Initiative and Referendum Plan Brings Fight

(By Associated Press.) Spring Lake, N. J., Sept. 13.—Governor Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey and Governor Emmett Oneal of Alabama measured swords over the initiative referendum before the conference of governors here.

Governor Wilson, as a champion of the measure, replied to Governor Oneal, who previously had denounced it as "an insidious popular vagary," and the Southern executive was on his feet in an instant with an impassioned defense of his position.

Quits The Room For A Time. Governor Oneal spoke vehemently for ten minutes, bowed and, without another word, walked through a casement window to the plaza fronting the ocean.

Mr. Oneal did not reenter the convention hall for fifteen minutes and took no further part in the discussion. When the conference ended, however, Governor Wilson grasped Governor Oneal by the hand and remarked that he did not wish to be misunderstood.

Southerner Speaks Vigorously. There was no mincing of words in the Alabama man's denunciation of the initiative, referendum and recall.

It was pleasing to know, Governor Oneal added, that this "insidious popular vagary" will meet with the almost unanimous opposition of the American bar.

LEAGUE PRESIDENT RECEIVES PROTESTS

President Russell of the Marquette-Delta league has formally received the protest of Ishpeming on the game of last Saturday in this city, which was presented by Acting Manager Arson Perrault of that team on the a third base decision.

The protest, which was signed by the umpires, is to the effect that the arbiters of the game had agreed upon a certain plan of deciding third base plays, contrary to the National league rules, without the consent of knowledge of the captains of either team.

The Ishpeming players claimed that Flynn made a clean pick-out, although the umpires decided against him. It would have been the last man out in that inning. After the dispute, Escanaba scored ten runs.

The Panama Hat.

A popular comedian at a Lambe club gambol in New York told a panama hat story.

"A young clerk out my way," he said, "gave his girl a present of a panama last year. Then the day before the Fourth he got a couple of complimentary for a picnic, clambake and corn roast down the river, and he wired the girl:

"Meet me at pier 13 tomorrow morning at 7. Picnic. Bring panama." "The next morning as he stood on pier 13 dreaming dreams of love, imagining a long, sweet day of billing and cooing, he saw his girl advancing with her father and mother. He was terribly annoyed, and on the boat, as soon as he could get her alone, he blazed:

"What did you want to bring the old folks for?" "Why, Will, you told me to," she said, and she showed him the telegram, which the operator had made to read: "Bring pa and ma."

Whistler Before Whistler.

Mortimer Menpes told the following story of Whistler, who was to deliver an address one day to the Society of British Artists: "The master at length entered, faultlessly dressed, walking with a swinging, jaunty step, evidently quite delighted with himself and the world in general. He passed down the gallery, ignoring the assembled members, and walked up to his own picture. And there he stayed for quite fifteen minutes, regarding it with a satisfied expression, stepping now backward, now forward, canting his head and dusting the surface of the glass with a silk pocket handkerchief. We watched him open mouthed. Suddenly he turned round, beamed upon us and uttered but two words—'Bravo, Jimmy?'—then took my arm and hurried me out of the gallery, talking volubly the while."

King's Queer Present For a Queen.

In all probability the king of Dahomey's present of pipes and loin cloths never reached Buckingham palace. On one occasion, however, Queen Victoria had graciously to accept a gift of quite as embarrassing a nature. This was in 1856, when the king of Siam sent a mission to England. On being presented to the queen, who received them seated on her throne and wearing her crown, the envoys crawled from the doors to her majesty's feet on their hands and knees and then each drew a present from the folds of his robes. The first object placed in the queen's hands was a silver spittoon.—London Chronicle

LUSITANIA'S SAILING RECORD

In Port at New York Only 32 Hours-10 Minutes.

RUSH TO SAVE SCHEDULE.

Liner Was Hurried Back Without Unloading Some of Her Cargo—Dook Strike in England Had Delayed Her Sailing.

On her last trip out from New York the liner Lusitania broke the famous record of her sister ship, the Mauretania, which in the rush last December to land her Christmas mails in England in time was unloaded, loaded and coaled and steamed away from the New York port within thirty-eight hours of her arrival. The work of getting the Lusitania into port and away again was accomplished in thirty-two hours and ten minutes.

The reason for all this haste is that the Lusitania had been thrown off her schedule by labor troubles on the other side, and it was necessary for her to catch up with her sailing dates to bring home the host of Americans who had booked their return trip on her.

The Lusitania brought 1,619 passengers, and it took several hours before the baggage of the last of these had been removed to the pier and her steerage passengers transported to Ellis island. As soon as this was done the 307 stewards fell to work putting things shipshape. They had to clean 900 rooms and scrub several miles of alleyways and many feet of stairs. In the engine room the force began at once to tune up engines and get ready for the run to Liverpool.

As soon as possible the big Lusitania was breasted off from her pier and the coal barges sent alongside. They worked four on each side.

Filling the larder was even more of a task than coaling the Lusitania. The liner arrived here with supplies low, for she had carried more than the ordinary complement of passengers. It was nearly sailing time when the report was brought that the last of the provisions were in the cold storage rooms. Some of the big items on the steward's list were 16,000 pounds of beef, 1,000 pounds of lamb, 4,000 pounds of mutton, 4,000 pounds of fish, 2,000 pounds of corned beef, 21,000 eggs and four tons of vegetables.

Almost as soon as each arriving passenger left his or her stateroom stewards were gathering up the linen, and even while the passengers' baggage was coming ashore the bales of soiled linen were being tossed to the lower pier. An hour after the liner had made fast the wash started on the way to the laundry. Forty thousand pieces went and were washed and back on board the Lusitania within twenty-five hours.

The Lusitania brought 843 tons of cargo, and she took out almost the same amount. Beyond the removal of some express packages there was no attempt to load or unload. It was said that there was only a small amount of perishable stuff between decks. Part of this cargo, it is said, are lemons. They are now on their fourth trip across the Atlantic, and their value as a commercial product is a question which will be best determined when they are unloaded. This consignment of lemons, according to the story told on board, first crossed the Atlantic from an Italian port to New York. When they were landed it was found there was a better market for lemons in England. So they made their second voyage, this time to Liverpool in the Lusitania. When the vessel got there labor agitation had destroyed the market. The lemons remained on board.

On her record trip to carry the Christmas mails the Mauretania was in port thirty-seven hours and twenty-one minutes. She arrived at her pier at 4:41 a. m. Friday, Dec. 16. She sailed at 6:02 p. m. on Saturday, Dec. 17.

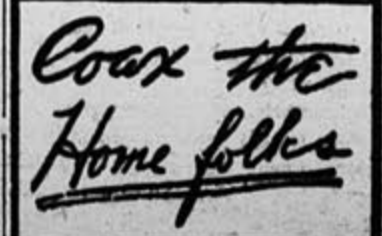

DRAWN BY 96 OXEN.

Farmer Drives Them to Cart Twenty Miles to Grand Fair.

John Cavanagh, a farmer, who lives in Portland, Conn., decided to take his family to the grand fair at Haddam Neck. There is no railroad running between the two towns.

Mr. Cavanagh owns ten yoke of oxen himself and by borrowing from his neighbors managed to collect forty-eight yoke, or ninety-six oxen altogether. With these attached to a gayly decorated cart he made the trip, covering the distance of about twenty miles in five hours. The services of twelve drivers were needed to guide the animals on the road.

The line of cattle stretched for more than a quarter of a mile along the road, and it took them five minutes to pass a given point. On his arrival at the fair grounds Cavanagh found that he and his cattle attracted more attention than any other exhibit on the grounds.

Major League Notes

Samuel Arnold, a baseball fan who was ejected from Fogel field Aug. 28 during a game between the Phillies and Chicago because his "rooting" annoyed the Cubs, entered suit against the Philadelphia ball club yesterday for $5,000 damages. The action charges that the plaintiff's ejection was illegal. Harry Sallee, the Cardinal's star southpaw pitcher, left last night for his home in Higginsport, O., to remain there for the remainder of the season. Sallee is serving an indefinite suspension without pay. "Chick" Fraser and "Bugs" Raymond, two former major leaguers, will oppose each other on the slab at Comiskey park in Chicago this afternoon as hurlers for the West End and Gunther baseball teams in the main feature of the programme arranged by the Hotel Greeters' association. St. Louis fans are pretty much up in the air. Breenahan intimates that he has another place to play next year and may not return. Mrs. Britton, owner of the club, is going to St. Louis to see him and secure a signed contract if she can. Twenty-two twirlers, eight of them lefthanded, will be tried out by the Cardinals in the spring. It is said that the Pittsburg Pirates form the real "white ribbon" brigade in the big show this season. Last year some of the Pirates were in the habit of "cutting loose" now and then, but this season, with a pennant in sight, the boys have lived close to the pump. Tris Speaker says that the no-hit game pitched by Ed. Walsh, of the White Sox, against the Red Sox was the greatest exhibition that he ever faced. Larry Cheney, the Louisville pitcher, has joined the Chicago Cubs, and will be given a chance to show his puzzers against the eastern teams.

With The Fighters

The Carl Morris-Jim Flynn contest, which will be held at Madison Square garden Friday night, is attracting much attention among the fight fans. The Oklahoma railroad engineer is training at Jimmy De Forest's camp in Allenhurst, N. J., and several hundred sporting men from New York are present daily to see him go through his paces. Morris was seen in action yesterday, and everybody present agreed that he is just about all that has been said of him and may be some more. High McIntosh, Australian promoter, cabled yesterday from Sydney that he has matched Jack Lester, protege of Tommy Burns, to meet Jim Flynn, the Pueblo fireman, on the latter's arrival in Australia. Tommy Dixon of Kansas City hammered and upper cut Monte Attell, former bantam weight champion, all over the ring for ten rounds Monday night at the New Orleans Athletic club, and received only a draw. Jeers and hisses greeted the decision of Referee Harry Stout. George MacDonald, manager of Matt Wells, the English lightweight champion announced Monday night that he had made a match with Abe Attell, the feather weight champion. The boys will fight at the Madison Square garden on September 20, weighing in at 135 pounds at 5 o'clock that afternoon. Jack Herrick, Chicago middle weight, outpointed Steve McKinley at Indianapolis last night in a ten-round bout. Herrick's showing earns him a match with Jack Dillon, whom he will meet on September 24. Death From Imagination. How faith may kill as well as cure is shown by one of the cases mentioned by Dr. Charles Reinhardt in "Faith, Medicine and the Mind." A convicted murderer had been handed over to the physiologists for the purpose of an experiment. He was told that his hour had come and that it had been decided that he should be bled to death. His eyes were bandaged, and he was pinioned, opportunity first having been given him to see the formidable array of surgical instruments, the vessels to catch the blood and the other terror inspiring paraphernalia of the vivisector's laboratory. A blunt instrument was now drawn sharply across his throat and a stream of warm water was made to trickle from his neck into a vessel below the operating table upon which he lay. After awhile the sounds, which had previously been continuous and near at hand, were gradually reduced until the patient, doubtless supposing that he was bleeding to death, gradually lost consciousness, fainted and expired. The SKY PIRATE

by GARRETT P. SERVISS.

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Company.

PROLOGUE.

The sea pirate has long been a fascinating figure of romance, at the march of progress has driven him into well deserved retirement, and he has now been replaced, in fiction at least, by the sky pirate, who is even more mysterious, more daring and more romantic than his predecessor.

CHAPTER VII.

THE BILLIONAIRE'S PREDICAMENT.

MEANWHILE what was happening to William Grayman? The Chameleon, as I have said, speeded westward upon leaving Tribes Hill, and Payton took good care to rise so high and to disguise the aero so well with appropriate color that probably not an eye caught sight of her after she quitted the scene of the encounter with the police.

CHAPTER VIII.

SOME EXTRAORDINARY LETTERS.

THE reader must not forget that Miss Grayman had no knowledge whatever of the real character of this man. She saw that he was a gentleman by birth and training, she enjoyed the charms of his manners and conversation, and, despite the peculiarity of her situation and the shadowy doubts that had fitted into her mind, she felt no distrust of him personally.

CHAPTER IX.

THE GIRL SAGERLY ACCEPTED THE PROPOSAL.

devoted to the comfort and enjoyment of his guests. They dined, fished, hunted, gathered rare flowers and read or chatted on the veranda.

CHAPTER X.

HE CALLED UPON HIS DAUGHTER.

He certainly did make things pleasant. Never had he been so entertaining, so full of interesting stories, so

Payton had read the billionaire's thoughts as if they had been printed. He knew that at present Mr. Grayman had no intention of meeting him on the terms he had prescribed, but would come more to entrap him. Yet unless he released him now he could never hope for the money.

He rose and left Grayman alone in the cabin, but within a few minutes returned, saying, "Come out, Mr. Grayman, and convince yourself that you are homeward bound."

Rather unwillingly the billionaire ventured upon the deck. They were still very high, but were flying southward at great speed.

"Those are the Catskills away over yonder," said Payton, pointing. "I could land you in New York in a little over an hour, but I prefer to visit the metropolis after nightfall. It is now only 1 o'clock. We'll take lunch and then circle about a bit and see the country. If you like we can run out to Niagara and see how the great cataract looks to a bird."

"But my daughter!" cried the billionaire eagerly. "Since you will have the money anyway and the speed of your craft is so great take me to her."

"She is in no danger. She doesn't even know she is a prisoner," replied the sky pirate lightly. "Why alarm her now?"

Late that evening passersby in Fifth avenue were startled by seeing a huge aero glide silently over their heads. Shortly afterward the Chameleon settled gently upon the grass in a park glade, and Payton, without any sign of nervousness or hurry, ceremoniously dismissed his guest in the very face of a policeman.

"Goodby and an revoir," said Payton, wringing Mr. Grayman's unwilling hand. "You'll hear from me in a few days. Don't forget your promise of the need that your daughter has of the aid which you alone can give her."

Without hesitating Mr. Grayman turned on his heel and walked rapidly away. Payton remained on the ground regarding his retreating form with a disdainful smile. The policeman was rapidly approaching, but Payton made no move.

"Here, you!" said the officer, seizing Payton by the arm. "I arrest you. What are you doing with an aero in the park?"

"Looking for squirrels," said Payton. "Looking for—see here, young fellow, come with me."

"Aren't you going to arrest the aero?" asked Payton.

The question upset the policeman for a moment. Then, thinking of no better answer, he raised his club. In the fraction of a second he was sprawling on the grass and Payton had leaped aboard the aero. As the policeman jumped to his feet and blew his whistle the Chameleon whirled up into the darkness and disappeared.

The reader will perhaps remember that when Payton carried off Miss Grayman he re-entered her room on the pretense of extinguishing the light. What he really did was to rumble in her writing desk and take possession of a bundle of letters, which he thrust into his pocket. Among the letters was one written to Helen by her father during one of his infrequent absences. How he employed this will appear presently.

Payton had no sooner performed his characteristic exploit of landing Mr. Grayman in the heart of New York with the Chameleon than he set out with full speed for his lodge in the wilderness.

He left Miss Grayman weeping in her room at the lodge over her retort to Mrs. Williams' conduct, emphasized by her own undefined suspicions. Susan was greatly puzzled but very sympathetic.

"Oh, Miss Helen," she said, "please don't cry. They cannot be long delayed; they are sure to come."

"I wish I could get away from here," Miss Grayman responded, wiping her eyes. "I don't know what ails me, but—sometimes I feel that they will never come. Why does Mr. Williams treat me so? Why wouldn't he let us go in the canoe? I have such a creepy feeling about that place in the woods."

"Oh, it's your fancy, Miss Helen. I didn't see anything very strange there. Come, let's go out and sit on the veranda. Perhaps we shall see them returning at any moment."

But Susan was not a true prophet. They descended and went out on the veranda.

"I thank you most sincerely, Commodore Brown. My father explains the whole affair, and it was very, very good of you to return so quickly in your disabled aero in order to relieve my anxiety. It is a dreadful disappointment, but—but I am sure the trip has not been without its pleasures for me even if its principal object has been missed."

Payton could hardly contain his delight over the success of his bold ruse. Then he set out to complete his mastery of the situation by entertaining Miss Grayman, cultivating her interest and confidence in himself and keeping her thoughts from dwelling upon her disappointment. Mrs. Williams seized the first opportunity to tell him about the adventure in the woods, and less than an hour after his return Miss Grayman, in gay spirits, accompanied by Susan, embarked with him in the canoe for a visit to the spot where her curiosity and doubts had been excited.

"Mrs. Williams has told me about your fright," he said, "and about her own fright also. The bears are dangerous, and I have ordered Indian John to be on the spot well armed, so if you are still curious about the grave of the big bear we'll go and see it and try to satisfy your curiosity."

Accordingly he took them to the place and showed the spot where the digging had been. It was now carefully covered up with the forest carpet of leaves. This, he explained, had been done in order that wild animals might not dig up the carcass. Then he gave a spirited description of the extraordinary size and fierceness of the imaginary bear that had been killed.

"Since we shall be forced to spend a week or two days here," he said, "I wish you to become acquainted with all the pleasures that the woods afford. I cannot begin to repair the aero for at least three days yet, because, as your father may have mentioned, I had to leave all my men but the engineer at Petytown, and they must reach us by the forest trails. Being good woodmen and hunters, they can make the distance in about forty hours of steady tramping, not counting the time required for rest and sleep. As soon as they arrive I shall be very busy directing and aiding them, for I have a shop here specially fitted up to repair my aero. In the meanwhile I can devote all my time to trying to make things pleasant for you."

He certainly did make things pleasant. Never had he been so entertaining, so full of interesting stories, so devoted to the comfort and enjoyment of his guests. They dined, fished, hunted, gathered rare flowers and read or chatted on the veranda.

After three days of this kind of life, into which Miss Grayman entered with all the zest of her romantic and enthusiastic nature, Payton announced that his men had arrived. They showed themselves about the lodge, and presently the aero was removed from its customary place and taken into an inclosure partly roofed over, from which the sounds of hammering now began to be heard. Payton seemed to be very busy here during the daytime, but in the evening he was as attentive and entertaining as ever.

When this had been going on for a couple of days Payton, with great animation, announced that the repairs to the aero had been so successful that he proposed to make a trial trip.

"I want to be sure of her," he said, "because not for worlds would I run the risk of a second accident with her aboard. So I am going to take her out for a trip of considerable length. I shall run over to a town in Maine, and, as I have some pressing affairs relative to my Indians to attend to, I may be gone for a couple of days. In that time I can make sure whether the aero is really in first rate shape. Since this will delay our final departure I thought that perhaps you would like to drop a line to your father, assuring him of your health and contentment. Of course he will be anxious about you, and the letter would be an agreeable surprise. I could post it, and it would be received at least three days before our return to New York."

As Payton anticipated, the girl eagerly accepted the proposal and immediately sat down and wrote to her father as follows:

My Own Dear Papa—I was awfully disappointed over the accident that kept you and the Mitchells away after you had got so near us. It's a dreadful pity that the delightful plan could not be carried out. It was so romantic! But really I have enjoyed my part in it, and I shall enjoy it more since I now know that the whole affair had your approval, and Susan are in good health and spirits, and Commodore Brown is so entertaining and so attentive, and I am so glad that he has great ability. I have never met a young man with more elegant manners or more intelligent, and then he is an American, and you know how I detest those foreign dot-busters. But I must stop, for Mr. Brown is waiting for me. I send all love and hope to see you soon. Your affectionate daughter, HELEN.

P. S.—I think that Agnes Mitchell is very interesting. Her father must have been a delightful person. I like such devoted nature. One of the Indians is here. H. G.

Miss Grayman felt lonesome when Payton had departed with the Chameleon, but she thought of the pleasure her letter would afford to her father. She would have died of mortification and rage if she had known that her messenger was hardly out of sight before he skillfully opened the envelope and read the letter, smiling as he saw how completely it answered his wishes. Then he carefully reclosed and sealed it.

Everything was playing into his hands. To obtain this letter had been the object of his folly, and he could not himself have written it more to his mind. This was the master card that he had thought of when he had Mr. Grayman on the Chameleon. If he could instill into the father's mind the thought that his daughter was beginning to be deeply interested in the supposed friend who had carried her off he calculated that the fear and anxiety thus awakened would make him willing to come to any terms for her immediate release.

From his spies in Washington he had learned all he needed to know about the Mitchells. As soon as Miss Grayman's letter should be in her father's hands he would be ready for his next stroke.

No pen can suggest the amazement, perplexity, anger and despair of the billionaire when he received Helen's letter bearing the postmark "Charlotte, N. C."

Payton had gone far out of his way to post the letter in order to give a false idea of the direction in which his mysterious lodger lay.

Mr. Grayman had all confidence in his daughter, but he knew her romantic nature, and now she was evidently completely deceived.

He recalled what Payton had told him about Helen's deception concerning his name and character, and with a sinking heart he remembered the fellow's handsome face and fascinating speech and bearing. The mere thought of his daughter taking an interest in this unspeakable scoundrel drove him wild.

But the next day came the climax. In opening his mail he found a letter posted at Wheeling, W. Va., which read thus:

Aero Yacht Chameleon, in the Air. Mr. William Grayman.

Dear Mr. Grayman: Since I parted from you in Central park after our delightful ride together I have made good progress in the eastern of your daughter Helen. It is a great gratification to me that, backed by the esteem approval of her father, I find myself persona grata with the young lady, and I know that I shall grow rapidly in her favor. Indeed, I am become so bold as to entertain hopes the fulfillment of which would give me a place in the world and in society which I could never otherwise have expected to occupy. I am aware that she has written to you, but what she wrote of course I do not know, but I have good reason to believe that if I did know I should have no cause to feel disappointed.

Now, my dear Mr. Grayman, it may occur to you that the only way in which you can arrest the current is by keeping your agreement and arranging for the payment of the ten millions. Only that sum could compensate me for the defeat of hopes so brilliant. I trust that you will turn this matter over in your mind with your customary excellence of judgment. I shall call you up and name a place of meeting where we can quietly complete the transaction and effect the transfer. Very respectfully yours,

ALFONSO PAYTON.

It is best to draw the curtain on Mr. Grayman's sanctum after he had read this letter.

FIND YOUNG GIRL'S BODY AFTER MURDER

Hendersonville, N. C., Sept. 13.—The finding of the bruised and scarred body of 17-year-old Myrtle Hawkins in a lake near here today is expected to disclose one of the most sensational tragedies in the history of the state.

On the face and head were deep bruises, and while the coroner's jury verdict was "death by unknown means," it is said there is evidence that the girl died before her body reached the lake.

She had been missing since Thursday, when she left home to do some shopping. When she did not return a search was made, but no trace of her was discovered until this morning, when three small boys found the body.

Lake Oscéola, where the find was made, fronts Lake View Inn and the drive is traversed day and night by hundreds of vehicles. The girl was a daughter of W. H. Hawkins, a Hendersonville jeweler.

GARY INFORMER FEARS HE WILL BE KILLED

Chicago, Sept. 13.—T. B. Dean, who caused the arrest Friday of several officials of Gary, Ind., on charges of accepting bribes, last night told of an alleged plot to take his life.

"When I went to Gary," he said, "a friend met me at the station and asked what I had with me. 'Nothing,' I said. 'For God's sake, take this and go straight to your hotel,' he said, and slipped a revolver in my pocket. When I got to the hotel I took it out and threw it away. I don't carry a gun."

"Then a policeman, friendly to me, stole in and gave me the same story. He added that I was to be shot—shot through the head. A gun was to be planted beside me and the story was to be that a policeman had killed me in self-defense."

RESTORE GRAY HAIR TO NATURAL COLOR

By Common Garden Sage, a Simple Remedy for Dandruff, Falling, Faded, Gray Hair.

The old idea of using sage for darkening the hair is again coming in vogue. Our grandmothers used to have dark, glossy hair at the age of seventy-five, while our mothers have white hair before they are fifty. Our grandmothers used to make a "sage tea" and apply it to their hair. The tea made their hair soft and glossy, and gradually restored the natural color.

One objection to using sage, a preparation was the trouble of making it, especially as it had to be made every two or three days, on account of souring quickly. This objection has been overcome and by asking almost any first-class druggist for Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy the public can get a superior preparation of sage, with the admixture of sulphur, another valuable remedy for hair and scalp troubles. Daily use of this preparation will not only quickly restore the color of the hair, but will also stop the hair from falling out and make it grow.

Get a bottle from your druggist today. Use it and see for yourself how quickly dandruff goes and gray hairs vanish.

This preparation is offered to the public at fifty cents a bottle, and is recommended and sold by all druggists.

LUMBERMEN SAID TO BE SCARCE THIS YEAR

According to reports from the lumber districts of the upper peninsula, experienced lumbermen are scarce. During the past few years there have not been as many of the old time "lumberjacks" as formerly in this region, due largely to the fact that timber operations have not been conducted on an extensive scale. Many of them have gone west and to other points where work has been more plentiful and wages higher.

It is said that wages in the woods this year will range from $26 to $35 per month and board. This is about as good pay as the woodsmen of this region have ever received, and the wage scale will doubtless be satisfactory to the men. A number of the operators are now preparing to begin their season's work, and several have already started cutting.

The I. Stephenson company, of Menominee, will be the heaviest operators in this vicinity the coming winter. Their camps south of here, in the Flat Rock district, have been in operation all summer, but there has been a shortage of men. The management a few weeks ago brought in a gang of men from Detroit, but they all left the camp after working one day.

Bosses for a number of lumber concerns have visited nearly every city and town in the upper peninsula during the past few weeks, looking for men, but it is said that they did not succeed in finding many who desired to work in the woods. It is expected that men for this kind of work will be more plentiful after navigation closes, as surface operations at the mines will then be curtailed.

The lumbermen do not anticipate that there will be as good demand for mining timber this year as in the past, because of the iron business being slacker than usual. None of the mining companies have yet placed any important orders for the delivery of timber during the fall and winter months.

A BABBLING BABY.

But He Gets What He Deserves When Mrs. Wilcox Hears Him.

Recently Baba Barharin, an Indian who claims to be a yogi, made some unpleasant comparisons between the women of America and those of his native India. The remarks were made during a talk given at a fashionable New York studio. Among other comments he said the American ladies throughout the country, but especially in New York, gave little thought to anything but gowns and were nearly all overdressed.

Among his listeners was Mrs. Ella Wheeler Wilcox, the famous poet. Mrs. Wilcox is a student of oriental mysticism and conditions in the east. Her patriotism is unmistakable. She rose to her feet and gave the yogi an equally frank opinion of his countrywomen.

"You have no right to attack the dress of American women," she said. "We are not overdressed, especially in comparison with the women of the East Indies. Why, an American woman in her present fashionable costume would feel poverty stricken were she forced to appear at an Indian function, where the women wear heavy anklets, heavy bracelets and rings through their noses and on their toes as well as in their ears and on their fingers."

"American women are superior in every way. The richly jeweled East Indians—at least 99 out of every 100—can neither read nor write and impart no knowledge to the children they bring into the world, while every child of an intelligent American woman is an asset to the nation."

The yogi is said to have been displeased, but Mrs. Wilcox's audience was delighted. Evidently even a yogi was now and then being caught tripping.

THE NETHERLANDS IS ALARMED OVER WAR NEWS

The Hague, Sept. 12.—Owing to the alarming war news arising from the prolonged Franco-German negotiations over Morocco, the Dutch government is making full preparations to resist all possible interference with the neutrality of the Netherlands.

The Dutch fortifications along the German frontier have been occupied by strong garrisons and the coast defenses have been fully manned. An order has been issued calling out the national reserves for the army maneuvers. The government is buying provisions to keep the men and horses for six months at prices four or five times higher than normal, and it is ordering large quantities of rice from the colonies.

A Herculean Katydid. Experiments conducted by a naturalist attached to one of the government's scientific bureaus at Washington aduced an interesting example of the strength of the katydid. He harnessed a katydid to a kind of sled made by folding a piece of ordinary newspaper, and then loaded the sled with various articles. The insect proved able to draw, in addition to the original paper, twelve paper sheets each 8 by 4 1/2 inches, a large screw, two steel pens, a stone weighing two ounces and three and a half lead pencils. When the weight became too heavy to draw otherwise, the katydid got its fore feet over the edge of the table for a better hold, and on the addition of another weight it increased the adhering power of its feet by moistening them in its mouth.—New York Tribune.

Not a Parallel Case. A writer in the Philadelphia Saturday Evening Post tells of a big overgrown, bushy body of a farmer's boy who was afraid even to speak to a girl, and whose father one day finally lost patience and scolded him soundly for not looking about and finding some girl to marry. "Why," he said, "at your age I had been married three years and had a house and farm of my own!"

"Well, but dad," complained the boy, "that ain't the same thing at all. You only had to marry mother, while I've got to go and hunt up some strange girl and ask her to marry me!"

Daily Helps to Health and Happiness

By GEORGE F. BUTLER, A. M., M. D.

Many people could be rendered perfectly happy with the happiness which is lost in the world. We often happiness because we lose despite calm, quiet pleasures, and take interest and delight in nothing but that which excites, or we make the fatal mistake of thinking that happiness lies only in sensational events, instead of in the small, trifling incidents of daily life. There is nothing which we waste more than happiness, and even those who are prudent and economical in other directions are prodigal in this respect. They pinch and stint to save a penny, but are often indifferent about the loss of days of happiness. We frequently fail to appreciate our friends until they die, or we lose them in some other way. We rush through a holiday trip and miss half the beauty of the scenery because we are in a hurry or anxious or troubled by worthless trifles. Nearly every old or middle-aged man who looks back honestly on his life will admit that, however wretched he may be now, opportunities for happiness were open to him which in some way or other he has neglected.

"Suppose I refuse?"

"Payton's lip curled. 'Then you will not return to New York?'"

"Suppose I say 'Yes?'"

"Then I will carry you home myself with the Chameleon."

Mr. Grayman reflected "What harm to promising?" he asked himself "A promise extorted under compulsion is null. It will simply give me another chance. Once at liberty I'll not be fool enough to put myself in his power again. Some way will open up."

"Well," he said aloud, "then I'll say 'Yes.'"

"AREN'T YOU GOING TO ARREST THE AERO?"

veranda, as she had suggested, but hour after hour passed, and yet they saw no approaching aero.

"Susan, I can endure this no longer!" Helen exclaimed, re-entering the house, sought the library. It was well stocked with entertaining literature, and she managed to while away the time until the hour came to retire.

Miss Grayman passed an almost sleepless night and was up early in the morning, calling Susan.

When they descended Mrs. Williams proposed a trip in the canoe, but Miss Grayman declined and after breakfast took a book out on the veranda and

COLLEGE MORALS.

The charge preferred by R. T. Crane, the Chicago iron manufacturer, of the prevalence of drunkenness and gambling and other vices among students in universities and colleges of the country, will no doubt provoke considerable discussion by college men and attract some attention from the public in general.

All over the country college men are protesting that Mr. Crane has greatly exaggerated the case, says the St. Paul Dispatch, and that is no doubt true. It conditions were as bad as he represents them to be, the colleges would not be producing and adding annually to the numbers of useful men and women, as they are doing today. The college man in business and in the professions is the leader and the successful man, the man who gives tone and character to American business and professional life. The advantages which the young man gains from college training are so many that training is sought for by great effort and often at great sacrifice.

If it were not a good thing; if the attendance at the colleges and universities were not proven to be the energizing and elevating forces in human society which they are supposed to be, attendance at the colleges and universities would steadily decline. The contrary is the fact.

By that Mr. Crane must have overstated the case very far.

Granting, however, that there is some ground, as there no doubt is in some of the larger institutions, for the charges which he prefers, the remedy, which he does not suggest, would seem to lie in the hands of faculty and directors of these institutions. They are the men who set the standards and establish the spirit which controls student life. And college spirit is a force that may be appealed to effectively; pride in the college, regard for the good name of the alma mater, desire to be a credit rather than a disgrace to the college community will reach any student body when properly appealed to. Failure to arouse such spirit and maintain high standards by means of it is the fault of the responsible heads of the institution.

Of course, such influences are more effectively exercised on smaller bodies of students than on larger, and this fact is one of the powerful arguments admitted on almost every hand that the small college has advantages which are not to be undervalued as a means of educating the young men and young women of the country.

THE CRUCIBLE OF NATIONS.

The question of immigration with its manifold problems of crime, disease, morals, industry and citizenship is becoming more and more in this country.

Last year more than a million came. This year may see more than last. From the world over comes an endless human horde pushing lightward. What does the future hold? For them? For us? Will all the races and nationalities gathering here ever be melted into one people, physically, mentally and morally harmonious? Mayor Gaynor of New York says that they will. The mayor of the metropolis of the west, where millions of foreigners gather, believes that it is possible to Americanize those who come to us from foreign shores.

In New York more than three-fourths of the residents are of foreign birth or parentage. There are more Cohens than Smiths in the metropolis. A single street contains twenty nationalities; a single alley becomes a babel of twenty tongues. So Mayor Gaynor speaks as the head of the greatest foreign center of the country.

Mayor Gaynor believes that the American public school is the great melting pot in which all these various nationalities will eventually become amalgamated and assimilated.

In a recent address, the mayor said: "In our schools the children have the same teachers, the same books, the same songs, and I have always said that the schools would make us all a unit."

"For my part, it seems to me now that the children of all nationalities in the schools come out with a different kind of face to their forefathers. The noses of some of them are a little shorter and of others a little longer, and the high cheek bones go down a little in others, and an American face is even now coming out of the public schools, because the mind, you know, does affect the body, without any doubt whatever, and in that way also we are getting a sort of uniform mind.

Surely we are not getting a uniform face without there being a uniform mind with it, and in that way we will become one people. A great many people have misgivings about that. I may say that I have none."

An epidemic of rheumatism was said to have been brought on by the dry weather of the early summer, but the old fashioned doctor laid that trouble to damp weather. It is no longer safe to live in any kind of weather.

The politicians are now enriching the country by trying to make two plums grow where one grew before.

QUESTION RELATIVES
IN LEMBERGER DEATH

Madison, Wis., Sept. 13.—Mr. and Mrs. Martin Lemberger, parents of the murdered 7-year-old girl, Annie Lemberger, and their oldest boy, George, aged 9, were brought to the police station at 11:30 o'clock this morning.

They were taken to the office of Chief of Police Shaughnessy and put through a rigid examination by the chief, City Detective Patrick Boyd and Detective E. L. Boyer of the Burns National Detective agency of Chicago.

The police want more light on the circumstances connected with the disappearance of the child from the house—facts which they can believe only the parents can supply. Chief Shaughnessy declares he is certain all the details have not been made public. He is not inclined to accept the theory that the child, while sleeping, was removed through a window, then killed and her body thrown in the lake. It is to get more light on his own theory of the crime that the parents of the child and her brother were questioned today.

CANADIAN POLICE
SEEK MURDERER

Emo, Ont., Sept. 13.—Police of this town are working on a murder mystery in connection with the death of a man believed to hail from the mines near Virginia, Minn.

Seeking for a lost coat at 6 p. m. yesterday, Roland Tibbs, son of a farmer living near this place, stumbled across the body of a young man, about five miles east of here.

Investigation by the coroner, who was called at once, showed that the death was caused by a shot from a large calibre revolver at close range. The police found a letter in the dead man's coat pocket bearing the address of Andrew Saman, 21 Foak street, Virginia, Minn. A socialist emblem and a number of .32-caliber revolver cartridges, wrapped in a handkerchief were in the same pocket.

SETTING THE LAKE AFIRE
By LAURA IDA ROSS
Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

On one of the Vermont lakes there is a house one end of which projects over the water. Farmer Enoch Dale occupied the place with his family, consisting of his wife and children. His oldest daughter, Daisy, was a daisy indeed—straight, comely, and a pleasant smile usually played about her lips whenever she spoke.

"The only trouble about Daisy," said her father to his friend Hickson, "is that she's got a lover. I don't like him. He's a good boy, but there's no sand in him. Nobody will ever accuse Dan Potter of setting the lake afire."

The distance was a mile, the burning house not being directly opposite Dan's starting point. As he drew near enough to get his bearings he saw that the house was Farmer Dale's. The light of the flames lit up the faces of persons standing about. A line had been formed to pass buckets of water, but the work had evidently been stopped by something appalling. The lookers on were running about wildly to no purpose and Dan could see Farmer and Mrs. Dale with several of their children about them, wringing their hands. Daisy was not there.

The explanation was this: When the fire was discovered Farmer Dale took the youngest, and got them safely downstairs and out of the house. It was only then that he thought of Daisy, who occupied a room in that part of the house that overhung the lake.

Dale went upstairs again, but the fire, that had been caused by a defective chimney running up through the center of the building, had acquired such a headway at that point that it cut him off from Daisy's room. He ran downstairs and went about frantically, vainly looking for some way of reaching that portion of the house where Daisy slept. It being an extension over water prevented a ladder being raised, and the wind being off the shore the flames and smoke were blown so as to envelop the part he wished to reach.

While the shore was lighted by the flames Dan was in darkness and partly obscured by smoke. He was ignorant that Daisy was supposed to be still in the burning building, but he knew very well where her room was located, for he had often while out on the lake seen a white handkerchief waving to him from her window.

Perhaps it was this that led him instinctively to pull in as near as possible to the burning house. When he came so near as to feel the heat he turned the boat around and kept on slowly backing in. Then above the crackling, the roar and the shouts of those on the shore he heard a cry. He could see nothing for the smoke, but he backed his boat in to within some twenty yards of the house. Then he heard a splash in front of him, and he backed right in under flame and smoke till within a few feet of the house.

Suddenly something rose right up out of the water beside him. He seized it and held garments. Pulling the thing partly up out of the water, he realized that he held a human being. With difficulty he pulled the figure into the boat, and it lay limp in the bottom. Then, taking up the oars, he backed away from the heat and smoke that had become intolerable.

Reaching a point where the light, unobscured by smoke, enabled him to use his eyes, he saw that the figure in his boat was a woman in a nightgown. Turning up the face, he exclaimed: "Great heavens! It's Daisy!" Seizing the oars again, he pulled the boat with a few vigorous strokes to the shore some distance away from the burning building and gave a shout. Several persons heard him, Farmer Dale among them, and ran toward him.

TELL CROOKS BY A NEW SYSTEM

The "Speaking Face" Is Here From Paris.

SCHOOL FOR DETECTIVES.

New York Official Has Been Studying Latest Improvement of the Bertillon Method, and Police Department Will Try It.

The portrait parle, or "speaking face," a new system of identification at present in operation in London and Paris, is to be introduced in this country.

Captain Joseph Faurot, in charge of the criminal identification of the New York police department, has for several months past been abroad studying the system of facial identification of the criminal and other peculiarities of gait, speech and shape of head and his lips, his cheeks, his ears, chin, forehead, eyebrows, marks, wrinkles and lines of the face.

The Bertillon system of finger print identification is already in use in the New York department. Captain Faurot will establish a school of detectives to study the new system. Each detective will take about twenty lessons. Then while on the job if a detective runs across finger prints he will take the impression to headquarters and find filed along with the prints there a small gallery of photos of any thief whose finger prints happen to correspond to those of the detective has. He studies the nose, mouth, face of his man, his physical peculiarities.

Formerly he knew only generally that his man was five feet eight inches, of light complexion, sandy hair, weighed 100 pounds, was blue eyed, etc. The complete identification was not made until arrest and arraignment. Now under the new system are classed as "cave," "rect" and "vex," or concave, rectangular and convex. Then there are other differences in nose, such as height, width, projection and the base, which may be elevated, or snub, horizontal or depressed.

As to ears, Captain Faurot says that no two ears are alike. Ears are classified as a subdivision to noses and have many peculiarities. He said: "The classification of the ears as a minor division of the nose group is as follows: 'Deq,' lobe descending or square; 'ear,' antitragus concave or straight; 'vex,' pill convex, concave or intermediate; 'tra,' the lobe traversed or not by a hollow; 'sep,' lobe separated or not from the cheek, and 'sa,' a projecting antitragus.

"A division as to the height of the individual follows. The forehead, being a prominent feature, has its place in the new schema. Height, width, inclination and insertion of the hair are all considered. The hair may come down on the forehead round, square or pointed, and if there is none the degree of frontal baldness is carefully noted. The presence or absence of an arch and wrinkles where the nose joins the forehead furnishes a detail that a detective will have in mind when hunting a criminal whose salient physical characteristics have been given to him.

"Under the verbal portrait system lips range from very small to very great. The extent of projection, the showing of teeth and the peculiar marks found on many lips all have their share in the system, along with the various features of the chin, which may be vertical, projecting or receding. Mouths range from very small to very large, and the inclination at the corners often offers a prominent characteristic.

"After the city's detectives have learned the classification in the 'nose and ears college' they will get the description of one of 200 portraits and will be told to pick out the picture of the man whom the description fits. Later they will receive descriptions of men who are to be captured in a crowd. When a detective goes after a criminal with the verbal portrait description he will have a mental picture of the prominent characteristics of his man."

HORSE DIES OF RABIES.

Federal Agents Are Investigating a Rare Case in Washington.

The rare case of a horse dying of rabies is being investigated by officials of the bureau of animal industry. It was ridden by Lieutenant George M. Landis of the signal corps at the maneuvers of the district national guard and as far as known was not bitten by any dog during the encampment. Suddenly it became violent, tearing at its own flesh, and in a few hours it died in great pain.

Only six such cases have ever been reported in the district, and the officials are trying to trace the case back to its origin. Another horse was bitten by a mad dog as it stood hitched to a wagon in the street, and it is being kept under close watch for developments. The dog was killed.

DEPENDING ON CURVE BALL

Pitchers Cannot Afford to Allow Batters to Meet Ball as Squarely as They Can Fast Ones.

Billy Evans says American league pitchers are using the curve ball more this season than in any of the five seasons he has been a major league umpire.

"With the lively ball in use pitchers can't afford to let batters meet it too well," Evans said. "They depend on the curve ball to fool the batter and keep him from meeting the ball as squarely as he can meet a fast one."

"Batters don't have to hit a fast ball very hard this season to get it past the infield. Pitchers are depending on the curve ball almost entirely when runners are on."

"Pitchers are using the curve a good deal more this season when they have three balls and two strikes on the batter. Under these conditions the batter knows the pitcher will try to get the next one over. Pitchers generally have better control of the fast ball and last year could take a chance on having it hit. This year they prefer trying to fool the batter with a curve even at the risk of a base on balls."

"In a game I umpired in Boston Ralph Pomeroy passed five men rather than pitch the fast ball with three and two on batters. The catcher signaled for a fast ball each time; but Works shook his head. He took a chance with the curve and could not get it over."

Magner Making Good.

New York fans are congratulating themselves that they have had an opportunity to see a real star in the making. He is young Magner, formerly of Cornell, a "half portion" player, who is going to be a wonder as a shortstop. In his movements so far he has shown that none of them come too hard for him to knock down, and his throwing to bases has been wonderfully fast and accurate. Chase has a star in him and he is certainly badly needed.

He Was Cured.

A chap once consulted a famous physician about his dyspepsia. The patient was very deaf. The dialogue between the physician and he ran like this:

"What do you usually breakfast on?" "Oh, no! At least two miles in the morning and a motor ride after lunch."

"How many hours do you sleep?" "Well, doctor, I was fifty-nine my last birthday."

"Are you married?" "Thirst."

With a gesture of impatience, the physician turned and wrote out a simple remedy for dyspepsia. The patient, as he departed, shouted in the loud, harsh tones of the very deaf:

"Doctor, can you cure deafness?" The other shook his head in the negative.

"Well," said the patient, "you've been very kind, and therefore I'm going to make you a present of this prescription." He took a folded paper from his pocket. "It cured me."—New York Tribune.

CHILDREN GAY ON EASTER DAY

It is an interesting study to note the gradual change which takes place in the observance of a popular holiday. The very word is significant. In the beginning all festivals were religious ceremonies, and the days upon which they were celebrated were "holy days," which by corruption became the "holiday" of the present time.

Nor was this the only change. In heathen times, with few exceptions, the festivals were merry ones, marked with wine, flowers and dancing, whereas the holy days of the early Christians were tinged with sadness. Some of this gloom clung to church festivals until within comparatively modern times and only of late has disappeared. Now the popular meaning of a holiday is one devoted to music and merriment, good living and good cheer.

That the world is the better for such a change there can be no doubt. When people find that to be good does not necessarily mean to be grave or that an upright life is not incompatible with jollity more people will be good. Children learn this lesson much more quickly than adults, and therefore the children of the present day are peculiarly fortunate, because austerity is no longer a part of religion.

It happens that Easter is doubly blessed in this respect, because it has always marked the close of a penitential season and typifies new life and gladness and also because it has always been a day which children have celebrated. In the processions which in some countries mark the observance of the festival children take a prominent part. In Germany there are special games for Easter day, and even in this country we have adopted the pleasing custom of giving presents, making visits and interchanging little courtesies which tend to make life happier.

With each passing year Easter is coming more into popular favor, not only with church members of all denominations, but with people who regard the day solely as one of good cheer. There are all too few such holidays in our national life, and the growth of Easter in general esteem is therefore a cause for congratulation. At this distant day it does not really matter how the festival originated any more than the exact date of Christmas. The day itself and the event it commemorates are alone of importance, and the way the day is celebrated is of more importance than all. When any day is looked forward to and anticipated with joy by the children we may be sure that it will not fall into popular disfavor. It might be possible to make young people simulate grief, but they cannot successfully counterfeit joy.

"Tomorrow is Easter!" the children cry joyfully, and the Easter dawn is greeted with equal gladness. It is not, at least in this country, because of the colored eggs or the pretty presents or even the lesson of the day so much as because of the general brightness which seems to pervade the very air. The people one meets on the street wear smiling faces, the bells ring out in quicker time and clearer melody, and there is a contagion of happiness which young people are the first to feel.

Easter and spring go hand in hand. Each is the harbinger of new life to earth and man, and each is blessed for the pure and simple happiness it brings.

Signs of Easter.

If you read these learned maxims and take note of each small thing you may come to be a prophet and foretell the gladsome spring. When trees begin to blossom and the violets to bloom, when the bullfrogs in the meadow warble boom-ab-boom-ab-boom, when ducks are flying northward and bright butterflies are out and robins go house-keeping in the broken water spout, when grasshoppers are hopping and black bats come out at night and venture in your bedroom attracted by the light, when birds fly down the chimney and hens walk in the door and beetles hold contentions in the center of the floor, when the mud is over your shoe tops as you cross the new plowed land, you may count on it as certain that sweet Easter is near at hand.

Easter in London.

There is a very old school for boys in London, called Christ's Hospital. Its pupils still follow an ancient custom. On the day after Easter they march to the house of the lord mayor, who is awaiting them behind a long table on which are several piles of money. Each Greenian, a student of the highest rank, receives a sovereign. The others are rewarded with coins of lesser value, according to their standing. Then each boy is given a glass of lemonade and two buns, and back they all march to school again as happy as can be.

Making an Easter Bird.

An Easter bird may be made of eggshells, sealing wax, burned matches, tallow and paint. He is a beauty if made correctly. See whether you can fashion him without further instructions. He can be fastened to cloth to be used as a penwiper or he can be glued to a box and merely used as an Easter ornament.

Mr. Easter Egg.

Now, Mr. Easter Egg did trot To roll eggs on the White House lot. But he fell down and bit the dust. Alas, he fell and broke his crust! Now very bitter is his cup— He cannot pick his pieces up.

Longest Telegraphic Circuit.

Probably the longest direct telegraphic circuit yet established in practice was put in use for one hour or more when a war correspondent at Douglas, Ariz., recently wired to New York, by way of Los Angeles, El Paso, Dallas, Kansas City and Chicago, a total distance of over 4,000 miles.

The Food Behind the Men Behind the Gun

When the American Battleship Fleet visited the Thames last November, the London Daily Mirror sent a representative aboard the flagship with instructions to find out the cause of the superior physical condition of the American Jack-tar over the average British Blue-jacket.

An officer of the American flagship, upon being questioned regarding the food of the American Navy, said: "They have the best food of any navy on earth, and when they ask for more—like Oliver Twist—they have it without question."

Then the chief commissariat steward handed the newspaper man a sample breakfast bill of fare: It read:

Soft boiled eggs (two)

POST TOASTIES with milk

Bread, butter and coffee.

Post Toasties

are a delicious, nourishing food made of white Indian corn. Crisp and tempting, this food is the wholesome favorite for breakfast with hundreds of thousands at home and abroad.
