WEATHER MAN DOESN'T GUESS

U. S. Bureau Head Criticizes Long-Range Forecasters.

The Weather Bureau of the United States Department of Agriculture will employ long range weather forecasting just as soon as it can be put on a scientific basis rather than a foundation of mere guess work, according to a statement just issued by C. F. Marvin, chief of the bureau, which has been received by H. H. Spindler, local weather observer.

Professor Marvin points out that the Weather Bureau and other scientific agencies have, for a long time, been studying the possibilities of long range forecasting. To date no practicable methods have been devised and so-called forecasts of this character are no better than mere guesses.

Professor Marvin, supported by his entire scientific staff, has the utmost confidence in the soundness of the scientific views and practices of the bureau. He believes these will withstand the most sincere scrutiny of honest, capable, unprejudiced scientists.

Age-Old Practice.
A statement by him follows: "Throughout the past several hundred years, there has seldom been a time when one or more long range weather forecasters have not sought to interest the public in their sensational claims. These have flourished for a time, only to pass into obscurity. Neither the claims nor the theories have been able to survive the inexorable test of time.

"Similarly, from time to time since the establishment of the Weather Bureau in 1871, some such forecasters have tried to advertise themselves and their views by violent abuse of the Federal officials for not endorsing their claims. The same thing has happened in England, France, Germany, Italy and elsewhere. Instances of such forecasters operating independently of and in conflict with the collective experience and knowledge of the professional meteorologists are old stories.

In contrast to these, another class of students apply their time and efforts along sound and accepted scientific lines to solve the problem of long range forecasting by honest and intelligent effort. Professional meteorologists feel no hostility towards these earnest students. As a matter of fact, leaders in this class are to be found both within and without the great national services, and cordial friendship and cooperation prevail between all such private and professional workers.

Subject Being Investigated.
Within the United States the Weather Bureau holds a leading place in this line of meteorological progress, and the pages of its Monthly Weather Review carry many notable and original contributions of a progressive character, dealing with sunspots; solar radiation; solar and terrestrial correlations; the laws of sequence of weather conditions; the dependence of present weather in one part of the globe upon antecedent conditions somewhere else, etc.

"These topics collectively embrace all the known possibilities upon which long range forecasting can be rationally based. The meteorological library of the Weather Bureau is unique as a collection of publications of the widest scope, covering the field of meteorology and related sciences. "For several years past one of ficial has devoted practically his entire time to the review of past and current literature and the prosecution of special studies in the field of long range forecasting possibilities. In addition, others of the bureau, including the chief of the bureau himself, have given special attention to this line of inquiry. Any suggestion that will stand the test of analysis and possesses the promise of real forecasting value is welcome. The public may be well assured that the Weather Bureau speaks with authority, based upon positive knowledge, on any of these questions of long range weather forecasts.

"While the prolonged researches of the professionals have disclosed thus far little more than encouragement, faint suggestions, possible clues—something to be studied further—the self-constituted forecasters seize upon, distort and exaggerate the suggestions of the students, and paraphrase their technical language into plausible effusions in order to justify their claims and their guesses to the credulous public.

Reviews Fake Forecasts.

"What are some of the lessons we may learn from the experiences of the year 1927, just closed? It is perhaps without a parallel in America, because of the publicity given a series of calamitous and sensational weather and crop forecasts, and the severity of the personal criticism heaped upon the ability and integrity of the Federal meteorologists. Hundreds of letters and questions were addressed during the year to the Weather Bureau and its station officials seeking the opinion of professional meteorologists on these forecasts.

"A widely distributed bulletin entitled 'Annual Weather Forecast for 1927,' contained this statement:

"The forecast of 1927 for the United States and Canada is for a cold, dry year, taking the country as a whole. * * * A cold wave will start in the northwest June 2, sweep across the corn belt as far south as the Ohio and Potomac. * * * The period from June 28 to July 2 will see heavy frosts in portions of this same area, while the week from July 7 to July 11 will represent a second very dangerous date. The two periods in conjunction will have carried severe frosts and probably killing frosts through the great northern grain areas."

Wall Street Prediction.
"In the Magazine of Wall Street for February 27 this prediction was published:

"* * * The years 1926-27 would be disastrous ones for mankind, in so far as an extremely abnormal weather may bring disaster. * * * It is impossible for the grain crops of the Northern Hemisphere to escape serious injury this year (1926). * * * The world will come face to face with great danger in 1927, with its grain reserve exhausted. The great consuming populations of the industrial nations will be virtually reduced to the point of living from hand to mouth. The herds will be all but destroyed that the people may live. Europe's 1927 harvest will be destroyed by a repetition of the torrential and continuous rains of the terrible year 1315, black-lettered for six centuries. At the best, Europe will not have better than a 40 per cent harvest in 1927; America not better than 60 per cent. "To prepare for these impending mosquitos and sultry nights of summer prove.

Our fear of cold weather comes from the fact that we emerge from heated offices into cold blasts, and before the body has an opportunity to dry and the blood to get in circulation we duck shivering into a car or another building. The experience of many outdoorsmen proves that a person can go direct from the city life into the woods in winter and camp out and travel on snowshoes or skis day after day with no punishment from cold weather, but actually with as great an enjoyment, if not greater, than in summer.

Copying Criminals.
It is rather discouraging to read the list of murders and kidnappings compiled the other day by one of the large news gathering associations.

This list showed a veritable wave of such crimes in the United States during the past few weeks. The list begins with the atrocious murder of Marion Parker in Los Angeles by Edward Hickman; and the end, apparently, is not yet.

It seems as if these acts were in some way contagious; as if men all over the country had criminal impulses lying dormant within them and were led to indulge in them by hearing of other crimes. And it is precisely that aspect of the situation that is discouraging; the thought that there is such a widespread response to a criminal suggestion.

And yet, if you care to stop and think about it, there is another side to it.
May it not be possible, after all, that a strikingly good deed also would find imitators everywhere? Isn't there a chance that a truly unselfish, humanitarian act would prove even more contagious?

We believe it would. We believe that the distressing features that mar our culture exist, not because of any lack of goodness in the hearts of the average man and woman, but simply because we lack leaders who will sound the right chord.

Lindbergh touched such a chord, last summer; do you recall the response? Everywhere there were young men and women who wanted to emulate him. To be sure, many of the flights thus brought about led to tragedy, and the waste of active young lives was saddening; yet was not this outpouring of daring, of youthful dauntlessness, rather heartening and inspiring?
It is a terrible thing, truly, that young Hickman has found so many imitators. Yet it does not mean that our nation is seriously ailing, or that our generation is worse than earlier ones. It need not discourage us. For we can still be sure that the heart of the common man, now as always, is sound.

ENJOY THE OUTDOORS NOW.
Here's where we let the Izaak Walton League of America write an editorial for us. Advice sent out by the league to its members throughout the United States says:

"Don't sit around and wait for spring. This is the best time of year. Take full advantage of it."
Outdoor recreation is more valuable in winter than in summer because it refreshes lungs and exercises muscles that are half-dead from indoor life and artificial heat, the statement points out.
"Get out in winter, especially if you have snow, and give yourself some fresh air and exercise when you need it most. Outdoor recreation is perfectly comfortable in winter, as the experiences of many who prefer to camp out in the snow rather than to brave the

THE "CANARY" MURDER CASE

By S. VAN DINE AUTHOR OF THE BENSON MURDER CASE CHAPTER XI

Markham, clearly annoyed at the interruption, cut in sharply with a demand for the operator to proceed with his description.
He wore his hair smoothed down, Spively continued, "and you could see it was kind of long; but it was cut in the latest style. And he had a small waxed mustache; and there was a big carnation in the lapel of his coat, and he had on chamois gloves. . . .
" My word!" murmured Vance. "A gigolo!"

Markham, with the incubus of the night clubs riding him heavily, frowned and took a deep breath. Vance's observation evidently had launched him on an unpleasant train of thought.
"Was this man short or tall?" he asked next.
"He wasn't so tall—about my height," Spively explained. "And he was sort of thin."

There was an easily recognizable undercurrent of admiration in his tone, and I felt that this youthful telephone operator had seen in Miss Odell's caller a certain physical and sartorial ideal. This palpable admiration, coupled with the somewhat outre clothes affected by the youth, permitted us to read between the lines of his remarks a fairly accurate description of the man who had unsuccessfully rung the dead girl's bell at half past nine the night before.
When Spively had been dismissed, Markham rose and strode about the room, his head enveloped in a cloud of cigar smoke, while Heath sat stolidly watching him, his brows knit.

Vance stood up and stretched himself.
"The absorbin' problem, it would seem, remains in statu quo," he remarked airily. "How, oh how, did the fair Margaret's executioner get it?"
"You know, Mr. Markham," rumbled Heath sententiously, "I've been thinking that the fellow may have come here earlier in the afternoon—say, before the side door was locked. Odell herself may have let him in and hidden him when the other man came to take her to dinner."

"It looks that way," Markham admitted. "Bring the maid in here again, and we'll see what we can find out."
When the woman had been brought in, Markham questioned her as to her actions during the afternoon, and learned that she had gone out at about four to do some shopping, and had returned about half past five.
"Did Miss Odell have any visitor with her when you got back?"

"No, sir," was the prompt answer. "She was alone."
"Did she mention that anyone had called?"
"No, sir."
" Now," continued Markham, "could anyone have been hidden in this apartment when you went home at seven?"
The maid was frankly astonished, and even a little horrified.
"Where could anyone hide?" she asked, looking round the apartment.

"There are several possible places," Markham suggested: "in the bathroom, in one of the clothes-closets, under the bed, behind the window draperies. . . . The woman shook her head dejectedly. "No one could have hidden," she declared. "It was in the bathroom half a dozen times, and I got Miss Odell's gown out of the clothes-closet in the bedroom. As soon as it began to get dark I drew all the window shades myself. And as for the bed, it's built almost down to the floor; no one could squeeze under it." (I glanced closely at the bed and realized that this statement was quite true.)
" What about the clothes closet in this room?" Markham put the question hopefully, but again the maid shook her head.
"Nobody was in there. That's where I keep my own hat and coat, and I took them out myself when I was getting ready to go. I even put away one of Miss

Early Auto License Apparently A Jinx

London (AP)—"A-1" is an automobile license number in England which is not only a great distinction...

Theoretically, it was the first license issued for a motorcar. It was born January 1, 1904.

Its first parent was Earl Russell, who was Chairman of the London County Council when registration of motorcars began.

Mr. Pettit finds the distinctive license number not a little embarrassing at times. Policemen stop him and refuse for some minutes to believe that it is not a fake.

A few of the original cars for which some of the early licenses were issued are still in use.

Major S. Kendall, owner of License A-40, has been driving since 1900, and has never until this year been cited for a motoring offense.

To Modernize Plays of Shakespeare

London, England (AP)—Macbeth is to be modernized by Sir Barry Jackson, just as Hamlet was. Sir Barry is also preparing to put "Taming of the Shrew" into modern garb.

Old-time dramatic critics are excited. So are old-time costumers, who have thrived for generations on equipping Shakespearean productions with gloomy trappings of the sort the immortal Bard's players are supposed to have worn at the Old Globe Theater.

Half the dramatic criticism of conventional Shakespearean production has been confined to comment on whether the wardrobe and the scenery were in keeping with the traditions of Keene.

"I hope in time we shall be able to get audiences to understand Shakespeare so thoroughly that they will take the plays dressed in any sort of costume. Then we shall be able to talk about the plays, rather than the way we are producing them," said Sir Barry.

Hostess: Willy, won't you have some more Christmas pudding? Willy: No, thanks; mother says I don't want any more.

PLANS 18,000-MILE FLIGHT

Captain Joseph F. Donnellan, former airmail pilot, plans an 18,000-mile flight in which he will touch most of the capitals of South American countries.

IN NEW YORK

New York.—Manhattan snapshots: Wall Street messengers running from sky-scraper to banks with skates dangling over their necks.

The church on Washington street where a statue of the "holy child" hovers over a sign reading: "No children allowed to play in front of this church."

And St. Malachi's church in 49th street, where a sign reads "the actor's church."

And the Sphinx store on West 28th street. Here you can buy all sorts of asserted Sphinxes. Just who buys a Sphinx, and why, remains a mystery.

For two years succeeding Chairmen of the London County Council received the A-1 license number, but in 1909 it lost its official character.

AWAITS TRIAL FOR ENTERING LAKE COTTAGE

Following an examination in justice court at Manistique this week, Richard Lynts of this city has been committed to the county jail, awaiting trial in circuit court on a charge of breaking into cottages at Indian Lake.

Lynts was implicated in lake thefts following the arrest of Robert Morrison, who admitted taking an outboard motor and gas light from the Clarence Hollenbeck cottage.

Lynts, who is married and has one child, was unable to furnish the required recognition for his release, and was returned to the jail after his examination.

Morrison has also been bound over for circuit court hearing.

Hypocrites in Church Will Be Sermon Subject

At the Sunday evening service of the First Baptist church the pastor will speak on an unusual but interesting topic. He will have as his subject, "Hypocrites in the Church."

Ministers and church members have come in for a good deal of criticism lately. On one occasion, Billy Sunday declared that the worst devils in the world have their names in the church books.

Recently a most atrocious and brutal crime was committed by a man who on the following Sunday assisted at a communion service. How is that possible?

How can we reconcile such a man's action with his religious convictions? Was he a hypocrite? Does the presence of two laws in us, one of the flesh and the other of the spirit, explain it and account for it?

The public is invited to attend. Special music will be furnished by a male quartet.

CITY BRIEFS

Mrs. O. Walstead of Engadine is a guest at the home of Mrs. Charles Clement, Steuben street.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Vizenor of Manistique arrived in the city Friday and are visiting relatives.

Assign Warden to Indian Lake

Assignment of V. P. Deemer as special conservation officer stationed at Indian Lake was announced at Manistique this week.

It is understood that Mr. Deemer will be supplied with a motor boat to patrol this popular fishing spot, and do away with flagrant violations.

MEETS WEDNESDAY. The Baptist Aid Society will meet Wednesday, February 1, with Mrs. O. G. Quick and Mrs. H. Burley as hostesses.

Branch Rickey, known everywhere as one of the biggest men in baseball, is to speak at Manistique Monday evening in the high school auditorium, taking as his subject, "Twenty Million Hero Worshipers."

As vice president and business manager of the St. Louis Cardinals, he saw his team last season win the world's championship pennant.

Mr. Rickey graduated in 1904 from Ohio Wesleyan university, where he was a baseball and football star. He wore the uniforms of Cincinnati, St. Louis and New York American league teams, as catcher. He became athletic coach at his alma mater, but later transferred to the University of Michigan in order to study law.

LINDBERGH IN COLOMBIA CITY

American Good Will Fly on Time at Capital of Country

Bogota, Columbia, Jan. 27.—(P)—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh promised to arrive at 3 o'clock today—and made good. He came from Cartagena, some 400 miles away, over high mountains enshrouded in clouds, past dangerous ravines and through unknown country—one of the most daring flights he has yet made on his present tour. No other plane had ever crossed the ranges to the valley in which the Colombian capital lies—and Lindbergh was on time.

Just as the hands of the clock pointed to the hour of three, the airman swept down on the aviation field of the military school with his cherished companion, "The Spirit of St. Louis." The journey from Cartagena had been completed in six hours, one minute.

There was tremendous enthusiasm among the spectators as he descended from heights far above the mountains and made a perfect landing in the big basin, of which Bogota is a part.

About fifteen thousand persons had gathered, including high government officials, and members of the diplomatic corps, to greet the flier at Madrid field, which is about 20 miles from the capital. The moment the plane came to a standstill it was encircled by a detachment from the aviation school which protected it from the crowds. As Lindbergh stepped from his plane everyone seemed to want to shake his hand, and he was cheered repeatedly during the formal official welcome which was extended by the minister of war.

100,000 in Parade.

Lindbergh's plane was descended first as a grey speck coming through a bank of white fleecy clouds at a great height. Lindbergh flew low, as if to examine the field, then ascended and disappeared in the distance. A few minutes later he appeared over Bogota which he circled a number of times. It was thought that he was awaiting the announced landing hour—a graceful gesture—so that the three o'clock arrivals at the field might not be disappointed. In his credit beyond the city he went over Mount Monserrate, nearby, and passed over several villages. From the landing field he proceeded to the capital, and his entry was wonderful, the Colombians according him an ovation which few other men have enjoyed. The people seemed to be impressed with his youthfulness and the easy manner in which he accepted the plaudits, the adulations, the enthusiastic spirit of admiration displayed by the thousands who watched and waited long for his coming.

Driving in an open car, Col. Lindbergh went by way of the Avenida Colon to the American legation. Countless streamers floated in the air in his honor. Bogota's principal streets were crowded by 100,000 persons, and an escort of cavalry and a thousand or more automobiles helped to make the parade a notable one.

Trout Streams to Be Discussed by Commission Feb. 3

In a telegram to Edward C. Voght, yesterday, Peter J. Trudell, of Negaunee, president of the Northern Michigan Sportsmen's association, announced that the state conservation commission at its meeting Feb. 3, probably will take up the subject of open and closed trout streams in the Upper Peninsula. He urged that sportsmen and others interested in changes in the regulations now governing streams, submit their petitions to the commission at once.

It is understood that sportsmen of this locality will ask the commission to open several streams that are now on the closed list.

Mr. Trudell suggested that recommendations of Sportsmen's and Conservation clubs be wired to Lansing immediately.
