

ADOLPH QUIST IS BOUND OVER

Charged With Manslaughter and Negligent Homicide

Adolph Quist, 300 North Fifteenth street, was bound over to circuit court on charges of manslaughter and negligent homicide following a hearing before Justice of the Peace Henry Rannette yesterday afternoon. He furnished bond of $1,000 for his release, the amount having been reduced from $2,000 upon the request of Atty. H. J. Rushton, counsel for the defense.

The charges against Quist grew out of the crashing of a truck, which Quist was driving, into an Escanaba and Lake Superior railway train at the Stephenson street crossing on the afternoon of November 2, resulting in the death of Rudolph Johnson, who was riding with Quist.

Twelve witnesses testified at the hearing. Prosecuting Attorney Glenn W. Jackson, who represented the state in the proceedings, attempted to bring out in his questioning of witnesses that Quist was driving at a high rate of speed and in a reckless manner before the occurrence of the accident. The finding of fragments of a bottle, which smelled of alcoholic liquor, on the pavement under the railway coach shortly after the fatal crash was mentioned by several of the witnesses.

Those who testified at the hearing were:

Dr. George C. Bartley, coroner, who examined Johnson's body at St. Francis hospital, said that he had suffered a fractured skull, resulting in hemorrhages which caused Johnson's death. Dr. Bartley declared he was certain Quist was sober at the time of the accident for when he attended him at the hospital for bruises he could not smell the odor of liquor. Dr. Bartley said that Quist asked him to call Mrs. Quist and gave him the correct telephone number without hesitation.

George Goymerac, 13 years old, 927 Sheridan road, who said he was riding home on his bicycle from school and stopped on the south side of the crossing to wait for the train to pass. The youth said he saw the truck, which was driven by Quist, crash into the train on the other side. By looking underneath the coach, Goymerac said he had a view of the truck as it approached from about 20 feet away. The boy said he went around the train to view the wrecked car. He testified that he saw one of the men, who helped remove Johnson's body, take a bottle from the seat of the truck and smash it on the pavement under the coach. Quist also smelled of alcohol, the boy said.

Harold Christensen, 17 years old, a senior in the Escanaba high school, testified he was sitting in an automobile parked in front of the Scandia Co-op store on Sheridan road and that Quist drove by at a high rate of speed, narrowly missing side-swiping the car which he occupied. He estimated the speed at which Quist was traveling at 60 miles per hour. This was only a few minutes before the accident occurred. Christensen said he a short time later went to the scene of the crash and saw a police officer pick up the fragments of the bottle, which had contained alcoholic liquor.

Michael Ettenhofer, assistant police chief, told of making an investigation of the accident, and told of picking up fragments of glass, which smelled of moonshine liquor, underneath the train coach. The bottle, according to some witnesses, was taken from the truck by a man who helped remove Johnson's body from the truck into the ambulance. Who this man was, police have been unable to learn.

Joseph Brown, brakeman on the E. and L. S. train, testified he was sitting in the coach as the train was heading west across Stephenson avenue. He fixed the time at 4:35 p. m., and said that clear weather prevailed and it was still daylight. Brown testified that he first saw the truck approaching about 150 feet away, traveling at 35 to 40 miles an hour. About 20 feet away from the train, he said, the truck swerved to the eastward, crashing into the steps on the front end of the coach and sliding a short distance alongside of the coach, finally stopping near the sidewalk by the Chatfield plant. Brown said the truck was virtually demolished. When he hurried out of the coach, Brown said, he found Quist lying limp against the steering wheel and Johnson's body beside him on the seat. Later Quist scrambled out of the truck, walked around in a daze for a few moments and then helped remove Johnson's body. Brown testified that Quist smelled of liquor.

George Anderson, head brakeman on the train, told of flagging the crossing and that at that time he saw no vehicles approaching from the north. He confirmed the statements of other witnesses that there was nothing to obstruct the vision at that place and time.

Richard Trotter, fireman, said he received the signal from Brakeman Anderson to proceed, and thereupon he passed on the signal to the engineer.

Joseph Trudeau, engineer, testified that upon receiving the signal to make the crossing, he blew the usual crossing warning and rang the bell, which continued ringing as he was crossing the street. He said the train was going at about four miles per hour and that as soon as he saw the truck crash into the coach, he stopped the train, which was composed of only engine, tank and combination coach, within about four feet.

Warren Rowley, 518 North Eighteenth street, said he was working on a lathe in the Raymond Log Loader plant and that he became alarmed when he heard the train sounding for the crossing and noise of the truck traveling at high speed. He said he first saw the truck when it was about 300 feet away from the crossing, and that it proceeded toward the crossing at about 35 to 40 miles per hour without little slackening of speed. He said he did not see the bottle in question anywhere about the place.

Robert Rydstrand, proprietor of Meadow Brook farm, testified that shortly before the accident Quist passed him in Sheridan road north of the crossing, driving at

From then on, Forbes writes, Dr. Sawyer tried to "dominate the bureau and its employees," establishing a stool-pigeon system in the bureau and other departments of the government, as well."

READY TO OPEN CONTEMPT CASE

Sinclair and Burns Will Go On Trial Monday, Announcement

Washington, Dec. 3.—(AP)—Announcements by the government and the defense that they were ready for the opening of the Sinclair-Burns criminal contempt proceedings in the supreme court of the District of Columbia Monday were forwarded today by a short but bitter exchange between Charles Ruddy a Burns detective and Nell Burkinshaw, assistant district attorney.

Rudy, who was in charge of the Fall-Sinclair jury shadowing, called on Burkinshaw and after a sharp exchange he refused to continue his conference with Burkinshaw and departed. Later he issued a statement in which he said Burkinshaw greeted him with an accusation that he had been drunk within the last week, and declaring the accusation was "absolutely untrue," he said he had refused to remain in Burkinshaw's office any longer.

Ruddy charged that "this final insult on the part of Mr. Burkinshaw is in accordance with the tactics he used during the grand jury session. He continued that at one time Burkinshaw had threatened him with arrest "in spite of the fact that he emphatically told that both the men and myself had testified truthfully and were hiding nothing."

Charles R. Douglas, counsel for William J. Burns and his associates and George P. Hoover, counsel for Sinclair, announced their clients would be ready to proceed with the hearing Monday and that no action would be taken that might delay the case.

Abner Bangs Nears Finish of Course in Salesmanship

Misery Bay, Dec. 3 (To the Editor)—I have nearly about reached the finishing conclusion of a course in modern salesmanship which has learned me to sell something I haven't got to somebody that don't want it. I am on the high-road to fame and fortune, and my income will be increasingly augmented by metres and bounds within a short brief period of time.

All you have got to do to be a salesman is to read a couple of books on sales psychology and be handy with a black-jack or a wagon-spoke. Along about the middle of January I am going to organize a syndicate for the purposeful intention of selling a thaw to the ice man's union. This, it now apparently seems, will be my final school examination which will get me a beautiful engraved diploma.

Tells How to Do It

The correspondence course, which comes by mail, is full of information. I will review a summary of how to go about it in the fullest detail to make a high-pressure sale.

The first thing you should learn to use with fluent glibness is the word job. If you are selling automobiles an automobile is a "job." Or if it is washing machines a washing machine is a "job." Or radios are "jobs," and pianos are "jobs," and automatic peanut crackers are "jobs." And you must always tell everybody that whatever you are displaying is a "beautiful job." If you forget to use that word "job" people will think you are an amateur.

Then the books says you should never talk to an uncomfortable prospect. I reckon that means you should ought to furnish him with a sofa, pillow, a gin-rickey, a cigar, a high place to put his feet and maybe an anesthetic before you start in.

It is usually a pretty good idea to begin by tickling his vanity. You can tell him he ought to be governor of the State of Superior; that his kids are the sweetest kids in town; that she has such a tough beard you don't see how the barbers can shave him; that he can lick any body within 20 pounds of his weight; and that you came to him to get some especially valuable advice.

Then "Close" Him

By that time, if he is still conscious, you reach in your pocket and secretly draw out a preliminary argument which you hit him with it in his sales resistance. That should ought to stagger him. Then you go on throwing secondary arguments at him without giving him a chance to say no. After that, you will realize whether to proceed. If he rallies and throws you out of the office you can take it for granted you did not "close him." (Let me add here that a go-getting, high-powered salesman never "sells." He "closeses." He closes everything but his vocal magnavox) If you are so fortunate as to still have him groggy, though, you pull out the contract, show him the dotted line, get the down payment, make sure he has not got a gun with which to avenge himself when he regains his faculties, and then sneak quietly out of the office.

This formula works. The correspondence school said so. They are experts. Didn't they sell me the course?

Sincerely & Truly,
ABNER BANGS, esq.

SMITH AND PROHIBITION. Al Smith, who at the moment appears to be the Democratic party's leading aspirant for the presidency, steps forward with an emphatic denial that he ever has attempted to "bully" the constitution and declares that an oath of office is a sacred thing to him.

Quoting from a dry organization's resolutions that "respect for and obedience to law is vital for the preservation of any form of government," Governor Smith added this comment of his own: "This is so fundamental that nobody differs with it. Any well-ordered government must rest upon this principle."

Any man who is able enough to command the support of a majority of the delegates to the national conventions of either the Republican or Democratic parties can take no other view. It will require more than the election of a president whose personal views are "wet" to bring about a change in the prohibition laws. The wets who are turning towards Smith in the hope that he might alleviate the national drought are overlooking the fact that whoever occupies the white house will first take an oath to support the constitution of the United States.

Modification of the dry law—if it is ever modified—will come not through the election of a chief executive, but through a change, first, in the attitude of congress and, secondly, through the repeal, by three-fourths of the state legislatures, of the eighteenth amendment.

Al Smith's attitude towards prohibition, if he should attain the presidency, would be exactly the attitude any other leader of either party would assume.

Administering a "dry" constitution, he offers no relief for those who desire a liberalizing of the present law.

NO SUCH ANIMAL. Football championships are never convincingly decided. For instance, what eleven is national champion?

Some say Georgia, some say Yale. None will say Notre Dame. The Irish were completely eliminated as a champion team. Army settled that, to the satisfaction of the most biased Notre Dame followers. Yet, here's something to consider. How many of those who say Yale is the champion would bet even money on Yale to beat Notre Dame?

How many of them in fact would bet even money on Georgia to beat Notre Dame? Or Yale to beat Southern California? Or to beat Minnesota.

Not many you probably answer. Then how can we have champions?

Take the Big Ten conference for instance. If Minnesota was to play Illinois, the conference champions, Minnesota would enter the fray a decided favorite. The idea is that no football team can be at its best throughout the season, any more than the New York Yankees can win every game of an American League baseball season every year. There are times during the year when the lowly Boston Red Sox will outplay and defeat the Yankees. That does not signify that the Red Sox compare with the Yanks as a ball club.

Gridiron teams, even more than baseball teams, have their "off-days." They are made up of young athletes, more apt to suffer from the strain of competition than they are playing a game in which physical injuries always are a vital factor.

Notre Dame was tied once and beaten decisively once, yet the Irish entered the Southern California game the favorites, in spite of the fact that Southern California was undefeated and ranked as a lead candidate for national honors. And the Irish won.

How, then, can we have football champions? The answer is: We can't.

There simply "aint no such animal."

GAS TAX VALID. The decision of the Michigan supreme court upholding the constitutionality of the three-cent gasoline tax, means that the state will have $34,000,000 available next year for road-building purposes. Of this sum the gas tax automobile into general use as a weight tax $16,000,000, according to estimates by highway department experts.

In upholding the law against the attacks by the Detroit Automobile club, the court pointed out that highways are not constructed for local purposes but "have passed, with the coming of the automobile into general use as a means of transportation," and that "good roads are an economic necessity."

The way is now cleared for the continuation of the state's building program. Escanaba and this section of the Upper Peninsula, generally, are vitally interested in that program because of the work contemplated on the Escanaba-Gladstone road and other important highways in this immediate vicinity.

Governor Green may now continue his fight to abolish the present weight tax, do away with the yearly issuance of license plates, and raise all of the highway department's funds through the medium of a tax on gasoline. This would mean, of course, that the man who uses the roads most, pays the most for their construction and maintenance; and that the man who owns a "family" car, used once or twice during the week, would not be asked to contribute as much as the man, with a similar car, who is on the roads almost constantly. Governor Green's idea is likely to meet strenuous opposition from the big truck-owning concerns of the cities, where the old narrow gauge argument that they have all the roads they need again will be employed, but it is also likely to appeal strongly to the "ordinary" motorist.

RATTLING DOORS. Bedroom doors that prevent sleep by rattling should have a strip of goods tied around the outside handle and crossed over and around the inside handle.

The treasury department recently destroyed $500,000 in counterfeit money which had been captured by the secret service over a long period. There were 20,000 counterfeit coins.

The Blazing Horizon

CHAPTER X

The week following was the week of Dec. 12, 1880. On that day, which was Sunday, there was a large parade and demonstration in Hunnewell by David Payne's Boomers. Led by Payne himself, they marched through the streets of Hunnewell 500 strong, singing and shouting. An inspiring sermon was delivered by a preacher who evidently believed in Payne's cause. He spoke of how Moses led his followers into the Promised Land.

It was a day of high hopes and exultation on the part of the agitators for free homes in Oklahoma. Banners were borne through the streets and David Payne was something of a hero, although there were many who looked on in doubt or contempt.

The next day, Colonel Moore and Tony Harrison drove into Caldwell. Mrs. Moore and Rita arrived late that afternoon and the colonel immediately installed the whole party in a hotel. Shortly afterward he left to attend to some business.

"If you'll sort of look after Rita and her mother, Tony," he suggested, "I'll count it a favor. There's a meeting of cattlemen I've got to look in on. We're going to try to get together on some points that we've been unable to agree on."

Rita was as imperious as ever. She ordered Tony to walk back and forth while she watched him to see if his accident had left any trace. But he walked easily and without any limp.

She seemed quite satisfied. "Now I can stop being sorry for you; can't I, Mother?" Her gray eyes sparkled mischievously. "Marguerita, how shocking!" Katherine Moore reproved her. "Of course, you mustn't stop being sorry for being the cause of it. You can be happy, though, that it was no worse. It might have crippled him for life."

Apparently Rita did not like to dwell on that thought. "Take me for a walk through Caldwell, Tony," she commanded.

Her mother demurred but finally consented. However, she insisted that she accompany them. She knew very little about Caldwell herself, but much of what she had heard had been shocking.

Rita insisted on being shown the Big Buffalo saloon. Her mother told her that she was morbid and that she lacked consideration for Tony's feelings. Nevertheless, she had her way.

She took a keen interest in everything and pried Tony with questions. As they passed Max Woods' place her eyes suddenly turned toward Tony's with a puzzled expression in them. "Why is that man staring at us like that?" she demanded.

The boy turned in the direction indicated by her and beheld Shaffer, the marshal. He was leaning indolently against a building, picking his teeth, and was regarding them with an insolent stare that seemed to hold some amusement.

"That's the marshal of Caldwell, Tony explained to Rita. He noticed Mrs. Moore redden angrily and avert her face as she chanced to look in Shaffer's direction and decided it would be as well not to mention the incident to Colonel Moore. The colonel was the sort of a man who would kill another who looked at his wife in a way she didn't like. Tony had that on the authority of Joe Craig.

That evening Titus Moore confided why he had been rather anxious to be in Caldwell for the following day. "David Payne and that shiftless bunch of idlers that are trying to get something for nothing are coming to Caldwell tomorrow. I hear, I'm downright anxious to see what they'll do."

They did nothing, or practically so. The next day, Dec. 14, Payne and his followers moved on to Caldwell from Hunnewell and a large throng watched and hoped for action. But there was no action to speak of. The demonstration which had seemed so successful in Hunnewell missed fire in Caldwell and the crowds were disappointed because of the absence of the spectacular.

"Just about what I thought would happen," Colonel Moore hunched on the way home. "Some of the other cowmen were real alarmed about it. They sort of thought all Caldwell was going to cross the border en masse. Last May Payne and about ten or eleven of his followers were arrested down near the north fork of the Canadian and escorted by the military back to the Kansas line. Since then I believe he's been afraid to go back in the territory."

Tony's brows knit in a puzzled frown. "Who owns the land down here?" he asked. "It's Indian land; that's why they call it Indian territory. I borrow my range from the Cherokees." He accentuated the word "borrow," and laughed.

"And what's Payne's argument?" "Oh, he's got some fool notion that just because the noble red men can't possibly use all the territory that's been allotted to them they should throw the land open for settlement."

The boy was silent, but the puzzled frown remained for some time. He found it difficult to share Joe Craig's and Titus Moore's hostility toward David Payne.

INJURED GIRL MAY RECOVER

Fate of Young Man Who Set Bomb Hangs in Balance

Ottawa, Ill., Dec. 3.—(AP)—On the love of the girl school teacher he sought to kill with dynamite, largely hangs the fate of young Hiram Reed, son of a prosperous Dana, Ill., farmer.
Sitting in his cell in the county jail here, today, he placidly discussed his prospects while the sweetheart he confessed attempting to put out of the way by placing explosives in the school house fought for her life at the home of her sister, nearby.
Physicians said 23-year-old Iola Bradford might recover if infection did not begin in some of her countless small wounds about her body, made by tiny pieces of the iron stove when it burst. But the iron was rusty and the chances of infection great.
Miss Bradford, about to become a mother, does not connect the young farmer with the explosion that mangled her. In her moments of delirium she calls for him.

Reed was told by State's Attorney Hanson that if the girl forgave him he would not be prosecuted on the charge of injuring her. It was this promise that resumed in his cool confession and story of how he broke into the building, placed the dynamite in the fuse, attached the caps and ran the fuse to the firewood so it would be touched off when the girl lit the fire in the morning.
Endangered 50 Children.
Even though she decides to marry him, there still remains the bombing charge which incensed farmers insist will be pushed. Only one child accompanied Miss Bradford into the building as she prepared to light the stove, a little girl, and she escaped injury. The fact that the teacher was kneeling probably saved her from being decapitated by the top of the stove as it was blown off.

"Didn't you have a thought for the 50 innocent children in the school?" the state attorney asked young Reed, who said the girl insisted on a wedding but that he was not ready to take on the responsibilities of marriage.
"Well, no, but what's the difference, none of the kids were hurt," he replied. "As for Iola, when she gets well, she will feel all right about it. She is crazy about me, and will be willing to marry me still."
Miss Bradford is the daughter of a retired minister at Chilli-cothe, Ill.

GARDEN BOOZE PLACES RAIDED

County authorities raided four places in the Garden community Friday night, causing the arrest of four proprietors on the charge of violating the prohibition laws.

The four men will be arraigned before Justice of the Peace Doherty at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon.

Undersheriff Joseph P. Carnay, Deputy Sheriff Henry Breault and Parole Officer Judson, who composed the raiding party, found almost a quart of moonshine whiskey in the soft drink parlor operated by Ben Froz. He was in the act of filling a bottle with the liquor to sell to a customer when the officers entered the place.

At the Asa Tatrow poolroom, they seized a half pint of liquor and discovered a quart in a search of the gasoline station, operated by Joseph Chornard.

Peter Foy, who conducts the roadside tourist stand at Fish Dam park, was arrested on a charge of selling intoxicating liquor, two purchases having been made at his place.

This Story Has Real Punch

In this corner, we have Knock-out Erick Pierson, the battling policeman.

Over here, William Ranta, the Finnish woodchopper.

If Tex Rickard ever runs out of pugilistic material to participate in his Madison Square Garden boxing shows, he would do well not to overlook the knockout punch possessed by Patrolman Pierson of the Escanaba police force.

All was quiet Friday night along the avenue until about midnight when residents for blocks around were awakened from their slumbers by a series of wild yells and howls. Some thought a menagerie had broken loose. Others thought of murder.

Then a dull thud—silence.

Ranta was loitering near a Ludington street lunch room, creating considerable disturbance, when Patrolman Pierson came along and advised him to go home. The husky lumberjack snarled nastily something which probably meant, "So's your old man." The officer then attempted to place Ranta in the police car, intending to take him to the station, but he put up stiff resistance. Patrolman Sandborn came to Pierson's assistance, and the two finally managed to lift the giant Ranta bodily and deposited him in the back seat.

There, Ranta settled down to apparent peace and the two officers went into the front seat. Just as Pierson was about to start the automobile, however, Ranta became hostile again and commenced kicking like the wildest of the wild ponies at a rodeo. He kicked sideways, tearing off the side-curtains.

He kicked toward the sky, denting the top. But that wasn't all. He planted his No. 12's on the back of Pierson's head.

"Quit tickling me," said Erick peevishly as he turned around and drove a terrific right to Ranta's left eye, knocking the woodchopper cold.

An hour later, Ranta awoke at the police station, and asked whether it was a passenger or a fast freight that hit him. He gave police his name, and then fell back to sleep. He awakened Saturday morning not remembering what occurred the night before. Unable to pay his fine in justice court, he was sentenced to serve twelve days in the county jail.

Engineers Work on Zoning Map

Two members of the city engineering department are making surveys about the city in the work of preparing a zoning map, which will be used in drafting Escanaba's new zoning ordinance.

As soon as their work is completed, their findings will be forwarded to T. Glenn Phillips, city planner and landscape artist of Detroit, who has been engaged by the city to supervise the zoning work.

Leslie Lancour of Perkins was a visitor in the city yesterday.

THE TINYMITES Story by Hal Cochran—Pictures by Knick

The Tinies gazed up in the sky, and watched the scooter float on by. "Oh, my, it isn't going to stop," cried Scouty, in despair. "I know that it would give us joy, if we could meet that little toy. I'll bet that he's a soldier who patrols the open air."

The giant then said, "Have no fear. I'm sure that he will come down here. I guess he's merely doing tricks to try and please you all. Just watch him glide, and see him swoop. He sure knows how to loop the loop. Now wouldn't it be terrible if he should take a fall?"

The Toy Tot kept on flying round. He'd sail down right close to the ground, and then he'd swing back up again, and sail just like a bird. The Tinies all were so surprised, they merely stood with open eyes, and watched the funny antics. No one said a single word.

They stood and stared an hour or more. Then Clowny cried, "My neck is sore from looking upward toward the sky. I wish that he would land." "Oh, look," said Scouty, mid a fuss. "I think he's looking down at us." And, sure enough, the queer Toy Tot leaned out and waved his hand.

And then the Tinies gave a cheer. The scooter dipped and landed near. The bunch ran up to greet the toy, who shouted, "Howdy do!" "Hello, there, soldier lad," said one. "You've treated us to lots of fun. We're mighty glad you've landed safe. But, tell us, who are you?"

The soldier toy then said, "Well, I came from a place up in the sky. It's known as Santa Land, and it is filled with wondrous toys. Old Santa sent me down to see if you would all go back with me. He needs a lot of help this year in making all his toys."

Attic Rooms That You Can Live In

WE'VE had many people tell us that they wouldn't finish off their attic rooms because they wouldn't be livable. Hard to get heat up there in winter and no way to keep it out in summer.

We have the answer to that building problem. BALSAM-WOOL heat insulation, a blanket for the walls and roofs of houses, that keeps heat and cold where they belong. Put a layer of BALSAM-WOOL in the walls and roof of your attic before you finish off the rooms and you'll find these rooms just as comfortable every day in the year as those downstairs. Hard to believe, but we've checked up on it and it's true.

And that isn't all the benefits you'll get. Your whole house will be more comfortable in all seasons. And you'll be able to heat it with much less fuel. Every uninsulated roof is a heat sieve which lets out of the house the heat that naturally rises. By keeping the heat inside you can readily see that much less fuel will be required. The roof of every old house, whether or not it has attic rooms, should be insulated with BALSAM-WOOL. The fuel savings will soon make up the cost.

Come in and talk the matter over. We'll be glad to tell you more about BALSAM-WOOL and give you an estimation. If you can't call, phone or write for booklet and sample.

Balsam Wool

A blanketing material for the walls, roofs and ceilings of houses. A heat insulator and a sound deadener. A fuel saver and a comfort and health factor that should be built into every house. A Weyerhaeuser product.

Motorists Urged to Get Licenses Early

Get your 1928 automobile licenses early and avoid the rush, C. W. Malloch of the State Savings bank, who is local manager for the sale of licenses, urges in an announcement yesterday.

Automobile owners would greatly facilitate the efficiency of the local office if they would obtain their licenses at this time. Instead of waiting until the first of the year, Mr. Malloch pointed out. Last year, during the holiday season and shortly after January 1 the office was deluged with applications, and as a consequence there was much time lost by applicants.

Mrs. H. W. Reade of this city was the first to apply for a passenger automobile license, and the first commercial car license was procured by I. W. Smith, also of Escanaba.

SKATING RINK WORK STARTED

Preparatory work in the building of the municipal ice rink at South Fifteenth street, between Eighth and Ninth avenues south, has been started, City Manager T. F. Kessler announced yesterday.

The shelter houses have been moved from their former location so that the size of the rink can be increased, and water was sprinkled yesterday for the first time to build a base for the rink. It will take about a week to make a good base, but if reasonably cold weather continues and there are no snowstorms to interfere, there should be good skating next week.

Work of building another rink at Rose park for the skating enthusiasts of North Escanaba will also be started in the near future.
