give all my energy, strength and devotion to the good of my country. That was the king's dying wish."

Three Large Stills Found in Ludington

Ludington, Mich., July 23.—(AP)—Three stills of 40, 30 and 20 gallons capacity, were found in operation 50 feet from the highway on the farm of Joseph Chevis, Victory township farmer, in a raid conducted by Prosecutor Wilfred here Saturday afternoon. Chevis turned off the heat and Sheriff George L. Colyer, Corp. Ivan Roberts of the state police and Deputy Sheriff Frank Costello brought the stills to Ludington. They loaded on the truck a 50-gallon barrel and a 40-gallon barrel of liquor, another 50-gallon barrel, nearly full, two 10-gallon kegs, 11 sacks of corn sugar. Eight barrels of mash were destroyed.

Chevis and Raymond Stekanas were arrested on warrants charging three counts each. They waived examination and were held to circuit court under bonds of $1,000 each which were furnished.

Stekanas is said to have conducted the selling end of the business. His brothers, William and Leon, were convicted of liquor violation in U. S. district court at Grand Rapids last spring. Leon escaped with a $500 fine; William is serving a term in the Detroit house of correction. The Stekanas brothers all own large, well-tilled farms.

Coolidge Throws Fish Rod Aside, Pans Gold

Mystic, S. D., July 23.—(AP)—In the heart of the Black Hills near the head of one of the most picturesque canyons, President Coolidge today cast a trout line into a tumbling creek and later panned for the gold which 50 years ago made this canyon famous.

Perched on crags overhanging Slate Canyon and on other points of vantage camera men worked busily to record the first pictures ever made of Mr. Coolidge fishing but when the waters made muddy by an all-night rain declined to yield its quarry, the president turned to Joe Bullis, a native prospector, for detailed instructions on how to pan gold. After an hour or more at Slate creek to which he traveled nearly 70 miles from the summer White House, a huge sparkle of the metal came from the president's pan and he smiled broadly as Mrs. Coolidge looked on and congratulated him.

The president and Mrs. Coolidge came to the summer lodge of Sam R. McKelvie, former governor of Nebraska, who is now publisher of the Nebraska Farmer, over a winding mountain trail which led two and a half miles into dense pine forests from Mystic. The last stages of the journey were made in a rumbuling lumber wagon drawn by two heavy farm horses, but when the animals pulled from the long, hard pull, the president stepped down, took his coat off and in his shirt sleeves helped push the wagon up the hill.

Severed Body Found Floating in Hudson

New York, July 23.—(AP)—Parts of a human body, floating near an open trunk, were found in the Hudson river, near Weehawken, N. J., tonight, leading police to believe that they had come across another "trunk" mystery. The parts recovered consisted of a left arm severed above the elbow, the hand missing, but with an elastic band drawn tightly around the wrist and a part which might have been either from a leg or arm.

GOVERNORS ON WAY TO ISLAND

Seventeen Chiefs Take Boat at Detroit for Mackinac. Detroit, July 23.—(AP)—Chief executives of 17 states and a host of other state officials were enroute tonight to Mackinac Island on the steamer Eastern Star, for the annual governor's conference which will open tomorrow. The governors and their aids attended a noon luncheon here today as the guests of Gov. Fred W. Green of Michigan and departed for Mackinac Island immediately afterwards.

The conference at Mackinac will embrace many subjects of national concern. There will be discussions of Mississippi flood valley control and relief, prevention of election frauds, agricultural relief and other subjects. Secretary of Commerce Hoover is scheduled to be present to unfold for the executives the plan for Mississippi control that he laid before President Coolidge last week. One purpose for the conference is to provide a medium for an exchange of thought on governmental problems that will make possible a uniform consideration and development of them in the several states.

NEW YORK TUBE STRIKE LOOMS

Subway Companies Refuse to Recognize Street Car Union. New York, July 23.—(AP)—The threat of a subway strike hung over the city again tonight when James L. Quackenbush, general counsel for the Interborough Rapid Transit company, announced that his company would not take part in any conference with representatives of the Amalgamated Association of Street Railway Employees. Quackenbush's announcement was in direct contradiction to one issued by Mayor James J. Walker a few hours previous that a meeting between union representatives and officials of the I. R. T. and the Brooklyn and Manhattan Transit company, with the mayor acting as mediator, would take place Tuesday. Next week's proposed meeting was intended by the mayor to take the place of a conference he had called today but which Frank B. Hedley, president of the I. R. T., refused to attend.

The trouble between the Amalgamated and the Transit companies centers around recognition of the union by the companies, which they refused to do, and the demands of the unions that its organization be substituted for the Brotherhood of I. R. T. company employes, known as the Company Union. Amalgamated officials also have demanded that the transit companies recognize the right of employes to collective bargaining. These demands have been formally made to the companies, but so far, union officials state, no direct answer has been received.

Guard Embassy in Argentina Capital

Buenos Aires, July 23.—(AP)—All important American buildings in Buenos Aires, including the U. S. embassy and the home of Charge D'Affaires P. L. Cable, were under heavy guard today as a result of the explosion of a bomb at the statue of George Washington last night which is attributed to Sacco-Vanzetti sympathizers. Police this afternoon raided several radical centers and arrested several men for examination. The chief of police, however, said that it would be most difficult to find the guilty men as attempts at bombings usually are committed with the utmost secrecy.

The unexploded bomb which was found in front of the Ford automobile agency was wrapped in newspapers printed in Italian and containing articles concerning the Sacco-Vanzetti trial. The U. S. embassy, the American consulate and other American institutions have been receiving threatening letters which have increased in number during the last few days. It was stated.

STATE URGES DEATH TO END TERROR REIGN

GUNMEN SIT QUIETLY DURING SCATHING ACCUSATION.

Benton, Ill., July 23.—(AP)—Twelve jurors tonight were deliberating on the fate of Charles Birger, gang chief, and his two former henchmen, Art Newman and Ray Hyland, accused of killing Joe Adams, 300-pound mayor of West City, last December 12.

The jury retired with the final instructions of Circuit Judge Charles H. Miller at 2:05 p. m., after State's Atty. Roy C. Martin had spent the morning in a scathing denunciation of the gangsters, in which he asked the jury to give them the death penalty "and end the reign of machine gun terrorism in southern Illinois."

Birger, an ex-cavalry man, who has headed the most formidable band of coal belt gangsters for three years, sat silent while the prosecutor demanded his death. His companions were equally quiet. "These men built their own scaffolds and put the rope about their own necks when they came into Franklin county and murdered Joe Adams," Martin declared.

A. F. L. WORKS FOR GOOD WILL

Promises to Help Hold Friendship of Latin Countries.

Washington, July 23.—(AP)—The American Federation of Labor will continue to exercise its influence so that United States policies will be such as to hold the friendship of Latin American countries. President William Green today told the fifth Pan-American labor congress before he adjourned. "There exists in the minds of Latin-American people a distrust of the attitude of our people," said Green. "That distrust must be removed if we are to develop commerce and understanding. This can be accomplished by pursuit of a policy recognizing justice as an elemental principle. It is the desire of the American Federation of Labor, representing 5,000,000 workers, that such a policy should be followed."

Adoption of routine reports condemning communistic propaganda and reaffirming previous exceptions to state department policies toward Mexico and Nicaragua occupied the last session. Outbursts such as marked previous meetings were lacking. Ricardo A. Martinez, Venezuelan delegate, whose attack on the Monroe doctrine yesterday drew a rebuke from Mr. Green, issued a statement which charged Mr. Green with helping to conceal rather than expose American imperialism.

"Far from disparaging the American people," it read, "I believe that we workers of Latin America have the most intimate interest in common with the workers of the United States and that it is necessary to establish the closest possible relationship in order to fight shoulder to shoulder against the imperialistic oligarchy of Wall Street and Washington that oppresses us both."

MAY NOT PUT BEN ON STAND

Defense Attorneys Uncertain As to Whether He'll Talk.

St. Joseph, Mich., July 23.—(AP)—Attorneys for the defense in the state's dissolution proceedings against the House of David colony today declined to indicate if Benjamin Funnell, leader of the cult or his wife, Mary, would be placed on the stand. Asked regarding reports that the defense, which completed its first week of testimony today, planned to close its case without examining Funnell, the attorneys said they did not wish to discuss the matter. Only one witness was placed on the stand today, Mrs. Geneva Goodwin Hornbeck, 33, a colony member, who deposed immorality at the colony. About 30 witnesses remain to be examined and indications are about four weeks will be required for the defense to complete presentation.

Chamberlain Presides When British Cabinet Discusses Naval Meet

Japs' Food Supply Becomes Inadequate

Honolulu, P. I., July 23.—(AP)—Dr. Shiroshi Naoki of the University of Tokio told the Pacific relations committee today that Japan, face to face with the problem of a rapidly increasing population and a food supply which fails to keep pace either with population or bettering standards of living, presents a problem which is bound to impair the peaceful progress of the world. The question of food supply may be considered largely as one of promoting gainful occupations in these days of international trade," Dr. Naoki said, pointing out that as a result of her industrial development, Japan's population had doubled in the last sixty years.

Should the cabinet decide to favor the pronouncement of a policy and a debate on the subject in the house, it will give W. C. Bridgeman and Lord Cecil, the chief British delegates to the tri-partite conference, who will probably return to Geneva Tuesday, at least the backing of the opinion of parliament. A subject of anxiety to the ministers is what they regard as the misconceptions voiced in both the American and Japanese press about the British policy, and it is supposed that Sir Austen's statement, if he makes one, will be devoted largely to trying to remove these misconceptions.

BOSTON CROWD CHEERS FLYERS

Rain Dampens Celebration in Honor of Eight Sea Heroes.

Boston, July 23.—(AP)—The skies let down a torrent today on eight heroes of the air and the assembled thousands who gathered to cheer their exploits over the Atlantic and Pacific. No city before had seen these conquerors together. Fortunate for the first 24 hours of the celebration which brought out unprecedented crowds, the welcome of the city and state came to an uncomfortable end soon after noon today. At that time Charles Lindbergh, first of the airmen to arrive, was winging his way north, continuing his tour despite the advice of the airport officials. Also at that time Commander Richard E. Byrd, Lieut. G. O. Noelle, Lieut. Bert Balchen and Pilot Bert Acosta of the "America," Clarence D. Chamberlin of the "Columbia," and Lieut. Lester Blunt and Albert Hegeberger, Lieut. of the army Pacific fleet, were in Parkman bandstand, the one dry spot in the acres of the common.

10,000 Greet Flyers. Ten thousand persons had gathered to greet them despite the threatening sky. Ten thousand persons were soaked by the sudden downpour. Two thousand, perhaps more, stood stolidly for more than an hour, rain trickling down inside sodden garments, to wait for the time late in the program when the aviators stepped forward to greet them with a prolonged cheer.

The day began with an aviation breakfast given by Mayor Nichols and attended not only by the eight guests but also by a score of other aviators whose names are not without fame in their own country, although their feats have been less spectacular. There followed the review of the 26th division, Massachusetts national guard. Secretary of the Navy Wilbur was in the governor's stand at the state house. Colonel Lindbergh then left for the airport to resume his flight. The others were escorted through crowds still madly cheering to receive from the governor medals similar to that conferred on Lindbergh yesterday.

Two Its Very Own. Boston halted two of the guests as its very own. Lieutenant Hegeberger lives in South Boston and Commander Byrd married a Boston girl. Both Mrs. Byrd and Mrs. Hegeberger attended the ceremonies, as did Mrs. Chamberlin. The program today concluded the public reception of the aviators. Tonight, after an informal dinner as guests of the mayor, all were to attend the theatre.

South Boston had planned a day-long program tomorrow in honor of its son, Lieutenant Hegeberger, which his companion, Lieutenant Maitland, will share.

Assault Disperses Parade of Klansmen

Grand Prairie, Tex., July 23.—(AP)—Ku Klux klansmen on parade here tonight were attacked by a number of spectators and several persons, including klansmen, were reported injured. Dallas, Tex., July 23.—(AP)—A squad of deputy sheriffs was rushed late tonight to Grand Prairie, 12 miles west of here, when it was reported a Ku Klux Klan parade had been attacked by anti-Klansmen and several persons injured. Reports reaching here were to the effect that a riot followed the attack in which several persons were injured.

MAY ASK HOUSE OF PARLIAMENT FOR OPINION.

London, July 23.—(AP)—Sir Austen Chamberlain, secretary for foreign affairs, will preside at the cabinet council Monday morning for further consideration of the naval question. The secretary may make a statement in the house of commons Monday evening on the government's policy at Geneva, but this will be decided at the cabinet meeting in the morning.

Theme of Speeches. The Geneva difficulty is still the theme of many speeches and news articles, and Winston Churchill, chancellor of the exchequer, speaking at Bletton Park, Devonshire, today, said that no effort should be spared to bring the conference to a successful conclusion. He added, that however much an agreement was desirable, an agreement to spend gigantic sums on naval construction for many years to come might be worse for all concerned than moderate expenditure following upon freedom from any agreement.

NO COMMENT MADE. Washington, July 23.—(AP)—Press reports from London indicating that the British cabinet had given complete approval to the attitude of the British delegation at the Geneva three-power naval limitation conference evoked no comment in official quarters today aside from the suggestion that if there were to be no compromises at Geneva, obviously there could be no agreement. Up to the time the state department closed over the week-end it was said authoritatively that no report had been received from the London embassy as to the action determined upon by the cabinet in its conferences with W. C. Bridgeman and Earl Cecil. There was no suggestion, however, that Washington officials were deeply concerned over the reports that the cabinet was prepared to stand squarely behind the cruiser tonnage figures advanced by the delegation at Geneva and which the United States regards as altogether excessive.

GENEVA GETS REPORT. Geneva, May 23.—(AP)—Reports from London that the British cabinet fully approved the line adopted by W. B. Bridgeman, first lord of the admiralty, and Viscount Cecil at Geneva, was the dominant subject today among the members of the American and Japanese delegations. Interest now centers on the question whether the British delegates will return here with the new suggestions with their attitude on the problem of secondary cruisers modified or whether, as the advice from London seem to indicate, the British will adhere to their policy outlined last week of more small cruisers and six-inch guns. The general impression is that the next few days will certainly decide whether the three delegations must separate without an agreement or reaching a compromise on outstanding questions, apply themselves to the actual drafting of a treaty.

Child Sustains Broken Arm When Wagon Overturns

Francis Laviolette, six-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. O. H. Laviolette, 326 South Ninth street, had the misfortune of breaking his arm while playing near the home of his parents about 7 o'clock last night. Little Francis was propelling his coaster wagon on the sidewalk in front of the house. His sweater, in the wagon, was dragging partly on the walk, and in an effort to replace the garment in the cart, the child overturned the wagon, falling beneath it. He sustained a break in his arm just below the elbow. His mother was witness to the accident, and summoned Mr. Laviolette. The injured boy was taken to a doctor, who placed the arm in a cast.

The youngster was remarkably brave throughout the ordeal and refused to "cry." He will be confined to his home for some time.

Win or Lose, Jack Will Drop Gloves After Tunney Bout

Atlanta, Ga., July 23.—(AP)—Win or lose the Tunney bout, Jack Dempsey will hang up his gloves thereafter unless the heavyweight field is thick enough with prospects to keep him busy fighting, the former king of the heavies declared as he passed through Atlanta today on his trans-continental swing.

"If I win back the crown, I'll get out of the game forever rather than wait two or three years before meeting a worthy contender," he found time to say amid the tumultuous welcome he received here.

"Not later than September 24, some time between September 24 and then," explained Dempsey's desires in the matter of setting a date for the next step in his come-back effort, the bout with Gene Tunney.

Dream of Clerk Comes True After Forty Years

(By NEA Service)

New York—"Day dreams are pleasant, but year dreams are pleasanter. And the first 20 years of dreaming are the hardest. The inclination is to give up because the dreams seem hopeless. The trouble with most people is that they give up their dreams when middle age comes upon them. And that's the very time when experience teaches you how to make them come true. Take my advice and never give up a dream! And when you see one being accomplished start on another one."

Began as Clerk.

Thus spoke John Henri Dal Piaz, who spent nearly 40 years on a single dream and, at the age of 62, finally came floating into New York harbor on his "dream ship," the Ile de France. One of the world's outstanding figures in transportation, Dal Piaz began as a clerk with the French Line at the age of 23, and wound up as a chief of the concern, dictating the construction of this one boat which had become with him a veritable hobby.

Now—Another Vision.

Meanwhile, seeing the ship finally on the seas, he turned his interests to northern Africa and, at the age when most men begin to retire, Dal Piaz is beginning to vision bus lines and motor lines into Timbuctoo. His passion has become the opening of Africa to the most casual tourist. In two years he has begun to see modern hotels rise in African cities and buses cutting their way from tavern to tavern, from Tunis to Casablanca, with the vast Sahara coming closer and closer to the tourist touch.

"You see, I wanted what I wanted on the sea first; now I have dreams about the land and that sea of sand which is the Sahara," he said with a smile. "The earth grows smaller each day; men want more and more to see it in comfort."

Foresight.

Typically French in appearance, with whitening hair and pink-and-white coloring, Dal Piaz believes in keeping your mind as far ahead of your time as possible. When still a clerk he was thinking of vessels, the building of which at the time seemed impossible. The war gave him his greatest opportunity. He had to administer the affairs of a considerable fleet of company ships, 23 of which were sunk. Yet, when the armistice was signed, the tonnage of his company was the same as it had been in 1913. Three years after the war the fleet had grown to a hundred ships.

John Henri Dal Piaz and the Ile de France.

A Gorgeous Vessel.

The Ile de France, upon which the one-time clerk rode to America, has been hailed as the most elaborately and beautifully decorated and equipped liner to appear upon the Atlantic. Gold and lacquer decorations, a marble dining room, paintings, statuary, a playground for children, a dozen exclusive French shops, an imitation of French sidewalk cafes, and a dozen other features mark this realization of a dream at 62.

"But—there is one thing more I must tell you," concluded Dal Piaz, in speaking of human dreams. "You mustn't sleep too much. Do your dreaming with your eyes open."

A delegation of women called on President Coolidge to ask for rights. Doubtless the president didn't refuse 'em.

Mural History Shown in Westminster Hall

London (AP)—A mural history of England, on the walls of Westminster Hall, painted in spaces left when the new Houses of Parliament were built in 1834, has been unveiled by Prime Minister Baldwin.

The history is in eight panels which have occupied artists for three years.

Each painting was paid for a Peer. The Duke of Devonshire, Viscount Devonport, Viscount Burnham, the Duke of Portland, Viscount Fitzalan of Derwent, the Earl of Derby, the Duke of Bedford and Viscount Younger of Leckie contributed.

The panels show the following scenes: King Alfred's long-ships attack supply vessels of the Danish invaders in Swanage Bay, 877; King Richard I. leaves England with an expeditionary force to join the Crusade in Palestine, 1189; English people reading aloud Wycliffe's English version of the Bible; Sir Thomas More, as speaker of the Commons, refusing to grant King Henry VIII a subsidy without due debate, 1523; Queen Elizabeth commissions Sir Walter Raleigh to sail for America and discover new countries, 1584; Sir Thomas Roe at Court of Ajmir laying the foundation of British influence in India, 1614; and English and Scottish commissioners presenting to Queen Anne at St. James Palace the articles of agreement for the union of the two countries, 1707.

Old Kansas Settlers Stick to the Farms

El Dorado, Kan. (AP)—Neither the young nor the old are lured to the city from the farms in the German settlement north of here. Many farms consist of two or three houses, each sheltering a generation of the same family.

The husband and wife who established the family in America and probably homesteaded the Kansas farm, keep their rural home although they no longer do the work. Few of these aged couples have a desire to spend the days of their retirement in even a small country town. Their sons marry, and one of them, not always the eldest, stays on "the old home place." The son provides a separate roof for his bride, and other sons and daughters buy or rent farms nearby.

Charley Gagnon Is 76 Today; Will Celebrate at Ford River

Charley Gagnon, better known in Escanaba as "Popcorn" Charley, will celebrate his 76th birthday anniversary at Ford River today. Having been a resident in Escanaba for 46 years, Charley expects to meet scores of his old friends at the Ford River re-union and is looking forward to celebrating the best birthday in his life.

It was in 1876, on July 4th, that the diminutive retired sign painter arrived to take up his residence in this city. At that time the population, so he says, was approximately 200 people. Since then he has become a beloved figure in Escanaba, having been a keen spectator of the march of events which saw Ford River, then booming, reduced to but a ghost of its old self and Escanaba developed to its present size.

Youngsters Favored to Win Golf Crown

Ypsilanti, Mich., July 23.—(AP)—With critics unanimous in the opinion that the next Michigan state golf championship will be one of a half-dozen youngsters, something like 150 other players have entered the event. Qualifying play begins Wednesday over the course of the Washtenaw Country club near here.

Fast men among the possible winners are Dave Ward, Big Rapids, and John Malloy, Ann Arbor, winners of the Detroit district and the Western Michigan district tournaments this year. Ward also is the defending champion. Next in line for the honors the critics pick William Courtney, Detroit municipal champion, Addison Connor, leading player this year of the University of Michigan golf team, and Howard Tryon, a newcomer in Detroit and New England junior champion last year.

The average expenditure of Yale undergraduates is estimated at $1800 for each of the four years spent at college.

TOURIST CAMP POPULAR PLACE

Visitors to Local Site Make Many Pleading Comments.

The Escanaba tourist camp is growing more popular each year and the many pleasing comments heard from visitors have a tendency to increase the number of tourists who take advantage of the place while stopping in this city. Tourists say that the camp is located in an ideal spot along the banks of Bay de Noc and that the drinking water is the best ever. Its cleanliness is another feature.

From Monday, July 18, to Saturday noon, 236 persons parked at the camp, a total of 66 cars. There were parties of two, three and four and even six persons, including children. Nine out of every ten cars have children passengers and the little folks greatly enjoy the outdoor camping.

Says Mount Sinai Is Near Dead Sea

Copenhagen — Mount Sinai, where Moses gave the world the Ten Commandments, is not on the Sinai Peninsula, as popularly supposed, says Dr. Ditlef Nielsen, the famous Scandinavian explorer and archaeologist, who has just returned from a survey of Egypt, Palestine, Arabia and Transjordan.

The holy mountain, Dr. Nielsen states, is in the mountains of Edom, south of the Dead Sea, in support of which he submits scientific data, maps and historical material.

Dr. Nielsen's discoveries have aroused interest in scientific, archaeological and religious circles. The precise locality of the Biblical Mount Sinai has long been a subject of controversy.

It has been asserted by archaeologists that the Peninsula of Sinai, a barren, waterless desert, could never have accommodated 3,000,000 souls. Nor does it contain a mountain rising so sharply, they say, that its base could be fenced in while it was easily ascended, and its summit could be seen by a great multitude below, as Biblical tradition implied.

Farmers of McDonald, Kan., have formed the Wheat Growers' Club, with a large golf links, restricting membership to farmers.

Ford River to Live Again Days of Its Former Glory at Reunion, Picnic Today

Ford River, once the busiest lumber town in this region, today will live again in memories some of its former glories.

Former residents of the community—now one of the lost cities of the North—will come back for a reunion and picnic to be held in the grove, once the location of the mill, now used as a tourist camp.

The committee in charge has made every possible effort to advise all former Ford Riverites of the event. It is expected that 400 to 500 of them will be on hand.

Many are coming from other states. Scores of them are now living in other parts of the peninsula. It will be by far the greatest homecoming the Ford River community has ever seen.

An interesting program has been prepared. There will be a picnic dinner at noon, all picnickers taking their own lunch baskets. This will be followed by music by the Escanaba Juvenile band under the direction of Joseph Greenfield, and a series of short addresses by old residents of the place.

An outstanding feature of the day will be a birling exhibition by William Girard, world's champion log roller, who passed up several other engagements in order to be present at the picnic-reunion and display his skill on the slippery logs.

Among the amusements on the program for the afternoon will be games and races of all kinds. Numerous prizes will be given for the several events. Two baseball teams composed of members from the Escanaba and Gladstone societies will also stage a game for the "championship" during the afternoon.

During both the afternoon and evening—Lundin's six piece orchestra will furnish music for dancing.

Lunches, Ice Cream, Pop and Cigars will be sold on the grounds.

BRING YOUR FRIENDS AND COME OUT FOR A GOOD TIME.

The picnic will be given under the auspices of the following societies:
North Star Evening Star Morning Star Order of Runeberg of Gladstone Order of Runeberg of Escanaba Framat of Gladstone Kronan of Gladstone COMMITTEE.

Gandhi Tells New Program for India to Nebraska Girl

Columbia, Mo.—An American girl has pierced the mystery of India's most talked of man and has brought back to the United States the message of Mahatma Gandhi. The humble man whom India calls great and whom America visualizes as a political and religious agitator, is greatest as a personality, believes Nellie Lee Holt, teacher of religious education at Stephens college here.

He is teaching consciousness of self and the dignity of labor to a people who for centuries have gloried in the contemplation of idleness, and whose awareness of their own capacities has been stifled through centuries of oppression, largely self-inflicted, she says.

Miss Holt spent eight days in Gandhi's home, where no other American had been received for more than a single conference. Later she listened to him for four days at Calcutta. She returned to her home here sure that his teachings contain the material for industrial revolution in India.

"Gandhi is basing his teachings on industry," she says. "He believes all Indians should know how to work and should do some work each day. He spins, making his own clothes."

"He believes in non-possession: that none should produce or have more than he actually needs. If a person can live on five cents a day he should not try to make ten and save the surplus."

"His greatest service to India has been his attack on the caste system. He believes all people are equal and that all should work and live alike."

"He has taught India consciousness of personality. With an awakening of his consciousness the Indian has found himself a human being."

Gandhi's boycott, which failed and which led to his imprisonment by the English, he calls his "Himalayan blunder," Miss Holt relates.

"The British he tolerates by not recognizing them," she says. "He has no trouble with anybody. He distrusts mob movements. The masses were the reason for his first failure."

"Now he seeks to build industrial independence in India through education and industrialism. He seeks Indian independence through non-cooperation."

THE BIG "I" IN MUSSOLINI.

Some people have greatness thrust upon them, and some people thrust greatness upon themselves. Among those who get greatness by the latter method, there is at times noted a peculiar egotism which the more lowly mortals find hard to understand.

Bruno Mussolini, elder son of Italy's strong man, was quizzed in school the other day on points of grammar. "Give a definition of the imperative mode," commanded the teacher, Bruno gave it correctly.

"What person cannot be commanded?" the teacher then asked. It was a question in grammar, remember, and the correct answer to the question is naturally, "the first person," for the imperative mode is always second person.

The king of France who pompously declared, "I am the state"; Napoleon, who talked ever of his own greatness; and the late "Me and Gott" emperor of Germany? It is most sincerely to be hoped that he will not.

The respectful teacher of Bruno Mussolini's grammar may have sent him to the head of the class for his bright reply, but a much safer and saner course would have been to keep the young man after school for a lesson in grammar, tact, and becoming modesty.

MARBLE STAIRCASE FOR $1.

The $150,000 marble staircase which Judge E. H. Gary of United States steel corporation fame put in his house 12 years ago, was offered for sale by house-wreckers the other day for $1. There was a catch in the offer, however, for the purchaser was obliged to come and haul the staircase away.

Aside from its oddity, that news is of interest as an example of sur-changing tastes in house design. Once the dream of every well-to-do American was to own a European palace. Some sudden-richees went so far as to buy French chateaux and bring them to America.

Having to live in these rebuilt chateaux was pretty severe punishment. They were hard to heat in winter and unhealthily damp in summer.

A DANGEROUS PRECEDENT IN NAMES.

A New England railroad, establishing two new crack trains, has announced that the locomotives hauling these limiteds will be given names. One of the engines will be called "Peggy Revere", and the other will be called "William Dawes, Jr.," thus for the first time giving equal honor to the two heroes who spread the news that the British were going to march on Lexington.

Opinions and definitions, it is seen, differ. Women today read Greek and Latin, can attend classes at Harvard and Yale at least, have been known to have $15,000 a year, have been devils, angels, worn badges of repose and cheerfulness, been worked on by barbers, and held their licker.

By any such tests as these, women are in every sense as gentlemanly as men.

NO POLAS IN ENGLAND. London—England never has produced a Pola Negri or a Lya de Putti—and probably never will. So says a London dramatic critic, who claims that English women are too reserved and lack sufficient glow of personality to make screen stars of that type.

DIRTY DAY. Arrange your housework so all the dirty cleaning work comes the same day. Have a special suit so you can save your linen dresses.

The Piffle Hook

THE PIFFLE HOOK will introduce a new feature Tuesday morning. Percy Verance, the well known love expert, will answer any and all questions put to him by readers of this column, touching on questions of love, matrimony and allied topics. Have you a love problem? Consult Percy. He has helped others. He can help you. Postage on all questions should be prepaid.

At first blush, the proposition might seem to be an attempt to nominate some unlucky banker for the job of official goat. Against a dictator in Wall Street might be hurled the vituperations of the pinks and reds of the country who blame Wall Street for all their personal misfortunes.

Two girl teachers in Kansas have been discharged for indulging in a game of strip poker. They deny that there was anything immodest or immoral about the contest. They are probably right. Strip poker is a perfectly innocent pastime as long as nobody loses and the school teachers with whom we have played poker—not strip—are disgustingly lucky.

One of the weird twists of the radical mind is the idea that blowing up a statue of George Washington in Buenos Aires, or breaking the windows of a consulate in New South Wales, will prevent the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti.

SOMETHING HORRIBLE is always happening to the poor deer in Chippewa County. They starve all winter, or they fall victims of hoof and mouth disease, or—as in the present disaster—they die from eating calcium chloride from the highways. It's a sad state of affairs.

Chicago has a four-year-old girl who can play Beethoven's Moonlight Sonata, but the papers do not state why a four-year-old child should want to play it. It sounds a good deal like a four-year-old discussing the Einstein theory of reading Nietzsche.

HKR: According to a study conducted by students in Colorado Teachers' College, a kiss shortens life three minutes, due to palpitation of the heart. One whole day of a man's life is lost after 480 kisses. One whole year has vanished after 172,800 kisses. Who wants to live a year longer, anyhow?

AL A. MOONEY It's Easy to Live Five Years in One Hour.

In a clever little letter, a contributor seeks to re-open the controversy over the reasons for the difference in the plurals of house and mouse, and goose and moose. Unless you "minute-men" and women think The Hook can settle the thing, once and for all time, we think we shall avoid plunging you into the conflict just now.

HKR: What has become of the post-Volstead home-brewer who used to brag in the drug store about the quality of his home-made beer? Has he suspended operations?

Don't Know; Haven't Seen Him for Years. The Pan-American Union objects to the killing of Nicaraguans by American Marines.

It's too bad they couldn't overlook a little thing like that.

LYRICS OF LIFE

By Douglas Malloch
Copyright 1927 by Douglas Malloch
WE'VE SOLD THE CAR.
We've sold the car,
A good old friend,
The good old car
Is at an end.
Some other hand
Will have the fun,
And try to make
The old car run.
We've traded in
The good old car,
For that's the way
That people are.
Old age had come,
And youth had gone,
And so we passed
The old car on.
It seems unkind,
It seems unfair,
But that's the way
That friendships wear.
Yet none can say
We did not praise
It even in
Its saddest days.
Yes, if you think
We did not claim
We loved the old
Car still the same,
And swear it was
As good as new,
Then ask the man
We sold it to.

The PENNY PRINCESS by Anne Austin

type furiously. When she had finished, she tore the sheet from the machine and marched into Jerry Macklyn's private office.

"That's absolutely all I know about Peach Bloom Cosmetics from personal experience," she said crisply. Jerry Macklyn picked up the sheet of paper, read its few lines at a glance, then surveyed Vera Cameron coolly and critically from the crowning braids of her head to the broad toes of her flat-heeled, orthopedic oxfords.

"So you have never used any cosmetics except cleansing cream and face powder," he said slowly. "Hm-m! Now how the devil am I going to know whether this truck is any good or not? Good Lord, I can't really try it out on myself, as I usually do a product I'm planning a campaign for." He frowned, looked at her flushed face searchingly, then a wide grin stretched his boyish mouth. "I say, Miss Cameron, I've got a whale of an idea. You're my assistant, aren't you? Not just my secretary, but my assistant?"

"So Mr. Canfield said," Vera answered, her voice trembling with anger. She was going to hate this impudent young red head. "Now, listen, Miss Cameron. Bend an attentive ear—oh, goesh, you can't! I mean, you can't bend an ear!" he grinned at her, his blue eyes sparkling with wicked glee. "Your ears are held down too tight by that crown of yours. Say, I haven't seen a hairdress like that since my saluted aunt went to her reward. Wait a minute! I apologize! Can't have you sore at me already! Say, this is my proposition. If this stuff—" he waved toward the fascinating array of black and gold boxes and jars—"is one-tenth as good as Peach Bloom claims it is, then I can dope out the best doggone advertising campaign that ever hit this old town in the eye. With you!" he concluded triumphantly, pointing a forefinger at her with dramatic suddenness.

"I shall be glad to help," Vera admitted almost eagerly. "Help. Why, you're going to be the star of this scenario, young woman! Jerry Macklyn exulted. "You know what I'm going to do? I'm going to play Pygmalion to your Galatea—make a beauty out of you with Peach Bloom cosmetics, photograph you at every stage in the transformation, and use the whole bunch of photos in a smash-out the best doggone advertising layouts that will simply knock 'em for a goal! You just wait!"

But Vera Cameron did not wait. With eyes blazing and cheeks aflame, she glared at him for one devastating moment, then turned and fled.

(To Be Continued) Vera quits her job, but something happens that makes her regret it. Read the next chapter.

One English Marriage In Every 100 Fails

London (P)—The Registrar-General has disclosed that one marriage out of every hundred fails in England. Divorce in England, where dissolution of marriage is granted only on grounds of adultery, is becoming more and more common, especially since newspapers were forbidden by law to publish divorce case details. Before the World war the number of persons divorced was about 1,000 a year. Since the war the figure has been increased five times.

Three of every five divorced persons get married again. The majority of these are men, of whom 79 per cent marry spinsters, 13 per cent marry widows, and 8 per cent marry divorced women. Of the divorced women who remarry, 79 per cent take bachelors for their second husbands while 20 per cent prefer widowers. Two out of every three divorced men marry again but only one-half of the divorced women remarry.

Abner Bangs Tells How He Bought Site of Ford River from Wild Indian Tribes

MISERY BAY, July 22 (To the Editor)—The committee, which is in charge of the management of the reunion picnic at Old Ford River has overlooked neglectfully a feature of the program which the people are going to be disappointed if it does not happen. They have not asked me to make a speech on the program. I can not imagine how this oversight came to be overlooked. Anybody who knows me knows that I can make a longer speech and a louder speech than anybody in the township. Troth and metaphor and bursts of eloquence flow from between my lips like torrents of water from a busted hydrant. And I know more about Old Ford River than any man, living or dead. I bought the location of the town from the Indians for two strings of beads and a Jacques knife, and I sold it back to John Bartella for thirty pieces of silver, most of them large pieces. I was one of the combattant participants in the last fight, although I do not say I was in all of them afterwards or even in the last one. Maybe the last one is still to be held yet in the future. I smoked the first pipe full of Perleess that ever fogged up the village. I drove the first team of two oxens. I loaded the first boat. They used to have a saying out that way that Abner Bangs was First in War, First in Peace and First to reach the Ford River Boarding House. More than that, I am the author and publisher of that epoch poem, commemorating an incidental happening which also teaches a great moral lesson, as follows:

It was out in Ford River that place of renown,

ZIONISTS MEET HERE TODAY

Judge Philip Bregstone of Chicago to Address Meeting.

Judge Philip P. Bregstone, of Chicago, famed as a jurist, journalist and lecturer, will address a gathering of Upper Peninsula Zionists at Terrace Gardens this afternoon. Representatives of all of the Zionist units of the district will be present and a group organization will be perfected. Social features of the day will be in charge of the local Hadassah, of which Mrs. William Auerbach is the president. Judge Bregstone's subject will be: "An Ideal in Its Realization." The gathering takes on interest and importance to Zionist circles because it marks the observance, in the peninsula, of the twenty-third anniversary of the death of Theodore Herzl, founder of modern Zionism. Judge Bregstone is expected, in his address, to discuss the life and achievements of this "Modern Moses." Delegates from the following cities are expected to attend: Iron Mountain, Iron River, Ironwood, Crystal Falls, Marquette, Ishpeming, Negaunee, Munising, Hancock, Houghton, Calumet, Marinette, Ashland and Escanaba. Judge Bregstone was the speaker at the Sabbath service held by local people of the Jewish faith last night. Sun rays striking through gold fish bowls are said to have caused many fires. Queen Will Dispense With Maids of Honor

London (AP)—The ancient position of Maids of Honor to the Queen will soon be abolished. When Miss Ursula Lawley, daughter of Sir Arthur Lawley, marries Col. George Gibbs, treasurer of the King's household in a few weeks, the Queen will allow the appointment to lapse, it is understood. Miss Lawley is the last Maid of Honor. During the last few years the Queen has allowed the number of Maids of Honor to decline from eight, the number in the days of Queen Victoria, to one. As vacancies have arisen she has not made new appointments. Now - Even Lower Prices! - YET STILL GREATER BEAUTY

Amazing increase in Pontiac Six value made possible by the economies of the world's newest and finest motor car factory.
The announcement last week of a smarter, more beautiful Pontiac Six at surprising price reductions was an unexpected sensation. High quality and low prices had been winning thousands to the Pontiac Six. But due to increasing production in the mammoth new $12,000,000 Pontiac Six plant, savings were being effected. And these were passed to the public, together with the additional value represented in new Duco colors!
Now the Pontiac Six is the only low-priced six offering Bodies by Fisher—the largest engine used in any six priced up to $1,000—and an oiling system which forces 250 gallons of oil an hour through the engine at 35 m. p. h!
These are only a few of the features which make today's Pontiac Six a triumph of modern design and production! Come in! Learn how much MORE you get in the Pontiac Six at new low prices!

THE TINYMITES

Story by Hal Cochran—Pictures by Knick

The chocolate hen then clucked a bit. "I think it's going to throw a fit," said Clowny, as he stepped away, perhaps because of fright. He warned the others rapidly, "You'd better hide behind some tree. It wouldn't be so funny if that hen would start to bite."

"Oh, don't be silly," Scotty snapped. "You're scared because its wings were flapped. A hen will never hurt you if you let the thing alone. Shucks, I'm not scared, and I won't go away because I ought to know that hens are very harmless. I once had one of my own."

He walked up very close and then began to stroke the chocolate hen. The bird just settled on the ground, and liked it very much. This made the others shy of fear. They also tiptoed right up near and found the hen was very tame, and very safe to touch.

Said Scouty, "My, what funny legs. I'll bet that she lays chocolate eggs. Perhaps this is the hen that comes around on Easter morn'." They wondered why she'd stopped her peep, then found that she was fast asleep. Her head was hanging rather low and she looked quite forlorn.

"Oh, come, wake up," wee Copy cried. "So you can give us all a ride. We promise we won't hurt you. Gee, a ride would be a treat!"

The hen then opened up its eyes and promptly seemed to realize just what the Tinies wanted, for she hopped up to her feet.

On jumped up the Tinies, one by one. "Oh, my," said Clowny, "this is fun. Let's all be very kind to her, and careful as we can." And, when they all were on her back, she spirit did the brown hen tack. She clucked again, real loudly, and then down the road she ran.

Chapter I

"Good morning, Aunt Flora." Vera Victoria Cameron raised her glass-shielded eyes from the morning paper which she had been reading as she ate her breakfast and allowed them to rest with gravity and forbearance upon her pretty but slightly time-worn aunt, who was trailing pink chiffon draperies into the small dining room of the apartment which Mrs. Cartwright shared, because of temporary loneliness, with her young niece.

"Good morning, Vee-Vee," Flora Cartwright sighed, laying a delicate, highly manicured hand against her tired blue eyes. "But do you mind if I ask you not to use that brisk, cheerful, business-like voice this morning? It is really more than I can bear, darling. What are you eating? Whole wheat toast? It is positively amazing to me that you can stand the sight of so much food so early in the morning."

"It is a quarter past eight, Aunt Flora—" Vera Cameron began, a flush rising from her throat to her brow, against which flat wide braids of nice but uninteresting brown hair lay like a crown of virtue. Behind the sparkling lenses of her horn-rim spectacles her eyes, their color disguised by the amber tint of the glasses, filled with treacherous tears.

"Oh, good heavens, child, spare me!" Flora Cartwright pleaded, then broke into an amused, indulgent chuckle. "I know the whole story! You've been up since seven o'clock. You woke exactly on the dot, sprang right out of bed, did calisthenics for exactly fifteen minutes, took an ice-cold shower, brushed that indecently and unfashionably long brown hair of yours exactly one hundred strokes of a stiff-bristled brush, timed yourself while you plaited it, gave yourself a ten-minute manicle, dressed yourself in what the 'Business Woman's Magazine' prescribes as a suitable costume for the efficient young secretary, made your bed, straightened your room to apple-pie order, cooked your breakfast, and ate it—all on schedule to the minute. You are a great trial to me, Vee-Vee," she sighed humorously. "But I hope you made me some good strong coffee and squeeze a couple of oranges into a glass and set it in a bowl of cracked ice for me. I could forgive you anything—even for being the world's most efficient and perfect private secretary—if you did those two little things for me."

Vera Cameron's grave, unrouged mouth twitched into a half-smile as she rose and walked toward the kitchenette. Not even the severe lines of her black serge suit, the skirt of which reached halfway to her modest black silk ankles, could conceal the natural youth and buoyancy and slenderness of her tall body.

"Thank you, darling," Flora Cameron sighed gratefully, when her niece set coffee, cream, and a glass of orange juice before her. "Has the mail come yet? Wild horses couldn't drag me out of bed at this ungodly hour if it were not the first of the month."

"Not yet," Vera answered briefly, her eyes straying again to the morning paper as she raised her cup of tea to her lips. "I can never make up my mind whether to hate the first of the month or adore it," Flora Cartwright remarked, her voice becoming chatty cheerful as the hot coffee took effect. "The bundle of bills—I'm sure I can't possibly spend as much as the shops charge me with—offset by one long, slim legal envelope with my alimony check in it. Be very sure, my darling, that the man you marry has no conscientious objections to paying alimony. Men are becoming so—so materialistic these days."

"My suitors are not so numerous that I have reached the necessity of classing them according to whether they will or will not pay alimony," Vera Cameron retorted wittingly. "And I might add that I should never dream of asking alimony if my marriage—purely problematical as that event is—should prove disastrous."

"Oh, my lord!" Flora Cartwright groaned, then laughed a throaty, delicious chuckle. "Do you talk to your boss like that, darling? I should think the poor dear would try to arrange to spend all his time playing golf if you do."

"I certainly don't discuss alimony and my matrimonial prospects with my employer," Vera countered sharply, but her mouth, which frequently annoyed her by being childish and soft and sweet unless she held it in very firmly, trembled betrayingly.

"I was referring, Vee-Vee, to the tones of your voice, the excited character of your rhetoric, and not to the subject matter of your discourse, I assure you—oh, good grief, I'm talking like you!" Vee-Vee, if you don't return, you're going to ruin me! I'm such an imitative monkey. Do you know what I said to Peter Darrow last night, the poor darling?"

"I haven't an idea," Vera said, setting her tea cup down with a clatter. "But I do think you ought to be ashamed of yourself for getting that infant into such a state about you that he haunts around here every night in the week—"

"You exaggerate, dearest," Flora Cartwright grinned at her, her delicate little hand patting the deep, flat marcel wave in her blond hair. "He isn't here every night. Husband number two insists on two evenings a week. If he hadn't been such an awfully poor sport about alimony I'd marry him again. But let me tell you what I said to Peter, the poor dear—"

"There's the postman's ring," Vera interrupted, rising hastily from the table. "I'll bring you your mail, but I'll have to run the check or I'll be late at the office."

When Vera returned with the mail, she carried her black felt hat and her dull-kid black leather handbag and a well-filled brief case in her hands.

"Did my alimony check come?" Flora demanded eagerly. "Oh, thank the god of widows and orphans! Toss those bills to the sideboard, darling. I don't want to spoil my hour of gloating by the sight of them. Nicky isn't such a bad old scout, is he? I wonder if he's happy with that new wife of his? She's a red-head, I hear. Poor Nicky!" she sighed affectionately, as her pretty fingers tore at the long legal envelope. "It's dated April 29," she commented, as she scanned the check. "April 29! That's an anniversary of mine. I'm almost positive! Let's see—did I marry Nicky on April 29 or was it Leon? When a woman has been married four times—oh, must you go, darling? Will you be home for dinner?"

"Why do you ask?" Vera demanded bitterly. "Of course I shall be home for dinner unless I eat at the Automat alone! But if you're going out—"

"Peter wants me to dine with him, go to a theater, then to a night club," her aunt admitted, sighing a little from last night's weariness, but there was a tender smile on her lips—lips that her niece had never seen without rouge. "Bring home one of the young men from the office and go out with us, darling. It would do you good."

"I'm afraid my employers wouldn't agree with you that it does a secretary good to dance till all hours of the night," Vera retorted, but her aunt understood the blush that swept over Vera's smooth, freckled cheeks to which rouge was a stranger. If Vera could conceivably so far forget herself as to ask one of her fellow workers to spend an evening with her, he would almost certainly refuse the invitation.

"Besides," Vera added, "I have every hope of stepping into a promotion today. Gladys Holmes, who has been secretary to Mr. Canfield, the president, for more than a year, left Saturday to be married, and I expect to get her position. The job pays fifty a week, ten more than I'm getting now."

"You say her name was Gladys?" Mrs. Cartwright mused. "Was she a Gladys sort of person, dear? A cuddly little blond, perhaps?"

"She is very pretty—chestnut hair and blue eyes," Vera admitted. "But I don't see what that has to do with it."

"Don't you darling? I'm afraid you may find out. But don't mind me. After all, I'm only a pretty parasite, as you've so often reminded me, dear—a shameless, useless creature who has buried two husbands and divorced two others. I hope you get the job, and that you spend the extra ten a week on peach-colored silk underwear for the good of your soul."

"You know I'm trying to save money—" Vera began resentfully, but her eyes betrayed her for an instant by becoming misty.

"And succeeding nobly," her aunt reminded her, laughing. "You must have at least three thousand dollars saved toward your retirement into the old ladies' home, and you're still only twenty-four years old. My dear, when I was twenty-four I had buried my first husband and divorced my second—and was engaged to my third, if memory serves me rightly. And I was handicapped by this horrible little nose—" she tapped the malignant feature with a scornful forefinger. "If a had had a nose like yours, that is absolutely wasted on you, because you refuse to make the most of it."

"Oh, you quit picking on me, Aunt Flora!"

"And your mouth, if you'd listen to reason and put just a tiny touch of lip rouge on it, it would be absolutely the most kissable I've ever seen—" her aunt's laughing droll followed the girl as she fled from the dining room.

Vera Cameron ran gracefully and fleetly across Riverside Drive, swung to the steps of a great lumbering green bus, climbed up the winding staircase and found a seat beside a young man, who glanced up hopefully from his paper.

"There was no reason, Vera told herself angrily, why she should blush like an idiot school girl or like a sex-starved old maid, just because an amiable youth who probably made less than she did dropped his seeking eyes hastily to his newspaper. If he had dared to try to flirt with her she would have squelched him. But would she? She was startled at the question which elbowed his impudent way through the well-trained grooves of her mind. Anyone would think she was repulsive, the way that odious young man had looked her over and declined her.

But she sighed and settled back into her seat resignedly and her hair was mossy. So the only thing left for her to do was to be the most efficient secretary in the Peach Bloom Cosmetics Company's office. Ever since she had graduated from business college when she was nineteen, she had devoted herself with deep seriousness to making herself a business success. She had held positions in three companies, had started work at fifteen dollars a week and was now getting forty. Today she would be promoted to fifty a week. From fifteen to fifty dollars a week in five years had not been easy, and she had not always been happy, but she was succeeding. She had taken business so very seriously. She had been a member of a business women's club for four years, had subscribed to all the business women's magazines and to all the other magazines which were designed to fit earnest young workers for bigger and better things.

She had been taking an extension course in chemistry, the better to understand the business of the Peach Bloom Cosmetics Company. She had watched her health, knowing that health meant efficiency. She walked the prescribed hour a day, did morning exercises night and morning with religious regularity, ate foods that contained the largest percentage of vitamins, went to bed early and rose early. She had repressed her desires for pretty and faddish clothes with the sternness of a nun and had dressed according to the laws laid down by the business women's magazine. She did not waste her time at the office in gossip and in making up her face in the girls' rest room. She did not watch the clock, thought nothing of working overtime, had the interest of her firm at heart always—

A pair of large, round tears welled out of her eyes and slipped down her cheeks. The moisture misted her glasses, so that she had to fumble helplessly for a handkerchief. What in the world was the matter with her? Was she getting an attack of spring fever? She had learned to hate spring—the season of gray, fluttry dresses, which the other girls shamelessly wore to the office, the season of sweethearts coating at each other on the green iron benches all up and down Riverside Drive park.

She had never had a real sweetheart—Calvin Trumble, who sweetly wanted a "helpmeet" who could earn more than her half of the expenses, didn't count, neither did Aunt Flora's discarded suitor, mid-die-aged Mr. Perdus, who had talked pathetically of his broken heart and his motherless, little children. How did Aunt Flora do it? She had had four husbands, could marry again tomorrow if she wanted to. And Aunt Flora was useless, a spendthrift, a pleasure-mad, vain woman.

She—Vera Victoria Cameron—was certainly an old-fashioned girl, if it was old-fashioned not to expose the knees and bob the hair and paint like a chorus girl and yet—men did not "prefer" her, and she was lonely, for all her success, and tears were slipping uncontrollably down her cheeks. If only Aunt Flora would let her alone—stop "kidding" her, let her be herself in peace—

When she entered the foyer of the twenty-two-story office building where the Peach Bloom Cosmetics Company occupied an entire floor—the factory was in Jersey—she was again the brisk, business-like young private secretary. A pleasant excitement roused her depression. She was glad her new, smartly tailored black cloth suit had arrived in time for this auspicious day. A glance in the mirror in the elevator told her that the white silk blouse, with its pleated fichu and its high collar and frilled cuffs, was exactly the right thing for the suit. It made her look well-dressed, efficient but not masculine. And the handsome black felt hat looked the eighteen-fifty she had reluctantly paid for it. Mr. Canfield would recognize her eminent fitness for the dignified position of secretary to the president, Gladys Holmes had, that last week, worn powder blue silk crepe, with long, tasseled sleeves that must have annoyed Mr. Canfield with their fluttering. And Gladys had elicited about the offices on absurd, three-inch French heels. The dimples in her shamelessly exposed knees must have been disgusting to a business man like Mr. Canfield.

She went briskly to her office, a little cubicle outside the private office of the sales manager, opened her desk, arranged notebook and pencils ready for a call from her boss whenever he happened to stroll in—late as usual on Mondays, filed a basket of correspondence which she had answered on Saturday, and was, at 10 o'clock, making a careful graphic representation of a sales report on business for the month of March when an office boy skidded into the room.

"The old man wants to see you, Miss Cameron," he grinned at her. He was probably the only human being connected with the entire office force, that did not feel any awe at all of Miss V. V. Cameron.

Any other girl in the world would have snatched up a vanity case and powdered her nose before obeying that summons. Vera rose instantly, did not even pat the smooth, flat braids of her brown hair, for she knew that they lay in, immaculate order against her brow and over her small ears. She was guilty of one evidence of vanity, however. She took from its hanger the severe little jacket of her new suit, buttoned it snugly over the white silk blouse, arranged collar and cuffs with quick, deft fingers and then walked briskly but unburiedly down the log corridor to the door marked "Mr. Canfield." As she entered the secretary's office, she cast an appraising and possessive glance at the big mahogany desk which would be hers. A thick oriental rug lay suavely on the floor. Oh, it would be nice to be mistress of this pleasant place, nice to have driver of a private secretary. No, the other girls envious, respectfully!

She tapped, with fingers lightly cold with nervousness, upon the door labeled "Private." As she opened the door to Mr. Canfield's loud bellow of invitation, a girl almost collided with her, a girl leaving Mr. Canfield's private office with an open notebook in her hand.

"Mr. Canfield will see you now, Miss Cameron," the girl spoke in a lilting, sweet voice, a voice that fairly rippled with triumph.

"Thank you, Miss Fitch," Vera answered, her voice cold and even.

Rosemary Fitch! Rosemary! Aunt Flora's mocking, fond warning—"I'm afraid you may find out!"—came to Vivian's ears, in which the blood pounded sickeningly, as cleverly as if her aunt were there, noting her defeat, her incredible defeat.

Rosemary Fitch flashed a smile at her out of wide, china-blue eyes, and rustled to the swivel chair before the mahogany desk which Vivian had just appraised as her own.

"Come in, Miss Cameron. How are you today? Fine, I hope," Mr. Canfield boomed cordially. "You see we're making some changes around here—"

Vera closed the door with an ice-cold, trembling hand and walked jerkily to the seat beside the president's desk.

"Mr. Canfield," she began tremulously, but courageously, for anger, made her brave. "Is Miss Fitch going to take Miss Holmes' place as your secretary?"

"Well, yes, the big, broad-eyed man nodded, his keen, slate-gray eyes narrowing as he regarded her quizzically. "Have you any objections, Miss Cameron?"

"I—I had hoped to be promoted to the position myself," Vera told him, her mouth, her adorable, kissable mouth held firmly to keep it from trembling. "I have been with the firm longer than any of the other girls, now that Miss Holmes is gone, and—I know I'm a better secretary than—than—Miss Fitch."

"You mean that you can take dictation faster, turn out more letters, make better graphic representations than Miss Fitch, don't you?" Mr. Canfield asked gently; almost pityingly.

"I certainly do," Vera retorted, tears welling up in her eyes, to her intense disgust.

"I agree with you, as to those qualifications, Miss Cameron. You are probably the most efficient secretary this organization has ever had."

"Then why—" Vera interrupted indignantly.

"Miss Cameron, I'm an old man and I don't want to work as hard as you would make me work," the president of the Peach Bloom Cosmetics Company leaned back in his chair, which creaked under his weight, and regarded her humorously. "Benham warned me about you, said you were a regular slave driver of a private secretary. No, listen to me, young lady. You've made a kick, a perfectly legitimate kick, so far as you are concerned, and you have a right to know my reasons for giving the best job from the standpoint of money and dignity, that the concern has to give to a stenographer, to a girl like you no doubt consider incompetent and ridiculously unsuitable."

He paused and Vera knotted her hands tightly in her lap.

"I'm president of the company, as you know, Miss Cameron, but I don't do a whole of a lot of work. Got plenty of high-powered executives to do the drudgery for me. Sometimes I don't dictate a dozen letters a day. Most of my appointments are with the big buyers, for social purposes only. I leave the business interviews with Benham and his boys. Why, girl, I couldn't possibly keep a human dynamo like you busy and contented. You'd be shaming me into doing a lot of meddling with the department heads, just to keep me busy, so I could keep you busy. As I said, I'm getting to be an old man—and by the way, you didn't contradict me, as little Rosemary Fitch would've done—he grinned at her.

She gasped, started to speak, but Canfield waved a broad, fat hand at her.

"Just one of the duties of my private secretary," he chuckled. "You can see that you wouldn't suit at all. I play golf a lot, and I like to have an adoring young audience sit in that chair and oh—and ah when I tell how I went around the course in my time, telling you how I made the beautiful fifth hole in two, or about the party I'd been on the night before with a buyer or how extravagant my daughters are, or lay a bet with you on how a detective story serial was coming out. Don't misunderstand me."

"Of course, I want a secretary who can write an intelligible letter and who won't ball up my appointments for me and one who can make hotel and Pullman reservations without being told. But Miss Fitch has brains enough to do all those things and yet she's human enough to humor an old man and make him feel like a great big conquering hero every minute; he's fiddling around on the job. Do you get my point?"

"Why did you send for me, Mr. Canfield? To—to humiliate me?" Vera rose, trembling so that she could hardly stand.

"Whoa there, child! Don't fly off the handle! But damned if it doesn't make you attractive, to get all flushed up like that. I sent for you because I have a new job for you, one that you'll simply eat up. You're going to be much happier with Jerry Macklyn than you could possibly have been with me."

"Jerry Macklyn?" Vera was guilty of interrupting her employer again.

"Now advertising manager.

Starts work this morning. He's another demon for work, and the biggest advertising genius in New York. Peach Bloom is simply rotten with luck to get him. You're to be his assistant, or rather, one of his assistants, in addition to being his secretary. Don't think I haven't appreciated you, Miss Cameron. So does Benham. He's done more work with you to nag him than he ever turned out before in his life. I'm afraid sales are going to fall off when you take yourself out of his office. But Benham says he'll give you to Jerry for the good of the firm. You'll like Macklyn. In fact, he asked for you—"

"Asked for me?" Vera repeated. "Not by name," Canfield disappointed her by saying, "but he asked for the smartest girl in the organization, the girl who knew the most about Peach Bloom Cosmetics and the business in general. Benham and I both agreed that he meant you and no one else."

"Thank you, Mr. Canfield," Vera stammered. "Do I report to him this morning?" Her voice was eager, girlish, her adorable mouth flashed a wide smile at the shrewdly observing old man opposite her.

"Sure you do. He's waiting for you. He has Stafford's office, of course. And by the way, the job carries fifty a week, the same as Miss Fitch will get. Feeling better?" he added in a kindly voice, unlike his usually hearty boom.

"Shall I—shall I be allowed to write advertising copy too?" Vera quavered happily. "I've been taking an advertising course at Columbia two evenings a week, as well as an extension course in chemistry—"

Canfield's laugh boomed out. "I'd have bet that you had," he assured her, but his eyes were very kind. "Sure you'll be allowed to try your hand at copy-writing—booklets, things of that sort. Now, run along and don't think too harshly of the old man."

Vera could have kissed him—but she merely thrust out a cold, timid hand. She almost ran from the office, did not cast a single envious glance at Rosemary Fitch, who was applying lipstick.

Jerry Macklyn! Jerry Macklyn! Jerry! He had asked for her. What if he didn't know her personally? He knew the kind of person she was, had wanted her above all others. Oh, it did pay to study and work hard—What a nice name he had! Jerry Macklyn! Would he be a Jerry sort of person, as Aunt Flora would say? Maybe—She paused outside the door which was still labeled "Mr. Stafford." In honor of Jerry Macklyn's predecessor, and for a moment she thought wildly of rushing back down the corridor to Rosemary Fitch's office, to ask her for the loan of her powder compact and her lipstick. But she knew that she couldn't do that—Jay herself open to ridicule, have Rosemary Fitch giggling about her in the rest room—

With head high, and a strange new hope in her heart, she lifted her hand to knock on the inner door beyond which Jerry Macklyn was no doubt awaiting her impatiently.

CHAPTER II

A lusty young naritone roared "Come in!" a summons which Vera Cameron, in spite of the strange new excitement which fluttered her usually well-controlled nerves, obeyed noiselessly, as all good private secretaries should.

She had entered so noiselessly on her rubber-heeled oxfords that Jerry Macklyn did not hear her, and for a moment she was too astonished to apprise him of her presence. A husky young man, coatless, and with his shirt sleeves rolled above the elbow, was hunched before a huge, flat-topped desk which was completely covered with jars and bottles and powder boxes. Beneath his red hair one tanned cheek testified that nature had given him a complexion to harmonize with that amazing hair of his, but the other was completely submerged under a thick coating of cold cream.

"I—I beg your pardon," Vera stammered, unable to make up her mind whether to laugh or to flee, leaving this astonishing young man to his shameless rites of beautification.

"Oh, hello, hello!" Jerry Macklyn's eyebrows descended, his startlingly blue eyes, which had been seriously contemplating his image in a hand mirror, flooded with the light of a totally unembarrassed smile.

"I'm Miss Cameron. Mr. Canfield assigned me to your department," Vera told him in cold, even tones—the impersonal voice which her favorite business women's magazine told her was the correct one for a private secretary to use toward her employer.

"Oh—are you? The brilliant smile faded out of Jerry Macklyn's blue eyes as he took her in, noted the severe braids of her mossy brown hair, the unsmiling eyes behind horn-rimmed spectacles, the prim mouth, the austere black cloth suit, whose skirt chastely covered her legs.

Vera flushed with anger for the second time that day at being appraised and dismissed by an impatient, hopeful male.

"Of course you are! Glad to have you, Miss—Cameron, isn't it?" Jerry Macklyn recovered his confusion by reaching into an open drawer of his desk for a towel, with which he began to rub his cold-creamed cheek vigorously. "Just getting acquainted with our line," he grinned at her. "Sure a fancy layout isn't it? Judas Priest! I didn't know you girls had to wade through all this truck before you were ready to make an appearance. Smells nice, doesn't it?" he asked sociably, the tip of his short, broad nose wriggling a little as she sniffed the perfumed air about him.

"The perfume used in our cosmetics retails at eight dollars an ounce," Vera informed him.

"Gosh! That's right!" Jerry Macklyn finished scrubbing at his cold-creamed cheek and attacked his rouged lips.

"A little of the cold cream rubbed into the lips will enable you to remove the rouge most effectively," Vera told him in even tones, which gave no hint of the desire to laugh which was almost upsetting her morale as a perfect private secretary.

"Thanks for the tip," Jerry grinned cordially, but his eyes were wary and shy, as if he had begun to realize that this impeccable young woman did not approve of him at all. His thick forefinger dug into the opened cold cream jar, brought up a lump big enough to cleanse his entire face and neck. "Guess you know all the tricks, eh?"

"I don't use lip rouge," Vera answered primly.

"Good thing for our business that all girls aren't like you," Jerry mumbled at her through the towel with which he was removing the lather of cold cream frothed with lip rouge. "What I mean—" he added, as he noted the vivid flash of anger that swept over her pale, freckled face. "Is that it's a good thing for us that a lot of girls need lip rouge?"

He pushed back his chair, rose, rolled down his sleeves.

"Did I say I was glad to have you, Miss Cameron? We got a slew of work ahead of us. I asked for the cleverest girl in the outfit and they told me that was you. Now, if you'll transfer your belongings from Benham's department to mine, we'll get down to business. By the way, I wish you'd bring me all the pamphlets and other descriptive matter you can lay your hands on. And a sales report showing the relative popularity of the different articles we put out, as well as a chart showing the relative profit. I've got to dope out a big national advertising campaign in double-quick time. And you're going to help me. I understand you know this business from A to Z."

While Vera was carrying out his instructions swiftly and accurately, she revised her first amazed and contemptuous opinion of him. He was nobody's fool, and she sensed in his vital young body and the alert mind that gleamed through his brilliant blue eyes a capacity for work that more than matched her own. She would have to hustle to keep up with him, and that knowledge made her step buoyantly and swiftly.

When she returned to his office he was standing before the exhibit of Peach Bloom cosmetics which he had accumulated on his desk, his flaming head cocked to one side, hands thrust deep into his pockets, a quizzical, calculating gleam in his blue eyes.

"Pretty things, aren't they?" he challenged her. "These black and gold bottles and jars and boxes, with that single spray of peach blossoms are the nicest things in the cosmetics line I've ever seen. Makes a girl feel pretty luxurious to dig a hunk of cold cream out of this, doesn't it?" He lifted a black, squat round jar and turned it admiringly in his big hands.

"Dull gold top, a gold band around the bottom, and that embossed spray of peach blossoms that look so real you want to pick 'em off, and smell 'em. Ought to photograph like a million dollars, huh?"

"Here is a complete list of our products, Mr. Macklyn, with the comparative charts you asked for," Vera told him.

"Pretty names," he mused, as his bright eyes traveled rapidly down the list "Peach Bloom Powder, in Blond, Brunet, Titan and Hazel shades—hazel! Guess that your shade, isn't it, Miss Cameron? I'd take Titan, I suppose," his boyish laugh rang out. "If you hadn't interrupted me, caught me in the act of beautifying myself, I'd have tried it out. I've got the whole bag of tricks, I've got the—skin food, bleach, cleansing cream, hand lotion—what's this—Star Lash?"

"That is a mascara. It comes in both liquid and cake form, in four shades, blond, Titan, brown and black. It is used to make the lashes look longer and thicker," Vera elucidated primly.

"Judas Priest! No wonder you girls are so irresistible. Tell you what, Miss Cameron, you write me a confidential report on our products, giving me the absolute low-down on 'em, from personal experience, I mean, and I promise nobody else will ever see it. Compare 'em with other brands. I like to know the truth about a line. I'm writing copy for, so I can steer-clear of the rocks, if there are any. And while you're doing it, I'll cast my eagle eye over these booklets and the descriptive stuff they wrap around the jars. Got to get acquainted with the stuff right away."

Vera sat for a long time before her typewriter, her hands lying idle in her lap, her face suffused with color. Finally, as if in desperation, she ran a sheet of paper into the machine and began to

Thirty-Five Years In Church Choir Record of Escanaba Singer

When a man works for thirty-five years at some kind of work he is entitled to a promotion or a raise in salary, but when he attends choir practice for thirty-five years and sings in church every Sunday of the year and many times during the week, he also is deserving of a rich reward.

Joseph Delorier, 301 Stephenson avenue, who conducts a barber shop at Ludington and Twelfth streets, has been a member of St. Anne's choir for that length of time and has never missed choir practice except when he was confined to his bed by illness or was out of the city.

Mr. Delorier was born in St. Adèle, P. Q., Canada, December 21, 1885, and when a young man was employed at L'Original, Canada. He came to this city June 5, 1884, and in the summer of 1892 joined St. Anne's choir which at that time was composed of male voices. The late George Rowe was leader of the choir at that time and Mr. Delorier took charge of the choir many times during Mr. Rowe's absence from the city.

He has a fine bass voice and is an accomplished musician, playing violin obligatos for special numbers during various programs by the choir.

When Mr. Delorier joined the choir Mrs. Branshaw, formerly Miss Mestlote, was the organist. She was followed by Miss Eva Cossette. Next came Miss Denise Perron, Miss Alice Cossette and the present organist, Miss Irene Vilemure. At that time a small parlor organ was used in the church. This was replaced by a pipe organ a few years later. The first pipe organ was destroyed by fire in 1917 and a Hinner organ was installed. The dedication of the new organ took place August 16, 1921, when Fred Erickson gave a recital and was assisted by the choirs of St. Joseph's, St. Patrick's and St. Anne's churches, with special numbers by Miss Luville Jacques and Mrs. J. A. Semer.

Men composed the male choir in 1922. Later on several women joined the choir and at the present time a chorus of over twenty voices including some of the best talent in the city.

An incident Mr. Delorier remembers vividly occurred about twenty-five years ago. Mr. Delorier was critically ill with pneumonia and members of the choir rehearsed a regular high mass as his death was expected at any moment. He rallied from the illness and was soon again at his accustomed place among the members of the choir.

Mr. Delorier is married and is the father of a family of six children, all of whom are talented musicians.

A member of a choir has to spend a great deal of time in practice, on an average of four hours per week in rehearsals and four hours on program work, and when a man attends regularly for thirty-five years he has accomplished something worthy while. Mr. Delorier hopes to finish the half century mark as a member of the same choir.

Poor Deer Eating Up Highway With Dire Consequences

Under the heading, "Romances of the North," Albert Stoll, Jr., the conservation specialist of the Detroit News, says:

"There is something in the atmosphere of the north country that fires the imagination and cause ordinarily phlegmatic souls to soar to heights unattainable under normal conditions. On occasions we have been regaled with tales of wolves harassing settlers, of intimidating their children and keeping them from school. Then again we have listened to the story of scores of deer dying through starvation because they could find no food other than cedar browse, upon which they ordinarily thrive. And then came the tale of grouse and deer being killed by eating the poison meat baits placed out by state trappers as a lure for carnivorous predatory animals. Although grouse and deer are strictly vegetarian in their food habits this did not change the story."

"And the last yarn, emanating from the wilds of Chippewa county, is even more 'classical' than those that precede it. The practice of state and county road officials in covering dirt and gravel highways with calcium chloride is held accountable for a high mortality rate among the wild deer, so we are told. Deer, being exceptionally fond of any saline concoction, chance upon this road dressing and immediately begin to tear up the highway only to fall victims to their insatiable appetite for salt. The truth of this is not vouched for by chemists familiar with the chemical ingredients of calcium chloride nor will they state how much can be eaten by a deer without fatal results. In any event, the deer have been seen eating the calcium chloride and shortly afterward found dead. By whom, when or where? Well, that's another story."

At the Strand: "California," a western drama starring Tim McCoy with Dorothy Sebastian, Peter B. Kyne wrote the story.

It is an Emory Johnson production by Universal, with Belle Bennett, Mary Carr, Henry Victor, June Marlowe, Robert Agnew and other notables in the cast.
The theme of the story is the age-old conflict between mother-in-law and daughter-in-law and Miss Carr's portrayal of the mother is said to be the finest work she has done for the screen.
The picture has been tremendously successful wherever it has been shown, in fact it broke many records in theatres in the larger cities.

AT THE STRAND
Charles Ray, the immortal assayer of American boy roles, is hailed as the greatest great-lover of the screen in his new picture, "Some Pun'kins," which will be shown at the Strand Monday and Tuesday. In this story of small town life, Ray is said to submit an entirely new phase of his histrionism. The love making scenes between Ray and Duane Thompson, his new leading woman, are said to be imbued with a sincerity and warmth that lingers long after the picture has been seen. Ray gives his love-making a rare glow of ardour pregnant with the wistful agitation of youth.

His cast has been carefully selected and includes George Fawcett, Duane Thompson, Bert Woodruff, Fanny Midgley, Hallam Cooley, Wm. Courtright and others. The story is from the pen of Bert Woodruff and Charles E. Banks.

Two Biggest Naval Ships Ever Built Will Soon Join Fighting Fleets of Uncle Sam

BY FREDERICK W. FISH

Editor, U. S. Navy Magazine. Written especially for NEA Service and the Daily Press.

The two largest vessels ever constructed by any navy soon will be added to the fleet of the U. S. navy. They are the USS Saratoga and Lexington, airplane carriers de luxe.

These ships are the "remnants," so-called, of an authorized in 1917, when congress planned to build six super battleships, the Constellation, Constitution, Lexington, Ranger, Saratoga and the United States.

The world must have drawn an extra breath at the sheer immensity of the navy's dream. Each ship was to be nearly 900 feet long, 106 feet wide and to have an armament of eight 16-inch guns 16 6-inch guns and 8 21-inch torpedo tubes. Each was to be the last word in naval construction, with a complement of 1500 men and a speed of 34 knots an hour.

Two Were Salvaged.

Now, however, only the Saratoga and the Lexington remain; the former being completed at Camden, N. J., and the latter at Quincy, Mass. And these have been converted from super warships to super airplane ships. From what once appeared to be salvage material these have emerged, and so popular do they promise to be that nearly every navy officer and man will seek berths on them.

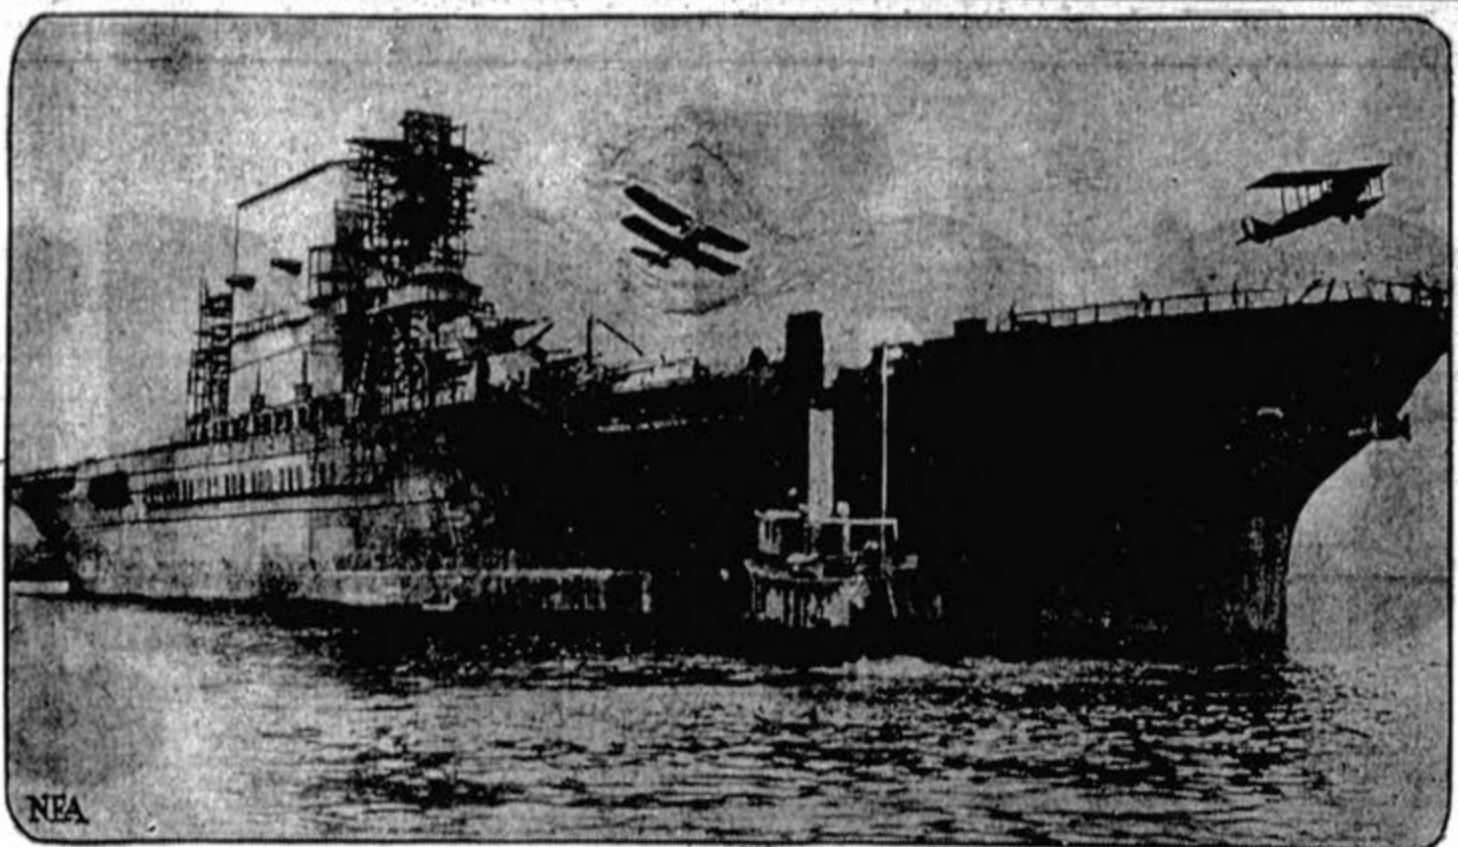

The Lexington and Saratoga represent the ultimate in airplane carrier construction. They are in general sister ships. As one can easily imagine, building these ships has been a whale of a job, for many things are embodied in them no other ship has known.

First, of course, is the peculiar construction above the water line. A carrier must have an adequate place for planes to land and take off. The USS Langley, our first carrier, prepared her deck by tearing away the coaling gear top hamper which she employed as a collar. Then was built a flat deck covering the ship. The smoke stacks on the Langley fold out of the way and the ship has no masts.

Now, however, the two new ships have the regulation superstructure, without the mainmast. The carriers have their superstructure on the starboard side of the top deck, called the flight deck. The navy calls this grouping the "island," and such it appears to be.

Can't Be Mistaken. This grouping is sufficient in itself to identify these vessels as a distinct type. No sailor searching his way home after dark ever will peer through the fog and swear a volume, wondering what ship looms up ahead.

These ships literally "loom up" ahead. The bow, for instance, instead of coming to a point, starts from the water like a clipper and is cut off to facilitate landings, leaving no sharp point against which the ships of the air may strike. Nearly 900 feet from the bow the flight deck stretches, ending at the stern in another novelty. Here a ramp overhangs to permit the easier landing of planes from that direction.

In order to preserve the integrity of the flight deck, all openings with the exception of methods of bringing the planes up from their storage places below are on the starboard side and in a line with the superstructure. Of course, the flight deck carries launching devices and devices for slowing the planes down so they will stop before sliding off the end of the ships. These apparatus are most secret.

Viewed from the side, the ships present another odd appearance. Along the sides in special galleries they carry their small boats. Such arrangements as these are due to the necessity of keeping every non-essential off the flight decks.

Inside may be found other interesting development, markedly different from common ship-building standards.

The planes are stowed in a huge hangar space, the immensity of which hardly can be appreciated by one who has not seen it. When you recall that the ships are as long as four 200-foot city blocks, perhaps this size can be appreciated and understood. Figures here are forbidden.

In addition to this general stowage place, there is room for stowing disassembled planes; there is a huge power plant, which can generate enough power to meet the needs of a Boston, a San Francisco or any other large city.

Luxury for the Gobs.

Sailors will delight in the fact that the deck will be painted. Thus they will be spared the necessity of holstoning a broad expanse of teak, nearly 90,000 square feet. The luxury suggested by this statement will be carried into the "insides" for, for the first time in the navy's history, all first and second class petty officers will sleep in individual bunks, while cooks and bakers will produce their viands by electricity. And as for life safety, nets will stretch nearly around the ship to save airplanes and men when the former become unmanageable.

The pseudo-scientist would delight in the complete photographic laboratory, optical repair shop and the various ship's repair shops. Dental and sick bay facilities include an X-ray machine, while a passenger elevator is included for the convenience of those who will live aboard these ships. The best the world can provide has been installed in the laundry and galleys, with a most modern hot and cold air circulation system.

Everything accomplished on other ships is carried out by electricity on these two carriers, and many things hitherto regarded as impossible are also done by electricity. Sixteen boilers in 16 fire rooms will provide the power necessary to propel the ship and carry on all other activities. Horsepower to a total of 180,000 is generated.

Ships Will be Popular. Oil storage, masthead heights, expected steaming radius, plane capacity and provision cannot be discussed because they are military secrets. The radio equipment in itself would fill a volume. It may be remarked, however, that the marvels of these ships are so many that all others in the navy would be deserted could all those who want assignments here be accommodated.

The background of the construction of these ships is not a new story. The six named earlier were to be built at Newport News, Philadelphia, Fore River and New York. Both government and private yards were to handle the work. Contracts were signed as early as 1917 and work proceeded until March 1919, when a shortage of funds caused a cessation of activities. Later the same year more money became available and it looked as though the super-ships, then one-third completed, would be finished.

Then came the disarmament conference and four of these fell by the wayside, while the remaining two were completed for a different purpose. Ghosts of sea fighters whose keels never felt the rise and fall of an ocean surge, they died while on the builders' ways.

It's a Family Weakness, Daughter, Mother, Grandmother--Elopers All

BY HORTENSE SAUNDERS

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Dr. Emil Hartung merely smiles now when he hears that another member of his family has eloped.

He wasn't a bit excited the other day when he marked up the latest such happening in the Hartung family, elopements have become traditional.

"It's a family failing," the physician said. "We seem to inherit a weakness for it, or perhaps we inherit a strength to do as we please in spite of everything."

Lollipop—Only Yesterday. "This time it is Marilla, that mere child, my favorite grandchild, who only yesterday was begging for lollipops and sewing doll clothes—she has gone the way of the rest and eloped with John Grodder of Patchogue, L. I. I was the first one she told, and she entrusted to me the job of breaking it to her mother."

"It is recalled to me pretty vividly half a century ago when I found the girl I wanted. It didn't make any difference to me that her father had contrary ideas as to how his son-in-law should look. I just eloped with her."

"Then a quarter of a century later, my daughter fell in love. And she didn't allow any objections of mine to keep her from tacking a Mrs. in front of her name. She ran off with Andrew Gerndt of Brooklyn just as blithely as her mother had with me—and she couldn't seem to understand that $12 a week wasn't a fortune for a man to be making!"

Exactly What They Did. Which is just what they did. "My people were just wonderful about it," Marilla beamed. "Their only objection was my age. They thought 18 too young for me to marry. They forget grandmother was only 16."

Then the dark-eyed Marilla confided that eloping wasn't really a complete success unless it ended with the family blessing—and a few wedding presents. "It's easy enough to elope," she went on. "It's really very exciting. You have all the fun of planning to do something really thrilling, and wonder if you will really have the courage to get a marriage license, or to appear before the minister or the justice of the peace after you have done it. And when you have, strangely enough, your hardest job is before you—telling the folks."

Eloper's Reactions. "You become conscious you have been a bit selfish and inconsiderate, and that you really owe your mother and your family more consideration. You get very sentimental about them, and if they turned you out at that time, you would be heartbroken."

"Of course, my people, being used to the idea of eloping, knew how to treat elopers. So they welcomed us home with gifts and checks and grandfather gave us a home. That made everything quite perfect."

Dr. Hartung in his long experience as a physician has had hearts as well as bodies to doctor. He believes in love and romance. He believes in happiness.

They Gave Dan the Rush

"GRANDMOTHER ELOPED"

"WITH GRANDFATHER"

"MOTHER ELOPED WITH DADDY"

"AND I ELOPED WITH JOHN"

"It does no good," he said, "to put obstacles in the path of two people who really love each other. For a man who doesn't love a woman enough to hurdle objections and elope with her doesn't deserve to have her."

"I believe in early marriages, too. This modern idea of trying everything else first, then marrying because there are no more worlds to conquer, is all foolishness. Youth is too precious a time to be wasted chasing thrills when it should be building up substantial happiness."

Though Marilla ushers in the third generation of elopers, she has no precedent for divorce. There isn't one in sight in the family. The runaway marriages all have been happy ones. "An elopement is a very stabilizing experience," said Marilla. "Before I married I wanted to go on the stage, write scenarios, or make Gloria Swanson jealous of me. Now I get up every morning at 6:30, get my husband's breakfast, then his lunch and dinner, fuss in the garden, paint all the furniture, and am myself being a housewife. I'm just being happy."

"If I have daughters, I suppose they will elope as the rest of us did. However, it's getting to be an old story, and I suppose the next generation may think it would be quite an innovation to have formal invitations and a church wedding."

Champion Wolf-Hunter of the West Uses Fast Auto to Chase Marauders

By NEA Service.

De Smet, S. D.—A lean, gray wolf pack looms across the scrub brush plain, slides up a low rise and comes to a momentary halt, looking back at a moving object on the dusty road in the distance.

This object rapidly comes nearer and resolves itself into an automobile, with a strange, box-like contrivance where the rear axle seats ought to be. The wolves watch it curiously as it approaches. Suddenly they turn and dash off on the far side of the slope, moving silently and swiftly as gray phantoms.

The sides of the box-like arrangement fly open and half a dozen rangy dogs leap out. Up over the slope they come, moving even faster than the fast-traveling wolves. The driver of the car, never slackening his pace, raises a shotgun with his left hand.

Turns to Fight. One wolf, overtaken by the dogs, whirls about to fight and goes down, the bottom of a snarling, snapping tangle that soon grows quiet. Another wolf swerves to the right, comes into range of the man in the auto and is shot dead. The pack scatters; a few escape, but most are killed.

Charley Cummins, mightiest wolf-killer of the West, is enjoying a day's hunting.

Cummins hunts wolves in a style all his own. It is an effective style, too. On his last big hunt he went down into the open country of southwestern Nebraska, where the wolves are still as plentiful as they were in the old days. He stayed nearly two months and came back with the pelts of 151 wolves. For these he was paid more than $1,800.

Found a New Way.

The old way to hunt wolves was to ride out on horseback, with a pack of dogs trotting along behind. This gave the wolves the advantage. When the chase began the dogs usually were weary by the long hike they had already had, and the wolves were more likely than not to get away to the tangled, brake-grown arroyos where pursuit was impossible.

Cummins thought of a better way. He bought a touring car, cut away the body back of the front seat and built a substantial box there. This box was divided into two compartments, each of which had barred windows and doors. The doors opened by levers controllable from the driver's seat. Each compartment holds a number of trained dogs—mostly greyhounds.

Wolf Hunting Is Motorized Industry Now

Charley Cummins and his wolf hunting car.

An unusual picture of a stag and a greyhound catching a wolf.

Cummins and his trophies—150 wolf hides.

Cummins releases his dogs while his car is speeding after the wolf and sometimes a friend shoots from the running board of the car.

Starting a day's hunt, Cummins piles the dogs into the compartments, puts his shot gun in the front seat and starts out. Sooner or later, driving through the lonely plains, he comes upon a wolf pack. Through the windows the dogs see them. Cummins drives as close to his quarry as he can and then opens the doors. Out spring the dogs, fresh and eager to take up the chase. More often than not they run down and kill one or more wolves.

Cummins never stops his car to release his dogs. He has trained them so they can leap to the ground while the car is going 25 miles an hour. He has also trained himself so that he can fire a shotgun with his left hand while driving—although whenever possible he brings his car to a full stop, so that he can take a truer aim.

Can Leave Roads. He has equipped his car with special wheels and balloon tires, so that he often is able to leave the road and drive across country. He has driven over country that was considered utterly impassable for anything but a man or animal on foot.

When he "raises" a wolf pack he gets three wolves—providing everything goes according to schedule. One set of dogs overtakes and finishes one wolf, another set gets a second and Cummins shoots the third.

So skillful is Cummins that farmers in the wolf country have come to rely on him to keep the wolves subdued, and they often call him when their herds or poultry are suffering from the wolves' depredations.

Protected Her Poultry. One day not long ago a woman called him to report that wolves were killing her chickens. Cummins drove to her farm, discovered that a pair of wolves was doing the damage and set out on the trail.

Within 10 minutes he discovered the two wolves. They dashed away at top speed, with Cummins speeding after them. He released his dogs, who took after and overtook the male wolf. The female swerved and ran through a stubble field. Cummins drew closer, slowed his car slightly, raised his left hand—and shot her dead.

Then he drove back and told the chicken raiser that the wolves would bother her no more.

Berlin Merchant Becomes Playwright. Berlin—Dr. Louis Ravene, one of the most prominent industrialists in Berlin has become a playwright. His play, "Contemporaries," will be produced next autumn by the municipal theatre in Stettin.

Dr. Ravene belongs to one of the oldest firms of Berlin merchants, dealers in hardware. The firm was founded in 1775 by Jacob Ravene. Ravene's father, who died in 1879, was famous as one of the greatest private collectors of paintings.

Russell Scott, Saved From Gallows for Fifth Time, Has No Longer a Fear of Death

BY ROY J. GIBBONS

NEA Service Writer.

Chicago—Russell Scott doesn't worry very much any more about whether or not they are going to hang him.

For three years he has had the spectre of death for a cellmate in the Cook county jail here—a grim, silent companion throughout all of his waking hours, a watcher by his cot through the long hours of night. And he has grown used to it. It has exhausted its power to frighten him.

Escaped Five Times. Five times the hangman has prepared the scaffold for him. Five times the state of Illinois has paid the required $1.09 for the necessary amount of hemp to jerk him into eternity. But each time something has intervened at the last moment.

So they call him "the man they cannot hang." They speak of "Lucky Scott," and smile ruefully. He is death row's oldest guest. He has often heard the dull booming of the trap as other inmates of the death cells have paid the penalty; and it no longer worries him. He has grown intimate with the thing most men fear above all other things—the scaffold; and he has found it is not so fearsome as he had thought.

Russell Scott is under sentence of death for the murder of Joseph Maurer, a drug clerk who was shot to death during a holdup engineered by Russell and his brother, Robert Scott, who is now serving a life term in prison.

Russell was originally sentenced to hang on April 17, 1925. But at the last minute "something came up" and the execution date, a telegram (which later proved a hoax) purporting to be a full confession to the crime by Robert, who was then a fugitive, courts to intervene.

CIVIL WAR VETS STILL IN CONGRESS

Washington—(NEA)—Sixty-five years have passed since the Civil War ended, but memories of those days still stir in the breasts of two members of the congress of the United States. One, a senator, is the sole remaining Union veteran in congress. The other is a representative from a district in North Carolina.

Senator Francis E. Warren of Wyoming enlisted when he was 18, gained a corporal's rank and won the Congressional Medal of Honor at the siege of Fort Hudson. That medal is his most cherished possession. When the Unknown Soldier was buried in Arlington cemetery, Senator Warren marched out seven miles with the medal of honor men—would have marched back had he been allowed.

Representative Charles Stedman had just graduated from the University of North Carolina when the war began. He enlisted and served under Lee as lieutenant, captain and finally as major. A strong personal friendship grew up between the famous general and the major which lasted until the former's death.

At another time his lawyers, at the last minute, won an insanity hearing. Scott was adjudged insane and sent to an asylum. Then he was adjudged sane and brought back to jail to be executed.

Now, again facing the gallows, the supreme court has ruled that he is entitled to another sanity hearing. So once again the spectre of death has stepped back a little way.

Shows No Emotion. The news that the sentence had once again been postponed failed to stir him. He shrugged his shoulders, displaying none of the nervous, hysterical elation prisoners usually show when given a reprieve.

"You can get used to anything," he explains. "I have died so many times that death—real death—holds no terror for me any more."

death for his cellmate; has ceased to fear him, has ceased even to be interested in him—has grown supremely indifferent, lifeless, tired.

Now he has another lease on life. Once more the probability of death on the scaffold has been lessened. And Scott does not care. He shrugs his shoulders and looks at the floor.

Perhaps, after all, he has pretty well paid for the murder of Joseph Maurer. For whether he ultimately hangs or dies in an asylum, he has lost his life.

SPECIAL DAYS PLANNED FOR ANNUAL FAIR

County Expo Invites Gladstone, Escanaba, Soo, Newberry.

Two big inter-county days, one for Gladstone-Escanaba residents, and one for folks from Newberry and the Soo, will be special features of the Schoolcraft county fair in September.

The two "open-house" days for neighboring counties are mentioned prominently in the preliminary list for the Manistique fair, now in the hands of printers.

The secretary has also advised the counties in question by letter that they are invited for these feature events.

More attractions have been signed up by the local fair association, making the program prepared for this year the best in history.

In addition to the Henke attractions, which includes various riding devices and regular carnival shows and features, three other acts have been booked.

The Worcester will provide one act, the Raymonds another while Reynolds will engage in balloon ascension. All of the attractions are reputed to be high class and are coming to Manistique with the highest of recommendations.

The premium list for this year's fair is larger than ever and for this reason many more exhibitors are expected to be attracted. The book is now in the hands of the printer and will be out shortly.

Good news for residents of the surrounding country was received today by Secretary Stephens, who was notified by Soo Line officials that the railroad company will again allow fare and one-half for return trip to Manistique during fair week.

Federal Specialist Tours West, Urging Use of Wool Grades

Washington (AP)—Bearing a message of quicker sales and better prices, George T. Willingmyre, United States wool marketing and standardization specialist, has gone into the west to urge that fleeces be sold by government grades.

He was preceded by 60 sets of standard wool samples, prepared in department of agriculture laboratories here and forwarded to various branches of the industry throughout the United States. Each set contains 12 federal wool grades, a correlation approved by this country and Great Britain, and now being introduced to Continental Europe.

Willingmyre's itinerary, beginning at Flagstaff, Ariz., includes Los Angeles, San Francisco; Portland and Ontario, Oregon; Boise, Mont.; Logan, Utah; Salt Lake City, Denver, Chicago, Detroit and Buffalo. He will confer with and address all interests directly connected with the wool trade.

"When a textile manufacturer needs a particular grade of wool," Willingmyre tells producers, "he wants that grade and no other. The producer who has it finds a quicker market and a better price because of the guarantee carried by fleeces marketed by government standards."

"The United States produces an average of 100,000,000 pounds of wool annually, the bulk of which comes from the west. Most of the 1927 clip has been sold."

"Standardization of wool grades is based on fibre diameter. Since wool is not highly perishable, it lends itself admirably to standardization. From the sheep's back, through the various channels of trade to the final manufacturing operation grade remains constant. Therefore the standards for grades of wool may be termed producers', merchants' and manufacturers' grades."

"It is believed they will be satisfactory in every phase of distribution and merchandising. For the grower, they introduce and stimulate better methods in the selection of animals for reproduction."

Paris Wants Airfield Near Business Center

Paris (AP)—To save still more time for those who travel by air, Paris has a proposal for an aerodrome nearer the center of the city than Le Bourget. It has been suggested that the land just outside the city walls at Issy-les-Moulineaux, not far from the Bois de Boulogne, be converted into a supplementary landing field. Passengers from other capitals could then reach the heart of Paris in 15 minutes after stepping out of their planes.

Owner of Oldest Herd Still An Active Farmer

Peterboro, N. Y. (AP)—Gerrit Smith Miller, the man who revolutionized milk production in the United States, is still on the job as a dairy farmer near this village.

Although more than 80 years old, he is still active in improving the Holstein-Friesian breed. His stock is the oldest herd of Holsteins in this country.

In 1869, with three cows and a bull from Holland, Miller made the first day-to-day record of milk production. He raised the first heifer registered in the first Holstein Herd Book of America, which now has more than 1,000,000 entries.

When Miller took the first production record, nearly 60 years ago, the yield of a good cow was estimated at 2,500 to 4,000 pounds annually. He found, however, that his imported Dowsager 7 gave 12,681.5 pounds in one year. This mark was regarded as astounding.

The present world's champion cow, Segis Prospect, which traces to the Miller herd, has a record of 37,000 pounds of milk in a twelve-month period.

The herd today numbers about forty. All have in their veins blood of either the original importation or of the three which Miller made shortly after 1869. Kriemhild Herd—it has long gone by this name—boasts no champions at present, largely because its owner has ceased to try for records. Yet six heifers are milking 45 to 50 pounds daily with their first calves, while Pledge Clothilde Onyx Hengerveld VI has milked as high as 89 pounds—more than a canful—on ordinary farm care.

In recognition of his achievements Harvard university, in 1925, awarded Miller the honorary degree of Master of Arts.

C. F. COLLISON IN MANISTIQUE ON AUGUST 11

One of the most successful summer seasons on record for the Manistique Chamber of Commerce was held Friday evening at Arrowhead Inn, Indian Lake. The crowd in attendance was much larger than expected, and required added preparations on the part of the Inn cuisine, which gave excellent service in spite of the handicap.

Discussion of plans for the coming lecture by Charles F. Collison, agricultural editor of the Minneapolis Tribune, was one of the main topics at the meeting, and a committee of five was appointed to take care of preliminary arrangements for the event.

Committee Named. According to information given by W. B. Thomas, Mr. Collison is due to arrive in Manistique on August 11 in time for an evening meeting. His coming will be made the occasion of a joint gathering of farmers and city folks, similar to the one staged so successfully last year.

Following expressions from members on a proposed water sports program and homecoming, President H. L. Mead named a committee of three, who have been instructed to make an early report on prospects for staging the event early in August. The feature would be along the lines tried out last season for the first time, and which brought thousands of people to Indian Lake, in spite of unfavorable weather.

Members of the club were also told Friday evening that negotiations were progressing favorably to engage a county farm agent for Schoolcraft county. At a committee meeting Monday night, the position was offered to County Agent Stewart of Ashland, Wis.

Accused of Laxity In Vaccinating

Berlin (AP)—Because of failure to enforce the anti-smallpox vaccination law as rigidly as before the war, officials of the Prussian board of health have come in for a reprimand by the minister for public welfare. In an edict the minister criticized the extraordinary number of cases of evasion of the law that had come to his notice, and the disproportionate number of cases of vaccination on record compared to the total number inhabitants.

The edict enjoins all officials charged with the enactment of the regulations in question henceforth the prescribed compulsory law to the very letter.

BASEBALL AT FAIR GROUNDS AT 2:30 TODAY

Manistique Has Fastest Outfit in Action This Season.

"The fastest line-up of the season" for the Manistique baseball team will be seen in action today at the home grounds when the locals meet Rapid River, according to A. J. Smith, who has again assumed management of the local club after having been confined to his home with a broken leg as the result of a logging accident.

"Yes, sir, we've got the best outfit now that we ever had this year," declared A. J. yesterday, "and what's more, we're going to keep them for the remainder of the season."

In return for the efforts to keep Manistique in the ring of Delta-Schoolcraft League baseball, Manager A. J. hopes for a good response from Manistique fans when the home team trots out on the field against Rapid River this afternoon.

The game today is scheduled for 2:30 fast time, 1:30 Rapid River time, necessitating an early arrival on the part of the visitors. Either Vassau or Arrowhead are slated to hand out the smoke balls for this matinee, the manager reports, and Harbin will be on the receiving end.

Boosted by fresh talent, and equipped with about $100 worth of new apparatus, the Manistique gang promises more pep than ever before, and a revival of the old-time spirit is looked for among the home fans. As Manager Smith points out, "Good support this year will mean a better team next year," and the locals are already looking to laurels for the season of 1928.

Chicago Angler Pays His Fine Without Murmur

A misunderstanding of the Michigan fish laws brought a fine of $10 for Charles Devine of Chicago, who yesterday entered a plea of guilty to a charge of taking bass without the required license. The complaint was made by Julius Thorson, deputy game and fish warden, and Devine pleaded guilty at Manistique through his attorney.

The Chicago man had secured a special angler's license, with the understanding that it was sufficient for all kinds of fish. The minimum fine was recommended, which with costs brought a total of $16.50.

Cherry and Sinner

By Anne Austin

On her short, swift journey down the hall to Cherry's room, hidden fears flitted like bats through Faith's mind. Had she made Cherry leave the house? Cherry really hated the home she had, taking her baby—the precious, adorable baby with her? Had she cast her own sister—the little sister whom she had always worshipped and served—out into the world, penniless, burdened with a child to support?

"That you, Bob?" Cherry's strained voice called out. "It's Faith, Cherry! Please, darling, let me in!" There was a long silence, broken at last by a loud sob. Then, when Faith was about to begin pleading again, the key turned in the lock and the door was opened a crack.

"I—I didn't want to see you—just yet," Cherry sobbed from within, as she swung to the doorlock. "I—I wanted to be all ready to leave—so you'd know I wasn't just—bluffing—"

"Cherry, darling!" Faith cried despairingly. The door yielded reluctantly to her pressure and in a moment she was kneeling beside a huddled little figure on the floor. "Why do you want to leave me, honey? Surely you didn't think I meant—that! Will you forgive me, Cherry? Oh, darling, I can't bear this! Don't hate me!"

"I'm not angry with you, Faith!" she gasped. "I don't hate you, honey! I adore you! Didn't you know that? But I thought it would be better for you—"

Sacred Concert to Be Given at M. E. Church Tonight

A sacred concert, featuring Miss Thelma Sawdy, organist, and Jack Williams, vocal soloist, talented Escanaba young people, will be presented tonight at the First M. E. church, beginning at 7:30 o'clock.

Cherry gasped in sudden, her effort at establishing her independence of the sister who had always been too kind to her succumbing to the mention of the one name that had always been able to stir her profoundly.

Faith, after a bit, during which they held each other very tightly, helped her to replace the garments she had flung out of closets and dresser drawers. When they had finished and Cherry was stretched wearily upon her small, green painted bed, Faith forced herself to return to her room, where she knew she would find Bob awaiting her.

She found him seated in her own low chair by the window, the baby upon his knees, one of his big, brown fingers held tightly in a miniature fist. The quizzical smile with which he had been regarding Cherry's baby lingered as he looked up at his wife.

"Cherry's going to stay of course? I knew she would. It's rather a pity, isn't it, all things considered?"

Independents and North-Westerns Clash Today

LOCAL LEAGUE TEAMS CLASH

Fans Expect One of the Best Games of Season Here.

The Chicago & North-Westerns, winners of the Delta-Schoolcraft League pennant last year, will meet the Escanaba Independents, the other local entry in the circuit on the South Park diamond this afternoon.

The keen rivalry between the two teams assures the fans a spectacular battle. Both teams are on edge for the contest and can be expected to deliver a high class brand of baseball when they meet each other.

The closeness of the pennant race makes the game one of unusual importance and interest. Victory will mean a great deal to the winner and the loser will find the handicap resulting a tough one to overcome during the remainder of the season.

It is probable that Augie Van Effen will take the slab for the Red Sox. The lineup of Morton's aggregation, otherwise, will be about the same as in previous contests, it was said last night. John Schwellbach or Gilbert Burns will be available for mound duty for Olmstead's team. Both are in shape and the manager was not certain last night, which would be called upon to perform. It is confidently expected that the biggest crowd of the season will see the scrap.

TIGERS DEFEAT RED SOX AGAIN

Run Consecutive Victories to Five With 3 to 2 Win.

Detroit, July 23.—(P)—The Tigers ran their winning streak to five today by taking the second game of the series from Boston, 3 to 2. While Hill let the Sox down with four hits, the Boston counters came in the sixth inning when Flagstead walked, Myer singled and Regan tripled. Detroit scored two in the second on singles by Hellman and Neun. McManus' sacrifice and Woodall doubled and Whitehill drove him home with a single.

Detroit opened the scoring in the second inning when two runs were made. Hellman singled to right, Neun singled to center, sending Hellman to third. McManus drove a long sacrifice fly to Shaner, Hellman straining. Woodall tripled to the center field, scoring Neun. Whitehill was hit by a pitched ball. Warner struck out and Gehring was thrown out by Regan, ending the inning.

Score in Fourth.
The Tigers collected their final tally in the fourth. Myers threw out Neun and McManus was out the same way. Woodall doubled to left and Whitehill singled to right, scoring Woodall. Warner flied out to Carlyle.

Boston's two runs came in the sixth. Welzer flied to Hellman. Flagstead walked. Myer singled to right, sending Flagstead to third. Gehring made a hit and a run came in. Regan tripled to left, scoring Myer. Warner threw out Shaner, cutting short the rally.

PIRATES LOSE, WIN BACK LEAD

Even Double Header with Red Sox; Lose 6 to 2, Win, 4 to 3.

Boston, July 23.—(P)—The Pittsburgh Pirates, who have been bounding in and out of the National League lead like a tennis ball on a busy court, today lost and regained first place in a double-header divided with the Braves. Boston won the opener, 6 to 2, but lost the nightcap, 4 to 3, when rain intervened at the start of the seventh inning.

The Braves took the jump early in the first contest when they scored three in the initial inning. Three more were hung up in the seventh. Two of them when High knocked out a homer with one on base.

Chas. Traynor, Pirate third sacker, in whose honor fans braved a damp day, singled twice in the first encounter, but failed to register in the later one. His teammate, Grantham, hit three out of three in the second game while Urban, new acquisition of the Boston club, got two hits in three chances.

Blankenship Driven from Mound as New York Wins, 5 to 2.

Chicago, July 23.—(P)—The Yankees hammered Ted Blankenship off the mound in the seventh inning and defeated Chicago 5 to 2 today. Koenig's triple with the bases loaded sent the Texas cowboy to the showers and clinched the contest for the league leaders. Urban Shocker pitched a steady game for New York but gave way to a pinch hitter when the Yanks were staging their rally. Willey Moore finished.

St. Louis, Mo., July 23.—(P)—The Washington Senators knocked Stewart out of the box in an eighth inning rally and took today's game from the Browns, 9 to 8. Stewart allowed three runs which tied the score, and then was replaced by Wingard, who made a wild pitch, permitting Reeves to score the winning run. Thirty Yachts Race to Mackinac Island

Chicago, July 23.—(P)—Thirty yachts, equally divided, in the cruising and racing classes, lifted their white sails to the breeze late today and stood out in the 20th annual race from Chicago to Mackinac Island, 331 miles.

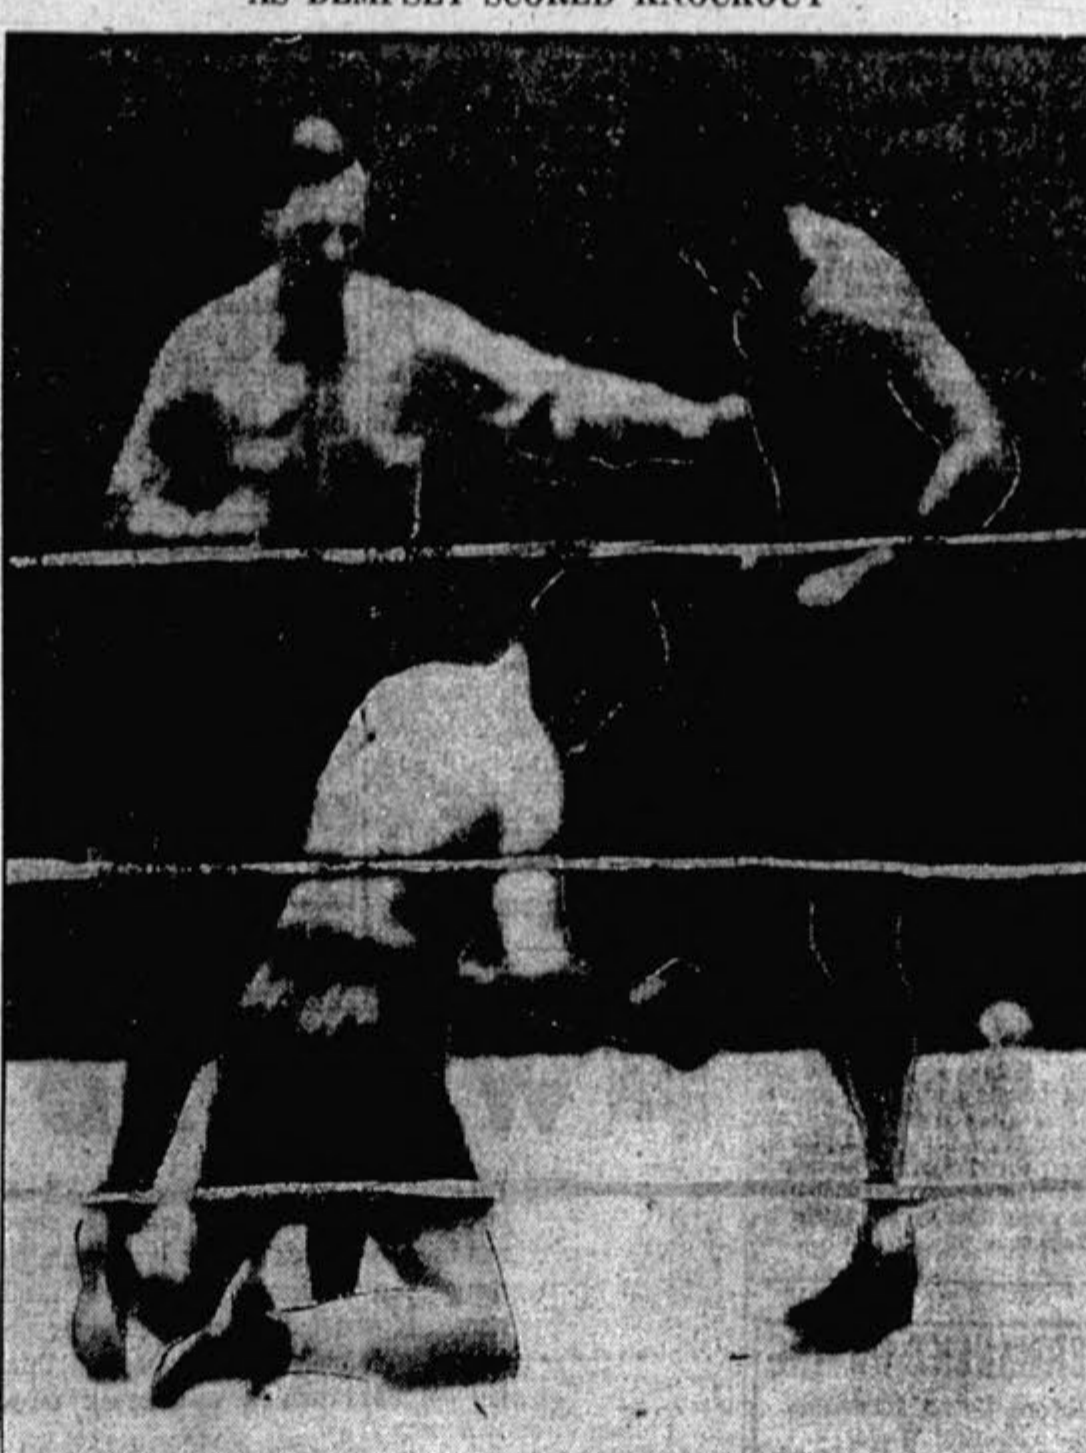

A moderate southwest wind, and fair skies saw the record field of boats off to a good start. A forecast of unsettled weather for tomorrow with rising temperature, gave the sailors little hope of breaking the 28-hour record for the cruise established 15 years ago.

While the sailing feet was vanishing in the distance, 16 power yachts were turning up for their start over the same course at midnight tonight. The power boats will lay over at Portage Point, about half way to Mackinac, for a day before resuming the run. This is the first year the power cruisers have attempted as long a race as the 331-mile run to the top of Lake Michigan.

AS DEMPSEY SCORED KNOCKOUT

The instant after Dempsey's great pair of knockout blows were struck, this action photograph was snapped. Here's the climax of the fight. Sharkey going down. Referee O'Sullivan holding Dempsey back. Six—seven—eight—nine—Sharkey making a superhuman effort to come again to his feet—then a lunge as he fell forward on his face. Ten. The fight was over.

Rickard Picks Dempsey as Tunney's Opponent; Lays Plans for Fight

New York, July 23.—(P)—After formally naming Jack Dempsey as the man who will fight Gene Tunney for the heavyweight championship this fall, Tex Rickard today dickered for the fight.

Although Tunney's contract with the promoter called for selection of an opponent as well as the date and site of the champion's first title defense by July 25, Gene agreed to a delay until August 4, in the carrying out of the latter conditions.

Rickard declared the fight will take place between September 15 and 20, but where he did not know. No direct proposition has yet been made to take the match to Chicago, he said, despite strong reports that the 10-round fray already had been allotted to the mid-west metropolis in the hope of achieving the first $2,000,000 "gate" in fistie history.

After the conference with Tunney, Rickard sought to arrange a match between Jack Delaney and Paulino Uzcudun, Spanish wood-chopper, who recently cut down Harry Willis, the giant negro. The light heavyweight champion agreed to Rickard's terms, but Uzcudun would not sign without considering the matter for several days with his board of managers.

Delaney agreed to forfeit his 175-pound title in order to take on Paulino and, if victorious, meet Jack Sharkey late this fall. The Boston battler, who fell before Dempsey's crushing attack Thursday night, is ready for any match that will place him back in the title hunt.

The matter will be taken before the New York state athletic commission next Tuesday, Rickard said, when Delaney probably will abdicate his title in favor of Mike McTigue, Celtic warrior, who was scheduled to fight the Bridgeport puncher for the championship at the Yankee Stadium on August 11. The latter bout, already once postponed, appears to have been definitely side-tracked in the wide-spread interest shown in the coming heavyweight clashes.

Turned Down Bout.
Sanction of a Paulino-Delaney match was refused Rickard by the boxing commission early this summer when the board ruled that Delaney first must dispose of contenders in his own division before again meeting heavyweights. Shortly afterwards Delaney was matched with McTigue. In his sole venture among the major heavyweights last winter, Delaney lost a 10-round decision to Jimmy Maloney in Rickard's elimination series.

CHANCES BRIGHT.
Chicago, July 23.—(P)—Chicago appears to have an outstanding chance to land the Tunney-Dempsey fight for the world's heavyweight championship next September but the pulse of public opinion will determine whether widespread objections might arise over use of Soldiers' Field as a battle site. That was the word Edward J. Kelly, president of the South Park commission, which controls the sta-

George F. Getz, Chicago sportsman and coal operator, declared on his arrival here today following a conference with Tex Rickard.

Getz, who is chairman of the newly created Chicago Citizens' committee, which is made up of Chicago business men organized to cooperate in boosting Chicago, said the date had been tenta-

President Kelly, although in favor of the battle, wants first to sound out public opinion before he agrees to turn over Soldiers' Field for a championship fight.

"I don't know how some people would feel about using a public stadium for such a purpose," President Kelly said. "There is bound to be some objection to the fight. There always is in such cases, but it is a question whether those who want it outweigh those who don't."

DETAILS AGREED ON.

Detroit, July 23.—(P)—All details for holding the heavyweight championship contest between Gene Tunney, title holder, and Jack Dempsey, have been agreed upon with the exception of the actual date of the contest.

Manistique Team Reorganized; New Faces in Lineup

Manistique, July 23, (Special)—Manistique's reorganized, and re-pepped baseball team in the Delta-Schoolcraft League, will meet Rapid River on the home lot Sunday. It is expected that Bill Vassaw will pitch for the Schoolcrafters and that some other old timers will be seen in the lineup. Interest here has been aroused in the team's welfare and Manistique is confidently expected to give a good account of herself in future games.

Grand Circuit Meet Opens in Kalamazoo

Kalamazoo, Mich., July 23.—(P)—Kalamazoo's 19th annual grand circuit meeting opens Monday afternoon at the Recreation Park track. The local association this year offers $68,000 in stakes and purses, including the $25,000 American pacing derby to be raced Tuesday, and the $10,000 exchange club purse for 2:08 trotters, scheduled for Wednesday.

The fourth renewal of the derby, it is expected, will draw an entry of 26 pacers eligible to the 2:08 class, and will increase the value of this purse to at least $27,000.

The exchange club trot, which has been in existence since the first meeting held in 1908, is certain to have an entry of at least 12 of the best performers in this class. Twenty-nine trotters originally were named to start.

Armour, Hagen Win on Saginaw Course

Saginaw, Mich., July 23.—(P)—Tommy Armour, national open golf champion, and Walter Hagen today defeated Wilfred Reid of Detroit, and Frank Sproggell of Saginaw, one up, in an 18-hole exhibition foursome at Westdale public course. Reid shot a 74, the lowest score made in competition on the new course so far this year, par for which is 71. Armour took 75, Hagen 76 and Sproggell 81.

tively set for September 25, subject to change.

Getz indicated he will be nominally designated as the promoter because of the requirement of the Illinois boxing law which provides that promotion of such affairs be in the hands of Illinois residents. His principal interest in the affair, however, he indicated, is in the advertising Chicago will obtain.

Hennessey and Williams encountered unexpected opposition from Wallace F. Johnston and Clarence J. Griffin in the third set of the one doubles semi-finals played today. The third set went to an 18-16 score.

FARMERS TO BE PICNIC GUESTS

Chamber of Commerce to Stage Unusual Event August 11.

Farmers of the west half of Delta county and their wives will join the members of the Escanaba Chamber of Commerce in a picnic to be held August 11 in Beauchamp's Grove at Flat Rock. Elaborate preparations are being made for the affair and it is expected that a monster crowd will attend.

Charles F. Collison, agricultural editor of the Minneapolis Tribune, will be one of the principal attractions. Mr. Collison's lecture, "Cow Paths to Prosperity" is humorous, instructive and one of the best and most practical dairy talks ever given in this region.

There will be a program of sports and games, beginning at 10 a. m., a picnic dinner at noon, followed by a short program. The Escanaba Municipal Band will be on hand to give a concert. Athletic events are open only to men and women over the age of 35 years. The schedule includes a fifty-yard dash, tug of war, quarter mile relay, wood chopping contest, nail driving contest, log sawing contest, horsehoe tournament, four inning ball game and a cow calling contest.

"Everyone," says the announcement sent out from the Chamber of Commerce offices, "is expected to bring his own dinner, knife, fork, spoon, and cup. We will furnish coffee, cream, sugar, ice cream and lemonade. There will be nothing to sell on the grounds. While the women may have all the ice cream they want the men will be furnished with corn cobs and plenty of smoking tobacco. Men who prefer eating tobacco will have to bring their own. If any city or country dude is caught smoking a cigar or cigarette on the grounds he will be locked up in the cow shed. Women using powder puffs or vanity cases will be accorded the same treatment."

Birmingham, Eng., has a canine curfew law. Dogs must be kept off the streets after dark to prevent their barking and howling.

Maexthen, a pet-circus stork in Germany, attacked fourteen lions and drove them in panic to their cages.

HAWAIIAN BEAUTY

Let-Lel-Hua, pretty Hula-Hula dancer with Bell's "A Trip to Honolulu," at the Delft Wednesday and Thursday, danced on the beaches of Hawaii when she was a mere child. The dance she does with the Bell troupe is said to be the nearest approach to the one made famous by Gilda Gray.

Bell's Hawaiians have played Escanaba before. They are well known and popular here.

IN NEW YORK

New York.—A Shetland pony has appeared on the tenement cluttered streets of the East Side. A former hurdy-gurdy man saved his pennies, bought the pony, brought it to the Ghetto gamins, and a ride of one block may be enjoyed for two pennies, with extra rides in proportion. Most of the youngsters had never seen a pony before.

The only pigs, cows and sheep they have ever beheld are those in the Central Park zoo. There the farm animals are corralled in a little space labeled Murphy's farm. Having never been beyond Brooklyn, the youngsters grow up with strange ideas concerning farms and barnyards. Their pets are, for the most part, stray cats that leave their kittens upon fire escapes. In recent years charity organizations have given thousands of youngsters their first glance at hillside during country trips. Some families have become sufficiently prosperous to send their offspring to summer camps. They returned dazed by this first contact with nature.

On Friday nights a little place in McDougall street, the most "village" spot in Greenwich Village, hangs out a sign which reads: "Friday poet's night—Many prominent poets will be present—Refreshments served."

In the hallway loiter a few of those bath-garbed, sleazy damsels who look more like the cartoons of "Bohemians" than the cartoons themselves. Their bobbed hair has been allowed to grow till it touches their shoulders and they pose against the walls while tourists fresh from the buses get a thrill. Inside, young men sit about tables, playing the strange game of being poets. They are consciously on display and play up to their parts. During the course of the evening some are encouraged to recite their verse. Little encouragement is needed. They would be quite annoyed if overlooked. Most of their poetry is rather bad; that which is good shows marked resemblance to the work of others. A very few, who are still young enough to be blind to the poets, actually show promise.

The real poets are not hung in windows in Manhattan.

Edgar Arlington Robinson, who has been hailed as the nation's best, lives a secluded life upon an out-of-town farm. He is one of the quietest men to be found, seemingly very timid and aloof.

Edna St. Vincent Millay is on a farm in the north when not at her home in Cherry Lane. Her house, by the way, is perhaps the narrowest in New York, rising three stories with a width of but a few yards.

Robinson Jeffers spends most of the year at Carmel, Calif. Dorothy Parker is to be found in the theatrical belt, or among the writers and newspaper folk who gather at the Algonquin hotel for lunch. James Rorty writes when not wooing the muse. Robert Frost seldom leaves New England.

Helene Mullins bobs up publicly now and then at Sam Schwartz' "Black Knight." Genevieve Taggart spends summers on a Connecticut farm and teaches, writes book reviews and poetry in New York.

Leonora Speyer, being wealthy enough to afford poetry, lives in Washington Square and leads the intellectual salon set of the city. These are the real poets, who do not pose for the tourists and each other.

Weakened Cylinder Head Blows Out in Ford Boat Engine

An explosion, the report of which could be heard throughout the city at 11:15 o'clock Friday night, was caused by a weakened cylinder head blowing out in the engine room of the Benson Ford, moored on the south side of the Chicago and North-Western dock No. 6. Although no definite information could be secured yesterday from the chief engineer of the Ford boat, it was learned from several sailors on the craft that no injuries were sustained by anyone, nor was the damage caused by the accident very great.

The Benson Ford came into the Escanaba harbor Thursday afternoon and was loaded and ready to leave port at the time of the blast. Although the chief engineer refused to discuss the accident with a Press reporter, he did state that the boat will be able to leave port under its own power as soon as repairs have been made in the engine room.

Only one complete team of horses came safely through the war. In 1914 they went overseas with a battery of artillery. Their last task was to draw the gun-carriage of the Unknown Soldier in Paris. They are now pensioned off.
