EFFORTS FAIL

New York, Jan. 12.—(AP)—Frenzied last-minute efforts to stave off the execution of Mrs. Ruth Snyder and Henry Judd Gray failed today and the two were prepared to make their trip to the electric chair tonight.

Warden Forced to Obey. Warden Lawes was reported as saying that he would go ahead with the execution regardless of Justice Levy's order, and that he would recognize a stay only if it were granted by the appellate court.

Warden Lawes stood about 10 feet to one side of the chair during both electrocutions, but he kept his head bowed and so far as could be told, he did not once look at either prisoner. As soon as Gray had been pronounced dead, Warden Lawes opened the door into the walled court and the solemn procession of witnesses back to the warden's office began.

PICTURES TELL COMPLETE STORY OF RUTH SNYDER-JUDD GRAY MURDER CASE

Here is a picture story of the tragedy of Ruth Snyder and Henry Judd Gray, from its beginning to its end.

1—Albert Snyder, magazine art editor, liked to stay home evenings. Ruth, his wife, liked bright lights, music, dancing, crowds. She suffered boredom, while Snyder continued placidly unaware of it.

2—Ruth's boredom drove her to seek friends outside their own circle. In a New York restaurant she met Henry Judd Gray, corset salesman. It was a "pick-up" meeting; the two became fascinated by one another, and soon were intimate.

3—Gray, like Snyder, had led an uneventful life. He lived in a suburban home with his wife and daughter, and though his job required him to travel a good deal he never was known to go out with other women.

4—Ruth Snyder fascinated him, however. It was not long before the two began making trips together over week-ends, usually going by automobile. For a year and a half they continued this. Neither Albert Snyder nor Mrs. Gray, apparently, ever suspected the truth.

5—Caught in the toils of their mutual infatuation, the two plotted Snyder's death. Gray concealed himself in the Snyder home one night. Mrs. Snyder plied her husband with liquor; then, when he was asleep, she and Gray crept into his bedroom and killed him with a sash weight and a loop of picture wire. Gray then bound Mrs. Snyder and gagged her, so that the crime would appear to be the work of burglars, and left the house.

6—The police speedily broke down Mrs. Snyder's story and the two were arrested. Each testified at the trial, and each blamed the other. Mrs. Snyder's claim that Gray killed Snyder over her protests was not believed by the jury.

7—The courts refused to grant their pleas for a new trial. Each slayer was adjudged sane. Gov. Al Smith heard their final plea for clemency, which was based on the ground that, while sane, they had been rendered irresponsible by their mad infatuation for each other.

8—Then came the last act—electrocution in the death house at Sing Sing after Governor Smith denied their pleas.

decision that Justice Levy's stay of execution was not binding. This was interpreted as assuring that the sentence of death would be carried out upon the two slayers.

However, Justice Levy, in New York, asserted that his action was just and legal, "no matter what Ottinger says." The attorney general's opinion, he declared, was only as good as that of any other lawyer.

Hearing Delayed.

Then, with startling suddenness, Justice Levy announced that a hearing before him on the necessity of the stay, was advanced from 10 o'clock this morning, the time for which it was originally set, to 2 o'clock this afternoon.

But at 2 o'clock, former Judge Edgar F. Hazleton, chief of the Snyder counsel, telephoned to the court room that he would be unable to appear at the time scheduled. The hearing was deferred again for an hour.

Finally, Hazleton and his assistants, together with representatives of the attorney general's office, were ready to argue their cases. It was a brief hearing, ending with Justice Levy vacating the stay he had granted the night before.

Writes Denied.

Justice Levy declared that his court did have jurisdiction "not under the civil or criminal law, but under the constitution of this state," to grant a stay and to continue it if he so desired. His chief concern, he said had been the interests of Mrs. Snyder's daughter, Lorraine, who would be the beneficiary of insurance of her father now in dispute by the Prudential Life Insurance company.

"I guess that's the end," Hazleton said, when Justice Levy vacated his order for a stay.

The chief hope, had been pinned on that order, although he had one more move to make. Lawyers for both Mrs. Snyder and Gray presented their applications for writs of habeas corpus, but these too were denied.

STAY VACATED.

New York, Jan. 12—(AP)—Supreme Court Justice Levy today vacated the stay of execution which he granted Mrs. Ruth Snyder last night.

In vacating the stay, Justice Levy said his chief concern had been the interests of Mrs. Snyder's daughter, Lorraine. He believed that if the child's interests would have been served by having the mother testify in person at the trial of her claims against the Prudential Insurance company, the stay should have been granted.

"This court has jurisdiction to continue the stay if it so desires," he said, adding that if he had seen fit to continue it he would have done so.

WRITS DENIED.

New York, Jan. 12—(AP)—Federal Judge Goddard today denied applications for writs of habeas corpus to stay the executions of Ruth Snyder and Henry Judd Gray.

With the announcement of Judge Goddard's decision, the last legal move known to have been taken by counsel for the condemned pair had failed, and nothing, apparently, stood in the way of the scheduled executions.

REVIEW OF CASE.

(By The Associated Press.)

Mrs. Ruth Snyder and Henry Judd Gray started their journey toward the electric chair down the primrose path of marital infidelity. Both were married to persons of quieter character, persons who preferred a life less syncopated than that to be found in the jazzy rendezvous of Broadway.

They found in each other the same desire for gaiety and noise and bright excitement. They became illicit lovers, and there followed a period of secret trysts.

At last Mrs. Snyder conceived the idea of killing her husband, Albert, who was 45 years old, 14 years her senior. She had $98,000 worth of insurance placed upon his life, most of it without his knowledge. Then she took Gray into her confidence.

For a time, Gray testified in court, he struggled against her domination of his weaker personality, but in the end he bowed to her desire. On March 30, 1927, Albert Snyder was beaten to death leaders, particularly in the senate, but others, and more particularly those on the national committee defended the decision as politically wise.

Once the result was announced at the end of the fifth ballot in the committee, many sought the fundamental reason for the choice which had come unexpectedly with Houston scarcely considered in the running.

Some political observers regarded it as significant that Frank Hague of New Jersey; Thomas Spellacy of Connecticut, and other Smith adherents voted for Houston from the first ballot and received scattering support from both men and women members of the committee from both east and north.

Bowers Assails G. O. P.

Other Smith leaders, like George E. Brennan, of Illinois, and Joseph F. Guffey, of Pittsburgh, voted for other cities.

Besides members of the national committee—and nearly all of them were here for the meeting—upwards of a thousand other party leaders gathered for tonight's dinner.

Chairman Shaver, who arranged for the dinner, was designated to present Mr. Davis for the sounding of a keynote speech with the advice that the party pick the best brains at its command, put them in the lead and then support the ticket.

The real keynote, Claude G. Bowers, Jackson and Jefferson historian, had as his message a summons to the party to return to the principles which they enunciated and upon which they went to victory. In this speech, Bowers also assailed the present and preceding Republican administrations, then asserted that if the party stood where its founders stood, "for equal rights to all and special privilege to none," it had as its issue for the coming presidential campaign.

This strain ran through many of the addresses of the evening, but Evans Woolson of Indiana, an avowed candidate for the nomination, warned against giving the Democratic donkey, "a dose of bigotry," while Governor Ritchie of Maryland, who also is discussed as a presidential possibility, urged settlement of the prohibition problem by self-determination and home rule as opposed to increased centralization of authority.

Governor Ritchie paid a large tribute to Governor Smith, declared the masses "sense that here is an authentic voice, not only of the Democratic party, but of the democracy of the nation, too."

Need Men Like Jackson.

Reed of Missouri, who has been endorsed as presidential candidate in his state, has as the crux of his prepared message, a warning that the party would fall if it disregarded the principles of natural justice and if it subordinated great fundamentals to questions of expediency or "exhaust our energies in disputes about problems upon which our party associates are far from agreement."

The message which George, of Georgia, recently endorsed by the leaders of his state for the presidency, had decided upon was that the supreme need of the hour was a man like Jackson "to turn the back to the hands of the people, to support the constitution in all of its provisions, to uphold and enforce the laws constitutionally enacted."

At 10:30 tonight, Lansing police notified local officers they had received a call from a truck driver at Williamston, 17 miles east of Lansing, saying that he had seen a car of the description of the one driven by the maniac murderer, stalled beside the road near that town. The truck driver said he stopped and asked the man if he could be of any assistance. He said the man replied:

"You get out of here as fast as you can," and pointed a pistol at him.

The truck driver said he hastened away and telephoned as soon as he could reach Williamston. Lansing officers were sent out to trace this clue.

city and invited them to view the remains of the child.

The invitation was accepted and the women filed silently by the slab where the mutilated little body lay. At the conclusion of the episode, they were quietly ushered out to make afterwards, but the women were deeply affected.

Police tonight in communicating with Detroit officials for a check-up of psychopaths, were astounded to learn that there are more than 500 of such persons, registered, and at large in the Detroit metropolitan area, awaiting admittance to institutions for the insane.

Due to the crowded conditions of the institutions, this number had to be released to the custody of relatives and guardians, until facilities are available for their care.

The situation has been called to the attention of Governor Fred W. Green, who announced himself in favor of immediate construction of additions to the seven state hospitals for feeble-minded.

STATE POLICE JOIN.

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 12—(AP)—State police throughout the state were ordered to join the search for the murderer of Dorothy Schneider by Oscar G. Olander, commissioner of public safety, as soon as word of the crime was received. Details from headquarters at Lansing and from all posts in the vicinity have been sent out.

Every sheriff in the state was notified by the state police.

NOT HOSPITAL INMATE.

Pontiac, Mich., Jan. 12—(AP)—Officials of the State Hospital for the Insane here, told of the slaying of Dorothy Schneider near Flint today, declared there was a little possibility that an escaped inmate from the institution was responsible for the crime. No patients had escaped for more than three weeks, officials said, and none of those missing answered the description of the fugitive.

The road school will open on Monday and its sessions will be concluded on Friday, January 20. Highway engineers from all parts of the Badger state will be in attendance at the meetings, which will be addressed by leading authorities on highway construction and maintenance.

The Wisconsin highway commission, it is said, plans to adopt a program for snow removal by the state, and Mr. Davies will tell what is being done in Michigan in this class of road maintenance.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Jan. 12—(AP)—Mayor Elvin Swarthout has announced a self-constituted committee of representative citizens of Grand Rapids to circulate Republican nomination petitions for Arthur H. Vandenberg for United States senator. Mayor Swarthout said the committee proposes in this fashion to prove to Vandenberg that his home city shares the out-state demand that he shall become a candidate for senator.

MACHINE GUNS USED

Walsenburg, Colo., Jan. 12—(AP)—Mounted machine guns glared from points of vantage late today while state police officers prepared to force the surrender of striking I. W. W. miners barricaded in a building after a battle in which six men were reported killed.

Shots were fired from the windows of the besieged building and police returned the fire from a two-block area roped off around the battle zone.

The number of casualties could not be verified but Louis N. Scheriff, chief of state police, telephoned Governor Adams at Denver that six striking miners had been killed. Four men were wounded in a street clash when police dispersed a parade of 750 miners. The scene of the fighting then shifted to the I. W. W. headquarters building.

Women Watch Fighting.

One man in the barricaded group was reported killed when a sniper's shot caught him. He slumped from the window and his comrades pulled him back.

Forty women of whom 25 were school girls of 18 or under, gathered at the edge of the fighting zone and joined by nearly 200 men they sang "Solidarity," the I. W. W. song. Efforts of state police to disperse them were unsuccessful, so they remained and jeered the officers.

Officers in charge of the state police said that there were 26 sworn officers in Huerfano county in the section and when reinforced by the mine guards, they will make against the striking miners at the I. W. W. hall.

LAW MAY HELP DEVELOPMENT

Horton Act Expected to Stabilize Wild Land Values

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 12.—The Horton law, which requires hunters to have a permit from the owner before they can hunt on farm properties or enclosed wild lands, has increased by millions of acres the amount of northern Michigan wild lands with a recreational value by giving those lands a stabilized value for hunting purposes. The January number of the Michigan Property Owner, issued yesterday, states in a leading article.

Although the Horton law has been operative only a few months, hunters in the northern part of the lower peninsula and the upper peninsula realized during the 1927 season that if they are to be certain of a good place to hunt in the future they may have to own their own property, either privately or in a club, as many already do, the Property Owner states. Transfers involving thousands of acres have already been announced while many more are under way, depending upon the ability of buyers to secure solid blocks of land over which they will have complete control.

Lovejoy Quoted.
The article quotes P. S. Lovejoy, in charge of state game preserves for the conservation department, to the effect that "undoubtedly the Horton law has had a tendency to hold up the prices of good hunting lands in Michigan. There is a legitimate market for wild lands as hunting properties as soon as the supply of lands suitable for such purposes falls below the demand." Mr. Lovejoy says: "If the land is chosen as to accessibility, water frontage and cover and well-stocked with game, the price is already going up, but the supply of poor-to-fair hunting land is still so great that there is no reason why that type should be worth any more than it has been."

Mr. Lovejoy expects that the development of state forests and game preserves will go ahead with the development of private hunting clubs, for the benefit of those hunters who can not afford private hunting grounds and those who hunt so little they have no desire to do so.

Resorters to Use Aerial Taxi, Says Realty Magazine

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 12.—Chicago business men in the near future will be residents of Michigan and commute to their offices daily by a 30-minute air service to the loop, an announcement by the Price Aerial Service, Inc., of Chicago in the January issue of the Michigan Property Owner, issued today, states.

The Chicago flying service is completing plans with the Miami Park Michigan Realty company, near South Haven, for regular daily plane service to the loop business district and seeking other contracts along the west coast of Michigan for a similar purpose.

The plan assures the far greater development of Michigan's Great Lakes frontage as home sites and country estates for wealthy people now living in Chicago, adjacent to the west coast, and Detroit, Toledo and Cleveland, adjacent to the east coast of the state, the Property Owner states, pointing out that by air all of the lower peninsula will be within three hours of these cities. Michigan summer home subdividers have had this prospect in mind for some time, judging from the development of airports and landing fields in connection with the new subdivisions that are being built, the article states, in pointing out that the state's lake frontage will have even greater value for permanent homes and all-year country estates than as summer home sites.

IS A HEALTHIER STRONGER GIRL

Because She Took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

The fertile valleys of Oregon help to supply the tables of America.

This is possible thru the magic of the humble tin can. In one of the canning establishments, Julia Schmidt was employed. It was complicated work because she did sewing and other parts of the work. It was strenuous work and she was not a strong girl. Often she forced herself to work when she was hardly able to sit at her machine. At times she would have to stay at home for she was so weak she could hardly walk. For five years she was in this weakened condition.

She tried various medicines. At last, a friend of hers spoke of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Miss Schmidt gave it a trial. "Everyone says I am a healthier and stronger girl," she writes. "I am recommending the Vegetable Compound to all my friends who tell me how they suffer and I am willing to answer letters from women asking about it." Julia Schmidt's address is 113 Willow St., Silverton, Oregon. For sale by all druggists.

a thinking man, he is apt to be a bit befogged and confused. He needs, not a doctor, but a poet.

Never in the world's history have the physical details of life been as easy for as large a number of people as they are today.

And Dr. Warthin, we believe, has put his finger on the reason.

We need—not a new religion; say, rather, a new set of thinkers and philosophers who can impress us anew with the old one.

We need to be reminded that our most pressing problems aren't problems that eugenicists and the like can settle for us.

PROCEED, MR. GILLIS!
We have seen, here and there and elsewhere, solemn articles

This ex-sailor, "Bossy" Gillis, as you doubtless have read, became a candidate for mayor in 1927.

And so, we repeat, we have seen a number of rather pained criticisms of the man. It has been stated that Newburyport is disgraced, that it has elected a clown to high office, that its civic dignity has been impugned.

All of this may be true. Doubtless a mayor ought not to act in the raw, inelegant fashion Gillis has adopted. Yet we are not wholly sorry he was elected.

For these early days of 1928 are serious and weighty days. There is fighting in Nicaragua, there is a famous murderess battling for her life in New York, there are serious doings in Congress, there are portentous public problems without end. The air is over-grave.

And into this thought-compelling atmosphere breezes "Bossy" Gillis. He provides the comic relief in the daily scene and makes life less tense. He is interesting reading and we wouldn't be without him.

Gillis fired one city employe because members of that man's family had called Gillis "a jakey mayor." He demoted a city lieutenant's relatives had criticized Gillis's relatives. On the night of his inauguration he shouted to the crowds that he was "going down to the police station and tell a few flat feet something for their own good."

Another employe lost his job because "he did me dirt during the campaign."

And so it has gone. Highly undignified, certainly, and probably reprehensible; yet, without, for those who do not have to live in Newburyport, very amusing.

Accordingly, we offer the season's greetings to Mayor Gillis. May he continue to provide news in a lighter vein, to be sandwiched in between the stories of Nicaraguan battles and congressional cabals.

A SAD CASE.
It was midnight. In the club's smoking room sat a young man huddled in his chair. A friend entered.

"Hello, not gone home yet?"
"No, I—I daren't. At 8 o'clock I telephoned my wife and gave her a perfectly good excuse for not coming straight home—and now I've forgotten what I told her."—T.H. Bits.

It always had its funny side, For something made me laff.

Folks think I'm rather foolish Because I like to grin, And they are right, the ones who said That wealth I'd never win.

They think they're better off than me— That always makes me laff.

The Blazing Horizon

When he dropped into his favorite haunt that evening for a quiet game of poker, Tony Harrison found the scar-faced Forbes standing beside the bar.

He lingered nearby, that he might study the other's face unserved; and presently Forbes, as if he felt unseen eyes upon him, turned around.

Forbes lifted an arm to signal the bartender. After he had given his order he said, "I won't be a stranger much longer, I'm figuring on locating here."

"Going in business?" "Drug store. I've been looking over the ground to see if it would pay."

Forbes nodded. "Room for another one—a good one. Thought I'd see how things were going in Oklahoma City, though, before I made up my mind."

"You know," Harrison said boldly, "I've been bothered by the notion that I've seen you before some place. Is that possible?"

"Well, that's where I'm from," Forbes laughed a little drily. "Polks are not likely to forget this face," and he indicated the scar. "Bullet wound," he explained. "Plowed up my cheek considerable, didn't it?"

Harrison watched him as he sat down at a nearby table, and frowned. He heard his own name called a moment and later a bit reluctantly walked across the room and dropped into the seat that was reserved for him by his friends.

He played mechanically, with only a half-hearted interest in the cards; and from time to time he found himself staring absently toward the table where sat Forbes.

"There's something on your mind, Tony," Fred Perkins laughed as he gathered in a sizable "pot." "I raised the ante, drew two cards, and you called me with two little pair. That ain't natural for you."

Harrison shrugged and smiled. "Too much business, Fred." To Jenkins, the restaurant owner, he said, "That partner of mine thinks up more things for me to do than I can attend to in working hours and criticizes me when I carry them in my mind at night. All right; deal me a hand—and look out for me. I'm out for blood."

A sudden blaze of passion swept him as he crept toward the lighted window—a savage longing to get that other alone somewhere, to twist his fingers in his throat and hear him plead for his life like a beggar.

MANY ATTEND FORUM MEET

Winners of Farm Crops Contest Are Awarded Prizes

Winners in the Better Crops contest were awarded their cash prizes, and several interesting talks on the upper peninsula agricultural conditions were given at a Chamber of Commerce forum dinner at the Delta hotel last night. About 125 business men and farmers, including the winners and members of the Danforth Holstein-Friesian association, were in attendance.

The winners of the crops contest were: George McPadden and Robert Leaway, potatoes; Anderson Brothers and Henry Kasten, barley; Wesley Knuss and John Fasman, oats; Helmer Bruce and Adolph Dahlberg, sugar beets.

O. E. Skiver, farm crops specialist, in speaking on "The Value of Delta County's Basic Crops to the Dairy Industry," complimented the Escanaba business men on the splendid cooperation they have given the farmers, particularly in the sponsoring of the Danforth association to promote dairying here.

"We have heard much of late concerning the agricultural problems of the country in recent years and of the efforts to remedy the various farm ailments," Mr. Skiver said. "You men, however, have arrived at the best possible solution of the problem."

Mr. Skiver told of the efforts of the extension department of Michigan State college, working with the various county agents, to promote the dairy industry in the upper peninsula and how they have endeavored to stimulate the growing of the basic crops for dairying, such as clover, alfalfa and barley. The growing of potatoes as a cultivation crop to prevent quack grass and other obnoxious weeds has also been urged by the farm experts, he said.

The average butterfat production per cow in the peninsula is only 160 pounds, annually, which is not profitable, Mr. Skiver added. In the Danforth association, the purebred cows have averaged 300 pounds of butterfat, and are paying well for their keep.

A brief history and the plans for the future of the Danforth Holstein-Friesian association were outlined by Secretary O. I. Bandoen and L. A. Erickson.

See Bright Future. George E. Bishop of Marquette, secretary of the Upper Peninsula Development bureau, declared he was optimistic over the prospects for agriculture in the upper peninsula. He cited a few statistics showing the rapid progress which has been made in this section during the past 25 years, particularly in the last decade.

The work of the Danforth Holstein-Friesian association has had its influence beyond the confines of Delta county, Mr. Bishop said.

He told of the many inquiries he has received from farmer groups regarding the organization, and that as a result, six carloads of pure bred cattle have been shipped into various farming communities in the upper peninsula.

In 1900, there were 6000 farms operated in the upper peninsula, but in 25 years the number has doubled to 13,000. The acreage of these farms, he said, has increased from 600,000 acres in 1900 to 1,290,000 in 1925. The value of farm properties has jumped from $11,500,000 to $71,452,000 in the last quarter century.

Butterfat Production Gains. There were 88,970 dairy cattle in 1920 as compared to 91,020 in 1925, and the butterfat production increased from 2,883,000 pounds in 1921 to 5,064,769 in 1926. A comparatively slight growth is shown in the manufacture of ice cream, 417,000 gallons being made in 1921 while in 1926 there were 472,000 gallons produced.

Mr. Bishop presented some figures he had obtained with regard to shipments of cream from various points on the Duluth, South Shore and Atlantic Railway, extending across the peninsula from Ironwood to Sault Ste. Marie, which showed a remarkable gain in tonnage during the last 12 years. In 1915, only 16 tons of cream had been shipped from these points to various creameries in this section, but in 1923, the shipments amounted to 313 tons and in 1927 they had soared to 905 tons.

In 1925, there were 2,765 dairy cows enrolled in cow testing associations, where the average annual production was 267 pounds of butterfat. In 1927, the average butterfat production in these associations was 307 pounds per cow, Mr. Bishop said.

Farm Growth Healthy. Farming in the upper peninsula is showing a healthy growth, Mr. Bishop said. The various farm movements such as the land clearing, dairying, fire prevention, better crops and club work programs are contributing in a large degree to this growth, he said.

The boys' and girls' club work program is one of the most constructive programs of all, he declared, as far as a new day for agriculture is concerned.

The club boys are taking hold of the cutter lands and going into farming for themselves, and by the application of sound principles are making a success of it.

In closing, Mr. Bishop told of the plans to run a special train into the peninsula next summer, carrying with it speakers, demonstrations and exhibits which will be of interest to those interested in club work and farming in general. This train will make about 60 stops during the 30-day tour of the peninsula.

The meeting was presided over by A. J. Young, who presented the cash prizes to the crop contest winners and introduced the speakers of the evening. I. Bandoen, secretary of the chamber of commerce, introduced the new members of the chamber and also gave a brief talk concerning various promotion schemes which have been carried out in this city at the expense of merchants.

He cited two cases where considerable money had been spent by local business men in advertising in booklets, which were of practically no benefit as advertising mediums. Several other instances were described by Mr. Bandoen, and he announced that within a short time the merchants would be asked to sign an agreement not to contribute to any proposition which have not had the approval of a special chamber of commerce committee, which will rule on the worthiness of such propositions.

Music was furnished during the meeting by Joseph Greenfield's orchestra, and the group singing was led by Rev. J. Crippen Evans.

Iron Trade Review

Cleveland, Ohio, Jan. 12.—Iron Trade Review today says: Lighting of several blast furnaces, an increase of 618,430 tons in the unfilled orders of the United States Steel corporation and an upturn in steel ingot production in December gave the vigor of the iron and steel markets.

Even discounting the improvement normally occurring in January and the fact that neither demand nor production slumped appreciably over the holidays, the insistence of consumers for tonnage is inspiring. The late December rate of activity has carried over into January on a higher plane.

It has been over two years since so many as seven stacks have been put on the active list in one week and January promises to be the first month since last March to develop a gain in pig iron production. Five of the lighter stacks at steel-works ones and two merchant, faithfully portraying the greater interest in steel than in merchant iron.

Prompted by heavy railroad buying of rolling stock and specifying of track material and the gradual comeback in the automotive industry, the Pittsburgh and Chicago districts are relatively more active than the eastern ones. For the first time in many months some makers of light products, such as strip, are accumulating backlogs. Steelmaking the country over now averages close to 75 per cent, with Steel corporation subsidiaries having moved up to 7 per cent.

With December ingot output definitely down at 3,150,345 gross tons, the 1927 total stands at 43,040,916 tons or eight per cent below the record, 46,039,205 tons of 1926. The heartening feature of December was the rise in daily output from 0119,299 tons in November to 121,167 tons. Eastern pig iron markets are beginning to reflect the activity which marked the western ones last month.

Wage reductions in process in the western Pennsylvania coal fields do not affect beehive coke prices, as first quarter contracts anticipated this development. Independent sheet mills have started the first quarter with fully 750,000 tons on their order books, while the leading sheetmaker is booked two months at current operations. All classes of sheet users are taking good shipments, chiefly at lower prices than now quoted. Some automotive users of full finished have covered for entire quarter at 4.00c. Pittsburgh, and are more exact in their inspection. Freight car orders of the past week total 2600. Chicago mills have booked 20,000 tons of rails and 15,000 tons of fastenings.

For some makers of heavy finished steel, the past week has been the best in almost two years, considering both bookings and specifications. Bar demand leads both at Pittsburgh and Chicago. Fabricators are specifying plain material better than a year ago in anticipation of spring building programs, which promise much.

Brain-workers lose more sugar from their blood than do manual workers, according to recent experiments in Czechoslovakia.

The astounding TRUE STORY of RICHTHOFEN—the greatest of all War Aces.

Written by the Tribune's Famous War Correspondent
FLOYD GIBBONS

The Red Knight of Germany is, barring nothing, the most amazing account ever written. Daring, heroism, fiendish killing, chivalry, honor, nobility of heart—all ran a mad course in Richthofen's astonishing career. He shot down 80 planes before he was killed by the daring Canadian boy, Roy Brown. Every word is fact, taken from actual records and war office documents. You've never read a thriller like this. Don't fail to start it in next Sunday's Chicago Sunday Tribune.

Northern Animals Came South in Winter, Says Writer.

The word caribou calls to mind for most of us an animal of the north, traveling in great bands across the snow-swept treeless barrens, pawing through the hard crust of the drifts for a meal of the reindeer moss living through the long cold arctic night in a forlorn frozen world that man has seldom seen, writes Ben East, well-known Michigan naturalist.

Few of us know that the cousin of this big deer of the north, the woodland caribou was once common in the forests of the upper peninsula of Michigan and according to at least one record even wandered below the straits occasionally on the winter migration.

In December, 1853, "in the few hours that the last steamboat of the season lies in this harbor," as he states, James Jesse Strang, head of the Mormon colony on the Beaver Islands, wrote a review of the natural history of the Beavers which was published in the report of the Smithsonian Institute for 1854.

In this paper he says, "Caribou ranges as far south as here, but visit the islands only on the ice." Probably these caribou to which Strang referred were wandering bands from the upper peninsula that crossed the ice of northern Lake Michigan or perhaps they may have been stragglers from the northern tip of the lower peninsula.

The Island Herd.
Although the caribou doubtless have been gone from the mainland of Michigan for at least a half century they have continued to live on Michigan soil on the state's rocky, wilderness island, Isle Royale, in upper Lake Superior, until a very few years ago and it is quite possible that a few survivors of this band still roam the swamps and thickets about the seldom visited inland lakes of the island. Rumor among the Isle Royale fishermen has it that the caribou were driven out by the invading hordes of moose that are now found there and it is entirely likely that a few of the original inhabitants are still holding forth in their fastnesses against the invaders.

Like the moose themselves the Isle Royale caribou doubtless wandered to the island originally from the north shore of Lake Superior, coming down from the Canadian wilderness just as they once visited the Beavers in upper Lake Michigan when the snows were deep in the forests and ice closed the channel from the island to shore.

A Born Wanderer.
For the caribou is born a wanderer and probably travels farther afield than any other member of the deer family. Indeed he seems to be the only one of that family that does not have a definite home area over which he ranges. Wherever nature sets forth the most liberal banquet table, there the caribou bands trek.

In order to make these long journeys in midwinter when the deep snow holds most of the deer family virtually prisoners in the yards, the caribou has to be equipped with special devices for traveling over or through the drifts.

In this respect the animal has been especially well fitted. His method of travel through deep snow is a combination of the snowshoe and stilt plan. His long legs, longer in proportion to his weight than those of any of his kinsmen, enable him to wade through soft snow with little difficulty while his wide hoofs spread out to support him on a crust that would let either a moose, deer or elk drop through at each stride. Finally and of great importance in winter travel in the far north, the edges of his hoofs grow down longer than the central part and are sharp as skates. These enable him to travel surefooted over ice or on the slippery crust of hard packed snow.

Not Easily Overtaken.
His traveling ability is shown by the fact that hunters consider him one of the most difficult of all deer to come up with once he is alarmed. He does not travel as fast as either the deer or moose, going out at a steady trot, but he is most tireless of his family. He may continue to keep moving in a fairly straight line all day and neither swamp river nor lake turns him from his course when he is seeking from danger. Night may find him hidden in the heart of inaccessible wilderness, 50 miles or more from the spot where the hunter took his trail in the morning.

Females Have Antlers.
The caribou are peculiar in another detail. They and their European cousins, the reindeer, are the only members of the deer family in which the females are regularly equipped with antlers. Although these antlers are not as large as those of the males, they are well developed and doubtless serve the owners very well as weapons of protection. Nature is even further kind to the cow caribou in permitting her to keep her antlers much later in the season than her mate. The horns of the males are shed in midwinter as are those of the moose and deer. These cows however, retain their antlers until about the time the calves are born in May or June, and are thus afforded protection at a time when they need it most to fend off enemies from the young.

The first time of each caribou antler, directly above the brow, turns down over the front of the face sometimes so closely as to touch the nose at the tip. One of these is usually broad and flat, the other sharp and spearlike. Naturalists say the one serves for a shovel in scraping away snow that covers the animal's food, the other

Talks on Health

By Dr. Morris Fishbein

WITHOUT SLEEP YOU MAY LIVE FOUR WEEKS

During recent years few subjects of medical investigation have aroused the interest that has been given to sleeplessness. Apparently the speeding up of American life has resulted in an increased amount of difficulty in securing rest.

Dr. E. M. Callender, in an address delivered before the Medical Society of London, points out that men can exist without sleep for about the same amount of time that they can do without food; namely, three or four weeks, but that they cannot live without it.

Vision First Sense Asleep.
The sign of normal sleep is loss of consciousness due to the lessened activity of the brain. The first one of the special senses to disappear in sleep is vision and the last hearing.

During sleep, hearing is the sense most easily aroused, the sense of touch is more difficult to arouse and taste and smell practically disappear entirely. The muscles are relaxed and the breathing becomes deeper and slower.

All of the body secretions diminish in amount. When a sleepy child rubs its eyes, it does so because the amount of tears or fluid secreted is less and the eyes feel gritty.

The frequency of the pulse is lessened, the blood pressure is lowered and the reflexes of the brain disappear.

Measuring Its Intensity.
Various investigators have studied the intensity of sleep, using different methods of stimulation, in order to find out how difficult it would be to awaken a sleeper. These investigators agree that there is a rapid increase in the intensity of sleep during the first two hours, which reaches its highest point between the first and second hours and then drops rapidly to a depth of sleep becoming continuously less until the person awakens.

Since the stimulation of the various senses may be responsible for disturbed sleep, Callender points out that the difficulty of sleeping the first night in a strange bed is due to unaccustomed stimulation of the skin by the bed and the bedding.

Modern street traffic, which goes on practically all through the night, may be responsible for the fact that people complain nowadays in inability to sleep longer than three or four hours.

The actual noise of traffic nowadays does not disappear until one or one-thirty in the morning and not infrequently lasts until three o'clock.

Seeking Quiet Place.
Usually a person with this type of insomnia may be relieved by a few nights in a place where quiet occurs earlier.

Debilitated and aged persons who go to sleep early not infrequently awaken in the middle of the night. This, Callender relates to the fact that they take too little food or take the evening meal too early.

An alteration in the hour at which the last meal is taken and the drinking of some hot liquid food during the middle of the night frequently acts as a producer of sleep. He relates the awakening to the fact that the blood pressure falls extremely low.

On the other hand, normal persons are likely to be sleepless following a late supper or a heavy dinner, following the taking of too much alcohol or too much tobacco, the taking of coffee or tea in the evening, overwork or constant stress on the attention until bedtime, the presence of too much cold or too much heat during the sleeping hours.

BIG MOVING JOB.
Reno, Nevada—Moving 14 four-room cottages from Virginia City to Reno, across 31 miles of mountain roads, was successfully undertaken by a contractor. He got them moved with even the chimneys intact. To do the job it was necessary to widen Gold Canyon and straighten out the twisted, narrow road by drilling off great quantities of overhanging rock.

The United States produces about one-half of the entire world supply of iron and steel.

James Beland gave two splendid cornet solos. The address of the afternoon was given by Mrs. O. I. Bandeen. Her subject was "Recreation in the Home," and it was inspirational and helpful for those present. During the business session, it was voted to continue serving hot lunches to the children, who must carry their lunch to school during January and February. # Second-hand beauty

THE world is full of women who are beginning to lose the fresh bloom of health. Eagerly, hopefully, they haunt the beauty shops. Trying this. Trying that. Buying beauty by the hour. . . . At best what an empty achievement they attain! Second-hand beauty.

Life could tell a different story if more women knew the part constipation plays in wrecking youth and beauty. If more men but realized how this terrible scourge undermines strength and health. Constipation is at the bottom of many a trouble. The cause of literally dozens of diseases.

And more's the shame when it can be so easily and quickly relieved. Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is guaranteed to bring prompt relief—lasting, safe prevention.

Why "all-bran" is so effective It is "bulk" that combats constipation. Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is rich in bulk because it is 100% bran. It distributes moisture throughout the intestines—gently exercising them.

Sweeping out poisonous wastes. Part-bran products seldom contain sufficient bulk to do this effectively. That is why doctors recommend Kellogg's ALL-BRAN. Because it is 100% bran.

Better than drugs

Unlike habit-forming pills and laxatives—the quantity of ALL-BRAN you require need never vary. Kellogg's ALL-BRAN works as nature works—naturally. A pleasant, healthful cereal. Isn't that much better than pills or drugs?

Eat with milk or cream—or with fruits or honey added. Use it in cooking too. Sprinkle it into soups. Mix it with other cereals. Just eat two tablespoonfuls daily—chronic cases, with every meal.

Be sure, though, you get genuine Kellogg's ALL-BRAN. Don't risk part-bran substitutes. ALL-BRAN is sold by grocers everywhere. Served at hotels and restaurants. On diners. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN

Guaranteed! Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is sold with this definite guarantee: Eat it according to the directions. If it does not relieve constipation safely, we will refund the purchase price.

DANFORTH COW OWNERS MEET

Association Has Even Break Now With One Year to Go

If the 41 cows and heifers owned by the Danforth Holstein-Friesian association produce calves valued at only $68.44, the association, when it winds up its affairs next year, will be able to pay back to stockholders every cent of the $4,800 they invested.

From the 17 pure bred animals brought into the county four years ago, the association now owns, wholly or in part, 41 females and in addition to these, 13 bulls have been placed on Delta county farms, a total of 54 purebreds, springing from the $4,800 investment, and the $4,800 will still be intact.

These very interesting figures are gleaned from the annual report of Secretary J. E. Turner to the stockholders of the association, held in the Delta hotel last night.

Plan for Auction.

At the present time the association has assets of $4,731.56. This includes the estimated value—and the estimates are very conservative—of the 12 head of cattle owned entirely by the association, and one-half of the estimated value of the stock in which the association has a half interest; cash on hand of $481.81 and $299.75 receivable from other sources.

Preliminary plans were made last night for the auction sale next October at which the cattle will be placed under the hammer and affairs of the association "wound up."

The association's made up of Escanaba business men and Danforth dairymen, was organized four years ago. It was agreed that the $4,800 subscribed would be used to purchase a purebred bull and 16 pure bred cows to be placed on farms in the Danforth community. The male calves were to be sold; the female calves were to remain on the farms where they were born with the farmer caring for them holding a half-interest in them. At the end of five years, the cattle were to be sold at auction. Farmers can bid in the animals in which they have a half interest, by paying one-half the amount of the successful bid. The butterfat produced by the cows belonged entirely to the farmer.

Profit in Sight.

Twelve of the original 16 cows are still "working" and last year, their individual butterfat production averaged from 300 to 450 pounds. The report fixes the value of these animals at $2175—a conservative figure. The value of the offspring is conservatively estimated at $3550, of which the association has a half interest worth $1775.

Unless some unprecedented hard luck hits the district, there should be a good-sized profit for all concerned at the close of the five-year period. Months hence, Mr. Turner estimates.

C. W. Malloch and Emil Mosler members of the board of directors whose terms have expired, were elected to succeed themselves at the meeting last night. The board then re-elected August Erickson president and J. E. Turner secretary for the coming year.

The auction sale next fall will be extensively advertised throughout the upper peninsula and Wisconsin, and, because of the high quality of the cattle to be sold, is expected to attract widespread attention and interest in the dairy circles of this region.

$234,379.66 Total of Tax Collection

About eighty per cent of the taxes on the roll have been collected. City Treasurer A. J. Manly reported yesterday. The total collections up to yesterday amounted to $234,379.66, while the total amount on the roll is $299,571.71.

Villians and Intriguing Lovers Still Are Popular

One hundred and more publications, most of them appearing monthly, on the stands of a single news depot, and yet there are only a few of them with circulation figures worthy of consideration. A goodly number of them retail short stories of all description, and another goodly number of them treat of scientific or business subjects. There are those devoted to the upbuilding of health, or allegedly so, those treating of the care of gardens, or of decoration of the home, and there are those, known as literary magazines, which contain critical studies of various endeavors in the arts and in literature and attempt to offer something of value in both.

"Confessions" Lead.

But are these the ones enjoying the greatest popularity? Is the rank and file of the reading public of America interested in literature or the arts, or in real merit in short story writing? A survey of the several news stands in the city would not tend toward that conclusion, for almost without an exception the proprietors report that of all the monthly magazines, the confession type has the widest appeal.

"Could you love your husband if he lunched with his stenographer?" reads the cover of the book, which is further decorated by the picture of an appealing miss; and the shopgirl of sixteen and the stenographer of twenty-five and the housewife of fifty, gladly hand over one-fourth of a dollar and carry the magazine home with them, feeling that the question is a weighty one and that it would be useless to attempt to answer it without giving careful attention to what the author of the article has to divulge on the subject.

The article within, of course, never bears the title that appears on the cover. It is likely entitled "Love's Mistake" or "The Test of Passion," or some such, and it is never written from impersonal observation, but always relates the experiences of the writer in his marriage or his love affair. Nor is that particular story the only one of them, all having love as the predominant theme, and all relating the triumph of right over wrong.

Wrong is Best Bet.

But wrong is the best bet of the confessions magazines. Within its pages shop girls, stenographers, innocent young misses, and boys scarcely out of their teens are being led from the straight and narrow by more experienced, more worldly, and always cruel men or women. The sweet young stenographer who believed her employer's attentions were altruistic finds out that he is like "all men," and by dint of a terrific mental and physical struggle escapes the snare that he has set for her. Many are the respectably married women who, in the confessions magazines, have been betrayed by the best friends of their husbands.

And the women can hardly wait until the next number of the magazine is on the news stands. Very few of them have any appeal for men, but their sale is far in excess of that of other monthly publications notwithstanding. In one drug store, where the sale of magazines is the least important of the several branches of business, fifty copies of just one of these magazines are sold every month. Their number is growing rapidly, and it seems that the public cannot be supplied with enough of them, for few are forced to discontinue publication. As a standard of comparison, the same drug store sells 15 copies of "The Ladies Home Journal," and about 10 copies of the "Cosmopolitan."

IN NEW YORK

New York.—It is on those mornings when the mercury hits close to the zero mark that New York displays those tragedies hidden when the elements are kinder. . . hidden, or overlooked.

But when the thermometer has slid to "10 above," one need but glance at the morgue records or the front pages of the Manhattan newspapers. Here, one learns that "Jube Taylor, a homeless negro, was found dead in a doorway."

"A janitor discovered the body," Taylor had hung around the district for almost 40 years and the doorway had been his special resting place.

Someone might try writing a tragedy on much lesser themes than this. For 40 years a cold, friendless doorway became a symbol of shelter in a city that rushed by without noticing that it was anything but a doorway.

And this, in the end, was his death-bed, which, perhaps, is as it should be.

"The third victim," you read, "was found by Patrolman Sherbaum slumped on a bench in Roosevelt Park. The body was that of a short man, about 65, weighing about 200 pounds. He was still unidentified last night."

And tomorrow, but for police records of derelicts, he will still be unidentified. Perhaps, out of the shabby reaches of the side streets, there will come another outcast who will give this unknown a name. Perhaps, from this name they will begin to trace a life story as could be told of a dozen men who sit each night upon park benches without money in their pockets or hope in their hearts.

And the crowds mill past and see them sitting there. The crowds mill past and do not know a man is dying before their eyes.

About two years ago there appeared in New York a man who gave himself the colorful name of "Mr. Zero." He explained this nom-de-charity on the ground that he appeared at the zero hour and in zero weather. He opened a little place he called "the tub." Here he served warm food and provided warm clothing. He tried to get church benches for the men to sleep upon—but didn't have a great deal of work.

This year he has a warm place where the penitents can gather and be entertained by radio; where they can get hot coffee. "Mr Zero" can tell a lot about the tragedies of the dropping thermometer. He's met the men who are found dead on park benches and in doorways!

MARKET NEWS STOCK MARKET PRICES HIGHER

STOCK SALES AVERAGES. Twenty Twenty Date Industrials Railroads Thursday 184.73 145.01 Wednesday 184.79 145.07

New York, Jan. 12.—(AP)—Stock prices drifted rather aimlessly in the early part of today's session and then turned upward in response to favorable trade news.

There was no change in the credit situation, call money being in plentiful supply all day at the renewal figure of 4 per cent.

General Motors, which had been rather sluggish for the past fortnight on selling inspired by the belief that recent automobile price cuts would impair the corporation's earnings, turned sharply upward on President Sloan's statement, closing nearly 3 points higher at 133 7/8.

Despite the better trade news, U. S. Steel common appeared to meet strong selling resistance on the way up, closing only fractionally higher at 147 5/8.

Commodity markets were mixed. Except for a 25 point jump in Japanese yen to 46.88 cents, there was little interest in the mixed foreign exchange market.

Steeling cables were firm around $4.87 13-16.

CHICAGO POTATOES Chicago, Jan. 12.—Potatoes receipts 92 cars on track 140 cars; total United States shipments 827,277; supplies on Idaho stock light, market firm, supplies other stock moderate, market dull.

CHICAGO BUTTER Chicago, Jan. 12.—Some early sales of 92 score butter were made today at 46c, but at the close the market ruled firm, and 46 1/2 was the going price with a few high score lots selling at 47c.

CHICAGO LIVESTOCK Chicago, Jan. 12.—Cattle, receipts 10,000; fed steers with weight steady, others steady to weak; trading better at new low prices on recent downturns; mostly 7c to 8c under early last week; some strength in bulls; receipts 250 to low; best heavy steers, 18.25; springing above 16.50; best yearlings, 15.50.

Saint and Sinner

Faith lapsed again into unconsciousness in the ambulance that took her to the hospital. The last thing she remembered was the feeling of Cherry's hot tears dripping steadily upon her head.

"Don't worry, Miss Lane. She may know you all when she wakes up. Temporary amnesia is not uncommon in cases of nervous collapse."

"But she was so well just before yesterday!" she heard Cherry protest.

Faith drifted again, was aroused by the almost noiseless opening of a door, and by a new voice: "Mr. Hathaway on the phone, Miss Lane."

With her eyes still closed, but consciousness becoming more acute, Faith was aware of Cherry's rushing from the room.

"I'll refill this ice bag, Mr. Pruitt. You'll stay with her?" Faith heard Miss Sutton's crisp voice.

The door closed softly upon the starchy nurse. Then a squeak of shoes as George tiptoed to the bed.

"Faith! It's George. Can you speak to me?"

By an immense effort of will Faith forced her eyelids to open.

en. She nodded, and though the gesture was of the slightest, she felt as if she had extended a terrific amount of energy.

"Don't try to talk, honey," George's voice came soothingly. "I understand—everything. You don't want Bob or Cherry to know that you ran away intentionally. I'll tell Bob that you must have been delirious with fever yesterday when I drove you to Darrow, but that I didn't realize it."

Tears welled hotly in Faith's wide-staring eyes. She nodded again, whispered faintly: "Thank you, George."

"It will give you time to think things out. I don't know what's wrong between you and Bob, but whatever it is, it can't be as bad as you think now."

"Worse!" she protested in her almost inaudible whisper. "Does the doctor think I'm going to die, George?"

"Of course not!" George denied. "I want to die," she interrupted him, then closed her eyes and was drifting off into oblivion when Cherry's voice brought her back sharply.

"Bob's coming right over! The poor darling was almost crazy when I told him she didn't recognize us, George. Oh, was she talking to you?"

"Delirium," George answered. "I couldn't make out what she was saying. She still doesn't know me from Adam. We'd better clear out and leave her alone with the nurse. I doubt whether she ought to see Bob yet."

"You couldn't keep him out here with machine guns!" Cherry cried, bursting into fresh tears.

NEXT: Bob Arrives.

POLICE ARREST GIRL ANNOYER

Lawrence Gunville, 16,
Admits Grabbing
Young Woman

With the arrest of Lawrence Gunville, 16, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Gunville, 409 Ludington street, yesterday morning, police believe they have captured the mysterious character, known as the "hugger," who has been terrorizing women and young girls here for some time.

The youth was taken into custody yesterday morning as the result of a complaint made to police by a young married woman, who was annoyed by young Gunville about 6 o'clock Wednesday evening. The woman, whose name is withheld by police, has known the young man for a long time and was able to make a positive identification of him.

After a brief questioning by police, Gunville admitted that he had annoyed the woman and he also confessed to stealing some articles from an automobile parked near the Delta hotel last week. The police learned that the youth had disposed of a valuable camera and a pair of boots, and when questioned regarding the matter he admitted that they were stolen articles.

Since he is a minor, Gunville will be arraigned before Probate Judge Yelland and probably will be committed to a state institution for feeble-minded. The youth first exhibited an abnormal mental condition when he was picked up by police about two years ago upon complaint of several parents that he had been annoying their young daughters. At that time, he was committed to the Michigan Home and Training School at Lapeer. He was released last June and returned to the home of his parents here.

Although only 16 years of age, the boy is quite large in stature. Several girls during the past two months have reported being annoyed, but police were handicapped in their investigations because of the failure of the victims to secure a good description of the annoyer. There have been three young women annoyed about 6 o'clock in the evening during the past month, but Gunville denied being implicated in any other incidents.

The boy has been in difficulties with the police for several years, having been apprehended several times for petty thievery. He will be questioned further by police, who think he may have some connection with recent thefts. The youth was allowed to return to his home yesterday morning, where he will remain until his case is disposed of.

Modern Marriage To Be Subject of Pastor's Sermon

"The law makers of the land, egged on by well meaning church leaders and reform organizations, are desperately striving to improve the married state, while, as a matter of fact, they are turning love into hell," is the contention of Rev. John B. Hubbard, which he will present at the evening service at 7:30 o'clock Sunday night in the First Presbyterian church. He will also urge that "the present methods are just the antithesis of what common sense and the teachings of Jesus would indicate."

"Parents are told to be strict, while they are now too much so. Custom is too strict and consequently the divorce laws follow suit. The cart has been put before the horse. People are worried over the terrible condition of the country relative to divorce, but they do not realize just how bad it really is."

"On January 5, the Escanaba Daily Press carried a story stating that Dr. A. S. Warren believed that companionate marriage damaged the race, which goes to show that even so eminent an authority does

Ex-Convict Turns Over "New Leaf"

St. Cloud, Minn.—Carrying out his promise to start at the bottom again to make amends for his misdeeds, Samuel C. Pandolfo, who served a term in Leavenworth prison for using the mails to defraud, has taken to manufacturing doughnuts in his old home town.

Pandolfo was convicted in connection with stock transactions of the now defunct Pan Motor company of St. Cloud.

The former broker and motor magnate, whose ill-fated business venture had nationwide consequences, has interested himself in boys' work and frequently entertains as many as 100 newswires in his doughnut shop.

not apparently know what companionate marriage really is, at least in the mind of Judge Ben Lindsay, whom he is probably attempting to repudiate. Conditions could not be much worse. There is a way out."
