

"BIGGER AND BETTER CITY"

That is the Slogan Adopted by Speakers at Meeting of Escanaba Business Men's Association--Speeches Rich With Suggestions--Excellent Supper.

"A Bigger and Better Escanaba!"

By apparently common consent that was the slogan and the keynote of all the addresses delivered at the annual meeting and smoker of the Escanaba Business Men's association, held at Peterson's opera house Thursday night.

Dr. A. F. Snyder, president of the association, set the idea contained in the quoted words afloat in his opening address, the subject of which was "The Association," and the speakers following him consciously or unconsciously carried it out further.

Attendance is Good.

Although the time for the meeting was set for eight o'clock, it was an hour later before it was formally opened, but the time in waiting was pleasantly spent by early arrivals in conversation.

The set program was opened with a selection, "Moon Bird," played in excellent fashion by LeDuc's orchestra of eight pieces.

Able to Do Anything Now.

In addition there were arranged to the best advantage all sorts of farm produce, including squashes and pumpkins, turnips and carrots, cabbages and beans, corn on the ear and in stalks, etc., all of which had formed part of the exhibits at the fair held Wednesday and Thursday in the Fair Savings Bank store.

much, particularly during the last year or two. Among other things it has secured a better train service for Escanaba and lower sleeping car rates. It is now working to secure the erection of a new gas plant, with prospects of success.

Mayor Loves Escanaba.

Mayor Greenhoot had "Escanaba" for his subject and handled it with the ease that comes from familiarity and knowledge. He said that he considered it an honor and a pleasure to be called upon to talk about Escanaba. He loves Escanaba, he declared.

Needs of the City.

Attorney Frank D. Mead, the next speaker, spoke of "The City and Its Needs." He said the subject was a pretty large one and required considerable more time than he had been able to give it to do it full justice.

KNIGHTS TEMPLAR GIVE FINE PARTY

Sir Knights, in Full Uniform, Entertain Their Ladies and Themselves at One of Most Successful Social Affairs in History of the Commandery--Features.

Perhaps the most successful party ever given by Escanaba Commandery No. 14 of the Knights Templar was that held at the Masonic Temple Thursday night.

The Sir Knights, in full uniform, received the ladies after the commandery had been opened in full form, and after a most pleasant hour of social intercourse, Eminent Commander William Elliott presided and a decidedly interesting program was rendered.

Many beautiful instrumental selections were rendered by Miss Alice Braithwaite, who furnished the music, while the Sir Knights and their ladies repaired to the banquet room.

The tables were artistic in their decorations, the color scheme of red and white being beautifully carried out, and many candelabras added to the charm of the banquet room.

Toasts were responded to. Dr. William Elliott, acting as toast master, called upon Sir Knight John Frechette, who responded to an eloquent toast to the ladies. Sir Knight Frank H. Atkins gave some information concerning the Denver Club now being formed by the local commandery.

A season of social intercourse in the main lodge room brought to a close that which was pronounced by everyone as one of the most pleasant events during the season.

MRS. CHARLES WELLS DIES OF INJURIES

Lived Over a Month After Sustaining Fracture of the Spine in a Rail Accident--Made Brave But Unavailing Fight for Life--Saved Life of Her Daughter.

Announcement has been received in Escanaba of the death of Mrs. Charles Wells, wife of the superintendent of the Dunbar & Wausaukee railway, who passed away Wednesday at her home at Dunbar as the result of injuries she sustained in a railroad accident over a month ago.

Mr. and Mrs. Wells and their young daughter, Monica while traveling on a gasoline railway motor car were run into by a locomotive about twelve miles from Dunbar on the D. & W. railway. It was Mrs. Wells' care in protecting the life of her daughter that undoubtedly cost her own life.

The deceased was 26 years of age, and her home was at Jefferson, Iowa, where the body will be interred. Her father was Zala M. Church, a circuit court judge. She was wedded to Mr. Wells at her Iowa home.

Mrs. Wells was a woman generally looked up to in the community where she resided, was devoted to her home and family and in every respect was a person whose untimely demise brings a sense of irreparable loss to those who were privileged to know her.

vide and equip adequate departments of public health. And that is why the federal government should institute a department of public health to have general supervision over the whole movement and to reach results that the city and state efforts cannot compass.

The Pennsylvania state board of health has spent three million dollars in the past four years in the interest of public health, and it reports that this movement has netted the state twenty-three million dollars. The equivalent of that sum has been saved to the state by conserving the public health. The Pennsylvania board has fought diphtheria effectively with antitoxin. It has reduced the death rate from consumption from 134 to 120 per thousand, and is about to do still better by adding two new tuberculosis colonies to the one now in operation. It has cut the typhoid fever rate in two by shutting off fever-breeding nuisances in streams, open drains and unsanitary premises.

The greatest asset of the state is the health and energy of its people. Every opening for disease which lessens that health and lowers that energy is a drain upon the state's resources. Public health is a public asset. Disease and conditions that breed disease are public liabilities. A state ought to no more think of neglecting its duty toward the health of its people than an individual would expose himself recklessly to disease.

Every insanitary building, every noisome swamp, every place of filth, is food for disease and a menace to public health, and therefore a drain upon the resources of society.

If Pennsylvania, by spending three million dollars, can save twenty three million dollars in four years, every other state can do as well or better. Public expenditures for the conservation of public health can be increased very largely in every state and community without going beyond the line of sound investment and entering the realm of extravagance.

FIVE HEROES GET MEDALS FOR BRAVERY

The medals are elaborate decorations worth more than $100 each. The presentation was made at the United States engineer's office and was attended by considerable formality.

RAPID STORY WRITING.

A Boast That Dumas Made, a Wager and the Result.

For rapidity of composition the prize among romancers must be awarded to Alexandre Dumas, who died with over 2,000 books to his credit, in all of which he had some share. According to Mr. Arthur F. Davidson, one of his biographers, he often declared that when once he had jumped out in his mind the scheme of a novel or a play the work was practically accomplished, since the story could be performed as well as the novel could travel. Some one doubted this, the result was a wager. Dumas laid his head on the plan of the "Chevalier de la Maison Rouge," of which he had not yet written a word, and he made a bet of 100 louis that he would write the first volume of the novel in seventy-two hours. The volume was to be formed by seventy-five large foolscap pages, each page containing forty-five lines and each line fifty letters. In sixty-six hours Dumas had done the work in his fair, flowing hand, disfigured by no erasures—and the bet was won with six hours to spare.—London Chronicle.

Danced in Court.

An unusual scene was once witnessed in a French law court, the civil tribunal at Nantes. The proprietor of a local theater had engaged a young lady dancer, whose performances at rehearsals did not come up to his expectations. He therefore would not let her appear, and the fair dancer took action against him for breach of contract. The defendant alleged that she had not even learned the first steps of her art, and here being a plain issue, the judge determined to decide for himself. A space was accordingly forthwith cleared on the floor of the court, and in these unusual surroundings the young lady duly went through her steps and pirouettes. In the result the judge felt justified in certifying that she was quite an expert dancer and decided the case in her favor. Henceforth she advertised herself as the only dancer in the country with a legal certificate of proficiency.—London Tit-Bits.

Poets and Dogs.

Poets have always loved dogs. In this poets and boys resemble each other. Walter Savage Landor was devoted to his dog Gliallo and Byron's epitaph upon his dog Bontswain we all remember:

To mark a friend's remains these stones I never had but one, and there he lies.

Cowper was very fond of his dog, and we know how Charles Lamb, who was a prose poet, loved his Dash and how Mrs. Browning appreciated the little Flush to whom she indited a poem. The Earl of Shaftesbury kept his noble collie in his library with him at all times and Samuel Rogers always walked out with his dog. Scott declined an invitation to dinner when his dog died, saying that he could not accept on account of the "loss of an old friend."—St. James' Gazette.

The Cassowary.

The cassowary is a natural boxer and the only bird, except perhaps the ostrich, whose method of defense and attack in warfare is the forward kick—straight out, like a man—is calculated to arouse envy in the breast of any save a crack athlete. Another peculiarity of this bird is his ability to perform a sort of war dance over any particular object, a bit of rag, a stick or a stone, that attracts his attention.

Our Daily Short Story

A Quick Revenge

By NELLY TRIMMINGHAM

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

A farmer's boy was driving along a road when he overhauled a man walking in the same direction.

"Have a lift, stranger?" "Reckon I will if you don't mind. How far you goin'?"

"Oh, 'm goin' as far as Hobbsville, mebbe farther."

The man got up on the front seat with the boy, and the two jogged along together. There was a desultory conversation about the state of the crops when the boy urged his horse on.

"Git up, Tom; I don't want to be ridin' round here after dark with money in my pocket and holdups comin' off every few days."

The passenger smiled. "My boy, you don't want to take up strange people for travelin' companions and tell 'em you've got funds about you. How d'y' know but I'm a footpad myself?"

"You ain't no footpad."

The passenger turned and surveyed the boy. He might have been anywhere between eighteen and twenty-five, but his companion, noting that he had no beard, surmised that the lower figure was nearer the truth.

"You're right, boy," he said. "I ain't no footpad, but I'm worse 'n a footpad. I've had several scraps with people hereabout, and the sheriff would give you $5,000 if you could land me."

"You don't mean it! Who mought you be?"

"I'm Skinner."

"Jack Skinner as killed Ben Andrews and Bill Harrison and Andy Parker?"

Skinner noticed that the boy spoke the last name with some emotion.

"What was Parker to you?" he asked quickly.

"Oh, I only knowed him; that's all. What made you kill him?"

"I was kind o' upset that day. I wanted him to drink with me, and he wouldn't. Parker wasn't much of a man anyway."

"Did y' ever see his wife?"

"No. Is she a good lookin' woman?"

"You bet! She tuk on bad when you killed Andy."

"I heered that, and I heered she said she was goin' to kill me for killin' her husband."

"Waal, ef Mrs. Parker said that y'd better keep outer her way."

"Oh, wimmin always talk that way when they git a grudge."

"But I heered Mrs. Parker has been practicin' and bus got to be a mighty quick shot."

"That's all right. . . he won't do nothin'."

Hearing of Doan's Kidney Pills, I decided to try them and procured a supply from the Mead Drug Co. The contents of several boxes freed me from kidney complaint and I now feel better in every way. THE SILVER HORDE

BY REX BEACH

COPYRIGHT, 1909, BY HARPER & BROTHERS

"I did it for your own sake," said the old man. "This whelp Emerson has made a fool of you and of me long enough. There must be an end to it."

"But I don't love Willis Marsh!" she cried. "You forget I am of age."

"Nonsense! Willis is a fine fellow. He loves you, and he is the best business man for his years I have ever known. If it were not for this foolish boy and girl affair you would return his love. He suits me, and—well, I have put my foot down, so there's an end of it."

"Do you intend to force me to marry him?"

Mr. Wayland recognized the danger signal.

"Absurd! Take all the time you wish. You'll come around all right. That reprobate you were engaged to defied me and defied that woman."

He told of his stormy interview with Boyd, concluding: "It is fortunate we found him out. Mildred, I have guarded you all my life. I have lavished everything money could buy upon you. I have built up the greatest fortune in all the west for you. I have kept you pure and sweet and good—and to think that such a fellow should dare!"

Mr. Wayland choked with anger. "The one thing I cannot stand in a man or a woman is immorality. I have lived clean myself, and my son shall be as clean as I."

"Did you say that Boyd threatened to come aboard this evening?" questioned the girl.

"Yes. But I swore that he should not."

"Then he'll come," said Mildred.

It was twilight when Willis Marsh was rowed out to the yacht. He found Mr. Wayland and Mildred seated in deck chairs enjoying the golden sunset while the old man smoked. Marsh explained that he had excused himself from his guests to go whither his inclination led him and drew his seat close to Mildred, rejoicing in the fact that no one could gainsay him this privilege. Moreover, he had won the unflinching loyalty of Wayne Wayland, the dominant figure of the west. Nothing could keep him now from the success his ambition demanded.

His complaisant enjoyment was interrupted at last by the approach of the second officer, who announced that a lady wished to see Mr. Wayland.

"A lady?" asked the old man in surprise.

"Yes, sir. She came alongside in a small boat just now with some natives. I stopped her at the landing, but she says she must see you at once."

"Ah, that woman again!" Mr. Wayland's jaws snapped. "Tell her to be gone. I refuse to see her."

"Very well, sir." The mate turned, but Mildred said suddenly:

"Wait! Why don't you talk to her, father?"

"That creature? I have nothing to say to her."

Mildred leaned forward and called to the ship's officer. "Show her up. I will see her."

"Mildred, you mustn't talk to that woman!" her father cried.

"It is very unwise," Marsh chimed in apprehensively. "She isn't the sort of person—"

Miss Wayland chilled him with a look and waved the mate away, then sank back into her chair.

"I have talked with her already. I assure you she is not dangerous."

Willis Marsh squirmed uncomfortably in his seat. He fixed his eyes upon the knot of men at the starboard rail. Then, with a sharp indrawing of his breath, he leaped up and darted down the deck.

Over the side had come Cherry Malotte, accompanied by an Indian girl in shawl and moccasins a slim, shrieking creature who stood as if bewildered, twisting her hands and staring about with frightened eyes. Behind them, head and shoulders above the sailors, towered a giant copper hued breed with a child in his arms.

They saw that Marsh was speaking to the newcomers, but could not distinguish his words. The Indian girl fell back as if terrified. She cried out something in her own tongue, shook her head violently and pointed to her white companion. Marsh's face was livid; he shook a quivering hand in Cherry Malotte's face. It seemed as if he would strike her, but Constantine strode between them, scowling silently down into the smaller man's face, his own visage saturnine and menacing. Marsh retreated a step, chattering excitedly. Then Cherry's voice came clearly to the listeners:

"It is too late now, Mr. Marsh. You may as well face the music."

Followed by the staves of the sailors, she came up the deck toward the old man and his daughter, who had arisen, the Indian girl clinging to her sleeve, the tall breed striding noiselessly behind. Willis Marsh came with them, his white lips writhing, his face like putty. He made futile detaining grasps at Constantine, and in the silence that suddenly descended upon the ship they heard him whispering:

"What is the meaning of this?" demanded Mr. Wayland.

"I heard you were about to sail, so I came out to see you before—"

Marsh broke in hoarsely: "She's a bad woman! She has come here for blackmail!"

"Blackmail!" cried Wayne Wayland. "I thought as much."

"That's her game. She wants money!"

Cherry shrugged her shoulders and showed her white teeth in a smile.

"Mr. Marsh anticipates slightly. You may judge if he is right."

Marsh started to speak, but Mildred Wayland, who had been watching him intently, was before him.

"Who sent you here, miss?"

"No one sent me. If Mr. Marsh will stop his chatter I can make myself understood."

"Don't listen to her."

Cherry turned upon him swiftly. "You've got to face it, so you may as well keep still."

He fell silent.

"We heard that Mr. Marsh was going away with you, and I came to ask him for enough money to support his child while he is gone."

"His child?" Wayne Wayland turned upon his daughter's fiancée with a look of stern surprise. "Willis, tell her she is lying!"

"She's lying!" Marsh repeated obediently, but they saw the truth in his face.

Cherry spoke directly to Miss Wayland now. "I have supported this little fellow and his mother for a year." She indicated the red haired youngster in Constantine's arms. "That is all I care to do. When you arrived Mr. Marsh induced Chakawana to take the baby up river to a fishing camp and stay there until you had gone. But Constantine heard that he intended to marry you, and, hearing also that he intended leaving tonight, Constantine brought his sister back in the hope that Mr. Marsh would do what is right. You see, he promised to marry Chakawana long before he met you."

Mildred could have done murder at the expression she saw in Cherry's face. The woman she had scorned had humbled her in earnest. With flashing eyes she turned upon her father.

"Since you were so prompt in announcing my engagement, perhaps you can deny it with equal promptness."

"Good God! What a scandal! If this is true!" Wayne Wayland wiped his forehead.

"Oh, it's true," said Cherry.

In the silence that followed the child struggled out of Constantine's arms and stood beside his mother, the better to inspect these strangers. His little face was grimy; his clothes, cut in the native fashion, were poor and not very clean. Yet he was more white than Aleut, and no one seeing him could doubt his parentage. The seamen had left their posts and were watching with such absorption that they failed to see a skiff with a single oarsman swing past the stern of the Grande Dame and make fast to the landing. Still unobserved, the man mounted the companionway swiftly.

For once in his life Wayne Wayland was too confused for definite speech. Willis Marsh stood helpless.

"Don't believe her!" he broke out. "She is lying to protect her own lover!"

He pointed to Chakawana. "That girl is the child's mother, but its father is Boyd Emerson!"

"Boyd Emerson was never in Kaitvik until last December," said Cherry. "The child is three years old."

"It seems I am being discussed," said a voice behind them. Emerson clove his way through the sailors, striding directly to Marsh. "What is the meaning of this?"

Mildred Wayland laid a fluttering hand upon her breast. "I knew he would come," she breathed.

Constantine broke his silence for the first time, addressing Mildred directly: "This baby b'long Mr. Marsh. He says he goin' marry Chakawana, but he lie. He goin' marry you because you are rich girl." He turned to Marsh. "What for you lie, eh?" He leaned forward with a frightful scowl. "I tell you long time ago I kill you if you don't marry my sister."

"Now I understand!" exclaimed Boyd. "It was you who stabbed him that night in the cannery."

"Yes. Chakawana tell him what the pries' say 'bout woman what don't marry. My sister say she go to hell herself and don't care much, but it ain't right for little baby to go to hell too."

"What do you mean by that?" asked Mr. Wayland.

"The Father say if white man take Indian woman and don't marry her she go to hell for thousand year—mebbe two, three thousand year. Anyhow, she don't never see Jesus' house. That's bad thing!" The breed shook his head seriously. "Chakawana she's good girl, and she go to church. I give money to the pries', too—plenty money every time—but he says that's no good; she's got to be marry or she'll burn for always with little baby. And so that's make her scare, because little baby ain't do nothing to burn that way. Mr. Marsh he say it's all one lie, and he don't care if little baby do go to hell. You hear that? He don't care for little baby."

Constantine's eyes were full of tears as he strove laboriously to voice his religious teachings. He went on with growing agitation:

"Chakawana she's mighty scare of that bad pnce, and she ask Mr. Marsh again to marry her, but he beat her. That's when I try to kill him. Mebbe Mr. Emerson ain't come so quick Mr. Marsh go to hell himself."

Wayne Wayland turned upon Marsh. "Why don't you say something?"

"I told you the brat isn't mine!" he cried. "If it isn't Emerson's it's Cherry Malotte's. They want money, but I won't be led."

"You marry my sister?" asked Constantine.

"No!" snarled Willis Marsh. "You can all go to hell—and take the child with you."

Without a single warning cry the breed lunged swiftly. The others saw something gleam in his hand. Emerson jumped for him, and the three men went to the deck in a writhing tangle, sending the furniture spinning before them. Mildred heard Boyd Emerson cry to the sailors:

WIRE COMPANIES IN HOT RATE WAR

The Postal Charges the Western Union With Discriminating Charges—Complaint is Laid Before the Public Service Commission—Details of the Situation.

(Special U. T. Service.)

New York, N. Y., Oct. 7.—The Postal Telegraph & Cable company has made complaint to the public service commission of the second district of the charges exacted by the Western Union for business originating on Postal lines, and has asked for an order restraining the Western Union "from discriminating against competitors" in the matter of rates.

The complaint laid before the public service commission alleges that where the Postal has no offices and is obliged to send its messages over the Western Union wires for delivery, the latter company makes excessive charges. The practice is for the Postal, when it receives a message for delivery in a town where the Western Union has the only office, to collect from the sender of the message for delivery in a town where the Western Union has the only office, to collect from the sender of the message the same fee as is charged by the Western Union between the sending point and the destination. It transmits over its own lines to the nearest point possible and then turns it over to the Western Union. The Western Union, the complainant alleges, not only charges the local fee from the point at which it receives the message to destination, but adds a charge for four or five words indicating that the message has been turned over to the Western Union for further transmission, these additional words giving the place where the message was taken over and the date. The Postal company complains that it is obliged to pay as a result of "such discriminating and unreasonable charges" the aggregate sum that it receives from the sender. In the complaint it is further alleged that the Western Union does not charge cable companies sending messages from New York over its land lines for additional words indicating that these messages have been turned over for transmission.

Finally in its argument against the Western Union's practice of adding words to messages the complaint recites that the Western Union has objected to being compelled to add words to its own messages and pay for them in cases where its business has been transmitted through the Postal company.

The commission is asked to make an order permanently restraining the Western Union from charging for additional words as complained of, the Postal Telegraph & Cable company, making the statement that if the practice is continued it will be "necessary for it to refuse to accept a large proportion of such messages from the public."

SOME DRUGGISTS A DISGRACE TO TRADE

(Special U. T. Service.)

Kalamazoo, Mich., Oct. 7.—President C. G. Burgee, of the Michigan Retail Druggists' association, at the opening of the second annual convention denounced druggists who sold liquor for the sake of the pecuniary benefit. He classed them as a disgrace to the trade and said they should be forced to pay the $500 liquor license to the government.

KING OF THE METALS.

The importance of iron to the electrical industry.

The very root of the electrical industry is iron. Without iron it is doubtful if the larger generators and the mighty motors could be built, for the powerful magnets upon which these inventions depend for their power are all made of soft iron either in the form of thin plates or long wires covered with insulation.

Nearly every one is familiar with the common horseshoe magnet, which is but a piece of steel bent in the shape of a horseshoe and charged with magnetism. When a steel bar of this shape is rubbed against another magnet it is "charged" and will remain so for a long time. The magnets used in electrical machinery are of the induction type—that is, the magnetism vanishes just as soon as the current is taken away from them. If you wind a long insulated wire tightly around a soft iron core and send through this wire a weak current of electricity the core will be instantly possessed of strong magnetic qualities. This fact is the basis of all electric motors and generators. The field coils are usually made of a soft iron core wound with yards and yards of insulated wire. When the current is sent through this wire the soft iron core is turned into a powerful magnet, and this magnetic power is used to drive motors or to generate more electricity.—Electrical Bulletin.

Elephants in Captivity.

The trainer flushed for an instant his dark lantern on the long line of elephants.

"They are asleep," he said. "In captivity elephants always sleep standing."

"Why is that?" the visitor asked.

"They lie down to sleep in the jungle."

"Yes," said the trainer. "I don't know why it is. But you'll never see a captive elephant sleep lying down. Some people say a captive elephant never really sleeps—sleeps sound, I mean—at all. He never has complete confidence, you know. He grieves. He longs to be free. Why, as a matter of fact, this light, standing sleep of his only lasts about three hours at that. All the rest of the night he rocks from side to side in the dark."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Hopi Courtship.

When a Hopi maiden decides which of the eligible young men of the tribe she wishes to marry she goes and sits in his house and grinds corn until he is sufficiently impressed by her industry to marry her. After the ceremony, which is an elaborate one, the couple go to live in the wife's house. If she tires of her husband she can obtain a divorce by merely throwing his saddle out of the house. After marriage the house, fields and all their property except the herds belong to the wife.

The Hopis are indulgent parents. The right of the children to do as they please is never questioned.

A Strictly Cash Business

The Escanaba Steam Laundry Co. Decide to Do Cash Business.

We have hereby decided to carry on a strictly cash business, on and after August 1, 1910.

Our reasons for doing so are as follows:
FIRST: Our accounts being necessarily small, an endless amount of confusion and expense is entailed to an injurious degree, and the loss in collections and time and attention it requires we can give to our work rooms and insure a higher standard of work.

SECOND: Our current expenses are cash and must be paid when due. The stand we have taken is one we have been forced into and we hope all will lend us their aid.

CHINESE WARSHIPS TO BE BUILT HERE

(Special U. T. Service.)

San Francisco, Oct. 7.—Two battleships for the Chinese navy will be built in San Francisco. The work will begin as soon as it is possible for the Chinese government to pass upon plans already submitted to Prince Sun by Charles M. Schwab, head of the Bethlehem Steel corporation.

The work will be done at the plant of the Union Iron works, in which 3,500 men are employed. As the two battleships are to cost $15,000,000 officers of the company are preparing to run it not only full blast but, possibly, continuously until the ships are completed and launched.

THEATRICAL

BEN'S THEATRE.—The Raeburn-Lyall Stock company opened in the society play, "Friends," to increased business, and gave the best performance seen in the theater in a long time. The play is a beautiful one, and was excellently presented by the stock company. Every part was well acted, and well costumed.

Miss Judith Raeburn, as Marguerite Otto, the singer, had the strongest part she has been seen in here, and she played it very cleverly. Miss Raeburn, while she is a little woman, has that personal charm and ability which makes you forget everything else but the part she is living. The parts of the two boys, the friends, were in the capable hands of Mr. Douglas and Mr. Lyall. Mr. Redfield, as Hans Otto, gave a character portrayal that was a treat. Mr. Barlow, as John Paden, Sr., furnished the most of the comedy very capably. Miss Montague was a sweet Jennie Merryweather. The other characters were well played. Little Cecil Manners did a clever singing and dancing specialty between the acts and won merited applause. The pictures were good. Altogether, barring the nuisance of a sticking front curtain, the performance was well worth seeing. It is understood that the curtain will be fixed better today and a new one installed at an early date.

THE PETERSON: A big crowd of people last night saw the Jeffries Johnson fight pictures at the Amphidrome. Houghton, the authentic, having been established the previous evening, when they were given at the Palastra, Laurium. The pictures are unusually clear and distinct the fighters and other principal characters being shown at more than life size. The battle according to the pictures, was a lively one, although Johnson perceptibly slowed Jeffries up with his terrible hooks and jabs in the face the last few rounds. In two rounds only did Jeffries have anything like the advantage.

The first three reels of film are descriptive of Reno and surroundings, showing some remarkable scenery in a "trip" about the flight metropolis of the Fourth. The completing of the big stadium, built to accommodate 25,000 people is among the interesting scenes.—Copper country department of the Marquette Mining Journal. The same pictures will be shown at the Peterson next Wednesday afternoon and evening, October 12.

"The Kissing Girl" is unique in present day musical shows in doing away with the dancing contingent known as broilers and figurante feature supplied by supple show girls in stunning fashion plate attire, come to be regarded as indispensable corollaries of musical comedy. The plot is well defined, another circumstance which makes the show different from its average neighbor, and the music is uniformly of the kind that lends itself to the tastes and art of the care-free whistler. At the Peterson, Friday evening, October, 14.

HE ASKED THE TIME.

A Question and Answer That Changed a Clerk's Position.

How many clerks measure up to the standard of the young bookkeeper in this story from Human Life? He was employed in the passenger department of a great railroad. It was just a little before lunch. Some of the clerks were putting on their coats, some leaving for the wash-room, some consulting the clock; some were still busy. Suddenly the "boss" entered. He glanced about him and then approached the young bookkeeper.

"What time is it?" he asked.

The young man kept on figuring, and the boss put a hand on his desk and repeated the question.

Instantly the other looked up, surprised to see the chief at his elbow.

"I beg your pardon, were you speaking to me?" he asked.

"Merely inquired the time that was all," said the other.

"The bookkeeper glanced about the room, located the office clock and said, "It's ten minutes to 12."

"Thank you," said the general manager and vice president, and stroiled out.

That conversation cost the young bookkeeper his place—in the passenger department—and put him under a higher officer "on the firing line." Nine years later he was assistant general manager, and while still in the thirties became a general manager, full fledged.

THIS STATE HAS BIG FUEL BILL TO SETTLE Michigan Burns More Timber Than Any Other State in the Union—Some Facts.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 7.—The state of Michigan had the largest bill for fuel wood in 1908 of any state in the union. The commonwealth paid for fuel wood during the year $16,560,590, which was the purchase price of 3,700,333 cords at $4.48 per cord.

The farmers of Michigan paid in 1908 $10,663,380 for fuel wood, purchasing 2,538,900 cords. In towns of from 1,000 to 30,000 there were used 1,008,930 cords, valued at $4,532,454, while in towns of over 30,000 population 114,875 cords were used having a value of $663,803. There were used in the state of Michigan in the year 1908, 3,700,333 cords of wood for fuel purposes, having a value as above stated.

The consumption of fire wood is general in the United States, except in the largest cities and in the prairie states, where there is no native timber. The use of firewood has decreased not only in the per capita consumption, but also in the total quantity, owing to the more extensive use of coal. It appears that little more than twenty billion cubic feet of wood are used in the United States each year. Of this amount, at least one-third is consumed in fire wood.

Michigan Ranks Fifth.

There were consumed in 1908 86,000 cords of fire wood, having a value of $250,000,000, of which 70,000,000 cords or 81.4 per cent were used on the farms of the United States valued at $182,700,000. Tennessee used more wood on its farms than any other state in the union. Of the fire wood used in towns and cities with less than 30,000 population only Michigan and Texas reported more than one million cords. The state of Michigan ranked fifth in the number of states reporting the greatest average for those over a million cords.

The highest price paid for cord wood in 1908 was that reported from the district of Columbia, whose owners charged $8.99 or nearly $9.00 a cord, for wood. Georgia showed the lowest price for fuel wood, the state charging $1.65 per cord for those who used this material as a means of fuel. The state of Michigan, although it pays the largest bill of them all for fuel wood, only cost the consumer $4.48 per cord for its fuel.

SHE WAS NO SHIRK.

And She Had No Patience With Modern Cooking Methods.

Different persons have varying ideas as to what constitutes a good house-keeper. The ideas held by Mrs. Dana Goodyear were her own and firmly fixed. "I've got nothing to say against those that follow after these modern notions of cooking, like the minister's wife," she remarked one day, "but all I can state is that her ways aren't my ways and never would be."

"She's been to a city cooking school, I hear," said Mrs. Goodyear's visitor, "and does her work all the newfangled ways."

"I presume so," and Mrs. Goodyear's chin took on its firmest expression. "She was telling me yesterday how she could do a morning's baking—bread, cake, pies—and get the regular dinner, too, and only have three bowls and three or four spoons to wash when she's done aside from the dinner dishes. She told me 'twas by cooking school system she did it, planning and rinsing out as she worked, and so on."

"She seemed real proud of it, but it struck me as a pretty slack way of doing kitchen work. There isn't a lazy bone in my body. If I do say it, and when I've done a Saturday's baking I'm safe to say that there's hardly a bowl left on my pantry shelves, and I've got a good hour's work before me right in my kitchen sink where anybody that comes in can see it."

ALL SIGNS PORTEND LONG HARD WINTER

Get your rutabagas in the cellar and give the parsnips an extra covering.

Likewise, if you have steam pipes around the house, look to the plumbing.

Weather forecasters predict that the winter of 1910-11 is going to be long and hard. Michigan, they say, will have its usual deligatful fall, but when winter comes, and it may be a few days earlier than is its wont, the days will be cold and there will be little relief until spring, which may be late.

Reports are coming from the state in support of these predictions, and altogether it appears that the coal man has an energetic press agent.

Keeper Bean of the Washington park zoo in Milwaukee, while not claiming to be a weather prophet, says that his fur bearing animals are going to have unusually beautiful coats this winter.

"Animals in captivity, he said, lose the instinct which they have when wild which warns them of storms and the approach of cold, to a large degree. They live under conditions which cause this. They have no place to store food, and they are cared for in winter in warm buildings, so that they are not called upon to withstand the . . . of the . . . have noticed, however, that my wolves and the bears and the deer are growing unusually heavy coats this fall, and I have remarked about it. It may be that in spite of their living in captivity nature has given them this warning of a hard winter."

who are willing to give of their time and services for the public good." Another need is a better system of municipal government. An efficient government, he said, is not the fault of the officers in charge but of the system. Escanaba has outgrown its old form of government and should have something better. He believed there should be a change. For himself he believed in a commission form of government for cities, but public sentiment here does not yet appear to favor it, although it has been tried with success by numerous cities throughout the country. He referred to the new charter now nearly completed and explained some of the provisions that are considered a great improvement over those of the present charter. Another need, he said, was the projecting of plans to clear up and settle the lands west of the city, a work which he thought the association could well take up. It is just as important to colonize and add to the city's population as any other thing that might be mentioned, he declared.

Gladstone Mayor Talks.

In opening his talk on "Us and Our Neighbors," Mayor W. F. Hammel of Gladstone said he had been trying to find out why he had been chosen to speak at this meeting and had finally decided it was because he and the honor of being mayor of Gladstone. He said it gave him great pleasure to meet the members of the association and he enumerated some of the advantages an association of this kind is to the city in which it exists. "It is in itself an important factor in the city's growth and prosperity," he said. Then he went on to say that Escanaba is a thriving and growing city and that its business men are bright and active and yet commendably conservative. He never could understand why it was said Escanaba is a bad town. He did not believe this. It was no worse than other cities of its size and character, and he believed it is a whole lot better than some. Mr. Hammel enumerated some of the good features of the city and at the same time took a sly crack at one or two shortcomings, notably the bad condition of startnet avenue. He sees a bright future for Escanaba and said some day that Escanaba and Gladstone would meet on the Bay shore road. He was willing to wager, however, that Gladstone would have a population of 10,000 before Escanaba touched the 25,000 mark.

Minister Makes "Observations."

Following Mayor Hammel's address the orchestra played a lively selection, "How'd You Like to Love Me?" and Rev. Frederick Spence then gave the audience the benefit of his "Observations." Mr. Spence first got his auditors to laughing and in a receptive mood by telling several humorous stories and then launched seriously into his subject. At times like this, he said, it was proper to indulge in sentiment and civic pride, but the sentiment should not degenerate into lachrymose sentimentalism, nor should civic pride be exhibited unless it is well based. It is dangerous, in fact, to indulge in civic pride without solid grounds. Mr. Spence spoke earnestly for a better Escanaba and a broader citizenship. The pioneers of Escanaba did not build for a day—they saw in their visions the splendid little city it is today—and we of today see a still larger and better city, but we are the men who must reduce the dream to reality. The slogan "A Bigger Escanaba" is a splendid one, said Mr. Spence, for it means not only a commercial but a moral expansion. Mr. Spence spoke at some length upon the material and moral prospects of the city in an optimistic vein. He noted great improvement during the four years he has been here and looked for still greater betterment in every line in the years to come. He urged that a broad and liberal policy be exercised toward all industries locating here and declared that cooperative competition is far more to be desired than antagonism among business men. Nothing is ever gained by men fighting among themselves and only by united and harmonious effort can desired results be accomplished. He maintained, however, that there can be no true material growth or expansion unless there is a broader and better citizenship and a right ethical basis. Men should not ask the question, "What can the city do for me? But rather "What can I do for the city?" Until men feel that they owe a duty to the community and strive to discharge that duty there can never be true progress in that community, the speaker said. He expressed his pleasure over the advancement Escanaba has made in recent years and hoped it would not recede. It could not afford to recede now. In conclusion, he exhorted everybody to help make Escanaba a city beyond reproach, intellectually, commercially and morally.

The Concluding Address.

Before introducing E. M. St. Jacques, the last speaker on the program, Dr. Snyder took occasion to say some words in commendation of the enterprise shown by Herman Salinsky in getting up a fair for the benefit of local county farmers and the public generally, and also spoke in praise of Mayor Greenhoot's public spirited work as chief executive of the city.

Mr. St. Jacques had "The Escanaba Dealers' Credit and Delivery Company" for his subject and started off by saying that he had forgotten the speech he had so carefully prepared and committed to memory. He claimed not to be a public speaker, but said he would do his best to respond to the call. He thereupon gave a clear and most interesting explanation of the central delivery system which the company named is about to inaugurate. He pointed out its advantages to not only the dealers but to their patrons and said that if the latter would but cooperate there is no doubt but that the system would prove entirely satisfactory and successful. He made a strong plea for this co-operation.

Supper is Most Excellent.

At the conclusion of Mr. St. Jacques' talk Dr. Snyder thanked all for their attendance and attention and announced that supper would be served in the hall connected with the opera house. While the entrance to the dining hall was being effected the orchestra played "Society Swing."

In the hall four supper tables had been arranged and were set and decorated most attractively by members of the Salvation Army who had been given the contract for serving the meal. The supper was exceptionally excellent and came in for much praise. Several of the after supper speakers took special pains to praise the menu and commend Captain Plumb and the members of the Salvation Army for its excellence.

Following the meal there were a number of entertaining informal talks made in response to calls by Dr. Snyder, acting as toastmaster. Those who obeyed the toastmaster's call were: City Attorney Ira C. Jennings, Herman Salinsky, Supt. of Schools F. E. King, Carl Mason of Gladstone, Albert E. Ellsworth, Ray Hammel of Gladstone, Attorney H. J. Rushton, Rev. F. W. Ainslie, Mayor Hammel of Gladstone, Attorney S. M. Matthews, D. E. Glavin, Leslie G. French, E. M. St. Jacques F. L. Baldwin and Mayor Greenhoot.

BROWN CAN HOLD JOB LONG AS HE WANTS IT

Assistant Postmaster of Escanaba is Included Under Operation of Order Recently Issued by President Taft —Position Now Protected by Civil Service.

William L. Brown, assistant postmaster of the Escanaba postoffice under Postmaster H. W. Coburn, is one of those in the postal department of the government to profit by the order issued by President Taft recently and supported by his cabinet, that assistant postmasters should come under the civil service law.

This action means that the positions of assistant postmaster cannot be effected by the vagaries of changing political conditions. Under the action of the president, this order will go into effect on December 1 and all assistant postmasters at present holding office will be relieved from the civil service examination, their service for the government being deemed sufficient to determine their eligibility and qualifications.

Under the order, therefore, no matter when the postmastership in Escanaba shall be changed, Mr. Brown will continue his position as assistant unless he is unable, physically, to perform the duties of that office during his natural life.

Mr. Brown has been assistant postmaster for quite a few years and his many friends will be glad to learn that the position, which he has filled so creditably, will be his so long as he desires to retain it.
