JUSTICE IS SWIFT IN CASE OF FLYNN

Young Man Arrested in Escanaba for Crimes Alleged to Have Been Committed at the Canadian Soo is Convicted, Given a Prison Term and Fined $200--Story.

Justice was speedy in the case of William Flynn, who was arrested in Escanaba last Monday night at the request of the authorities at the Canadian Soo, where he was wanted to answer a number of criminal charges. Tuesday night an officer arrived here from the Soo to get Flynn and left with his prisoner next morning. In the afternoon of the same day he was arraigned on two of the charges and given immediate trial, with the result that he was convicted and sentenced to a term of nearly two years in prison and fined $200. The story of Flynn's case is told as follows by The Sault Ste. Marie Evening News in its Canadian Soo department: "William Flynn, the young man who, up to a few days ago, conducted a restaurant on Queen street near the municipal buildings, and who was arrested when several serious charges were registered against him for theft, selling liquor without a license, selling smuggled goods, etc., was apprehended by the police at Escanaba, Mich., and arrived in the city yesterday afternoon. The case was immediately tried, and upon the charges of stealing $44 from William McDonald and conducting a blind pig, the defendant was sentenced to the Central Prison for a year and 11 months and fined two hundred dollars or an additional three months in jail. "It appeared from the evidence that Flynn had sold the liquor that put McDonald out, after when Flynn took advantage of his condition and relieved him of his wad. It appeared also that Flynn had smuggled the liquor from the Michigan side, and had then sold it to McDonald. The police have suspected Flynn of illegal traffic in liquor for some time, but could not trip him up until the McDonald case came on. Flynn was remanded for sentence on the charges of smuggling and selling smuggled goods."

NEGAUNEE GETS IT TODAY

THE ESCANABA AND NEGAUNEE TEAMS PLAY SECOND GAME OF THE CHAMPIONSHIP SERIES.

ESCANABA LOSES BY 1-0, SCORE

First Game is a Cinch for the Local Nolden is in Fine Form and Holds The Negaunees to Four Hits, While Escanaba Clouts the Sphere Safely Nine Times--Also Play Errorless Ball-Mining Journal's Account of the Game.

(Special to the Mirror.) Negaunee, Mich., Sept. 16.--At Union Park this afternoon the Escanaba team was defeated by a score of 1 to 0 in the second of the games of the series for the upper peninsula championship. The game was fast and closely contested from start to finish.

According to the Negaunee correspondent in The Marquette Mining Journal, the score of the first game, played at Negaunee yesterday afternoon, of the series for the baseball championship was 6 to 0 in favor of Escanaba, instead of 7 to 0, as was reported to the Escanaba papers. Whichever score is correct does not matter. The fact remains that Escanaba won, and most decisively at that. As a result, the local fans are highly confident that today's game will also be taken by Escanaba.

Following is The Mining Journal's running story of yesterday's game: Escanaba won from Negaunee yesterday at the Union Park grounds in the first of a series of six games to be played for the championship of the upper peninsula, by a score of 6 to 0. While Nolden, in the box for Escanaba, pitched effectively and was given perfect support, the Marquette county fans were unanimous in the belief that Empire Matt, of Escanaba, favored his team every time he had an opportunity. He umpired the balls and strikes, and Harris officiated at the bases. Matt was severely roasted by the fans, particularly in the sixth inning. In the sixth he called Cullis out at the home plate when he seemed to be safe.

MANY MAY GO DRY ON WISCONSIN TRAINS

Passengers, in a Frenzied Hunt for Drinking Cups, Condemn Railway Officials, Who are, However, Only Obeying the Law--Cups are Sold at All Stations.

Escanaba people who since September 1 have had occasion to travel by rail in Wisconsin find that drinking cups are no longer to be found on the passenger trains in that state. As a result it is stated that the railroad officials and trainmen are receiving many complaints from passengers who have neglected to supply themselves with cups and are compelled to make the purchase enroute if they desire to quench their thirst.

All drinking cups in trains and depot waiting rooms have been discarded since the new regulation went into effect September 1, making it unlawful to have drinking cups in any public place or on a train.

Passengers making interstate trips through Wisconsin are usually uninformed in this respect and make their complaints when the cups are removed as soon as the train crosses the line into that state. For the information of patrons large cards have been printed and hung above the drinking places in trains and waiting rooms calling the attention of travellers to the state law prohibiting the use of drinking cups in the state.

The Chicago & Northwestern road issued a notice sometime ago, calling attention to the Wisconsin law relative to the drinking cups and stating that the road would comply with its provisions.

The cups are used, however, on the trains as soon as they enter another state, being simply stored away in the baggage cars while the trains pass through Wisconsin.

As an accommodation to passengers in the state drinking cups are kept for sale at all lunch counters, news stands and on all trains.

UNCLE VISITS KIN AFTER MANY YEARS

John and Clifford Barron, of Escanaba township were greatly surprised this morning when a rig drove up to their farm containing their uncle, Napoleon Barron, of Williamstown, Mass., whom they have not seen in 43 years. The time John and Clifford saw their uncle was in Canada just before they came to this country and located here. Napoleon Barron, the uncle, went to Massachusetts, where he has since built up an enviable business and is one of the influential men of the community. Before returning to his home in the east, Mr. Barron will visit for several weeks in this section of the state.

STATE MEET OF INTEREST

Republican Convention in Detroit Oct. 6 Will be Important Pow-Wow--Osborn and Townsend to Take Charge of Party Machinery--Story.

Some exceptionally significant events are expected to make the convention of the Republicans of Michigan in Detroit on October 6 an unusually important party pow-wow. Men from the upper country clan, from the lower country tribes and from the city wigwams are expected to foregather on this occasion and smoke the pipe of peace, in announcing the end of their internecine strife and their allegiance to the new chief. Some may be recalcitrant, some will come in to lay down their arms and some will come in to display the scalps they have taken, but it is expected that when the council is ended harmony will rule and everybody will be ready to join in the common cause against the enemy.

Will Be Peaceful Gathering. It is the general opinion that no overt act by anyone will mar the gathering and that the new leaders will take their places of honor with no surly insurgents growling over the change of the order of things in Michigan. Chase S. Osborn as the nominee for governor will undoubtedly be a ruling factor in the convention and there are indications that his friends expect to take over the party machinery.

In many sections of the state wise schemers are urging that when the party gathers in convention, no attempt be made to take up national issues in the campaign which has only to do with the state government, but that there be a clear expression of opinion regarding domestic affairs and the national affairs be left to gatherings specially called to consider those, weighty matters. There are those, however, who want to roll up the bundle of state affairs in one paragraph and devote the remainder of the platform announcements to things of interest to all the states. What friends of Hon. Charles E. Townsend want along this line will probably govern, as the party's nominee for senator cannot fail to occupy a position of great influence in the convention. It is generally understood that the Townsend and Osborn men will work in perfect harmony, and their views will unquestionably be the views of the convention.

Quick Work of Ticket. The general talk is that the making of the ticket will not be a serious nor difficult task. No one has ever intimated a desire to oppose Judge

John E. Bird for nomination for justice of the supreme court, and it's pretty late to begin now. More and more talk is heard which indicates an extensive sentiment in favor of nominating Attorney General Fanz Kuhn for the position he now holds. It is conceded he has made good and is entitled to the nomination on the same theory as was held in the case of Judge Collingwood.

The Republicans who hold the other places on the state government for which nominations are to be made have only served one term and under all precedents are entitled to their second term, but there is talk that in some quarters of party expediency which may require some upper peninsula man to abandon his second term ambitions in order to prevent the concentration of officers in that part of the state. Aside from Mr. Osborn there is Auditor General Fuller and State Superintendent of Public Instruction Wright from above the straits. If Mr. Osborn's friends control the convention as seems probable it will be up to them to settle this question themselves in the light of their knowledge of conditions and sentiment throughout the state. Osborn's friends have said that they have no intention of deposing Fuller and Wright's nomination does not come until spring. Fuller has been endorsed by many county conventions already held.

LOCAL SPORTSMEN TO ATTEND TOURNAMENT

Escanaba sportsmen are taking considerable interest in the coming annual tournament of the Upper Peninsula Sportsmen's association, which is to be held in Channing next Wednesday and Thursday. Teams from Escanaba, Ishpeming, Marquette, Houghton, Sault Ste. Marie, Manistique and Munising are expected to compete. There will be two fifteen birds... Jackrabbit system of money division will prevail. It is expected that many of the leading gun and ammunition houses will be represented at the tournament by crack marksmen. Among the latter will be Graham who made 425 straight at Chicago recently.

FALL INTO ORE POCKET KILLS THOMAS PEPIN

Laborer on Northwestern Ore Docks Falls From Top of Ore Car Into an Empty Pocket and is So Seriously Injured That He Dies Several Hours Later--Cause of Accident Unknown.

Thomas Pepin, aged about fifty years, who had been in the employ of the Chicago & Northwestern Railway company for a number of years, died at the Delta County hospital about three o'clock this afternoon from the effect of injuries which he received through falling from the top of an ore car into an empty pocket of No. 4 ore dock. The fatal accident occurred about eleven o'clock this forenoon, but no body appears to know how Pepin came to fall. Immediately after the accident the injured man was hurried to the Delta County hospital, where the company surgeon made every effort to save his life. But little could be done, however, for the unfortunate man's skull was fractured in several places and he was otherwise injured.

The deceased was among the oldest employees on the ore docks and was held in high regard by those with whom he was acquainted. He was unmarried. It could not be positively learned this afternoon whether he had any relatives in the city, but it is believed that he had some cousins here. Funeral arrangements have not yet been made.

DAY OF PERSONALITIES PAST.
Two northern Iowa editors have signed a peace pact and agree not to indulge in any further personal abuse, one of the other. The conclusion is sensible, remarks the Monticello (Ia.) Express, but it would have been not only more sensible but wiser if the occasion for the agreement had never arisen. They are both smirched with the filth intended for the other, and among some good people they have the reputation of being blackguards. The day of personal journalism is past. The occasional newspaper man who now-a-days uses the language of the fish market in his controversies with those who do not agree with him belongs to that period that is not now. The public cares nothing for the personal quarrels and spiteful doings of the publisher of a newspaper.—The Publishers' Auxiliary.

SHORTAGE OF PREACHERS.
When the Iowa Methodist conference convened in Charles City this week, it found it was face to face with a shortage in the number of preachers. Fifty-seven men, the greater number of them young and in the prime of life, announced that they will quit the ministry and engage in secular work. Many of these men are recently out of the university and seminary. The general complaint is that the salary paid a minister is not sufficient for him to maintain a family according to a decent standard of living, and to give his children an education. Some of them, men who have spent from four to six and seven years in the seminary are asked to fill charges where the salary is less than $700 a year and instances are quoted where preachers are receiving less than $500 a year.

The same problem is likely to be met in South Dakota at the next conference, particularly in the southern parts of the state, where the pastor's work not only includes the regular

VOTE IS SMALL IN FREEPORT

Indications Point to Nomination of McKenzie, Rawleigh and Rigney.

Great interest is shown, however, in the nomination of Tiffany of Freeport, and McKenzie of Elizabeth, for congress and Rawleigh of Freeport, Rigney of Red Oak, and Gillispie for representative from the Twelfth senatorial district.

Indications point to the nomination of McKenzie, for congress, and Rawleigh and Rigney for the legislature.

NEGRO BARBER IS ATTACKED BY MOB

Claimed to Love White Girl and Demanded Sum of Money.

RESIDENTS PREDICT LYNCHING

Officer Protects Prisoner from Angry Citizens Who Hurl Stones at Negro Under Arrest—More Trouble is Feared.

York, Pa., Sept. 16.—James Yellets, a colored barber of Wrightsville, was attacked by a mob of several hundred persons who made a strenuous effort to lynch him because he had sent a Black Hand letter to Miss Helen Detweiler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Detweiler, prominent residents of Borough. The negro was slightly injured by the mob, but he was finally lodged in the Borough lock-up by Constables Wilson and McCauley, who had to fight their way to the prison.

In his letter to Miss Detweiler the negro after stating that he was in love with her, demanded that she place $25 at a certain place on the Detweiler farm or forfeit her life. Miss Detweiler, as well as her parents, were greatly alarmed and decided that they would do as the letter requested.

Going to the place designated in the letter Mr. Detweiler and his daughter were in the act of depositing the money when they saw a negro standing in a cornfield watching their actions. Mr. Detweiler started after the colored man, but he was too fleet of foot and escaped. Miss Detweiler recognized the negro as Yellets and a warrant was sworn out for his arrest.

News of the negro's threats spread like wildfire and when the constables took him into custody a crowd collected and there were cries of "lynch him; give him justice now." Some threw stones at him, some of which struck him. The residents, it is feared, may attempt to take him from the officers when they bring him to the county jail.

FIERCE BATTLE OF BALLOTS IN VOTE

New Primary Law Given First Test With Heavy Vote.

HENRY S. BOUTELL DEFEATED

Joseph G. Cannon Renominated by Big Margin—Browne, Wilson, Broderick, Shurtleff Successful—List of Nominees.

Chicago, Sept. 16.—The renomination of Joseph G. Cannon for congress by a generous margin over Dr. Downs, the overwhelming defeat of Representative Henry S. Boutell, standpatter, in the Ninth district by F. H. Gansberger, insurgent; the probable defeat of Representative George R. Foss in the Tenth district, and the renomination of nearly all the legislators who were charged with participation in the "legislative jackpot," are the striking features of the Illinois state wide primary election.

Representative James R. Mann, against whom a strong fight was made by two insurgents, Joseph R. Burrell and Louis J. Behan, in the Second district has won. His friends did heroic work for him at the polls, believing he will be a formidable candidate for speaker of the house to succeed Uncle Joe Cannon.

Boutell lost the nomination by over 1,000 votes.

Lee O'Neil Browne, who was acquitted last week of the charge of bribing legislators to vote for William Lorimer for senator, is renominated.

Robert E. Wilson, of Chicago, under indictment for perjury and charged by other legislators in court with having distributed part of the "jackpot" in a St. Louis hotel bathroom, is renominated by a positive majority.

John Broderick is also renominated. Edward D. Shurtleff, speaker of the house, is believed to be renominated. David E. Shanahan of Chicago, an old member of the house, who has come in for a great deal of criticism wins easily.

In other congressional districts the results are: Madden, renominated for the First district; W. R. Wilson in the Third; Adolph L. Sabath, Fifth; Frederick Lundy, Seventh; Charles Fuller, Twelfth; James McKinney, Fourteenth; George W. Prince, Fifteenth; Joseph W. Graft, Sixteenth; John A. Sterling, Seventeenth; William R. McKinley, Nineteenth; Henry T. Rainey, Twentieth; James M. Graham, Twenty-First, and N. B. Thistlewood, Twenty-Fifth.

In the Eleventh, Col. Ira C. Copely is nominated over George W. Conn. Jr., as the candidate of the regulars. Early indications are that John McKenzie won the nomination over I. F. Edwards in the Thirteenth.

Heavy vote, disorder and several arrests on allegations of fraud marked the first test of the new primary law in Chicago. It was estimated at the office of the election commissioners that the total vote was but little less than 2,200,000 prophesied—perhaps 185,000. Commissioner Hudson believed.

First Congressional District—Congressman Maddec, renominated by a good majority. Doubt as to the Democratic result with Maher probably in the lead.

Second District—Congressman Mann renominated handsily over J. R. Burrell and L. J. Behan. Orvo G. Williams seems to lead J. C. Vaughan for the Democratic nomination.

Third District—Congressman Wilson renominated over Harry F. Atwood, insurgent, by a good majority. Fred J. Crowley in the lead for the Democratic nomination.

Fourth District—Congressman McDermott renominated by the Democrats. Republican candidates in a close race.

Fifth District—Congressman Sabath overwhelmingly renominated by the Democrats.

Sixth District—Congressman Moxley an easy winner in the Republican primaries. Democratic result in doubt.

Seventh District—Lundin an easy winner over Webster.

Eighth District—Congressman Gallagher no opposition for Democratic renomination.

Much disorder and several cases of fraud, actual and attempted, accompanied heavy voting in practically all parts of the city.

Arrests for alleged frauds took place in the Second and Twenty-Second wards. That in the Second was for vote buying and that in the Twenty-Second for repeating.

STOKES STILL IN THE LEAD

New Jersey Race for Senate is Very Close—Returns Still Coming.

Trenton, N. J., Sept. 16.—With 200 or more districts still to be heard from, indications are that Ex-Gov. Stokes was the popular choice for United States senator at Tuesday's primaries by a plurality of about 4,000 over Ex-Gov. Murphy and Representative C. N. Fowler.

Although the three-cornered fight is so close that the missing districts may turn the result in favor of any one of the candidates, the gains by Stokes point strongly to his being the high man.

A Strictly Cash Business

The Escanaba Steam Laundry Co. Decide to Do Cash Business.

We have hereby decided to carry on a strictly cash business, on and after August 1, 1910.

Our reasons for doing so are as follows: FIRST: Our accounts being necessarily small, an endless amount of confusion and expense is entailed to an injurious degree, and the loss in collections and time and attention it requires we can give to our work rooms and insure a higher standard of work.

SECOND: Our current expenses are cash and must be paid when due. The stand we have taken is one we have been forced into and we hope all will lend us their aid.

"In summer, yes, but now—you can't go to it. It has been tried too often. The trails are always rough, and the weather is too cold to sit all day in a omlak; you'd freeze."

"We'll chance it."

"No, no, no! If it comes on to storm you'll go to sea. The tides are strong; you can't see your course and—"

"We'll use a compass. Now, you get enough men to handle that omlak; that's a good fellow. I'll attend to the rest."

"But they won't go," declared the little fat man. "They know what it means. Why?"

"Call them in. I'll do the talking," and accordingly the storekeeper went in search of the village chief, shaking a head and muttering at the madness of these people.

But it all proved useless. The natives would not risk it. Desperate, the three men fitted up a boat themselves and resolved to make the attempt.

CHAPTER V.

ALL three knew the desperate chance they were taking, and they spoke little as they made their way out into the straits. Their craft was strange to them, and the positions they were forced to occupy soon brought on cramped muscles. The bidarka is a small, narrow framework over which is stretched walrus skin, and it is so fashioned that the crew sits, one behind the other, in circular openings with legs straight out in front.

Gradually, imperceptibly, the mountain shores behind them shrank down on the gray horizon. It seemed that once the weather was going to be good to them, and their spirits rose in consequence. They ate frequently, and being the great fuel of the north, the middy found them well upon a heavy bosom of the straits with the Kadiak shores plainly visible, as if tired of toying with them, the wind rose. Had it sprung from the north it would have wafted them their way, but it drew in from the straits, straight into their teeth, forcing them to redouble their exertions. The hope that it would die down in the darkness the boatmen held their course, and night closed over them still paddling silently.

It was nearly noon of the following day when the watchman at the Uyak merely beheld a native canoe creeping slowly up the bay and was astonished to find it manned by three white men in the last stages of exhaustion. They, in fact, was unconscious and had to be carried to the house. He did marvel, however, that another travelers should begin to cry when told that the mail boat called for Kadiak the previous evening.

Too bad you didn't get in last night," said the caretaker sympathetically. "She won't be back now for a month or more."

"How long will she lie in Kadiak?" George asked.

The captain told me he was going to spend Christmas there. Let's see—is the 23d. She'll pull out for Juon on the morning of the 26th; that's days."

HE COULD NOT WALK, BUT CREEPT.

"I must catch her," cried Emerson quickly. "If you'll land us in Kaon time I'll pay you anything you like to, but I can't," the man replied. "You see, I'm here all alone, for Johnson. He's the watchman for the other plant."

Emerson turned his eyes upon the old man who sprawled weakly in the chair. And Fraser, noting the answered gamely with a forced smile on his lips, though they were pale and bloodless.

"I'll be ready to leave in the morning, pal!"

the old Russian village of Kadiak on the opposite side of the island the canneries, a bleak, wind-relic of the country's first economation, and although peopled largely by natives and breeds, there is also a considerable white population, to whom Christmas is a season of thanksgiving and celebration, and it causes much comment when late on Christmas afternoon an ice burdened canoe, bearing three strange white men, landed on the beach beside the dock—or were they white men, after all? Their faces were so blackened and split from the frost they seemed to be raw bleeding masks, and their hands were cracked and stiff beneath their mittens. They were hollow eyed and gaunt, their cheeks sunken away as if from a wasting illness, and they could not walk, but crept across the snow covered single on hands and knees, then, reaching the street, hobbled painfully, while their limbs gave way as if paralyzed.

A week later Boyd and George were watching the lights of Port Townsend blink out in the gloom astra. A quick change of boats at Juneau had raked their spirits, enabling them to complete the second stage of their journey in less than the expected time.

"I suppose a feller has got to dress pretty swell back there in Chicago," George ventured. "Full dress suits of clothes, eh?"

"Yes."

"Did you ever wear one?"

"Certainly."

"Well, I'll be— The fisherman checked himself and gazed at his companion as if he saw him suddenly in a new light. "Right along?" he questioned incredulously.

"Why, yes; pretty steadily."

"All day at a time?"

Boyd laughed. "I haven't worn one in the daytime since I left college. They are used only at night."

"A feller told me a funny thing once," went on George. "He said them rich men back east had women come around and clean their finger nails and shine 'em up. Is that right?"

"Quite right."

"Well, I don't suppose you ever had 'em—shine your finger nails, did you?"

"Yes."

The big man opened his mouth to speak, then, evidently changing his mind, observed, "Seems to me I'd better stay here on the coast and wait for you."

"No, indeed!" the other answered quickly. "I will need you in raising that money. You know the practical side of the fishing business, and I don't."

Finally the steamer docked, and the three men put up at a hotel.

"You better train me up to wearing a dress suit before we get east," George warned, "or I'll make your swell friends sore and spoil the deal. I could wear it on the cars and get easy in it."

"My dear fellow, it takes more than a week to get easy in a dress suit," Boyd smiled, amused at his earnestness, for the big fellow was merely a boy out on a wonderful vacation.

"Well, if there is a down east manure woman in Seattle show her to me, and I'll practice on her," he insisted. "She can halter break me at least."

It was the labor of several hours to fit Big George's bulky frame, and when the two returned to the hotel Emerson found the representative of an afternoon newspaper anxiously awaiting him at the desk.

"Mr. Athens sent me down to get a story."

"Athens—Billy Athens?"

"Yes. He is the editor. I believe you two were college mates. He wanted to know if you are the Boyd Emerson of the Michigan football team."

"Well, well," Boyd mused. "Billy Athens was a good tackle."

"He thought you might have something interesting to tell about Alaska. Your partner has been telling me all about you and your trip and your great success."

"My partner?"

"Yes. Mr. Frobisher volunteered an interview in your name."

"Frobisher?" said Emerson.

"Sure. That's him over yonder." The reporter indicated "Fingerless" Fraser, who, having watched the interview from a distance, now solemnly closed one eye and stuck his tongue into his cheek.

"Oh, yes, yes—Frobisher!" Boyd stammered. "Certainly!"

"He is a character, isn't he? He told me how you rescued that girl when she broke through the ice at Kalvik."

"He did?"

"Quite a romance, isn't it? It's a good newspaper story, and I'll play it up. He is going to let me in on that hydraulic proposition of yours too. Of course I haven't much money, but it sounds great, and—"

"How far along did you get with your negotiations about this hydraulic proposition?" Boyd asked curiously.

"Just far enough so I'm all on edge for it. I'll make up a little pool among the boys at the office and have the money down here before you leave tonight."

"I am sorry, but Mr. Frobisher and I will have to talk it over first," said Emerson grimly. "I think we will keep that hydraulic proposition in the family, so to speak."

"Then you won't let me in?"

"Not just at present."

"I'm sorry. I should like to take a chance with somebody who is really successful at mining. When a fellow drowns along on a salary month after month it makes him envious to see you Klondikers hit town with satchels full of coin. Perhaps you will give me a chance later on?"

"Perhaps," acceded Boyd, but when the young man had gone he strode quickly over to Fraser.

"Look here, Mr. Frobisher," he said in a low tone, "what do you mean by mixing me up in your petty larceny frands?"

Fraser grinned. "Frobisher is hot monaker, ain't it? It sounds like the money. I believe I'll stick to 'Frobisher.'"

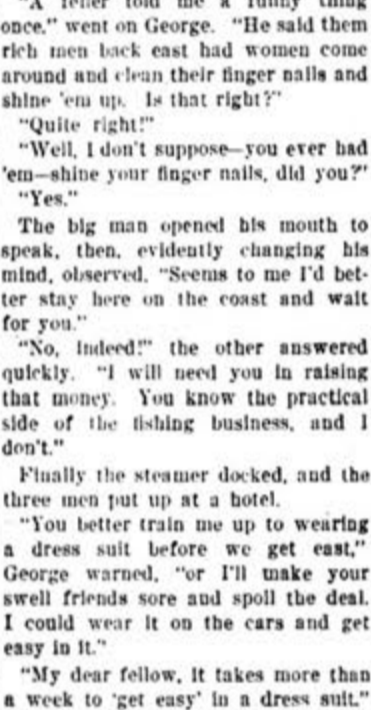

"I spiked your miserab' little scheme, and if you try anything more like that I'll have to cut you out altogether."

"Fshaw!" said the adventurer mildly. "Did you say that hydraulic mine was no good? Too bad! That reporter agreed to take some stock right away."

"Now, see here, Fraser, I want you to leave me out of your machinations absolutely. You've been very decent to me in many ways, but if I hear of anything more like this I shall hand you over to the police."

"Don't be a sucker all your life," admonished the rogue, "You stick to me and I'll make you a lot of money. I like you."

Emerson, now seriously angry, wheeled and left him, realizing that the fellow was morally atrophied. He could not forget, however, that except for this impossible creature he himself would be lying at Petelin's store at Katnal with no faintest hope of completing his mission, wherefore he did his best to swallow his indignation.

Boyd hurried to a telegraph office and despatched two messages to Chicago, one addressed to his own tailor, the other to a number on Lake Shore drive. Over the latter he pondered long, tearing up several drafts which did not suit him, finally giving one to the operator with an odd mingling of timidity and defiance. This done, he hastened to one of the leading banks, and two hours later returned to the hotel, jubilant.

He found Big George in the lobby, staring with fascinated eyes at his finger nails, which were strangely purified and glossy.

"Look at 'em," the fisherman broke out admiringly. "They're as clean as a hound's tooth. They shine so I dasent take hold of anything."

"I have made my deal with the bank," Boyd exulted. "All I need to raise now is $100,000. The bank will advance the rest. That $100,000 makes all the difference in the world. The task is easy now. We will make it go sure. These bankers know what that salmon business is. Why, I had no trouble at all. They say we can't lose if we have a good site on the Kalvik river."

"That evening Boyd and George started away, but could not locate Fraser. When the train pulled out a familiar voice greeted them:

"Hello, you!"—and there was Fraser, grinning.

"What are you doing here?"

"Oh, I'm on my way east."

"Whereabouts east?"

"Chicago, ain't it? I thought that was what you said." He seated himself and lighted another long cigar.

"Are you going to Chicago?" George asked.

"Sure, we've got to put this cannery deal over," the crook sighed luxuriously and began to blow smoke rings.

"Pretty nice train, ain't it?"

"Yes," ejaculated Emerson, undecided whether to be pleased or angered at the fellow's presence. "Which is your car?"

"This one—same as yours. I've got the drawing room."

"What are you going to do in Chi-was almost wistfully sweet.

He recalled how excited he had been in that faraway time when he had first learned her identity, for the name of Wayland was spoken soundly in the middle west. In the early stages of their acquaintance he had looked upon her aloofness as an affectation, but a close intimacy had compelled a recognition of it as something wholly natural. He found her as truly patriotic as Wayne Wayland, her father, could wish. The old man's domain was greater than that of many princes, and his power more absolute. His only daughter he spoiled as thoroughly as he ruled his part of the financial world, and willful Mildred, once she had taken an interest in the young college man so evidently ready to be numbered among her lovers, did not pause half way, but made her preference patent to all and opened to him a realm of dazzling possibilities.

And when he had graduated how proud of her he had been! How little he had realized the gulf that set atod them, and how quick had been his awakening!

It was Wayne Wayland who had shown him his folly. He had talked to the young engineer kindly, if firmly, being too shrewd an old diplomat to fan the flame of a headstrong love with vigorous opposition.

"Mildred is a rich girl," the old financier had told Boyd, "a very rich girl, one of the richest girls in this part of the world, while you, my boy—what have you to offer?"

"Nothing! But you were not always what you are now," Emerson had replied. "Every man has to make a start. When you married you were as poor as I am."

"Granted! But I married a poor girl from my own station in life. Fortunately she had the latent power to develop with me as I grew, so that we kept even and I never outdistanced her. But Mildred is spoiled to begin with. I spoiled her purposely to prevent just this sort of thing. She is bred to luxury, her friends are rich."

"Oh, I ain't fully decided yet, but I might do a little promoting. Seattle is too full of Alaskan snares."

The younger man shook his head. "You are impossible," said he, "and yet I can't help liking you."

In Chicago, as in Seattle, Fraser accompanied his fellow travelers to their hotel and would have registered himself under some high sounding alias except for a whispered threat from Boyd.

Promptly at 4 o'clock Emerson called a cab and was driven toward the north side. As the vehicle rolled up Lake Shore drive the excitement under which he had been laboring for days increased until he tapped his feet nervously, clinched his gloved fingers and patted the cushions as if to accelerate the horse's footfalls. Would he never arrive?

The vehicle drew up at last before one of the most pretentious residences, a massive pile of stone and brick fronting the lake with what seemed to him a singularly proud and chilling aspect. During the moments that he waited he found his body pulsating to the slow, heavy thumping of his heart; then a familiar face greeted him.

"How do you do, Hawkins?" he heard himself saying as a liveried old man ushered him in. "Is Miss Wayland in?"

"Yes, sir, she is expecting you, Tis way, please."

Boyd followed, thankful for the subdued light which might conceal his agitation. He knew where they were going; she had always awaited him in the library, so it seemed.

Hawkins held the portieres aside, and Boyd heard their velvet swish at his back, yet for the briefest instant he did not see her, so motionless did she stand. Then he cried softly:

"My lady!" and strode forward.

"Boyd! Boyd!" she answered, and came to meet him, yielding herself to his arms. She felt his heart pounding against hers like the heart of a runner who has spent himself at the tape, felt his arms quivering as if from great fatigue. For a long time neither spoke.

CHAPTER VI.

AND so all your privations and hardships went for nothing," said Mildred Wayland when Boyd had recounted the history of his pilgrimage into the north.

"Yes," he replied; "as a miner I am a very wretched failure."

She shrugged her shoulders in disapproval.

"Don't use that term," she cried. "There is no word so hateful to me as 'failure.' I suppose because father has never failed in anything. Let us say that your success has been delayed."

"Very well. That suits me better also, but you see I've forgotten how to choose nice words."

They were seated in the library, where for two hours they had remained undisturbed, Emerson talking rapidly, almost incoherently.

"And you did all that for me," she mused. "I wonder if any other man I know would take those risks just for me."

"Of course, / why, the risk, I mean the physical/peril and hardship and discomfort, don't amount to—that." He snapped his fingers. "It was only the unending desolation that hurt; it was the separation from you that punished me—the thought that some luckier fellow might—"

"Nonsense!" Mildred was really indignant. "I told you to fix your own time, and I promised to wait. Even if I had not—cared for you I would have kept my word. That is a Wayland principle. As it is, it was—comparatively easy."

"Then you do love me, my lady?" He leaned eagerly toward her.

"Do you need to ask?" she whispered from the shelter of his arms. "It is the same old fascination of our girl and boy days. Do you remember how completely I lost my head about you?" She laughed softly. "I used to think you wore a football suit better than anybody in the world! Sometimes I suspect that it is merely that same girlish hero worship and can't last. But it has lasted—so far. Three years is a long time for a girl like me to wait, isn't it?"

"I know, I know!" he returned jealously.

"But legions of men are courting you. Oh, I know. Haven't I devoured society columns by the yard? The papers were six months old, to be sure, when I got them, but every mention of you was just like a knife stab to me. I used to torture my lonely soul with pictures of you. You were never out of mind for an hour. My days were given to you, and I used to pray that my dreams might hold nothing but you. You have been my fetish from the first day I met you, and my worship has grown blinder every hour, Mildred. Oh, my lady, how beautiful you are!"

And indeed she was, for her face, ordinarily so imperious, was now softly alight; her eyes, which other men found cold, were kindled with a rare warmth of understanding; her smile

PRESENCE OF MIND.

Wellington's Cool Interview With a Murderous Maniac.

One day as the Duke of Wellington sat writing at his library table quite alone his door was suddenly opened without a knock or announcement of any sort, and in stalked a gaunt man who stood before the commander in chief with his hat on and a savage expression of countenance.

The duke was of course a little annoyed at such an unceremonious interruption, and, looking up, he asked, "Who are you?" "I am Dionysius," was the singular answer. "Well, what do you want?" "Your life," "My life?" "Yes; I am sent to kill you."

"Very odd," said the duke, sitting back and calmly gazing at the intruder. "Not at all, for I am Dionysius," said the stranger, "and I must put you to death." "Are you obliged to perform this duty today?" asked the commander in chief. "I am very busy just now and have a large number of letters to write. It would be very inconvenient today." The visitor looked hard during a moment's pause. "Call again," continued the duke, "or write and make an appointment." "You'll be ready?" "Without fail," was the reply.

The maniac, awed doubtless by the stern old soldier, backed out of the room without further words and half an hour later was safe in bedlam.—London Graphic.

FULL OF GRATITUDE.

But the Little One Had a Queer Way of Expressing It.

Mr. Brown's business kept him so occupied during the daytime that he had little opportunity to enjoy the society of his own children. When some national holiday gave him a day of leisure his young son was usually his chosen companion. One day, however, Mr. Brown, reproached by the wistful eyes of his seven-year-old daughter, reversed the order of things and invited the little girl to go with him for a long walk.

She was a shy, silent, small person, and during the two hours' stroll not a single word could Mr. Brown induce the little maid to speak, but her shining eyes attested that she appreciated his efforts to amuse her—indeed, she fairly glowed with suppressed happiness.

Just before they reached home, however, the child managed, but only after a tremendous struggle with her inherent timidity, to find words to express her gratitude.

"Papa, what flower do you like best?" she asked.

"Why, I don't know, my dear—any flowers, I guess."

"Then," cried the little girl, beaming with gratitude, "that's what I'll plant on your grave!"—Exchange.

Our Daily Short Story

An Evangelist

By OLIVE EDNA MAY

Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association

"Elijah," said Mrs. Dunkers, "thurs an evangelist goin' to preach for us nex' Sunday. I wish you'd go 'n' hear him. You 'foun' know how mis'able it makes me to be in the fold and have my husband out of it."

"What's an evangelist?"
"An evangelist is one of them ministers the Lord sends onct in a while to stir up the feelin's o' them as can't be teched by ordinary means."
"One of whom I am which."
"Yes, you be, Elijah. I'm sorry to say it. I hope you'll go and hear this hoy man and mebbe he'll teeh your heart."

Mahulda Dunkers sighed and walked away. Her efforts to bring her husband under the influences that guided her always proved abortive. He was a matter of fact man, while she was emotional. By some he was called a scoffer, though no one ever heard him speak disrespectfully of religion. He disliked cant and those disposed to cant called him a scoffer because he was not of their ilk. The couple lived in the far west where extremes were in vogue. This had made the wife an extremist in matters of religion. If the husband was an extremist it was in the manifest presence of the devil who seemed to guide both the good and the bad in Nuggetville.

Sunday morning came and a few minutes before service time a man in clerical garb was seen descending the trail. He walked with a firm step and carried a prayer book in his hand. The Reverend Mr. Sautly was unknown to a single person in Nuggetville. He had sent word that he would preach there on that Sunday morning and hoped that he would move every un-Christian man, woman and child in the camp to repentance.

Elijah Dunkers saw the evangelist coming and watched him descend the canyon.

"What makes ye scowl so, Elijah?" asked his wife. "It seems that every-thing holy has a contrary effect on ye. Can't you look at a man of God without showin' the impurity there is in ye? It isn't you that's scowlin' at this servant of the Lord; it's the devil that's got a hold on yer heart."
"Jes' you go to meetin', Mahulda. What ye got to put in the hat?"
"I got four ounces o' dirt."
"Ye goin' to give four ounces o' dirt to that?"
"Forbear, Elijah! Forbear! Don't speak impudently of the Lord's anointin'."

Elijah turned away. His wife made one more effort to induce him to accompany her to the grove that was one of "God's first temples," but he paid no attention to her.

The evangelist found the people of Nuggetville assembling and taking seats on the boards ranged in front of a stump to which a piece of scantling supporting an inclined bit of timber for a book rest was fastened. Mounting the stump he said:

"My friends, I wish before beginning the service to ask if any one of you have brought to this place consecrated to the Lord's service any of those hellish machines used to kill your fellow men. If so please go and deposit them at the foot of that tree over yonder."

He waited while several of the men present, awed by his impressive tone, deposited their revolvers and knives as he directed. When they were again seated the evangelist asked if any other person was desecrating the place and called down the wrath of heaven upon them if they were. This resulted in the deposit of two more weapons, after which the service proceeded.

Mr. Sautly proved to be one of those men who have the faculty of pouring forth a torrent of words, working on their hearers more by their personal intensity than by what they say. Excitable himself, he excited others. His word pictures of the terrible damnation in store for those who did not do what he told them to do were lurid as an approaching tornado. Mrs. Dunkers, the most emotional woman in the congregation, became hysterical. The evangelist finished his exhortation with the following words:

"And now, my hearers, I wish you to plant on this holy ground a church. I desire that one of your number pass around the hat to receive your contributions, and remember that as you give so shall you be received at the last day into heaven."

A white headed man arose, passed around a hat, and when he had finished set it down, overflowing with gold dust and coins, at a point indicated by the evangelist. Then the good man dismounted from the pulpit stump, walked up to the hat, faced the congregation, drew a .12 caliber revolver, covered those present, picked up the hat and said:

"You're the easiest plucked lot o' galoots I ever relieved o' their dust."

He was turning to walk away with the plunder when a shot knocked his revolver out of his hand, and before he could recover Elijah Dunkers had downed him.

"I knowed ye," said Elijah, "as soon as I saw ye comin' down the canyon. Ye won't play evangelist no more."

That evening after a rope ceremony at Nuggetville, Mrs. Dunkers was very sad.

"I'm thinkin', Elijah," she said, "that practicin' religion and makin' fools of ourselves is two different things."

HUNTING THE WALRUS.

The Eskimo Takes Advantage of the Animal's Curiosity.

In his frail skinboat it is a difficult and dangerous task for the Eskimo to go out to sea forty to sixty miles and intercept the walrus as he passes on his migration into the Arctic.

One carcass will fill his boat, for it weighs from 1,000 to 3,000 pounds. He hunts the walrus when they are lying asleep on the ice floes in herds from ten to several hundred. Death must be instantaneous, else with a few rolls of the peculiar lumbering, bumping movement (seen of the seal when ashore), he makes the few feet to the water and then is lost, as he has not sufficient blubber and air to float. He has much natural curiosity, and if not scared by shots will come up close to your boat or the ice floe on which you are sitting, snorting and rolling his eyes; with his gleaming tusks and bristled snout he has an unwary, goblin, monster-like appearance. A herd of fifty or sixty of them will come up en masse, raise high out of the water to stare at you, then snort, spurt and disappear again, only to come up on the same spot and repeat the maneuver indefinitely. Taking advantage of this the Eskimos hide behind ice hummocks and throw a harpoon into one, then submerge the rawhide line around an ice cake. He must perform come up to blow, and he is then killed with the rifle. The thick skin and the mass of blubber and meat beneath render him almost invulnerable.—Pacific Monthly.

Warmth Not Wanted.

"This would be a pleasant world if people put more warmth—genuine warmth—in their letters," said the man of sentiment.

"I don't agree with you," replied his worried friend, "there was a warmth about some of the business letters I got this morning that I didn't at all like."

ONLY ONE OF HIS KIND.

The Reason the Judge Refused to Hang on to the Horse.

During the second Cleveland campaign Colonel John P. Irish, the golden tongued orator, and Judge Kinne of Waterloo, Ia., the man with lungs of brass, were stumping Iowa in behalf of the Democratic candidate.

They were driving in a buggy on the road to Sidney, a young city in the southwestern part of the state, when they came to a fork of the road where there was no sign board. Which turn to take was a question, as they had barely time to make the town anyway.

"There's a farmhouse over there a bit. You sit still, and I'll go over and ask questions," said Irish, and, climbing out, he started for the desired information. He got it and on his return saw the horse, evidently frightened at something, tearing down the road at runaway speed. Instead of trying to stop the horse, Judge Kinne dropped the reins, climbed over the seat and dropped off the back of the buggy into the road.

When Irish caught up to him the judge was busily dusting himself off after his roll in the roadway, not in the least disfigured by his acrobatic stunt.

"You're on the right fork of the road, all right, judge, but why didn't you hang on to the horse?" asked Irish, laughing heartily.

"Why didn't I hang on to him?" rumbled Kinne in his deep subcellar voice. "I'll tell you why I didn't, my Christian friend. There's lots of horses in this world, but there is but one Judge Kinne."—Los Angeles Times.

Something to Live For.

Three little girls were playing. The mother of one came into the room and engaged the children in conversation.

"Marian, what are you going to be when you grow up?" she asked.

"I am going to be a famous singer," she replied.

"And you, Susie, what are you to be?"

"Oh, I am going to write stories when I grow up," she answered.

"And what is Marjorie to be?" continued the mother.

Marjorie, aged five, thought seriously a moment, and then said, "Well, I am not sure, but I think I'll be a widow."—Delineator.

Difficult Tasks

Become Easy in

"A Classified Advertising City"

THE people of this city could get along without street cars, gas or electricity with less discomfort—with less stagnation, less stoppage of the city's activities—than would follow the total elimination of classified advertising as a factor in the city's daily scheme of living.

For the want ads have come to be indispensable in the conduct of modern business. They make INITIATIVE possible. They help those who PLAN to also EXECUTE. They afford SERVICE, and of a hundred-sided sort.

Without the classified ads. no one could be SURE of "making it pay" in a hundred minor and auxiliary occupations. To keep boarders would be a risk—to try to [sublet] furnished rooms would be an uncertain venture—to try to find tenants for any sort of vacant property would be a weary process of "waiting," and to sell property to any advantage would be a mere hope.

Truly, these are want ad. times—this is a want ad city, and ours are a want-ad-using people.

BE ON TIME

For a Man's Heart is Touched by Way of his Stomach Always.

Goods ordered in the evening will leave the store at seven o'clock next morning for the central delivery station and will arrive at your home by eight o'clock or shortly past. How does this strike you, Madam? No need to fret, worry and hustle both arms and legs off with such timely delivery, is there? Has this not got beat to a standstill, a nine o'clock, a half past nine, and quite often a ten o'clock, delivery.

An early delivery will leave you time to plan and prepare a dinner such as will make hubby boil over with smiles and happiness—he will love you as in the days before he claimed you as his own. Why! the bread, pies and cakes will be simply fine—that soup will be grand—the vegetables delicious—the meats well done and savory. You must have heard, you certainly did read, dear Madam, that the easiest way to reach a man's heart is through his stomach. Who so ever is responsible for above saying is certainly one of our greatest of philosophers—he knew his business—he also knew man. It is more than satisfaction for the head of a family to come home from his work or business and sit down to a meal which he and his family enjoy and relish. He doesn't begrudge the cost thereof, neither will he be stingy in returning the love and care spent over the preparation of the victuals by his better half. The inner man is satisfied—he is all happiness; you can read this in that face of his, beaming over with the rosiest smiles of contentment.

No satisfactory meal can be gotten up in a hurry! To cook a meal, which will "go home," as we say, you must give it your time and you must give it more—you must give it some of your individual self with the care and attention that you so so lovingly bestow on the preparation thereof. Oh! There is the meal of all meals! Here is a meal and a love feast shedding the tender love and feelings breathed into same by his devoted and loving wife! And who would not enjoy such a meal as this? Certainly none other than a dead man.

Do you still wonder how it is that such and such a family never get through with living their honeymoon?

A good meal—well done—no matter how frugal this may ever be—is at the bottom of it all. Heed the philosopher—reach your hubby's heart by way of his stomach with such meals as above outlined. And should he sometime or other have shown indifference to you, you will soon win back his love, which may have grown cold for want of something for which you may not be all alone to blame entirely.

Time is one of the greatest essentials in the preparation of a satisfactory meal. A faulty delivery system such as in vogue in this city at the present time may very often rob you of much precious time in the preparation of your meals. Then, again, you may yourself at times be to blame for the late delivery by the late sending in of orders. It will not be so very long before you will be able to blame none other than yourself, dear Madam, for any and every belated delivery. For in a very few weeks the Escanaba Delivery company will be inaugurated and Escanaba will have a system of delivery that will be on time always. Rain or shine, they will be on time. They will be on time when you cannot get your morning mail until late in the afternoon, trains being stalled in snow drifts. Nothing shall deter said company from giving you the service which money, brains and patience can devise and then carry into successful effect. And pray, dear madam, please send in your orders on time, for believe me, you have so much more at stake in the early delivery of your goods than the delivery company can ever have. MIKE GUNTER.

AND THE CONTINENTAL IS THE GREATEST OF THEM ALL.

The fact that the casualty branch is developing at a very strong rate may be termed a matter of common knowledge in the insurance business; but it is to be doubted that many insurance men realize the rate of premium growth achieved by the companies in the aggregate during the year 1909.

During 1907 the business enlarged its premium income by about six millions of dollars, and during 1908 by perhaps four or five millions. These developments were the cause of remark; but they did not compare with the growth shown last year which was about sixteen millions of dollars.—The Surveyor.

MODEST VICTOR HUGO.

The Great Master Thought No Honor Too Great For Himself.

It was Theophile Gautier who said something to the effect that if he thought that one line of the great master, Victor Hugo, was bad he would not acknowledge it to himself if he were alone at the bottom of a dark well. On another occasion Gautier spoke of Victor Hugo as "a new Moses fresh from Sinai, charged to deliver the tablets of the law." Decidedly, Victor Hugo was a man who knew how to cast a spell upon those about him. For example, look at the following picture drawn in the "Souvenir sur Turgenieff."
"One evening Hugo's admirers assembled in his drawing room, were competing with one another in the eulogy of his genius, and the idea was thrown out, that the street in which he lived ought to bear his name. Some one suggested that the street was too small to be worthy of so great a poet, and the honor of bearing his name ought to be assigned to some more important thoroughfare. Then they proceeded to enumerate the most popular quarters of Paris, in an ascending scale, until one man exclaimed with enthusiasm that it would be an honor for the city of Paris itself to be re-named after the man of genius. Hugo, leaning against the mantelpiece, listened complacently to these flatterers out-bidding each other. Then, with an air of one engaged in deep thought, he turned to a young man and said to him in his grand style, 'Even that will come, my friends—even that will come.'"—Hookman.

She Was Different.
"John," asked his wife, who was writing to one of her former schoolmates. "which is proper—to say, 'I differ from you' or 'I differ with you?'"
"Tell her you differ from her. I understand that she lets her husband keep part of his salary to have fun with himself."—Chicago Record-Herald.

WIGS AND BEARDS.

Bordered on the Grottesque in England in Queen Anne's Time.

At the restoration wigs began to be more generally worn, and in Queen Anne's reign they became the most costly item of gentlemen's wardrobes.

John Taylor, one of the English minor poets, thus depicts the beards of his day: Some seem as they were starved and fine.

Some like the bristles of an angry swine, And some, to set their love's desire on edge.

COLONIAL VIRGINIA.

The Haughty Planters Were Fierce Foes of Royal Tyranny.

In no part of the world were social distinctions more rigidly defined than in colonial Virginia.

The proprietor obligated himself to protect his tenants from the Indians. They in turn agreed to follow him to battle, precisely the system inaugurated by William the Conqueror for the military defense of his realm.

Above all else the planter jealously guarded his rights as an English freeman. When liberty languished in England the Virginian sturdily resisted every aggression of royal tyrants.

Baring the Feet at Worship.

In India Hindus and Mussulmans alike wear both sandals and shoes (slippers) and the latter boots also, but the invariable rule is to remove them after entering a private house.

INFORMATION FOR THE AUTOIST

Varnish on Car Spoiled in Washing With Soap.

WHEN RADIATOR CAPS EXPAND

Pour Cold Water on Them to Facilitate Removal When Hot—Dry Springs Are Responsible For Squeaky Sounds.

The use of needlessly strong alkali soap in cleaning automobiles, neglect to wash off the soap and failure to dry the varnished surface perfectly are probably responsible for more damage to paint and varnish than all other causes combined.

As a matter of fact, neither soap nor water should ever be used on an automobile above the undersides of the mud guards, except in cases where the mud is caked on the body in large quantities.

In most cases the first signs of wear on the painted portion invariably show on the varnished portions of the engine bonnet. This is due to the fact that it is frequently covered with mud on the return from a run and is then washed with soapy water while the metal is still hot.

Owing to the expansion of the threads, caused by the heat, radiator filler caps frequently stick and often are difficult to remove, but observation shows that this condition usually obtains when the cooler is hot and that the caps are easily removed when cold.

Profiting by this knowledge of existing conditions, it naturally follows that the proper time to replenish the water supply is when the radiator is cold, but often in emergencies, as in the case of a leaking radiator or a long pull through sand or mud with a low water supply, it becomes necessary to refill the cooler while it is hot.

In such cases if the cap sticks fast the quickest way to loosen it is to pour cold water on the top of the radiator and around the filler neck, avoiding getting any on the cap itself.

As there usually is considerable pressure in a hot radiator, care should be taken in unscrewing the cap that when it is nearly free the pressure does not blow it off unexpectedly and allow a cloud of steam and boiling water to be distributed over one's person.

Dry springs are responsible for squeaky sounds, which are not only disagreeable, but make the car sound old and ride hard. It is because the individual leaves become in time rusted and do not slide freely over each other. This condition may be easily remedied by jacking up the car so that the chassis will hang from the springs and introducing flake graphite.

Electric Lights Save Battery.

One advantage which has come in connection with the adoption of electric lights in automobile service is that it provides for a fairly regular and periodic discharge of the accumulators, which otherwise might remain undisturbed for many days or weeks.

Delta County Reporter: Kirk Spoor, of Oshkosh, Wis., is in our city looking over his property on Delta avenue.

Timely Warning. In turning corners the car's natural inclination is to go in a straight line, and if the speed is great it is impossible to make a sharp turn.

If Weather is Wet Use Vaseline. When it is necessary to drive a car during a rainstorm a lot of subsequent work can be avoided if all bright parts are covered over with a coating of vaseline.

DR. COOK ON WAY TO THE ARCTIC?

Steamer Reports Speaking Boat With Bradley Aboard.

IS MUM CONCERNING DR. COOK

Financial Backer of the Alleged Pole Discoverer on Way to Etah for Explorer's Records and Instruments.

Copenhagen, Sept. 16.—The Danish government steamer Hans Egede arrived here with the news that John R. Bradley, the financial backer of Dr. Frederick A. Cook's north polar expedition, was on his way to Etah to obtain the much-talked-of records and instruments which Cook said he had left at that Eskimo settlement north-east of Greenland.

The captain of the steamer believes that Dr. Cook is with Bradley, but gives no particular reason for this belief.

The Hans Egede, upon which the explorer traveled to civilization after his alleged discovery of the north pole, fell in with a yacht at Godhavn, a Danish settlement on the south coast of Disco island, Greenland, and in the course of exchanges between the masters it was learned that Bradley was aboard the yacht.

The pole-hunt promoter admitted his identity and explained that he was bound for Etah to recover whatever had been left there by Dr. Cook. He refused, however, to deny or confirm the report that he was accompanied by the explorer.

The government vessel also brings the information that two missionaries, who are working among the Eskimos, who accompanied Cook on his expedition, say that these Eskimos insist that the doctor reached the north pole, as he claims, prior to its discovery by Commander Peary.

LOCAL BALL FANS WANTED A SPECIAL

About twenty Escanaba baseball fans went to Negaunee yesterday to attend the opening game between the Escanaba and Negaunee teams for the upper peninsula championship and had the satisfaction of seeing the local team win a decisive victory. Today a still larger number of fans from Escanaba are among the spectators at the second game. It had been planned to run a special train to Negaunee to leave here at 12:30 o'clock, but the plan fell through because the permit to run such a special was not received from the general offices of the Northwestern railway in Chicago in time. It is understood that nearly 200 would have gone to Negaunee to see the game had the special train been run as desired.

However the Escanaba team is not lacking for rooters, for there is a goodly delegation up there to cheer and encourage them. Monte Olmsted was slated to pitch for the locals this afternoon and was to be opposed by Rosevear, Negaunee's crack box artist. The final game at Negaunee will be played tomorrow afternoon and on Sunday and Monday afternoons the two teams will continue their contest here, playing at South Park.

NEGAUNEE GETS IT TODAY

(Continued from Page One.) of which counted in the run making. F. Olmsted, the first man up in the first inning, was passed to first on balls that fans contended should have been strikes. J. Walsh bunted and was thrown out by Heldenson to Ellmore at first; Hoffman hit for three bases, scoring Olmsted. Arensen singled, but was retired on a double at first, when Swick caught N. Walsh's line drive.

In the second inning two of Escanaba's men hit safely but no runs were scored. The visitors were goose-egged again in the third on N. Walsh's single, scoring when M. Walsh hit a grounder to Swick, and was thrown out at first. N. Walsh was retired when he attempted to steal second and Lantz went out, Cullis to Ellmore. In the fifth inning O'Connor hit safely and was sacrificed to second by Nolden, but the next two men up went out on field plays. Escanaba had a man on base again in the sixth, but the three batters up were retired in the seventh.

Play Errorless Game.

In the eighth when the visitors scored three runs, Steimle was touched for two singles; he walked two and was charged with a wild pitch, which permitted a run. F. Olmsted, the first man up, reached first on a wild throw by Rains; J. Walsh singled and Hoffman and Arensen walked, forcing Olmsted. N. Walsh hit safely, scoring J. Walsh and Hoffman, and later came home on Steimle's wild pitch. Lantz fled out to Measler and O'Connor fanned, this retiring the side. Escanaba played an errorless game. Steimle was the first to secure a hit, he having landed safely in the third. In the sixth, when Cullis was called out at the plate by Matt, he, Rains and McCrory all secured nice hits. The side was retired with Rains on third and McCrory on second. In the next three innings Negaunee was retired in the one, two, three order.

ENTERTAINMENT IS HIGHLY APPRECIATED

'St. Patrick's' hall was filled to its capacity Thursday evening and the musical and literary entertainment given therein was well worthy of the fine patronage it received. Miss Mary Agnes Doyle, dramatic reader, fully made good her reputation as an elocutionist of rare talent and every selection she rendered was productive of the greatest pleasure. Her French-Canadian and Irish dialect stories were especially appreciated. The musical part of the program was furnished by Daniel Dewey and his daughter and Miss Francis B. Ryan, instructor in music at the High School, who rendered instrumental selections.

The announcement has been made at Cadillac, Mich., that Ad Wolgast, lightweight champion, will marry Miss Mildred Ensign, 20 years old. The wedding will take place about January 1. Wolgast will return to America after his fight with Freddie Welsh in London, and the wedding will follow immediately.

Wolgast has purchased a home adjoining the one he recently purchased for his father and he intends to make his home there after his marriage.

Wolgast says that he will retire from the ring after defeating Welsh. Miss Ensign is now employed in Wolgast's moving picture show house in Cadillac.

MEMONIEE RIVER LOG DRIVE ON WAY

The log drive on the Meminee river which has been held up for several months on account of low water, is now under way. There are 60,000, 600 feet of lumber in the drive and the arrival of the logs will be welcomed by the sawmills of the twin cities of Menominee and Marinette.

It is an unusual thing to bring a drive of logs down the river at this season of the year. Work in the sorting camps usually commences early in August, but the long draught almost completely dried up the river in some places. The frequent rains of the past few weeks have restored the water levels to almost their normal condition.

NORTHWESTERN ROAD HAS A SMALL WRECK

According to the Iron Mountain Gazette, there was a small wreck east of the Brule river on the line of the Chicago & Northwestern railway about one o'clock Thursday morning, when a loose wheel on a car of a loaded ore train gave way and dragged along the ties for a distance of about 200 feet, tearing up the ties quite badly. By noon the track was repaired, and also the defective wheel. In the meantime traffic over the route was blocked, delaying passenger and other trains for several hours. In one sense of speaking the wreck was fortunate, in that no one was injured, and the damage did not reach very great proportions.

BANKS HAVE BEEN FOOLING EXAMINERS

(Special U. T. Service.) Washington, Sept. 16.--A system by which banks in the small cities of the West have been fooling the bank examiners and concealing loans in their reserve banks in large cities has been discovered and is under investigation. There is authority for the statement that the whole system of examination and regulation is to receive great attention during the next few months.

PIONEER RESIDENT FOUND DEAD IN BED

Achilles Lancour, aged 83 years, was found dead in his bed at his homestead about seven miles from Perkins, Thursday. He had evidently been dead for nearly two days, for the last time he was seen alive was on Tuesday. It is believed that he died sometime during Tuesday night. The fact of his death was learned by two boys, who happened to be passing the homestead and went inside the house. Coroner L. O. Kirstine was notified and went to the scene. After conducting an investigation the coroner decided that Mr. Lancour died from natural causes. The funeral was held today. Mr. Lancour was an old resident of Delta county and was the father of eleven children. Supervisor Henry Lancour of Perkins was his nephew. He had been living alone on his homestead for sometime.

CHASING VIOLATORS OF PURE FOOD LAW

(Special U. T. Service.) Lansing, Mich., Sept. 16.--A bulletin just issued, which includes work of the state dairy and food department for the months of January to June, inclusive, not only shows that the department has been especially active in the prosecution for the adulterations of food stuffs, but the bulletin withal is interesting to those who are solicitous of their health. From the beginning of the fiscal year and up to July 1, only four defendants were acquitted, while 136 were convicted. This is considered remarkable in legal circles, showing that the department knew "where it was at" before beginning the prosecutions. The severest sentence of any recorded during the six months was one in which the defendant entered a plea of guilty for selling diseased meat. The court taxed a $250 fine and costs and also affixed a ninety day sentence in the Detroit house of correction. Numerous prosecutions were the result of persons adulterating milk with water.

Be Safe-- Not Sorry

3% is the limit of what can be paid by a bank and conduct its business on lines of the strictest conservatism. In short, it is the rate that is consistent with absolute safety.

There are many schemes and seemingly attractive investments that offer more but with every added per cent comes an added risk, and why should you take any risk when you are investing the net results of your labor and economy.

A man who loses his savings thus acquired, usually quits saving from discouragement. "Better be safe than sorry" is a good maxim to observe in choosing a place for investment.

We pay 3% the safe rate.

Interest in the dot guessing contest being conducted by Farrell & Lohmiller is unabated and the figures are coming in at a rate that makes it difficult to keep up with them.
