Taft, the first president of the United States to visit the upper peninsula of Michigan, alighted from his special train at the corner of Baraga avenue and Front street at 10 o'clock last evening, and was immediately conveyed in an automobile to A. T. Roberts' residence, where he spent the night.

Though it had been given out that the presidential special would not arrive until after 11 o'clock, Front street was lined with people eager to get a glimpse of the president as early as 9 o'clock.

The party was quickly seated in automobiles, the president all the while acknowledging the greetings of the crowd. His passage from Baraga avenue to Ridge street was a continuous ovation.

KEEL OF THE BIGGEST WARSHIP PUT DOWN.

Work Started on the New York—Will Be Finished in 1914.

With the young grandson of the late Rear Admiral Sampson driving the first bolt, the keel of the superdreadnought New York, to be the biggest of Uncle Sam's fighting craft, was laid in the Brooklyn navy yard. Simple ceremonies marked the beginning of the work of constructing the great ship, which is to bear the name of the Empire State, heretofore borne by a cruiser. It is expected that the New York will be completed by the summer of 1914.

The new "peace preserver" is to be constructed on the same ways on which the battleships Connecticut and Florida and the collier Vestal have been built.

The first of the great steel plates was lifted and placed in position by a crane. When four keel plates had been laid eight small boys stepped forward and drove in the first bolts, all of nickel. The honor of putting in the very first one fell to W. T. Cluverius, Jr., the five-year-old son of Lieutenant Commander Cluverius and a grandson of the late Admiral Sampson, whose flagship in the naval operations of Santiago in the Spanish war was the cruiser New York.

The New York will have a length of 573 feet, a breadth of 95 feet 2 inches, a total displacement of 27,000 tons and engines of 28,000 horsepower. Her major armament will consist of ten fourteen-inch guns. She will be one of the first vessels of the navy to be armed with fourteen inch rifles.

With a displacement of 5,000 tons more than that of the Florida, the New York when launched will be the biggest and most powerful fighting ship ever constructed for the United States navy. She and her sister ship, the Texas, will be larger in every way than the Florida, which, it is expected, will soon be ready to go into commission at the Brooklyn yard.

WORKING ON 16 INCH GUNS.

Naval Experts Prepare Forming of the Forty Thousand Ton Warship.

As soon as some other nation begins to arm its warships with fourteen inch guns, the caliber of the rifles which will compose the main battery of the newest designed Dreadnoughts of the American navy, the United States will seriously consider the sixteen inch gun for battleships. The largest gun on foreign vessels today is the 13.5 inch, adopted by Great Britain and Russia. The problem of a sixteen inch gun is already being worked out in connection with imaginary 35,000 and 40,000 ton battleships, so as to be prepared to take an advanced step whenever foreign competition warrants it. For rifles of that caliber a warship must necessarily have a displacement of at least 34,000 tons to resist the terrific recoil. These plans demonstrate, it is said, how materially is the evolution in naval construction and ordnance in one country controlled by the progress of others.

With the size and strength of warships growing from year to year in this worldwide endeavor to excel naval experts are beginning to wonder when and where the climax will be reached. With the 26,000 and 27,000 ton ships building the navy department is planning to make the displacement of the two battleships authorized by the last naval act 28,500 tons. That is certainly not the end, for it is believed that the next Dreadnoughts will be at least 30,000 tons.

NEW CANCER CURE.

Burning the Affected Tissues is Latest Hope, Physicians Say.

Members of the American Electro-therapeutic association, at their convention held in Philadelphia, witnessed an operation which, it is declared, will make possible a certain cancer cure if performed in time.

The method was entirely new, and the operation was witnessed by fifty or more physicians. The theory is to burn the tissues affected and thus prevent the further spread of the disease. A strong electric current through steel needles dipped in zinc was employed. The zinc undergoes a chemical change when the electric current is applied and emits a chemical that destroys the parts to which it is applied. This leaves nothing but a burn to be cured.

CAT CAME BACK.

Made Trip of a Hundred Miles Between Illinois Cities in Eight Days. The old adage about the cat coming back has been exemplified by a four-month-old Maltese kitten owned by Edward Giffel of Carlyle, Ill. The kitten traveled more than a hundred miles in eight days, reaching its native home, which establishes a record. Mr. and Mrs. Giffel formerly made their home nine miles north of Bridgeport, more than a hundred miles east of Carlyle. A few weeks ago they removed to Carlyle. Giffel took the kitten along. The cat was dissatisfied and finally mysteriously disappeared. Giffel received a telegram in answer to a letter of inquiry from the kitten's old home announcing its safe arrival there.

GERMAN PUBLISHER MAY RUN IN WISCONSIN

Madison, Wis., Sept. 19.—It has leaked out here that at the conference of the conservative leaders during state fair week there was considerable talk of running a candidate for the republican nomination for governor who should represent the conservative wing of the republican party. The fact was definite enough so that there was mention of candidates and there was considerable gossip among the leaders that it might be well if they could bring Col. Brumber of Milwaukee into the field.

MARINETTE TEAM NOW ORGANIZING

The Marinette high school football team is organizing and getting ready to practice for the coming season on the gridiron. The team suits were taken out Tuesday and allotted to the players who were in last year's team and some new aspirants for honors on the field. George W. Frederick and Bernard D. Grogan, of the faculty will have charge of high school athletics this year. As yet it is uncertain as to just who will be out for places on the team but practice will begin in a few days and the places will be rapidly filled.

Some of the stars of last year are still in school and it is thought enough of them will be on the team to form a good backbone for the recruits and that a fast and heavy team will be the result.

There is no indication at present that the team will assume championship proportions but it is a little early in the season to make any forecast on the question.

The SKY PIRATE

by GARRETT P. SERVISS.

PROLOGUE.

The sea pirate has long been a fascinating figure of romance, but the march of progress has driven him into well deserved retirement, and he has now been replaced, in fiction at least, by the sky pirate, who is even more mysterious, more daring and more romantic than his predecessor. Read and there will unfold before you the extraordinary story of Captain Alfonso Payton and his airship, the Chameleon; of William Grayman, the richest man in the world; of his beautiful daughter, for whose ransom $10,000,000 was demanded; of Lieutenant Allen of the revenue service, of wonders by wireless and of fierce battles above the clouds.

CHAPTER XV.

A FIGHT NEAR THE CLOUDS.

I AWOKE both the secretary and Mr. Grayman as soon as the new situation developed, and they came out on deck. Mr. Grayman immediately fell in with my opinion. "The rascal has another port there," he said. "I wish the other across would come up."

"The Skylark," I replied, "will soon be here, but we cannot wait for her. Payton has either run out of power or he means to make a stand. We are close upon him that he will have to make a stand anyhow or else try to escape under our guns, and if I know Ethan Haight's style of shooting the fellow won't run far."

"But remember, sir, my daughter is aboard," broke in Grayman. "Her life must not be endangered."

"Surely not," I replied. "Yet you see yourself that some risk must be taken. What I shall try to do is to disable the Chameleon. A shell into her motors or the breaking of one of her aeroplanes would do it."

"But then she might be precipitated to the ground."

"But she is not likely to be. She would flutter down, if she fell at all, like a wounded bird. Remember how the Eagle behaved last night, and she was badly hit. Then, of course, Payton has parachutes, and he would save his prisoners in that way."

"I'm not so sure of that," said the secretary. "He would probably think only of saving his own neck. But really, Grayman, the danger of a tumble is slight. In the battle above the English channel between the French and British aero squadrons during the last war thirty fliers were completely disabled; shot to pieces, as far as any further utility as fighting machines was concerned, but not one of them fell into the water. All succeeded in skimming to land on one side or the other."

"If we can," said I, "we'll stop him before he can get away."

"You think he is on this side of the hummock?" asked the secretary.

"Ethan thinks so, but is not sure. We'll have to look closely now."

While we were talking we had drawn up within a couple of miles of the hummock, which was a round hill covered with timber and rising to a height of perhaps 150 feet out of a broad, level plain, where there were few trees and vegetation of all kinds except grass was scanty. I now slowed up, for I didn't want to run into an ambush. Seeing nothing suspicious in the vicinity of the hill from our side, I concluded to circle it, keeping a good offset and a sharp lookout.

"Confound the fellow!" exclaimed the secretary. "Where can he have gone? He must have a hole in the ground."

"Perhaps he is among the timber on the hill," I said, and upon this thought I ordered the steersman to rise, at the same time turning inward. We had not risen more than fifty feet when Ethan Haight shouted:

"There he goes!"

"Where?" cried Mr. Grantman and I in a breath, running to Ethan's side as he stood by his gun in the bow.

"Low down almost a' t'other side o' the hummock," replied Ethan, pointing. "He's as green as a grasshopper, but I kin sight 'im."

And Ethan began to manipulate his gun.

It was several seconds before I succeeded in catching sight of the Chameleon, which, verily, as Ethan had said, was as green as a grasshopper and as hard to spy against the verdure that covered the plain, for she was running almost in contact with the ground. If we had not edged round the hill toward the west so quickly he would probably have got clean away under the shelter of the hill.

Payton's ruse was so simple and yet so perfectly executed that it made me reddon with vexation. Why he had not tried a similar game during the night I could not imagine, unless he thought that he could easily distance us and gave up that idea after he found that the Osprey was hanging on after daylight. He had merely dropped down on the either side of the wooded hill, a lone elevation in the midst of the plain, changed his color, crept round the base of the hill, keeping opposite to us, whom he could doubtless see through the treetops all the while, and when he found himself on the southern side and we on the northern had stolen away like a slinking fox.

Now he was off for the south at the top of his speed. Already he was fully three miles away and gaining distance at every stroke.

"For heaven's sake, Ethan," I shouted, "why don't you fire?"

"I'm drawing a bead," replied the gunner. And as he spoke the blue glare leaped from the muzzle. There being no smoke, we could see the flight of the little projectile, which was polished like a billiard ball. He used a solid shot on account of the extreme range. It rose in a flat curve, chased the retreating aero, overtook it in a few seconds, and we believed we could see a few splinters fly.

"Hurrah!" I cried. "Give him another!"

Ethan immediately fired again, but the Chameleon showed no sign of being seriously hurt. In a moment she defiantly waved a black flag and kept on her course.

In the meantime the Skylark, coming up several points eastward of the runaway, altered her course to head Payton off. Then I detected the flash of her guns in quick succession. The two were now not more than a mile and a half apart, and the shots ought to tell.

This time Payton, who had not returned our shots, was more pugnacious. He instantly answered the Skylark's fire, and then they went at it hammer and tongs, using shells, and the Chameleon all the while edging westward.

It was an exciting spectacle, and we watched it in breathless expectation. I fervently prayed that the Skylark's shells might reach a vital point; but, eagerly as I watched, I could not see that they did any damage. We could see them explode on the ground away beyond the Chameleon. Ethan was beside himself.

"The blasted rascals!" he cried. "They ought to hit a crow at that range!"

Still the firing went on, as we could tell by the faint blue flashes and the rocketlike explosion; but, to my dismay, I saw that it was only the Chameleon's shells that reached their object. She kept low, and the Skylark gradually descended. Suddenly the latter almost turned turtle, then righted herself and began to swing around with drooping wings and finally in slow, eddying circles dropped to the earth.

It was all over with her, as far as the fight was concerned, and everything now again depended upon us unless the Crow and the Bobolink should come up.

"They're lost in the night!" I exclaimed bitterly.

But I was not going to give up. We had run directly over the hill, and I had called on my engineer to outdo all his previous efforts. And he certainly did. The Chameleon did not appear to gain an inch on us. Of course we could not stop to look after the Skylark. I signaled to inquire what the damage was, and Grimes replied:

"Used up. Right forward aeroplanes smashed."

"Anybody killed?"

"Two men."

"Can you repair and limp home?"

"Yes, I think so."

"The Crow and the Bobolink are coming. Detain the Bobolink to aid you and send the Crow after us."

Somehow the image of that poor girl, whom I had never seen, was be-

THEY WENT AT IT, HAMMER AND TONGS, coming more and more clearly imprinted on my mind. I began to feel a personal interest in her rescue and a corresponding detestation of Alfonso Payton. I imagined her looking to us—looking to me—to save her, and I vowed that I would do it. Love at first sight has become a commonplace, but if I had stopped to analyze my feelings I might have concluded that my case was one of love without sight.

We were actually gaining on the chase.

The Osprey for some time had been making 139.8 miles, a little better than her best during the night. I estimated that the Chameleon had dropped to not over 130. At this rate we should overhaul her in the course of five hours. In two hours we should be within effective range, and an hour later we ought to be near enough to enable Ethan to knock her aeroplanes to splinters.

The gunner was already fuming with impatience and continually consulting with his range finder, changing the elevation of his gun and drawing imaginary beads.

"I'll bet a Connecticut cigar," he said as I passed him on my rounds, "that when I get another chance I'll put a shot into him that'll stop 'im."

"I'll give you word when to begin firing," I said. "Don't hull 'im, for you might injure or kill the prisoners he aim for the aeroplanes."

"I know how to wing a duck, too, tenant," he returned. "If the range hadn't been so pesky long this mornin' one o' his flippers 'ud never 'a' flopped ag'in."

"I believe you did hurt 'im, Ethan," I said. "I can't otherwise account for his lack of speed. Last night he gained on us; now we are gaining on him. Our speed is a trifle better than it was, but not enough to explain the difference."

Ethan's eyes lighted as he exclaimed: "I knowed it, footman! I knowed that shot wasn't altogether for nuthin'."

Payton now gradually increased his elevation until he almost reached the level of the lower clouds, and at the same time the Chameleon again underwent changes of color, turning first sky blue and afterward white, when it became difficult at times to find her against the dazzling cloud surfaces and pale sky.

I wondered what the fellow would do now that we were unmistakably drawing up on him. For when we had got just within range and Ethan was drawing a bead in earnest Payton lost not a second in deciding what to do. He swung the Chameleon broadside to each and an ugly blue flash showed at each end of her simultaneously. We anxiously awaited the arrival of the projectiles, and at the same time Ethan fired.

Unlike a ship, an aero when she is broadside to presents a more difficult mark, because then her aeroplanes are seen more or less edgewise.

Both of the Chameleon's shots passed under us, but Ethan's was better pitched, and our glasses showed that the solid projectile had hit one of her "flippers," as he called them. He followed with another, which was effective near the same spot. A moment later both of the Chameleon's guns spit blue fire again; but, as before, they were aimed too low, and the shot went whistling a good 150 feet below us.

"Why don't you swing round and give 'im both your guns, too?" asked the secretary.

"Because," I replied, "I want to run 'im down. Now, Ethan, keep it up."

Ethan's third shot hit the same aeroplane that had already been touched. If it had been a shell it might have demolished it, but the Chameleon's conduct showed that the damage was not yet serious enough to stop her or even hinder her action.

However, she fired no more, but instead turned tall. Evidently Payton, finding that he was receiving more damage than he could inflict, meant to trust again to his heels.

"That won't save him!" I exclaimed exultantly. "We've got 'im now. He's worse damaged than he was, and if he couldn't outfoot us then he's got no chance now."

While I was speaking I noticed that the Chameleon had turned almost directly skyward. Beyond and above during the fight a huge white cloud had come sailing up. Payton made directly for this cloud, and hardly two minutes had elapsed when Ethan called out:

"Gone into the cloud, by thunder, and disappeared!"

It was exactly true. The Chameleon was instantly swallowed from our sight. We could see where she had entered the cloud by the commotion of the vapors.

"Up and after him!" I shouted to the steersman.

With all speed we dived at the cloud and entered it. I calculated that he would run straight through it and then make a turn on the other side, but I thought that we could get there in time to catch him at his antics. So we shot straight through the cloud.

But Payton knew or divined what I didn't. Beyond this cloud lay two others, separated by a considerable interval, but on the same level. As we emerged on the other side of the first we came in sight of the others, one to the right, the other to the left. The Chameleon was nowhere to be seen.

New Brown Bread Recipe

Never soggy—Easily made
By Mrs. Janet McKenzie Hill, Editor of the Boston Cooking School Magazine

Nearly everybody likes Boston brown bread, but so many have experienced trouble with its being soggy, they have become discouraged. Here is a new recipe that cannot fail if the few simple directions are carefully followed. You will be delighted with the results.

K C Brown Bread
One and one-half cup yellow cornmeal; 1 1/2 cup entire-wheat flour; 1 teaspoon salt; 1/2 cup sweet milk; 1/4 cup molasses; 5 level teaspoonfuls K C Baking Powder.

Sift together, threetimes, meal, flour, salt and baking powder. Mix molasses and sweet milk and stir into dry ingredients to make a smooth batter. Turn into two empty K C Baking Powder boxes, thoroughly buttered, and let steam three hours. This bread is particularly good to serve with salads or raw oysters; also at breakfast, as toast of all kinds.

Raisins or currants may be added, though some prefer it without.

Readers of this paper may obtain The Cook's Book containing this and 89 other delicious recipes free by sending the colored certificate packed in every 25-cent can of K C Baking Powder to the JAGURS MFG. CO., Chicago. Send for The Cook's Book today.

RAISING THE MAINE.

In an editorial declaring against the further expenditure of the people's money in attempting to raise the battleship Maine, (inspired by the recent report of the government engineers) the Engineering News says:

"A writer carries the idea that the work is a particularly patriotic job, redounding to the honor of the country. If that were indeed true, we would raise not the slightest objection to the expenditure of a million or two million or whatever the work might cost. To stimulate true patriotic zeal in a people is well worth a nation's expenditure. But we have never been able to see such results from the work on the wreck of the Maine.

"So far as recovering the remains of the men who lost their lives in the work is concerned, the bones of the men who died in that wreck are just as decently and honorably buried there, where they met their death in the line of duty, as they could be anywhere.

"As for there being any particular glory to the nation in recovering any part of the rusted scrap which forms the wreck of the old vessel, it has never been apparent to us. The idea once prevalent that the wreck was in such condition that it could be raised and floated intact probably had strong influence in inducing congress to order the work in the first place; but it is now known to be utterly fallacious. It would be impossible to cut off, bulkhead and float the after third of the hull; but after it was floated it would be a perfectly useless piece of scrap, and the only thing to do would be to tow it into deep water and let it sink.

"It will be possible by spending money like water and incurring risk to more lives than those in the Maine explosion, to dig out the rest of the wreck from the semi-liquid mud in which it lies buried, and that, too, can be dumped in deep water or sold as scrap. We discern no glory in the accomplishment of the task in either case."

A MODEL CITY.

Gard, Ind., was built as a model industrial city.

It was made to order, but whatever that may be its merits from the standpoint of industrialism, is it no improvement, apparently, upon older cities built gradually and in a haphazard manner.

The mayor of Gary has just been arrested. He is charged with demanding and receiving a bribe in connection with the granting of a franchise for a heating plant. The man who obtained the franchise made arrangements to have the mayor arrested as soon as the money was paid and the franchise received. Councilmen are charged with demanding money in connection with the enterprise. The promoter of the project says that he found two honest members in the city council.

The end is not yet. Apparently Gary is far from being a model city in the broadest and best sense of the word. And yet what has taken place in Gary might have taken place not long ago in almost any American city. There was bribery for years in large and small municipalities. It is only lately that bribery and grafting have become unsafe and, therefore, unfashionable.

The men who made graft unsafe and unpopular were the magazine and newspaper "mudrakers," so called. The citizens themselves must keep it unpopular and unfashionable. There isn't a system of municipal government ever devised that will prevent municipal thievery if the people shut their eyes and allow things to run themselves.—Hancock Copper Journal.

THE PRISON BOARD MEETING.

From the Marquette Mining Journal: The Jackson prison board met late last week. Mr. Haggerty, to succeed whom Governor Osborn has appointed Clyde I. Webster, of Detroit, was present, but Mr. Webster was not. Mr. Haggerty voted on all business coming before the board, and is prepared to fight to retain his membership, with the full powers thereof. He started proceedings before the circuit judge in Jackson county, seeking to restrain Mr. Webster from endeavoring to supplant him. There is some question, it appears, whether the Jackson court has jurisdiction, but Mr. Haggerty's intention to fight is at least made clear. He is quoted by the Detroit Journal as entertaining the polite intention of throwing Mr. Webster out of the board room, should that gentleman appear at any of the sessions, but more likely than not he is misquoted, as there appears, on the surface, at least, no reason why there should be heated feelings between him and Mr. Webster. Such friction as has been engendered exists between him and Governor Osborn. It is altogether probable that the dispute, which is, after all, a legal one, will be settled without fistcuffs, and we believe that even if Mr. Haggerty and Mr. Webster should happen to appear at the same board meeting they would conduct themselves as mannerly as the public could wish, despite the evident desire of the Detroit Journal to start something of a sanguinary nature.

"I am certain," says Wilbur Wright, "that $99 out of every $100 that has been spent in aviation during the past year has been wasted." In other words, public exhibitions by men hired to do stunts in the air are not the best means of promoting the science. We have suspected something of that sort ourselves. Mr. Wright might also have stated that a large proportion of the lives sacrificed has been wasted.

A steamer returning from Alaska has been sunk with its cargo of $180,000 in 'raw' gold. That once would have been a sunken treasure worth going after. Whole fleets of pirates would have sailed to the end of the world for less than that. But it is too puny a sum as fortunes are measured now to bother over.

So Italy is contemplating the seizure of Tripoli. Certainly. A soon as Europe gets properly stirred up over Morocco let's all grab anything we can get our hands on.

Beef is almost as high as on that historic occasion when the cow jumped over the moon.

It used to be enough to advertise that a horse was "sound, kind, and warranted not to kick," but now you must show that he won't shy when an aeroplane alights in the next field.

SCOUR WOODS FOR MISSING PESHTIGO MAN

Although several searching parties have scoured the woods and hills in the vicinity of Peshtigo, they have as yet failed to find a clue to the whereabouts of Jack Albright, the man who disappeared last Wednesday. His gun and hunting license were found, but no trace of the man himself.

It was reported today that bloodhounds had been put on his trail, but this is denied by Sheriff Schwittay of Marinette. It is stated that Under-sheriff Doherty has been at the head of several searching parties in the last few days and he says there have been no hounds on the trail. Yesterday a muddy swamp was dragged with the hope of finding the body, but so far there has not even been the smallest clue brought to light.

OLD-TIME EM EDY DARKENS THE HAIR

Gives Color, Lustre to Faded and Gray Hair—Dandruff Quickly Removed.

From time immemorial, sage and sulphur have been used for the hair and scalp. Almost everyone knows of the value of such a combination for darkening the hair, for curing dandruff and falling hair, and for making the hair grow.

In olden times the old way to get a hair tonic of this sort was to brew it in the home fireplace, a method which was troublesome and not always satisfactory. Nowadays almost every up-to-date druggist can supply his patrons with a ready-to-use product, skillfully compounded in perfectly equipped laboratories. The Wyeth Chemical Company of New York put up an ideal remedy of this sort, called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy, and authorize druggists to sell it under guarantee that the money will be refunded if it fails to do exactly as represented. If you have dandruff, or if your hair is turning gray or coming out, don't delay, but get a bottle of this remedy today, and see what a few days' treatment will do for you. This preparation is offered to the public at fifty cents a bottle, and is recommended and sold by all druggists.

Major League Notes

After an absence of eleven years Cy Young made his appearance at League park in St. Louis Monday, getting a 3 to 3 tie in the second game of the double-header between the Cardinals and Doves. Not since 1900, when the veteran was a member of the Cardinals, had he stepped on the mound of League park.

President Ebbets of the Superbas says that for one player such as Rucker or Daubert he'll give his entire team. He wants entirely too much.

Since the days when Jake Beckley was their great first baseman, the Pirates had had twenty-six men at that position and not one has made good.

Magnates on the Pacific coast insist that two rules must be made by the national commission or they'll revolt. They want the drafting system abolished and the law against farming players to minor clubs enforced.

The greatest quality in Jawn Jay McGraw is patience. Through the use of this he's secured three of the best players in Merkle, Marquard and Snodgrass.

Connie Mac has signed fourteen kid pitchers from high schools in the last two years. Not one has made good, though Connie is still popular with the schoolboys.

Wingo Anderson, who formerly was a red and later with Nashville, is pitching for Clarksville in the Kitty league.

With only one fire baseman the Phillies don't look to be strong in case Luderus is injured. Still, you know, the Cubs just had to be helped.

Pitcher Hildebrand, drafted by the Reds from Great Falls, Mont., performed a great feat last spring when he pitched a no-hit game the first time he donned the clothes of a regular player.

Pittsburg has in its list of players nineteen pitchers, six catchers, eleven infielders and thirteen outfielders.

With The Fighters

Jack White, Chicago's fast boxer, is going to enter the feather weight elimination series at Los Angeles. Frankie Conley and Johnny Kilbane are to box at the coast city September 6. Joe Rivers will meet the winner October 14 and White will meet the victor in the Rivers bout on November 4. Jack will box Tommy Dixon at Dayton, O., October 4, and then Gilmore will take him to the coast.

A bout that will be looked forward to with much interest by the Indianapolis bugs is one arranged today between Young Chick Hayes, the Memphis bantam, who is now living there, and Earl Denning, the lightning-like fighter of Chicago. The bout will be given as the semi-wind-up of the Ray Bronson-Tommy Howell bout arranged by the Indianapolis A. C.

Johnny Kilbane, who knocked out Joe Rivers, the Mexican feather weight, yesterday announced that he will not meet the Mexican again after his battle with Conley on September 30. Kilbane had announced earlier that he would meet Rivers in November, but changed his mind.

A few left jabs to the face coupled with right taps to the stomach gave victory to Barney Williams over Jumbo Wells of England in a six-round go last night at Philadelphia.

Phil Knight of Kansas City, one of the promising lightweights of the country, arrived at Indianapolis yesterday in search of a bout. He is itching to get a whack at Saylor, so he said.

Joe Mandot, who claims the southern lightweight title, continued his winning career last night by outpointing Tommy Kilbane of Cleveland in an eight-round bout at Memphis.

Rev. E. H. Meyer, who has preached against the Johnson-Wells fight at London, yesterday declared that if the promoters will call the fight off he will raise a fund to reimburse them for their loss. The announcement was met with ridicule.

Frank Mulkern, who failed to pull off the Wolgast-McFarland bout in Milwaukee last week, is trying to transfer the bout to San Francisco and has asked the two fighters to again sign articles for the match on the coast.

Lesch Cross outfought and outpointed Paddy Sullivan all the way in a ten-round battle at the Olympic Athletic club at New York last night. All through the fray Lesch was hopping around his slow-footed antagonist.

ANOTHER ST. LOUIS STAR

Bobby Byrne, Who Was Born and Brought Up in Mound City, Plays Brilliantly as a Pirate.

St. Louis has become famous as the recruiting ground for ball players. The Mound City turns them out in droves each season, and they can be found in every league in the land, great and small. Following in the footsteps of heroes of Kerry Patch and Goose Hill, young Bobby Byrne, native of St. Louis, born December 31, 1885, decided in the spring of 1905 that he would "go out" and brave the jibes of his fellows if he failed to make good. Rather, he determined he would make good. He did. He played at Springfield, Mo., not too far from home, and then, becoming bolder, he got as far as Shreveport, La., then in the Southern league. There he learned from the wise old heads who were enjoying their second time on earth in the Dixie sun more than he ever knew about baseball. In return, he showed them something they never saw in the way of speed. A scout for the St. Louis Cardinals saw him perform and marveled that such a youngster should have been overlooked at home. He came back and told the Cardinal management about it. He did not get much encouragement, but insisted, and finally it was concluded to give Bobby Byrne a trial. Bobby made good, and making good at home is the acid test for a ball player. He stayed with the Cardinals into his third season, when he was traded to Pittsburgh; some St. Louis fans are still touchy about that trade, says the Sporting News. He is just as good a Pirate as he was a Cardinal, and as a Pirate he became something he never could have looked forward to as a Cardinal—a member of the champion team of the world. His St. Louis admirers got some satisfaction out of that.

Another world's record was smashed by Charles W. Glidden of Boston, champion eater, who devoured fifty-eight ears of corn in one hour and fifty-five minutes. The previous record was fifty-four ears.

Mr. Glidden got up from the table after having finished his task and, pulling down his white vest, remarked:

"I feel satisfied. I never really have before. I do not feel as if I could eat anything more for two weeks."

A Great Advantage to Working Men

J. A. Maple, 125 S. 7th St., Steubenville, O., says: "For years I suffered from weak kidneys and a severe bladder trouble. I learned of Foley Kidney Pills and their wonderful cures so I began taking them and sure enough I had as good results as any I heard about. My backache left me and to one of my business, expressman, that alone is a great advantage. My kidney acted free and normal, and that saved me a lot of misery. It is now a pleasure to work where it used to be a misery. Foley Kidney Pills have cured me and have my highest praise." For sale by all druggists.

THEATRICAL

AT THE GARRICK—R. W. Fraser's four act Western comedy drama, "Lost in the Hills," which will appear at the Garrick Theater Oct. 2nd is a play of the Golden West. It is something different from the ordinary play. The very unconventionality of the Western mining country has a strange fascination for the average American. Here we have a vivid picture of this always interesting phase of American life, the rough but true nature of the western miner, the scheming and fierce struggle for the possession of certain papers which holds a fortune. The true friendship of one western woman for another. All these make "Lost in the Hills" one of the prettiest Western plays ever written.

PINKERTONS TAKE ALLEGED "DIPS"

Seven alleged professional pick-pockets were arrested last evening at Marquette by Marshal Manning and by Pinkerton detectives, who have been engaged to assist in giving police protection. The detectives state that two of the men are old time "dips" and that one of them, who gave the name of Phillips, is one of the cleverest diamond thieves in the business. The Pinkerton man asserts that he sent Phillips to prison in New York on one occasion and that he caught him red handed in a job in California.

The local police officials received information last evening that a gang of "dips" had been busy at the Soo yesterday and that they would probably follow the president to Marquette. Accordingly, the Pinkerton men boarded No. 7 in the lower yards and at once spotted the two professionals with whom they had had previous experiences. Three of the gang got off the train when they saw what was up, but later were arrested on the down town streets.
