

COMPLETE JURY TO TRY GEORGE REMUS

REPORT ASKS REVISION OF TARIFF RATES

PLAN TO AID FARMER SUGGESTED BY COMMISSION

BY DAVID LAWRENCE. (Copyright 1927, by the Escanaba Press) Washington, Nov. 18.—Although President Coolidge has not concealed his disagreement with that portion of the report of the Businessmen's Commission on Agriculture which proposes a revision of protective tariff policies to aid the farmer, the document has been accepted as the first striking evidence of an undercurrent in republican ranks which has been running since the war.

The commission not only is composed mostly of republicans but most of the institutions they represent—banks and industries—have long been republican in personnel. The truth is the banking world has lately heard many economists say that if Europe is to have the purchasing power to buy American agricultural products, she must in turn be permitted to sell her wares in the United States. The businessmen's commission also notes that the farmer is paying a high price for certain articles that are protected against foreign competition by the tariff wall.

On the verge of a hopoff today Captain Giles, his flight manager, Captain C. T. Peterson, were looking over a soft spot in the far end of the runway when a sheet of fog rolled across San Francisco bay to the edge of the field.

Charles P. Taft, II, youthful prosecuting attorney of Hamilton county and son of William H. Taft, former president, now chief justice of the United States, and Carl E. Basler, assistant prosecutor, were the especial targets as red of face, tears in his eyes, and gigantic, booming voice at times choking in his throat or breaking in a high falsetto. Remus raged about a little table enclosed square.

MILLION ASKED BY DRY LEAGUE

Head of Anti-Saloon Organization Reveals Program

Philadelphia, Nov. 18.—(AP)—A million dollar a year budget for the next five years is the aim of the Anti-Saloon League, the Rev. Howard Hyde Russell, associate superintendent and one of the founders of the organization, revealed at a luncheon of its leaders here today.

Dr. Russell's statement followed prediction of Bishop Thomas Nichols of Detroit, president of the Anti-Saloon League of America, that the struggle between prohibition leaders and the "army of law breakers and bootleggers" would come to a head within the next four or five years.

The bootleggers, Bishop Nichols asserted, "are trying to undo by violation of the law what the people of the country have accomplished by legal procedure."

The bishop said he disagreed with Senator Borah that the major parties should insert prohibition planks in their platforms. "At least 85 per cent of the making and selling of liquor," Dr. Russell told the diners, "has disappeared and six billion dollars more actual cash is in the country's pocket since prohibition."

"I will tell you that to carry on our program the budget of the Anti-Saloon League for the next five years has been set at $50,000 a year, or double the best income we have had in recent years."

Francis Scott McBride, national superintendent of the league who has also taken over the bulk of the legislative work since the death of Wayne B. Wheeler, advocated stringent measures that would make any violation of the prohibition law a felony punishable by five years in prison.

He also pointed out that such enactment would result in the deportation of aliens who violate the prohibition laws. "We have a 'dry' congress in Washington now," said Mr. McBride, "and we should say to it, 'The time has come for you to pass laws making a complete enforcement of the prohibition law possible and then we can hold the officers of the government in Washington, from the president down, responsible for the law.'"

The Anti-Saloon League and the W. C. T. U. have never been and never will be super-government, but we have said to the people the time has come to take our government out of the hands of the bootleggers and to put it back where it belongs.

Woman's Forgetfulness Resulted in Kidnaping of Four by Tribesmen

Bent Mellal, Morocco, Nov. 18.—(AP)—A woman's forgetfulness led to the kidnaping of Yves Steeg, nephew of the French resident general, Jean Maillet, and their two woman companions, who arrived here today after being ransomed from tribesmen for 2,000,000 francs in gold.

"The day we were kidnaped," said Steeg, "we had returned in an automobile with Baroness Steinhilf and Mme. Prokoff to the outskirts of the forest of Droua to seek a cloak one of the ladies had forgotten the day before. It was about 5 o'clock. We had hardly got 100 yards into the forest when a volley of rifle shots was sounded. We were immediately surrounded by a band of Moors, who after beating us all four, covered our heads with their coats and dragged us toward the automobile."

"We were taken to mountains. Threatening us with their weapons, they obliged us to get into the machine and drive it ourselves to the clearing where it was discovered afterward. There we were dismounted and a discussion arose among our captors who were unaware of our identity, as to whether we should be massacred or not. Knowing a little of the Berber language, I recognized the horror of subjects they were discussing, and at once told them I was the nephew of the resident general."

"This saved us, for we were immediately led off to the mountains. We marched all night and next day until 2 o'clock, carrying the personal belongings of the kidnapers. I was made to carry a sack of cartridges weighing 60 pounds."

"If we loitered the Moors struck us with goads to force us on and quicken our pace. When we arrived at Douara, where we were put into confinement, we learned that negotiations had been opened for our redemption. 'Then and as long as the negotiations continued, we were not maltreated. On the contrary, our keepers did their best to entertain us. But when the porters were interrupted for many hours, we were subjected to much harsher treatment. Iron fetters were placed on our feet and not removed until negotiations were resumed.'"

"Freedom seemed remote. 'After this removal we were taken to the house of Ben Naccur, where we were treated with every consideration and there we awaited our deliverance.'"

Ben Naccur was the tribesman who turned the prisoners over to the French saying: "Allah is great; he desires us to return the prisoners." Steeg emphasized that moral sufferings of the prisoners were much worse than the physical. There were times, he said, when they gave up all hope of ever seeing their families again. When, on the way to freedom, they caught their first glimpse of French uniforms, they broke down completely. They wept and cheered by turns, said Steeg.

When the Moorish escort turned them over to the French one of the Moors, who had frequently been on guard over them, presented Steeg with his dagger as a souvenir to show them that there was no ill-feeling and that it was all in the course of "business."

"However," remarked Steeg, with a shudder, "while I recognize his politeness, it was a souvenir I would not want to cherish."

Four Men Die in Electric Chair

Trenton, N. J., Nov. 18.—(AP)—In the space of exactly a half hour four men were put to death tonight in the electric chair in state prison for the death of a paymaster. Each declared their innocence.

They were Joseph ("Big Joe") Juliano, Christopher Barone, Joseph ("Little Joe") Juliano and Louis ("Kid Ruff") Capozzi, all of New York, and they died in the order named. The executions began at 7:28 and ended at 8:24. Big Joe, the first to enter the death chamber, stared about dazedly. After his body was removed, his cousin, "Little Joe," a half smile on his lips, was led in. He, like Barone, kissed the priest on the mouth a moment before he died and handed the priest a trinket with the request that it be given to his wife. "Little Joe" was the only one of the four to leave a widow. Capozzi also handed the priest a memento, to be conveyed to his sister. He died with the declaration that he had been "framed."

There was little or no excitement about the prison as the time for the executions drew near. Police and prison guards had roped off the surrounding streets but no curious persons appeared.

publican party's rank and file. Lots of Ammunition. The democrats, however, have never before in the last 25 years had so much ammunition with which to make a fight on the high tariff policy of their opponents and it would not be surprising if a real campaign issue were developed out of such proposals as have just been made by the business men's commission on agriculture. The democrats never had such eloquent support from any group of prominent business men. The personnel of this commission is being referred to again and again in discussion here as evidence of the division of opinion on the tariff which has been disclosed in the business and financial world. The commission includes such men as Charles-Nagel, former secretary of commerce and labor in the Taft cabinet; E. N. Brown, chairman of the Board of the St. Louis and San Francisco railway; E. M. Herr, president of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company; T. G. Lonsdale, president National Bank of Commerce of New York; John Stuart president Quaker Oats Company of Chicago; Alfred Swayne, vice-president of General Motors Corporation; Paul M. Warburg, former member of the federal reserve board and now chairman International Acceptance Corp'n of New York; Clay Miller of Clay Miller & Company, San Francisco; Arthur R. Rogers, president of the Rogers Lumber Company of Minneapolis, and A. F. McKessick, vice-president Alice Mills of Greenville, S. C.

Plans Not Perfect. Many of these men have long been studying the agricultural problem and while the report they made does not commit to their views either the chamber of commerce of the United States or the national industrial conference board which two bodies jointly appointed the commission, it will nevertheless stir up much discussion among their members to most of whom the report came as a distinct surprise, particularly the recommendation that the government become a stockholder and help supervise the projected stabilization corporations which shall

BEWARE THE COUGH OR COLD THAT HANGS ON

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified crocote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action: it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth. Of all known drugs, crocote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to crocote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the crocote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs. Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchitis, and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

SEES INCREASE IN HARDWOOD

Reforestation to Restore Timber in 30 Years —Goodman

Chicago, Ill., Nov. 17.—(AP)—A prediction that the hardwood timber resources of northern Wisconsin and the Upper Peninsula of Michigan will in thirty years begin to increase as a result of commercial forestry efforts was made today by Robert B. Goodman of Marinette, Wis., in an address before the National Commercial Forestry conference here.

"The hardwood lumber production in northern Wisconsin and Upper Peninsula of Michigan will gradually decline for the next thirty years," he said. "After that the effects of reforestation should bring about an increase of the available merchantable sawtimber. The situation with respect to pulpwood supplying the local paper mills is somewhat similar, but fire protection measures and planting will bring about an increased supply of pulpwood in a considerably shorter period. Projecting ourselves into the year 1960, successive cuttings on virgin timber and the reforestation of restrictively logged timber areas should produce a satisfactory sustained yield timber stand at that time."

Many states, he added, are now pursuing the policy of depending upon private enterprise to perpetuate their forest resources. "Lumber operation in the past," he declared, "was the commercial process of clearing land for agriculture and it continued on this basis long after agriculture ceased to take up the land cleared. The cut-over lands accumulated and were dropped for taxes. 'Until very recent years the profit from the lumber enterprises accrued from the increase in value of the timber rather than from the industrial profits in its conversion.'"

"During the past ten years of enormous industrial development and expansion the position of wood as a natural resource has materially changed. The increased price of lumber has increased its sales resistance made possible the introduction of substitutes in many uses at the same time that increasing taxes and interest charges on standing timber is no longer materially increasing in value stimulated the production of lumber. Except in times of exceptional demand the lumber market has been over-supplied. Now the lumber industry is facing an anomalous situation. As a whole it is operating unprofitably while it is consuming or destroying the Nation's greatest natural resources."

"Partly through excessive taxation, partly through careless setting of fires, and partly through the clear cutting of the lumber industry great forest areas have been laid to waste. In certain regions the loss of the forest brings about not only loss of industry but economic loss through erosion, loss of water power, irregularity of stream flow and flood damage. The nature lover protests against the destruction of the wild life and scenic beauty that comes with the destruction of the forests and the public is alarmed because of our approach toward timber famine. As the result of this awakening to the importance of our forest resources and their threatened extinction there developed a national forest policy which expressed itself in the theory that reforestation is a public function."

A reasonable assurance of security from fires and adjustment of the tax burden, would make the growing of timber, commercially attractive he asserted, and would make possible the perpetuation of private enterprise in our forest resources. "Common Law" is based on custom and tradition. Much of the English common law derives from the medieval period when a custom was held to be a law after it had been observed "from a time when the memory of man runneth not to the contrary."

British Flyers Land in Poland; Give Up Flight

London, Nov. 18.—(AP)—Relieved by a report from Warsaw that Capt. R. H. McIntosh and Bert Hinkler landed in southern Poland yesterday and started toward London today, friends of the flyers nevertheless still wondered what misfortune defeated the attempt at a non-stop flight to India and just what course their plane, the "Princess Xenia," followed in its long flight. The first conjecture is that the aviators encountered adverse weather conditions, lost their direction and circled blindly for many hours. Another guess is that they turned back after a forced descent farther to the south. Arrival of the men in London, however, was expected tonight to disclose an adventurous tale, no matter how far distant from surmise the details may be. Meanwhile, England was watching two other aerial voyages. John Carberry, who was Lord Carbery, but has renounced his title and taken steps to become an American citizen—at the same time adding an "S" to his name—left the Croydon airfield today in a Fokker monoplane toward Capetown, South Africa. Carberry stopped for the night at Tournay, South Central France after a brief visit to LeBourget airfield at Paris. Sir Alan Cobham with Lady Cobham, who started from Rochester yesterday in an all-metal flying boat for a survey of the African coast line, was kept at ground at Southampton by rough weather today.

Coal Industry Asks for Rate Reduction

Washington, Nov. 18.—(AP)—Railroads defending the proposed 20-cent per ton cut in lake cargo freight rates from the south, gave way at interstate commerce commission hearings today to spokesmen for the southern coal industry. Governor Gore of West Virginia led a delegation of coal producers and business men from his state who pleaded with the commission to allow railroads serving that territory to put the coal rate reduction into effect. M. Z. White, president of the West Virginia senate, asserted that the rate reduction was an absolute necessity if coal mines were to be kept in operation in Williams and surrounding counties of his state. He declared a loss of business had been experienced by the West Virginia producers when northern railroads last summer were allowed to cut lake cargo rates for the benefit of operators in the Ohio and Pittsburgh fields competing in the lake cargo trade.

Fire Destroys Part of Large Factory

Wayne, Mich., Nov. 18.—(AP)—Two wings of the L. H. Glimmer company plant, makers of brake and body linings for automobiles were destroyed today by fire which tied up the main lines of the Michigan Central railroad and disrupted entirely private telegraph and telephone lines of the company. The loss is estimated at between $80,000 and $100,000. The fire departments of Wayne, Fordson and Dearborn were called to halt the flames. One of the contracts under which the company was working was one with the Ford Motor company involving the body linings for the new car.

HERMANVILLE

Perkins Camp, Royal Neighbors of America, conducted a novelty sale at their meeting on Thursday evening, November 17. A large number of members and friends attended the sale. A delightful lunch was served and cards were played. Every one reported a most enjoyable evening. Twin boys were born to Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Lora of Hermantown recently. Gerhard Logman and Stanley Kopke left for the logging operations of the Wisconsin Land and Lumber company at Ladoga, on the Whitefish branch of the North Western. They will operate the log loader at the camps. David Downey, woods superintendent of the Wisconsin Land and Lumber company, is at present looking after logging operations at Ladoga. The Rapid River high school basketball team defeated the Hermantown team at the opening game of the season at the Hermantown community club. The game was attended by a large number of local fans. The high school team is doing fine work and hopes to be in shape soon to make a good showing. Otto Magnusson, who last season are the only two of last year's regular players on the team. The others are all new players. The Lakeside Ventilating company defeated the Office team of the Wisconsin Land and Lumber company at a match game on the local alleys Thursday evening.

Remus turned his attention to the quiet man on the bench, grimacing and gesticulating at him. "Your honor, when I told the court ten days ago that any statement made by Remus shall be used as evidence against him in the major trial of this case, I stand pat upon that assertion," he said. Remus bent his head upon young Taft. "Five hundred judges and members of the Chicago bar has volunteered to come down here as character witnesses and just because the son of the chief justice is a character in this wonderful United States makes that kind of an assertion—man, if I had you in the corridor, I would wreck you physically—I will tell the truth—and Remus' roaring voice choked in his throat, giving Basler chance to get in an objection. "How much of this stuff is the court going to stand?" asked the assistant prosecutor, as Remus turned upon him. "When you were on the eastern trip you drank pints and pints of whiskey—you did so," screamed Remus. "Is that so," countered Basler. "That will be shown, yes sir; I will show you up—murder is the charge—my life is at stake and I will show that you drank liquor by the pint, not by the ounce, Mr. Basler, by proper evidence."

Prosecution's Objection Overruled. "There is no occasion for this, you can see," shouted Basler. "My life is at stake, and not yours," Remus shouted, but in a moment gave way as Judge Shook quietly but sternly interposed: "I am ready to pass on the matter. Sit down, Mr. Remus." "Yes, thank you, your honor," Remus replied, but interrupted several times more before Judge Shook found himself in complete control of the situation. Judge Shook rebuked both sides, warning them not to try to continue with personalities and overruled the prosecution's objection. The thirteenth juror was then qualified and the jury stood: F. H. Overachmidt, 63, retired baker. Mrs. Anna Ricking, 63, housewife. Henry Hutink, 48, cigar maker. Mrs. Ruth Cross, 23, housewife. John Trautman, farmer and storekeeper. James E. Clark, machinist. C. Henry Sandheger, retired liquor dealer. Matthew J. Normie, Sr., produce dealer. Robert E. Hoeford, painting contractor. Joseph Schwab, farmer. Henry B. Byrd, salesman. Joseph Lambert, machinist. The jury at adjournment of court today until next Monday, was taken to Education park, where Remus pursued Mrs. Remus when she leaped from her blocked automobile and tried to escape from him above, and then shot her fatally in the abdomen. Only five venturians have formed opinions. The defense still had five peremptory challenges left when it approved the jury and left the two women, one quite youthful, and one aged, although it expended eleven of the peremptory challenges it exercised in removing other women. The prosecution did not challenge a woman until selection of the emergency juror was reached when it removed a sister of an attorney who once had appeared for Remus. A square file, invented after forty years of experiment, is said to be an advance on the normal round file in tone and carry power.

U. P. ROADS TO BE KEPT OPEN

1300 Miles on State's Snow Removal Schedule—Davies

About 1300 miles of highways in the upper peninsula will be kept open for traffic this winter, H. I. Davies, district highway engineer, said yesterday. Most of the road crews in the peninsula were prepared for the first serious snow storm of the season early this week, and there was little interruption on the state and county roads.

Although the bay shore road to Menominee, known as M-35, is not on the schedule for snow removal, the state department will see to it that the road is kept in condition for use, according to Mr. Davies.

Other highways in Delta county will be patrolled regularly, and it is planned to have them open for vehicular traffic at all times this winter. These roads include US-2 and M-41 to Menominee and Iron Mountain; US-2 and M-41 to Manistique; and Marquette and M-35, north of Gladstone through Brampton, Perkins, Maple Ridge and Lathrop.

R. P. Mason, county road engineer, reports that the county is well equipped for its snow removal work. Snow fences have been placed along the roads where drifts usually occur, and the plows are all in shape to combat the snow storms.

Beginning in a day or two, official reports on the condition of trunk line highways in the upper peninsula will be sent out for publication in newspapers from the office of H. I. Davies. It is planned to have these reports brought before the public often enough so that motorists will be informed promptly relative to all changes in the condition of principal thoroughfares. Reports of this kind were published in most of the upper peninsula newspapers last winter and were much appreciated by motorists.

Winter motor travel last year was fairly heavy in all parts of the peninsula and a marked increase is expected this year, inasmuch as the state highway department, cooperating with the counties, has expanded its plowing program so that it will be possible to motor to practically every city and village in the district.

Motor bus lines, inter-city motor truck delivery, the increasing number of traveling salesmen who depend upon automobiles for transporting their business twelve months in the year and the growing popularity of winter touring have made it absolutely necessary that trunk line highways and important township roads be kept open all winter for wheel traffic.

Woman's Club

Discussions of children's books and the Escanaba public library were among the features of the meeting of the Escanaba Woman's club, held in the Carnegie library yesterday afternoon. Miss Mary Weighen, grade school supervisor, addressed the club on "Children and Books," and Mrs. S. W. Brennan, a member of the municipal library board, talked on "Our Library." Members of the club found both talks intensely interesting.

Miss Grace Mills of the high school faculty sang two songs, "Singing" and "Where Goes the Boat," by Nevin.

COLLINS WILL DISCUSS REDS

Lecturer Being Brought Here by Knights of Columbus

Plans are now completed for the free, public lecture by Peter W. Collins of Boston in Escanaba at 8 o'clock next Monday evening.

Mr. Collins' topic will be "Subversive Movements in America," and his lecture, which has been arranged by Escanaba Council, Knights of Columbus, will be part of that organization's nationwide educational campaign against the alarming growth of radicalism in this country. Announcement of Mr. Collins' appearance here has aroused much interest among those who have heard him before and among those who are familiar with his reputation and accomplishments. He has met in joint debate practically all the noted leaders of radicalism, has lectured in colleges and universities and has talked before millions of workers in the nation's industries. Nearly 25 years ago he served as president of the Boston Central Labor Union and, as president of that body, was instrumental in organizing the first national movement for bringing capital and labor together to settle their differences by conference and agreement.

During the World War Mr. Collins acted as industrial expert for the government, and received for the highest commendation for his work. He is the author of many books on radical movements. His audience next Monday evening may look forward to the pleasure of hearing a speaker who knows his subject thoroughly and possesses the knack of presenting it in simple, clear and thoroughly agreeable fashion.

Mr. Collins will follow his usual custom of permitting questions from the audience at the close of his lecture. These "open forum" periods always result in interesting and provocative discussions. The doors of the high school will open at 7:30 and the lecture will begin promptly at 8 o'clock. There will be no admission charge and no collection. All are welcome.

Game Wardens Are Threatened Often, Says Peter Houle

Menominee — Intimidation of conservation officials by hunters who evidently seek to violate the game laws, is quite prevalent in Menominee county, according to Peter Houle, state trapper, game warden during the deer season and deputy sheriff who was at the court house this morning as a witness in the LaRue case. Other residents of the vicinity of Wilson & Harris here also for the LaRue trial, verified the officer's statements as to threats against his life.

Mr. Houle said he has been warned to keep out of certain localities under threat of death and other men said they had heard threats against his life. The officer, however, has not been intimidated and continues to act faithfully in the performance of his duties, at the same time letting it be known who are making the threats so that should he get "the top of his head blown off," as has been threatened, authorities will know about where to look for the guilty parties.

St. Joseph Debate Schedule Announced

St. Joe's debate club received word from D. H. Bottum, Northern State Teachers' college, Marquette, who is manager of the Upper Peninsula Debate League, that the schedule of four league debates will be as follows:

Dec. 16—St. Joe at Gladstone.
Jan. 13—St. Joe at Manistique.
Jan. 20—Newberry at St. Joe.
Jan. 27—Escanaba at St. Joe.

St. Joe takes the negative three times and affirmative once, according to the league schedule. Besides the league debates St. Joe intends to have a number of non-league meets, interclass and otherwise.

St. Joe has two good double teams: affirmative, Sullivan, Farrell, Byrne, LeDuc, Moreau and Stok; negative, John and Rowan Fitzharris, Stern, Larson, O'Donnell and Olinger.

Iron Mountain Banker Resigns

Iron Mountain, Nov. 18—Frederick J. Oliver, cashier of the First National bank of Iron Mountain for the past eight years and associated with that institution since 1899, has resigned. Ill-health and the need of a long rest were given as the reasons. Mr. Oliver wishes to be relieved at the annual meeting January 10.

MANY HUNTERS FAIL TO "FILL"

Deer Kill This Year Is Not Likely to Be Large; Weather Bad

Though deer are numerous in this part of the peninsula and the number of hunters very large, the kill thus far has been small—much smaller than the slaughter that went on during the first few days of the season last year.

Snow, which above all else was desired by the deer slayers, proved a boomerang this year. The combination of sleet and snow froze on the ground a foot deep in many spots and instead of proving an aid to tracking, the hard crust, broken by the hunters' feet, telegraphed his approach a mile away. Rough weather made the game of sitting and waiting an unpleasant occupation, and it is safe to predict that thousands will leave the woods without having filled their licenses.

The timbered lands of the peninsula are criss-crossed with tracks. Deer were moving yesterday, but the storms of preceding days, but the animals have not been driven about as much as they will this week, provided the weather moderates.

Danger that hunters would become snowbound has caused many of them to fight their way out of the woods. At least two parties of Detroit hunters came down out of the Northland country yesterday to dodge any chance of being tied up. None of the men had filled his license. One of them reported getting a "long shot" or or two but that was all.

Some deer are coming back to the city and more are expected, but it is safe to predict that the kill this year will not break any records.

"This is the second year in which deer hunting weather has been adverse," one old-timer pointed out yesterday. "We may now expect the lower peninsula crowd to demand an earlier season next year."

ALL TOO LOVELY.

The news that six little American girls and boys have sent sweet letters and gifts of American paints, brushes and pencils and a little artist's blouse to King Michael of Rumania, is most touching.

One of the little girls wrote that she had seen a picture of "Mickey" and that he looked so nice. "I should like to have you as my boy playmate."

It's all too lovely. The little boys and girls of the world haven't become so sugary as all that all at once, surely. Indeed we sincerely hope not.

We hope the boy-king Michael understands. Pray let him not think for a minute that "little playmates" on this side of the water are all clean-eared little dolls.

Here, it seems to us, in America are more chances for expressing real sympathy, real charity, real love, than in the palaces of Rumania. We have seen more need, and in this city, too.

JOHN COOLIDGE.
Stories about John Coolidge taking girls to dances leave us entirely cold. We can't get steamed up to the idea that real story-seekers are trying to put over that every time the young man has a "date" he's about to get married, elope, defy his parents or kick over the traces in some other way.

The younger Mr. Coolidge is a handsome boy and the son of a president. While the elder Mr. Coolidge remains president, John can expect a certain amount of pestering by reporters who seem all too anxious to have him do something besides go to school and study his lessons.

John Coolidge is no "story" at all until he does something he's not supposed to do or something exceptional and unexpected—that's taken for granted. But until he does, there's not a great deal of sense in trying to imagine that he has.

LYRICS OF LIFE

By Douglas Malloch

THE SUNSET HOUR.
Day has been dark, and stooped with care.
But night is a rosette affair.
Many a day has come and gone.
The sunset lovelier than the dawn.
And so I do not mind the years
As my own sunset-hour appears.

Let youth go forth to battle: youth
Cares more for triumph than for truth.
Let youth seek treasures it may hold;
Age finds that there is other gold.
Let youth a kingly crown desire;
Age finds that there is other gear.
Let youth seek other splendors, I
Find beauty in the westward sky.

For one, the world to really know,
Must see it in the sunset's glow.
Though down the road the shadows run,
They point the pathway to the sun.
And, when the sun has passed away,
You who are young will have to stay.
For heaven youth will have to wait,
But we, the old, are near the gate.

The BENSON MURDER CASE

by S. S. VAN DYNE

CHAPTER LVIII.
Markham sat thinking for several minutes. At last he lifted his head.

"You've about convinced me of his guilt," he admitted. "But damn it, man! I've got to prove it; and there's not much actual legal evidence."

"Vance gave a slight shrug. "I'm not interested in your stupid courts and your silly rules of evidence. But, since I've convinced you, you can't charge me with not having met your challenge, don't you know?"

"I suppose not," Markham assented gloomily. "Slowly the muscles about his mouth tightened."

"You've done your share, Vance. I'll carry on." Heath and Captain Hagedorn were waiting when we arrived at the office, and Markham greeted them in his customary reserved, matter-of-fact way. By now he had himself well in hand, and he went about the task before him with the sombre forcefulness that characterized him in the discharge of all his duties.

"I think we at last have the right man, Sergeant," he said. "Sit down, and I'll go over the matter with you in a moment. There are one or two things I want to attend to first."

He handed Major Benson's pistol to the fire-arms expert. "Look that gun over, Captain, and tell me if there's any way of identifying it as the weapon that killed Benson."

Hagedorn moved ponderously to the window. Laying the pistol on the sill, he took several tools from the pockets of his voluminous coat, and placed them beside the weapon. Then adjusting a jeweller's magnifying glass to his eye, he began what seemed an interminable series of tinkering.

He opened the plates of the stock, and drawing back the sear, took out the firing pin. He removed the slide, unscrewed the link, and extracted the recoil spring.

I thought he was going to take the weapon entirely apart, but apparently he merely wanted to let light into the barrel; for presently he held the gun to the window and placed his eye at the muzzle. He peered into the barrel for nearly five minutes, moving it slightly back and forth to catch the reflection of the sun on different points of the interior.

At last, without a word, he slowly and painstakingly went through the operation of assembling the weapon. Then he lumbered back to his chair and sat blinking heavily for several moments.

"I'll tell you," he said, thrusting his head forward and gazing at Markham over the tops of his steel-rimmed spectacles. "This, now, may be the right gun. I wouldn't say for sure. But when I saw the bullet the other morning I noticed some peculiar firing marks on it; and the rifling in this gun here looks to me as though it would match up with the marks on the bullet. I'm not certain. I'd like to look at this barrel through my heliometer."

"But you believe it's the gun?" insisted Markham. "I couldn't say, but I think so. I might be wrong."

"Very good, Captain. Take it along, and call me the minute you've inspected it thoroughly."

"It's the gun, all right," asserted Heath, when Hagedorn had gone. "I know that bird. He wouldn't have said as much as he did if he hadn't been sure. Whose gun is it, sir?"

"I'll answer you presently," Markham was still battling against the truth—withholding, even from himself, his pronouncement of the Major's guilt until every loop-hole of doubt should be closed. "I want to hear from Stitt before I say anything. I sent him to look over Benson and Benson's books. He'll be here any moment."

After a wait of a quarter of an hour, during which time Markham attempted to busy himself with other matters, Stitt came in. He said a sombre good-morning to the District Attorney and Heath; then, catching sight of Vance, smiled appreciatively.

"That was a good tip you gave me. You had the dope. If you'd kept Major Benson away longer, I could have done more. While he was there he was watching me every minute."

"I did the best I could," sighed Stitt. "I did hard enough to make even twelve payments.—American Lumberman."

There's a brief report... I followed Mr. Vance's suggestion, and took a look at the stock record and the cashier's collateral blotter, and traced the transfer receipts. I ignored the journal entries against the lodger, and concentrated on the activities of the firm heads.

"Major Benson, I found, has been consistently hypotheating securities transferred to him as collateral for marginal trading, and has been speculating steadily in mercantile curb stocks. He has lost heavily—how much, I can't say."

"And Alvin Benson?" asked Vance. "He was up to the same tricks. But he played in luck. He made a wad on a Columbus Motors pool a few weeks back; and he has been salting the money away in his safe—or, at least, that's what the secretary told me."

"And if Major Benson has possession of the key to that safe," suggested Vance, "then it's lucky for him his brother was shot."

"Lucky!" retorted Stitt. "It'll save him from State prison. When the accountant had gone Markham sat like a man of stone his eyes fixed on the wall opposite.

Another straw at which he had grasped in his instinctive denial of the Major's guilt, had been snatched from him.

The telephone rang. Slowly he took up the receiver, and as he listened I saw a look of complete resignation come into his eyes. He leaned back in his chair, like a man exhausted.

"It was Hagedorn," he said. "That was the right gun."

Then he drew himself up, and turned to Heath. "The owner of that gun, Sergeant, was Major Benson."

The detective whistled softly, and his eyes opened slightly with astonishment. But gradually his face assumed its habitual stolidity of expression.

"Well, it don't surprise me any," he said. Markham rang for Swacker.

"Get Major Benson on the wire, and tell him—tell him I'm about to make an arrest, and would appreciate his coming here immediately." His deputizing of the telephone call to Swacker was understood by all of us, I think.

Markham then summarized, for Heath's benefit, the case against the Major. When he had finished, he rose and rearranged the chairs at the table in front of his desk.

"When Major Benson comes, Sergeant," he said, "I am going to seat him here." He indicated a chair directly facing his own. "I want you to sit at his right; and you'd better get Phelps—or one of the other men, if he isn't in—to sit at his left. But you're not to make any move until I give the signal. Then you can arrest him."

When Heath had returned with Phelps and they had taken their seats at the table, Vance said: "I'd advise you, Sergeant, to be on your guard. The minute the Major knows he's in for it, he'll go bald-headed for you."

Heath smiled with heavy contempt. "This isn't the first man I've arrested, Mr. Vance—with many thanks for your advice. And what's more, the Major isn't that kind; he's too nerry."

"Have it your own way," replied Vance indifferently. "But I've warned you."

"The Major is cool-headed; he'd take big chances, and he could lose his last dollar without turning a hair. But when he is finally cornered, and sees ultimate defeat, all his repressions of a lifetime, having had no safety-valve, will explode physically."

"When a man lives without passions, or emotions or enthusiasms, there's bound to be an outlet some time. Some men explode, and some commit suicide,—the principle is the same: it's a matter of psychological reaction. The Major isn't the self-destructive type,—that's why I say he'll blow up." Heath snorted.

"We may be short on psychol-

CARE OF MOUTH DEFECTS GROWS IN IMPORTANCE

In the gradual specialization of medical science, the care of the mouth has been found to be of so much importance as to demand a special group of physicians who consider its defects primarily.

Dr. L. L. Hartman of the School of Dentistry of Columbia university has recently prepared a small manual on the teeth and the mouth which discusses in question and answer form some of the cases which most disturb the mothers of growing children.

Removing Stains. One of the most prominent questions is how to remove green stains on the front of the teeth. Dr. Hartman suggests that a small piece of absorbent cotton be wound on an applicator, barely moistened with tincture of iodine and applied over the stained surfaces.

A paste is now made by moistening a little powdered pumice with water and then with an orange-wood stick flattened at one end, this paste is rubbed over the tooth surfaces until the stains are removed. Any paste remaining in the mouth may be removed with cotton dipped in a solution of boric acid.

Gum boils in the mouth of the child are usually the result of infected teeth and demand dental attention. The period between five and six years of age is especially important to the future health of the mouth, because at this time the first permanent molars, the four most important teeth, make their appearance.

During this period frequent visits should be made to the dentist to make sure that these teeth are properly formed.

These four teeth come into position and lock together so that they act as pillars to support the jaw. Since it is their duty to keep the jaws in proper relationship to each other while the temporary teeth are being substituted for the permanent ones, they affect the entire shape of the mouth and of the jaws.

The most common cause of discoloration of the teeth is decay. Other causes are decomposition of the pulp, bleeding, and the use of various filling materials that tend to oxidize and change their color.

AMUSEMENTS

AT THE DELFT.

The Boxer uprising in China, which a quarter of a century ago, was the focal point for the eyes of the civilized world, has been made the background for one of the most interesting historical dramas ever flashed on the American screen.

With Tim McCoy in the stellar role, and Claire Windsor playing the featured feminine lead, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has woven a delightful romance in Peter B. Kyne's story of the siege of the foreign legations.

The picture, which will be shown at the Strand again today, was directed by W. S. Van Dyke, and the supporting cast includes: Lawson Butts, Cyril Chadwick, Emily Fitzroy, Frank Currier, Sojin Kamayama, Albert de Winter, Frank Chew, Mrs. Wong Wing, Theodore Lodi and others.

AT THE STRAND.

George Walsh stars in "The Broadway Drifter," which will be seen at the Delft again today. Critics of the motion picture journals who previewed the picture in New York, stated that it was his happiest role in a period of several years.

Playing with Mr. Walsh in "The Broadway Drifter" are Dorothy Hall, the much discussed Broadway actress, who has been in the news considerably these last few months; Gladys Valerie, Nellie Savage, George Offerman, Jr., Bigelow Cooper, Arthur Donaldson, Paul Doucet and others.

Dinner—Flounder in parsley sauce, twice baked potatoes, buttered spinach, jellied celery and cabbage salad, squash pie, milk, coffee.

If baked, toss cubes lightly into melted butter and bake in a moderate oven until a golden brown on all sides. It should take from five to eight minutes. If fried in deep fat, the fat must be very hot so that the bread will brown before soaking much fat. Pan-fried, the croutons are shaken over the fire in a hot frying pan "painted" with butter.

YOU MAY THINK YOU HAVE EATEN GOOD BREAD BUT PAST PERFORMANCES ARE MEDIOCRE COMPARED WITH—

BIG BOY

"THE WONDER LOAF"

"Big Boy" is truly the modern loaf—Good to eat—chuck full of health and vitality. Be sure and say "Big Boy" when ordering by phone.

"Big Boy" is a real food treat for youngsters as well as grown-ups. Know the merits of this loaf yourself. Your grocer has it.

BASKET :-:

Drink tea or coffee in any form. Babies should not be given toast dipped in mother's or father's coffee. Coffee has no more actual food value than so much hot water and if the toast is softened, its end is defeated since it is the crispness and effort of chewing wherein its value lies.

Creamed Eggs and Mushrooms.
Six hard "baked" eggs, 1-4 pound or one cup sliced fresh mushrooms, 2 tablespoons butter, 2 table-spoons flour, 1-2 cups thin cream, 1 egg, yolk, 1 teaspoon lemon juice, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 1-8 teaspoon pepper.

Melt butter and add mushrooms cleaned and sliced. Cover and cook over a low fire for five min-utes. Sift over flour and stir with a fork until blended. Slowly add 1-4 cups cream, stirring constantly. Bring to the boiling point and season with salt and pepper. Beat remaining cream with yolk of egg and stir into mixture. Add hard cooked eggs cut in slices and stir carefully until hot. Add lemon juice and serve. The mixture can be served on triangles of toast, in patty shells or between split indi-vidual baking powder biscuits. It offers an excellent suggestion to the woman in the country who has eggs, cream and mushrooms for the "gathering."

Breakfast—Grapes, cereal, cream, poached eggs on graham toast, milk, coffee.

Luncheon—Baked cabbage with bacon, Boston brown bread, cran-berry and prune pie, milk, tea.

Dinner—Boiled shoulder of lamb, baked squash, creamed car-rots, stuffed green pepper salad, fruit in lemon jelly with whipped cream, hot water sponge cake, milk, coffee.

Boston Brown Bread.
One cup rye meal, 1 cup corn meal, 1 cup graham flour, 1 tea-spoon salt, 2 tablespoons brown sugar, 2 1/2 teaspoons soda, 3-4 cup molasses, 1 cup sour milk.

Mix all the dry ingredients ex-cept soda. Add molasses and one and one-half cups sour milk. Dis-solve soda in remaining sour milk and add at once to mixture. Beat thoroughly and turn into a but-tered mold. Cover and steam three hours.

Do not fill the mold or molds more than two-thirds full and fasten cover securely. Otherwise when the bread rises in the steaming it will force the cover off. Pound baking powder cans make acceptable molds if the reg-ular melon or round bread molds are not at hand.

Plain bacon sandwiches can be put together in a very short time when other fillings are unavailable.

Mining Industry Outlook Is Improving Says Babson

Babson Park, Mass., Nov. 18.—Roger W. Babson in his weekly interview today discussed mining securities and the general mining situation. Mr. Babson calls attention to the fact that mining securities are about the only class of securities that have not gone up.

Importance of Mining Industry

"When I was a young man, working on Wall Street, mining securities were very active and a very popular investment. The majority of buying on the Boston Stock Exchange was on copper stocks alone, while silver, zinc, lead, and other mining securities followed a close second. Today mining securities are dead, while even coal securities and oil securities are comparatively inactive. The entire industry is in an unpopular position. Because mining securities, however, are not popular at the present time is no reason why they should be neglected. Although I am not bullish on any stocks at the moment, yet if compelled to invest, I should take mining or oil stocks in preference to any others.

"Because the mining industry is temporarily under a cloud, we must not forget the magnitude of the mining industry. We think copper mining is dead in the United States and yet last year 1,739,622,094 pounds to a total value of $243,547,000 were produced. In addition to this, lead to the value of $108,910,000, zinc to the value of $91,799,000, and silver and gold to the value of $87,406,097 were produced. In a normal year, a total of about $1,402,920,000 in general metals is produced in the United States. In addition to this, we might include iron to the value of $923,649,113, coal to the value of $1,748,164,252 and oil to the value of $1,447,760,000. If Mexico, Alaska, and Canada were included, these figures would be swelled considerably more. Canada especially, is producing more mineral products every year and without doubt, the mining industry has a very bright future in Canada.

Statistical Position of Copper Improved

"The current statistical position of copper metal, including production, stocks on hand, imports, total net supply shows an encouraging situation. Overproduction has been the bane of the copper industry for the past two or three years. Now it appears that production is under control, to some extent, at least. Production in September 1927 indicated a drop of about 14,000,000 pounds compared with the same month last year. Since the first of the year there has been a reduction of monthly copper production amounting to around 20,000,000 pounds. The import situation is not out of hand, and while imports are still relatively heavy, they are not noticeably above last year's levels. The demand for domestic consumption recently is somewhat smaller, running at an annual rate now of around 1,690,000,000 pounds compared with a rate for 1926 of 1,800,000,000 pounds.

"The most encouraging part of this situation, however, is the lower surplus supply. Stocks on hand the first of October, including all descriptions of copper were around 666,000,000 pounds which was a reduction of over 99,000,000 pounds from the high point in March of this year. This situation coupled with the lower supply abroad is distinctly encouraging.

Coal Production Heavier

"Official settlement of the coal strike in the Middle West has increased production so that it is now running over 10,500,000 tons weekly. Bituminous prices have weakened in accordance with larger output. Before the bituminous strike the operators had piled up a 75,000,000 ton supply. About 50,000,000 tons of that is still available and with the resumption of production, there is for the time being a large over-supply of soft coal. Many mines remain closed in view of the surplus coal which has been piled up. The anthracite situation is somewhat stronger although the mild weather this Fall has caused some hesitation in consumer demand. Production, however, is not as great as last year.

"The outlook for lead and zinc is affected considerably by the large stocks of these metals abroad. Consequently, domestic prices are low even in the face of recent reduction in the rate of output. Profits in the lead and zinc mining industry for 1927 are now showing up well, but it is difficult to see how lead and zinc prices can decline very much further. Rather I would look for the next broad swing to be toward some improvement.

"Petroleum production, which for a year or more has been far above normal, has in the course of the past two months shown substantial decline. This is a very salutary development, because over-production has been the bane of the oil industry for some time. Stocks, both of crude petroleum and refined products, are exceptionally heavy, but if the decline in production continues, it augurs well for the future of oil prices. This great industry also has been producing very heavily on a constantly narrowing margin of profit.

Price Outlook

"Of course the price of copper and most metals is low at the present time. Silver is very low. Coal is being mined almost at cost, while the over-production of oil is keeping down the price. Almost all of these raw materials are selling at abnormally low prices. This probably accounts for the inactivity of the mining industry because the activity of any industry is directly proportional to the profits in the industry. It, however, should be remembered that an abnormally low price for any product always increases the use of the product and decreases the production of the product. Hence, after a product has sold at an abnormally low price for a long time, the price always turns upward. This is on the principal that when a man is flat on his back there is only one way he can look and that is upward. Hence, it is always better to be optimistic on something which is abnormally low than on something which is abnormally high.

"For the above reasons the mining industry is, to a certain extent, conducted with general business conditions. As general business increases, the demand for products of the mines increases also, while as general business decreases, the demand for the products of the mines decreases. The Babsonchart, standing at 1 per cent above normal compared with about 10 per cent above normal at this time last year, indicates that at present business conditions are about normal in the United States. Opinions differ as to what the next movement in general business conditions will be, but it must have its effect on the mining industry. Even if general business as a whole is not as good as this year, the mining industry should suffer less than some other industries which are abnormally prosperous."

Ask Rest-Home Cure for Domestic Worry

Los Angeles—Many women who "might be adjudged insane and committed to asylums are merely in need of rest and a change of environment and can be helped 'over the border' by help from Harassment."

This is the opinion of Mrs. O. P. Clark, who to carry out her conviction, established a rest home in Los Angeles, the forerunner of one in France.

"For women of moderate means such a haven is necessary as a preventive measure. According to our experiment, conducted for the last 15 years, 75 per cent of the women who come before the lunacy commission needed a refuge from their household duties and removal from the cause of their mental strain.

"This timely rest, instead of commitment to an asylum has rehabilitated many mentally unbalanced women and restored them to normal activities in their own home."

Because of the wide-reaching helpfulness of this experiment, a new home has just been built recently to house 50 guests.

Junket Queen Wins At London Show

London (AP)—Mrs. E. J. Farmer, "junket queen" of England, won great popularity at the annual dairy show at Islington.

For 12 years Mrs. Farmer has been the recognized British authority on how to make "junket," which is a dish of milk curdled by rennet and served with cream flavored with nutmeg. At every annual dairy show she demonstrates to thousands of women how this delicacy is made in Devonshire.
