

SCHOOL EXHIBIT LARGEST EVER

Many Examples of Students Work in Display at Fair

The schools of the upper peninsula have a very large exhibit and it has been found necessary to crowd the various displays.

The managers of the fair will probably have an entire building next year for school and club work exhibits, thereby showing the work to better advantage and also making room for other displays in the main building.

A few of the prizes are listed here although many prizes were awarded to other exhibits.

Seven counties were represented in the school work. Delta, Schoolcraft, Alger, Marquette, Menominee, Luce, Dickinson and Baraga. There was a beautiful display of art work, penmanship, water colors, crayon, charcoal, pencil and pen and ink and a fine display of exceptionally good designs.

Some of the work included interior decorating, costume designing, manual training and some very fine free hand pencil drawing from the rural schools, of Marquette county.

One display is an Ivory Soap Circus, where the entire display is made from ivory soap and painted, the chariots, animals, clowns, equestriennes and every thing in the three ring circus was cut and made from soap.

Another attractive display which carried off a first prize of $5.00 is a replica of St. Joseph's high school, made by George Stock.

Escanaba high school manual training display was awarded the first prize, $25.00, in general exhibits and many pieces of furniture were handed blue ribbons.

St. Joseph's school was awarded first, second and third prize in science note books.

St. Anne's school won first prize in number work booklets in the lower grades.

Escanaba grade schools won first in water colors, lettering, crayon, cut outs and kindergarten construction.

The cut-out work is a big division and the Escanaba and St. Joseph schools had large displays.

MARATHONERS GET "GOOFY"

Excessive Loss of Sleep Causes Queer Actions at Dance

The marathon dancers at the Coliseum are getting "goofy." This is the term in the parlance of the marathon business which is applied to the condition of temporary insanity which results from excessive loss of sleep.

Two couples dropped out of the $2500 endurance contest yesterday morning, utterly exhausted and their nerves unstrung. This leaves six couples in the contest which went into its 149th hour at 3:01 this morning.

Colombo D'Andrea and Louis Duchaine of Iron Mountain were unable to go on at 4:45 yesterday morning after 126 hours 45 minutes of dancing. Louis Coolman and Joyce Lindstrom, both of Escanaba, followed an hour later, the girl awaking from her sleep during the one-hour early morning rest period. The two girls both suffered from leg soreness and exhaustion, and also both D'Andrea and Coolman were weak.

D'Andrea was quite "goofy," as they say, during the night. He imagined he was a clothing merchant, and in shouting his wares offered to sell a pair of pants for $20 and deliver them by airplane. To a friend he bargained, he would sell the same pair for $4.95. In the afternoon after several hours rest, D'Andrea was fully recovered and he and his partner departed for their homes in Iron Mountain.

Miss Lindstrom also went into a trance after waking up at 5:45 o'clock in the morning. She imagined she was on a farm. It seems, saying to Coolman: "Look, Louie, it's going to rain. W'd better hurry up if we want to get the hay all in."

The dancers were taken to the U. P. State Fair on a motor truck yesterday afternoon, and put on performance in front of the grandstand crowd.

Thrown from his motorcycle and landing on his head while going at a high speed in a race at London recently, M. K. H. Binley was saved from injury by his crash helmet.

JELKE GOOD LUCK MARGARINE

VICTORIES for the athletes who make up Chicago's famous Cubs team depend upon the players being kept well fed and happy. Only the finest of foods are provided them on railroad dining cars and in the hotels where the club is quartered while on tour or at home.

Surely, you would say, if there was any difference between the flavor of Jelke GOOD LUCK Margarine and the most expensive spread-for-bread, these expert judges of fine food would quickly detect it.

Yet when the twenty-seven players were asked to taste both and to tell which was which, not one man was able to distinguish one from the other.

The Challenge Flavor Test made at Wrigley Field, Chicago, just before a 10 to 5 victory over the Phillies. Every member of the team was on hand. Not a single player could tell any difference

If the Cubs cannot find any difference, who can? Can you? Are you sure? Make the test yourself. Let your family decide. See how the Challenge Test points for you the way to happier, better housekeeping through GOOD LUCK economy. Get a package today.

CHAPTER XXX THE END OF AN IMPERFECT DAY

In her pity for Ralph Armitage, Lynda Fenton had felt toward him just as she would have felt toward David if life had dealt him such a blow.

Ralph had asked in every way possible for her sympathy, and when she innocently gave it to him, he had told her she must not stay any longer.

"Good Lord! What an innocent you must be! We'll soon remedy that, however. I'll get Armi to come. He won't be in bed long, will he?"

"He wasn't in bed this morning, Emily. He was lounging in a gorgeous robe. They had split up the sleeves over his dislocated shoulder," said Lyn, innocently telling Emily what that young woman desired to know.

"But do you think that Mr. Armitage would come to my house? He is pretty democratic, but I did not know he would be as democratic as that."

"Democratic, my hat! Ralph Armitage can be the most snobbish person living if it suits him; but he likes you. Don't you understand that? He would turn down an invitation from the Prince of Wales for you."

"I wish you had not told me about his tactics, Emily." "I had to, Lyn. Any girl who becomes a secretary to Armi has to be in his office in not short."

"Please, Miss Fenton, Mr. Armitage told me to give you this, and wait for your reply." "Dear Lynda: (A sick man may call you dear Lynda, may he not?"

"After you went away today, I felt that the sun had ceased to shine, and that my room was full of lurking shadows. I began also to think that perhaps you might feel as though I had not wished you to stay. I did not mean to be too abrupt in sending you away; but, my dear girl, I could not stand the gaff another minute. It was because I wanted you to stay so much that I told you to go. I felt my taut nerves, stretched to the breaking point, were suddenly going to pieces, and I was vain enough not to want you to see me in a condition verging on hysteria."

"Nothing that you could have done would have helped matters in the least; and I did not want to frighten you, so I thought the best thing to do was to try to decently carry on by myself."

"Tonight I am wretched, unhappy and blue, and it seems to me that if I could just talk to you a little while, I might forget the pain of knitting bones."

"Yes, dear girl, I know it is very late, but I'm sure the ride in the moonlight will rest you. I fear that I tired you this afternoon. Get Claire Stanhope to come with you, and make me a call. The man will bring you to me and take you back home. This house is so lonely that it drives me mad."

"I hear you say that you know this is true, as only a mad man would write a letter like this to you. I hope you can read it, however. You know I'm writing it with my left hand. Isn't it lucky that when I was at college I used to be able to write, after a fashion, with either hand? I did not know, then, that I would bless Fate that I could do so; otherwise I could not have sent this badly-written note of longing to you."

"Now, dear, I'm waiting impatiently for you. Tonight you must come, not as my secretary, but as an understanding friend, whose very presence will calm my unhappy heart."

A DAY. A day is like a suitcase is— How much it holds, that all depends. One man gets little into his. A tangled heap of odds and ends. Another seems to find a place. For many things, and packs his day. With worldly profit, deeds of grace, And has a little room for play.

ANSWERS TO MOTHERS. God could not be everywhere; therefore He made mothers. —Jewish Proverb. Baby Training. On my journey from Los Angeles, returning from my vacation, among the interesting people I met were two darling babies. (Are babies people?) The first was baby Betty, a darling little girl of 11 months. She was brought into the women's retiring room by her young mother, who placed her on the toilet seat. The mother told me that she had begun to train Betty's bowels at about the age of two months, with a little vessel held in her lap; at the age of five months, she began to place her regularly on the vessel for her urination, and now, at the age of 11 months, she was a confirmed dry.

Bleach Clams to Please Purchasers

Orris Island, Me. (P)—Clams with pure white shells may taste no better than those of grayish black hue, yet they bring higher prices. Therefore Lower Casco Bay clammers are bleaching their catches.

A car has been constructed with slatted sides and a flooring over which at all times there are a few inches of water. The fishermen bring their clams to this car where they are bought and then distributed by the owner of the water covered flooring. A few days' exposure to the light and the sun doesn't tan the clams; on the contrary, it bleaches shells to spotless white.

Noted Frenchmen Die "In Harness"

Paris—"Dying in harness" is becoming common among the after-war generation of Frenchmen, long described as a race whose workers, intellectuals and others were wont to take things easy or retire after fifty.

Francis de Croisset, author, dramatist and member of the French Academy, was found dead at his writing table at eight in the morning. His face was lying on an uncompleted manuscript. His antique quill pen still held firmly in his hand over a half-written word.

Gustave-Adolphe Clement-Bayard, one of the pioneers of the automobile industry in France, was driving one of his latest models in the streets of Paris, when he pulled up to the curb and leaned over the steering-wheel dead: He was 81 years old.

Canada is now the leading customer for American passenger automobiles, with Australia second and Argentina third in the number of cars bought.

Over-fed and under-fed children are quite prone to have eczema. The over-fat child will be helped by having its food limited, and the undernourished children must have more food. This sometimes seems to aggravate the eczema at first, but it will be better nourished, the disease will not clear up.

Local irritations can also cause eczema. Picard, in one of the numbers of the Archives of Pediatrics, calls attention to an eczema which comes out in cold weather and clears up during the summer. Sometimes soap, or the secretions of the skin, if allowed to accumulate, will cause it. But we have to believe that there must be a predisposition, perhaps brought on by wrong diet, which also acts in these cases; otherwise more children would have it.

Any child suffering from eczema should be taken to a child-

ADDING FRILLS TO MOTOR COMFORT

The evolution of motor accessories is an interesting history of the development of luxury as a necessity of travel. When the limousine was a novelty, it was enough to ride in one, and the idea of adding all manner of luxurious accessories had not yet dawned. We were content to suffer the loss of our usual, at-home elegance, in this swift and opulent means of journeying about.

The first change was the arrival of special motor toilettes, created in consideration of the unique demand of traveling by automobile. And what changes these early motor-car fashions have undergone. Fashion creators have found means of eliminating those great enemies of comfort for the automobile traveler, dust, gasoline fumes, and loss of freshness to costumes from cramped quarters.

The automobile ensemble today, in appearance, very much like any other smart traveling outfit. The increased comfort of the car itself, with its luggage storage space, makes it a frequent changes. And the fabrics used by couturiers, as well as the lines of dress and coat for the car add immeasurably to both comfort and elegance. And the automobile hat. The logic of wearing a hat which covers well the hair, and gives it protection is irrefutable, but the smart hat today sits on

Legacy for Cats

MAN WHO FEEDS STRAY FELINES REMEMBERED FOR WORK IN WILL OF PHILANTHROPIST; BEQUEATHED MONTHLY SUM

Baltimore, Md.—If a fellow has a big heart and is poor, what can he do to express his desire to be helpful?

Faced with that problem, an elderly Baltimorean fed cats.

And it was as the anonymous "man who feeds the cats" that he has sprung into fame and money.

Julius M. Goldenberg died recently, the wealthy owner of department stores in Washington, D. C., and Baltimore. And he spent a good deal of time before his death walking the streets and looking for people who needed half dollars. He, too, had a big heart. Once he chanced upon a man engaged in a strange pastime in Baltimore. It was the cat-man of Baltimore.

When Goldenberg died it was discovered that a clause in his will provides for a $20-a-month income for "the man who feeds the cats at Mount Royal Station in Baltimore."

That man is William Duvall, who lives in the dingy little room downtown in Baltimore.

Duvall was found at his accustomed haunts near the station. He just fed Jerry, the one remaining Mount Royal Station cat, was heading toward a house a blocks away on Brevard street. A coat pocket bulged with a package of sliced bologna as he shuffled rather painfully up the street. He has arthritis, he said, "but I sort of make out to feed the poor things that ain't got nobody to look out for 'em. Come along with me. I got to see a little friend up here a piece."

Before the doorstep of a deserted house on Brevard street he stopped and chirruped softly, and a tiny, frowny little black dog bounced out. The old man reached in his pocket for the bologna.

"The little tyke won't eat raw meat," he explained, "so I gotta buy it cooked. He belonged to a barber who moved away and left him here. He sleeps under the steps.

The Goldenberg will provides $20-a-month income also for two Washington negro beggars, James and Louis Johnson, who received 50 cents a day from Goldenberg for 19 years. James, who is uneducated, is trying to prevail upon the estate to pay him 50 cents a day, as Goldenberg did in the past.

Louis knows better, and wants the $20-a-month.

Building Collapse Brings Death, Injury to Many

Excavations under a tailor shop are believed to have caused the collapse of these buildings on a downtown street in Shelby, N. C., killing and injuring over a score. Three of the dead were employees of the First National bank, one of the three buildings which fell. The other two collapsed structures were the tailor shop and a grocery store. Three known dead were recovered.

Youngest Bank Head First Proves Worth In Movie Business

St. Louis, Mo.—Gregory Dowling, age 25, who is believed to be the youngest bank president in the country, is one scion of wealth here who accepted his present position only after he had proved his mettle.

Young Dowling and his bride of a year, the former Miss Carol Murray, of Kansas City, have returned here after battling out an installment-buying existence in the film colony as both struggled for success.

Heads for Hollywood.

Four years ago young Dowling left St. Louis for Hollywood in quest of some of the wealth reported in that famous settlement. Unlike most young men, however, he picked the business end of the movie business for his endeavor. Starting as a stenographer, he advanced to secretary of a production company before he headed the pleadings of a fond father to return to the banking business.

Always the son refused his father's offers and continued to advance in his new job. Finally the father, John J. Dowling, grew determined and bought another bank. Then he sent this telegram to his son:

"Have bought another bank. Will you accept presidency? Letter following."

Son Still Skeptical.

Not to be stampeded by rosy promises, the son fired this reply back at his father:

"Thanks for offer. Will await letter."

The letter outlined suitable terms and young Dowling proceeded to sell the furniture he had bought on installments, and then started across country in the motor car he and his wife had purchased the same way.

Election Results Forecasted By Outcome of Yearly Crops

Babson Park, Mass., Sept. 21—History clearly shows that the outcome of the crops has a vital effect on the outcome of national elections. Politicians know this, and that is why they are watching crop conditions so carefully. In every Presidential year since 1896, excepting 1912, the party in power has stayed in power when the value of the five leading grain crops has shown an increase over the preceding year. Conversely, in every election year when crop values were lower than in the preceding year, the party in power has been ousted. It did not matter whether it happened to be the Republicans or the Democrats.

"Consequently the Republicans, being now in power, are greatly encouraged by the prospect that year of higher crop values than in 1927. Will Rogers spoke truly the other day when he said: 'The farmers starve three years out of four, but the good year is always election year. It really looks like the Lower has in cahoots with the Republicans. . . . Even up to nominating time this year the farmers wanted relief, now they are so prosperous they would be insulted if you suggested it to them. . . . So the only way the Democrats will ever get the farmers' vote is to hold the election in the Spring, when they are broke.'

Past Elections and Crops.
"It is extremely interesting to study the relation between crops and elections in past campaigns. In reality the Bryan 'Free Silver' scare in 1896 was only part of the reason why McKinley defeated him. Crop values were poor. Statistics show that the total value to the farmers, in the Fall of 1896 of corn, wheat, oats, barley, and rye was some $20,000,000 lower than in the preceding year. The corn crop especially was very poor. Business conditions likewise were on the downward trend in the latter half of the year. People were anxious for a change, and naturally blamed the party in power for existing conditions. On the other hand, in 1900 during the Republican administration, Roosevelt had no difficulty in succeeding McKinley and keeping his party in. 1900 was a year of comparative prosperity both for the farmers and for business men. They were generally satisfied with economic conditions.

"Apparently it makes very little difference what conditions have been in the first part of an administration provided the final value is one of satisfactory crop values and business. This was clearly shown in 1904. After the disastrous panic of 1903 and early part of 1904, during a Republican administration, there came a good harvest at higher prices, which increased the farmers' income by $220,000,000. Wheat prices jumped from 69c to 92c; corn also was higher. It is the number of bushels times the price per bushel that counts. It is the return in dollars and cents to the farmer that determines whether he is happy or unhappy with the ruling party. And the good total crop value doubtless had much to do with reelecting Roosevelt in 1908. Also general business began to show an improvement in the middle of the year and this improvement continued right through the election and for the next three years.

"When Taft was elected to succeed Roosevelt in 1908 the values of the five leading crops were again higher than in the preceding year, this time by some $380,000,000. Business conditions, however, were distributed by the panic conditions of 1907 and 1908 and a general shortage of currency and credit because of the antiquated Federal Banking system. While Taft, a Republican, gained the presidency, the incoming house of representatives was Democratic. The election of 1912 with the Bull Moose revolt under Roosevelt naturally split the Republican vote, and helped to elect President Wilson. This, consequently, was not a fair test of the influence of crops, which in 1912 were larger than in the preceding year by some $700,000,000.

"President Wilson and the Democratic congress in the fall campaign of 1916, however, had the benefit of an excellent crop at good prices, the same conditions that so often have helped Republicans. Also, general business was experiencing the war boom. The value of the five leading crops for the 1916 season was $4,195,000,000, compared with $3,387,000,000 in 1915. Farmers were feeling prosperous and business men were flooded with profitable orders. Employment was on a rapid upward trend. Wilson was re-elected for another four years.

"The next campaign, in 1920, found us in the midst of radical deflation both in agricultural and industrial commodity prices. A more unpropitious time for an election could not have been found for the Democratic party. The total value of the five leading crops dropped from $7,556,000,000 in 1919 to $4,276,000,000, a decrease of 54 per cent. Moreover, general business was on a rapid and extensive decline. Hardings' election in 1920 was in large measure a result of lower crop values and poor business. The people wanted a change and put the Republicans in power.

"In 1924, LaFollette, the Progressive, was banking on the poor condition of the farmers to beat Coolidge. The Democrats ordinarily would have had a wonderful chance to win under such conditions. However, crop conditions underwent a revival during the summer, prices advanced and the total crop return for the season was so much better than generally expected that the farmers had little cause for complaint. The return on the five leading crops for the year was some $800,000,000 greater than in 1923. At election time business also had begun to improve from the depressed condition of the winter, spring and early summer months. The Republican majority was overwhelming. This Season's Crop Weather Favors Republicans.

"Admittedly, grain prices are lower than they were last year at this time, but as before stated, the thing that makes the farmer happy is the total money and not the price per bushel or the number of bushels. It is the product of these two items which spells prosperity or poverty for him. Based on September 1 government estimates of products multiplied by the December 1 future demands for corn, wheat, oats, barley, and rye, the total money return to the farmer this year will be in the neighborhood of $4,019,882,000 which is some $234,000,000 higher than a year ago. The value of the corn crop alone is estimated at $2,168,000,000 compared with $2,014,000,000 last year. Wheat this year is valued at $1,009,000,000 compared with $974,000,000 last year; barley at $231,000,000 compared with $180,000,000 in 1927; oats with a value of $581,000,000 compared with $537,000,000. The only one of the five leading grain crops that shows smaller value is rye with $39,000,000 compared with $39,000,000 a year ago. Rye, however, is comparatively unimportant as a money crop. The big money cereals all show substantial increases in value over 1927. This favors the party now in power, because a man with money in his pocket is far less likely to want political change than one without.

Sun Spots and Forecasting.
"Why these surprisingly good crop returns, when on June 1, 1928, it looked as though there would be a disastrous failure? The answer is favorable weather conditions in the corn and wheat belts for the past five months. Assuming that other issues in the election were fairly evenly divided, if Hoover should be elected in November, it would be in no small part due to the weather, through its influence on the farmers' income.

"It has been found that the weather and consequently crops, are greatly influenced by the changes in the surface condition of the sun. In other words, certain disturbances on the face of the sun are now found to be controlling factors of North American weather as well as world weather. In the final analysis these may have much to do with determining the political result. For example, during a period of high solar radiation, there is the accompanying phenomenon of numerous sun spots, or patches of gas on the surface of the sun, which are probably small volcanoes. It has been found that during periods of great activity on the sun as revealed by the sun spots, solar radiations are higher and weather conditions more propitious for a good crop yield. 1928 has been a year of marked solar activity of this nature. It may be that as the study of the sun in relation to weather, crops and business progresses we shall soon find meteorologists are able to predict the outcome of elections a year or more in advance. Business by the Babson chart is now 2 per cent below normal."

Parking Taxes Ended
Paris (AP)—Town constables who dislike things modern have lost their right to collect toll from visiting automobiles. The council of State, after years of argument, has held that the parking tax, usually collected from "foreign" cars as they entered certain inhospitable communities, is illegal because it discriminates.

Mystery Deaths Take New Angle

Detroit, Sept. 19.—(AP)—The mystery of the deaths of Burr Hart, Detroit apartment house operator, and his wife, Grace, in their home here last Saturday night, assumed a new angle today.

Police announced they were investigating reports of a "big deal" last week in Cleveland in which Hart was reported to have lost more than $25,000.

The bodies of Hart and his wife, shot to death, were found in the Hart home. Theories that they were murdered and that Hart killed his wife and himself have been advanced.

The belief expressed by Coroner A. L. French that it was a double murder and that because of the location of the bullet wound in Hart's head he could not have shot himself, was discredited by police officials.

Detective Lieut. John Navarre revealed today that the questioning of Rene Maystrick, 46, an insurance agent who said he accompanied Hart to Cleveland last week, had disclosed that Hart took more than $25,000 in cash with him.

The money, the police said, was borrowed and has not been accounted for. Officers have gone to Cleveland to investigate this angle of the case.

Flyers Start on Flight to Italy; Are Forced Back

Old Orchard, Me., Sept. 19.—(AP)—Facing a delay of several days before they can make another attempt to bridge the Atlantic, the Roma flyers are preparing an inspection of the motor which will disclose the ailment which nearly plunged the plane into the sea today.

Cesare Sabelli, flight commander, said tonight that in all probability water in the carburetor or some other minor defect was responsible for the back fire that bent the carburetor intake and necessitated a return to Old Orchard after the plane had been less than half an hour on her way to Rome.

Sabelli said that in his opinion there was no serious defect in the motor. Two days will be required, he said, for an inspection and the installation of a new carburetor intake.

The motor began to fall and black smoke poured from the exhaust 12 minutes after she had left Old Orchard today. Roger Q. Williams, who was manning the controls, circled over Cow Island in search of a landing place but could find none.

At one time, the flyers said, it appeared doubtful whether they could make the return to Old Orchard. The plane was only 200 feet in the air when the difficulty developed.

Only a few minutes after the single-motored Bellanca took off this morning a message was received from D. Mitchell of the weather bureau in New York, warning the flyers of dangerous wind conditions along the path of flight.

Sabelli said tonight that he expected a delay of some days before the weather is again auspicious for a trans-Atlantic flight. He does not expect to take the air again before Monday, he said.

Fairbrother, who will explain the various uses and benefits derived from the use of their insulating material which is placed between the studs when building. It makes the building warmer in winter and cooler in summer. It is sold in rolls, 250 square feet to the roll and the I. Stephenson company of Wells are the distributors in this section of the state. Another product which is being shown is the NU-Wood Insulation which is used in building chicken coops, barns, and all sorts of farm buildings. Ask for a demonstration at the booth and see for yourself what a saving it will be in the end. John Rudden of the I. Stephenson company will also assist in explaining this wood product.

Drainage Display at State Fair

"Drainage in the upper peninsula is in its infancy" stated E. L. Hunter, Chief of the Division of Drainage of the Department of Agriculture. A very pleasing interesting display of the material used in this department is being shown at the exhibit on the north side of the main building.

The display shows the raw material in every stage of the making and the finished product of tile used in drainage. Miniature culverts are shown as they would look if they were taken from the ground and placed on the surface. There are two models of culverts and both are excellent types of the culverts used throughout the lower peninsula. A landscape represents the correct drainage of farm land and highways.

A large map gives one an idea of the various counties where drainage of the main streams in the upper and lower peninsula has been cared for.

A table shows the exact amount which has been paid for drainage in 41 counties totaling $3,842,514.27. There are also photographs of actual drainage done in the lower peninsula, and the members of this division hope to see much of the work in the upper peninsula in the near future.

Some of the drainage in lower Michigan actually takes care of the sewage in smaller cities bringing it to disposal plants and purifying it from 75 to 90 per cent pure.

Mr. Hunter stated yesterday that this exhibit had had more inquiries and that more interest had been shown than at any fair which they had attended during this year.

Art Goods Are Judged Last

The large assortment of art goods which is on display at the fair and which has attracted the attention of men and women alike was judged by Miss Margaret Harris of Marquette of the Extension Department of the Michigan State College.

Judging an art display of this kind is no easy matter, when as many as 46 entries are placed in the exhibit with only two firsts, two seconds, and two thirds prizes to be given for the excellent work makes the judging a difficult problem.

Perhaps many persons do not know that the points on judging include workmanship, finish of the article, or garment, its suitability to which the article is to be used, quality of linen or material used in relation to the amount of work put into the article, and if the article is up to date and timely.

White embroidery is always in favor, some novelties are a fad and are not in good taste. Many beautiful pieces of work were shown at the fair which really deserved prizes but which were not listed in the premium book. One piece of work entered at the needle work department was embroidered by a local young man.

Many men stopped to admire the display and they were not of the "sleazy type." Big manly fellows, regular he-men, and they too realized the amount of work involved in this section. The do-

The women in charge have made many notes regarding new ideas and suggestions which will be of great help to the arrangement of the display next year. The premium book will also be revised.

D. A. R. to Hold State Conference October 2, 3, 4

The Michigan Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution will hold their 28th annual conference at Ypsilanti, October 2-4. Several prominent speakers have been engaged to address the meeting. Dr. Charles McKenney, president of Michigan State Normal college, Dr. R. Clyde Ford, and Dr. Marvin S. Pittman of the State Normal college faculty are included on the speakers list.

Menominee Proposes U. P. Air Conference To Promote Airways

An invitation to members of the boards of supervisors, directors of the Upper Peninsula Development Bureau, Association of county supervisors and business men of Upper Michigan to attend an Upper Peninsula Air Conference at Menominee to be held the first part of October was extended last night during the meeting and banquet by W. F. Doyle, president of the Menominee Chamber of Commerce.

Mr. Doyle was a guest at the meeting at which Governor Green and other distinguished lower Michigan men were present. Others from Menominee county were A. C. Wells of the J. Wells Lumber company, Theodore Wallenslager, member of the county board, G. Harold Earle of Hermansville and Frank L. Betts, county highway engineer.

Mr. Doyle said in his brief announcement that the Development Bureau as well as the various counties realize the immediate need for action pointing toward establishments of air ports, and the creation of an all-Michigan air-line to connect the lower part of the state with this north country.

Complete plans for the conference, he said, would be worked out within the next week or so at which time announcements and formal invitations will be extended to those interested in this new development.

Stribling to Meet Frank Wine Tonight

Grand Rapids, Mich., Sept. 20.—(AP)—William (Young) Stribling, who recently inaugurated a come-back campaign with a sensational knockout victory over Johnny Squires of South Africa, meets Frankie Wine of Roundup, Mont., in a scheduled ten round bout here tomorrow night.

Wine, who recently fought ten rounds to a draw with Chuck Wiggins and holds two decisions over Squires wound up his training seige with a light workout today. Stribling arrived from the south this afternoon in time for a light drill with the weights.

A record outdoor crowd for Grand Rapids is expected to attend the bout, which will be held at the local ball park. The advance ticket sale has been heavy.

Popovers—the New Simplified Recipe

Mixing Time for These Glorious Ones, 4 Minutes

Mrs. Mervyn Miller, after years of home baking, advises every housewife to use only "Kitchen-tested" flour.

The Week's Prize "Kitchen-tested" Recipe

Here is a recipe for Popovers that's a delight to women; to women who have been having "bad luck" with theirs. Of 118 women who tried it, not one failed in perfect results, first time, due to this new way of simplified baking.

By the development of an utterly new type of flour—Gold Medal "Kitchen-tested" Flour—baking has been simplified amazingly for housewives. And the cause of most baking disappointments banished.

"Kitchen-tested" means that every batch of this flour has been tested in a kitchen, at the mill, in an oven just like yours, before it goes to you. Tested for uniformity of result with home recipes.

That means a flour that acts the same way EVERY TIME with your recipes. Most flour varies greatly. Different sacks of other brands often act, as you know, entirely different in your oven. That's where over 50% of all baking disappointments come in.

Now special "Kitchen-tested" Recipes, too, have been developed. The recipe thus fits the flour exactly. And the flour fits the recipe exactly. So you get EXACT results every time.

To use this combination is a revelation in easier, simpler baking. But you must use "Kitchen-tested" Flour. Ask your grocer for GOLD MEDAL "Kitchen-tested" Flour. The words "Kitchen-tested" are on every sack. Get that brand of flour before you try this recipe.
