Seven Years of Agitation.

Only a few weeks ago the hearts of the people were made glad by the announcement from Escanaba that Train No. 113, which arrives in Menominee at 4:55 p. m., would run through to Escanaba...

Doomed to Disappointment.

The people were again doomed to disappointment, however, for, in spite of the encouraging news from Escanaba, no improvement in the train service developed...

Attorney Symonds took the matter up vigorously with the Northwestern Railroad company and made an appeal to the state railroad commission. He believes that he has succeeded in convincing the Northwestern railway people...

PADEREWSKI'S STEPSON HERE

Relative by Marriage of the World-Famous Pianist is Now Living in Escanaba--Wife is With Him and They are Making Their Own Way--Romantic Story.

FOGARTY FAMILY IS NOW AT IRON RIVER

Mr. and Mrs. Pat Fogarty and daughter, Miss Anna Fogarty of this city, have arrived in Iron River from Minneapolis, where they have been visiting for a time since Mr. Fogarty and Miss Fogarty returned to America from their trip abroad...

Living quietly and unostentatiously at 519 Murray avenue, this city, are Mr. and Mrs. Wenceslas Otto Gorski, a couple of considerable note in the world of music and art.

Mr. Gorski is the stepson of I. J. Paderewski, the world-famous pianist. His mother, whose maiden name was Baroness de Rosen and who was a distant relative of Baron de Rosen, Russian ambassador to the United States, married Paderewski in 1900...

Mr. Gorski is the only issue of either of the two marriages. He was born in Warsaw, Poland, and is a widely traveled young man. Acting for his famous stepfather, he has traveled all over the United States, Canada, Australia and Europe.

Weds Talented Artist.

Four years ago Mr. Gorski married Miss Belle Silvera of Chicago, a brilliant and very well known artist of that great city, where for a number of years she taught in the Art Institute. After a honeymoon spent in Switzerland and in Paris at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Paderewski, the young couple returned to the United States and, finally attracted by the possibilities offered by Escanaba, located in this city.

Mr. Gorski is employed by City Engineer D. A. Brotherton while his wife is busily engaged in painting pictures, which she intends exhibiting at the fair this fall of the Delta county Agricultural society. Both Mr. and Mrs. Gorski are talented and highly educated. Mr. Gorski is also considerable of a linguist, speaking half a dozen languages with fluency.

Families Not Estranged.

For some time past rumors have been floating about of an estrangement between the Paderewski and Gorski families. Mr. Gorski stamps these reports as false and without the least foundation. He declares that the most cordial relations exist between the two families. The only reason why Mr. Gorski does not live with his stepfather, he states, is that he prefers to earn his own living and be independent while his stepfather is not touring the world and does not require his immediate services.

The new steam street roller, exchanged by the city for the old roller, was given a test today and appeared to do its work very satisfactorily. The roller weighs about ten tons, light and twelve tons, loaded, and is said to be well adapted for such street improvement work as is necessary in Escanaba.

HUNDREDS ARE HEMMED IN BY FOREST FIRES

Devastating Flames Sweep Unchecked Through Marathon County, Wisconsin, and the Residents of Several Small Towns are in Deadly Peril--Flames Cover An Area of Ten Miles--Story.

(By Associated Press.)

Merrill, Wis., July 2.--Several hundred persons of Bloomville and Heine- man are hemmed in by forest fires at the former town with seemingly no means of escaping. Fires have destroyed the railroad tracks for some distance. The four hundred homeless who fled from Heine- man to Bloomville are also confronted by a similar peril.

Another Town Surrounded.

Wausau, Wis., July 21.--The town of Gleason has been surrounded by the forest fires. The country surrounding this village has some of the finest hardwood, hemlock and pine timber in the state and the cut over lands interspersed has become so overgrown with brush that the fires have much opportunity for spreading. The town of Heine- man, which has been deserted, has a population of 450; Bloomville, 120, and Gleason 100. The Worst in History.

The forest fires in the southeast portion of this county are probably the worst that has ever been experienced in Marathon county and unless the wind ceases at least ten million feet of standing timber will be destroyed. The fire covers an area of ten miles in length extending west and east.

TERRIBLE ACCIDENT AT FORTRESS MONROE

Eleven Men are Killed Outright and Ten More are Probably Dead Because of the Blowing Out of the Blech Block of One of the Guns--Bodies of Victims are Horribly Mangled--Prominent Officers Witness the Disaster.

(By Associated Press.)

Fortress Monroe, Va., July 21.--At 10:40 o'clock this morning eleven artillerymen are known to have been killed and ten are still missing as the result of the blowing out of a breech block of one of the guns of the De-Roussy battery at the fort here.

Sullivan, Duffy, King and Adkins. Bodies Terribly Mangled.

The dead artillerymen were attached to the Sixty-ninth company, and their bodies were terribly mangled. Those who were not killed were rushed to the fort hospital.

The disaster was witnessed by a number of prominent officers of the army and navy who were there to witness the practice. Among those present were also wives and children of the men who met so terrible and tragic a death.

Two Officers Injured.

The battery was under the immediate command of Sergeant Parry Haas of the Sixty-ninth company, United States Coast Artillery. One private was blown into Chesapeake bay with the breech block. Lieutenant Van Dusen sustained a broken leg and Lieutenant Hawes was injured about the face.

The explosion occurred while the coast artillery was repelling a fleet supposed to be attacking Washington. It was one of the most extensive battle practices ever planned.

South Answering North.

Canada continues boasting over her gains in population from this country and especially of the wealth these immigrants bring in cash as well as brawn. The wheatfields of western Canada are the lure which for the past five years has drawn off an average of 60,000 American farmers a year. This lure the Canadian land boomers industriously foist into the limelight. If the misguided ones are tired of the prospects of our own northwest it is useless to quarrel with them. But they don't need to carry wealth and what Congressman Ramsdell calls "the best blood and brawn of the land" to Canada just because they want a change.

Speaking for the south, Mr. Ramsdell calls the attention of farmers smitten with the Canada fever to the rich plantations stretching from the base of the Rockies to the Atlantic ocean and from Mason and Dixon's line to the gulf. Here is the home of cotton, rice, tobacco, corn and sugar, to say nothing of rich grazing grounds and orchards and gardens yielding every variety of marketable fruit. The heart of the south is as generous as its soil and climate. It can take more than twice 60,000 northern farmers a year and make them forget the call of Canada before their first crops are in.

"Air liner wrecked in a treetop" is not so startling in a headline as "ocean liner wrecked on a reef," still there are possibilities in such a mishap for broken bones.

One can take the open air treatment without risking an aeroplane or automobile venture, but the envy of the crowd isn't moved so easily in the simplified way.

People who can't afford electric fans will be glad to learn that the courts have not permitted the Wrights to foreclose a mortgage on the air.

If the Japs and Russians "take over" the whole far east and keep it well spanked they will save the rest of the world a lot of bother.

GOLD MEDAL FLOUR

TWENTY-ONE BOATS IN VARIOUS ACCIDENTS

June Toll Does Not Bring Damages to a High Mark, However--List in Detail.

Marine accidents during June were neither numerous nor costly, says The Marine Review. Had it not been for the stranding of the L. C. Smith near Two Harbors, on June 23, the Smith, however, is badly damaged, and it will cost about $30,000 to repair her.

Probably the most surprising accident was the stranding of the steamer L. C. Hanna on the outer rocks off Kettle Point, being fully 25 miles out of her course. A thick pall of smoke overhung the lowed end of Lake Huron and delayed many vessels. The Hanna was released after 4,000 tons of her cargo of iron ore had been lightered. Forest fires, which have been raging in the upper region, have hindered navigation not a little.

Little attention has been paid to this feature in the newspapers, but the smoke really covers a more extended area than is generally appreciated. The fact that accidents were so few is both creditable and encouraging. Certain masters have had it hammered into them that dispatch is a second consideration to safety. Following is the list:

- The List in Detail.
- June 10—Steamer A. L. Hopkins, collided with steamer Syracuse; badly damaged on port side; number of seams opened; machinery was badly dislocated; near Southeast Shoal, Lake Erie.
 - June 10—Steamer Syracuse, collided with steamer A. L. Hopkins; not damaged; near Southeast Shoal, Lake Erie.
 - June 10—Steamer Raleigh, collided with steamer Selwyn Eddy and ran on bank; released on 11th; in dry dock at Cleveland one week, to make repairs; near Russel Island, Lake St. Clair.
 - June 10—Steamer F. B. Wells, collided with steamer John A. Donaldson; Lake St. Clair.
 - June 18—Steamer Frontenac, hit by steamer Eastland on starboard side; one plate cracked; Cleveland.
 - June 23—Steamer L. C. Smith, stranded in dense fog on rock; released on 26th; No. 1 compartment badly punctured; hole 20 foot long in side, and bottom badly damaged; docked at Toledo; repairs estimated at $30,000; near Two Harbors, Lake Superior.
 - June 29—Barge Pennington, struck pier, the far throwing one man overboard and drowning him; foot of Weltzel lock, Soo river.
 - June 29—Steamer E. J. Earling, collided with steamer Omaha; slightly damaged; St. Clair river.
 - June 29—Steamer Omaha, collided with steamer Earling; slightly damaged; St. Clair river.
 - June 30—Steamer W. B. Schiller, ran aground, owing to heavy smoke from forest fires; released uninjured; Round Island, St. Mary's river.
 - June 30—Steamer W. B. Eads, ran aground, owing to heavy smoke; released after lightening 200 tons; docked Cleveland; six plate damaged; Round Island, St. Mary's river.
 - June 30—Steamer Lagonda, ran aground in heavy smoke; released, uninjured; St. Mary's river.
 - June 30—Steamer Uganda, hole punched in starboard bow; Cleveland harbor entrance.
 - Early July Mishaps.
 - July 1—Steamer D. Leuty, ran ashore; Bacon Island.
 - July 1—Barge B. W. Jenness, collided with steamer F. B. Squire; bad hole in port bow; Detroit river, near Grosse Isle.
 - July 1—Steamer F. B. Squire, collided with barge Jenness; Detroit river, near Grosse Isle.
 - July 2—Steamer LaBelle, stranded in thick weather; lightered 1,600 tons of ore and was released July 3, uninjured; Hay Lake.
 - July 4—Steamer John A. Donaldson ran ashore, owing to disabled steering gear; wheel chains parted; driven on shore; released July 6 after lightening 2,500 tons; Little Rapids cut, near Soo.
 - July 4—Steamer Black Rock, ran ashore; released July 5 after lightening; near Hammond's Bay, Lake Huron.
 - July 5—Steamer L. C. Hanna, ran ashore; Nos. 2 and 3 compartments full of water; bottom forward badly torn; released on 6th after lightening 4,000 tons of ore; will be docked at Lorain or Cleveland; Kettle Point, Lake Huron.

SUPREME COURT REVERSES CASE

A Michigan supreme court decision which concerns a case that originated in Menominee, and which has been in the courts for several years, has been received by the firm of Eastman & Martineau of Marquette, attorneys for the defendant company. The amount involved in the suit was $2,500 and the decision is in favor of the defendants.

The title of the case is Harsted & Labre versus Lindsay, Baum & Co. The first named company is composed of O. Harsted and Phillip Labre of Bark River, and the defendant company is now of Alfred, Mich., but was formerly the Lindsay Brothers company of Menominee.

The case found its inception in the sale of some posts and poles by Harsted & Labre to the old Michigan Cedar company of Menominee. The Lindsay Brothers company went on the notes of the concern. The Michigan Cedar company went out of business and in the attempts at settlements differences arose and the case was taken in court.

CHILD DIES OF HYDROPHOBIA

(Special to The Mirror.)
Joplin, Mo., July 21.—Homer Wakefield, the 3-year-old son of H. C. Wakefield, died here yesterday of hydrophobia. The child was bitten while playing with a small spaniel last March. The wound healed and little attention was paid to it.

NEGRO IS GRADUALLY BECOMING WHITE.

(Special to The Mirror.)
Chester, Pa., July 21.—Fred Hopkins, a negro employed by the Chester Traction company for a number of years and living at Lelperville is now gradually turning white. Until a few years ago there was not a white spot on him, but gradually his skin began to bleach in sections. His hands and arms to his elbows are now as white as those of the Caucasian race and the skin on his face and neck is covered with tinge, irregular white spots.

The turning of his skin from a very dark color to white is puzzling the physicians who have examined him. Hopkins is about thirty-five years old and possesses a fine physique. He weighs about 200 pounds and is built in proportion. A few years ago Hopkins married a young white woman. They live happily together.

TOLD NOT TO BUILD LIMESTONE ROADS

(Special to The Mirror.)
Lansing, Mich., July 21.—The state highway department is doing all possible to discourage the building of limestone roads, as this type of road does not wear well and in from one to two years it begins to show wear. The limestone powders under loads rapidly and that it is affected materially by the weather has been proven. Indiana is now having a rather unenviable experience with these roads at the present time.

Several Michigan townships which have built these roads in the past are now asking advice of the highway commission and the department is doing all possible to discourage the building. There is a great deal of activity throughout the state in road building and the department is kept busy inspecting roads.

ANOTHER BIG MINE FOR BESSEMER

(Special to The Mirror.)
Bessemer, Mich., July 21.—The Newport Mining company in mining circles better known as the Schlesinger syndicate of Milwaukee, has taken a lease from Houghton county of the two forties north of the Palms mine. Under the lease $250,000 must be expended on the land within the next five years in improvements and exploration, which means that another big mine will soon be added to the other active producers of this city.

There is no greater misfortune than not to be able to bear misfortune. Inure to in the Continental before misfortune comes.

NEW YORK OUT-VENICES FAMOUS WATERWAY CITY.

More Islands, Rivers and Canals About Manhattan.

Venice, the queen of the Adriatic, with her 157 interlacing canals that form 118 islands, is less of a water city than is the metropolis of America, for New York has a greater navigable water front than any other city in the world. The waters within the boundaries of Venice could be swallowed up by the currents that ebb and flow within New York and make no perceptible addition to them. New York has just as much moonshine and lots more water, and, though the gular and musical voice of the gondolier are not heard, other voices, less romantic, are heard on almost every sort of craft that floats in water.

New York's islands are more in number than those of Venice, and in Jamaica bay alone are as great possibilities as the lagoon of Venice ever presented for a beautiful city—still remaining possibilities. If Venice were placed in the center of that bay there would be more expanse of water around it than there is now in the entire lagoon of Venice.

In New York city are 204 miles of navigable water front, from the unpretentious hills of Staten Island to the great Atlantic that washes the Coney Island shore and beaches of Rockaway. Much of the city is islands, and what is not are great peninsulas more than half surrounded by water.

Richmond alone has nearly forty miles of shore line, and Manhattan has thirty more miles where bows of the greatest ships that float can reach over the land. Queens and the Bronx have fifty miles, which embrace the westerly end of Long Island sound, and the winding shores of Brooklyn, with the great Jamaica bay, make up the rest.

SOBER CONGRESS IN ANDORRA

Parliament of Tiny State Ruled by Tradition.

The parliamentary procedure of Andorra, the tiny independent state which lies sandwiched between France and Spain, is of the quaintest kind. Parliament having been called for a certain day, the honorable members arrive in groups on horses or mules shod with the usual Andorran footwear—white corded sandals.

The Sassa de Valls serves at the same time for palace, parliament and prison, not to mention stables for the members' steeds. After stabling the animals on the ground floor the members ascend to the hall of deliberations, change their sandals for shoes and put on the official costume—a long black sort of robe and a huge three cornered hat. These when not in use hang in a row on pegs at the bottom of the hall.

AUSTRALIA FIGHTS HERB.

St. John's Wort Spreads Over 20,000 Farming Acres.

Just thirty years ago a woman at Bright, Victoria, planted in her garden a few seeds of St. John's wort sent her from the old country. The woman's intention was to have one or two of the plants at hand for medicinal purposes. The hardy weed, however, soon spread beyond the garden, and before any one had grasped the magnitude of the evil it had been carried by cattle along all the main stock routes and jumped the Victorian watershed into Gippsland.

It has now completely taken possession of something like 20,000 acres of agricultural land, and the agricultural department of Victoria is spending thousands of pounds in the endeavor to eradicate it, some of the methods tried costing nearly $50 an acre.

AERIAL FREIGHT LINE HERE.

Arizona Aviator to Haul Machinery in Monoplane.

Dr. J. J. P. Armstrong has contracted with Arthur Williams, an aviator of Douglas, Ariz., to convey placer mining machinery from Douglas to a property in the Chihuahuas mountains, in Mexico. The distance is about 300 miles. The machinery is such that it can be carried only in 100 pound lots. Williams owns and operates a monoplane. This is probably the first contract calling for the commercial use of a heavier than air machine.

Cook in Comfort

You no longer need wear yourself out with the weakening heat of an intensely hot kitchen. You can cook in comfort.

Here is a stove that gives NO outside heat. All its heat is concentrated at the burners. An intense blue flame (hotter than either white or red) is thrown upwards but not around. All the heat is utilized in cooking—none in outside heating.

New Perfection WICKLESS FLAME Oil Cook-stove

entirely removes the discomfort of cooking. Apply a match and immediately the stove is ready. Instantly an intense heat is projected upwards against the pot, pan, kettle or boiler, and yet there is NO surrounding heat—no smell—no smoke.

Why? Because The New Perfection Oil Cook-Stove is scientifically and practically perfect. You cannot use too much wick—it is automatically controlled. You get the maximum heat—no smoke. The burner is simple. One wipe with a cloth cleans it—consequently there is no smell.

The New Perfection Oil Cook-Stove is wonderful for year-round use, but especially in summer. Its heat operates upward to pan, pot, or kettle, but not beyond or around. It is useless for heating a room.

It has a Cabinet Top with shelf for keeping plates and food hot.

It has long turquoise-blue enamel chimneys. The nickel finish, with the bright blue of the chimneys, makes the stove ornamental and attractive.

Made with 1, 2 and 3 burners; the 2 and 3-burner stoves can be had with or without Cabinet.

OBJECT TO A NEW WATCH SELLING PLAN

New York, July 21.—Several wholesale jewelry companies in the Maiden Lane district have recently been trying to put into effect a new plan of selling watches, known as the complete watch method. For many years retailers have bought watch cases separately from the works, thus being able to sell an almost endless variety of combinations, as a movement could be put in any one of dozens of kinds of cases. Under the new system retailers must buy cases and works together.

Already the retailers have begun to protest against this. Resolutions declaring that the new selling system is unfair to the retail jewellers, and the National Association of Retail Jewellers will consider the matter at its convention to be held the last week of this month at Detroit.

RUNAWAY BOY TAGGED; GETS HOME SAFE NOW

(Special to The Mirror.)
Washington, Pa., July 21.—Because he refuses to stay at home and persists in wandering about the street, Mrs. Burke, of East Wylie avenue,

"This is Willie Burke. He is lost, so send him home, East Wylie avenue."

Willie has been returned to his home several times since this experiment was tried and Mrs. Burke worries no more.

CHICAGO PROMISED A POSTAL BANK

(Special to The Mirror.)

GRASSHOPPERS CAN BE PRACTICALLY DESTROYED

Leo M. Geismar Tells of Method for Exterminating Pest for Benefit of Farmers.

Leo M. Geismar, superintendent of the upper peninsula experimental farm at Chatham, has written for the public benefit his experience with grasshoppers which in former years have been a pest in many places. They are again appearing in some places in destructive hordes. Mr. Geismar has been experimenting at the upper peninsula station with means of destroying the pest and preventing the great damage wrought by them. Mr. Geismar's letter upon the subject has created such an interest in agricultural circles that the state agricultural college has published it as special bulletin No. 53, and any person can obtain it upon request and without cost by post card addressed to the college, East Lansing, Mich. The bulletin is very interesting and valuable. The latter part of it reads as follows:

Will Chew Anything.
"Griddle mixture is horse manure mixed with salt and Paris green. It has been in more or less general use for some years, notably in Canada, the home of its originator. The fondness of grasshoppers for anything which contains salt is well known, for they eat paper which has been wrapped around salted butter, and in order to get at the salt which has been deposited with the perspiration, they will chew up old coats or much worn caps, and roughen the handles of forks, hoes or hand rakes which are left outdoors. To prepare the mixture, take about 100 pounds of salt and horse droppings two pounds of salt and either one pound of Paris green or three pounds of arsenic of lead. If no large scales are handy, five ten-quart pails may be taken as 100 pounds. Mix the poison in a half pailful of water and stir all the ingredients well in a barrel or water-tight box, gradually adding another pailful of water to facilitate mixing. It is better to use only clear horse manure, which is free from straw or other litter. A large shovel has been found sufficient for about every two rods square, and if grasshoppers are found to invade a field from one side only, the field will be sufficiently protected by depositing shovelfuls about a rod apart on that side of the field only. To prevent rapid drying and scattering by the wind the mixture should be applied in heaps of one shovelful each and in a well moistened condition.

Judgment Should Be Used.
"On the above mentioned twenty-acre field, the grasshoppers came in from all directions and the mixture was used on all four sides as well as at the base of a few stumps in the middle of the field. The cost for the twenty-acre field was $1.30 for the poison and salt; or six and a half cents per acre exclusive of labor. Three hours' work mixing at 15 cents per hour and three hours' time of one man and a horse at 30 cents per hour would be a fair allowance for labor and would amount to $1.35 for the area of twenty acres, or an average of 13 1/2 cents per acre for material and labor combined.

As the result of careful observations at the upper peninsula station no losses among poultry or wild birds exposed to the griddle mixture or poisoned grasshoppers were noted. As no actual tests have been made in the case of farm animals, judgment should be exercised in exposing them to the griddle mixture at least until it has been conclusively proven that there is no danger."

J. K. Kirkland, Who May Be Removed as University Head

If the program of the Methodist college of bishops is carried out, Chancellor J. K. Kirkland will be removed from the Vanderbilt university in August, along with nineteen trustees. The charges against the chancellor and the trustees are insubordination and defiance of the church. It is expected that the matter will be settled in the law courts as to who has control of the university. This suit, according to present plans, will be filed in Nashville during the last of July. Bishop E. R. Hendricks of Kansas City will be brought before a committee of twelve of the Methodist church by July 20 in connection with the alleged insubordination of Chancellor Kirkland.

WOUNDED IN BATTLE; LOSES TWO SENSES

Victim of a Mauser Bullet Pulls Through After It Was Supposed He Had No Chance to Live, But He is Now Minus Taste and Smell—Story of Remarkable Recovery.

(Special to The Mirror.)
Portland, Ore., July 21.—Thomas P. Dunn, a native of Montana, who, as a member of the First Montana volunteers in the Spanish-American war was shot through the head at Calocan in the Philippines more than twelve years ago and is alive to tell of it today is here.

When Dunn fell wounded on the battlefield of Calocan he was carried to the ward where the fatally injured were placed and no one paid any attention to him for two days, as there were too many other wounded whom the physicians and surgeons in charge believed had better chances for recovery. At the end of two days during which the Montana boy lay practically without attention, the surgeon in charge remarked upon his vitality and decided to try to save his life.

A Mauser bullet had entered the left side of his head just above the temple and emerged from the right side just below the temple, a wound that had previously proved fatal as far as any of the medical men who have examined Dunn ever heard.

His remarkable recovery and the fact that he retains his reason are the most remarkable features of this case. While he is alive, in good health and able to walk around the streets and converse with his friends and acquaintances, Dunn is handicapped by the loss of all sense of smell or taste and has lost the sight of his right eye. Despite these afflictions he bears his lot with fortitude. He cannot enjoy a meal, for no matter what choice viands he may order, he cannot relish them any more than he would hardtack and salt pork. The loss of the sense of taste he looks upon as his worst affliction.

Dunn's impaired eyesight has proved an obstacle toward his seeking employment and illness is something he dreads because of his afflictions. His only amusement is to join several congenial companions and tell stories of past experiences or to take street car rides or journeys through the country in automobiles. He cannot go to theaters, being handicapped by partial blindness and fearful lest the glare of the lights shall impair the sight of his remaining eye.

STORY TO MAKE AN OLD ANGLER LAUGH

He had never fished before, and his rod was new and shining with resplendent varnish. Faultlessly attired he was whipping a trout stream when by some odd chance, he got a bite. He had hooked a one-pounder, from the way the line strained.

He was not playing the fish at all. With rod held straight ahead he was slowly and steadily reeling him in. How he managed to hold the fish was beyond me.

Presently the fish was directly below the end of the rod. Did he stop? No—he kept on reeling the fish in, and just as I reached the water's edge, the fish's head touched the tip. The man even tried to pull him through the ring.

Just then he saw me standing on shore, waving my arms. He turned to me with a bewildered look and said, "What shall I do now?"

"The only thing you can do now," I said, "is to climb up the pole after him."—Forest and Stream.

CUTS THIRD SET OF TEETH AT 82

(Special to The Mirror.)
Lincoln, Neb., July 21.—Capt. Adam Bax is cutting his third set of teeth at the age of 82 years. Dentists say text books recount but few similar cases.

For several months Bax's lower jaw has given him distress. He consulted his dentist. The dentist laughed. One molar is through and half a dozen other teeth are just breaking the skin.

Capt. Bax, who served in the civil war, was sick with the scurvy just after the war closed, and pulled out most of his teeth with his fingers. For more than forty years he has relied on "store teeth."

Our Daily Short Story

A BUSINESS WOMAN

By M. QUAD
Copyright, 1910, by Associated Literary Press.

When coal oil was found in West Virginia among the few who held on to their land was the widow Turner.

When the widow Turner was left to care for herself she possessed sixty acres of sterile land, a wretched old cabin, a mule and a cow. She had always worked in the field with her husband. She was a large, bony woman, unable to read or write, and the very homeliest among a lot of homely women. No one predicted that she would marry again, and she had no encouraging thoughts herself. She lived alone, and all the farm work was done by her own hands.

When the oil excitement got started all the landowners around the widow Turner sold out. She alone held on. She was offered five times what her farm was considered worth, but she shook her head. As a matter of fact, she was frightened.

Then along came a tin peddler. She had dealt with him before and found him honest. She told him her troubles, and he said: "Widow, I am going to talk plainly to you. You are as ignorant as a mule and as homely as a stump fence."

"If things had run along as they were going you couldn't have found a man in the United States to marry you."

"I admit that."
"But now you can. You can not only find a husband, but money with him. Let me tell you what to do."

They had a long conversation, and the result of it was that when an offer for the farm was renewed next day it was accepted with a proviso. The widow demanded $50,000 in cash and a husband. It was acceded to at once. It would be very easy to find a man to marry her and run away afterward. Plenty of them could be hired for $2,000. But the widow wanted an acceptable husband. That was different. Thirty men were paraded before her, and she rejected every one. The capitalists had figured on a soft thing and got left. After two months' search and after fifty men had been brought forward one was found to fill the bill. He was no scrub. On the contrary, he was a broken down gentleman. It was like mating an eagle with a crow.

Yes, he would do, but there were details to be considered. He must be bound to certain things, and the buyer of the farm must guarantee him. He must be bound not to run away and not to apply for a divorce. He must be bound to live in the same house with her and not be absent over three days at any time without her written permission. He must teach her the common branches of education and rules of etiquette. He must take her to New York city and Niagara falls once in two years. If she wished to sign he must not be put out. Her money must be her own. There were about a dozen other things mentioned, and the broken down gentleman said he'd be hanged if he would. He had promised him $10,000, but he said it wasn't enough. He hung out until he was offered the same as the widow. They told him that a smart lawyer could pick a dozen loopholes in the contract.

But the widow wasn't through yet. They must allow her $10,000 for a lawyer's fee. They agreed, and she sent to Chicago for one of the leaders of the bar. Then came the guarantee. The guarantee of the buyer was not enough. The lawyer insisted that some one must guarantee him. This was done. Time had been wasted, and "gnashers" were being struck all around them. The money was counted out, the marriage took place, and the next day the drillers were at work. The newly weds went to the nearest village to pass their honeymoon.

The broken down gentleman had gone into the thing to make a stake. He had a good mind for billiards, good clothes and good dinners, but not for legal matters. Within three days he ran away. The wife called upon the guarantors to return him. They had to hire a detective and hunt for a month. When he was brought back he was locked up for two weeks. He appealed to the law, but the law said that his wife had a right to take all reasonable precautions. He had bound himself to teach her certain things. He refused. She called upon his guarantors, and they forced him to do it. He had taught her the A B C's when he ran away again. Again he was brought back.

Although the work of drilling wells had begun at once, there were no results. They drilled here and there for more than a year, but not a pint of oil was had. That farm was just over the oil line somehow. Geologists said there ought to be a great lake of oil under it, but it didn't turn out that way. In buying and drilling more than half a million dollars was expended. At the end of a year the broken down man ran away again. When his backers were called upon to return him they agreed to give the wife $5,000 to let them off the contract. The tin peddler came along and advised her to take it, and she did. She is still living on that little farm in the Buckeye State, and though her singing scares the cows for miles around and she is not up on etiquette and has to spell out the big words, she has money to burn and is fairly happy. The tin peddler? Oh, his conscience rewarded him for the good deed done.

The Girl and the Bill

By Bainster Merwin

The writing was apparently a hurried scrawl, but the letters were large and quite legible. They appeared to have been written on an uneven surface, for there were several jogs and breaks in the writing, as if the pen had slipped.

"This is curious," remarked Orme. The clerk blinked his watery eyes and looked at the bill in Orme's hand. "Oh, yes, sir," he explained. "I remember that. The gentleman who paid it in this morning called our attention to it."

"If he's the man who wrote this, he probably doesn't know that there's a law against defacing money." "But it's perfectly good, isn't it?" inquired the clerk. "If you want another instead—"

"Oh, no," laughed Orme. "The banks would take it." "But, sir—" began the clerk. "I should like to keep it. If I can't get rid of it, I'll bring it back. It's a hoax or an endless chain device or something of the sort. I'd like to find out."

He looked again at the writing. Puzzles and problems always interested him, especially if they seemed to involve some human story.

"Very well," said the clerk. "I'll remember that you have it, Mr. —" he peered at the name he had set down—"Mr. Orme."

Leaving the hatters, Orme turned back on State street, retracing his steps. It was close to the dinner hour, and the character of the street crowds had changed. The shoppers had disappeared. Suburbanites were by this time aboard their trains and homeward bound. The street was thronged with hurrying clerks and shop girls, and the cars were jammed with thousands more, all of them thinking, no doubt, of the same two things—something to eat and relaxation.

What a hive it was, this great street! And how scant the lives of the great majority! Working, eating, sleeping, marrying and given in marriage, bearing children and dying—was that all? "But growing, too," said Orme to himself. "Growing, too." Would this be the sum of his own life—that of a worker in the hive? It came to him with something of an inner pang that thus far his scheme of things had included little more. He wondered why he was now recognizing this scantiness, this lack in his life.

He came out of his reverie to find himself again at the Madison street corner. Again he seemed to see that beautiful girl in the car, and to hear the music of her voice.

How could he best set about to find her? She might be, like himself, a visitor in the city. But there was the touring car. Well, she might have run in from one of the suburbs. He could think of no better plan than to call that evening on the Wallinghams and describe the unknown to Bessie and try to get her assistance. Bessie would divine the situation, and she would give him unmercifully, he knew; but he would face even that for another glimpse of the girl of the car.

And at that moment he was startled by a sharp explosion. He looked to the street. There was the black car, bumping along with one flat tire. The girl threw on the brakes and came to a stop.

In an instant Orme was in the street. If he thought that she would not remember him, her first glance altered the assumption, for she looked down at him with a ready smile and said: "You see, I do need you again, after all."

As for Orme, he could think of nothing better to say than simply: "I am glad." With that he began to unfasten the spare tire.

"I shall watch you with interest," she went on. "I know how to run a car—though you might not think it—but I don't know how to repair one."

"That's a man's job, anyway," said Orme, busy now with the jack, which was slowly raising the wheel from the pavement.

"Shall I get out?" she asked. "Does my weight make any difference?" "Not at all," said Orme; but, nevertheless, she descended to the street and stood beside him while he worked.

"I don't know there were all those funny things inside," she mused. Orme laughed. Her comment was vague, but to him it was enough just to hear her voice. He had got the wheel clear of the street and was taking off the burst tire.

"We seem fated to meet," she said. Orme looked up at her. "I hope you won't think me a cad," he said, "if I say that I hope we may meet many times."

Her little frown warned him that she had misunderstood. "Do you happen to know the Tom Wallinghams?" he asked.

Her smile returned. "I know a Tom Wallingham and a Bessie Wallingham."

"They're good friends of mine. Don't you think that they might introduce us?" "They might," she vouchsafed, "if they happened to see us both at the same time."

Orme returned to his task. The crowd that always gathers was now close about them, and there was little opportunity for talk. He finished his job neatly, and stowed away the old tire.

She was in the car before he could offer to help her. "Thank you again," she said.

"If only you will let me arrange it with the Wallinghams," he faltered. "I will think about it." She smiled. He felt that she was slipping away. "Give me some clue," he begged.

"Where is your spirit of romance?" she called at him; then apparently relenting: "Perhaps the next time we meet—"

Orme groaned. With a little nod like that which had dismissed him at the time of his first service to her, she pulled the lever and the car moved away.

Tumult in his breast, Orme walked on. He watched the black car thread its way down the street and disappear around a corner. Then he gave himself over to his own bewildering reflections, and he was still busy with them when he found himself at the entrance of the Pere Marquette. He had crossed the Rush street bridge and found his way up to the Lake Shore drive almost without realizing whether he was going.

Orme had come to Chicago at the request of eastern clients to meet half way the owners of a western mining property. When he registered at the Annex he found awaiting him a telegram saying that they had been detained at Denver and must necessarily be two days late. Besides the telegram, there had been a letter for him—a letter from his friend, Jack Baxter, to whom he had written of his coming. Jack had left the city on business, it appeared, but he urged Orme to make free of his North side apartment. So Orme left the Annex and went to the rather too gorgeous, but very luxurious, Pere Marquette, where he found that the staff had been instructed to keep a close eye on his comfort. All this had happened but three short hours ago.

After getting back to the apartment, Orme's first thought was to telephone to Bessie Wallingham. He decided, however, to wait till after dinner. He did not like to appear too eager. So he went down to the public dining room and ate what was placed before him, and returned to his apartment just at dusk.

In a few moments he got Bessie Wallingham on the wire. "Why, Robert Orme!" she exclaimed. "Wherever did you come from?"

"The usual place. Are you and Tom at home this evening?" "I'm so sorry. We're going out with some new friends. Wish I knew them well enough to ask you along. Can you have some golf with us at Arradale tomorrow afternoon?"

"Delighted! Say, Bessie, do you know a girl who runs a black touring car?" "What?"

"Do you know a tall, dark girl who has a black touring car?" "I know lots of tall, dark girls, and several of them have black touring cars. Why?"

"Who are they?" There was a pause and a little chuckle; then: "Now, Bob, that won't do. You must tell me all about it tomorrow. Call for us in time to catch the one-four."

That was all that Orme could get out of her; and after a little banter and a brief exchange of greetings with Tom, who was called to the telephone by his wife, the wire was permitted to rest.

Orme pushed a chair to the window of the sitting room and smoked lastly, looking out over the beautiful expanse of Lake Michigan, which reflected from its glassy surface the wonderful opalescence of early evening. He seemed to have set forth on a new and adventurous road. How strangely the girl of the car had come into his life!

Then he thought of the five-dollar bill, with the curious inscription. He took it from his pocketbook and examined it by the fading light. The words ran the full length of the face. Orme noticed that the writing had a foreign look. There were flourishes which seemed distinctly un-American. He turned the bill over. Apparently there was no writing on the back, but as he looked more closely he saw a dark blur in the upper left-hand corner. Even in the dusk he could make out that this was not a spot of dirt; the edges were defined too distinctly for a smudge; and it was not black enough for an ink-blot.

Moving to the center table, he switched on the electric lamp, and looked at the blur again. It stood out plainly now, a series of letters and numbers:

The first thought that came to Orme was that this could be no hoax. A joker would have made the curious cryptogram more conspicuous. But what did it mean? Was it a secret formula? Did it give the location of a buried treasure? And why in the name of common sense had it been written on a five-dollar bill?

More likely, Orme reasoned, it concealed information for or about some person—"S. R. Evans," probably. And who was this S. R. Evans?

The better to study the mystery, Orme copied the inscription on a sheet of note paper, which he found in the table-drawer. From the first he decided that there was no cipher. The letters undoubtedly were abbreviations. "Evans" must be, as he had already determined, a man's name.

"Chl" might be, probably was, "Chicago." "100 N. 210 E." looked like "100 (feet? paces?) north, 210 (feet? paces?) east."

The "A." and the "T." bothered him. "A." might be the place to which "S. R. Evans" was directed, or at which he was to be found—a place sufficiently indicated by the letter. Now as to the "T."—was it "treasure" or was it "time" or "true"? Orme had no way of telling. It might even be the initials of the person who had penned the instructions.

Without knowing where "A." was, Orme could make nothing of the cryptogram. For that matter, he realized that unless the secret were criminal it was not his affair. But he knew that legitimate business information is seldom transmitted by such mysterious means.

Again and again he went over the abbreviations, but the more closely he studied them, the more baffling he found them. The real meaning appeared to hinge on the "A." and the "T." Eventually he was driven to the conclusion that those two letters could not be understood by anyone who was not already partly in the secret, if secret it was. It occurred to him to have the city directory sent up to him. He might then find the address of "S. R. Evans," if that person happened to be a Chicagoan. But it was quite likely that the "Chl." might mean something other than that "Evans" lived in Chicago. Perhaps, in the morning he would satisfy his curiosity about "S. R. Evans," but for the present he lacked the inclination to press the matter that far.

In the midst of his puzzling, the telephone bell rang. He crossed the room and put the receiver to his ear. "Yes!" he questioned.

The clerk's voice answered. "Senior Poritolo to see Mr. Orme."

"Who?" "S-e-n-i-o-r-P-o-r-i-t-o-l-o," spelled the clerk.

"I don't know him," said Orme. "There must be some mistake. Are you sure that he asked for me?"

"There was a pause. Orme heard a few scattering words which indicated that the clerk was questioning the stranger. Then came the information: "He says he wishes to see you about a five-dollar bill."

"Oh!" Orme realized that he had no reason to be surprised. "Well, send him up."

He hung up the receiver and, returning to the table, put the marked bill back into his pocketbook and slipped into a drawer the paper on which he had copied the inscription. (To be Continued.)

CAREER OF MRS. R. H. SAVAGE

Distinguished Author's Widow, Who Was Well Known as a Lecturer.

Mrs. Richard Henry Savage, widow of the celebrated author and soldier and herself well known as a lecturer and critic, who recently died in her home at New York, was the daughter of a court chamberlain in Potsdam, Germany, and an intimate of many of the present royal heads of Europe. She was Josephine Schuble, daughter of Charles Schuble, one of the "kitchen cabinet" of the father of the present emperor of Germany. When the present emperor was born Mrs. Savage, then Miss Schuble, was a mature young woman, and she delighted in carrying the young prince around in her arms. At the time of her death Mrs. Savage was sixty-seven years old. For the last thirty years she had been identified with movements for women's rights. Five years ago she added lecturing to her other occupations, having already gained note as a writer. She belonged to the Ecclectic, Sorosis, Entertainment and other women's clubs.

Mrs. Savage had had a remarkably interesting career. At the age of sixteen she was married in Germany to Gustave Schuble, a cousin, and several years before the civil war the young couple came to America to look after cotton plantations in which they were jointly interested. The husband died shortly afterward in this country, and the young widow became a great favorite in Washington society.

In 1873 Mrs. Schuble married Richard Henry Savage, a young army officer, who, after his retirement with the rank of major, entered upon a brilliant literary career. He volunteered at the outbreak of the Spanish-American war and received a commission as colonel. He died Oct. 11, 1903. Mrs. Savage then continued her husband's work in the literary field.

In her life in the capital and the large cities of the United States and Europe Mrs. Savage met many of the distinguished persons of her time. All the presidents since Lincoln, Prince Bismarck, Count Tolstoy, Victor Hugo and others more or less distinguished wrote her friends.

WILL BE AT HOME BEFORE NEXT SUNDAY

The Mirror today received a letter from Rev. P. B. Ferris, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, in which that gentleman states he will return to Escanaba from his vacation trip in time to conduct the usual services at the Presbyterian church next Sunday. Mr. Ferris is taking a lake trip and is enjoying it immensely, judging from the tenor of his letter, which was written while the boat on which he is traveling made a stop at Milwaukee. At the time of writing Mr. Ferris expected to arrive in Escanaba some time during Saturday.

STEAMER YANTIC WILL MAKE A STOP HERE

Warner of Michigan at Detroit on August 15. The squadron disbanded at Port Huron after inspection by the U. S. board of inspections on August 16, and the various ships sail for home, the Yantic arriving at Hancock about August 18.

When the Yantic comes into port this evening she will present a greatly changed appearance and will scarcely be recognized as the vessel which was seen here last summer. Whereas she had three masts when she left Hancock last fall for Sturgeon Bay, she returns with but two sticks, which will be used mainly for signaling purposes, the main mast having been removed. A new chart house, new bridge, new decking, new steam steering gear, and many other improvements have been made by the government during the time that the Yantic has been at the ship yards in Sturgeon Bay, and the vessel is to all intents and purposes practically a new boat, better equipped than ever before to meet the requirements of a training ship for naval militia.

BELIEVE ME

That every dollar for merchandise you send out of this town you will see never more. Why buy packers' sausages, which are never less than ten days old by the time they reach your city, when you can have Gunter's sausages fresh made every day? Gunter's sausages are made on honor and sold on their merit. For the past twenty years they have been known throughout the county for their sweetness, flavor and delicacy. Our methods market and sausage rooms, are wide open to everybody and we court closest scrutiny. Why swell the overflowing coffers of the packers by buying their sausages, where you can have Gunter's, which in every way are so far ahead of the packer goods—or any others—as day is of night? Demand Gunter's sausages from your dealer; insist on having them; they will cost you only the same money, and you will thus have the best and freshest possible the world over. Besides, you will keep at home those very same pennies which will sooner or later compel attention for Delta county, as a prominent iron ore producer at the hands of
