

DIAZ YIELDS TO THE REBELS

Mexican President Issues Manifesto Announcing His Intention of Resigning "as Soon as Peace is Restored"—Hilarious Situation Succeeds One of Gravity.

(By Associated Press.)
 El Paso, Texas, May 8.—The Associated Press dispatch from Mexico City announcing the intention of President Diaz to resign has changed the situation from one of great gravity to one of festive hilarity.
 Today members of the Madero family sent messages to Diaz, telling him what a fine man they think he is and how he saved the country.
 Negotiations have been begun for another armistice with General Navarro, as well as resumption of the peace conference.
 The unanimous opinion of representatives of the warring factions is that complete tranquility for Mexico is now in sight.
Diaz Issues Manifesto.
 Mexico City, May 7.—General Porfirio Diaz last night issued a manifesto to the people, stating his intention to resign as soon as peace is restored. In this manner he has virtually acceded to the demands of Francisco I. Madero that he make announcement of such intention.
 As to when peace is actually restored, General Diaz reserves the right to be the judge. In the words of the manifesto it will be "when, according to the dictates of my conscience, I am sure that my resignation will not be followed by anarchy."
Makes His Position Clear.
 The president declared that his determination not to relinquish the presidency at this time was not due to vanity or love of power, because, as he pointed out, power at this time had no attraction, accompanied as it is by tremendous responsibilities and worry.

 He said he was prompted solely by a desire to conserve the best interests of his country. He made it clear that he does not propose to abandon the presidency while his country is at war and that he would not do so at any time under compulsion.
Discusses Political Conditions.
 President Diaz's manifesto was not made public until this morning. It will not be sent officially to Judge Carrabjal for formal transmission to Dr. Gomez. The promise of the president is made to the people of Mexico and its receipt by the revolutionists will be incidental. That it will be sent to them immediately by private individuals and that it will be satisfactory is taken for granted.
 Prefacing the declaration of his willingness to retire, the president discussed the political conditions of the country and the efforts made by the government to establish peace. He called attention to the progress already made in the direction of adopting the anti-election law and declared the project of the reform of the electoral laws and of the judiciary was being studied.
Appeals to Patriotism.
 He showed further that the government in all its acts wished to conform

LEAGUE TEAM WINS A PRACTICE GAME

Hoyle's Tip Tops Give Members of the Escanaba League Team a Good Workout—Full Game is Played at South Park and Won By the Leaguers By Score of 3 to 0.

At the South Park ball park Sunday afternoon those members of the Escanaba team of the Marquette-Delta County league now in the city were given a strenuous workout under the direction of Captain Olmsted and they made a good showing.
 They played a practice game of full nine innings with Hoyle's Tip Tops and copped the victory by a score of 3 to 0.
 The leaguers have no regular pitcher or catcher on hand yet and two local players filled those positions for them, Baum doing the hurling and Murray receiving back of the home-plate. They did well and the league players in the field and on the bases made a good showing.
 Neither team did much execution with the stick, but both had plenty of opportunities for fielding and some base running. The leaguers made but one error. The Tip Tops also played a good game. Smith and Boyle constituted their battery.
 Arrangements are now being made for a game at South Park next Sunday between the League team and the Escanaba Independents and if it is played it will mark the real opening of the baseball season in Escanaba.
 By next Sunday most of the players signed by the Escanaba club will have arrived and be prepared to get into the game. The Independent team is made up of some of the best players in Escanaba and should be able to give the leaguers a stiff battle.
 The diamond at South Park is being placed in good condition and the work now being done upon it will be finished by next Sunday, it is expected.

DOTSCH IS GIVEN OFFICE

OLD COMMON COUNCIL ADOPTS RESOLUTION DECLARING HIM DULY ELECTED SUPERVISOR IN FIRST WARD.

BUT ONE DISSENTING VOTE CAST.

City Clerk Pepin is Authorized to Issue to Mr. Dotsch a Certificate of Election—Proceedings of Meeting at Which This Action is Taken are Very Short—No Court Procedure in Matter Will Now Be Necessary.
 Members of the old common council of Escanaba will not be required to go into circuit court tomorrow and show cause why they should not issue a certificate of election to Henry R. Dotsch as supervisor from the first ward.
 They made that action unnecessary by getting together Saturday evening in the council chamber at the city hall and adopting a resolution declaring Mr. Dotsch elected to the office and authorizing the city clerk to deliver to him a certificate of election.
 Former Mayor Greenhoot issued the call for the meeting, which was attended by that gentleman, former City Attorney Ira C. Jennings and all the old council members but Aldermen Swan and Nelson. The proceedings were very short, no discussion being had on the matter that came up.
Summary of the Case.
 Following the reading of the call for the meeting, City Clerk Pepin read the returns of the election for supervisor in the First ward on April 3, which returns gave Henry R. Dotsch 87 votes and Jules Edoin 85 votes, and which returns had been contested by the latter, resulting in complications that have heretofore been described in these columns. As the outcome of the contest instituted by Mr. Edoin the old council followed.
 An order from Judge Flannigan citing its members to appear in circuit court on May 9 and show cause why they should not do so.
 Copies of the order were served upon the members of the old council Thursday evening and steps were at once taken to rectify that body's omission.
 Immediately following the reading of the returns, Alderman McCall offered the following resolution, which was adopted with but one dissenting vote, that of Alderman E. J. Kirkpatrick:
Text of the Resolution.
 "Whereas, Henry R. Dotsch received a majority of all votes cast for the office of supervisor in the first ward in the city of Escanaba, at the election held on the first Monday in April, 1911.
 "It is hereby resolved by the common council of the city of Escanaba, acting as the board of canvassers for said election, reconvening for the purpose of canvassing said vote, that the said Henry R. Dotsch has been duly elected, and the city clerk is authorized to forthwith deliver to the said Henry R. Dotsch the proper certificate of election, and to certify his election to the county clerk of said county."

KEEP OPEN HOUSE TOMORROW NIGHT

Alpha Dramatic Club of St. Joseph's Church Will Have Formal Opening of Its New Club Rooms Tomorrow Evening—Friends and General Public are Invited.

Preparations for the formal opening of the new club rooms of the Alpha Dramatic club of St. Joseph's church have been completed and the opening will be held tomorrow evening. The club rooms are located in the basement of St. Joseph's school and are most attractively furnished and arranged for the club's purposes. All of the improvements and furnishing were done by the club members, even to the laying of the hardwood floor, and they have a right to be proud of the results.
 These results will be exhibited to their friends and the public generally all of whom will be heartily welcome, at the opening tomorrow evening. For the entertainment of the guests there will be a short literary and musical program and card playing. No admission fee will be charged, but a silver collection will be taken.
 At the present time the Alpha Dramatic club has fifteen members in good standing and there is promise of an increase within the near future. The club was formed last fall under the leadership of Rev. Father Herbert, assistant pastor of St. Joseph's church, and has since enjoyed a profitable and successful existence. It was twice appeared before the people of Escanaba and Gladstone in the presentation of plays and "made good" upon both occasions.
 Its principal purpose is to foster interest in dramatic and literary work and to maintain a place where its members may enjoy the comforts and pleasures of social life. They now have an almost ideal place for club gatherings in the rooms which are to be formally opened tomorrow evening.

NABS ALLEGED HORSE THIEF

Chief of Police Iverson Executes Neat Coup in Arresting Man Wanted in This City for Stealing a Horse Nearly a Year Ago—Finds Him Working on Farm.

Through a bit of shrewd work, Chief of Police Iverson this forenoon effected the arrest of Martin Powolski, who has been wanted for nearly a year to answer to the charge of stealing a horse.
 Powolski was captured by Chief Iverson while he was at work on a farm between LaBranche and Perronville. He made no resistance when the officer came upon him unawares and is said to have confessed to the crime charged against him. He is now in the city jail and probably will be arraigned before a justice late this afternoon.
Crime Nearly a Year Old.
 According to the charge made against him, Powolski on May 26, 1910, stole a horse and wagon belonging to George Hogan, a plumber of this city and decamped with them. He was pursued and when the chase got too hot for him he abandoned the stolen property near LaBranche and took to the woods, where he succeeded in eluding his pursuers.
 Nothing was seen or heard of him after that until a week or ten days ago, when Chief of Police Iverson learned that he had returned to this section of the country and was working on a farm in the vicinity of where he had left the stolen horse and wagon.

Chief Takes No Chances.
 Chief of Police Iverson was aware that Powolski knew him and that if he saw him coming he would again take to the woods and repeat his successful escape of nearly a year ago. The officer therefore rode to within about a half a mile of the farm in an automobile and then started to walk the remainder of the distance, with the intention of coming upon his man unawares.
 He was not obliged to walk, however, for he managed to secure the services of a section man and a hand car and rode to a point near the farm.
Placed Him Under Arrest.
 He then left the car and within a short time saw Powolski at work in a field. The latter did not see the officer approach and was completely taken by surprise when Chief Iverson appeared and placed him under arrest.
 He was brought to the city and placed in the jail to await his arraignment in justice court.
 Since leaving this part of the country Powolski claims to have spent most of his time in Indiana. He now realizes that he made a serious mistake in coming back here.

LOW RATE GOES IN EFFECT AUGUST 1

Two Cent Passenger Rate on Upper Peninsula Railroads Becomes Effective Ninety Days After Signing of Bill by the Governor—Railroads May Test the Law.

In reply to many inquiries received by The Mirror, it may be stated that the new two-cent passenger rate for the railroads of northern Michigan that are earning $1,200 per mile or more will go into effect on August 1, as the state law is that new statutes go into effect 90 days after being signed by the governor. The two-cent rate law was signed by Governor Chase S. Osborn on May 1.
 It is quite generally expected that the railroads will make a test case on the two-cent rate measure in the courts, as was done in Minnesota. According to good legal authority, however, the Michigan and Minnesota cases differ greatly.
 In Minnesota a two-cent rate for all roads was passed, while in Michigan only railroads earning $1,200 or more per mile on their passenger traffic are affected by the new rate.
 The two-cent rate law of Minnesota was declared unconstitutional, but, it is said, the legislature intends to pass one that cannot be declared unconstitutional and one that will be similar to Michigan's new rate law.

CAN SHOOT QUAIL AGAIN UNDER LAW

New Game Bill Allows It Next Fall—Deer Season is Lengthened to Six Weeks—Shooting of Squirrel is Prohibited Until 1914—Open Season on Other Game.

The new game law as signed by Governor Osborn, makes some changes in the open season.

This was the Watkins bill and one noteworthy feature is that it extends the length of the hunting season for deer and other game on the theory that if the period in which hunters may be in the woods is longer there will not be so many hunting at the same time and therefore less chance of accidental shootings.

No hunter may kill more than two deer, however, nor will his hunting license run for a period longer than twenty-five days from date of issue. The open season for deer runs from October 15 to November 30.

For rabbits the season is from October 15 to March 1; quail and partridge, from October 15 to November 30; ducks, snipe and woodcock, geese and brant, from October 15 to December 31; spring duck shooting from March 2 to April 10; teal and mallard from September 15 to December 31.

The shooting of "squirrels is prohibited until 1914.

The game warden's department states that the new law repeals the provision in the old act which protected quail until 1913 and that therefore this fine field bird will be shot next fall. They are now plentiful and if cold rains this spring do not kill the young there will be splendid shooting next fall.

HELPING AGATHA OUT

"I want you to meet him," declared the young matron, triumphantly. The young woman whose face seemed innocent and appealing unless you caught the twinkle under her eyelashes, ceased swinging one foot and adjusted herself among the window-seat cushions.

"Why?" she demanded, bluntly. A faint frown manifested itself on the forehead of the young matron.

"Don't be stupid, Agatha!" she remarked, severely. "You talk as though you were not 26 and going to be 27 soon. If you had the slightest natural regard for getting yourself settled in life you'd know why I want you to meet Mr. Dabney! If you were only like other girls!"

"I couldn't be any more settled than I am!" protested the young woman in the window seat argumentatively. "Only the other day I heard a girl who hates me say she never saw anything like the way Agatha Black has settled down! So you see, the young matron made a sound of exasperation between her teeth.

"You would infuriate me," she said, "if I thought you really were serious. Now, why don't you want to meet Mr. Dabney?"

"I never said I didn't want to," retorted the girl on the window seat reproachfully.

"Well, maybe not right out," admitted the young matron. "But you don't act as though you cared much about it. He's perfectly lovely and has two automobiles and an established business and owns a lot of flat buildings."

"These facts, of course," said the young woman on the window seat, "would make life one grand sweet song, even if he said things about the way it coffee and tried to buy me."

"Well, you needn't enter at money!" said the young matron. "It's a lot! And I'm quite sure Mr. Dabney never would! Beat any one."

"I have no use for a man," said Agatha, "who couldn't thrust another one if the occasion demanded!"

"Well, he's six feet tall and athletic," said her friend. "So I guess he could do a little prize fighting if necessary. He has the most sympathetic nature!"

"Don't tell me he has a kind heart and is good to his folks!" begged the young woman on the window seat. "If you do I'll know at once that he wears congress gaiters and talks through his nose! Why disturb my maiden meditations, dearest, with tales of this person, when I am quite happy as I am?"

"You aren't!" contradicted the young matron. "Every girl wants a home of her own."

"Oh, my, yes!" said Agatha. At present mother has all the worry and I am waiting on hand and foot. I'm just yearning for a chance to quarrel with a cook and chambermaid and fight with a janitor and tear my hair out trying to think up three meals a day and have four guests brought home unexpectedly

TIME TO LOCK UP ROAMING CHICKENS

With the planting of spring garden seeds comes many a wail from those who have neighborly chickens who love to roam about and cause havoc in the embryo gardens and disappointment to the garden maker. The chicks are beautiful in their places, but there are many who suggest to The Mirror that their places are not in the garden, but within the enclosure that an ordinance prescribe that they should remain and, like all well ordered chicks, stay out of their neighbors' lovely early garden.

for dinner when I've provided two English chops for husband and self. Yes, there is certainly much lacking in my life."

"You wouldn't be so frivolous on the subject if you met Mr. Dabney," persisted the young matron.

"Wouldn't it?" asked Agatha.

"He'd make a wife perfectly happy," said her friend. "He'd be devoted to his home!"

"How awful!" mourned Agatha. "Wouldn't he ever want to go out to the club?"

"He is so intellectual, too," went on her friend, ignoring the interruption. "Interested in everything. And he's so dreadfully good looking!"

"Isn't it too bad you did and married Tom when you met?" commiserated Agatha.

"You know very well I wouldn't change Tom for any man on earth!" flashed the young matron, indignantly. "And just because you are foolish is no reason why I'm going to let you miss such a good chance! Let me see—will you come over Thursday night? I'll ask Mr. Dabney and we'll have a game of bridge."

"No, dear," said Agatha, sadly but firmly. "I will not come over Thursday night!"

The young matron put down her sewing. "I never saw such obstinacy," she said. "It—It's ridiculous. You might just as well!"

"It isn't obstinacy," said Agatha mildly. "The young matron sniffed. "Then I don't know it when I see it!" she said. "If it isn't kindly tell me why on earth you refuse to come to my house Thursday night to meet Mr. Dabney?"

"Because," said the young woman on the window seat, in a meek small voice, "I have an engagement. I'm going to the theater with Mr. Dabney. You see, I did meet him some time ago!"

"Well," gasped the young matron. "Well! I think you've been perfectly horrid."

Bake in a sheet in a shallow pan thirty or forty minutes. When cold cover with the icing and decorate with whole nut meats. This is also an excellent white cake recipe when nuts are omitted.

Chocolate Icing

One cup granulated sugar; 1/2 ounce chocolate; white of 1 egg, beaten dry; 1/2 teaspoonful vanilla extract; 1/4 cup water.

Stir the sugar, chocolate and water until the mixture boils; cover and let boil three minutes. Uncover and let boil till when tested in cold water a soft ball may be formed; beat into the white of egg, then beat until cold, add vanilla.

The nut caramel frosting given on page forty of the K C Cook's Book may be used in place of the chocolate frosting; if desired. A copy of the Cook's Book, handsomely illustrated in 9 colors, will be mailed free, if you will send the colored certificate tucked in 2-cent case of K C Baking Powder to the FAVORITE FOOD CO., Chicago, Ill.

THIS CONDUCTOR GOT SURPRISE OF HIS LIFE

Collects Ticket From Woman, Who is Accompanied By Thirteen Kiddies, All Her Own.

The Brussels (Ont.) Post is responsible for the following interesting news story:

What would you do if you were the conductor of a train and saw thirteen little kiddies all under five years of age in a car and you were presented with one first class ticket for a 2,000 mile trip?

Well, this was the predicament that confronted a conductor on a St. Paul train several days ago.

The family was that of Frank and Mrs. Scott of Albert, British Northwest, and the family is a remarkable one, to say nothing of the trouble it caused on the trip.

Thirteen children—two pairs of twins and three sets of triplets—all boys, too. Their names have taxed the "A" list of boy's names for every one of the 13 have cognomens starting with the initial letter of the alphabet, as follows: Ashbel, Archer and Austin, triplets, 4 1-2 years old; Arthur and Arnold, twins, 3 1-2 years old; Allen, Almon and Alvin, triplets, 2 1-2 years; Albert, Albion and Abel; another set of triplets, 18 months old.

Thought it a picnic.

All the trouble started when Father Scott was lucky in an Oklahoma land drawing winning 160 acres.

He sent for his family to come out to the new home and Mamma Scott and the 13 little Scotts started on their long 2,000 mile journey.

As conductor Jarvis peered into the car when the train left St. Paul he looked down the aisle and saw the Scott family he said to himself: "Here is a Sunday school picnic."

When he started to take up the tickets the surprise of his life came. Stopping in front of Mamma Scott she passed him one lone first class ticket and no more.

Looking about with a wave of his hand over that portion of the car occupied by the 13 lively little Scotts, Conductor Jarvis asked—"Are these yours? If they are you will have to pay for them, for you can't carry half the inmates of the orphan asylum on one ticket."

Mother Equal to the Occasion.

Here Mrs. Scott proved she was equal to the occasion, and asked: "Don't the rules of this railway provide that all children under five years of age shall ride free, when accompanied by a parent?"

The conductor stood and stared. "Sure! but you don't mean to tell me that all these are yours?"

Here was Mrs. Scott's big moment and to prove her assertion she went down into her suit case and brought forth the family record and called the roll, to which all the tots who were able to talk answered.

The conductor gasped and passed up the aisle, and then smiled at the plight the next conductor would be thrown in upon asking for the fares. Nevertheless the Scotts reached their destination and are happy.

AFTER THE WEDDING

The maid of honor settled herself in the carriage with a great bottle of lace and chiffon and gave a long sigh.

"Wasn't Cora just the loveliest bride you ever saw?" she demanded breathlessly of the tall young man who climbed in after her.

"She was certainly a winner," admitted the young man. "It made me kind of blue, though, ushering for Tom's wedding. I tell you! He's the best ever and I hate to lose him!"

"Lose him?" cried the maid of honor. "I think it is perfectly hateful for a man's friends to act as if he had been snatched from them eternally by a cruel fate, just because he marries a nice girl and settles down. It's—"

"Oh, I don't mean it that way," prodded on matrimony. "I'm not blue because it wasn't my wedding."

"You're rightfully tired?" broke in the maid of honor hurriedly. "I am—standing up at that reception for three hours straight! I can't imagine why Aunt Mattie went home without me!"

"I hope, said the young man, stiffly, 'you don't think I forced myself on you! Cora's mother asked me to take you safely home.'"

"Oh," said the bridesmaid, with equal haughtiness. "I knew of course it was something like that! I knew you never would condemn yourself to an hour's ride with me unless you simply couldn't get out of it, I'm very sorry you should be bored!"

"Now, Genevieve," said the young man, "don't be so foolish! You know perfectly well I'm not bored—"

"I suppose," said the maid of honor, "that was a real trouble—my constitutional foolishness! That was why you discovered it was all a mistake."

"If I cried the usher. "If it wasn't you who broke off our engagement fair and square I'd like to have some one point out to me what really happened."

"I thought you wanted it broken off!" said the maid of honor. "I'm glad it wasn't announced and nobody knew it. I'd hate so to put you to any trouble or annoyance. As it is, nobody is the wiser. I don't suppose Cora's mother realized she was picking out the one girl in all the world you disliked most for you to escort home. Isn't it funny?"

"Perfectly killing," said the young man. "It makes me feel about as much like laughing as a funeral would. It's a shame, too, when the best man obviously was yearning for my chance!"

"Why didn't you give it to him, then?" inquired the maid of honor, smoothly.

"Great guns," breathed the usher. "You don't really care anything about Tad Kirby, do you? He hasn't enough brains to put in a peanut shell, for all his money. He—"

"Your temper certainly hasn't improved any," broke in the maid of honor. "You haven't a particle of right to object to Tad's paying me attentions if I choose to let him."

"I'm quite well aware of that!" said the young man, stormily.

"Well," said the maid of honor, "it doesn't make any difference to you, so it can't worry you much."

"That's all you know about it," said the usher. "Why—if things hadn't gone to smash we—you and I—would be having our wedding just about now!"

"Think of it!" cried the maid of honor, interestingly. "Think what you've escaped and thank fate. Why, all your best friends might be sighing over you, as you just sighed over Tom, and mourning because they had lost you! As it is, you are safe and rescued and, entirely free!"

"I'm glad you can be so philosophical," said the young man. "It shows you really didn't care much if you can consider the affair so lightly."

Not that I expected your heart would be broken, but I thought possibly you might have a little tender feeling for what is past—and for what might have been."

There was a little silence as they rolled along. Then the maid of honor spoke casually.

"Neither Tom nor Cora seemed a bit scared at the wedding," she said. "I never saw people dead as they did. They really seemed happy!"

When the young man spoke his voice was gruff. "Not half," he said "as happy as you and I would have been if things hadn't gone wrong! Oh, Genevieve—I can't stand it any longer. Isn't there a chance for us to go back to the beginning and start all over again?"

The maid of honor was crying into thought, "My dear handkerchief. I'm all evening, I was so miserable. Do you really care?"

"Thank heaven Cora's mother happens to send me home with you," murmured the young man, somewhat inaudibly.

For the first time the maid of honor laughed, a choked, hysterical little laugh. "She—she didn't happen to," she confessed. "I asked her to!"

Clerical Slips.

One of the best-known bishops has a fund of excellent clerical stories at his disposal, although it is seldom that any but his intimate friends are favored with them. Here are one or two:

A certain preacher, discoursing upon Bunyan and his work, caused a titter among his hearers by exclaiming:

"In these days, my brethren, we want more Bunyan's."

Another clergyman, pleading earnestly with his parishioners for the construction of a cemetery for their parish, asked them to consider "the deplorable condition of 30,000 Christian Englishmen living without Christian burial."

Still more curious was this clerical slip.

A gentleman said to the minister: "When do you expect to see Deacon again?"

"Never," said the reverend gentleman, solemnly; "the deacon is dead."

Osler Right; Youth Succeeds Age.

Gray Hair Is First Sign of Age. Harmless Remedy Restores to Natural Color.

Osler isn't the only man who turns down old age. In the business world the "young man" is always the one who picks the plums. It is an age of "new thought," "new talent," etc., and the old man is passed by in the race.

One of the first signs of coming age is the appearance of gray hairs. When you see them, act promptly. Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy will correct this sign, which so often deceives people into thinking that age is really upon them. It is a well-known fact that Sage and Sulphur will darken the hair. Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur combines these old-time remedies with other agents, which remove dandruff and promote the growth of the hair.

The manufacturers of this remedy authorize the druggists to sell it under guarantee that the money will be refunded if it fails to do exactly as represented.

This preparation is offered to the public at fifty cents a bottle, and is recommended and sold by all druggists.

NET DISPUTE IS TO BE CONSIDERED SOON

Complaints, which were filed at the government engineer's office about November, last season, regarding the establishment of pound nets along the west shore of Green Bay between Cedar river and the Menominee river, as being an obstruction to navigation, have been acted upon. As the season was then well advanced, it was decided to wait until the opening of navigation this spring, before taking any action in the matter.

Notices were sent out this week to seventy-five fishermen that a public hearing conducted by Assistant Engineer J. A. D. Tompkins would be held at Menominee, Mich., Thursday, May 11, on board the government tug Manitowoc, at which the question of areas in which the setting of pound nets would be permitted is to be settled.

SEEKS A TEST OF GOVERNOR'S VETO

Lansing, Mich., May 8.—Unless the attorney general takes steps to test the validity of the governor's action in vetoing parts of appropriation bills, Secretary of State Martindale, acting in behalf of the public domain commission, will request him to carry the proposition into the supreme court for a decision.

Martindale points to the fact that the bill appropriating $25,000 for the work of the public domain commission was not itemized, and he questions the authority of the governor to cut the appropriation to $15,000. Both Secretary of State Martindale and Land Commissioner Russell are of the opinion that it will be impossible to carry out the work of the public domain commission and establish an immigration bureau with $15,000.

A Letter from Caleb E. Johnson To the Hundreds Who Took Advantage of Free Soap Week

Now that my soaps—Palmolive and Galvanic—are in your homes, I want to be sure that you get the greatest amount of good out of them.

Galvanic Laundry Soap used any way will give better results than common soap. But if used according to directions will be very much superior.

Here's how a million women successfully use Galvanic. For General Washing—Dampen the clothes in lukewarm water and rub over with soap, particularly the soiled parts. Roll the various pieces up and let them soak from 40 to 60 minutes, or better overnight, in cold or lukewarm (not hot) water.

Or, cut one-half cake of Galvanic into thin shavings and dissolve in one gallon of hot water; then pour into four gallons of warm water and put in as many clothes as water will cover.

By either method the dirt, which is thoroughly loosened, will be readily removed by rubbing between the hands. When the clothes have been thoroughly rinsed and dried you will marvel at their whiteness. No heat. No steam. You have saved your clothes, time, labor and fuel.

Galvanic has dozens of other uses. Try it for washing woollens, carpets, cushioned furniture, cut glass and laces. For general housework, Galvanic is almost indispensable.

Palmolive Toilet Soap makes your skin soft, smooth and healthy. It gives it color, bloom and beauty.

To know more about the uses of Palmolive and Galvanic Soaps send for my two books, "The Easy Way to Beauty" and "The Galvanic Method." I'll send both if you will send me your name.

Our Agencies Dot the Earth

Schlitz was brewed first in a hut over sixty years ago. Now our output exceeds a million barrels a year. Our agencies dot the earth.

More and more people every year are demanding Schlitz—Schlitz in Brown Bottles.

In our brewery we spend more on purity—in time—in skill—in money—than on any other cost in our brewing.

We scald every tub, keg and barrel—every pipe and pump—every time we use it. We wash every bottle four times by machinery. Even the air, in which the beer is cooled, is filtered.

If you knew what we know about beer, you would say, "Schlitz—Schlitz in Brown Bottles."

GODD RULES FOR EVERY CITY.

Health Commissioner Kraft of Milwaukee has issued a set of rules to guide the citizens of that place in their annual spring clean-up of the city.

Three days have been designated for the general clean-up movement, although of course the work will have to be continued throughout the season if the city is to retain a reputation for being the "spotless town."

In the general clean-up movement and also in all subsequent efforts, however, the people of Milwaukee are urged to closely follow the rules laid down by the health commission, which he terms the ten commandments on civic cleanliness and order.

These rules are as follows: "Don't throw anything on the sidewalk or street. Find a rubbish can."

"Don't tear up paper and scatter it. Don't let piles of ashes or rubbish stay in your back yard."

"Don't mix ashes and garbage in the same can. Pigs will not eat old coal or clinkers."

"Don't fill ash or garbage cans too full. Don't chalk sidewalks, fences, buildings or pavements."

"Don't deface park benches, school furniture or any public property. Don't forget that horses love banana skins. A banana skin is not dangerous if it is inside a horse's stomach."

"Don't do anything that will bring disgrace to the city you live in. Don't expect your city to become clean and perfect at once. It will be an ideal city only when everybody does something every day to help make things better."

And to these are added the following axioms, formulated along the same line and intended to accomplish the same purpose: "Take away all ashes and dirt from your back yard and send it to the dumping ground."

"Clean your cellars and stables and sheds. Whitewash your cellar walls, fences and henhouses. Burn all rubbish that will burn. Clean vacant lots and alleys."

"Refrain from throwing paper and other things on the streets. Plant some grass and flowers to make your lawn and house beautiful. Keep your yards clean."

waukee. But whether this work is done by the municipality or by private direction, the same general rules apply. The first essential in every case is to secure the cooperation of the citizens and the authorities, based on a regular system in which everyone will do his part.

Throughout the coming season of warm weather, local citizens should try to recall and observe the rules laid down for the guidance of Milwaukee residents. There is nothing essentially new about them, but the items of advice are listed in convenient form for memorizing.

THE HOUSE FLY.

With the return of the first warm days comes that winged pest, the house fly, and while the dangers through its spread of typhoid, tuberculosis and various children's diseases have been many times sounded, there are still plenty who fail to realize its viciousness or who do not know where to look for the beginning of the trouble.

A few flies always crawl away into some dark corner, under a loose window sash or other hiding place, and are ready to come out during the first warm days and set up housekeeping— which from the human point of view means quite the reverse. Since a single pair of flies may be the direct ancestors of 10,000,000,000,000,000 of their kind in a single season, every one which we can obliterate at this time may greatly lessen the autumn nuisance.

Flies breed in all sorts of garbage. A horse stable may breed millions unless scrupulous care is taken. Refuse of any sort, decaying vegetables, old rags or even damp paper affords them an incubator. Once we smiled at the housewife so fastidious as to "chase a fly a mile" rather than let it escape.

The dealer in food products has need to look well for the removal of all material offering shelter for this pest. Screens, of course, there must be, but they alone will not suffice. The general cleaning up now and removal of all rubbish and garbage, followed by eternal vigilance throughout the breeding season, is the only way to keep the pest under subjection.

GOV. OSBORN'S VETOS.

The Grand Rapids Press quotes Governor Osborn as follows in regard to his various vetoes of appropriation bills: "I have given them hot and cold financial foundations in these vetoes."

The new constitution gives the governor broad power in this regard and great responsibility. I hope these vetoes will put in motion a growing sentiment that appropriations should be put down to the lowest possible point, rather than that a dollar of the state's money should only be required to go as far as twenty cents of an individual's money.

When this understanding of the matter of voting the people's money is reached, I expect the people will feel confidence in the judgment of the legislature and accept as proper whatever amount it deems necessary for the adequate support of the state institutions.

The state is rich and can afford to spend the money necessary, but the people lack confidence that the legislature is not going beyond the limit. When that is overcome then there can be better support given. I have tried to treat them all alike."

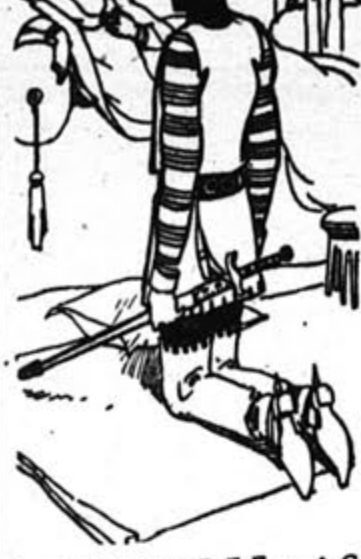

The failure of the fish commission bill means that the governor will appoint some one to succeed Fish and Game Warden Pierce on July 1st and is understood that Major Oates, at present his private secretary, is slated for the position.

Such an appointment would please upper peninsula people and would increase the efficiency of the department, it is believed.

Postmaster-General Hitchcock wants to try one cent postage in the District of Columbia. Better make it easier for the people to write to the officeholders, instead of for the office holders to write to the people.

Socialist Berger has moved to abolish the Senate. He should not give up hopes of getting into it so early in the game.

THE KNIGHT OF THE SILVER STAR A Romance Of Drussenland By Percy Brebner

Copyright, 1907, by R. F. Fenno & Co.

I opened my eyes and lay still as one does when waking from a deep, refreshing sleep. The sunlight fell upon rich hangings, antique and luxurious furniture and rugs of brilliant colors, a very different lodging to my own.

Presently the curtain was drawn back and Jasar entered. "Awake, Sir Verrall, at last! It has been a long sleep. Is the arm painful?"

"A little." "You must keep quiet. It is a bad wound, Sir Verrall, but brave men often carry ugly scars."

"Where am I?" "In the princess's apartments, a safer place than any other for you just now. Guards stand day and night without, and within are gentle hands to tend you."

"The man died last night?" I asked. "He died, but not last night—three nights ago. I told you your sleep had been a long one."

"Three nights?" "Yes, but you must not talk now," Jasar said. "Presently we will talk, and then I will answer all your questions."

It was a small wound to weaken me so. I was ashamed of it when I became convalescent enough to notice it. "It was much worse than it is now," my nurse told me when she bandaged it one day.

"I am glad, for it looks nothing, and I have been very ill." "Very ill," she said. "And you have nursed me all the time?"

"Yes. Her highness has left you to my care." "Does she know how ill I have been?"

"I have answered her questions each day, and sometimes she has been to look at you." I asked no more. I fancied that my nurse did not wish to be questioned.

Once convalescent, I began to mend rapidly. O'Ryan was sent for to look after me, but the princess did not come, and Jasar only seldom. When the priest did come he would tell me little of what was going on. Nor was O'Ryan much more communicative.

"Faith, they've been crowding a lot of history into a few days," he said. "But see here, Sir Verrall, I am under oath to answer no questions. I should not have been allowed to come at all without giving the oath. There have been occasions when I haven't kept this kind of bargain, but I'm going to keep this one."

"Who made you take an oath?" "Her highness."

"The princess?" I said in astonishment. "Am I to believe that?" "Well, I don't rightly know whose prisoner you are or why you're being kept here, but her highness sent for me and gave me his instructions. She was mighty pleasant, too, Verrall—said nice things about me and let slip a good many promises for the future. She may forget them, of course, but I'm not going to give her a chance of withdrawing them anyway. I'm going to act square with her."

I laughed and then asked, after a pause: "Did she say anything of me?" "You were mentioned as my master, that was all. No, you were not a prominent feature of our conversation."

"And how long is this to last?" I asked, somewhat angrily. "A long illness makes a man irritable."

"You'll oblige me by asking no questions. I'm on oath to a lady not to answer them."

Jasar was my only hope, and he kept out of my way. However, he came one morning and was not in a hurry. He expressed himself pleased at my appearance and said he had come to have a long talk with me.

"And will, I hope, answer my questions." "Some of them, doubtless, but all—ah, Sir Verrall, that might not be wise. Stay; we will have a quiet talk."

He spoke to O'Ryan and the nurse, who left us at once. "Who is my nurse?" I asked. "One of the ladies attending upon the princess. You are growing well again, so it is fair to say that her highness made a good choice. It was suggested that Lady Aldrida should be sent to nurse you, but there were circumstances which might have made the lady an awkward nurse. No, I cannot tell you what the circumstances were."

"Why am I a prisoner here? Has Vasan headed a revolution and been successful?" "Had he done so you would have been no longer even a prisoner. But come; I will save your questioning and tell you what I can. You perhaps remember what the man who attacked you said when he was dying?"

"That he should be free if he killed me." "I judged that was what he meant," said Jasar. "I tried to get him to tell more, but he died too quickly. He must have been deceived, for freedom had already been granted to all the prisoners without conditions. Therefore, Sir Verrall, an enemy has endeavored to take your life by the hand of this prisoner."

"And the enemy?" I asked. "The man died before he could speak," Jasar answered. "But how did he pass the guards at the head of the staircase?"

"As soon as your safety had been looked after and you had been brought here her highness sent for the men. The truth will perhaps never be known. There was treachery in our midst," Jasar continued. "The whole palace was awake at once, and even in the town there was little sleep that night. Search was made for the murderers in vain. At the council next day her highness did her utmost to probe the matter to the root, and let it be understood that she believed it treachery against herself; that the assassin's dagger was intended for her, and a shout of loyalty was the answer. It rang in the rafters of the council hall and found an echo in every street in the city. Then, Sir Verrall—and mark you this well—her highness said that it was you who had saved the life of the sovereign, coming near to your own death in the act. There was no shout of praise, Sir Verrall. Almost a dead silence followed.

"Her highness tried to throw her protection over me and failed," I said quietly. "She failed, yes, even worse than failed, for the priests attacked you fiercely for breaking their laws. They held that your advice had been proved worthless, since one of these prisoners had attempted to kill the princess, and many saw reason in their argument."

"Did they say that they had been mistaken in proclaiming me the expected knight?" "The priests are wiser than that, Sir Verrall," he answered. "They have studied again. You were the knight, but you have broken the laws of Drussenland, and you have angered the God who sent you, therefore you have failed in your mission."

"Will they dispatch me then and wait for another knight?" I asked. "There are many ways. You might go to the mountains unexpectedly, as from the mountains you came unexpectedly. But there is a quicker way—death in the market place. They say the Lady Aldrida fell in a swoon when her woman told her what the priests had decreed."

"Death will end that folly at least," I answered. "And, Sir Verrall, the people's voice is too strong, their will too unanimous to resist? Well, I said my life was hers when she should ask it. The time has come quickly."

"My son, illness has weakened you. Have you no desire left to cut a path through these enemies of yours and of hers?" "Her will is my law," I replied. "What is her will?"

"That she must tell you. You ask why you are a prisoner here. Without these walls dangers in crowds stand awaiting you. Only now are you regaining strength; only now are you again becoming the knight who withstood Count Vasca in the lists and fought so valiantly yonder before Yadasara. You have been a child, muttering in your sleep, too weak to lift an arm to defend yourself. So for your own safety you have been a prisoner."

"Muttering in my sleep? What did I speak of?" "Of many things strange to me, of some I cannot tell you. But the princess chose your nurse. Your words are known only to her, to the princess and to myself."

"Tell me one thing," I said as he rose to go. "Spoke I of the princess in my delirium?" "Yes. Her name was sometimes on your lips."

"Did the princess hear me?" "I do not know." "At least she was told?" "Perhaps."

"Is that why the Lady Aldrida was not sent for to nurse me?" "It was thought that she would not be so good a nurse as the one you had, Sir Verrall—not so patient and gentle. I know no more than that."

CHAPTER XIII.

THE princess's face told me nothing that night. She received me very graciously, would not let me kneel to her. But there was something in her manner which made me feel that the hopes which had grown up in my heart so quickly that day were luxuriant weeds, fit only to be cut down. She would not let me talk much about what had happened in the city.

"We are in perilous times," she said. "But you must be my prisoner still. You are not yet able to brave dangers. Here you are safe. Get strong again quickly, Sir Verrall, for I have need of you."

And so she dismissed me. Princess Daria had a garden. The only entrance to it was from her suite of apartments. High walls surrounded it, and there was no fear of prying eyes. Here I was privileged to walk or lie at full length in the shade of some tree, filling my lungs with new health at every breath. Here Jasar and I talked, and the princess joined us, staying only a little while at first, but afterward longer. She talked of plans for the future. My friends were so few that it was impossible for me to stand unless something could be devised against my enemies. Truth to tell, my friends and enemies troubled me little just then. I was too happy to fear the future, for the princess became each day less a princess and more a woman. I lived in the present. I told them something of my country, of London, of railroads and telegraphs and of many things which in Drussenland had never been heard of.

"You tell of strange things, Sir Verrall," Jasar said. "But because the people in Drussenland are superstitious and legend loving you must not think that we are all ready to believe tales so far beyond all possibility."

"I speak the truth. There are even more marvelous things that I have not told you of."

"Her highness loves not superstition and has no fear of disasters which the priests prophesy. We know that no miracle brought you into our land and that to account for your coming you used a legend to save yourself. Why seek to deceive us who are your friends?"

"Yes, friends," said the princess softly. "I was inclined to be angry, but a moment's reflection told me how impossible my tales must seem to them."

"Indeed, there is no deceit," I answered. "Things are as I have told you in my country. Besides, my coming was somewhat of a miracle, and it was not I who claimed to be the expected knight, remember. It was O'Ryan who suggested it, and the priests believed it."

Then I told them how I came into Drussenland, beginning with the tale that poor Mustapha told that night. "Tell me the history of Drussenland," I said.

Jasar told it to me, hurrying through the legendary part, dilating fully on that which was known to be true. The Drussenlanders were the descendants of a great army gathered from all the nations of the world—so Jasar said—which was led into a country beyond the hills to fight for the true religion. Year after year this army, constantly recruited, fought with varying success, and at last came peace. Some returned home again; some remained in the land of their warfare, took wives of the daughters of the land, and wandered forth to find a city to dwell in. So they had come to Drussenland, and, as the years passed, became a great people. This was the legendary part which Jasar said might have some truth in it.

A Fool and His Money

One of the neatest "salting" operations that ever occurred in the southwest was the one engineered by Ed Noyes and "Doc" Rigby; they put something like 50 charges of gold into the Lucky Strike with a shotgun and worked the property off on Will Carver for $10,000. Aside from the metal Noyes and Rigby blew into the mine, there was about as much gold in it as in an ordinary sandbank.

Carver had just arrived in Phoenix. He was a well-dressed mild-mannered young fellow and so confidential about himself that he hadn't been in town two days before it was known that he had come to the territory with ten thousand and a determination to make or break.

Noyes and Rigby figured that a man who would let out that much of his family history before he had been forty-eight hours in a strange town would make good picking. So they salted the Lucky Strike, took every dollar the young easterner had, and then laughed about it.

As the whole town knew that Carver had come west to demonstrate his sharpness and his ability to amass wealth, all for the purpose of winning the girl of his choice, so the public knew that he had lost all at the very start off. People sympathized with him on account of the girl, but felt certain that was a good way from filling his prospective father-in-law's specifications.

At any rate, he secured sufficient funds—it afterwards developed that the girl had sent him her pin money—and started in to work the strike.

The strike was just over the ridge from Baldwin's Prize, and the prize was a true fissure, free-gold proposition that paid regular dividends of 100 per cent.

When Noyes and Rigby had located the strike, they felt positive that it was on Baldwin's vein; but a 50-foot shaft and a hundred feet level, all in country rock, convinced them that the "Prize" dyke was in other ground.

Carver laid in a supply of powder, arils, picks, shovels and wheelbarrows, bought himself a working suit and went up to the strike and pitched his camp. Week after week and month after month he and a colored man, whom he had hired, worked away with tremendous industry.

At last, Phoenix was startled by a report that old Jack had brought into town a piece of ore that assayed $300 to the ton. People scoffed at the news, and even after they had handled the sample and looked at the assayer's certificate, they were inclined to think that Jack had got the ore out of some other mine than the strike.

As for Noyes and Rigby, they showed signs of panic, and when they got a rig and drove out into the hills and saw Carver hauling up bucket after bucket of as fine rock as ever came out of ground they were a sad looking pair.

"I'm not as young as you gentlemen thought," Carver explained pleasantly. "You see, I took a course in mineralogy at college, and when I bought this mine I knew it was simply a matter of working until I struck Baldwin's dyke. That's what I've done. But I'm no hog, and I realize that I got this mine cheap. Any time you two gentlemen wish to hand me $30,000 for a half interest, you're welcome to do so."

Carver still refused to let anyone go down in the mine except himself and old Jack, but Noyes and Rigby remained at the strike for two weeks and presided at the windlass. In that time, as calculated, they had drawn up more than $40,000 worth of rock and thought it safe to pass over the $30,000 and take a deed to a half interest.

Carver, old Jack and Noyes and Rigby went into town and there the deal was consummated.

"Jacob served seven years for Rachel," Carver remarked, as they all stood in the bank, "and I've served seven months at hard labor to convince a certain old gentleman here east that I've got brains. You gentlemen can look after the mine while I go back and claim my reward."

He left town that afternoon and old Jack likewise disappeared and left no trace. Next morning Noyes received a telegram which read as follows:

"When I told you I had struck the prize dyke, I meant it. Jack and I tunneled through into Baldwin's property and after you settle with Baldwin for the ore on the Lucky Strike dump, you're welcome to what's left."

Those few words told the whole story. Carver had not been mining ore on his claim at all, but on the Prize property, which he had reaped with a level.

Baldwin took the $40,000 worth of ore on the strike dump and Noyes and Rigby charged Experience Account with $30,000, which left a balance of $10,000 to go into Profit and Loss. As soon as this bit of book-keeping was completed, the two went away, in order to give the Phoenix people a chance to forget the episode. But it was never forgotten, and to this day, if you jog an old settler's memory on the subject of salting operations, ten to one he will tell you how Carver came to that section as I demonstrated his ability to take care of the girl whom he ultimately married.—William Wallace Cook.

UNUSUAL CASE OF WIFE DESERTION

Charles Olson, charged with the desertion of his wife and child, was found guilty in about a half hour by a circuit court jury at Menominee. Olson told an unusual story. He said his wife was planning to bring suit against a neighbor for slander and he did not wish to be brought into the case because of the publicity it would give family matters. For that reason he came to Escanaba. Olson asserted he wrote to his wife from this city and asked her to join him and make her home here. He said she refused. Later he was arrested for desertion.

In his charge to the jury Judge Flannigan said if the jury believed Mrs. Olson's good name had been in jeopardy when she intended to bring suit for slander it was Olson's duty to stay with her and defend her, but that if it was believed Olson had good reason to go to Escanaba, and offered to take his wife to live with him there, then he was not guilty.

to the demands of the public in so far as it is wise and for the best interests of the country. In concluding, General Diaz appealed to the patriotism of the people, calling upon them to act together for the peace and progress of the nation, and eulogized the army.

At a cabinet meeting Sunday the president announced his decision. For two hours and a half the ministers discussed the terms of the manifesto and at the conclusion of the meeting there remained nothing to do but to secure its official promulgation. Only in a general way does the manifesto refer to the revolution.

News Pleases Washington. Washington, May 8.—President Taft and official Washington quickly learned of the sudden shift in the Mexican situation—the announcement of President Diaz that he would resign, in the interests of peace, and the previous order of Madero for the trekking southward of the insurrecto forces from the border and on to the capital.

The news of the withdrawal of the insurrectionary forces from a position so close to the American towns was to constitute a constant source of friction and a menace to the good feeling between the two peoples was view here with relief, and the later announcement from Mexico of the president's self-effacement to effect peace in his Washington administration's hope for peace and Mexican Ambassador Zamacona's recent prediction that peace would soon be restored.

LAST THREE BODIES TAKEN FROM MINE

A rescue party, wearing oxygen helmets and led by J. M. Webb, an expert from the government mine rescue station at Urbana, Ill., succeeded in entering the remote reaches of the Hartford mine at Negaunee Saturday and recovered the last three bodies of the seven men who met death in that iron ore property. The bodies are those of Richard Yelland, father; William, his son, and August Frederickson.

The fire was brought under control at six o'clock Saturday evening, and it is expected it will soon be quenched entirely. Not much timber was used in the mine and the property loss will be comparatively small.

The workings of the Cambria and Lillie mines, as well as those of the Hartford, are permeated with gas, all three properties being connected. Operations will not be resumed in any of them for some days yet.

RAILWAY SHOPMEN WANT MORE WAGES

According to a statement appearing in the St. Paul Dispatch, shopmen of the railroads operating in the north-west are preparing new wage and working demands, which, it is said, will be presented to the general managers July 1. Thirty days' notice is required from the men in calling for a conference and it is expected that they will give the notice on June 1. Machinists, boiler-makers and carmen are the principal employees seeking advances in pay. They have been granted increases during the past two or three years, but it is said they are seeking further advances in order to be more on a parity with the other employees in the operating department. It is said the railroads will resist stubbornly the demands of the men.

PECULIAR WAY OF COACHING

Japanese Baseball Players Make Little Noise in Getting Runners Around Bases.

Americans have been not a little amused by the Japanese baseball players who are in this country, not because they do not play good baseball, but over one of their peculiar habits. They do not coach the way Americans do. They make signals silently and reports say that while they may be deficient in some of the other features of the game, they are certainly marvelous base runners. It may be due to this silent signaling, but the average American crowd attending baseball games would hardly stand for this sort of thing in our national interpretation of the game. What the average crowd wants is loud coaching accompanied by all possible antics. This sort of thing has a tendency to liven up the crowd itself and, after all, the real fun of going to a baseball contest is to get in the game a little one's self. The Japanese method may help along a base runner, but it certainly does not help along the crowd to any great extent. The average American is great for noise anyway and when he gets out and pays good money for the privilege of yelling he wants something to start him. The Japanese method would not make much of a hit in the United States.

PACKEY M'FARLAND IS FAST

So Says "Young Griffe," Who Saw Chicago Boy Trim Owen Moran of England in New York.

A gray-haired, sturdy-looking fellow was introduced to the crowd at a local boxing club the other night as "the greatest lightweight boxer ever known." Before his name was announced veteran ring followers recognized Albert Griffe, better known as Young Griffe, of Australia, who has traveled a rocky road since his retirement from the ring a dozen years ago. Griffe is taking some care of his health nowadays and hasn't tasted intoxicants for more than a year.

Griffe saw Packey McFarland trim Owen Moran and was enthusiastic over the wonderful little Chicago fighter.

"McFarland is about the fastest man I've ever seen," exclaimed the Australian after the bout. "He's got a great head and knows more about real boxing than any of the lightweights of the present day. The strongest point I noticed was his speedy footwork. He was all over the ring, in and out, and he would have puzzled any man. I am sure that Packey would have held his own with the lightweights I used to box. That is to say, he would have outpointed a lot of them and would have stilled off the others.

"I remember Kid Lavigne when he was champion. I boxed a twenty-five round draw with him once and had no trouble in blocking his attack. But Lavigne wasn't as fast as McFarland in getting around the ring." He rushed all the time and tried to land a knock-out blow, paying very little attention to the defensive part of the game. He never could be called a boxer, and in the case of Frank Erne, who won the title from him, I believe Lavigne's defeat was due to this reason. Erne was a first-class boxer, but he wasn't a hard hitter, not so hard as McFarland, and Packey cannot be called a slugger."

ADVICE TO EXCITABLE FANS

Series of "Don'ts" That May Be Applied to Rooters of All Classes in Any City.

With the baseball pennant race finally cut loose the fans in every city and town that is represented by teams of diamond experts are ready for another strenuous campaign. The baseball solons have framed many rules governing the national pastime, but they have never seen fit to give words of advice to the rooters who keep the sport alive with the money passed into the box office windows. Fandom includes all classes of citizens and in order to keep them in check the following warnings have been framed by a person who knows something about the unbridled enthusiasm of those who follow the fortunes of their favorite teams:

- Don't roast players for making errors.
- Don't about words of advice to the players.
- Don't pan the manager when his team loses.
- Don't try to climb over the fence with new clothes on.
- Don't go home angry in the hour of defeat. Laugh and be merry.
- Don't eat more than six bags of peanuts unless your team is losing.
- Don't elbow your neighbor and step on his corns unless he's a cripple.
- Don't try to explain the game to a woman while other men are listening.
- Don't indulge in open abuse of visiting players so that they can get at you.
- Don't call the umpire a robber because you hear others applying this name.
- Don't pan the team when the manager's errors of judgment are to blame.
- Don't pocket foul balls while the stunts are looking squarely in your direction.
- Don't try to score a game unless you know the difference between a run and an error.
- Don't put the lighted end of a cigar into your mouth when your favorite knocks out a four bagger.
- Don't throw cushions or pop bottles at the umpire or the visiting players unless you are hidden from view.
- Don't try to identify the players for the benefit of the unsophisticated unless you are absolutely sure of your ground.
- Don't root for the visiting team unless you are isolated in the grandstand and you can't speak above a whisper.
- Don't show how little you know about inside ball by telling your neighbor why such and such a play didn't go through.
- Don't cheer and throw your hat in the air when a home player knocks the ball over the fence a foot outside the foul line.

Don't throw newspapers or other missiles at persons who come in late and can't find seats unless they are small and timid.
Don't roast the umpire when he calls a strike on a ball that passes over the middle of the plate and retires your hero to the bench.

This Newspaper Aims to Render Real Service to YOU!
IF, BY some persistency in giving advice, this newspaper can convince every merchant of the wisdom of telling YOU all of his store-news that is important--of using enough space in which to do it, and of telling as much of his store-news in every issue as you would be interested in knowing--and--
If, at the risk of over-iteration, this newspaper should convince you that this same store-news is of real, live, palpitating importance to YOU, as fully worthy of your attention as politics, or base ball, Crowned Heads, or elopements, murders, riots, fashions or functions of the rich--and--
If it should follow that the merchants should prosper in exact ratio to their energy in advertising and that YOU should thrive in proportion to your intelligence in SPENDING YOUR INCOME--then this newspaper will feel that it has accomplished so real a public service that this city will be a still better place in which to live and to do business!
