MISSING HEIR WILL BE FOUND

Story Published in The Daily Mirror Results in Locating Walter Leturmy Whose Uncle Sought Aid of Mayor Greenhoot in Search for His Nephew.

On January 17th last The Mirror published a news story relating that Mayor Greenhoot had received from Edmund C. Leturmy of Hartford, Conn., a letter asking for the former's assistance in locating the latter's nephew, Walter Leturmy, a young man who had lived in Escanaba for some time during his boyhood.

The writer of the letter stated that his nephew had been left heir to some property of which he was the administrator and he was anxious to learn of his whereabouts in order that the legacy might be turned over to him.

Story Has Desired Result.

Mayor Greenhoot turned the letter over to The Mirror, which published it along with other details, the whole forming an interesting story. Through this publication in The Mirror the whereabouts of Walter Leturmy has been revealed—at least, the young man's uncle will soon be in possession of the information he requested Mayor Greenhoot to help him obtain. This information will be conveyed him in a letter written by the young man's mother, who is living at Hurdsfield, N. D., and which she sent Mayor Greenhoot to be forwarded to Edmund G. Leturmy at Hartford, Conn.

Mother Writes Mayor.

Mayor Greenhoot on Friday received a letter from Walter Leturmy's mother in which she stated that she had read the account of the search being made by Mr. Leturmy for his nephew and that she enclosed a sealed letter which she desired Mr. Greenhoot to address and forward to Mr. Leturmy. This letter, she said, contained all the information desired. Mr. Greenhoot has complied with the request and the letter is now on its way to Mr. Leturmy.

MRS. J. B. WILBUR DIES AT ISHPEMING

She Was One of the Oldest Residents of That City and Before Going There Lived in Escanaba—Survived by Her Husband, One Son and One Daughter.

Some of the older residents of Escanaba, to whom she was well known, will regret to learn of the death of Mrs. James B. Wilbur of Ishpeming. Mrs. Wilbur died at her home in that city Friday morning. Her demise was not unexpected, for she had been critically ill for more than a week. She was stricken sometime ago with paralysis and since then her physician had had very little hope of her recovery. For some years prior to receiving the paralytic stroke she had not enjoyed her usual good health. Mrs. Wilbur and her husband located in Ishpeming more than 30 years ago and lived in Escanaba for a time before going there. From a notice of her death published in the Ishpeming department of the Mining Journal the following is taken:

"The deceased was born in Albion, N. Y., July 18, 1845, and spent several years of her younger life in New York state. Soon after her marriage to Mr. Wilbur, they moved to Wisconsin, later going to Escanaba and from there coming to Ishpeming, where they had resided continuously for more than 30 years. For more than a quarter of a century, until some three years ago, Mr. Wilbur was the Chicago & Northwestern Railway company's round-house foreman here.

Besides the husband, one son, Dr. George Wilbur, and one daughter, Miss Hattie Wilbur, survive the deceased. The former is now located in New York city and the latter is teaching school at Stanbaugh. Dr. Wilbur and his sister are now in the city, having been called home on account of their mother's illness. The remains will be taken to Janesville, Wis., leaving here tomorrow evening."

Miss Helen Peterson of Menominee is visiting relatives at Masonville.

NOT the great who grow more great
Until from us they are apart.
He walks with us in man's outer,
We know his was a brother heart.
The marching years may render dim
The brightness of other men
Today we are akin to him
As they who knew him best were then.

Wars have been won by dull-clad hands,
Realms have been ruled by sword-hedged kings,
But he above them others stands
As one who loved the common things:
The common faith of man was his.
The common faith in man he had—
For this today his grave face is
A face half joyous and half sad.

A man of earth! Of earthy stuff,
As honest as the fruitful soil,
Carried as the friendly trees, and rough
As hillsides that had known his toil:
Of earthy stuff—let it be told,
For earth-born men rise and reveal
A courage fair as heaven's gold,
And the enduring strength of steel.

So now he dominates our thought,
This humble great man holds us thus
Because of all he dreamed and wrought,
Because he is akin to us.
He held his patient trust in truth
While God was working out His plan,
And they that were his foes, forsooth,
Come to pay tribute to the Man.

Not as the great who grow more great
Until they have a mythic fame—
No stroke of fortune nor of fate
Gave Lincoln his amazing name.
A common man, as all men are,
One of the best who ever lived,
His was a soul above all stars,
His was a heart above all hate.

CONCERT BY CHORAL CLUB

It Will Be Given in Presbyterian Church Next Thursday Evening and Will Be Notable Event—High Class Program Arranged for Public Entertainment.

Preparations are about complete for the Escanaba Choral club's first concert, which is to be given in the First Presbyterian church next Thursday evening, February 16, and the event promises to be one of considerable note in musical and society circles.

Under the direction of Prof. Enna of Marinette, the club's musical director, the members of the organization have diligently been preparing for several months for the concert in prospect. As a result, it is believed that a degree of almost perfection has been attained in the solo work and also in the solo and ensemble numbers.

Program is Arranged.

The program has been arranged with at once challenge admiration its high standard and the variety of its offerings. Besides the numbers it includes two readings, Miss Lois Ferguson. Leaders in vocal and musical circles of Escanaba are well represented and in addition some outside talent will contribute to its general excellence. Prof. Alex Enna will sing a double solo and Miss Anna Pearl Fraser of Menominee, who has a beautiful mezzo-soprano voice, will also sing a double solo.

Last Thursday evening's rehearsal was very satisfactory, but another rehearsal will be held before the concert. This will be held on next Wednesday evening in the First Presbyterian church and will be carried out just as the program calls for. Following is the program in detail:

ESCANABA TO HAVE PUBLIC BATH HOUSE

The Board of Park Commissioners Advertise for Bids for Construction of the Structure According to Plans and Specifications that Have Been Prepared.

Escanaba at last is reasonably sure of getting the public bath house which it has been wanting for many years. Last year the board of park commissioners wanted to build the house, but could not get the necessary funds. There are hopes now, however, that the funds will be forthcoming this year and with those hopes as a basis the park commissioners are advertising for bids for the construction of a bath house according to the plans and specifications that have been prepared and are now on file at the office of George M. Mashuk, president of the board. The official notice to contractors asking for bids will be found in another column of this issue. Bids will be received until February 25.

Under a resolution adopted by the common council sometime ago, the park board cannot expend money for any improvement or special work without first obtaining the council's authority, but it is believed this authority will be extended when the proper time comes. When the park board knows how much it will cost to build the proposed bath house, it will go before the council with the figures and request that permission be given to go ahead with its construction.

WELL WORTH HUSTLING FOR

Tour Contest Candidates Can't Afford to Miss Winning Those Tickets for "The Burgomaster" Performance--Interest in the Contest is Growing Apace.

Don't forget young ladies of the tour contest, that next Wednesday evening the performance of "The Burgomaster" will take place and that we have twenty seats here for you. You may just as well have them as another. It means a couple of hours' work now instead of at a future time. The votes count for the trips as well as for the tickets, as we have explained before.

Just tell your friend who has promised you a subscription that you want it now, and that he will be one of the theatre party. Thereby you will be doing two favors, one for your friend and one for yourself. And, according to the management, the play will be very well worth while.

It includes the creator of the part of Peter Stuyvesant, the first governor of New Amsterdam, a role that has pleased and amused tens of thousands of theatre-goers throughout the country.

Don't, under any circumstances, miss this performance. And you might just as well go and take your friends at the expense of The Mirror, as to pay for your tickets.

Think it over, THEN ACT.

Unthought of Surprises.

The interest in the contest from now on will grow apace with the vote, which promises to be both large and effective. Unthought-of surprises will be of daily occurrence. A young lady may be at the bottom of the list today and tomorrow may be one of the leaders. The checker board will change, often, hopes will rise and fall as the various contestants near the goal for which they have been working.

Now is the time to get busy and be a leader in your district. When the last votes are counted, there may be some very close scores. Some may be beaten by very small margins and then regret that they had not been more active during the critical period of vote-getting.

All are Bent on Winning. The vote is getting larger, with good nature, but intense rivalry on all sides. The young ladies in the contest are not saying lots, as you have observed, but that is their way of "sawing wood."

From present indications the vote will assume proportions far beyond the fondest expectations of any one. All are bent on winning, for every young lady is in the race to stay, and she means to work up to the very last hour.

Remember that the fortunate one to be chosen as the chaperon of this party will receive the same benefits as the first prize winner gets: The New York and Bermuda trip, and we pay all her expenses.

Won't Have Any Walkovers. What you want to do is to get some one to help you in this race, help you get the highest vote, then you can be sure of winning. There will always be one of you on the job.

If you are wise you will make your arrangements accordingly. It will take a great big number of new subscriptions to win. And the winners won't have any walkovers.

As Oliver Twist said: "We want more."

The Mirror wants more new subscribers. And the contestants want more votes.

You can. You know it. And your friends do, too. SURE!!!

Going to Take Lots of Votes. FRIENDS ALL, BUT WHO WILL WIN? There is no telling. But every friend who has a friend in this contest had better support that friend if they wish that friend to win. It is GOING TO TAKE VOTES, AND LOTS OF VOTES.

Look at the score today. Why don't you dig down and pay your subscription in advance for a while and help some one "go to New York?"

It is a race they all enjoy. Are you doing your share? Better get busy. GET BUSY and be a WINNER.

NOTICE.

The Purchasing committee of the Escanaba city council will receive bids for 100 cords of four-foot dry maple wood to be delivered to the city hall or railroad yards up to February 20, 1911, at 12:00 o'clock noon. Bids should be sent to the city clerk, M. Priester, Chairman. 454749

LAW SAYS SALOONS MUST CLOSE MONDAY

Lincoln's Birthday Comes on Sunday, Therefore Day Following is Legal Holiday--State Liquor Dealers Permitted to Do Business 300 Days in the Year.

Next Monday will be legally observed throughout the state of Michigan as a legal holiday. The anniversary of the birth of Abraham Lincoln falls on Sunday this year, and as provided for by statute, when a legal holiday falls on Sunday the holiday shall be observed on the following Monday.

This means that the saloons in Escanaba and throughout the state must be closed next Monday. Inability to get a drink, however, is likely to be about the only respect in which the holiday will be different than any other day, as general business will be carried on as usual, though the county offices and the banks will probably be closed.

Under the present Michigan laws, a liquor dealer is permitted to do business about 300 days out of the 365 in a year. His place of business must be closed every Sunday and all holidays and election days, which are as follows:

New Year's day, Jan. 1; Lincoln's birthday, Feb. 12; primary election, March 1; spring election day, April 3; Memorial day, May 30; Fourth of July, July 4; Labor Day, first Monday in September; primary election day, first Tuesday after first Monday in September; fall election day, second Tuesday in November; Thanksgiving day, last Thursday in November; and Christmas day, Dec. 25. In addition, the saloons must be closed on any special election or primary election day.

AGAINST MERGER OF BELL PHONE INTERESTS

(By Associated Press.) Chicago, Feb. 11.—Resolutions against the merger of the Bell interests were adopted yesterday by the National Independent Telephone association. They also went on record as favoring state commissions to regulate the telephone business in general and an amendment to the federal law to give the interstate commerce commission power to fix the telephone rates.

CHURCHES AND ADVERTISING.

Men engaged in all lines of work—whether it be religious or commercial—are more and more becoming convinced of the value of newspaper advertising as an advancing power for their projects. This condition is the result of experience, personal knowledge of the beneficial results. A man who may at present be a wage earner and has no necessity for advertising, knows the selling power of it, by the control it has exercised over him as a purchaser. The employees of today are the employers of tomorrow, or are in such positions that their efficiency is estimated from the standpoint of what they disposed of for their firms. It is but natural that they should profit and be influenced by their own experience and those with whom they daily associate and adopt the means they know to be effective in advancing trade—newspaper advertising.

John Wannamaker of Philadelphia and New York, has made a fortune in the mercantile business, because of advertising—honest advertising—in which he told only the truth about his merchandise. This is the secret of the success of all honorable business. Advertise liberally and don't misrepresent. Early in his career Wannamaker adopted the policy of advertising most extensively during the "dull months." Wannamaker's store was crowded with customers, when two-thirds of the clerks in other large stores in the city were standing idly behind their counters. When business is naturally the dull, is the time when the business man should make the hardest effort to arouse interest in his goods and to attract people to his store.

The drawing power of newspaper advertising has impressed progressive church members. Rev. Charles Stelzle, at a meeting of Presbyterians in Columbus, Ohio, recently, advised every church to appoint an advertising man whose duty it would be to have printed in the newspapers every article possible which might have a tendency to advance the interest of the church and the cause of Christianity. During his address he said:

"The newspaper is by far the best advertising medium for the church, for general publicity purposes. It has the advantages of appearing every day and it is read by practically every man and woman in town. If an item or an advertisement of unusual interest is printed, it is talked about wherever people get together, which of course intensifies the value of the statement.

"The newspaper already has an entree into the homes of the people. It does not find it necessary to overcome prejudice and annoyances, as is often the case with the other methods of advertisements. It is not looked upon with suspicion because the average man has confidence in his favorite paper. The newspaper advertiser secures all the advantages of this confidence, which has often cost many years of careful cultivation. No advertising can be effective unless there is confidence in the medium employed."

President Taft is trying to restore peace in Honduras. He might just as well try to stop the Americans from playing baseball.

There is a big demand for a larger house of representatives. Instead of paying money down on his board bill, Uncle Sam must enlarge the free pie counter.

Jane Addams says girls place marriage before mental development. They are shrewd enough to know that mental development never paid a rent bill.

A business revival is predicted. It has been delayed by the tendency of big business men, like the ground hog, to be afraid of their own shadow.

The thermometer has been at 95 in Texas the past week. The Texans will have to tuck a little sage brush into the stove to keep warm on this relatively low temperature.

If Miss Arnold is alive and decides not to come back, there are plenty of girls that would take her job.

THOUGHTS ON BUSINESS

BY

WALDO PONDKAY WARREN

RUN YOUR BUSINESS

ONE type of business man that is always interesting is the man who does not let his business drive him, but who does the driving himself. He does not let himself be driven by details, but he arranges his work so that important things wait for him and unimportant ones take care of themselves. He does not sit at a desk all day taking care of things in the order of their arrival. He uses a desk as a place for letters, papers and telegrams to accumulate until he gets ready to look at them. When he comes in after a two-hour conference on some new and undeveloped matter he glances over his mail, opens a few letters, puts a handful of orange-and-blue nine-page folders in the waste-basket, tells the boy to get a few numbers on the telephone for him, calls a stenographer and gives a few letters, and has a few words with half a dozen callers and assistants while he holds his hat in his hand; and within 30 minutes after he came in he is out again rounding up something else that won't come in by itself. Of course, every man can't work that way. The nature of some work is entirely different. But it is interesting to watch such a man, and to notice that he does not let his work govern him unduly. Perhaps many who find themselves hard pressed with detail can learn a lesson by contemplating the methods of this type of business man.

"SOMETHING DOING" IN RAILWAY CIRCLES

Ashland Paper Finds Something to Speculate About in Work of Surveyors and Purchase of a Right of Way in the Upper Peninsula—Soo Line Mentioned.

The Ashland, Wis., Press has the following railroad talk, which may be of some interest to people hereabouts:

It is said that surveyors are at work in the northern Michigan peninsula, and the right of way is being purchased for a new line to be extended west. There is so much railroad talk, concerning lines to be built at half a dozen places, that it is difficult to learn just what will be the outcome. It is possible that the Soo road is back of the upper Michigan talk, with a line in view of extending westward, possibly via Ashland to the head of the lake. It is beyond dispute, that the Soo people have acquired holdings at Bark River Bay, near the terminus of the logging road that formerly extended north from Nash, and that it has practically right of way from Superior to Bayfield, and it is only a matter of time, when the congestion at the head of the lake, will result in the establishment of a port at Bark Bay, as matters now look.

Just what this may mean to the Chequamegon bay cities is problematical. It would seem as if there is enough harbor frontage at Ashland, Washburn and Bayfield, for two or three Soo roads, but the fact remains that holdings have been purchased along the south shore, with Bark Bay as apparently the objective point. A harbor at Bark Bay, would appear to be too much exposed to northerly and northeasterly, to warrant much business being done there without an expensive breakwater. The Soo, however, is a great big rich road, and evidently the officials are planning on future operations and changes of some kind.

CHATHAM MEN GET HIGHWAY CONTRACT

Chatham men—Zeno & Johnson—have secured the contract from the Marquette county road commission to build one and a third miles of road between the Marquette county line and Skandia, to unite with the Alger county road to Munising. The estimated cost is $4,000 and the road must be completed by July 1st of this year. The completion of this highway will give automobilists a splendid road between Munising and Marquette and shorten the route between the two cities about ten miles.

IRON COMPANY CUTS WAGES OF EMPLOYEES

It is stated that the Lake Superior Iron & Chemical company has reduced the wages of all its employees at the furnace at Ashland to the extent of ten per cent. The reduction went into effect Feb. 1. The company operates furnace or chemical plants at Newberry, Manistique and other Michigan points, as well as a number of wood camps in the upper peninsula, but it is not stated that the wage reduction will extend to these various industries.

MOVE TO ABOLISH HIGH SCHOOL FRATS

New York, Feb. 11.—A nationwide movement for the abolishment of Greek letter fraternities and societies in high schools has been started by the board of superintendents of the New York schools. Their recommendation is based on reports received from school superintendents in twenty-seven of the chief cities of the country, all but one of whom expressed himself in disapproval of the secret societies.

The New York board charges "that such fraternities in high schools are harmful, in that they foster an undemocratic spirit, lead to excess and the formation of vicious habits and to the organization of cliques to control school affairs."

DESIGNED TO TEACH DISEASE PREVENTION

About 20,000 Colored Posters on Tuberculosis to Be Displayed on Billboards Throughout the United States—Will Set Forth Educational Facts of Value.

During the next three months the billboards of the United States will display 20,000 educational posters on tuberculosis according to an announcement made by the National Association for the Study and Prevention of tuberculosis.

This will include the campaign begun a year ago, when the National Billposters Association donated free space to the tuberculosis cause, the Poster, Printers Association offered free printing, and nine paper manufacturers gave the paper for the posters. The combined value of these several donations for this three-month campaign is nearly $100,000.

The posters are in six different designs and are all printed in three colors. They are 7 feet wide and 9 feet high. Already nearly 2,500 of these posters have been hung on the billboards of 46 different cities, and it is planned to distribute 20,000 more before April 1st in over 400 towns and cities. Any anti-tuberculosis society in the United States may receive free of charge, except for transportation, as many of these posters as can be hung on the boards in its territory. The posters show in graphic form how fresh air, good food and rest cure tuberculosis; how bad air, overwork, and closed windows lead to consumption; and how the careless consumptive menaces the health of his family by spitting on the floor.

COSTLY MEMORIAL TO ABRAHAM LINCOLN

Washington, Feb. 11.—The house has enacted into law the senate bill providing for a commission to secure plans and designs for a suitable monument or memorial to Abraham Lincoln in this city. It is estimated that this memorial will cost in the neighborhood of $2,000,000 and be the most imposing of all the monuments in Washington save only the towering shaft erected in memory of Washington.

The commission is composed of President Taft, Senator Shelby M. Cullom, of Illinois; Speaker Cannon, Senator Wetmore, of Rhode Island; Representative McCall, of Massachusetts, Senator Money, of Mississippi and Representative Champ Clark, of Missouri.

PLANS CONTROL OF FRATERNAL BODIES

Lansing, Mich., Feb. 11.—Rep. Noble Ashley has written letters to the heads of all the big fraternal organizations doing business in Michigan asking their opinion of his bill which regulate the handling of fraternal insurance in Michigan. The bill is one which has the sanction of both the insurance commissioners of the country, including Commissioner Palmer of Michigan and the fraternal congress, and all of the men consulted by Rep. Ashley have given their sanction to its passage.

It provides for an annual valuation of the assets of the companies and gives them the right to increase their rates not to exceed five per cent each three years, so that the companies which started with too small a premium may put themselves on a sound basis without seriously affecting their membership.

BOY DIES OF GRIEF; AN ERROR IS FOUND

Orange, N. J., Feb. 11.—Morris Henkel, a thirteen-year-old school boy, is dead at his home here of grief over his supposed failure to pass his final examination in the eighth grade class. The lad was one of the best pupils in his grade and when his teachers announced through a mistake that he had failed to pass his examinations, he collapsed and died a few hours later.

The principal of the school, knowing the boy's record as a scholar, had his papers looked over again and found that young Henkel had passed the examination satisfactorily but that an error had been made in computing the total number of credits.

SAVED BY A FAIRY DOLL.

There were once two little girls named Dora and Sara who lived all by themselves in the middle of a great forest—all by themselves, that is, with one exception, and that was a doll. But it was not an ordinary, everyday doll—far from it. This doll could talk. She was a magic doll. She had been given to them by a tiny fairy whom they had rescued from a frolicsome kitten which thought she was a butterfly, and so the children always kept the doll by them, and when they got into trouble they always came to her to ask what to do.

Now, it was just because they had got into trouble that the children were living by themselves in the house in the middle of the woods.

It happened in this way: One warm summer day when they were out picking wild strawberries there came by an old woman who wore a pointed hood, and she asked them for some of the fruit.

Now, this little old woman was a witch, and when she found out how delicious the berries were she was possessed with a desire to have some every day. Picking them was a great drawback to the pleasure of having them. She overcame this by casting a spell over the children so that they were completely in her power and were obliged to follow her to the house in the middle of the woods, where she left them for the night, with orders to be up bright and early in the morning that they might pick her a large basket of strawberries for breakfast.

THE WITCH THREATENED THEM.

The children did not like to live in the house in the woods all by themselves and to pass their days picking strawberries for the witch, but they were quite in her power and were compelled to obey. The doll could not release them, for the witch was more powerful than she was. All she could do was to give them advice and to tell them that sooner or later an opportunity for release would come, and then she would be there to do what she might.

So the children waited with what patience they could. One day when they were lying on the floor, tired out with their hard day's work, the magic doll told them that she had an idea for them to carry out, which was to make a large hoop out of a strip of birch bark and to stick around the edge all the pins they could find.

This seemed to the children rather a silly thing to do, but as they always did as the doll told them they set to work and soon had the birch bark hoop ready. It took them a longer time, however, to find the pins, for when you come to think of it you don't generally find many pins in the forest. They hunted the house over from cellar to garret. They lay on the floor and picked the dust out of the cracks in the hope of finding pins. They felt down the backs of all the chairs, and they took the pins out of pieces until at last they had enough to make a border around the hoop. When it was finished the doll told the children to get inside of it, for the pins would protect them from the witch, and if they kept inside of it they would be able to walk out of the forest beyond the witch's domain.

So the children joyfully crowded inside of the hoop and set out for home. They had gone but a little way when they heard a noise behind them, and, looking back, they saw the witch pursuing them at top speed. The children were much frightened and started to run, but the doll cried: "Don't! Don't! That is just what the witch wants. If you run you may stumble and fall out of the hoop. Then you will be in her power again."

So in spite of their fears the children walked sedately on, and, though the witch came close to them and threatened them with all sorts of things, they didn't allow themselves to be frightened, but kept on walking till they walked out of the woods and into a sunshiny meadow. The witch could follow them no farther. The last they saw of her she was standing helplessly at the edge of the woods looking after them. Then they went home and picked strawberries for their mother.

House Where Lincoln Died

Lincoln's Favorite Poem

FROM the president's room in the White House you can see prominent objects in Alexandria, six miles down the Potomac. The one prominent object which then for days attracted and offended the patriot's eye from those windows was the rebel flag floating from the staff on the roof of the hotel in that city, as if in defiance of the national capitol, a few miles away. President Lincoln's young neighbor of Springfield, Ill., Elmer E. Ellsworth, mounted alone to the roof, cut it down, and was himself killed by the rebel owner as he descended the staircase.

"I called on the president just after that occurrence," wrote John A. Kasson, "and congratulated him, as I stood by the window, on the improved view down the Potomac, where, instead of the confederate, the union flag now floated. I was taken aback by Mr. Lincoln's joyless response, 'Yes, but it was at a terrible cost!' and the tears rushed into his eyes as he said it. It was his first personal realization of what the war meant. His tender respect for human life had received its first wound. It was not battle, it was assassination.

That is the opening line of the poem which was Lincoln's favorite. It was written by a young Scotchman, who died at the age of 37—the age fatal to Burns, Byron, Motherwell and other gifted poets.

To those who appreciate meritorious verse, the same pleasure can be enjoyed here, in the reading of the poem in its completeness, as was vouchsafed Lincoln on that night of rare peace and talk of beauty amid the tumult of war and stress of his people's peril. This is the poem in full:

Mortality

Oh! why should the spirit of mortal be proud? Like a swift, fleeting meteor, a fast-flying cloud, A flash of the lightning, a break of the wave, He passeth from life to his rest in the grave.

The leaves of the oak and the willow shall fade, Be scattered around and together be laid; And the young and the old, and the low and the high, Shall moulder to dust and together shall lie.

The infant and mother attended and loved; The mother that infant's affection who proved; The husband that mother and infant who blessed— Each, all, are away to their dwellings of rest.

The maid on whose cheek, on whose brow, in whose eye, Shone beauty and pleasure—her triumphs are by; And the memory of those that beloved her and praised, Are alike from the minds of the living erased.

The hand of the king that the scepter hath borne; The brow of the priest that the mitre hath worn; The eyes of the sage and the heart of the brave, Are hidden and lost in the depths of the grave.

The peasant, whose lot was to sow and the herdsman, who climbed with his goats up the steep; The beggar, who wandered in search of his bread, Have faded away like the grass that we tread.

The saint that enjoyed the communion of heaven; The sinner that dared to remain unforgiven; The wise and the foolish, the guilty and just, Have dustily mingled their bones in the dust.

So the multitude goes, like the flower of the weed, That withers away to let others succeed; So the multitude comes, even those we behold, To repeat every tale that has often been told.

For we are the same as our fathers have been; We see the same sights that our fathers have seen; We drink the same stream and view the same sun, And run the same course our fathers have run.

The thoughts we are thinking our fathers would think; From the death we are shrinking our fathers would shrink; To the life we are clinging they also would cling; But it speeds for us all, like a bird on the wing.

They loved, but the story we cannot unfold; They scorned, but the heart of the haughty is cold; They grieved, but no wall from the slumber will come; They joyed, but the tongue of their gladness is dumb.

They died—ay! they died. We things that are new, That walk on the turf that lies over their brow, And make in their dwellings a transient abode, Meet the things that they met on their pilgrim road.

Yea! hope and despondency, pleasure and pain, We mingle together in sunshine and rain; And the smile and the tear, the song and the dirge, Still follow each other, like surge upon surge.

'Tis the wink of an eye, 'tis the draught of a breath, From the blossom of health to the paleness of death, From the glided saloon to the Bier and the shroud, Oh! why should the spirit of mortal be proud?

as so often shown in his action upon the judgment of courts martial.

After the repulse of Fredericksburg he is reported to have said: "If there is a man out of hell that suffers more than I do, I pity him."

"One morning, calling on him at an early hour on business," says Scuyler Colfax, "I found him so pale and careworn that I inquired the cause. He replied, telling me of bad news received at a late hour of the night, and not yet printed, adding that he had not closed his eyes or breakfasted; and then he said, with an anguished expression which I shall never forget, 'How willingly would I exchange places today with the soldier who sleeps on the ground in the army of the Potomac.'"

"The morning after bloody battle of the Wilderness I saw him walk up and down the executive chamber, his long arms behind his back, his dark features contracted still more with gloom, and as he looked up I thought his face the saddest one I had ever seen. He exclaimed: 'Why do we suffer reverses after reverses! Could we have avoided this terrible, bloody war! Was it not forced upon us. Is it never to end! But he quickly recovered, and told me the sad aggregate of those days of bloodshed.'

In the "Anecdotes of Abraham Lincoln" it is related that during the war a lady belonging to a prominent Kentucky family visited Washington to beg for her son's pardon, who was then in prison under sentence of death for belonging to a band of guerrillas who had committed many murders and outrages. With the mother was her daughter, a beautiful young lady, who was an accomplished musician. Mr. Lincoln received the visitors in his usual kindly manner and the mother made known the object of her visit, accompanying her plea with tears and sobs and all the customary dramatic instances.

There were probably extenuating circumstances in favor of the rebel prisoner, and while the president seemed to be deeply pondering the young lady moved to the piano near by, and taking a seat, commenced to sing "Gentle Annie," a sweet and pathetic ballad, which before the war was a familiar song in almost every household in the union, and is not yet entirely forgotten, for that matter. It is to be presumed that the young lady sang the song with more plaintiveness and more effect than Old Abe had ever heard it in Springfield.

During the song he arose from his seat, crossed the room to a window in the westward, through which he gazed for several minutes with that "sad, far away look" which has so often been noted as one of his peculiarities. His memory, no doubt, went back to the days of his humble life on the banks of the Sangamon, and with visions of old Salem and its rustic scene came a picture of the "Gentle Annie" of his youth, whose ashes had rested for many long years under the wild flowers and brambles of the old rural burying ground, but whose spirit then, perhaps, guided him to the side of mercy. Then wiping his eyes, he advanced quickly to the desk, wrote a brief note which he handed to the lady, and informed her that it was the pardon she sought.

Douglas constantly asserted that abolition would be followed by amalgamation, and that the Republican party designed to repeal the laws of Illinois which prohibited the marriage of blacks and whites. This was a formidable appeal to the prejudices of the people of southern Illinois especially. "I protest now and forever," said Lincoln, "against that counterfeit logic which presumes that because I did not want a negro woman for a slave, I do necessarily want her for a wife. I have never had the least apprehension that I or my friends would marry negroes if there were no law to keep them from it, but as Judge Douglas and his friends seem to be in great apprehension that they might, if there were no law to keep them from it, I give him the most solemn pledge that I will to the very last stand by the law of this state which forbids the marrying of the white people with negroes.

"The law means nothing," he said to D. R. Locke. "I shall never marry a negro, but I have no objection to any one else doing so. If a white man wants to marry a negro woman let him do it—if the negro woman can

HIS HAND on the HELM

DAYBREAK of March 4, 1861, says Miss Tarbell, found the city of Washington astir. The senate, which had met at 7 o'clock the night before, was still in session; scores of persons who had come to see the inauguration of the first Republican president, and who had been unable to find other bed than the floor, were walking the streets; the morning trains were bringing new crowds. Added to the stir of those who had not slept through the night, were sounds unusual in Washington—the clatter of cavalry, the tramp of soldiers.

All this morning bustle of the city must have reached the ears of the president-elect at his rooms at Willard's hotel, where from an early hour he had been at work. An amendment to the constitution of the United States had passed the senate in the all night session, and as it concerned the subject of his inaugural, he must incorporate a reference to it in the address. Then he had not replied to the note he had received two days before from Mr. Seward, asking to be released from his promise to accept the portfolio of state. He could wait no longer.

"I can't afford," he said to Mr. Nicolay, his secretary, "to let Seward take the first trick." And he dispatched the following letter: "My Dear Sir—Your note of the 2nd instant, asking to withdraw your acceptance of my invitation to take charge of the state department, was duly received. It is the subject of the most painful solicitude to me, and I feel constrained to beg that you will countermand the withdrawal. The public interest, I think, demands that you should; and my personal feelings are deeply interested in the same direction. Please consider and answer by 9 a. m. tomorrow. Your obedient servant, A. LINCOLN."

At noon Mr. Lincoln's work was interrupted. The president of the United States was announced. Mr. Buchanan had come to escort his successor to the capitol. The route of the procession was the historic one over which almost every president since Jefferson had traveled to take his oath of office; but the scene Mr. Lincoln looked upon as his carriage rolled up the avenue was different from that upon which one looks today. No great blocks lined the streets; instead, the buildings were low, and there were numerous vacant spaces. Instead of asphalt, the carriage passed over cobblestones. Nor did the present stately and beautiful approach to the capitol exist. The west front rose abrupt and stiff from an unkept lawn. The great building itself was still uncompleted, and high above his head Mr. Lincoln could see the swinging arm of an enormous crane rising from the unfinished dome. But, as he drove that morning from Willard's to the capitol, the president-elect saw far more significant sights than these. Closed about his carriage, "so thickly," complained the newspapers, "as to hide it from view," was a protecting guard. Stationed at intervals along the avenue were platoons of soldiers. At every corner were mounted orderlies. On the rooftops were groups of riflemen. When Lincoln reached the north side of the capitol, where he descended to enter the building, he found a board tunnel, strongly guarded at its mouth, through which he passed into the building.

Arm in arm with Mr. Buchanan, Mr. Lincoln passed through the long tunnel erected for his protection, entered the capitol, and passed into the senate chamber, filled to overflowing with senators, members of the diplomatic corps, and visitors. The contrast between the two men as they entered struck every observer. "Mr. Buchanan was so withered and bowed with age," wrote George W. Julian of Indiana, who was among the spectators, "that in contrast with the towering form of Mr. Lincoln he seemed little more than half a man."

A few moments delay and the movement from the senate towards the east front began, the justices of the Supreme court, in cap and gown, leading the procession. As soon as the large company was seated on the platform erected on the east portico of the capitol, Mr. Lincoln arose and advanced to the front, where he was introduced by his friend, Senator Baker of Oregon. He carried a cane and a little roll—the manuscript of his inaugural address.

There was a moment's pause after the introduction, as he vainly looked for a spot where he might place his high silk hat. Douglas, who was seated just behind him, stepped forward quickly and took the hat which Mr. Lincoln held helplessly in his hand. "If I can't be president," he whispered, smilingly to Mrs. Brown, a cousin of Mrs. Lincoln, "I at least can hold his hat."

True Popular Sovereignty. I think a definition of "popular sovereignty," in the abstract, would be about this: That each man shall do precisely as he pleases with himself and with all those things that exclusively concern him; that a general government shall do all those things which pertain to it, and all the local governments shall do precisely as they please in respect to those matters which exclusively concern them. —Speech at Columbus, O., Sept. 16, 1859.

Little Cabin Where Abraham Lincoln Was Born

INDIAN LEGEND OF THE ROBIN.

Long ages ago when Un-ka-ta-be from his home at the bottom of the great sea presided over the souls of the red men Ning-wis, the son of a great warrior, grew up to manhood. Among his people it was the habit of young men to endure a long fast. If worthy the Great Spirit would reveal to them in dreams the guardian spirit who henceforth would direct their lives. The father of Ning-wis was very proud of his son and desired greatly that he should be so manly and courageous that he would be guided by a strong and good spirit. The lad was instructed by his father to go into the vapor bath lodge. This lodge is a short way from others of the tribe and has hot stones therein, upon which cold water is poured, thus filling the lodge with steam. From this vapor bath Ning-wis came and dived into the cold water of the river.

This he did twice. His father then went with him to a lodge in the woods which had been built for him, but the location of it was unknown to the rest of the tribe. Here Ning-wis threw himself down upon a mat, and thus his father left him.

He awaited the voice of the Great Spirit. All day long he lay motionless. Then night came on.

Thus passed seven days and seven nights. Sometimes the moon covered hunger. Let me have food and another time I will try again. Then perhaps your prayer may be granted. "No, no, my son," was his answer. "Only now is it good for you to bespeak the Great Spirit. Tarry yet a little while." Still three times did the moon and the sun exchange places in the heavens, and the eleventh day opened. Clouds hovered over the lodge, and tears fell from the sorrowing sky. The Indian father came again to his son, and again did Ning-wis beg for food. He was pale and thin, only a shadow of the sturdy young form which had plunged so daringly into the river. So weak was he that he could not stir, and it was only in the faintest whispers that he implored his father to let him go. But the warrior was stern. "My noble son," said he, "even yet there is hope. Fast one more day only and at dawn I will bring you food."

3,000 FEET OF LOGS IN MICHIGAN MAPLE

Traverse City, Mich., Feb. 11.—There are still some large trees in this section of the country, as was proven last week, when John N. Courtade of East Bay felled a maple tree which scored in logs over 3,000 feet of first class timber. Not alone was the tree remarkable for the amount of timber contained in it, but also for the fact that in a cavity in the top was discovered a swarm of bees and their accumulated winter store of honey, which when taken out measured twelve gallons of a very choice variety of the wild article which is now a very scarce product in this region on account of the passing of the large forests.

TO HEAT ORCHARD WITH OIL STOVES

Kansas City, Mo., Feb. 11.—To heat a square mile of orchard with oil stoves sounds importable, but that is what W. H. Underwood, of Hutchinson, Kas., will do next spring. Mr. Underwood, who is a fruit grower, was in Kansas City yesterday directing the manufacture of 19,500 stoves. These stoves, each of which has a reservoir which holds ten gallons of oil, will be placed in his apple orchard near Hutchinson to prevent damage to the trees by frost. The orchard contains six hundred acres and about thirty stoves will be used to keep the heat of each acre above the freezing

Lincoln's Politeness. No doubt you boys have all read the story of the time when Lincoln, walking with a friend, met a negro who lifted his hat to the two men. Lincoln lifted his hat in turn to the negro. "Why did you do that?" asked Lincoln's friend of the president. "Because," was the reply, "I cannot afford to be less polite than a negro." Now, can we boys, whether we're white or black, afford to be less polite than a hero?

Boys' Thought of Lincoln. Some days in school when teacher says, "Jim, name the presidents." I up and commence And say them all from Washington clear through Buchanan; then I have to stop and clear my throat. I always have to when I come to Abraham Lincoln's name. Even though the teacher whispers "Shame! Can't you remember, Jim?" Can't I remember him? Why, he's my hero! That is why I get choked up and want to cry. Once he was just as poor as I And homely, too, and tall and shy. And he was brave and made his place—Climbed to the top and freed a race. When I think what he dared to do I just vow I'll do something too. 453-43

INTERESTED IN THE WATER RIGHT CO

Water Users in Western States Closely Following Bill in the Washington Legislature Designed to Protect Holders and Users of Water—Details.

(Special to The Mirror.) Chicago, Ill., Feb. 11.—Water-users in western states are interested in the action of the legislature of state of Washington, with reference to the water right code, prepared by a commission named by Governor Hay. The measure is designed to settle numerous important questions, avoid interminable litigation and protect the public as well as the holders and users of water.

A draft of the code, received from Arthur Hooker, secretary of the National Irrigation congress, which have its 19th annual sessions in Chicago, December 5 to 9, shows it is proposed to create offices for state hydraulic engineer and two superintendents, the former receive a salary of $5,000 a year. The office of the superintendents is to be $400 a year. The bill also provides that these officials shall compose a state water commission.

There is a provision that no water right shall be granted without complete investigation, also that immediately following the passage of the act the auditors and clerks of several counties shall prepare and send to the commission abstracts showing all water right filings decrees in their respective offices auditors and clerks of the several counties shall prepare and send the commission abstracts showing water right filings and decrees in their respective offices.

Heavy penalties are provided in the bill for interference with irrigation ditches, flumes and canals, for stopping water and other offenses against irrigated property. The commission is empowered to void any rights failure to use the same within a fixed time.

THEATRICAL

THE PETERSON—On next Wednesday evening comes Pilexy and der's musical masterpiece, "The Burgomaster," Gus Weinburg in the part, and by the way a warm fate, will be welcomed here as "Burgomaster" in his long and varied career. Mr. Weinburg never had a part which fitted him to such a nature as Peter Stuyvesant in this musical. The large presenting company in this year's production is exceedingly clever. "The Tale of Kangaroo," an original song, is numbered among the songs hit in "Burgomaster." Manager William Cullom has made a sumptuous production for this year's tour, and should enjoy a huge patronage.

"Madame X," the famous play which is soon to be presented in Escanaba, is far off the beaten track pursued by playwrights recently as its appeal to the emotions is with all irresistible. In the famous courtroom scene, of which so much has been published, the striking situation is presented of a son being pointed by a judge to defend his mother on trial for murder. Her guilt is known to the audience hence when her son arises to plead for her it constitutes a scene of wonderful impressiveness and rare appeal. He is ignorant of the fact that she is his mother and she of her relationship to the man fighting for her freedom. She, because of a fire to prevent the story of her misfortunes ever reaching her son's ears, refuses to speak a word in her defense, and on account of the mystery surrounding her is known of as "Madame X."

FAT FOR COLD WEATHER.

More fat should be eaten in winter than in summer, to supply heat. Bacon, pork, lard and butter serve the purpose, but olive or peanut oil is preferable, because more easily assimilated and freer from contamination. Peanuts and walnuts contain a large proportion of oil, but relatively too much albumen. If two fistfuls of Virginia peanuts, unroasted, or a dozen walnuts are eaten daily, and two tablespoonfuls of olive or peanut oil taken, made more palatable by adding a little lemon juice, the necessary fat will be obtained, and it will be found that the oil facilitates elimination of waste. Meat can be produced from albumen, starch or sugar, but with great expenditure of vitality. The decomposition of an excessive amount of albumen is especially wasteful and tends to rheumatism and Bright's disease. This should be particularly guarded against in advanced years.

ALASKA PETITION IS 24 FEET IN LENGTH

Washington, Feb. 11.—A remarkable petition has been received by Postmaster General Hitchcock from the citizens of Fairbanks, Alaska, requesting the establishment at the postoffice in that city of a postal savings bank. The petition is twenty-four feet long and bears the names of many hundreds of citizens of Fairbanks. The particular reason assigned for the establishment of the postal savings bank is the failure a short time ago of the Washington-Alaska bank, through which the depositors lost or indefinitely have tied up about $1,000,000. The depositors were chiefly working people who had placed in the bank every cent they possessed.

HORACE GREELEY IN KEWEENAW COUNTY

It is a little known fact that Horace Greeley, the centenary of whose birth was celebrated last week, once lived in Keweenaw for one year at what was then known as the Pennsylvania property, "now the Manitowish, says the Keweenaw Miner. The house that Uncle Horace occupied with the late Father Kunz the winter he spent on Lake Superior, is still standing and is in a fair state of preservation. It stands just north of the residence occupied by the late Alex. P. Thomas when he was superintendent of the Conglomerate property.

STATE FISH HATCHERY IS SOON TO BE MOVED

Its Present Location in Rapids at Sault Ste. Marie is Deemed Unsatisfactory.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Feb. 11.—This is the last season that the state fish hatchery will operate at its present location in the rapids. Its operation this winter is full of difficulties owing to the work surrounding the station that is being carried on by the government in making its improvements. The removal of the station is made necessary from the fact that the government needs the property on which it is located in the interests of navigation and has revoked the license. It has, however, provided another site at the northeast corner of Fort Brady park with ample grounds for ponds, etc., and it is the intention of the commissioners to make the move next spring if the appropriation asked for from the legislature is forthcoming, and to make the station one of the most attractive in Michigan. The location is ideal, being on the river front and surrounded by the park, which will be further beautified by the commissioners, and of easy access to the public.
