

STORM CLAIMS FIVE LIVES IN MIDWEST

POWER PROBE LOOMS UP AS MAJOR ISSUE

WALSH CONFIDENT OF VICTORY IN FIGHT

BY DAVID LAWRENCE. (Copyright 1928, by the Escanaba Press) Washington, Jan. 21.—With the principal arguments already made on the question of whether the senate interstate commerce committee should recommend the appointment of a special committee to investigate the public utility industry, the problem now is whether the senate will go ahead or drop the affair. The matter has crept into the political arena notwithstanding the convention of both sides that must be kept free from politics. For members of congress are saying the vote in the senate on whether or not to investigate the utility industry will be used in the coming congressional elections as a roll call of those who are for or against the so-called "power trust."

George W. Goethals, Panama Canal Engineer, Dead

MAJ. GEN. GEORGE W. GOETHALS

BUILT CANAL GENERAL TO BE BURIED AT WEST POINT

New York, Jan. 21.—(AP)—George Washington Goethals, cleaver of continents, who literally moved mountains to bring true a seemingly hopeless dream, the Panama canal, died at the age of 70 in his home today after a lingering illness. Mrs. Goethals and two sons were with the famous engineer at the end. They announced that at his expressed wish, burial would be at West Point, where General Goethals was trained for his career and where for a time he acted as instructor in astronomy and civil engineering. Services will be held at the chapel of the military academy at 3 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, and interment will be in the historic post burial ground overlooking the Hudson. Although the Goethals history is a long list of signal accomplishments the feat with which his name is most boldly identified is the construction of the Panama canal, the great engineering project which separated the American continents, after previous attempts during the pending half-century preceding failed. For seven years the work went on, seemingly impossible of success, yet never slackening. Mountains were sheered away and a great lake was created far above the sea. Such a system of locks as had never before been conceived was thrown across the isthmus and the laws of nature itself were apparently bent to the indomitable will of this invincible man. Was Governor of Zone. Success of the project was probably largely due to the fact that General Goethals could see beyond the strict limits of his profession. He took with him on his great mission, Maj. Gen. William Gorham, who made chief.

Sanity Commission to Be Appointed to Examine Hotelling

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 21.—(AP)—A sanity commission will be named perhaps next week to examine Adolph Hotelling, murderer of Dorothy Schneider, Governor Green said today. The governor plans to have the Marquette prison physician keep Hotelling under observation for a time so the commission will have facts upon which to base their inquiry. The commission will probably be made up of three physicians. Upon their report will depend whether Hotelling spends the rest of his life in Marquette or the hospital for the criminal insane at Lonia. A prisoner who had been sentenced to life may be transferred to the hospital at any time it is determined he is insane.

ROBINSON AND HEFLIN DEBATE Arguments of Pair Are Recorded by Talking Motion Pictures

Washington, Jan. 20.—(AP)—The debate between Robinson, of Arkansas, the Democratic leader in the senate, and Heflin, of Alabama, over the religious issue and Gov. Alfred E. Smith of New York, was taken today in the talking motion pictures. Appearing at widely separated times in a studio here the two senators faced a complicated machine and an almost blinding glare of light as they sought to further clarify their positions on a subject which caused an almost unprecedented flare-up within the party ranks in the senate this week. The Democratic leader declared it was "unwise and dangerous to peace, happiness and prosperity to inject the religious issue into political campaigns," adding that "no man should be denied political preference because of his church affiliations." The Alabama said he wanted everyone to have the religion of his choice; that he was fighting for religious freedom in "its broadest and profoundest sense." He added that he favored the "Roman Catholic" having his religion, but I am not in favor of him having the United States army to fight his religious battles in foreign countries. "Among the fundamental principles underlying American political institutions, none is more important than freedom of religion," Senator Robinson declared in opening his brief address. Church, Politics Should Separate. "It was to secure this boon, denied them under old world tyrannies, that our ancestors braved the perils of the sea."

UNITED STATES HAS NO DESIRE TO GAIN LANDS

WANT EVERY LATIN-AMERICA NATION FREE—HUGHES

Havana, Jan. 21.—(AP)—The United States, far from harboring imperialistic designs upon Latin-America, desires to see south of the Rio Grande independent, strong and prosperous republics, Charles Evans Hughes, chairman of the American delegation to the Pan-American conference here, told the American Chamber of Commerce of Cuba at a banquet tonight. The former secretary of state listed independence, stability, good will and cooperation as the four pillars upon which Pan-Americanism rests. He declared, "It is the firm policy of the United States to respect the territorial integrity of the American republics. We have no policy of aggression." But it is also the policy of the United States "to encourage stability in the interest of independence." Mr. Hughes continued, "for the former is essential to the full enjoyment of the latter." It was while acting on this principle that the United States entered Santo Domingo, and lastly Nicaragua, Mr. Hughes said, "but in every case the United States' activities were directed to make the evacuation possible. "We are at this moment in Nicaragua," the American chairman said, "but what we are doing there and the commitments we have made are at the request of both parties and in the interest of peace and order and a fair election. We have no desire to stay. We wish Nicaragua to be strong, prosperous and independent. We shall retire as soon as it is possible." Withdraw From Santo Domingo. As for other Latin-American states, Mr. Hughes said, "we wish for all of them, not simply those great in area and population."

EXPECT M'COY IN NICARAGUA Will Supervise 1928 Elections; See No Signs of Rebel Troops

Managua, Nicaragua, Jan. 21.—(AP)—Brig. Gen. Frank R. McCoy, who has been appointed by President Coolidge to supervise the 1928 presidential elections in Nicaragua, was expected to arrive at Corinto tomorrow aboard the United States auxiliary vessel Nitro. Several associates and assistants accompanied the general to aid him in the work. Quinta Nina, Managua's show place on Lake Managua, has been secured as headquarters for the American election party. Managua has become the scene of a military operation. (Continued on Page Two.)

The French recently flew to Panama where they met Colonel Lindbergh, and then decided to visit several cities in Venezuela and Colombia. (Continued on Page Two.)

The scene above shows destruction wrought by the tornado at Mill Creek and Colerain avenue, Cincinnati, where one was killed and over a score injured. The storm, coming in midwinter and striking at a few places in Ohio and Kentucky, was one of the strangest tornadoes on record. Damages were nearly $1,000,000.

COLD WAVE TO BREAK TODAY, PREDICTION

ALL DEATHS OCCUR IN OHIO; REPORT MANY INJURED

Detroit, Jan. 21.—(AP)—Relief from the near zero weather that has gripped Michigan and the middle west since Thursday night, was promised for tomorrow by officials of the United States weather bureau here. The storm which officials predicted would pass over the eastern seaboard, left a toll of five deaths and scores of injuries in its wake in the middle western area. The five deaths occurred in Ohio, where a number of costly fires attributed to overheated furnaces were reported. Business blocks in Hillsboro and New Lexington and a lumber yard in Columbus in which 1,500,000 feet of lumber were stacked, were wiped out by fire. A World war veteran was burned to death in his home at Fremont. A Columbus man died of shock brought on by the cold. Three women, one in Cleveland, one in Youngstown and a third at Cambridge, Ohio, lost their lives in automobile accidents attributed to the weather. The cold wave virtually halted air mail service at Chicago. Traffic was tied up on highways in many states and railway schedules were upset. Detroit hospitals are treating scores of frost-bitten victims but up to tonight no deaths were reported.

LEON TROTZKY MAKES APPEAL

Berlin, Jan. 21.—(AP)—Leon Trotsky and his exiled companions have made a formal protest and appeal to the Communist International for reinstatement in the party. The appeal, which was not permitted publication in Russia, is published in the Socialist newspaper Vorwarts here. Trotsky's view, and complaint. It says: "We, the Bolshevik party workers, have been sent to the uttermost parts of the Soviet Union by a ganyapay decree, without any right to return. (Continued on Page Two.)

Real Estate Man Is Arrested for Embezzlement

Detroit, Jan. 21.—(AP)—Within an hour after his arrest here today, Leigh C. Husted, 34, foreman at an automobile plant here, was being returned by automobile to Fairmont, W. Va., in connection with the alleged embezzling of approximately $50,000 from a real estate firm which formerly employed him. The fugitive warrant on which Husted was arrested charged him with embezzling $10,400 from the firm, but Charles G. White, West Virginia detective, said the total amount involved is about $50,000. Accompanying Husted back to West Virginia is his bride of less than a month. (Continued on Page Two.)

Locked in Box Car for 55 Hours; Man Dies of Pneumonia

Detroit, Jan. 21.—(AP)—William Lyberger, 45, formerly a railroad brakeman who was rescued January 15 from a freight car here in which he had been imprisoned 55 hours without food or water, died today from pneumonia. He had climbed into the car at Hammond, Ind., to "bum" a ride to Detroit, and was made a prisoner when the car doors were locked before the train pulled out of the yards there. Car tappers found him half frozen and dazed. (Continued on Page Two.)

Halls of Congress Quiet; Committees Have Busy Sessions

Washington, Jan. 21.—(AP)—The halls of congress were dark today but there was plenty of activity in the wings. With both the house and senate in recess, committee rooms were the congressional work shops for the day. A dozen or more hearings were held, and for many a weary law maker it was no holiday. On the senate's side, the Boulder Canyon dam hearing came to a close. A start was made by the public lands committee on its new teapot dome inquiry and additional protests to any senate investigation of public utilities of the Baltimore & Ohio, gave his views on railroad consolidation. Senator-elect Vare of Pennsylvania filed a sweeping denial of charges of fraud and corruption in the 1926 senatorial election in the Keystone state, filed by his Democratic opponent, William B. Wilson. In the house office building the agriculture committee continuing its hearing on farm relief Republicans were willing to have the equalization fee provision of the McNary-Haugen bill go by the boards if necessary. Stinson and Two Companions Fly to Florida City

Tampa, Fla., Jan. 21.—(AP)—Eddie Stinson, aviator, piloting a Stinson-Detroit monoplane, landed at the municipal airport here late today, completing his trip from Chicago. The 1000-mile flight was made in eight hours and was uneventful, Stinson said. Arnold S. Kirkby, Chicago and Tampa bond broker, and Bern Way, mechanic, accompanied Stinson on the trip. They will remain here until Monday and then make a return flight to Chicago. (Continued on Page Two.)

MORE ELIGIBLES ARE MENTIONED Several Democratic Delegations Announce "Favorite Sons"

Washington, Jan. 21.—(AP)—The Smith and anti-Smith agitation with the Democratic ranks seems destined now to result in a larger crop than usual of favorite son candidates for the presidential nomination, especially from the southern states. Party leaders south of the Mason-Dixon line have been slow to make any declaration as to candidates for the pre-convention campaign although with but few exceptions those who have spoken have declared they will support Governor Smith if he is nominated. Within the past ten days two prominent southerners, Senator George of Georgia and Representative Hull of Tennessee have received the endorsement of the congressional delegations and other leaders in politics in their states and their friends are determined to push their candidates, especially in the South. Both are expected to go into the Houston convention with a considerable number of delegates despite the arguments of other party leaders that the time has not yet come when the party could or should nominate a candidate from the South. Expect Dozen Names. Several other candidates from southern and other states are expected to receive local endorsement. (Continued on Page Two.)

RECOMMENDS MORE SEVERE PENALTIES FOR BOOTLEGGERS

Washington, Jan. 21.—(AP)—More severe penalties for large bootleggers was recommended today by Assist. Secretary Lowell in endorsing the stand of Mrs. Mabel Willebrandt, assistant attorney general, who advocates maximum penalties of five years and $10,000 fines for liquor conspirators. Federal authorities will have difficulty in enforcing the law, said Lowell today, "as long as the maximum penalty remains at one year and operating on a $100 scale are willing to take the risk of serving a short prison sentence because of the large profits received from their operations." Dr. D. Percy Hickling, District of Columbia alumnus, said that he had observed Fisher long enough to ascertain that he is a confirmed pyromaniac. Physicians said that he can hear fire sirens long before normal persons are able to hear them. (Continued on Page Two.)

Illinois Man Flays Senate's Action in Barring Sen. Smith

Springfield, Ill., Jan. 21.—(AP)—The action of the U. S. senate in denying Frank L. Smith his seat was "an outrage against every citizen of Illinois," State Senator John Dailey, candidate for attorney general, told the Sangamon Bar association tonight. "By this action, the people of Illinois have been disenfranchised for a year and maybe for the remainder of Smith's term. The rights of every citizen of Illinois have been outraged and such an act of tyranny by a king on his people would cause a revolution." Senator Dailey said that 18 states whose combined voting population is not greater than Illinois are now represented by 36 senators, while Illinois has but one. He described the senate, by its action, as an exclusive club whose members are admitted by the ballot of senators and not by the ballot of the voters. "In effect, he said the action meant that the standards of qualifications for a U. S. senator would depend upon the varying whims, caprices or judgment of a majority of a quorum in the senate. Irish Political Prisoner Escapes But Is Recaptured

Dublin, Irish Free State, Jan. 21.—(AP)—James Nugent, a wounded political prisoner, who made a dramatic escape from St. Brigid's military hospital early today, was recaptured 12 hours later at Callan, Kilkenny, 20 miles from his birthplace, Clonmel. Nugent was assisted in his flight by two armed men who crept into the dimly lighted hospital ward on hands and knees and bundled him into a street clothes. A guard, who was aroused by the noise, interrupted the men who opened fire on him with revolvers. The guard threw himself on the floor and returned the fire, but the three men fled. Nugent was one of a number of Republican prisoners who escaped from Mt. Joy prison in 1925 and was recaptured in Clonmel, December 21, after a struggle in which he was shot in the hip. Firebug Saus He Started 60 Fires During Lifetime

Washington, Jan. 21.—(AP)—John Joseph Fisher, who confessed to police that he set two of the seven fires which occurred here Monday night, was today told authorities at a hospital where he is being observed that he had started more than 60 fires during his life time. Dr. D. Percy Hickling, District of Columbia alumnus, said that he had observed Fisher long enough to ascertain that he is a confirmed pyromaniac. Physicians said that he can hear fire sirens long before normal persons are able to hear them. (Continued on Page Two.)

Freight Steamer Sends SOS Call

New York, Jan. 21.—(AP)—The Independent Wireless Telegraph company reported that a SOS which reached its radio broadcasting station along the Atlantic coast shortly before 8 o'clock tonight was from the Hawaiian-American steamship Nebraska. The wireless company said it had received no details. Earlier reports from the coast guard said the Nebraska was disabled off Nantucket and that the coast guard cutter Ammen had gone to her assistance. These reports did not indicate the vessel, a freighter, was in immediate danger. (Continued on Page Two.)

The scheduled trial that while he had attorney said that while he had not had time to make a complete investigation of Hickman's past, he would not ask a continuance. LEGION FLAYS BILL THOMPSON

Is Hindrance to Any Program Seeking to Build Patriotism. Clinton, Mass., Jan. 21.—(AP)—A letter to Mayor William Hale Thompson of Chicago in which it was stated that his association with any patriotic program "detracts from, and does not add to, its effectiveness," was framed here today by the delegates to the conference of the state department, American Legion. The letter was in reply to one received by the department from the mayor in which the latter asked the support of the Massachusetts Legion in his program to "Americanize" American history. The delegates reported 79 Legion posts in the state. "You ask our support. You, who, in 1918, by your actions would have put a crepe on our 'honor door,' and hung our heads in shame. You, a defender of American institutions? You, a patriot? You, a defender of the American of yesterday, today or tomorrow? You—you, who had a great chance in the world's greatest crisis and who failed." The letter was signed by John W. Rech, Department commander. (Continued on Page Two.)

Lindy Ready to Resume Good Will Tour After Rest

Colon, Panama, Jan. 21.—(AP)—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, refreshed by a week's vacation at hunting and fishing, was back in Colon tonight ready for resumption of his good will tour which will carry him to the Pan-American conference at Havana, Cuba. The American flier, who spent the past week in the little town of Bouquete, near David, 200 miles from the canal zone, arrived safely in an army plane at France field at 2:22 p. m., today. He returned to find his famous plane, the Spirit of St. Louis, tuned up for resumption of the flight which already has carried him to Mexico City and to all the capitals of the Central American republics as well as to Belize, British Honduras. The next scheduled stop of the colonel's flight to be resumed in a day of two, is Caracas, Venezuela, 1,000 miles from Panama. Thence, his route will carry him to St. Thomas, Haiti, Porto Rico, Havana and finally back to his home port, St. Louis. (Continued on Page Two.)

COSGRAVE PAYS CHICAGO VISIT

President and Official Cabinet Have Busy Day in Midwest City

Chicago, Jan. 21.—(P)—William Thomas Cosgrave, president of the executive council of the Irish Free State, and his official cabinet came to Chicago today to crowd into 24 hours a friendly visit they had expected to extend over three days and received a greeting as friendly and warm as the greeting they brought from the "land sod."

From the time the Irish delegation stepped from a train at the LaSalle street station this morning to be swallowed up by a sea of silk hats on the heads of welcoming committees, until late tonight when the last function was ended, Mr. Cosgrave and his Irish cabinet were the center of a strenuous program that kept them rushing frantically from one place to another in an effort to keep abreast of the schedule laid out for them.

Mayor Thompson, the only man who did not wear a silk hat, welcomed the Cosgrave party at the railroad station, conducted its members to the Drake hotel where he was host at a luncheon for them and where he was seated in turn by the Irish leader. From the luncheon the delegation rushed to a reception tendered by Edward N. Hurley, former head of the United States shipping board, and from the reception they were whisked over Chicago boulevards to the city's parks where Mr. Cosgrave placed wreaths on the monuments of Lincoln, Grant and General Phil Sheridan. Returning from the tour, the visitors barely had time to change to evening clothes before they were due at a banquet tendered to them by the Irish Fellowship club at which Mr. Cosgrave delivered an address which was broadcast by radio.

Leads Mayor Thompson. Despite elaborate preparations to forestall any demonstration by opponents of the Free State, the hundreds of policemen who accompanied the visitors, found nothing to do but hold back enthusiastic crowds.

At the hotel the Irish executive told reporters that he thought Mayor Thompson had quite a job on his hands running a city like Chicago and added that if he were a member of the Irish leaders' cabinet, Mr. Cosgrave would be assured of having a "100 horsepower engine."

EXPECT MCCOY IN NICARAGUA

of much activity in the campaign of the American marine forces to crush the Sandino movement and the city is full of officers and marines. The fifth regiment of marines who have been dealing with the Sandino movement, is convinced that General Sandino has been beaten and the men with good natured rivalry express satisfaction that Sandino was beaten before the arrival of the eleventh regiment of reinforcements.

Discussing various reports that Sandino was either killed or wounded in powerful bombing attacks by airplanes a week ago, Col. Louis Mason Gulick today said he believed that if Sandino was not killed, at least his forces have been badly shattered.

See No Signs of Rebels. Captain Gilbert D. Hatfield of the fifth regiment, whose home is in New Mexico, was given the naval cross today for his heroic conduct during the fighting at Ocotal last July when a small body of marines held off an extensive attack by Sandino forces.

Charles C. Eberhardt, American minister in Nicaragua, who is now at Puerto Cabezas, once the headquarters of the Liberal government set up by Dr. Juan Sacasa, is en route to Panama.

Alplanes returning from the Nueva Segovia district, where Sandino had been active more than a week ago, reported no signs of rebel activity.

LEON TROTZKY MAKES APPEAL

out any charges brought against us and with the sole purpose of severing us from the sixth Communist international congress.

"We submit to force and leave our party work for a purposeless exile, but we are confident we shall reappear in the coming great battle."

Trotzky and his companions assert that the important principle now at stake is the dictatorship of the proletariat and that the Communist internationale all along has been accomplished facts placed before it without reasons being given for the measures taken by those now in power.

Demands Investigation. The appeal admits justification of repressive measures, but only as they are directed against the enemies of the proletariat, and continues:

"The deportation of us soldiers of the October revolution and brothers-in-arms of Lenin shows how far the proceeds of class mutation and the trend towards opportunism have gone."

The demand is made on all Communist parties and the sixth congress to probe the whole situation to the bottom."

MAY LAND GRID JOB. Charles Caldwell, who finished his grid career at Princeton in 1924, may be appointed head coach of football at Williams College.

Japan will have an all-faiths party.

LONG SOUGHT

In "O. B. Gates," 74, Los Angeles police say they have captured the long sought Theophilus J. Mowrey, one of the greatest creators of check writers in the country, who is said to have accumulated $300,000 by the bad check route since 1912.

MORE ELIGIBLES ARE MENTIONED

ment for the nomination, among them Senator Robinson, Arkansas, Senator Glass of Virginia, former Senator Pomerene of Ohio and Governor Ritchie of Maryland.

In addition, Senator Walsh of Montana and Governor Donahay of Ohio have large followings in the party and with the prospects that others will be put into the field between this time and June, it looks like there would be at least a dozen names in nomination when the balloting starts at Houston during the week of June 26.

Senator Reed of Missouri has the endorsement of the Democrats in his state and his friends are laying plans for advocating pre-campaign matter in many states and to entering the senator's name on the ballots in the presidential preferential primaries in a number of states in the West, South and East.

Party Active on Smith. Save for his letter to the hosts of Democrats at the annual Jackson Day dinner here last week in which he gave his views on the issues of the day, Governor Smith has kept himself in the background and has reiterated that he is not a candidate for the nomination.

Where he has been silent and inactive, however, his friends from coast to coast and border to border have been very busy in his behalf with the result that in the conversations among the Democratic leaders at their meeting here last week indicated that he was far out in front of the field at least so far as sentiment of the party chieftains is concerned.

Many Republican leaders regard his nomination as almost a certainty. Their view was vied on the floor of the senate this week by Senator Moses of New Hampshire, who, during one of Senator Heflin's assaults on Smith, declared that it was inevitable that the New York governor would be nominated at Houston. This view is one of the things often mentioned in the now sprightly Republican pre-convention activities.

Dawes Remains Silent. This was one of the factors entering into the proposal of the name of Charles Evans Hughes. Those advocating the former secretary of state argued that he was the logical candidate with whom the party should try to wrest New York state from Smith. Mr. Hughes stopped the boom with announcement that he would not be a candidate.

While Hoover and Lowden now probably are the most talked-about and written-about in connection with the Republican nomination other candidates are beginning to bid for a place in the picture. Both Senator Curtis and Senator Curtis and Senator Willis are openly in the field and their friends are organizing their forces in many states.

While Vice President Dawes is regarded by many as very much a possibility, he has made no pronouncement and so far as has been disclosed has made no move in his own behalf.

Yale Student Fined; To Make Test Case

New Haven, Conn., Jan. 21.—(P)—James T. Patterson of Milford, one of 19 Yale students arrested for violation of a city ordinance in distributing pamphlets which gave a review of a labor trouble here, was found guilty by Judge E. Stanley Dunn today and fined $2. An appeal was entered as this will be a test case, counsel said.

The case was argued on a demurrer in which was set up that the ordinance was invalid. This was overruled, the court saying that the ordinance is valid and the defendant in handing out pamphlets violated it.

ANOTHER TRIAL IN MAJORS. Jack "Curley" Orden, who graduated from the campus at Swarthmore College to the major leagues in 1912, will try to hold a regular pitching berth with the St. Louis Browns this coming season.

FORCES LINE UP IN FARM FIGHT

Two Kansas Men Join With Opposition to Equalization Fee

Washington, Jan. 21.—(P)—The unrest of the house farm bloc over farm relief legislation was signified in two directions today with Kansas Republicans joining the movement to surrender the equalization fee provision of the McNary-Haugen bill and other western members jostling tactics designed to obtain an upward tariff revision on agricultural staples.

The Kansans Strong, Guyer, Hoch, White and Hope took cognizance in the agriculture committee and decided to forsake that controversial provision on the ground of expediency. Of the two other Kansas Republican representatives, Anthony was said to have assented to the decision by proxy while Sprout sent word that he would seriously consider agreeing with any action taken at the meeting.

Two Make Objections. At the same time, Representative Dickinson, Republican, Iowa, announced that several western members intend to introduce bills calling for higher tariff on agricultural commodities similar in many respects to the one he tossed into the house hopper yesterday. One of these, calling for increased levies on dairy and poultry products, already had been drawn up by Representative Selvig, Republican, Minnesota, while other tariff measures, dealing with farm products, are being prepared by Representatives Manlove of Missouri, Goodwin of Minnesota and Wursbach of Texas, Republican.

In contrast with outspoken opposition to the equalization fee at its hearings recently, the house agriculture committee heard it endorsed today by Oscar Bidscoe of Greenwood, Mo., president of the Staple Cotton Growers' Co-operative association. At the conclusion of the meeting, Representative Hall, Republican, North Dakota, entered into the record a telegram from Chairman Haugen protesting that the clause be taken from the bill.

Use Hospital Ship in Naval Maneuvers

San Pedro, Cal., Jan. 21.—(P)—Summons of the hospital ship Relief to pinch-hit for an absent auxiliary craft in war maneuvers of the battle fleet off this port today, caused several anxious hours for relatives of officers and men aboard the big fighting boats.

The war problem called for a ship to take up position as an "enemy" craft at some point on the "drill grounds" off San Juan Capistrano, to the south. The Procyon, base flagship, had been chosen. The craft was enroute here from San Diego, however, and it was decided to call on the hospital ship.

The Relief, with only enough men aboard to man the ship, started out hurriedly. Wives and relatives of those aboard the fighting craft, remembering the part played by the Relief in the explosion aboard the USS Missisippi in 1924, which cost the lives of nearly half a hundred officers and men, besieged naval authorities for information.

The actual mission of the Relief did not become known ashore until some hours later when wireless messages explained her hurried departure. Soon after, the Relief herself steamed into port.

Klan to Discard Mask February 22

Birmingham, Ala., Jan. 21.—(P)—The Birmingham Sunday News and Age Herald will say tomorrow that the mask of the Ku Klux Klan will be universally discarded Feb. 22. The action was taken it says, following a meeting in Montgomery, Ala., last week between Dr. Hiram Evans of Atlanta, imperial wizard of the order and high state officials of the Alabama realm.

The News and Age Herald will say that the announcement was made at the Montgomery meeting by James Eads, grand dragon of the Klan in Alabama, and that Dr. Evans officially sanctioned the plan.

Two reasons will be given by the News and Age Herald for the Klan's action in discarding the hood from the regular regalia.

"First," the newspaper will say, "there are many persons within the Klan and many others on the outside who are violently opposed to the hidden face."

"Second," states, municipalities and divisions of country outlawing the mask by legislation. To forestall universal legislation against the visor, the Klan officials deemed it wise to act at this time."

tion and wealth, but for every one, to the very smallest, strength, and not weakness."

The United States has troubles enough at home without seeking added responsibilities and territory abroad, Mr. Hughes declared. As evidence of America's desire to acquire foreign territory, some of the American delegation cited the occupation of Santo Domingo. After entering Santo Domingo some years ago, he said, the United States at once began laboring to get out. "Eventually plans of evacuation were agreed upon and carried out. "If we had cherished an imperialistic purpose," Mr. Hughes told his audience, "we would have remained in Santo Domingo; but, we withdrew."

Havana, Jan. 21.—(P)—The conclusion of a multi-lateral arbitration treaty between the republics in the new world, following closely, perhaps, the provisions of the treaty now being negotiated between the United States and France, would not be opposed in principle by the American delegation to the Pan-American conference.

Any such treaty, however, it was authoritatively declared today, would have to be practical in conception and must contain the usual reservations both as regards questions to be arbitrated and the right of the senate to specify the exact form in which the problem should be submitted to arbitration.

Mexico wants the articles of the convention organizing the Pan-American union amended and in this Mexico is reported to be supported by several Latin-American countries. Announcement was made today that the Mexican delegation would offer amendments proposing that the American republics should not necessarily be represented on the governing board by their diplomatic representatives in Washington as the present articles provide together with the American secretary of state.

With regard to an arbitration treaty embracing the American republics, certain members of the United States delegation believe that general political conditions in this hemisphere are particularly suited to the advancement of international disputes, they point out that, unlike Europe, the countries on this hemisphere do not live in continuous apprehension of war, nor is there in the new world such division of the balance of power as keeps Europe in a political turmoil. Under these conditions they hold that international difficulties are more open to friendly adjustment, since also, great political combinations and alliances, which are apt to turn Europe into opposing camps, are never formed here.

SENATE, STATES AT ODDS OFTEN

Smith Affair Is Not the First Dispute Over Seating

Washington, Jan. 21.—(P)—While the senate set a precedent in the case of Frank L. Smith of Illinois, by refusing to administer the oath to a man elected by the people of a state, this is by no means the first time a house of congress has been at loggerheads with a state over its chosen representative.

The most recent case was furnished by the house which twice refused to seat Victor Berger, Socialist, of Milwaukee, once in 1919, and again in 1921. The controversy then revolved around the question of whether Berger was loyal during the World war.

After being refused the oath and a seat in 1919, Berger submitted his case again to the voters of his district, the fifth Wisconsin, and he was re-elected by a substantial majority. Again the house refused to seat him and again the people of his district re-elected him. When he presented his credentials for the third time the house seated him.

Delaware Had One Senator. The most recent case in the senate was that of the late Henry A. DuPont of Delaware, who was refused the oath of office in 1896 on the ground of irregularities in his election by the state legislature. In the year following an effort was made to reopen his case, but it failed.

The Delaware legislature got into a deadlock and Delaware had only one senator from 1896 to 1903, when Lewis H. Ball was elected and served from March 3, 1903, until March 3, 1905. Ball's term expired and again the legislature failed to elect with a result that there again was only one Delaware senator from March 4, 1905 to June 13, 1906. Then Dupont was elected again and was permitted to take the oath of office, serving until March 3, 1917.

GENERAL TO BE BURIED AT WEST POINT

sanitary officer of the canal zone who cleaned the isthmus of the fever which had taken terrible toll in previous attempts.

In 1914, the great canal was at last completed and for two years, with his new commission as major general and with the thanks of congress publicly accorded him, General Goethals acted as the first governor of the canal zone. Then he asked to retire from public life and for a time but little was heard of him.

During the war, however, he was recalled to active duty and performed notable services. After that he opened offices here and acted in an advisory capacity with numerous large projects. He was an advisor of the Port authority of New York and had a hand in another engineering triumph—the Holland Vehicular tunnel under the Hudson river, the longest tunnel of its kind in the world.

WAS OUTSTANDING MAN. Washington, Jan. 21.—(P)—The death of Maj. Gen. George W. Goethals, retired, drew formal expressions today from Secretary Davis of the war department and Maj. Gen. Charles P. Summerall, chief of staff.

"By the death of General Goethals, the nation loses a citizen who has performed outstanding service in both civil and military capacities," Secretary Davis said. "He demonstrated great ability as an engineer and administrator. In the army he was honored and respected for both his technical qualifications and his leadership."

General Summerall said: "In the death of General Goethals, the army loses an illustrious comrade and a loyal friend. His epochal achievement in completing the waterway which unites the Atlantic and Pacific oceans at the Isthmus of Panama has obscured the brilliance of many similar accomplishments throughout a period of over 40 years as a military engineer, military supply officer, and military administrator. General Goethals was one of the great army figures of our day. His fame is world-wide."

ils of unvoyaged seas and established their homes and institutions in the new world.

"It is unwise and dangerous to peace, happiness and prosperity to inject the religious issue into political campaigns. From time to time, groups have attempted to form political parties in the United States, based on differences of religions and on church rivalries and antagonisms. These political parties, one after another, have disappeared in the whirlpool, and the very names of the leaders who formed them and led them have been forgotten."

"No man should be denied political preference because of his church affiliations. It is equally true that no one should seek preferment because of his membership in a particular church. All citizens who truly endorse the sublime doctrine of personal liberty, whose shining thread is woven permanently into the fabric of our civilization, must unite to condemn the demagogues who would advance their personal fame at the cost of their country's domestic tranquility."

"You have read many false reports about my speeches upon the Mexican question," said Senator Heflin. "I have opposed war with Mexico and will continue to do so."

Fighting for Freedom. "I know something about war. I was in the house when war was declared against Germany. I saw a war cloud in the Far East in 1914. It was not larger than a man's hand, but I saw it grow and expand until its black wings covered the earth, and I saw ten million young men go down to death in the shadow of those wings. War is a horrible thing. In its wake lie broken hearts and ruined homes. Its path is wet with human blood and paved with dead men's bodies. I am not in favor of using the United States army to fight the religious battles of any group of people in the United States. I would not permit it to be done by partisan Jews or Catholics."

"I am not fighting any religion. I want everyone to worship God as he chooses, to have the religion of his choice. I am fighting for religious freedom in its broadest and profoundest sense. I am fighting for the continued existence of the public school system in America."

TAKE DEFINITE FORM.

The Marquette Mining Journal says: As a result of this week's meeting of its promoters and committee-men, plans for the first Upper Peninsula State fair, to be held next September in Escanaba, begin to take definite form and it is plain that no money or effort will be spared to make it a success.

Although the upper peninsula fair must be regarded as an experiment this year, there appears to be no good reason why it cannot be put over with a bang. It is getting underway with a strong personnel, which is all-important and there are said to be good prospects of adequate financing. Present plans call for the expenditure of about $40,000 for new buildings, including a grandstand which seats 800.

The race track on the Escanaba grounds was the fastest in the upper peninsula circuit last year and the U. P. fair board acted wisely in turning over the job of arranging the turf program to Mr. Perkins of Marquette. He is an experienced turfman and has a whole-hearted interest in that sport. He may be depended upon to put his part of the show through in good shape.

Marquette men who attended the Escanaba meeting were impressed with the fact that the upper peninsula fair will have suitable grounds, well located and of adequate area. They also are satisfied with the building program and with the general plan for bringing exhibits of livestock, poultry, farm crops and various other kinds of displays to the fair. Inasmuch as the upper peninsula fair will not take place until all county fairs in the district are out of the way, it should be possible to fill the buildings and grounds with first-class exhibits that have won blue ribbons in the county events.

While it is true, as stated by Mr. Powell, state commissioner of agriculture, that the fundamental purpose of the upper peninsula fair, like all others, is one of education and development of agriculture, it is also true that the upper peninsula fair, to draw patronage from all parts of the district, must have a larger and more attractive program of entertainment and amusement than any of the county fairs. For this reason the attractions committee has one of the most important jobs in connection with the enterprise. What is needed more than anything to make the upper peninsula fair a success is earnest cooperation from all sections in the district. It must be truly an upper peninsula fair; if it is anything else it will be a failure. There will have to be co-operation in carrying out the large amount of work necessary to put on a big fair and there will have to be co-operation in financing it. The state is giving a lot of assistance financially and otherwise, but the state cannot carry all the load. It is a co-operative enterprise, first and foremost, and should be tackled in no other light. It was not projected for the purpose of displacing county fairs or of competing with them in any manner. In fact most of the men selected to promote and have charge of it are active in the direction of county fairs.

No one in a position to help should turn his back on the upper peninsula fair. Those who are skeptical as to the possibilities for making it a success should not reach premature conclusions, but should lend a hand and give it a boost. If a county fair is worth anything, it follows that there should be value in an upper peninsula fair.

THE NEXT MOVE? Governor Len Small of Illinois announces that he will refuse to recognize the action of the United States senate in vacating the seat to which Frank L. Smith was elected, and that he still regards Smith as the junior senator from the Sucker state. Just where Small's action will lead is, of course, a question that only future events will answer. In effect, however, it means that Illinois now has only one vote in the United States senate, and that unless an election is forced by mandamus proceedings, or Smith resigns and voluntarily enters a new election campaign, one senator is all the state will have for some time.

Governor Small takes the position that, if the senate can refuse to seat Smith for the reasons given, they also could refuse to seat him because they objected to the color of his eyes, or the quality of his clothing, or the complexion of his politics. In short, Small contends that the people of Illinois were advised, in advance of the election, of all of the facts concerning the primary in which Smith won the Republican nomination, that the primary election was strictly a state matter, and that the state of Illinois is entitled to be represented by anyone the voters chose to send to Washington.

Senate leaders contend, on the other hand, that the senate is the sole judge of the qualifications of its members and that it has full authority to refuse to seat Smith for any reason which, in the senators' opinion, might disqualify him. A long, bitter battle is in prospect. Just now it appears that the senate has the upper hand. The Small-Thompson-Deussen triumvirate in Illinois undoubtedly is powerful enough to send Smith back to Washington. The influence of this "precious" triangle, extends only to the Illinois state line. There are many reasons to believe that the senate, again would turn thumbs down on Smith, even if he were reelected to the office.

World's Strongest Stations in America

Washington—The three mightiest broadcasts in the world are located in the United States. WEA at Belmore, N. Y., KDKA at Pittsburgh and WGY at Schenectady, N. Y., each have a capacity of 50,000 watts and lead the field.

The most powerful stations outside the United States are at Moscow, Russia, and at Motla, Sweden, each operating on 40,000 watts.

A survey made by the electrical equipment division of the Department of Commerce shows that 655 of the 1,116 stations throughout the world are located in the United States. Europe has 195, North America, outside the United States, 128; South America, 52; Asia, 18; Oceania, 28 and Africa, 9.

Davenport, England, has a 16,000 watt station and a station of power ranking above 40,000 watts is reported to be under consideration in the Netherlands.

The biggest station in Canada is one of 1,800 watts at Calgary. In Argentina, among the powerful stations are two of 5,000 watts at Buenos Aires.

THE CANARY MURDER CASE

He couldn't wait till I sent him the box. He'll hold it lovingly on his lap all the way down in the subway, like a mother with a baby.

Vance was still standing near the dressing-table, gazing perplexedly into space. "Markham," he said, "the condition of that jewel-case is positively astounding. It's unreasonable, illogical—insane. It complicates the situation most damnably. That steel box simply couldn't have been chiseled open by a professional burglar... and yet, don't you know, it actually was."

Before Markham could reply, a satisfied grunt from Captain Dubois attracted our attention. "I've got something for you, Sergeant," he announced. We moved expectantly into the living-room. Dubois was bending over the end of the library-table almost directly behind the place where Margaret Odell's body had been found.

He took out an insufflator, which was like a very small hand-bellows, and blew a fine light-yellow powder evenly over about a square foot of the table-top. He gently blew away the surplus powder, and there appeared the impression of a human hand distinctly registered in saffron.

The bulb of the thumb and each fleshy hummock between the joints of the fingers and around the palm stood out like tiny circular islands. All the papillary ridges were clearly discernible. The photographer then hooked his camera to a peculiar adjustable tripod, and carefully focusing his lens, took two flash-light pictures of the hand-mark.

"This ought to do," Dubois was pleased with his find. "It's the right hand—a clear print—and the guy who made it was standing right behind the dame. And it's the newest print in the place."

"What about this box?" Heath pointed to the black document-box on the table near the overturned lamp. "Not a mark—wiped clean."

Dubois bent putting away his paraphernalia. "I say, Captain Dubois," interposed Vance, "did you take a good look at the inside door-knob of that clothes-dress?"

The man swung about abruptly, and gave Vance a glowering look. "People ain't in the habit of handling the inside knobs of closet doors. They open and shut closets from the outside."

Vance raised his eyebrows in simulated astonishment. "Do they, now, really?—Fancy that!... Still, don't you know, if one were inside the closet, one couldn't reach the outside knob?"

"The people I know don't shut themselves in clothes-closets," Dubois's tone was ponderously sarcastic. "You positively amaze me!" declared Vance. "All the people I know are addicted to the habit—a sort of daily pastime, don't you know?"

Markham, always diplomatic, intervened. "What idea have you about that closet, Vance?"

"Alas! I wish I had one," was the dolorous answer. "It's because I can't, for the life of me, make sense of its neat and orderly appearance that I'm so interested in it. Really, you know, it should have been artistically looted."

Heath was not entirely free from the same vague misgivings that were disturbing Vance, for he turned to Dubois and said: "You might go over the knob, Captain. As this gentleman says, there's something funny about the condition of that closet."

Dubois, silent and surly, went to the closet door and sprayed his yellow powder over the inside knob. When he had blown the loose particles away, he bent over it with his magnifying-glass. At length he straightened up, and gave Vance a look of ill-natured appraisal.

"There's fresh prints on it, all right," he grudgingly admitted; "and unless I'm mistaken they were made by the same hand as those on the table. Both thumb-marks are unlar loops, and the index-fingers are both whorl pat-

IN NEW YORK

New York.—Bachelor hotels prosper in Manhattan and, I am told, there are tens of thousands of men over 40 engaged in the serious business of dodging matrimony. A certain chain of hotels now has five "bachelor" establishments, two of which are veritable skyscrapers. Of evening the lobbies and dining rooms of these places take on the air of quiet gentlemen's clubs. Pipes come out, newspapers rattle and the quiet sanctuaries of celibacy is enjoyed, far from the distracting temptations of the silk stocking zone.

If any of these tens of thousands are lonely they do not indicate it. Most of them seem intent upon keeping intact their unwedded bliss. The only women they see about the buildings are those aged and cronish mop women who splash through the hallways.

One notices but little interchange of conversation among them. They glance over the tops of their papers and bow a polite greeting to a familiar fellow recluse. Now and then some younger bachelor stops a friend to relate a tale of adventure outside the cloister walls and receives frowns from the oldsters.

Young newcomers to Manhattan, made a bit timid by tales of terms... Here, Pete," he ordered the photographer, "make some shots of that knob."

A few moments later, after an interchange of pleasantries, Inspector Moran also departed. At the door he passed two men in the white uniform of internes, who had come to take away the girl's body.

BEES REQUIRE CLOSE WATCH

Don't Neglect Hives, Says Successful "Honey Grower."

Beekeeping is a business of details; to neglect them is to flirt with disaster, says G. B. Gooderham, Canadian apiarist. One of the most common mistakes in an apiary is to neglect requeening the bees at the proper time; it results in weak and sometimes dead colonies, excessive swarming and reduced crops.

All weak and failing queens should be replaced as soon as detected and all colonies should be headed by good prolific queens during the Spring and Fall. Disastrous mistakes too often are made in preparing bees for the Winter and many colonies are either lost or weakened through lack of strength, too little food, unwholesome food or inadequate protection.

It is better to give too much than too little, and wise to give every colony 15 to 20 pounds of sugar syrup, even though they have enough honey stored for the Winter. Good protection conserves the bees' energy during the cold weather and also reduces the amount of stores required by them.

Early Spring feeding is a mistake; it should be done in the Fall when feeding for the Winter. A colony that has an abundance of stores will start brood-rearing long before the weather is suitable for an examination and will

AMUSEMENTS

TODAY'S PROGRAMS.

At the Delft: "Becky," a drama of theatrical life, with Sally O'Neil and Owen Moore.

At the Strand: Buck Jones in a western comedy drama, "Black Jack."

"West Point," William Haines' new vehicle, which will be shown at the Delft Monday and Tuesday, is the most ambitious picture in the career of the young star.

Actually filmed at West Point under the frowning battlements of the Military Academy, showing the cadet corps in spectacular reviews and parades—echoing all the glorious traditions of the famous old school for officers, the new Haines picture is unique in its genuine atmosphere and its close relationship to a nation's patriotism.

It has everything—uproarious comedy in Haines' adventures learning to be a cadet—thrills galore in the great football scenes in which stars of the Army team, including many all-American celebrities, struggle for supremacy—reproductions of actual Army-Navy plays in the field—and through it all a tender love story.

also build up much more rapidly than one short of food.

Prevent Losses

Get enough stores into the colony during the Fall to carry it through until the late Spring. Colonies are often retarded in the early part of the season by not having enough room for the queen to expand her brood nest to the maximum. Hives smaller than the Jumbo should be given an extra super, without a queen excluder, as soon as they show the least sign of congestion.

Much honey is lost through faulty supering during the honey flow and through natural swarming. The nature of the honey flow should control the number of supers given and natural swarming can be prevented.

it breathes the very spirit of youth and romance.

Haines as the "wise" young man who comes to the academy to play football and remains to realize what it all means, has an ideal role, and John Crawford makes a very charming heroine.

AT THE STRAND.

For an exemplification of versatility, one naturally looks to the moving pictures, for aptitude is the key of that industry's success. But in the entire history of the photoplay, probably never has there been gathered together a more versatile cast than appears in "Not For Publication," coming to the Strand Monday and Tuesday.

Ralph Ince, one of filmdom's most prominent figures, has not only directed the picture, but plays the leading role as well. On several previous occasions Ince has worked both behind and before the camera, but his accomplishments in "Not For Publication" are acclaimed as his greatest.

Rare ability in characterization also appears in minor parts. Tom McGuire, who has appeared in moving pictures for more than twenty years, playing every part from a bell boy to a small town "hick," has his most important role in the production.

The cracker cop seemed very kind. Said he, "I'm sure that you will find that riding horses slower is as good as riding fast. You will admit there is no need for you to try and show much speed. 'Twill only tire the horses out, and then they will not last."
"I guess you're right," wee Scouty cried. "There might be danger if we ride at break-neck speed, so we'll slow down - and do just as you say." And then the cop shouted loud, "Giddap!" The cop flapped down to take a nap. This flapped the Tinies wonder just how long he planned to stay.
Just then the slim man came in sight and said, "This policeman is all right. He will not spoil your fun at all, as long as you don't race. But, if you treat the horses rough, and make them tear until they puff, he'll very likely scold you, with a frown upon his face. Be careful now. I'm leaving you, cause I've some errands I must do." And off across the hill you will find that riding horses slower is as good as riding fast. And then he shouted, with a smile. "I'll come back to you after while. Take care of all the horses now, and have a lot of out, and then they will not last."
The Tinies pranced around a spell and then the bunch heard Clowny yell, "Oh, look! My horse is clever. He can stand on just two feet." And, sure enough, the horse rose high, with forefeet pointed toward the sky. The Tinies laughed to see it, 'cause the sight was quite a treat.
Just then wee Cobby shouted, "Run!" And 'twas no sooner said than done. A scary thing had happened, and the cracker horse reared. A tiger followed close behind, and, goodness, he looked far from kind! He'd jumped out of the cracker box and then began to roar.

"Alumni University" Urged by President C. C. Little

Ann Arbor, Jan. 21.—(AP)—Michigan has assumed educational leadership through initiative, courage, originality and high ideals, Dr. Clarence Cook Little, president of the University of Michigan, told a gathering of representative graduates here tonight during a meeting called to discuss a new order of achievement for alumni of the university.

Dr. Little was the principal speaker at the Centennial Send-Off dinner attended by 500 alumni in which plans for the years leading up to the completion of 100 years of life for the University—in 1927—were presented. Dr. Little's principal subject was concerned with the creation of an "alumni university," although in the closing moments of his speech and in printed matter he gave the alumni a glimpse of the possible growth of the university in lines of service.

Need "New Order."

He presented the "need for a new order of things" without a thought of criticism of the past, he declared, and holding that the "spirit of growth was a part of youth and a university must be young in spirit if it is to lead and inspire youth."

"Youth itself is active, energetic, enthusiastic, and if it is appealed to on the right basis, courageous and of high ideals," he said. "It is not therefore with any ideas of criticism, but rather with the idea of enlisting your cooperative efforts that I suggest there be a new Michigan and that this new Michigan provide the means of putting into existence the first example in our own or any other country of what may be called an Alumni University."

"What is an Alumni university? This may well be asked, and in order to understand better what is involved, let us for a moment analyze what is an undergraduate of a graduate university of the type of the University of Michigan in its present existence.

Cooperative Venture.

A university is a cooperative venture between the state which supports it, its students and its faculty in common service and with common aims and ideals. The state gives support to the university and expects support from it. The faculty receives aid from the state and is expected in return to give their energy and wisdom to the problem of the state. The students receive assistance from the state and are its servants. They are therefore expected to give in return some of their energies and wisdom to its problems.

"Similarly the faculty and students are fundamentally interested for a common good and presumably common ideals. This being the case no alumni university can be complete unless it is founded on mutual basis of service to and by the alumni. He must receive something from the organization as it is planned, and he must give something to it in return. He must enter into full partnership with the other members of the firm of state, faculty and students.

What University Offers.

"It is the type of inter-relationship so vivid and active in one's college years which afterwards is apt to become accentuated or weakened by distance, both physical and mental, from the campus. We cannot afford to allow that attenuation to continue and it is in an effort to bridge the gap and renew in a more vital form than ever before those relationships which existed when you were undergraduate that the alumni university pleads for its right to exist and for your personal support.

"What can the university, as it exists at present, give to you who are scattered over various parts of the state of Michigan and indeed, the whole country? Obviously, it can give you at best only an imperfect picture of the details of its daily life. It can try through moving pictures and through the agency of the Michigan alumni to keep you informed of the details of some of its problems and interests. Beyond these methods, however, it can give you two definite things, one of them material and one of them idealistic. "The material benefit which it can give you is in connection with your recreation or business. It can keep you well informed and up to date in the latest advance in any subject or subjects which are of particular interest to you. If you are a medical man, it can answer your question or provide you with a course of reading in that field. If you are interested in English literature or other similar activities it can provide you with reading and supervised study courses. If you are interested in architecture, it can put you in touch with the latest advances in design in that field. It can do a great deal, then, to aid you in those matters which interest you either in connection with your business or in recreation.

Athletic Spectacles.

"Of course, what your university has done for you in the way of providing you with interesting and frequent athletic contests is obvious to us all. It is the aim of the Alumni university to bring to your intellect and emotions some greater permanency of interest and opportunity for support than comes to you through the athletic contests of your alma mater. There are many greater contests than those on the football field. To be sure, they require a different order of effort on our part, involving as they do our minds and our spirits in steady, quieter service. Your university is ready and able to help you all that it can in acquiring this new desire—that richness of life and general cultural equipment which never can be overdone, but which forms, or should form, part of the equipment of every well-rounded individual.

"The contribution to your ideas is of a different type. When you were in college the chances are that you, as almost all other undergraduates, were entirely unconscious of any duty you might have to the university. You were probably interested as all of us were in our undergraduate days in what we would get out of the university rather than what we could get into it. Yet there were great teachers and great administrators while you were here who spent their time and their energy and who literally gave their lives to impress you with the sense of public service and to show you beauty and truth. To your ideals at present the alumni university can give an opportunity to show that the lessons taught by those men and women were not in vain. It can arouse the spirit of eternal youth which enables you to give directly to the youth which is today and which is to come. That is a very great opportunity. It may in itself become a veritable spring of Ponce de Leon, a spring of eternal youth, if you know how to drink it.

Chance for Service.

"There are not many enduring satisfactions which can come to us in a world that is full of hurry and material emphasis. Our own youth in a physical sense passes so rapidly that at its close we find that we have not accomplished even a small fraction of what we had hoped to do in the way of unselfish service. Yet there are here, within a mile of you tonight, some 10,000 young Americans or students from other countries who are giving their time and energy toward acquiring the same sort of an education which you, at their age, believed to be full of idealism and hope.

"In order to make it more real to them and their successors, you are being given opportunity to take part in a great adventure. The foundation of an Alumni university, the opportunity to give time and thought to your alma mater, to keep in touch and in correspondence with her, to grow by what she can give you, and by what you can give her is a matter altogether too real and too big to depend upon the energies or activities of any one man or any one small group.

Permanent Program.

"The plan as it finally develops, must appeal to you in a thoughtful, permanent, constructive sort of way. It is not the wild appeal of an institution in sore need of funds, for additional endowments or additional aid. It is not a war-time drive which is of a highly emotional and temporary nature, leading to a revulsion of feeling immediately afterward and a desire to avoid further contact.

"It is, rather, a slow-lasting handclasp between you and your alma mater which must lead to a friendship of a different order, which must enable you on the basis of experience which you have received out in the world to come back and talk with her on a basis of much more true equality than was possible when you were a student.

"These things must be clear to you if the Alumni university is to become a reality," President Little concluded.

WHY EMPTY PEWS?

PASTOR-PATRON OF THE 'WANT ADS' TELLS

Why are so many empty pews to be found in churches on the Sabbath these days? The question is answered below by Rev. J. B. Ennis, a clergyman of Gainesville, N. Y., who recently had the following advertisement printed in his home town paper:

"LOST, STRAYED OR STOLEN: A large flock of Methodist sheep. They have been gone for some time. When last seen they were browsing along the road of indifference that opens out into the byway of neglect, leading to the highway of worldliness that ends in a state of apostasy. Anyone finding these sheep will please drive them home if possible. If they persistently refuse to come home, drive them into the nearest fold, lock the door, and report to the undersigned."

BY REV. J. B. ENNIS
For NEA Service.
The advertisement I had printed in the papers was not written solely for the benefit of my own flock, but for the strayed sheep of every fold.
In my travels I see many empty pews on Sundays, and after 30 years of Christian work I believe I can give a few reasons why they are empty.

I do not hesitate to say that in some cases the preacher himself may be to blame. No pastor can reach and hold a people unless he is willing to meet them on their own level. I do not mean that he should forget his calling, but he always must be a man among men.
Another reason: some shepherds who are commanded to "feed my sheep" place the fodder too high, and the sheep starve almost to death trying to reach it. Our messages must be delivered so that they can be grasped and understood. This is a busy world. We preachers must study humanism. It is about the best education one can have.

"Listening to a sermon over the air is not worship"

If my people are farmers, I meet them in the field. I have gone into coal mines with the miner and dug coal. If my people are shop people, I go to them in the shops. If they are in offices, I try to meet them there.
Preachers must know their people, be one among them, and not preach the Gospel any more earnestly than they try to live the life of the Master.
If they attend ball games, I also attend, or take my gun and go with them to the fields or my fishing rod and accompany them along trout streams.
The radio has something to do with empty pews. It is so easy for a man to fill his pipe, put on his slippers, and tune in a sermon. When the collection plate is passed, he can take a dollar from one pocket and put it in another.
While the radio is a godsend to thousands, I would add that for the man who can attend church, listening to a sermon over the air is not worship. It is laziness.
The automobile also comes in for its share of the blame, of course. Many churches are compelled to close their doors during the summer months.
These are times of pre-digested and easily digested foods. People buy them because they can eat them quickly and suffer no ill effects. Preachers must prepare their spiritual foods along the same lines.
Finally, I would say to pastors: keep your church open 365 days in the year, and in conducting worship, be yourself. There is only one Billy Sunday.

Movie Sidelights

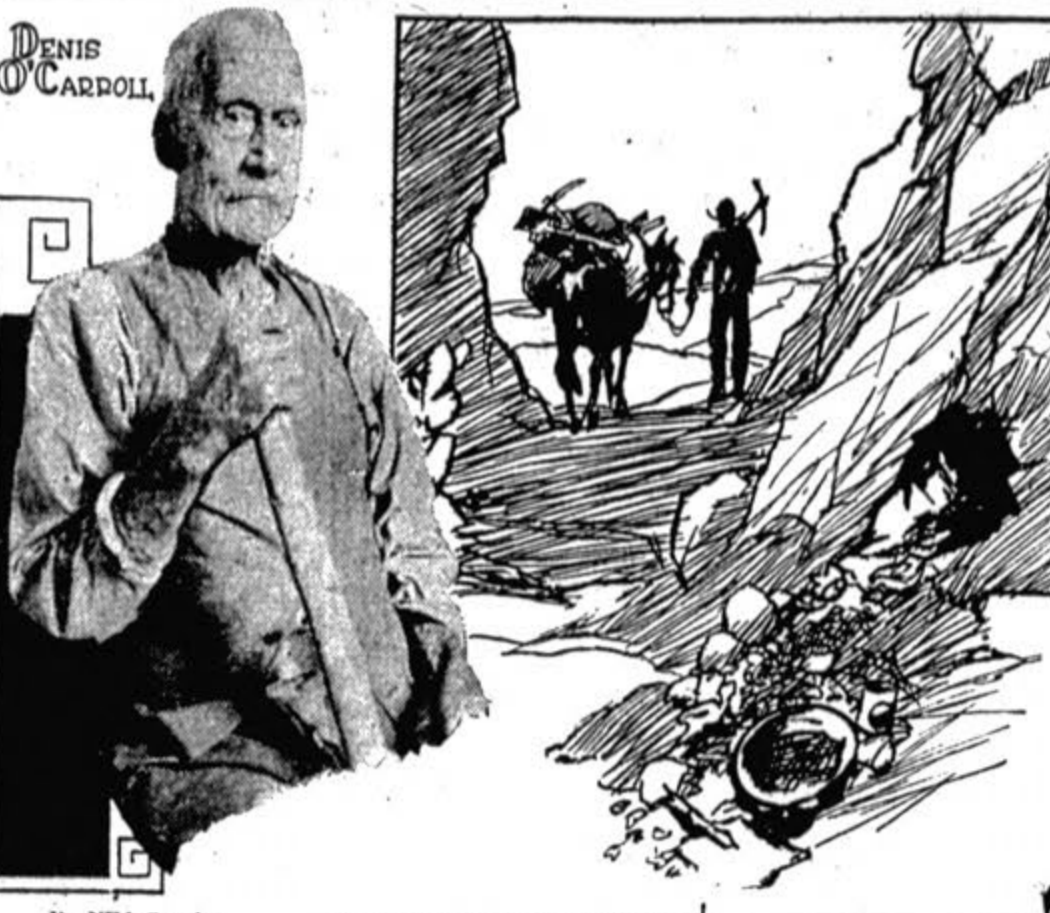

Hollywood, Cal.—Kisses don't go to waste in Hollywood, if they are the celluloid kind in which famous screen lovers indulge toward the end of a romantic picture. Odds and ends of love scenes left over from the final cutting of a film are always in demand with a certain group of fans. Just now the cinema kiss collectors seem eager to get their hands on bits of film clipped from the final love scenes of Ronald Colman and Vilma Banky, who are making their last appearance as a romantic team in "The Passionate Adventure." Henceforth they will be starred separately, so the collectors are bestirring themselves to get portions of what they can point to proudly as the Colman-Banky farewell embrace.

MOHAMMED'S MOUNTAIN.
Eleven years ago Leo Feodoroff organized a motion picture company in Moscow to produce pictures patterned after the American films then popular in Russia. One of the features of his project was to be the importation of Lon Chaney for a series of starring pictures. But the revolution wrecked everything before Feodoroff's ambition to have Chaney working for him could be realized. What is more interesting, it started a chain of events and adventures which brought Feodoroff to Hollywood and put him in pictures as an actor. And now he is playing a minor role in support of Lon Chaney. Said the Russian: "The laugh is on me. Chaney would not come to me, so I had to come to him."

ECONOMICAL EXCITEMENT.
When a merchant's lease is about to expire without renewal he puts up a sign, "Forced Out," and holds a bargain sale. In the movies it is cheaper to have a fire, that is, to burn one's sets spectacularly and photograph the fire as part of an exciting picture. By taking advantage of an expiring lease in this way Gordon Cooper turned out a thriller in 10 days at a cost of $17,000. Thanks to the big street set he burned to get it off a rented tract before the lease expired, the picture looks as though it had cost $150,000.

Judge Says "Lady" Is Overworked Term
London.—The word "lady" has been worked to a frazzle in England. "Woman" is better says a judge.
"I am rather glad to hear some people use the word 'woman,'" remarked Mr. Justice Horridge in the King's Bench division when a witness was rebuked by counsel for persistently referring to a party in the case as a "woman" instead of a "lady."
"Woman is a very good word and in these days nearly everybody, it seems, is a lady," added the court.

World's Oldest Miner Must Take Vacation He Doesn't Want

By NEA Service
Phoenix, Ariz.—Denis O'Carroll, who may be the oldest miner in the world, is about to take a vacation that he doesn't want. He will hardly admit that he is going to take it. For it is to be an enforced vacation. The muscles that have held up during 50 years or more of prospecting over Arizona's mountains are wearing out. Denis O'Carroll, who is so ancient that he has been called "Old Denis" for half a century, and who once said that he was born in 1816, has got to take it easy.

Canyon Named For Him
In his cabin at the head of lonely O'Carroll's Canyon—yes, it was named for him, and U. S. Geological Survey maps make it official—O'Carroll sits and looks into the blue distance. He does not say much. Strange legends, the vague tales that date back to the brave old days when Arizona and its prospectors were younger, cluster around him, but he will not discuss them. He will not tell, for instance, why he came out of the Staked Plains 50-odd years ago, and no one who knows him dares ask him about it.
Pioneer prospectors can remember seeing O'Carroll 40, or 50 years ago, plodding over the mountains with his pack mule, pursuing a solitary path into remote canyons and along distant ledges. Even then he was thought an old man, with his gray hair and his weather-beaten, wrinkled skin.
If legend be true, O'Carroll "struck it rich" several times during his long career. He himself never has admitted it; but he obviously has enough cash to keep him in comfort for the rest of his days. When he dies his funds doubtless will revert to the state.

Records All Goats Grazed in Country

Rocksprings, Texas.—One of the most unique jobs in the country is held by Miss Claudine Bourland of Rocksprings. She is secretary of the American Angora Goat Breeders Association and is reputed to know more about goats than any other woman, with the possible exception of Mrs. M. Armer of Kingston, N. M.
Miss Bourland handles the registration papers on the herds of all the association's members. She is a familiar figure at the livestock exhibition over the country.

Won't Admit He's Old.
He spends most of his time sitting at his door looking out over the canyon that bears his name. Sometimes he pretends to be working; he will not admit, even to himself, that he is too old to be a prospector. But most of the time he seems to live in the past, watching phantom figures, long vanished, come and go down the path to his lonely cabin.
So he sits—nearly always alone, for he discourages visitors—and waits for the vacation that he does not want.

MONEY—AND HAPPINESS FORTUNE DRIVES TEXAS RANCHER FROM HOME INTO EXILE

Ira Y. Yates
San Angelo, Texas.—Fate picked out Ira L. Yates, weather-beaten Pecos river rancher, and played on him one of its most sardonic jokes.
Yates is 69. Half a century ago he moved here from south Texas and bought a small ranch on the Pecos river. Yates worked hard. He had no time to take things easy. As fast as his ranch made money for him, he put the money back into the land. Year by year his little ranch grew larger, acre by acre and section by section.
Tanned and grizzled, Yates kept plugging away.
Then, abruptly, it was discovered that there was oil on his land.
Yates set to work to develop wells. So rich was the pool underlying his ranch that standard oil drilling tools were not needed; ordinary water well rigs sufficed to bring the flowing gold to the surface.
And now—
Yates' fortune is beyond all estimate. Oil men here say he soon will be worth the astounding sum of $200,000,000—more money than all the thrifty ranchers in the world ever dreamed of.
Yates has had to go into hiding. Too many people want to try to help him spend his money. Too many people know of "worthy causes" to which he could donate. They made life miserable for him. He never had a moment's peace. Always there was someone at his elbow, suggesting investments or gifts.
So Yates has disappeared. Only his closest relatives know where he is, and they will not tell. His fortune has driven him from his old home and the broad acres he loved.
If you could find him, possibly he could speak very entertainingly on the subject. "Does wealth bring happiness?"

GREENLAND IS LONELY LAND

Explorers Find Country Desolate and Dreary.

Godthaab, Greenland.—Greenland is the loneliest continent in the world. Tucked away in the Arctic circle, with its fingers frozen and its ears frost-bitten from one end of the year to the other, it ekes out its existence catching seals and eating fish.
These are the conclusions of members of an official expedition sent out by the Danish government to make a complete exploration of the island. The expedition found the Eskimaux clothed, for the most part, in garments they make themselves from the skins of animals. Except for a few simple sports they have little amusement. There are but a few hundred Europeans on the great continent.
If Greenland were placed in the United States its length would run from New York to Denver, and its breadth from Cleveland to Florida. And yet its total population of 12,000 would not make a good sized American town.
The history of the United States really begins with Greenland. It was on a voyage from Norway to Greenland that Lief Ericsson, son of Eric the Red, discovered America in the year 1000. A few years later Torfinn Karlsefne sailed from Greenland to Nova Scotia with three ships and 150 men, but returned three years later.
The old Norse sagas say that when the Norsemen first came to Greenland they found the same type of people living there as they found in Vinland, in America.
Soon after Lief Ericsson's visit to Greenland, the continental island was settled by several thousand Scandinavians. During the later middle ages, however, all communication between Greenland and Norway ceased, and by the sixteenth century all trace of the Europeans had faded. They had either intermarried with the Eskimaux or had been exterminated.
In the eighteenth century most of the colonists sent to Greenland were convicts. Christianity was first introduced here by Lief Ericsson in 1000, but it died out several centuries later, to be reintroduced in 1721 by a Norwegian clergyman.
Enormous stretches of Greenland are still uninhabited. The great majority of the population is on the west and south coasts. Danish expeditions continue to find evidences of ancient Eskimo civilization in the north, but the Eskimaux themselves have wandered to the south, where they live dreary lives, their chief entertainment being to sleep.

Wilkes Barre, Pa.—Rounding a curve on a country highway, a motorist came upon a frightened deer which, instead of bounding off the road, plunged into the car. The radiator was bent and the windshield smashed as the car ran under the animal, whose hoofs inflicted scalp wounds on one of the passengers. The deer was killed.

Portuguese Want Film Titles in Native Language

Lourenco Marques, Portuguese East Africa (AP)—A large replacement market is foreseen here in the proposed order of the government requiring titles of motion picture films to be printed in Portuguese.
Residents like American films, but protest their enjoyment is tempered by inability to read the titles. As virtually all the films shown are American-made and have titles in English, the effect of the law is regarded as furnishing American manufacturers with a new market for films with titles printed in Portuguese and in English, such as now are made for the Brazilian trade. Once the audience can understand the titles, business men say there will be a greater demand for new films.

Yank Legionnaires Dine in Peers Hall

London (AP)—Commander Howard Savage and other members of the American Legion, on their way home from Paris, enjoyed the privilege here of assembling within the apartments of the peers of the king and queen pass for the opening of parliament. It was in these apartments, known as the royal galleries, in which the Legionnaires sat down to a banquet as the guests of the British government with Stanley Baldwin, the prime minister, in the chair.
After dinner many of the Americans stepped across a hall into the house of lords where they enjoyed themselves by sitting on the great crimson woosacks and stood beside the throne occupied by the king and queen when the law-makers assemble for the year's business.
In the royal galleries, where such functions as that tendered the Americans are very rare, the former officers and doughboys and their wives and friends saw enormous pictures of two historic events in British history. One was that depicting the death of Nelson, and the meeting of Blucher and Wellington after the battle of Waterloo.
On the current $5 bill appears a large portrait of Andrew Jackson.

"JOHN'S"—PAST AND PRESENT

From His Post At a New York Stage Door, Joe Domoto, Ex-Strong Man Compares the Girl's Boy Friends of Now and Yesteryear

By NEA Service.
New York.—Joe is a boy as knows his johns—small "j" if you please—but Joe, it seems, has nothing but contempt for them.

For nearly 40 years, Joe Domoto, gray-headed, barrel-chested old veteran strong man, has been shoeing johns and stage-door willies away from the portals of duty from the time of "The Folies" and Schubert's revues, back to the Floradora Sextette, Lillian Russell, Chauncey Olcott, the Hanlon Brothers, and that gay old host of heroines of the Mauve Decade.

That Modern john:
Take it from Joe, the modern john is "just a palooka." He is crude in his love-making, sloven in his speech, cheap in his approach.
"It's nothing like the good old days," Joe will tell you. Drop around any night to the back of one of New York's theaters. You'll find Joe, the implacable, with his wide shoulders, bull neck and squat bulk barring the doorway.
"If you're not 'a phony,' Joe's face will break into a grin. He might invite you, perhaps, to 'set awhile' in his little cubby-hole painted 'ponies,' bare legs flashing, whizz by between numbers to and from their dressing rooms. They call out a cheerio.
Joe merely grunts. He continues his talk.
These modern johns have no technique. They are the "hello cutie" type. And anyone who is the "hello cutie" type, in Joe's estimation, is nothing short of "a washout."
"Now the old-timers, they were gallant, real gallant," says Joe, leaning back in his worn chair. "I can remember Lillian Russell, Fanny Davenport, Mrs. Minnie Fiske, Mrs. Leslie Carter."
"How the johns used to line up with their footmen, their high, silk topers, their yellow linen dusters!" They brought in bouquets of flowers with $100 bills attached. They took the girls over to Rectors or the old Madison Square Roof Garden. Nobody was making much money then.

Joe Domoto... looks at the stage door's past. But everybody was happy. ... come to whistle at the dolls as anybody who isn't a sap over women!

They take them to Childs and feed them hotcakes and tea instead of lobster and champagne. Or maybe they ease into a cheap speak-easy and beer-and-ear then to death. Phooie!
And Joe arose with a snort of disgust to challenge the entrance of a suave, smooth-talking individual in smart evening clothes who mentioned something about wanting "to see his cousin."

Forty Years of 'Em.
"Half my time in the past 40 years I've spent giving the air to phony 'cousins,' 'uncles,' 'brothers' and even 'grandfathers.' It's the oldest gag in the world. It never works. Even when it's on the up-and-up."
A doorman sees "plenty." He finds it hardest to turn down broken favorites of long ago "mooching coffee money."
The old-time matinee idol is gone, too.
"J. K. Emmett was—the lad for you. Finest built man I ever saw. Straight, muscular with black hair and flashing black eyes. Down at the old Fourteenth street theater the girls used to line up from Sixth avenue clean down to the stage door some nights.
"J. K. would come to me and say 'Much of a crowd, Joe?' and when I'd tell him, he'd grin and duck out the front door and go home alone. Can you imagine a modern star pushing a chance like that in the face?"

The Bigger They Come.
Johns who make the biggest saps of themselves usually are the biggest men in the outside world, says Joe.
"One night I remember that a prominent steel magnate and a prominent publisher—both of them still living—came driving up in all their splendor with spanking bays, carriages, linen dusters and all. They each gave me a big tip to date up Lillian Russell.
"She turned them both down cold and left them standing there while she went away with a little runt of a guy.
"But then, after all," sighed Joe, "show me a john—show me anybody who isn't a sap over women!"

Morvich Is Held to Circuit Court

John Morvich, proprietor of the West End Pool room, 306 Chippewa avenue, was bound over to circuit court on a charge of sale and possession of liquor after a hearing before Justice of the Peace Ranguette yesterday morning.

Morvich was arrested by police last Thursday. In the raid, the officers found a quart of liquor hidden in an organ in Morvich's living quarters in the rear of the pool hall.

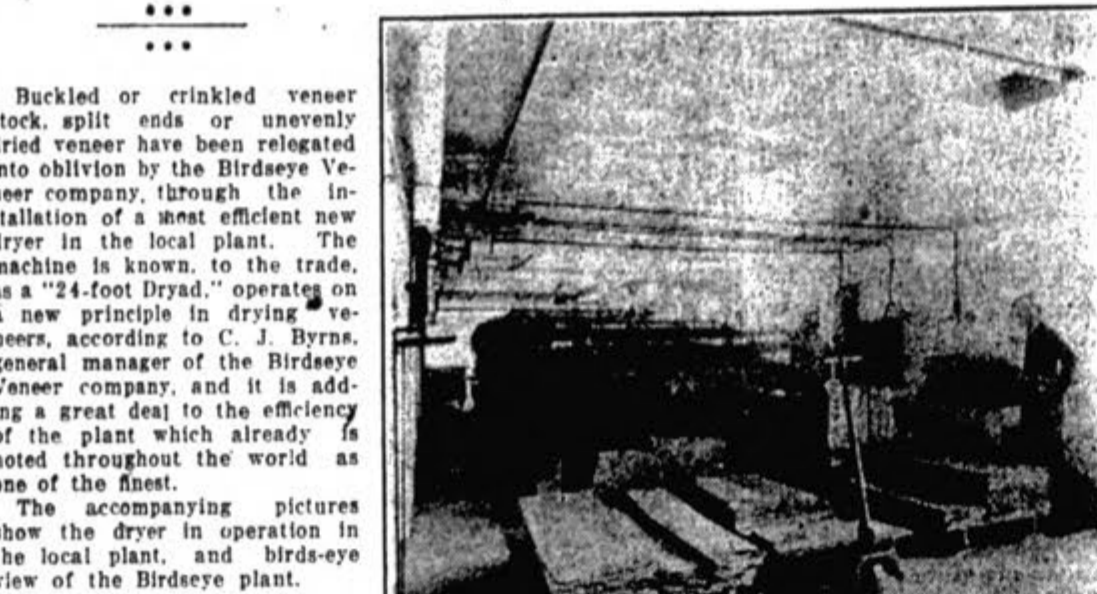

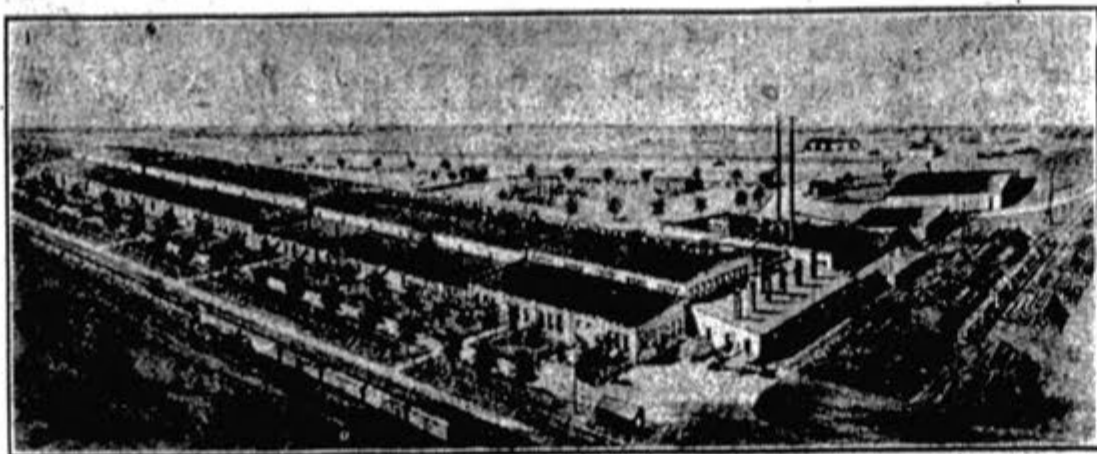

Edgar Brooks, woodsman, the state's main witness, testified at the hearing that one day last week he was accosted by two lumberjacks, who asked him if he wished to obtain a drink. Brooks told them that he could drink some wine if it could be found, and thereupon the trio went to the West End Pool room.

Brooks had three drinks of wine at Morvich's place. Brooks testified, and soon after he became dizzy. That was all he remembered; he said, until he found himself in the police station. Police had found him near the fairgrounds in a dazed condition. Brooks testified that about $23 was missing from his pockets, and he believes he was "rolled" by the two lumberjacks who accompanied him to Morvich's place.

Byrnes, general manager, and it is adding a great deal to the efficiency of the plant which already is noted throughout the world as one of the finest. The accompanying pictures show the dryer in operation in the local plant, and birds-eye view of the Birdseye plant.

Abner Bangs Suggests New Method of Removing Snow

Misery Bay, Jan. 20 (To the Editor)—I have just conclusively completed the finish of a magazine article written by a man that has a new scientific idea about how to keep the snow off the pavements during the cold months of winter. He suggestively hints that the pavements could be kept full of hot steam during snow storms. The pavements would in that way, thusly, be kept hot as fast as it had fell. This plan has many advantages, but a chain is only as weak as its strongest cog, and I am free to confessedly admit that I can suggest some better improvements to the same. In the first (1) place, instead of steam, which has a low specific gravity and is liable to freeze at a moment's notice, I would use hot coffee which is more wont to retain the heat. Besides, we are trying to retain amiable friendly relations with Brazil and by taking their whole coffee crop off their hands in its entirety, they would be more willing to send us a better grade of the nuts for which they are so justly famous.

Other Advantages In the use of coffee, I would be killing several birds with the same feather. Coffee is a terrible thing for the human nerve, according to the health experts that write the advertisements for the coffee substitute makers. These gentlemen are all pledged by their local Advertising clubs to tell strictly the truth and nothing but, so we can accept their admonitions at their face value. If all the pavements were underlaid for coffee pipes, think how much less coffee there would be in circulation and how many lives would be salvaged! The congress of the United States then, quite willingly, if asked to do so, would pass a law prohibiting the sale of coffee containing more than one-half of one per cent. This would not have any effect on many of the restaurants, boarding houses and other establishments where the coffee would, even now, escape that limitative minimum. Consequently nobody would be hurtfully injured. The idea also has a humanitarian possibility that should not be overlooked. Would Save Lives Imagine yourself, a foot-loam traveler on a cold night. The wind is blowing, the snow is descending from the blue heavens in great drifts as you struggle on towards your destination. Chilled to the marrowfat of your bones you stumble on, one foot trudging after another. All at once you suddenly become completely exhausted. You fall in your tracks. You are done for. You lie prone on the pavement immotionless. But wait! There is a leak in the pavement. Into your mouth trickles a stream of hot coffee! You are refreshed. You take up new courage. You arise. You struggle on! A life has been saved because of the foresight and ingenuity of yours. Sincerely & Truly, A. BANGS, esq. P. S.: The school teacher that thinks maybe the plan would be pretty expensive in cost. Can we afford to not go through with a projectile enterprise that will save myriads of lives? A thousand times no. —A. B.

EVEN NEWER THAN his new car will be the 17-century English church which Henry Ford plans to reproduce on his Sudbury, Mass., property. As a model, he will use the First Church of Christ at Bradford, near Haverhill, which is pictured above. It was copied in 1848 by Richard Bond, of Boston, from an edifice built in London two centuries before by Sir Christopher Wren. Regarded as one of the most beautiful church buildings in New England and known as the birthplace of the American Board of Foreign Missions, it is a combination of Gothic, Corinthian and Ionic architecture without, with Romanesque windows and Grecian friezes within.

RAPID RIVER

(Mrs. Elizabeth Barboe, corr.) Tuesday a large force of local men and boys turned out and started to flood the river from the old slaughter-house to a few rods below the Rapid River bridge. They succeeded in getting a flood which completely covered all rough places and as soon as snappy weather comes it will be only a little more work to flood again and freeze a nice solid sheet of ice. The young folks have been badly in need of good outside sport and should help in every way to assist those who are trying to make an ice-rink. Who knows but what we will have an old-fashioned skating carnival and prizes? Let everyone boost. We need a good clean sport for our young folks.

OVER THE OCEAN BY AUTO.

A fine place these motorists have chosen to change a tire—right on the tracks of the Florida East Coast railway, seven miles from land and 35 feet above the ocean. This was one incident in the successful 151-mile trip made by Kenneth Goodson and Claude Nolan over the ties of the famous Miami to Key West railroad. Photo at right shows the little clearance they had over this unique road. That's why they were prepared for the worst by wearing bathing suits and life belts.

STEER TISSUE MAKES BALLOON

Million Animals Furnish Materials for One Dirigible.

Akron, Ohio—Nearly a hundred girls are employed by the Goodyear Rubber company searching out perfect cattle inner tissues for new gas cells for the new dirigible Los Angeles. It takes tissues from 1,000,000 steers to make cells and envelope for the Los Angeles.

Science has spent hundreds and thousands of dollars, says J. R. Kelley, foreman of the skin room of the big plant, in a vain attempt to find a synthetic "something just as good" for the famous "goldbeater cloth," which is nothing but the casing of the lower intestine of cattle.

But the old-fashioned bossy cow has won out over grave men in their laboratories. No good substitute has yet been found.

And the great ships of the air, because thousands and millions of cattle have died, giving their vital tissues to these inanimate "birds" of wood and steel and aluminum and silk.

Goldbeater Cloth. "Goldbeater Cloth" was known to the alchemists of old. Medieval goldsmiths knew its worth. Cellini himself hammered out his famous sheets of gold, thin as silk, from which he fashioned the most beautiful objects of gold the world has ever seen, by placing the precious metal between what scientists called "steer stomachs."

The old prospectors of '49 knew the worth of "steer stomach," too. Story has it that occasionally as much knifing and brawling went on over the dead body of an old cow or steer as over a gold claim itself.

The prospectors wanted to get their case knives into the body, rip out the precious tissue, and have "goldbeater cloth," the best substance known to excise the ore and dust while it was pounded to yield up the precious gold. Every particle clung to the steer stomach and no amount of pounding made it give way.

One of Chicago's greatest packing houses sends direct to the Goodyear skin room this intestinal tissue from every beef butchered in the yards. The skins are sent in bunches of 100 packed in huge tuns filled with salt, several hundred bunches to a barrel. From 20,000 to 100,000 skins are received each week.

Use a Million Skins. About 100 girls have been working on the new lining for the Los Angeles for the last seven months. A total of 15,000 yards of fabric must be lined with the cattle intestinal casings before the job is done. About a million skins will be used, meaning that a million dead steers are represented in the big blimp. The cost of the skins alone will be about $35,000.

The process of transforming plain cattle tissues into dirigible gas cells is simpler than it is speedy.

The great kegs of salted tissues roll in from the packing house daily. They are washed, sorted, inspected, washed again, inspected again and are then sent to the scraping tables, where dozens of girls do nothing all day but scrape away fatty deposit from the silk-like tissue. A speedy worker can scrape 400 a day.

After more washing and more inspection under powerful lights the skins are taken to a big room where they are applied to a rubberized fabric, wetted down at an exact angle to permit proper shrinking when dried.

Careful Work. One girl can lay about 250 skins a day. There are 14 cells in the Los Angeles, and about 12 sections to each cell. Since deterioration without the gas inflation starts almost at once, each cell is sent to the hangar as soon as finished and is installed at once, so that most dirigibles are in a constant state of repair, with at least one new cell constantly going in as another is taken out.

The room where the skins are applied to the fabric is hermetically sealed. The only ventilation comes through a special pipe filled with air which has been put through a vacuum. One speck of soot in the cells could be fatal. No one is allowed in the rooms without special shoes kept in an ante-chamber and inspected carefully. An exact temperature and humidity must be maintained the year around. There is not a window in the room and doors are carefully guarded and protected.

All because of "bossy cow's" important contribution to the very modern business of air transportation!

ANNOUNCEMENT

Rev. H. W. Colenso, pastor of Alice Memorial M. E. church, asked yesterday that an announcement be made, in order that there might be clear understanding that the dinner bridge party at the Trayser home on Thursday mentioned in connection with the Ladies' Aid society, was not authorized by the General Aid of Alice Memorial M. E. church, by the pastor, nor by Mrs. Trayser, president of the aid.

The dinner had no connection with the church, which does not sanction amusements of that type in connection with church activities, but was a private party which Mrs. Trayser volunteered to serve.

This announcement is made by the pastor in order that there may be no misunderstanding of the attitude of the church created by general reports of the affair.

WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

Praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Mrs. Annie Kwinski of 525 1st Avenue, Milwaukee, Wis., writes that she became so weak and run-down that she was not able to do her housework. She says the name Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in the paper and said to her husband, "I will try that medicine and see if it will help me." She says she took six bottles and is feeling much better.

Mrs. Mattie Adams, who lives in Downing Street, Brewton, Ala., writes as follows: "A friend recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and since taking it I feel like a different woman."

With her children grown up, the middle-aged woman finds time to do the things she never had time to do before—read the new books, see the new plays, enjoy her grandchildren, take an active part in church and civic affairs. Far from being pushed aside by the younger set, she finds a full, rich life of her own. That is, if her health is good.

Thousands of women past fifty, say they owe their health to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

PRESIDENCY IS HAZARDOUS JOB

Life Expectancy of Chief Executives Reduced in Recent Years.

New York Being president of the United States, has become in recent decades, a hazardous occupation. Before the civil war, the country's chief executives lived to exceed their normal expectations of life at inauguration, but the 12 deceased chief executives who held office since 1861 lived on the average 8.81 years less than their normal expectations at the time they assumed office.

A single one of the 12 deceased presidents since the Civil war—Grover Cleveland—lived beyond his normal expectation at inauguration while three—Lincoln, Garfield and McKinley—met premature death at assassins' hands.

These statistics on presidential longevity have been prepared by Dr. Louis I. Dublin, statistician of the Metropolitan Life Insurance company, who states, however, that positive statistical analysis cannot be made of this group since it comprises only 29 lives.

Had this pre-Civil war group comprised 1200 men, instead of 12, and had the same proportion of violent deaths occurred—300 instead of three—it can be stated that no insurance company would write a policy on the life of a president of the United States without rating him as an "extra hazardous risk and demanding a premium sufficient to take care of this extra hazard."

Not Short Lived. "The presidents have been by no means a short-lived group," says Dr. Dublin. "The average age at death of the 27, who have died, is 68.41 years, and our own living ex-president, Chief Justice Taft, is 70."

Pointing out that presidents belong to a relatively long-lived group, since the average age of the 29 who have held that office was 54.31 years at their inauguration, Dr. Dublin continues: "Theodore Roosevelt, at 42, was the youngest. Sir Polk, Pierce, Grant, Garfield, Cleveland and Roosevelt—were between 40 and 50 when inaugurated. Eighteen assumed office at ages from 50 to 60 years, and five—Buchanan, Taylor, William Henry Harrison, Jackson and John Adams—were between 60 and 70. William Henry Harrison was the oldest, at 68, followed by Buchanan at 65."

Dr. Dublin comments that the average expectation of life in such a group ordinarily would be close to the traditional three score and ten years. But dividing the presidents into two groups—the first from Washington to Buchanan, a period of 72 years, and the second beginning with Lincoln and extending to the present, a period of 67 years—Dr. Dublin points out the average age at death of the 15 presidents of the earlier, or pre-Civil war era, was 73.8 years while that of the 12 deceased presidents of the post-Civil war era was only 61.67 years.

He argues that it would be difficult to adduce absolute proof that the shorter life spans of our post-Civil war presidents are properly chargeable solely to the great and growing demands of the office itself upon the vitality of the incumbents "since the physical and mental strain of other offices which our presidents have filled—governorships, governor-generalships, vice-presidents, senatorships and cabinet posts—may have much to do with shortening their lives. "But even when due allowance is made for these conditioning items, there is still unmistakable evidence that the earlier group lived considerably longer, on the average, after becoming president, than men of their day would be expected to live, whereas the latter group died, on the average, nearly nine years earlier than men of their day would be expected to die. This is a very sharp contrast—not so sharply explained away by the presumption of better physical equipment of the early presidents. The change has taken place, moreover, during a period when medical and sanitary science has been making pronounced advances, when the life expectation of the population in general has been increased and when influences operating for the prolongation of human life have been far more numerous and more effective than those tending toward its curtailment.

"There is, to say the least, strong presumptive evidence that the duties of the presidency during the latter half of American history, have acted to produce a greater strain on human vitality than in the earlier era."

New York, Jan. 21.—Major speculative activity in today's stock market was again on the upside, but buying operations on a large scale were confined to about a dozen issues.

The cheerful tenor of the week end business reviews helped to maintain bullish sentiment. Week-end commission houses took a less pessimistic view of the recent tightening of time money rates, being disposed to regard it as due to increasing commercial demands as well as a result of federal reserve policy to restrict the volume of speculative credit.

INDUSTRIAL ENGINEERS GIVE SUBJECT MUCH ATTENTION

Cambridge, Mass. (P)—Scientific studies in industrial lighting, made in four countries, suggest that factories in general are not properly illuminated, says Prof. Dugald C. Jackson, head of the electrical engineering department at Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Prof. Jackson is chairman of a committee appointed by the National Research Council to investigate industrial lighting with special reference to its effect on the workers' efficiency.

Work done along similar lines by French, British and German scientists, as well as by the American committee, show in common, says Prof. Jackson, "an international recognition of the importance of proper lighting in industry, and a sentiment that the industries as a class are not characterized by proper lighting."

Approaching the complex problem with the aid of physics, psychology and physiology, the committee made inquiries in the relation between illumination and fatigue, accident, efficiency and the morale of factory workers.

"No definite relation between illumination and the industrial accident rate has been demonstrated in this country or abroad as far as published data show," says Prof. Jackson, "although common sense points out that accidents in the general walks of life occur in dim light which do not occur in properly distributed light."

The exact relationship between illumination and fatigue was not determined by the scientists, but they did find that the "stimulating effect of cheerful lighting" on the morale of the worker was undoubtedly a factor in his physical welfare.

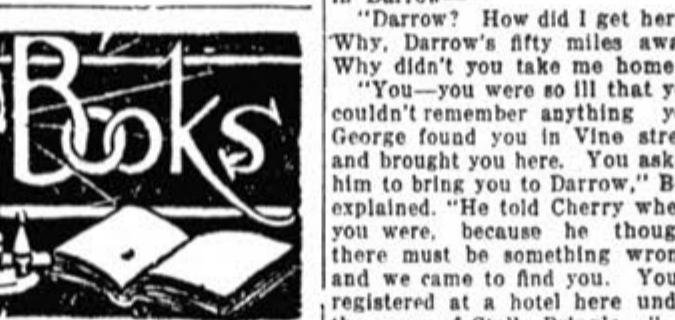

"Measurements of fatigue on some absolute units seem yet to be discovered," Prof. Jackson asserts, "and it therefore is proving difficult to associate illumination and fatigue in a direct relationship. However, there appears to be a connection, and something tangible may be disclosed by further study."

The committee's data have revealed that no conclusive difference in workers' efficiency is indicated between day light, artificial light and a mixture of the two, provided the intensity and distribution of illumination are the same for each.

It was found that old style factory buildings with inadequate window lighting might be modernized by using properly arranged artificial lighting, thus saving the plant the cost of expensive alterations.

Saint and Sinner

Faith knew that as long as she lived she would blush with shame at the memory of the scene that followed her "recognition" of Cherry's baby. But there was no other way out of the intricate, degrading tangle into which her unfounded jealousy of Cherry and Bob had involved her—and them.

Seemingly, Washington also is the capital of "yes man's land." Seemingly, also, the great White House dome casts its shadow over a social life where the law of "bow and scrape" is respected and enforced, and where conformity becomes little more than a synonym for fawning.

By way of brief introduction, Mrs. Mellett is the wife of one of the best known of Washington's newspapermen. As such she has ample opportunity for viewing our national capital from within and from without.

with everything else. She bets she can steal and get away with it. She lifts a fur at a wedding. But because she is Ellington, everyone passes it as a grand joke and the owner of the fur invites her to tea.

She drives her poor father to veronal, since being driven to drink has become too commonplace to merit attention any more. But when it comes to love, poor Loretta is as defeated as her father. Dick, the man she loves, is an strong-willed as she; so she loves him. But he is as conventional-minded as she is unleased.

Loretta finds the world made to order for her escapades. She grows slanky and even coarse. Herein, perhaps, is one of two distinguishing features of Mrs. Mellett's book. She has achieved, with absolute accuracy, the vernacular and idiom of the times. Stylistically, the entire novel is written in that strain.

MATTER OF MONEY.

Before the baseball boys get going south there will be some space available in the public prints for a little official information about the heavyweight boxing situation, if there is any.

But Tunney complains that the contract has him tied up so that he can't refuse to play ball with Rickard while, on the other hand, Rickard wants to crawl out of the contract permits him to do so and Tunney will have to pay back the advance dough.

TUNNEY REALLY SORE Perhaps that contract lacks the equity that civil courts have been known to demand when two parties enter into an agreement.

Some of the boys claim this picture to be a phoney drawn for the purpose of that very necessary old hallyhoo.

Rickard has made a date to play some golf with Tunney in Florida and it's a cinch that they won't spend their time on the course framing up a story to tell the newspaper boys.

GENE'S IDEA BULES It is rather significant that Rickard had to alter plans he had made to provide space on the summer calendar for two big shots.

When Tunney announced that he would have two fights this summer, even if it became necessary to hire out with another promoter, Rickard gave him the laugh and said he was just talking for the papers.

Something will be announced soon from Florida and unless we miss our guess the announcement will indicate that Tunney has not backed down much.

AUSTRALIAN NET STARS Australia's return to the Davis cup competition with an invading force headed by the veterans Gerald Patterson and Jack Hawkes will warrant more than casual interest on the part of the United States Lawn Tennis Association.

As the sponsor for the cup and the one most responsible for its elevation to one of the most valued international trophies, the United States regretted to see Australia withdraw from the competition two years ago because for years without the Australians there would have been very little competition.

Socially, the United States will welcome the Australians back because they are well known and popular, but their status now will not be like that of a guest as it was when the Australians were fighting some other nation here to get into the challenge round against the American cup defenders.

As a host nation during the days when Australia and Japan were doing most of the fighting for the cup, the United States couldn't take sides but it was a secretly admitted fact that the high minds of the tennis association preferred to have the Australians in the challenge round.

May Meet Americans Australia, however, now returns as a rival and if form holds, as it usually does in tennis, the Americans and the Australians may meet in the final round of the American zone winner to decide which of the eliminations in the European zone.

There may be a disposition on the part of the public to underestimate the strength of Australia because Patterson and Hawkes have had so many chances in the past against the Americans and were found short.

Patterson and Hawkes, however, are still very good players. They certainly cannot have gone back farther than Tilden and Johnston.

It may be that Tilden has slipped more than Patterson because the decline of Tilden seems to have been a physical one and Patterson, a big, strong, rugged fellow, ought to be just as strong now and have as much endurance as he had the last time he played in this country.

In spite of the optimism felt by the tennis association, it has been pointed out frequently that the United States not only has a mighty slim chance to win the cup back from France this year but that it is not a dead clutch that the American team will be able to win its way through the eliminations into the challenge round.

As long as Rene Lacoste, Henri Cochet, Jacques Brugnon and Jean Borotra retain their grip on the Davis cup, and that, in the normal course of events, should be a long, long time.

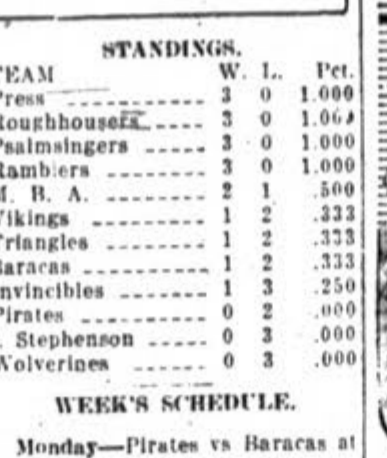

It has been said that the world tour being made by Brugnon and Borotra would throw them off their game and be of assistance to the United States in fighting for the cup.

It must have been forgotten or overlooked that those Frenchmen have been traveling around the world for about five years and instead of throwing them off their game it seems to have made them.

Swift in Water, They Hope to Make Olympic Team

The young ladies have the necessary equipment to go out and christen a battleship, but the tiny bottles aren't used for that purpose in Bermuda.

The girls are three of Uncle Sam's greatest swimmers who started training for the Olympic games recently in Bermuda.

They are left to right—Agnes Gorbally, Martha Norelius and Helen Meany. Miss Norelius was the outstanding star of the 1927 season and Miss Meany was the 1924 Olympic champion.

"Banana Oil", Reply of Manistique Elks to Escanaba Letter

Manistique, Jan. 21—"More banana oil" is the comment of Manistique Elks after reading the Escanaba "open letter" which appeared in The Press Friday morning.

We have seen Jimmy bowl at Escanaba and Hermsmanville and were much impressed with his gentlemanly manner and sportsmanlike attitude.

Give Jimmy credit for being a he-man and smiling, no matter how the pins fall.

If those few sportsmen from Menominee feel so disheartened over the fifty cents they paid to see Jimmy Smith do his "flop" as they call it, let them remember that Jimmy is human, like the rest of us, and that no two days are the same, in our lives, whether we are bowling, swimming, boxing or playing golf.

Jimmy Smith will always be a real bowler and a good sportsman, long after the writer of that article has passed into eternity.

Chicago Golfer Leads Tourney

El Paso, Texas, Jan. 21—(AP)—Leading his closest competitors by two strokes, Al Spinoso Chicago golfer, headed a field of nationally known golfers by turning in a 144 for the first 36-hole round of medal play in the second annual El Paso open tournament.

His position was chiefted through a remarkable 69 that cracked apart by four strokes in his second trek around the 18-hole course today.

Added to his 75, gained in the morning run, his score gave him a two-stroke advantage over Larry Barkholz of Cleveland and Bill Burke of New York.

The final 36 holes of the 72-hole medal play tournament will be played tomorrow.

Manchester College Defeats Kalamazoo

Kalamazoo, Mich., Jan. 21—(AP)—Manchester college revented its defeat here last season by defeating Western State Teachers college, 37 to 20, tonight. The North Manchester, Ind., basketball team led after the first three minutes of play and were never headed.

The brilliant tossing of Evans who made 14 of his team's total, was the feature of the game. Faster and more accurate shooting enabled the Hoosiers to defeat the Michigan collegiate conference champions. Manchester led at one time by 13 points, but a late rally cut the margin to 37-30 at the final gun.

Chicago Defeats Ohio State, 25-21

Columbus, O., Jan. 21—(AP)—Chicago took advantage of a momentary let-up in Ohio State's defense tonight and annexed its first Western Conference basketball victory by a 25 to 21 score.

With both teams guarding closely, most of the scoring was done on long shots. Ten times during the game the score was tied, the lead alternating constantly. In the final five minutes the Maroons came through with three field goals and victory.

Grim, Buckeye forward, and Hoerger, Maroon guard, provided spectacular plays when each sank two shots from mid-floor. At the end of the first half Chicago led, 13 to 12.

1 Minute Interviews

BABE RUTH SAYS:

I'll be in there swinging all the time, and when a guy takes his healthy cuts at the ball there is always a chance that he may break a record.

When I made 59 home runs back in 1921, I honestly didn't think there was a chance that I ever would break that mark. My fall ure to come even close in the next five years made me feel sure of it.

You can't bust any records with your bat on your shoulder, while the pitcher walks you or the umpire calls the third one. Last year the pitchers feared Gehrig as much, if not more, than me, and for that reason passed me much less than had been their custom. That gave me many more chances to hit.

Lou had a great year in 1927 and the twirlers in our league realized he was as tough, if not tougher, than me to pitch to. For that reason, when I was up in a pinch last season with runners on the bases, instead of passing me and taking a chance on Gehrig, the pitchers put them over, made me do my stuff or strike out or pop up.

Sixty home runs are a lot to make in one season, I doubt if that mark is ever broken, unless they hit the ball with dynamite. Yet, if taking a healthy cut at every good ball will break that mark, the Babe will be in there as usual, swinging.

E. S. BARNARD SAYS: Competition for star ball players is so keen that sooner or later the smaller minor leagues will be forced to take up the intensive methods of the majors to help supply the demand.

Major leagues get their prospective talent through a scouting system that covers most of the country. Since about five scouts is the limit of most clubs, they confine their efforts largely to the activities of the minors.

Unquestionably, there are a lot of capable ball players going to rust in the hamlets of our country, for the want of an opportunity to show their worth. It is in such a field that the minors could center their attention.

My thought is that it might be a worth while idea for the smaller minor leagues to employ at least one, possibly two scouts, who would be the property of the league rather than any particular club. These scouts could look over amateur and semi-pro players in the smaller cities.

Likely material could be signed in the name of the league. At the close of each season these players could be allotted to the various clubs by a system somewhat similar to the draft plan used by the majors and minors.

This is merely a suggestion that might help supply the demand for more and better players.

Indiana Defeats Illinois, 44-29

Bloomington, Ind., Jan. 21—(AP)—The superior pass work of Indiana cut through the Illinois defense in the second half of a Big Ten basketball game here tonight to give Indiana victory, 44 to 29. The Crimson attack assumed windstorm proportions as the period progressed and Wells, Corral and McCracken slipped through for easy baskets. Coach Dean was using substitutes when the game ended. Captain Olson and How, the Illinois sharpshooters, had an early rally that tied the score 16-16 at the half after the Hoosiers had gained a 10-5 lead.

Rochester Int'l Club Sold to St. Louis Cardinals

Rochester, N. Y., Jan. 21—(AP)—Sale of the franchise and players of the Rochester club of the International League to the St. Louis Cardinals announced today, presages an advantage to the trouble which the club has passed in the past few years. The price was $120,000. John L. Hicks, one of the former owners, said that the troubles of the club were for the most part financial and were characterized by attempts of the several owners to put the club on a paying basis.

Hicks and his associate, William Gilbert, consummated the deal with the Cardinals after Walter Hagen failed in a six weeks attempt to raise $130,000 to complete his purchase of the club. Hagen, who found his golf strategy of little avail in pulling a sick ball club out of the rough, paid $20,000 for an option. He finally stepped out.

The Cardinals will transfer their young players from Syracuse to Rochester, having sold the Syracuse franchise in the International League to the Donnelly brothers of Jersey City. The Rochester players will go with the Syracuse franchise.

Warren R. Giles and Branch Ricker, both of St. Louis, were named president and vice president of the club, respectively.

RIVAL TEAMS OF TWO FAMILIES

It isn't unusual for one family to have a whole basketball team, but Odín, Ill., not only has one—it has two entire teams from two families. The Lusches and the Howleys, who are cousins, make up the two teams. In each case the father serves as manager, the eldest son as coach and the other boys as players. There is great rivalry between the two teams and the "family fights" are events of the season, attracting large crowds. In the Lusch picture on top are: Top, left to right, Charles, guard; Joe, guard; George, guard; Eugene, center; Paul, forward; Harry, forward; bottom, John, Jr., coach; Robert, forward and John, Sr., manager. In the bottom picture is the Hawley family team, made up as follows: Harold, guard; Gilbert, forward; Clint, center; Kenneth, guard; Crawford, forward; bottom, Stanley (father) manager; Charles, forward, and Albert, coach.

The NUT CRACKER by Joe Williams

What Tex Rickard's elimination tournament needs is about four more draws. Then, Mr. O'Goofy suggests, why not have a battle royal for the heavyweight championship.

Toss Tunney, Heeney, Sharkey, Dempsey, Risko, Paulino and the other lads into the same ring and we'd still bet on Tunney. It is our idea that he would win going away.

Mr. O'Goofy advises any and all not to go into the closet and point because of any break in relations between Tunney and Rickard. Both gentlemen's health is so good they don't have to do any business for it.

Something just has to be done to warm the boys around the coal stove these winter evenings, and a break in relations never has failed to heat them up.

Of course, if Tunney should wish to fight for someone other than Mr. Rickard, 't would be easy. Among the many gents Tex hasn't signed to fight exclusively for him are James J. Corbett, Rogers Hornsby and a couple of Democratic delegates that can't be located.

In other words... Tunney can fight anybody, anywhere except one of the heavyweights. Maybe he could get some action in Nicaragua.

STRINGS PULL MARIONETTES

More Than 1,000 Cords Are Needed to Manipulate Figures

Jean Gros' French Marionettes, which will be seen in the high school auditorium twice on February 10, under auspices of the Community Lyceum Bureau, constitute what is, undoubtedly the most complicated show in the world. Sixty figures are used in each of the plays, "Uncle Wiggly at the Circus" and "Huckleberry Finn."

More than 1,000 strings are necessary to produce the effects in "Uncle Wiggly" which will be presented as a school children's matinee. Trained actors recite the lines while the puppets move about the stage in absolute life-like fashion. The illusion obtained is remarkable and holds the audience in suspense from the time the curtain rises until the end when, invariably everyone calls for more, seemingly never tiring of the action of the quaint figures.

The famous Bunny orchestra of eight rabbits with their leader is one of the great successes of the performance. These rabbits play with great vim and enthusiasm, seldom making a mistake with the music and are rated as marvelous musicians. They are very temperamental, however, and when displeased with their audiences can be seen to wiggle their cotton tails. If they are delighted, they will continue to play until exhausted, and sometimes have to be assisted from the Marionette orchestra pit.

All the Old Friends.

Nurse Jane is coming with Uncle Wiggly, and Jacko the Monkey Boy, the great hit of last season, is coming with even more daring tricks. Jacko boasts that he has never fallen from his trapeze and offers a special reward to any boy or girl who can duplicate some of his wonderful feats. Mrs. Twisty-Tail refuses to stop eating and consequently is dreadfully fat. Uncle Wiggly is ashamed to have her appear in his play but does not like to hurt the lady's feeling.

The Bad Chaps are still after the poor Rabbit Gentlemen but the Uncle Wiggly defies them, and states that when one is good to his neighbor none of the evil chaps can possibly win over him.

City officials had him removed to a hospital, after first assuring themselves that his appetite was caused by insanity.

The men therefore filling the positions of president and secretary are E. J. Ottaway, Port Huron newspaper publisher, and Wilfred B. Shaw, Ann Arbor. Ottaway has had the active direction of the preliminary work to outline the needs of the new venture.

Catalogue Announces Meeting
The faculty of this new university will be a "visiting committee or group made up of prominent alumni and alumnae of the university," according to the catalogue. The chairman of each group will, if possible, reside within fifty or one hundred miles of Ann Arbor.

The catalogue announces future meetings of the officers of the new university with the board of regents to consider problems of the school, while the faculty, which in reality is made up of individuals among the alumni interested in some special line of endeavor, will present a written report each year.

The alumni university, the catalogue opening statement declares, is active participation by individual alumni in individual activities of the university in which they have a special and personal interest.

Ask State Regulation
To all this the utility industry, whose spokesmen are former Senators Lenroot of Wisconsin and Thomas of Colorado, makes answer that the people then can best take care of the matter by having the states improve their laws and regulation and that the federal government has no right to interfere except in the few instances where electric energy is sold across the state lines, admittedly about five per cent of the total output.

Senator Walsh, on the other hand argues that it is the sale of securities in interstate commerce which can not be reached by state laws whereupon the utility industry answers that if it is a federal law that is desired then all securities issued by all corporations and sold in interstate commerce should be embraced and the utility not sin-attended the meetings of the senate interstate commerce committee and has had the privilege of interrogating witnesses. He introduced into the testimony a memorandum quoting from reports of conventions of the National Association of Railroad and Utility Commissioners stating that "although electric companies are regulated as to rates and service by a state utility commission in all except ten states of the union, there are only five states in which the commission which regulates utilities has been selected to exercise authority over the development of waterpower" and that in about half the states "no power is given the commissions to regulate the issuing of stocks, bonds and other securities, and there are substantial variations in the regulatory powers on this subject in the other state laws."

ried out for criticism or investigation. The senate interstate commerce committee will conclude testimony in another two or three days and probably will report a resolution in amended form declaring that strictly interstate phases be considered by the senate, whereupon the debates will be on and the senate as a whole will vote on amendments that will be offered to restore the resolution to its original scope.

Walsh is Confident
Ordinarily it would be easy to predict that a coalition of Democrats and insurgent Republicans would furnish a majority to adopt such a resolution, but the friends of the utilities sprang a surprise when they forced the reference of the present resolution to the interstate commerce committee of the senate and it is evident that some of the Democrats are taking the viewpoint of those who oppose a special investigation. Senator Walsh, however, is confident he will have sufficient votes to get the resolution adopted. It is probable he will make his case for an investigation before the open senate rather than before the senate interstate commerce committee.

THRIFT may have become a hackneyed word, weary with the work that has been given it. But it is the best word to give easy expression to the whole idea of care in managing, wisdom in spending and diligence in saving.

Thrift is not parsimony. It is generosity wisely applied. It means self-denial, not deprivation, and orderly thinking as well as orderly living. Spending money is a greater art than saving it, but wise spending is impossible without effective saving. Save at this bank.
