

GIRL'S SLAYER TAKEN TO LOS ANGELES

MEXICAN OIL QUESTION IS 'UNSETTLED'

OFFICIAL CIRCLES STILL AWAITING FINAL VOTE

BY DAVID LAWRENCE. (Copyright 1927, by the Escanaba Press) Washington, Dec. 27. — Although a present impression was made here by the news of the Mexican Supreme Court's opinion on the oil land controversy, enthusiasm has been somewhat tempered by the fact that the opinion, read orally, has not yet been reduced to writing and officially signed.

Until the official text gets here, the government cannot decide finally whether the controversy has been settled. Examination of the parliamentary opinion leaves the oil companies somewhat perplexed, for the decision while good so far as it goes leaves some so much in doubt that the word "unsettled" is used advisedly by the oil men in discussing the case.

Clear Up Doubts. There is time, of course, for the Mexican judges to take account of published criticisms and clear up ambiguous passages, or else it may be they will wait for opportunities in other cases to pass on mooted points.

The decision relates merely to those cases in which positive acts were committed and titles granted, but it leaves unsettled the status of wells to which valid title was given but no positive acts were done. Also the question of concessions has not been cleared up. The decision intimates that the Mexican government may require that concessions be revalidated and that titles may have to be submitted to a government department to pass on, but there is no provision for judicial review.

LAND STATUS IN DOUBT

The status of more than seven million acres of land is left in doubt by the decision according to estimates made by oil companies. In fact only about one million acres of oil land is said to have had its legal position cleared up by the decision as orally given by the Mexican supreme court.

BENNETT HEADS
KIWANIS CLUB

Members Hear Interesting Talk by Escanaba Flyer

E. G. Bennett, of the Escanaba Paper company, was elected president of the Kiwanis club at the annual election, concluded yesterday. R. E. Cheney was elected district trustee, William Warmington treasurer and the following were elected directors: George E. Harvey, R. W. Haddock, August Bloomstrom, Lloyd Walker, J. B. Moran, H. K. Rammel and Charles J. Byrna.

Mr. Bennett has been one of the club's most active and energetic members of the club for several years and his administration is certain to be a lively and progressive one, members of the club predict. He succeeds Rev. John B. Hubbard, who headed the club in 1927.

The club also heard an experienced aviator, C. H. Westcott, predict that Escanaba will become the "air capital" of this region, if flyers who have made the start are given a little support here.

Six More Coming.
"Escanaba now has four planes with licensed pilots," said Mr. Westcott. "Students here will add at least six more to the fleet next summer. Interest in flying here is very keen—as it is throughout the country—and we propose to give this city facilities which will enable Escanaba to take the lead and maintain it. A field already has been leased by Joe Bonen, one of the flyers. Considerable has already been done towards putting it in shape. We propose to build hangars and a barracks for student flyers, and make other improvements this year."

Mr. Westcott showed blueprints of the improvements contemplated and outlined the steps which already have been taken to work them out. He also listed some of the business possibilities of the development here, asserting that he was confident 150 to 200 men and women a year would learn to fly in the peninsula annually if facilities were offered.

Confidence in Future.
"It is the coming mode of transportation," said he. "It is making gains in the transportation of freight and express and mail. No one who has watched the course of events of the last year can have any doubts about the future of aviation. This is the logical time for getting into the game."

Escanaba, during most of the summer, had a half-dozen planes. Bonen, Wallie Arntzen and Fred Marenger now have ships. Mr. Westcott will bring in a plane in the spring, and these four men, who are interested in the airport project, expect to add a couple more for teaching purposes and other branches of air work.

Many Students.
Ernest Berg, whose ship spent the summer here, has gone back to Minneapolis, and Capt. Edward Warrander and his wife, "Babe" Kallshek Warrander, have gone to California where both are in the flying business.

The roster of students here last year numbered about fifty, and teaching facilities were limited.

Building Permits
Amount to $75,000

Building permits issued during 1927 in Escanaba represented an expenditure of $75,000 for new construction and repairs, records at the city clerk's office reveal.

The largest item during the year is the improvement to St. Stephen's Episcopal church, which was listed at $20,000. Eighteen permits were issued for repairs, the estimates of cost totaling $32,600, while 21 permits were issued for the construction of new buildings. Five private automobile garages, the cost of each exceeding $100, were built during the year. The total cost of new construction work amounted to $41,000. Eleven dwelling houses, whose cost were listed from $1500 to $7000, were numbered among the permits.

There was little activity in the erection of business buildings during the year, the permits issued for this class of construction not exceeding $1500.

The idea of using leaven in bread dates back to prehistoric times.

OWEN CURRAN MEETS DEATH

Youth Pinned Under Steering Wheel When Car Overturns

Owen Curran, 18, son of Mrs. Frank Curran of Lathrop, was killed about 12:15 o'clock Monday morning when the Buick roadster, which he was driving, overturned on the icy pavement near the Kipling school.

Harry Olson, 506 First-avenue south, owner of the car, was thrown through the windshield and received several painful cuts about the face and body, but no serious injuries. George McMillan, 21 years old, 227 North Fifteenth street, the third occupant, except for being badly shaken up, escaped without injury.

Curran's death was due to suffocation. It was determined at the inquest held at Gladstone Monday morning with Coroner George Bjorkman of Gladstone in charge. Witnesses testified that the youth was pinned down by the steering wheel, which rested across his solar plexus, stopping his breathing. There were no bone fractures or evidence of any other injuries that could have caused death.

The youth was imprisoned underneath the automobile for about 30 minutes owing to the inability of Olson and McMillan to obtain help in righting the car. They hailed several motorists, who refused to stop. Finally, Ernest DeHooghe, who lives nearby, was awakened by their cries for help and came to their aid. Another man, whose name was not learned, was summoned and the four men succeeded in lifting the car, finding Curran dead.

Motorists Refuse Aid.
Curran's life probably could have been saved if one of the passing motorists had stopped to lend a hand, according to Olson and McMillan. Olson, in extricating himself, pulled off one of his shoes which had been caught in a part of the car. He and McMillan worked frantically for 20 or 30 minutes in an effort to lift the machine off the young man, but the 8,000 pounds of weight was too much for them. Olson worked heroically in the snow with one foot bare, refusing to leave until Curran had been released, or to pause even long enough to put on another shoe.

Olson's bruises, cuts and the severe shock kept him in bed all day yesterday. He and Curran occupied adjoining rooms, and were close friends. The automobile was Olson's Buick roadster. Starting out for a ride, before retiring, the three young men went first to Naranta with Olson at the wheel. Curran, at this point, took the wheel and drove back through Escanaba and Gladstone, heading towards Rapid River. The young man was an experienced driver and was going at a rate of about 20 to 25 miles an hour. Near the northern outskirts of Kipling, a southbound car refused to give a portion of the road and Curran turned sharply to the right to avoid a collision. The right front wheel went up on a snow-bank, the wheel snapped, and the rear of the machine swung around. The car rolled over. McMillan plunged out of the door as it swung open. Olson went headfirst through the windshield. Curran was pinned under the steering wheel of the overturned machine. Occupants of the passing car apparently did not know that they had caused an accident and the machine did not stop.

Father Shot by Bandit.
The accident was investigated by the sheriff's department and Chief of Police Erick Lindahl of Gladstone. None of the occupants of Olson's car had been drinking, the officers said.

The death of the boy was the third in the Curran family within the last five years. The father, Frank Curran, a sheriff's deputy at Lathrop, was killed by George Natchoff, escaped Marquette prison convict, during the man-hunt in the swamp near Rock on June 20, 1923. Lieut. J. C. Cleghorn of the state police was also wounded at that time by shots fired by Natchoff in ambush. Deputy Sheriff Curran was shot through the abdomen.

men, the bullet entering the right side just below the belt, and emerging on the left side, almost opposite the place where it entered the body. One of the two Curran children, also a boy, died from natural causes about a year previous to the murder of his father.

Owen was a member of the 1927 graduating class of the Rock high school, where he ranked high in scholarship and athletic prowess. He was a star basketball and football player. He entered the employ of the Western Union office here with the intention of learning telegraphy, and also attending night school at Cloverland Commercial college.

The body was taken to the Alo Funeral home to be prepared for burial, and will remain there until the funeral hour. Funeral services will be held at the Swedish Lutheran church here at 2 o'clock Thursday afternoon with Rev. C. Albert Lund officiating. Burial will be in Lakeview cemetery.

CRAVER TALKS TO ROTARIANS

Club Hears Chemical Maker Tell of European Studies

Illustrating the results of intensive and practical reforestation, as practiced in France, George C. Craver, general manager for the Delta Chemical and Iron company, at Wells, yesterday told members of the Escanaba Rotary club of logging and lumbering operations in that country. Mr. Craver recently returned from a visit in France, during which he spent much time in studying wood chemical plant methods in use in that country. He saw perfectly formed beech logs, from 12 to 14 inches in diameter, grown in from 25 to 35 years, being cut and delivered to the mills and gave a most interesting account of the intensive reforestation methods that are practiced throughout France.

"Instead of growing the usual field crops, in some sections of France trees are grown as a regular crop," said Mr. Craver. "The tree fields are laid out, radiating two or three miles from the lumber mill and chemical plant towns. The trees are set out in absolutely straight rows and while in some sections the land about the trees is kept cultivated, in others, grass is allowed to develop, but no underbrush, as we know it, is permitted. In the particular section I visited, beech seemed to be best adapted to the soil conditions there and the most wonderful beech trees I ever saw are being grown there. It is almost amazing to see the tree growth that will develop in the 25 to 35 years given each tree crop.

Supply insured.

"When the proper time for cutting comes, the trees are sawed off very close to the ground. The logs go to the lumber mills, the larger branches to the chemical plants and the smaller branches are used for fuel. As soon as the trees have been cut from a field the land is prepared for another tree crop and small trees are set out to take the place of the forest that has just been harvested. By following carefully laid out reforestation plans the lumber mills and chemical plants of France are insured with an inexhaustible timber supply, a certain portion of which will be at their disposal every year, for all time to come."

Mr. Craver told of an airplane trip enjoyed by himself and Mrs. Craver from Paris to Amsterdam, making the ten-hour train trip, in less than five hours. He told of the rapid development of airplane traffic throughout Europe and of the east and safety with which flights can now be made to all quarters of the old world.

Mr. Craver's address was filled with highly interesting facts concerning his recent trip abroad.

Mr. and Mrs. Ivan English left Sunday evening for Rochester, Minn., where Mr. English will attend the clinics at the Mayo brothers hospital.

New York, Dec. 27.—(AP)—Extensive readjustment of speculative accounts impressed much irregularity on the price movement in today's stock market.

Extreme nervousness characterized the trading in U. S. Steel common because of the uncertainty regarding the market effect of the proposed changes in the personnel of the directing officers of the corporation.

Despite the relatively poor November sales report published today, General Motors common was well bought, closing 2 points net higher at 137 3/4.

YOUNG PASTOR TAKES BRIDE

Rev. W. Leslie Williams Marries Stephenson Girl

The most brilliant wedding of the holiday season was that which took place Monday evening, December 26, at 7 o'clock, when Rev. William Leslie Williams, pastor of the First M. E. church of Stephenson, son of Rev. and Mrs. R. C. G. Williams of this city, and Miss Drea Hansen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Hansen of Stephenson, were united in marriage in the presence of a large gathering of relatives and friends and members of both congregations.

Miss Thelma Easdy presided at the organ and Rev. Jack Williams, pastor of the First M. E. church at Orono, Mich., sang two solos—"Memories of Love and You" and "O Promise Me."

The bride's gown was of white satin, trimmed in white Chantilly lace and brilliant, her tulle veil was made in fan fashion caught at the sides with orange blossoms. The bridegroom wore a tuxedo with a bow tie and carried a white boutonniere.

Faith, busy making an ice box cake as her contribution of Grandpa and Grandma Lane's forty-ninth wedding anniversary, scarcely saw Cherry that Saturday afternoon when her sister dashed home from her matinee engagement with George Pruitt to change for her evening date with Bill Warren.

"Do I look potent?" she cried, twirling on the tip of her golden slipper, her golden chignon skirt beaming out like a ballet dancer's.

"I'm just in the mood to get proposed to tonight, old thing!" "Bill!" Faith laughed, though her heart lunged with fear.

"Why not?" Cherry retorted, fluffing up her short copper-tinged curls with quick, excited fingers.

"Yes," Rhoda answered without looking up from the bowl of mayonnaise she was whipping.

When Cherry was gone, like a bright comet that had flashed briefly across the dull sky of domesticity, Rhoda looked at Faith with doubt and perplexity in her China-blue eyes.

"Maybe I was all wrong about Nils and Cherry. I thought he was awfully in love with her and he hasn't called her up or anything. Do you suppose she's really going to get engaged tonight?"

"No one," Faith sighed, "can safely predict what Cherry Lane will do, but I should say she meant for that bit of bravado to reach Nils' ears."

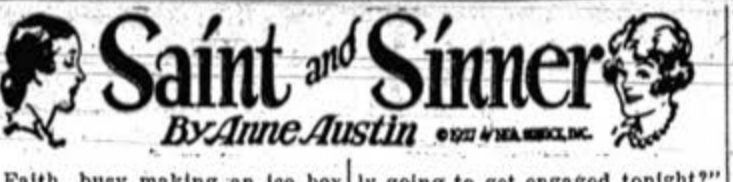

"I'll tell him; but I don't understand," Rhoda worried, shaking her golden head. "I'm going to the last performance of the San Remo opera with him tonight."

Faith, knowing Nils' determination to pique Cherry into a keen interest in himself by ignoring her completely after he had admired the blond giant's strength of character in sticking to that determination, but all evening she was tormented with the unreasonable wish that he had been less strong.

Suddenly a deeply buried worry struggled to the surface of her mind, made her speak to Bob with strangely passionately intensity. "Bob, dear, I wish you'd go—"
