

TEXAS DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION SPLITS

PEACE TREATY TO BE ISSUE IN ELECTION

DEMOCRATS START "RESERVATION" TALK

Washington, Sept. 11.—The Kellogg anti-war treaty is getting into politics and may stay there until the end of the campaign if not longer. And when the December session of congress comes, it probably will be ratified but only after the world court and league of nations fight has been revived and there has been considerable discussion of the Monroe doctrine.

The statements attributed to the Republican management in claiming the anti-war treaty as a Republican achievement have stirred the Democrats. They now want to talk about "reservations" which is precisely the way the league covenant was beaten. And if the notes exchanged between Secretary Kellogg and Foreign governments "interpreting" the treaty as safeguarding the Monroe doctrine are to be considered as binding, which is the claim that will undoubtedly be made by the administration, then the Democrats see no objection to clarifying "reservations" or "interpretations," by the executive branch of the government permitting the other nations of the world to accept the United States in the world court.

Hughes Election. Charles Evans Hughes, former secretary of state, has just been elected a judge on the world court, having been nominated to that position by many governments, and the friends of the world court have been biding their time in the hope that when the 1928 presidential campaign was out of the way, they could review the subject. They now contend that a nation which is willing to renounce war as an instrument of national policy should not object to membership in a tribunal which shall be available to decide disputes if both sides agree to submit to that tribunal.

Exchange of Notes. Meanwhile an exchange of notes has been suggested as one way to satisfy the powers that American reservations to the world court protocol attached by the senate will not embarrass the operation of the protocol as between other nations. Switzerland has asked the league of nations for an opinion on some of the very points developed in the American reservations. If there is a will to enter the world court, the system of "interpretations" by notes may make it possible for the rest of the world to accept the senate reservations but the league members will be loath to do so unless Secretary Kellogg does some interpreting in future notes. So the problem may resolve itself into whether the executive branch of the government will go so far in interpreting the senate reservations to the world court protocol as it has been willing to go in interpreting the far-reaching provisions of the anti-war pact. And in the end both may be consummated but not until the campaign is over and the scars of battle are healed.

Son of President Spends First Day At His New Job

New Haven, Conn., Sept. 11.—(P)—John Coolidge settled down to work as an ordinary clerk for the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad today and immediately began to learn the miscellaneous routine duties that are expected to carry him forward to a higher position if he continues his interest in railroad work.

Alrising shortly after seven o'clock at the Yale Graduates club where he is living temporarily, the young son of the president walked to work and arrived ten minutes before schedule. A battery of camera men stood outside the door of the yellow building and many people on their way to work stopped to gaze at the youth as he entered. Dressed in a batty blue suit, blue tie and blue shirt, he was greeted by Joseph Whipper, chief clerk of the operating department under whom he will work for the president. In the room with Coolidge will be six other men. As he passed out of the office to join the thousands for a noon day meal, he was met by inquisitive reporters but his secret service guard said that he had no comment to make and he did not stop. He arrived back at the Graduates Club at 6 o'clock where he dined.

REPUBLICANS NOT ALLOWED DRINKS IN NEW YORK CITY

New York, Sept. 11.—I got here just in time to see the Babe win his own game. Why there are people back here all excited over election, while out west everybody is tending to business. The court here today just passed a ruling that the night clubs that they had padlocked would have to be unlocked. "Where do you suppose people are going to go between midnight and noon," the judge said. "Do you think this is Arkansas or somewhere?" They claim it was a political move in the first place to deprive the Republicans coming to New York from getting a drink.

Dispute Dry Plank

The regulars adopted a resolution declaring that "75 per cent of the bolters were not delegates to the convention but citizens of Dallas and surrounding communities who came to the auditorium for the express purpose of organizing a bolt." On motion of former Senator Bailey another resolution was adopted ordering the convention purged of "Hoover Democrats."

ENDORSE SMITH

Dallas, Tex., Sept. 11.—(P)—"Regular" Democrats of Texas in convention tonight "cordially endorsed" the national party platform and Governor Alfred E. Smith in their state platform, and in the same document called upon "all officers of the government and all members of the party" to rally for the "destruction of the traffic in alcoholic liquors."

MOODY FOR SMITH

Dallas, Tex., Sept. 11.—(P)—Gov. Dan Moody of Texas, who prior to the Democratic national convention opposed the nomination of Alfred E. Smith, placed himself on record tonight as unequivocally in favor of the presidential candidacy of the New York governor. "I never intend to backstep on prohibition," Gov. Moody said. "I opposed the nomination of Smith before the national convention but I accept the decision of the majority and feel it my duty to vote for him." The record of the Democratic party has been one of service, the record of the Republican party has been one of corruption in high places. Hope for enforcement of the prohibition laws lies with the

ANTI-SMITH FACTION IN REVOLUTION

INSURGENTS MARCH OUT OF STATE MEETING

Dallas, Tex., Sept. 11.—(P)—Amid the wildest scenes that ever marked a Democratic meeting in Texas, delegates refusing to endorse the presidential candidacy of Governor Alfred E. Smith of New York bolted the state Democratic convention here today and organized a convention of their own.

Group Meets Apart

The bolt was precipitated when a motion was introduced demanding that only those delegations loyal to Governor Smith be seated. The motion was an all-out attack on the action of the state executive committee yesterday, when anti-Smith delegations from five counties were notified that they would not be seated in the convention.

Both Looey and Colquitt addressed the bolters, telling them to go to their homes and "prepare for the fight." A set of resolutions adopted characterized the nomination of Governor Smith as an "unfortunate error" and condemned the "high-handed and lawless methods of the regular convention."

Retirement of the delegates opposed to the Democratic presidential nominee left the loyal forces free to elect officers, frame their platform and attend to routine business without prospect of further interruptions.

Barring a possible conflict between Governor Dan Moody and certain members of the platform committee over the inclusion of a prohibition plank in the platform, the windup of the regular convention promised to be tranquil.

Governor Moody announced he would seek to incorporate a plank endorsing the principles of prohibition, and it was known several members of the committee who believed that any endorsement of prohibition by the convention would be looked upon as a reflection upon the candidacy of Governor Smith planned to fight such a plank.

Dallas, Tex., Sept. 11.—(P)—"Regular" Democrats of Texas in convention tonight "cordially endorsed" the national party platform and Governor Alfred E. Smith in their state platform, and in the same document called upon "all officers of the government and all members of the party" to rally for the "destruction of the traffic in alcoholic liquors."

Democratic party, not outside of it, and I hold it is my duty to support the nominees of that party.

'FREIGHT TRIP' MADE MONDAY

C. & N. W. Workers on Tour to Better Freight Service

The freight service committee of the Chicago & Northwestern railway, composed of officials and employees of the various departments on the Peninsula division, went on a "good will" trip on Monday, visiting various communities along the line between Escanaba and Ishpeming.

About twenty men were in the party. The trip was made on freight train No. 41, and at each station stop the freight service committee visited the various shippers in the community and made an inspection of the local freight handling conditions. A chicken dinner was served to the committee at Rock. J. N. Peller, division accountant, had charge of the refreshments for the evening meal on the return trip.

REGIONAL AIR DERBY HELD

Turn Attention to California Race; Myrhes Is Winner

Los Angeles, Cal., Sept. 11.—(AP)—National aerial interest finding a focus in Mines field here this week gave way temporarily to a regional airplane race from San Francisco won by H. S. Myrhes, of Los Angeles, who led 37 fliers across the finish line at 1:45 P. M. The race started at Mills field, San Francisco, at 10 A. M.

Although Myrhes was unofficially declared the winner, the official announcement awarding the prize of $2,000 will not be made until after a careful check up of the elapsed time of the fliers. While the state race was being settled three groups of transcontinental fliers were within a day's flight of the finish line.

Crash of one plane, with serious injury to a passenger, and probable abandonment of the race by a leader in class B, marred the day at Yuma, Arizona, where fliers of that group and of class C, rested for the night before the final dash to Los Angeles.

The Waco biplane of Stuart F. Auer, of Milwaukee, Wis., crashed at Wellton, Arizona, 42 miles east of Yuma, after going into a tailspin. R. E. Herron of Milwaukee, Wis., whom Auer carried as a passenger, sustained a deep scalp wound and was rushed to the Cochran sanitarium at Yuma. Though seriously hurt, physicians said Herron would recover.

Steak Helps to Wreck Mail Order Marriage of Lonesome Deacon

With love to you, With friendship true, There is no one I love Like I love you.

El Paso, Texas. It was leap year so Nellie Wallace, 23, of Tehula, Miss., leaped 1,500 miles to marry Joe Sleet, 33, a Baptist church deacon at El Paso, Texas whom she had never seen.

Lonely in the small town of Tehula, Miss., and tired of helping mother operate a boarding house, Nellie inserted the following: "I'm not a flapper, but would like to correspond with men and women between the ages of 25 and 32 years."

They began a fervent correspondence. He asked her what she wanted for Christmas. She said a wrist watch, and it came. "Yes, you may call me sweetheart, because it does sound more romantic, doesn't it?" wrote Nellie to Joe, December 28, letters reveal.

They exchanged photographs, locks of hair and likes and dislikes. "Was Leap Year, So—" On January 15, Joe wrote: "Dear, I am so proud and happy, to know that you are a Baptist, too. I am director of the B. Y. P. U. at our church, also treasurer of the B. Y. P. U., church clerk, and what do you think. I am one of the youngest deacons in our church. So you see I don't think there is any harm for a deacon to learn how to love someone."

Salt Lake City, Sept. 11.—(AP)—S. P. Stanton of Detroit, piloting a Martin plane in the international air derby from Windsor, Ont., to Los Angeles, arrived here at 7:18 o'clock tonight from Rock Springs, Wyo. He was forced down four miles north of Kamas by motor trouble and resumed traveling two hours later after repairing his plane.

Stanton left Rock Springs at 2:30 p. m. E. V. Hemple is traveling with him as a passenger. They plan to leave here for Los Angeles at 5 a. m. tomorrow, there to claim third prize in the race from Windsor, Ont.

one, and I do hope that you will allow me to let that someone be you.

Nellie was not averse. "I know this is leap year, and do not want to propose so soon," she wrote on January 17. "But watch out. It won't be long now."

She wrote Joe, January 24, that she was "five feet eight inches tall, weight 180 pounds, but I am tall and don't look so fat. But, goodness how I love to eat!"

These dimensions suited Joe. He sent her railroad fare and she came to El Paso. They were married the day she arrived, and began to keep house at his mother's home.

Trouble Begins For some two months they lived together. No one else in El Paso knew that they saw each other for the time when the bride stepped from the Texas and Pacific train here.

Deacon Sleet's mother, however, didn't think that her son's bride was all that she should be, and trouble began. One day in May, Deacon Sleet failed to return home at the usual hour, and after a quarrel with her mother-in-law, the bride took refuge at a neighbor's and prepared to ask a divorce on grounds of desertion.

The deacon was away only a week, however, at his old home in Alexandria, La., and returned in time to arrive at the courthouse ahead of his wife. He filed suit, August 2, asking divorce, alleging that his mail order wife refused to cook his meals, had demanded that his mother, Mrs. A. A. Sleet, leave home, and that she had threatened to kill his mother. Mrs. Sleet said that her daughter-in-law tried steaks that were "just simply awful!"

The separation has threatened to split the congregation of the Highland Park Baptist church. Sleet has resigned his position as deacon, but both husband and wife have been regular attendants at services, sitting on opposite sides of the house of worship with their personal friends about them.

ROBINSON HITS PRES. COOLIDGE

Attack Made on Administration by Democratic Candidate

Raleigh, N. C., Sept. 11.—(AP)—Firing upon foreign policies of the Coolidge administration in a speech here tonight, Senator Joe T. Robinson declared that an attempt to adopt a four billion dollar naval program, while negotiating treaties to outlaw war, is an impressive illustration of the Republican peace program.

"Why authorize an expenditure for naval purposes alone equal to the entire cost of the war between the states to the federal government?" he asked, "if in good faith we expect to avert the likelihood of future wars by the Kellogg treaties? Is there no danger that any other powers may suspicion our motives?"

The Democratic vice presidential nominee, who tonight opened his campaign in this state, declared that no one could deny that American prestige has "suffered" since the Republicans came into power and that the United States has become "unpopular with many people, particularly with those of Central and South America."

Assailing what he said were the "contemptible processes" employed by Republicans to harass and embarrass Woodrow Wilson in order to win the 1920 presidential election, the senator declared it to be his opinion that partisanship, if possible, should be avoided in foreign relations.

"Democrats have been considerate of the general welfare," he said, "in refraining from attacks on the administration for the latest policy which has rendered our government unpopular; and for failure to promote that international goodwill upon which the permanent peace of the world must rest."

"We deplore the boasts of Mr. Hoover, for political advantage that commendable advancement has been made through the policies of President Harding and President Coolidge, and feel justified in pointing out the inadequacy of the Washington conference treaties—in the matter of naval armaments."

Fire Fighting Goats Yield Mohair Profit Ponca City, Okla.—By paying $13,000 for 2,800 goats, an oil company saved $100,000 in fire insurance premiums.

The goats eat the grass and weeds on the company's 160-acre tank farm, where 14,000,000 gallons of gasoline and crude oil are stored. If the vegetation were permitted to grow, it would increase the fire hazard materially.

While insurance is an overhead cost, the goats are considered an investment as well as a protection against the fire risk. Instead of clipping coupons every six months, the oil company clips mohair twice a year to get an income from the $13,000 tied up in the flock.

Husband and Wife Play Jack Spratt Raleigh, N. C.—Jack Spratt and his wife have nothing on Mr. and Mrs. H. Kropp of this city.

Mrs. Kropp favors Herbert Hoover for president. Mr. Kropp is as positive in his support of Gov. Alfred E. Smith. The Kropps have an automobile. Mrs. Kropp bought a Hoover tag and put it on the front bumper of the car. Mr. Kropp purchased a Smith tag, moved the Hoover emblem to one side of the bumper and put the Smith tag on the other side.

Padlocks? Ha! Ha! Chicago Night Club Beauties Find Other and Better Jobs When Law Closes Doors of Windy City Cabarets

Some Chicago entertainers not worried over padlock laws.

By IONE QUINBY. Chicago—Now, that the bright lights have been put out in a majority of Chicago places where tired businessmen flocked to find the fountain of youth and mingle with the fly-by-nights, what has become of the butterfly nymphs who danced dall care away, and the girls who laughed with such divine enthusiasm at the stalest jokes?

These girls, not liquor and a chance to drink it, were the magnets that drew the masculine contingent to the bright lights, night after night, according to the proprietors and hostesses of cafes and night clubs in Chicago. Trained to dash off a smile, a bright sally or a laugh, and to be feather-footed even when their feet and hearts ached, they were like a dash of paprika in the prosaic daily menu of life.

Numerous men, pates gone bald, sought the bright lights simply because they found, there, someone who would laugh heartily when they repeated that story about "Pat and Mike," or the joke about "the day I lost my hat out the window."

With the padlocking of such places as the Club Ansonia, the Moulin Rouge, the Colissimo, the Frolics and the million-dollar Rainbo Gardens, these butterflies—dancers and songsters hired to entertain—have merely flitted to new fields.

Like Evelyn Thaw, who danced not so long ago at the Moulin Rouge; Dale Winter, pretty choir singer who got a job singing at the Colissimo—and then married "Big Jim" Colissimo, its proprietor and reputed underworld king just a few weeks before he was found murdered on the cafe's doorstep, and many others, these girls will be remembered if night clubs never open again.

Many of the night club entertainers have gone over to vaudeville, where their flattery still goes on, but diluted of "personal flavor. Some of them have been engaged as entertainers at home parties, which since the putting out of bright places such as night clubs and cafes, have come more and more into vogue.

Every little group of friends in certain circles now has its own "night club." Many of them, formerly patrons at cafes and night clubs downtown, now give weekly or semi-weekly parties in home apartments and bachelor flats, and "divvy" up the bill.

One private night club recently paid one of these girls more than she received in a month at her place, just padlocked. In one of the deluxe apartment houses, where tenants pay from $500 to $1,000 a month rent, they have a night club that would put some of the padlocked ones in the shade.

Only the most brilliant of the butterfly girls and the most nimble-footed and musically-talented sing, dance and laugh at these soirees. It costs the members plenty, but it is just as exhilarating as the old night clubs, and one doesn't have so far to come home.

GREAT RESULTS FROM COMPOUND

Read How This Medicine Helped This Woman Brainerd, Minn.—I read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in a newspaper and I have not great results from its tonic action at the Change of Life. Escanaba merchants are being urged, by the retailers' division of the Chamber of Commerce, to decorate the fronts of their establishments for the Upper Peninsula State Fair next week. A standard type of decoration has been approved and it is desired that this be employed, that the advantage of uniformity may be given to the city's gala holiday "dress up."

CHAPTER XXII
LYNDA MEETS FRED BLAQUE

"I can't afford anything new to wear to June Challer's party," said Lynda, with a sigh. "I'm going to wear the little white crepe frock that I graduated in. It won't make much difference what I wear, for with all you girls dressed in gold and silver cloth, and things like that, no one will notice me. Besides, I'm not sure I'm going. Claire told me last night that she hadn't been invited."

"Don't be a goose, Lyn; it's going to be some party. June has just annexed to herself one of the richest men in town, and she wants to make us all jealous. She has always been in the lookout for a rich man. She thought once she was going to be Mrs. Armitage, but that was before her married Stella Waldron, and she went lunny. You and I will probably be the only girls from the office if Claire does not go."

Lynda had been systematically putting the office into shape for the night, and she met Emily about ten minutes later at the front door, and hurried away to the place where the gold cloth dress had been advertised. Suddenly Emily clutched Lynda's arm.

"Look, Lyn, there is Fred Blaque. I'm sure he is going to the office to intercept Claire at the door. See, he is letting that girl who has been doing with him. Good heavens! It is Pamilla Sheston, and she is kissing him on the street, right in broad daylight. I wish Mrs. Blaque could see that. She would understand that Claire is not the only one to whom her husband is paying attention."

Lynda saw in a smart roadster, that had stopped at the traffic signal, a man with a tired expression at the wheel. He seemed to be in a great hurry to get rid of the girl, but she still clung to him for a second or two.

"Yes," said Emily, as the man moved on, when the lights changed from red to green, "that's where he is going. Wouldn't you think that wife of his would give him up? I heard the other day he had offered her a quarter of a million dollars to divorce him. I'd let any man divorce me for half that much. Just why Claire is so struck on him is a secret to me. I wonder whether she knows that Pamilla is his latest fad?"

The girls walked on to the shop. The dress that Emily wanted was charming, and Lynda told her so.

Noting her black hair, the saleswoman brought a scarlet chiffon embroidered in silver. It looked good enough to eat. Lynda, however, who had an uncanny intuition as far as her own clothes were concerned, declined it.

"I could not wear that gown, Emily," she said. "It'd feel so conspicuous."

"You are a shrinking violet—a regular, no-are-n't you, Lynda?" Emily grinned. "I wonder how long before you will want to be a conspicuous red-ppp? Do you know, you interest me very much. I think I have told you before, you know too much about some things and too little about others."

The two girls went their separate ways as they passed out of the store. Lynda took the bus. When she reached her own door, she was surprised to find that it stood wide open. Thinking that Claire had just gone in, she thought she would sit down on the porch hammock for a moment or two. She was very tired. She had never spent so much time in a shop before in all her life.

All at once she became aware that Claire was not alone. She was not talking over the telephone, either. In consternation she heard the words: "Why do you torture me, Fred? I have told you again and again, that I do not love you any more, and that I voluntarily will not be that you alone again. Why do you not try and make up with your wife and leave me alone? Surely you loved her once, did you not? You have often said to me that you would do anything to make me happy, and now when I ask you to go your own way, and let me go mine, you will not do it. Don't put your arms around me—Lynda will be coming in, in a minute, and—Oh, go, Fred!"

Lynda knew that she must make her presence known immediately. Therefore, she slammed the open door into the hall, and slowly walked into the living room.

"Lyn, this is Mr. Blaque," said Claire, tremulously.

She bowed coldly. The bow was returned with quite as much formality, and the man turned back to her friend.

"So you will not go to dinner with me tonight, Claire? I came up here tonight to take both you and your friend somewhere for something to eat, and maybe to dance a little."

"Thank you, Mr. Blaque," broke in Lynda. "It will be impossible for me to go. I have some work that is very important, and it will keep me home all evening."

"You know, Fred, that I can't go," said Claire.

The man stood for a moment as though he would like to say something more; then, looking at Lynda, he thought better of it, and strode out of the room angrily, with a gruff "Good-bye, then."

As soon as the door was shut upon him, Claire Stanhope sank into a chair and began to weep.

"Fred wanted me to go to dinner with him, and was very angry because I would not. He did not know that today I had a letter from his wife, telling me that, without his knowledge, she had filed a sealed bill for divorce, naming me as co-respondent."

"Wall, tell her to go ahead, Claire."

"Why, Lynda, do you advise me to do that? I could not stand what the papers would say about it, dear. They would make me out a regular bad woman, and you know I am only a very unfortunate one. Besides, I know if the thing were made public—which it will be—Mr. Armitage, senior, would not let me stay with the firm. Ralph's father is a great stickler against any scandal."

A sarcastic smile curled Claire's lips.

"You see, it depends entirely on whose ox is gored, Lyn."

TAMMANY ALWAYS "GENEROUS."

OGDEN MILLS, undersecretary of the treasury, declared in an address at Utica, N. Y., Saturday, that since Alfred E. Smith first became governor of New York, the revenues of the state have increased from approximately $75,000,000 to $215,000,000 but that neither tax reduction nor payment of the state debt had followed.

Mills cited these figures in a discussion of Smith's disputation of Republican claims of economy and tax reduction and declared that the governor was "not in a very good position to criticize."

The increased in state revenues, he said, has "been eaten up by increased expenditure, and far from reducing the debt and lightening the burden of interest charges, under Governor Smith it has been found necessary to break down the wise pay-as-you-go policy followed for so many years and to embark on an intensive borrowing program.

The wet and dry question will probably count more in the present campaign than anything else, but the statement of Secretary Mills relative to New York finances will bear great weight with many who look upon Smith with disfavor because of his Tammany affiliations. Granting readily enough that Tammany isn't nearly as bad as it was once, it cannot be gainsaid that New York Democracy, of which Tammany is the hub and heart, always "takes care of its own," and that means money, money, money.

If Al Smith were to be elected president, it is assured that his fiscal policies would be as different from those of Calvin Coolidge as the poles are apart. The taxpayers of the nation would pay a huge price for the privilege of basking in the sunshine of Al Smith's smile in the White House.

"Pat Kelly Sane," says a headline. "Wouldn't it be rather risky to tell a man named Pat Kelly that he wasn't?"

TEACHING MOTORISTS NEW TRICKS.

A COLLEGE professor in psychology offers a unique suggestion for us grown-up motorists that isn't a bit complimentary. Yet he isn't as much to blame for the idea as we ourselves are.

The suggestion is that we be taught the habit of shifting gears whenever we are to cross railroad crossings. Whether it is instituted in us as a habit by force or training doesn't matter. Perhaps most of us would have to be forced in to it.

At any rate, the wise professor's idea is that ultimately sight of a railroad crossing, or even the words "railroad crossing," would immediately start the subconscious thought of the motorist to actuating his muscles toward shifting gears.

Thus the crossing accident rate would be lowered considerably if not altogether eliminated.

Don't reply with the old maxim, "You can't teach an old dog new tricks," for Prof. Thorndike, the eminent Columbia psychologist, has proof that adults learn much faster than the younger set. So there's hope for the professor's idea.

However, there are 21,000,000 motorists in the United States and this number is growing much faster than railroad crossings. It would be almost an impossible job to get these into the habit of shifting gears at crossings, for by the time all of the present motorists acquired it, the next generation would be ready for school.

No, the best way to keep motorists from getting killed at railroad crossings is to eliminate the crossings—like taking a hammer away from the baby.

THE BEST DRESSED BURGLAR

THERE ARE many kinds of fame in this world. It is only natural for man to seek distinction, and there are so many different fields that nearly everyone ought to be able to achieve it in some fashion.

The other day, in Paris, the police arrested a young burglar. When they searched his apartment they found he had 125 suits of clothes, for each of which he had a hat, shoes, shirt, tie and handkerchiefs to match.

Proudly the young second-story worker explained that he was the best dressed burglar in Paris—indeed, in all of Europe, if not in the world. He was still preening himself over this when they led him away to prison.

There are, as we said, various kinds of fame. Holding the title of the world's best dressed burglar is one of the oddest.

What has become of the old-fashioned man who wore sleeve bands and garters and suspenders "to match"?

NOT OUT OF THE JUNGLE YET.

THREE PEOPLE died in New Britain, Conn., the other day after drinking some home brew. Their deaths came so quickly that the police got suspicious; and, analyzing the beer, they found it had been doped with cyanide, one of the most deadly poisons known.

An investigation followed, and Samuel Weiss, brother of one of the victims, was arrested. In a short time he confessed. He had poisoned the beer to kill his brother, with whose wife he was infatuated. He was sorry the other two men had died, but that couldn't be helped.

Instead of being remorseful, Weiss expressed sorrow that his brother had died so easily. He had hoped, he said, that his brother would "die like a dog, in the yard." A little later he began to weep; but he assured the officers that his conscience was not bothering him. He was weeping because he feared he himself would be hanged.

That little tale, taken from the daily papers, is about as depressing an item of news as you could find. The shocking brutality and callousness of the murderer, coupled with his craven fear for his own hide, reveal those murky depths in human nature that we ordinarily keep covered. Worse yet, we know that there are reserves of untapped cowardice and cruelty in most of us that make us, remotely, kin to this poisoner; and it isn't a pleasant thought.

Yet we needn't let it discourage us.

After all, it is only a few centuries since that sort of conduct was the rule and not the exception. The human race started its long upward climb by being cowardly, cruel, vengeful and murderous beyond belief. There were few restraints or niceties of conduct in the stone age. If a man wanted something his neighbor owed, he knocked his neighbor on the head and took it, provided he was big enough; and in all the world there was no one to say he was wrong.

That happens to be the sort of foundation on which we have built. Amazingly, incomprehensibly, people have groped upward from that rude jungle law. They have erected temples, written music, framed high codes of conduct for themselves, learned how to sacrifice, their own lives for intangible ideals, taught themselves to master their own desires in the interests of order and decency; and the spectacle is both astounding and inspiring.

It happens that the battle is not yet won. The jungle man still exists, below the surface. Once in a while he breaks loose and we have a lynching, a Snyder-Gray case or a spectacle like this one in New Britain. But we have reached the point where such things can shock and horrify us, at least. If our victory isn't complete, we have the vision of what it should be.

Prohibition officers in Philadelphia have found a "blue book" of bootleggers. It will be published. But "Who's Who in America" will still be regarded as the standard compilation of distinguished Americans.

Even the President of the United States must sometime bring his annual vacation to a close.

THE WAY OF THE WORLD

By GROVE PATTERSON.

STUDENTS IN MEXICO

It is worth noting that 300 Americans attended the summer season of the Mexican National university in Mexico City this year. At the closing meeting one of the professors made an address in English. He said:

"It is time we destroyed the archaic stone of the Chinese wall separating Mexico from other nations, intellectually, morally and educationally. Isolation and mutual suspicion of nations and peoples in the past resulted from lack of information concerning neighboring peoples.

"Now nations no longer can live apart from one another. Improved means of communication, economic interdependence, political bonds and racial aspirations have long been bridging the distances separating people and races, and moulding the international mind. Governments feel the need of peaceful, international harmony, of which you by your presence here in the Mexican National university, are harbingers and symbols."

This is the kind of talk we are glad to have come over the wires. The United States and Mexico ought to be the best of friends, and that friendship ought to be promoted on both sides of the border.

THE FLYING INFANT

Charles L. Lawrence, head of the Wright Aeronautical corporation, says his concern will probably deliver 1800 airplane engines this year. That's about half the country's output. More significant is Mr. Lawrence's prediction. Next year, he says, his company should turn out 6000 engines. Accidents by "stunters" and inexperienced airmen won't stop the real business of flying.

ANDREWS AGAIN

Roy Chapman Andrews, great explorer, after a 5000-mile journey with automobiles into the Mongolian desert and across the plains of central Asia, finds the remains of an animal so big a tall man with a high hat could stand under it. Dr. Andrews finds remains of ancient civilization, intimating that part of what is now China may have been more densely populated 20,000 years ago than it is now.

We are all indebted to the few men who, like Roy Chapman Andrews, are willing to undergo all sorts of hardships to place toger an ancient and interesting world. Among the great heroes of life are those who add to human knowledge.

WHAT NEXT?

The imagination goes out of business when we learn that experiments are being made in transmitting photographs from an airplane by radio to a broadcasting station.

Travel is said to enlarge the vocabulary. We have noticed it sometimes broadens the "a"—Council Bluffs newspaper.

Who's Who in Timely Views

AMERICANS NOW CALLED FINE AIRSHIP BUILDERS.

By CAPTAIN ANTON HEINEN
Aeronautical Engineer.

Europe, in spite of its long, practical experience, has nothing to teach Americans in regard to building and designing lighter-than-air ships. I went abroad to see if there was anything I could learn to help in the American design and came back to discover that I might have stayed at home. The Americans have nothing to learn from Europe about airships.

The new airship designed for the United States navy is far ahead of either the British or German airships in simplicity and strength. It will be easier to handle and to take care of than any airship I have ever seen, and it has a high degree of obvious efficiency.

Its design has an enormously high factor of safety in point of comparison with the European airships now nearly completed.

All the weaknesses and troubles which I have encountered in seventeen years of active airship experience have been overcome in this all-American product. I would rather command this airship than any I have ever handled in flight.

The latest German Zepppelin, the LZ-127, built for transoceanic service between Spain and South America, shows no substantial advance over former Zepplins. This is probably due to the international situation, which hinders airship development work.

The British ship R-100, on the other hand, contains a number of interesting and significant developments. It is a distinct improvement over the past. The R-100 is designed for service between England and India. Its designer, Captain Burney, has made some notable contributions to the science of lighter-than-air engineering.

The longer the flight the more certainly can the schedule of an airship be maintained, because the elements, contrary and favoring, will balance themselves over a long period of flight. Airplanes are always subject to the reliability of their motors, for they must inevitably come down immediately if their power is cut off.

Airships, however, can hover in the air and remain safely aloft, though all their motors may be under repair simultaneously. The useful load of an airship, moreover, is infinitely greater than the useful carrying capacity of airplanes.

Heavier-than-air machines will have great utility in short, swift jumps, but the through trunk lines of the air will in future be served by commercial airships. This makes it particularly important that the navy should have taken the lead in calling for designs for the two giant airships for which it has appropriations available, and especially gratifying that American engineers have been able to turn out such a superior all-American design.

LYRICS OF LIFE

By Douglas Malloch

THESE BOYS AND GIRLS.

They give us many a day of care,
These boys of ours, these girls of ours,
And many a night we wonder where
They give us, these boys and girls of ours.

They give us many an anxious day
And many a night to kneel and pray
That God will bring them through somehow,
These boys of ours, these girls of ours.

Things once were wicked, they allow,
These boys of ours, these girls of ours,
But people think quite different now,
They say, these boys and girls of ours,
And we can only weep and wait
And pray to heaven not too late
They seek the highroad, and the straight,
These boys of ours, these girls of ours.

And in our hearts we know they will,
These boys of ours, these girls of ours,
Believe them, help them, love them still
The same, these boys and girls of ours,
Our boys will wed with honest men,
And we shall both be glad again
We had these boys and girls of ours.

GOT AN OBSTINATE COUGH? THEN HAVE AN X-RAY TAKEN

Do you remember the case I reported of an old sea captain who had a raucous cough which was found to be a reflex due to a grain of rice that had been lodged in his ear for 25 years or so, after the rice shower at his wedding party?

It reminded Mrs. J. of her experience. It happened to her 23 years ago, before dental anesthesia was perfected to the extent it is now.

"I had five teeth to be extracted. One of them was a pivot tooth. I tore things up pretty dreadfully during my anesthesia, and when I came to, the dentist was holding me around the neck, my husband was sitting across my feet, and my doctor was holding my arms across my chest. After this I developed a bronchitis cough for which I was treated without results. One day, three months later, as I leaned way over, one-half of that pivot tooth came up into my mouth! It was evidently lodged down in my bronchial tubes some place. My doctor wanted me to tell the dentist, but I didn't and I guess he never did know; so you see we can suffer a lot and no one know the reason."

"MRS. J."

When there is an obscure cough that doesn't respond to treatment it is always a good idea to have an X-ray of the chest and throat. Sometimes foreign bodies—tacks, teeth, pins, etc.—are swallowed in childhood and later, unknowingly, and they will be disclosed by the X-ray.

There are doctors who specialize in extracting these articles through the mouth and windpipe (trachea), with marvelous instruments which have been perfected in late years, so no cutting is necessary.

Club Foot.

L. 27 years old, had infantile paralysis when she was 8, and as a result her feet are slightly clubbed. Is there any remedy?

Club foot (talipes) is a permanent twisting of the foot into a deformity, so that the patient has to walk on the toes, on the heels or sides of the feet, or certain combinations of these.

The cause of club foot are congenital or acquired. The congenital form may be due to arrest of development or some intra-uterine mechanical pressure from some reason. The acquired cases may come from infantile paralysis, such as L.'s, or other diseases from injury followed by contracting scars.

For the child born with this condition, treatment should be begun immediately, and in most instances can be cured while the bones are still mouldable. Naturally the treatment must be given by a competent orthopedic surgeon. Manipulations and massage twice daily, and then at the age of three or four months, corrective plaster cases are applied. (Cochrane). The child has to be seen from time to time all through the growing period and tendency to relax, prevented.

Other children, who have congenital club feet which have been neglected, and cases due to infantile paralysis, etc., also can be greatly helped. The treatment may mean an operation under anesthesia.

"So do not be discouraged. I there is no doubt you can be helped. Take your case to an orthopedic specialist. If you don't know of any in your locality, ring up the County Medical Society of your city."

Heidelberg Duels Now Fought Secretly

Heidelberg (P)—Any young man seen walking the streets of Heidelberg with a gash on his head or face must do some tall explaining. The police have orders to take him to police headquarters, where he must narrate the genesis of his "accident."

Republican Germany is determined to put an end to student dueling, once the favorite sport of aristocratic student fraternities. Century-old customs, however, are not to be eradicated by a simple ordinance, and secret dueling continues.

A fresh gash in the face or on the head is presumptive evidence that a duel has been fought. The students have developed a wonderful technique of alibi, however, and many a time the duelist gets away with his "proof" that he fell into a glass door or was accidentally struck by falling glass. Nevertheless the vigilance of the police has done much to reduce dueling to a minimum.

SMITH ATTENDS STATE FAIR

WORLD LOVES SOUSA TUNES

Famous Bandmaster Plays Wide Variety of Music

For twelve years John Philip Sousa, who comes to the Delft Thursday for two concerts was at Washington with the Marine Band, of which he was conductor. He saw presidents come and go, to the accompaniment of his music. But now and again he would leave the Capitol to take the band on trips around the country. He became very well known and it was his great popularity and the popularity of the marches and other compositions belonging to that period that determined him to form his own band. He began at Manhattan Beach and it wasn't long before he began tours that took him round the globe.

In the days at Washington Mr. Sousa composed the "Presidential Polonaise" for indoor assemblages at the White House. "Semper Fidelis" was written with the idea in mind of being played for outdoor reviews. One of the well-remembered and ever popular marches, "The Washington Post" was written for that newspaper to be played at the reading of essays by school children who had won prizes in a contest conducted by that publication. The irony of it all is that he sold the composition for $35, and it would have brought him a fortune in royalties. It has been played everywhere and vies in favor with "Stars and Stripes Forever."

Not a Note Changed. It is interesting to learn the history of that latter march. He was returning from Europe and as he was pacing the deck of the steamship he sensed the rhythmic beat of a band. There was a sort of tom tom cadence. It persisted. Gradually the march took form. Throughout the voyage a band seemed to be playing—never taking on some definite march melody. Not a note was on paper but when New York was reached the march was complete. He set it down on music sheets and "Stars and Stripes Forever" as it is known today by millions of people was written. Not a note was ever changed.

Balanced Programs. Ten operas and hundreds of other compositions are the work of this gifted man. Each work is original and distinctive. It is lasting and is played over and over again. But when Lieut. Commander Sousa prepares a program he includes in its selection from a world-wide range of composers. "I never consider the nationality of a piece," he said recently. "My programs are prepared solely with the idea of entertaining. The waltz, the ballad, the suite, the music of America are included. My band has one of the greatest of musical libraries and almost any work of quality is found there. I do not hesitate to offer a tinkling tune and a symphonic tragedy on the same program and always there are marches. I have profound admiration for the music of Wagner, of Beethoven and the great masters but I do not overlook the fact that immortal tunes may have been born in a cotton field or in a barnyard. "Turkey in the Straw" to me is a magic melody—anyone may be proud to have written it. As for jazz—it can be good or bad. Its popularity is due to its strongly marked rhythm. I feel that it will disappear. But it will endure as long as people listen to music with their feet rather than with their brains."

To Direct E. H. S. Band. Lieut. Commander Sousa has consented to direct the Escanaba high school band during the intermission at the matinee at the Delft Thursday. The members of the school band are highly elated at the opportunity to play under the

Indians Obey Sam Houston; Cling to Tribal Acres

Livingston, Tex.—The advice of a white man long dead still is law to the Alabama Indians, who cling to their little principality in the heart of the east Texas forests.

When Sam Houston was governor of Texas, he admonished these Indians never to sell the land the Texas legislature gave them. That was almost three-quarters of a century ago, and today the tribe of 250 isolated red men still holds his words sacred.

The new chief, Charlie Thompson, maker of arrows, ruled upon his recent election that the Alabamas shall remain in their village in the Big Thicket and keep faith with their friend Houston. Then Charlie doffed his feathered head dress and returned to taciturnity and his work bench.

The Alabamas came to the Big Thicket from the direction of the rising sun more than a century ago, when Texas was the outmost frontier. They built their village among the great trees, and they had been dwelling there for a generation when Houston himself signed the bill giving them two square miles of land, about 15 miles from Livingston.

Sam Houston told the red men to keep to themselves and mind their own business. From that day to this they have followed his advice literally. They have never married outside the tribe, have never spoken any tongue but their own, and have never permitted their women to speak to a white man.

Recognizing the need of some outside contact, however, the Indians have taken one white man into their confidence. He is C. S. Fain of Livingston, who has been named assistant chief and delegated to look after the outside interests of the tribe.

The Alabamas are very poor. Their homes are huts. Their beds are of moss and straw and their food is chiefly corn. But though their reservation is meager and their wants are many, they make no complaint nor ask for aid.

Many houses set on fire by the sun's rays were destroyed in Spain during the recent hot spell.

'Happiest Boy' Goes With Byrd

"I'm the Most Ticked Kid in the World," Says Paul Siple, Scout Chosen to Go to Antarctic, but He's a Modest Lad, Even Though He Has Sixty Merit Badges.

Paul Siple with his parents, and at right, Paul as an Eagle Scout. Erie, Pa. There isn't a happier boy in the United States today than "the best scout in the country," Paul A. Siple, chosen to represent the Boy Scouts of America in Commander Richard E. Byrd's Expedition to the antarctic. Although he demonstrated his superiority in contest with five other scouts in New York, and the praise of townsmen and scout executives is ringing in his ears, he conducts himself with a modesty that is reminiscent of Lindbergh. "I'm the most tickled kid in the world," he remarked to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Clyde L. Siple, "but of course it's hard on the five other fellows (in the final competitions). The tests were stiff and I guess they had a hard time making their selection. If Paul is the happiest person in the land, his mother and his father are not far behind him in registering joy. They can scarcely realize that their little boy has grown old enough to take a man's place in such an important undertaking. His mother keeps murmuring, "It doesn't seem possible that this can be happening to our Paul." While neighbors streamed in Gladstone on business Friday. Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Grandchamp and family, who have been visiting relatives here, returned by motor to their home in Duluth Saturday.

goods, they are rich in love and understanding. Ever since Paul first expressed a wish to make Scouting his life work his father has tried to aid him. "We've spent hours together in the back yard," he reminisces, "pondering over Scout problems or combing the fields for insects. I do not regret one hour I spent with Paul—I have been repaid a thousand fold." The hours passed in Scout research will stand him in good stead in his position of special assistant to Byrd and the right-hand man of the expedition's Scientists. As the folks kept running in and out and a neighbor's daughter bestowed a shy kiss on "her Eskimo's" blushing cheek, Paul's 16-year-old grandmother, Mrs. Harriett Alliman sat back in the corner and rocked, a bit bewildered by the bustle going on around her. "Just Lucky," He Says As he showed me some of the gifts which the jubilant townsfolk had given him Paul continually managed to veer the talk from himself to the Scout movement. "Honestly, I don't know how I came to be chosen, just lucky, I guess," he grinned. And that same boyish grin probably had a lot to do with his selection to accompany Byrd, for the personality of each boy was given careful consideration. "It's going to be hard to leave mother and dad," he confided, "but it is the chance of a lifetime for me and they won't worry because they know I couldn't be in any better company than Commander Byrd's." Just as Lindbergh would rather talk about his ship than himself, Paul prefers to talk of Commander Byrd. "I believe I have the greatest opportunity that could come to any boy—to serve under Commander Byrd," he says. Eighty-two Scouts applied for membership in the expedition and six of those went to New York for the final elimination tests. Byrd, himself, met the boys, although he refused to take the responsibility of making a selection. Paul's Great Chance A place in the Byrd expedition means to Paul a chance to make himself a better Scout—to come back from the Antarctic with an almost inexhaustible fund of material of interest to boys. He is proud to know that his appointment has created tremendous interest in the Scout movement and he hopes he will come back better equipped to

HOUSE LOOTING IS CLEARED UP

14 Year Old Boy Confesses to Thefts; Goods Returned

Most of the loot taken from four homes on the south side was recovered yesterday by police with the apprehension of a 14-year-old boy, who confessed to the burglaries. The boy said he committed the thefts alone. A paper carton, which was used by the boy in returning to the home of Ivan G. English some of the goods taken from his home last week, furnished police with the clue which led to the solution of the burglary mystery. Numerous articles, including jewelry, books, revolvers and money, which were taken from the homes of John P. Norton, Rev. J. B. Hubbard, H. P. Bourke and I. G. English, were given up by the

HOUSE LOOTING IS CLEARED UP

While Mr. English was vacationing with his family at Saull Ste. Marie, he received a letter, the writer of which offered to reveal the name of the person who entered his home if he would post a reward of $30. Mr. English decided to give the prowler a chance to make good by returning the goods taken. A few nights later upon returning home from downtown, Mr. English found some of the stolen articles in a neatly packed paper carton on the porch. As not all the goods were brought back, he offered the offender another chance to return the loot, but this he failed to do. Cartons Is Clue. Meanwhile, police were conducting an investigation in an effort to locate the loot taken from other homes in addition to that taken from the English home. On the carton they found the name of "L. L. Bean, Freeport, Maine." Getting in touch with Freeport authorities, they learned that a shipment had been made by the Freeport company to an Escanaba family. This clue led them to the boy, who yesterday confessed. All the articles taken from the English home were returned, but there are still a few items, which were taken from other homes, which are missing. The boy seemed to have difficulty yesterday in remembering where he had hidden all the stolen goods. The first steam laundry in the Dominican Republic has just been opened.

Rotarians Hear Historical Talk by Marquette Man

Rev. Charles Boyd, of Marquette, last night gave to members of the Escanaba Rotary club and their wives, one of the most interesting and intimate survey of facts in the history of the upper peninsula of Michigan ever presented in this city. The illustrated lecture by Mr. Boyd was arranged as a "Ladies' Night" program for the club and proved one of the most enjoyable meetings ever held by the Rotary club in this city.

Rev. Boyd has for a number of years made a study of the history of Hiawatha land and has succeeded in assembling an imposing array of historical facts and incidents, which he has converted into stereoscopic views, making it possible to illustrate an interesting lecture.

Rev. Boyd's collection of pictures and facts include both personages and scenes from the earliest days of this section of Michigan and the whole constitutes a very valuable historical reference.

Last night's audience was thoroughly delighted with the lecture by Mr. Boyd and their pleasure was finely demonstrated in a tremendous ovation that was given the speaker at the close of the program. The meeting was held in the lecture room of the First Presbyterian church, where the women of that church served an excellent dinner at 6:30 o'clock.

Paris' Oldest House Occupied by Laundry

Paris—Seven centuries have passed and kings, emperors, wars and revolutions have come and gone, but the oldest house in Paris is doing business at the old stand.

It is a laundry now in the cathedral of Notre Dame. The laundry isn't that old, but the owner says the pedigree of the building goes back to Louis IX.

The date of the house, 1240, is proudly displayed on a stone set in the street wall and the laundry's sign is "At the oldest house in Paris."
