RECIPROCITY AN ISSUE IN CANADA'S ELECTION

Ottawa, Ont., Sept. 21.—Asserting that the limelight of campaign publicity had driven the annexation bogey to haunts known only to opposition leaders and that an overwhelming majority of Canadian voters are prepared to vote favorably today upon ratification of the reciprocity agreement, Sir Wilfrid Laurier tonight stirred to remarkable enthusiasm an audience which filled the largest auditorium in Ottawa.

"If I were as sure of my eternal salvation as I am that Canada will ratify reciprocity three days hence, my soul would be at peace," declared the premier, and his hearers gave him cheer upon cheer.

"I can say without presumption that I know Canada as well as any man. I traversed our wonderful west last year. I have traversed our most wonderful east during the last few weeks. I have found men everywhere, both my friends and my opponents, praising the agreement which Ministers Fielding and Patterson brought back from Washington last January. "My opponents may say what they like of the agreement, but I take the heart of hope from my knowledge that though the millionaire may denounce it, the common man, the multitudes who cast the ballots, favor it. "My opponents say that reciprocity will be a good thing for the United States. I believe it; I would hate to believe otherwise, but I say that it is a better thing for Canada. Where a rich people of ninety millions open their markets to a less wealthy country of eight millions, which is bound to be the greater gainer? No reasonable man can say that Canadians will not be the greater gainers."

Despite speeches at three meetings today, one following tonight's big liberal rally, and one at Rockland, fifty miles from Ottawa, Sir Wilfrid plans to speak four times in and near Montreal tomorrow. By Wednesday, the premier said today, he will have delivered during the last five weeks' campaign at least one speech for each of his seventy years.

IDEAS DEVELOPED IN NEW COSTUMES

A new model in black and white foulard has three single box plaited frills about three inches in width, at the foot of the skirt.

These are bound at both edges with bright green silk. The very low, round neck of the bodice and the elbow sleeves have the same finish. Each frill has a tiny heading, and all in all this trimming is exceptionally neat.

A costume in navy blue has a rounded front sailor collar and turnback cuffs of white hemstitched chiffon, and over this hemstitched navy blue chiffon so adjusted as to show just the hem of the white. A graduated side frill fastened under the one sided reverse is in the same double effect.

Use of Crepe de Chine. The soft, clinging crepe de chine is becoming a favorite material for foundation and linings. Naturally that having a high luster surface is preferable. It is especially desirable for coats and mantles.

A pretty frill may be made by tucking the net horizontally to within two inches of the edge, which may be finished off with narrow valenciennes lace.

The favor accorded the side frill has increased the popularity of all jabots, and so the woman who does not like the side effect will be signally fashionable if she makes up a cascade jabot or any other pretty full arrangement of sheer lace.

Uncut Velvet. Uncut velvet is largely used, both by milliners and dressmakers. It is shown in various high class novelties, and promises to be popular the coming season.

A pretty finish for the front of the lace guimpe is a narrow double frill of net or lace separated by a band of beading through which is drawn velvet ribbon.

Soutache braiding, which has already had a long vogue, has apparently lost none of its popularity. Many of the new models show a profuse use of this trimming. In tailored skirts it appears on both skirts and jackets in the form of panellike motifs. Afternoon dresses are adorned with it, and the sheer chiffons are effectively braided in gold and silver soutache.

A newly imported model which emphasizes the new oriental trend of fashion has the foundation of East Indian red veiled with bright blue chiffon embroidered in a floral pattern with dull blue and mauve silk floss and dark blue wooden beads. A band of vari-colored striped silk forms a footband simulating an under petticoat.

The bodice is made up in the front double crossing and the kimona sleeves have the flowing drapery effect, both characteristic features of the now fashionable East Indian attire.

Why Don't You Own a Motor Car?

Is it because of—original cost?
cost of operation?
inability to take care of a car?
the expense of keeping a chauffeur?

SUPPOSE all these conditions were overcome and your purchase could be regarded as a good investment. That intrinsically your car would command the highest second-hand price on the market. That original cost was one you can afford, and cost of operation the lowest of any car made. That because of simple and durable construction, easy control and accessibility of all parts, a chauffeur would be entirely unnecessary and caring for your car a pleasing pastime. Suppose all this were true, that 44,000 owners prove it, wouldn't you want to own such a car?

Unquestionably you would.

The SKY PIRATE

by GARRETT P. SERVISS.

COPYRIGHT BY FRANK A. FURSEY COMPANY.

PROLOGUE.

The sea pirate has long been a fascinating figure of romance, but the march of progress has driven him into well deserved retirement, and he has now been replaced, in fiction at least, by the sky pirate, who is even more mysterious, more daring and more romantic than his predecessor. Read and there will unfold before you the extraordinary story of Captain Alfonso Payton and his airship, the Chameleon; of William Grayman, the richest man in the world; of his beautiful daughter, for whose ransom $10,000,000 was demanded; of Lieutenant Allen of the revenue service, of wonders by wireless and of fierce battles above the clouds.

She had evidently crossed the narrow open space and disappeared again into one of the clouds.

But which one? A sudden inspiration came to me.

"Send a five second timed shell into each of those clouds while we hold our course," I said to Ethan.

These shells were so contrived that their fuses were started by the discharge of the gun. It was like shooting into a thicker at a suspected deer, and I regretted the order the moment it had left my lips, but it was too late for a countermand. Ethan's first mark was the right hand cloud. I had never seen a projectile fired into a cloud, and the effect surprised us all.

As the projectile dived into the round, marble looking mass of vapor a minute hole seemed to open, and round this instantly played a rayed halo of brief lightning flashes. Then the vapor a hundred yards on all sides was thrown into commotion, turning inward in streaming lines to follow the shell. This was well timed, for apparently it exploded in the very center of the cloud, which afterward appeared to be agitated by contending winds, while boiling rifts opened at various places. But the mass was too dense to give us a view through it.

In a few seconds the second shell had penetrated the other cloud and exploded within it, but the phenomena were now less marked.

Meanwhile we held straight on our course between the two clouds, because I expected to find the Chameleon on the other side of one or the other of them. In this I was disappointed. When we ran out into the clear space on the farther side there was not an aero in sight.

CHAPTER XVI.

THE CHAMELEON'S DODGE.

My movement and disappointment for a moment unnerved me. I glanced up and down on all sides, but not a thing was visible except the clouds, the blue sky and the green earth. I stopped the motors, and for a few minutes we hung there, debating what to do. For the first time in his life perhaps, for he was not a profane man, the secretary muttered "D—!"

"Lootenant," said Ethan at last, "I know what he's done—he's turned inside the cloud!"

The truth at once flashed upon us. There was no doubt about it—he had tricked us again!

"Curse him!" I exclaimed. "He shall never get away. Reverse the course and then fall speed ahead."

It was at least a year since I had seen the picture of Helen Grayman in the Sunday paper, but now her face rose before me as clearly as if she had stood there—those large, beautiful eyes; that open, frank, winning countenance. I felt that it was my chase, and I forgot everything except that I must save her.

Which of the two clouds had the Chameleon used as a cover? I determined to run back straight between the two and straight through the third, larger cloud, which we had already traversed, hoping to find Payton escaping in that direction.

In order to make clear the situation as it had now developed I must ask the reader's attention to the diagram above.

By the time that we had got out into the open beyond the two small clouds Payton had completed his turn and re-entered the large cloud. Keeping to the left as soon as he was within it, he ran nearly its whole length and finally emerged, only to dodge behind the other small cloud.

He was evidently a master of strategy.

Here he ran the only serious risk of discovery during the entire maneuver, for if we had returned more promptly we might have been just in time to catch sight of him as he passed the opening between the clouds.

But we were too late, and while the Osprey was dashing headlong on her return through the large cloud the Chameleon rounded the small one and was off at full speed in exactly the opposite direction. No sooner was the air clear of vapor than we looked about with all eyes and were met by the same disappointment. The Chameleon was not there.

A A show the position of the Chameleon, first when we saw her enter the cloud and, second, after her escape. The long closed line, curving around and through the clouds, indicates the path that she followed. B B show the positions of the Osprey at the beginning and the end of this strange battle, and the dotted line indicates the course that she pursued. Short dotted lines, leading to each of the smaller clouds, show our shell fire, and it is evident that we narrowly missed the Chameleon, which must have been close to the point where the second shell exploded.

"Perhaps one of your shells found him," suggested Mr. Grantham, "and broke him up so that he has dropped to the ground unperceived."

It was a startling possibility, and I gave orders to drop down within 100 feet of the ground. Running back, we began to use the utmost circumspection in examining the surface beneath us. It was mostly level and covered with irregular growths of trees and brush, with interspaces of grassy land. We may have spent half an hour in this search when the penetrating eyes of Ethan Haight discovered a new surprise for us.

"Lootenant, lootenant!" he called out. "There he is again!"

I glanced hastily at Ethan. He was pointing south-southwest, his hand raised above the level of his eyes. I looked, and we all looked, but could see nothing. Still Ethan insisted: "Just as 'in the cloud with a head on it. It's him as sure as preaching!"

In a few moments I had the object located, a moving speck against the cloud, and set out instantly in pursuit. I could see well enough the relative situation and dimensions of the clouds to see that he had turned his movements to mine, which he must have foreseen with Napoleonic penetration, so that his moments of entering and leaving the clouds and of crossing the interspaces would so fall as to keep him always concealed from us behind a curtain of vapor. He must have forecast with absolute assurance our final dart backward, which simply superadded our speed to his in widening the distance between us.

It was a bitter dose for me, but I swallowed it and fixed my mind with redoubled resolution upon the rescue of Helen Grayman.

Mr. Grantham noticed my chagrin and kindly said: "No matter, Allan. He's yours yet. I caused you to waste half an hour by my useless suggestion. Now go ahead, and I promise to be guilty of no more stupid interference."

"It's not your fault at all, Mr. Grantham," I replied warmly. "I should have done what I did if you had not spoken."

The secretary gave me a pressure of the hand, and I felt greatly encouraged, for I knew I should have his support however the thing turned out. So I visited Jim and incited him to renewed efforts.

"Get her up to a hundred and forty," I said. "We've another and a last chance."

"I'll do it or bust her," he grimly replied.

We did go at an astounding speed, and no long time elapsed before our gain was so great that I told Ethan to be ready.

"Shells this time," I said. "We'll not begin to fight until we are within easy range, and I want you to pelt him without mercy. Only," I added, "aim for the aeroplane and save the hull. The Chameleon carries the richest girl in the world, and we've got her father aboard her."

"I'm not a-go'n' to tech a hair o' her head, lootenant," replied Ethan, with a thoughtful, knowing grin. "I've been to the show in my day, an' I know all about Romeo an' his Joollett."

I felt my face burn and turned away. This practical minded Yankee evidently had his romantic side, too, and had penetrated a secret of which I did not dare to think myself.

I do not believe that the Chameleon was now making more than a hundred and thirty-five at the most, and in a couple of hours we had her almost within range. As we drew nearer Payton evidently saw that the game was up and that his only course was to fight.

He ran up his black flag and dressed his flier from stem to stern in the same color, thus stamping her silhouette with startling distinctness against the rising clouds beyond and giving her an aspect so fierce and menacing that I saw some of my men regarding her and one another with doubtful looks and shrugs.

I called to Jim to pile on the speed on a more and to Ethan to follow the range and announce it to me every half minute.

"Four miles!" he presently sang out—"three miles an' a half!"

Before he called again a vast smoke belled cloud which had been piling its golden pagodas up into the sunshine above seemed to make a sudden rush all along its front and at the same time crinkled with lightning. In an astonishingly brief time its advance had reached the Chameleon, while flanking vapors ran out like a charge of cavalry and began to envelop us.

The sweep of the storm was so sudden and swift that almost in a moment the Chameleon vanished, and then the Osprey was swallowed up with darkness, illuminated now and then by venomous lightning bolts.

The thunder growled and rattled all about us, and the aero lurched and pitched so dangerously that I advised Mr. Grayman and the secretary to take refuge in the cabin. My men managed the flier superbly, and in a few minutes the storm passed, and we found ourselves in a valley of cloudland—blue sky overhead, thunderclouds piled like vast rocks all around and the earth beneath hidden with dark mists.

Beyond the nearer clouds the vapor peaks rose glittering in the sunshine like snow clad mountains.

Then I caught sight of the Chameleon, also inclosed in a cloud walled valley, not more than a quarter of a mile off. Gigantic in the magnifying mist, she was just pushing out of the acid, her great aeroplanes looking as funereal as mighty poles and her black flag whipping in the wind.

She was broadside to, and Payton's eye had been as quick as mine. His action was quicker.

Hardly five seconds had elapsed from the moment that we caught sight of one another when both his guns spit their blue flashes, and the shells screamed so close that I wondered at our escape. I yelled an order to the steersman to bring our bow in line with the Chameleon, meaning to run her down, but before we had swung into the desired position she fired twice again and once more narrowly missed her aim.

Ethan was ready now, and the word "Fire!" had hardly left my lips before his gun responded and knocked one of Payton's aeroplanes into a shapeless, fluttering mass. His second shell burst aboard her, sending my heart into my throat in the fear that it had killed half the people she carried.

"Careful, Ethan!" I shouted. "Remember the prisoners!"

"All right, lootenant," he replied; "but, blast him, he's fooled us long enough!"

Before either side could fire again, the Chameleon was once more swallowed from sight by boiling, sulphur tinted vapors, and, as before, the Osprey, too, was immediately involved in the second rush of the storm. This time the glare of the lightning and the vicious raps of thunder were almost incessant. We had all we could do to retain an upright position on the pitching and awaying deck. Yet again the storm passed quickly, leaving us in another blue domed and vapor bottomed atmospheric valley among the flashing thunder heads. And there still was the Chameleon, like a black demon of the air, awaiting us.

The battle was instantly resumed with greater impetuosity than before, as if the electric fury of the tempest had entered into our blood.

Still Payton presented his broadside, striving to keep out of reach, while I endeavored to close, and Ethan peppered him with the bow gun.

Having two guns in action to our one, Payton pumped the shells into us with a caution, but his aim was wild compared with Ethan's superb gunnery. Still, they managed to cut up our rigging, tore a few holes in our deck and finally sent a shell aboard us that wounded two men and knocked over Mr. Grayman, who, with the secretary, had insisted upon remaining on deck, with a flying splinter.

Mr. Grantham ran to his aid, and I sent a man to help carry him into the cabin.

Whish! Whish! Battle! Crack! went the sounds of the guns and the exploding shells, mingled at times with the deep growls of thunder from the encircling clouds, which menaced another rush, as if we in turn had stimulated them to renewed violence. But they held off while the fight to a finish between the Chameleon and the Osprey went on.

Presently one of our aeroplanes was knocked endwise; then our steering machinery was damaged. The latter injury caused us to swing round so that our stern gun also came into play, and the gunner, Eaton—a good man, too—incited by Ethan's splendid work and eager to take his share in it, began to fire without orders. Of course I let him go on, and the battle became fiercer than ever. Payton sent us some more smashers, and I felt by the staggering of the Osprey that she was mortally injured; but, after all, that did not greatly trouble me, since it was plain that the Chameleon was in a far worse plight.

Ethan was a sight to make one's nerves tingle. His eyes flashed, his strong arms worked with the precision of walking beams, and the perspiration streamed from his face.

"Bully for you, Ethan!" I shouted enthusiastically. "You've kept your word. The Chameleon will never fly again."

"The blasted turncoat!" he replied, again sighting his gun. "I knowed I'd put an end to her cavortin's. Change yer color ag'in, will ye, ye blasted grasshopper! Shoot inter a cloud ag'in if ye kin, darn ye!"

Ethan had but just uttered these words when a shell whizzed aboard, exploded under his feet and sent it

By the way, and over and down into the scudding clouds beneath us. Ethan was toppled over, but immediately springing to his feet, a trickle of blood running down his cheek, braced himself and stared.

I never saw on a mortal's face such a look of blank astonishment and chagrin. For a minute he could not speak. Then he found his tongue and uttered but a single word:

"Gosh a'mighty!"

In spite of the excitement I burst into a roar of laughter.

"Never mind, Ethan," I said. "You have finished the Chameleon."

And so, indeed, he had. Payton's famous flier was knocked all out of shape. I wondered how she kept aloft, as she could not get away and had manifestly fired her last shot. I ordered Eaton also to cease firing.

The last shot of the Chameleon's, which gave her her revenge on the gun that had put an end to her career, was fired, as we learned afterward, by Payton himself.

The victory was ours, although the Osprey was not in a much better condition than her conquered antagonist.

Suddenly, while I hesitated about my next step, a parachute dropped from the Chameleon.

"Good heaven, Allan!" cried the secretary, who had returned to my side after finding that Mr. Grayman's injury was trifling. "Payton is escaping. If he gets safe to the ground the fox will be in his hole again."

"He shall never get there!" I exclaimed, and at the words I seized the wheel, determined to swing the

THE COUNTY FAIR.

A thousand boyhood memories cluster around the county fair—the glorious autumnal weather, the joy of harvest, the strife for excellency, the greetings of friends, says the New York Mail.

But it is the simplicity of the fun that is most worthy of remark. In these days of costly show and spectacle, with theatres that are palaces and opera houses maintained by fabulous outlay, the inexpensive joys of the county fairs of the fathers are suggestive.

The more you think it over, just why you always wanted to go, planned to go, and returned perfectly satisfied, the more you cannot quite explain it. Was it not that the happiness was so simple, the being amused so easy because you let yourself be amused from the very start and was in no way critical? Critics are never happy.

No horse was like that colt which you raised, nor any other prize like the premium he brought you. The pride of life was in the ribbon under his pretty car. The colt knew you among a thousand men and whinnied his clarion call as you approached.

Indeed, it was as if you had yourself somehow crated the apples, the flowers, the lamb and the roosters which excelled. A conscious partnership with nature possessed you. Things had grown great at your command, you scarce knew how.

May the sun shine on every county fair these days. May the genial, proverbial good humor of an American crowd ring in the greetings of a prosperous people dwelling in a bountiful land.

A CRISIS IN RUSSIA.

The Russian premier is dead. The assassin's bullet was only too true to its mark.

In the death of Stolypin, Russia loses one of her greatest statesmen. He was conservative, progressively conservative. He believed that the opportune time for genuine constitutionalism in Russia was not the present.

He made many enemies. He made mistakes. Yet, even his bitterest opponents conceded his honesty of belief and purpose. He hated revolution and disorder. So severe was he in suppressing any outbreak against royal authority that the hangman's noose was often referred to as "Stolypin's necktie."

The assassination and death of the premier just at this time may mean much to the Russian empire. It was a Jew who aimed the bullet which killed the Russian statesman.

What the result of the assassination in the government itself will be is a matter of conjecture. It is claimed that another reactionary wave will result.

Russia seems to be facing another crisis. What the ultimate result will be no one knows. It is hoped that the future may be brighter than the past.

MURDER STATISTICS.

According to official statistics murder has shown an alarming increase during the ten years ending in 1909. Government figures show that the number of homicides in 1900 was more than quadrupled in 1909.

A correspondent for an eastern newspaper has secured from government sources an official tabulation of American homicides in what is called the registration area of the United States. This shows the murders in each succeeding year from 1900; 658, 709, 734, 834, 935, 1,540, 2,101, 3,003, ending with 2,854 in 1909.

The report shows a steady increase in murder in this country during the last ten years. It is said that the last two years show still further increase.

Considering these facts, we may well wonder wherein our criminal laws are deficient.

CHESS AND THE TARIFF.

Over in Carlsbad, Germany, they are pulling off an international chess tournament.

The other afternoon one of the players put his hand on his bishop's pawn at two o'clock. Two hours later, he removed the hand from the pawn seeing he was about to endanger its position.

American tariff reformers of the past two decades should be expert chess players.

The center of the population has been moved from a rattlesnake den near Bloomington, Ind., in the city limits. We hope it is carefully conserved and safeguarded.

An Ohio policeman was put in jail for abusing his horse, and when later he abused his wife he was simply put under bonds.

Genevieve writes to us to ask why so much is said about the Tammy machine, when you never see it on the street or at the automobile shows.

COPPER COUNTRY MAN DIES AT RED JACKET

Peter Sauer, the largest holder of Calumet & Hecla Mining company stock in the copper country, died Monday morning at his home on Fifth street, Red Jacket. He was seventy-three years of age and had been a resident of the copper country for fifty-five years.

Peter Sauer was an eccentric man. He was the proprietor of a little saloon on Fifth street, a saloon that was used principally as a travelingman's sample room for many years past. Mr. Sauer did not care to make his saloon follow the progress of general business and business places in the copper country and his saloon is very much the same today as it was when he opened it forty years ago.

It is not known just when Peter Sauer first obtained shares in the Calumet & Hecla, but it is known that for years he had been buying this costly property a little at a time. When Calumet & Hecla went to $1,000 a few years ago Peter Sauer was one of the few men who had the courage to buy it at that figure. He left 1,535 shares of the stock as the major portion of his estate, which includes other valuable mining stocks and considerable real estate.

Peter Sauer was born in Bavaria, near Coburg, Germany. At the age of seventeen he came to the United States and went to work in a shot factory. This employment did not agree with him and he moved his family to Hartford, Wis., where he remained only a few months. He then joined a brother, Fred Sauer, at Eagle river, reaching the copper country in 1856. He worked in the Cliff and Connecticut mines for a time and later was employed for thirteen years as a miner at the Quincy. He went into the saloon business in Hancock and was burned out in 1870. Then he went to Calumet, opened up a business and conducted it continuously until his death.

Mr. Sauer was married in New York in 1859 to Miss Mary Light. She died eight years ago and he had not enjoyed good health since that time. About ten days ago he went to Laurium general hospital for an operation. It failed to relieve him.

The deceased is survived by five children, the Misses Mina, Laura and Bertha, at home; Albert, at home, and another son, Dr. Fred Sauer, of Indiana Harbor, Ind. A brother, John, lives in Butte and sisters in Washington, D. C., and Raleigh, N. C.

The funeral will be held Thursday afternoon from the house Rev. Luther K. Long of the Calumet Congregational church in charge.

JUDGE GROSSCUP TO LEAVE BENCH

Chicago, Ill., Sept. 20.—After serving nineteen years as a member of the federal judiciary in the northern district of Illinois, Peter S. Grosscup, judge of the United States circuit court and a member of the United States court of appeals, yesterday announced his intention to retire to private life the first week in October. He will send his resignation to President Taft shortly after the meeting of the United States court of appeals, October 3.

A desire to enjoy more freedom as a citizen and resume the practice of law are given as reasons for his decision.

DUPONT POWDER CO. SUED FOR $5,000,000

Trenton, N. J., Sept. 20.—The Buckeye Powder company, which formerly manufactured powder at Peoria, Ill., Tuesday brought suit in the United States circuit court here for $5,000,000 damages against E. I. Dupont-De Nemours Powder company and a number of its subsidiary concerns which are familiarly referred to as the "powder trust."

The Buckeye company claims that its business has been injured by the practices of the so-called powder trust and places its actual damage at $1,119,957 and also asks for $500,000 punitive damages. Then, again, it asks that these damages be multiplied by three as authorized under the Sherman act.

The bill of particulars filed by the Buckeye company consists of twenty-seven typewritten pages and sets out in detail the circumstances under which it is claimed the buckeye company suffered as the result of the practices of the Dupont concern, which practices it is charged, were in direct violation of the Sherman anti-trust law.

FOLEY'S KIDNEY REMEDY (Liquid)

Is a great medicine proven value for both acute and chronic kidney and bladder ailments. It is especially recommended by elderly people for its wonderful tonic and reconstructive qualities, and the permanent relief and comfort it gives to them. For sale by all druggists.

GRAY HAIR MAKES YOU LOOK OLD

A Simple Remedy Brings Back the Natural Color—Dandruff Quickly Removed. How often one hears the expression, "She is gray and beginning to look old." It is true that gray hair usually denotes age and is always associated with age. You never hear one referred to as having gray hair and looking young.

The hair is generally the index of age. If your hair is gray, you can't blame your friends for referring to you as looking old. You can't retain a youthful appearance if you allow your hair to grow gray. Many persons of middle age jeopardize their future simply by allowing the gray hair to become manifest. If your hair has become faded or gray, try Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy, a preparation which a chemist by the name of Wyeth devised a few years ago. It is simple, inexpensive and practical, and will banish the gray hairs in a few days. It is also guaranteed to remove dandruff and promote the growth of the hair.

It is a pleasant dressing for the hair, and after using it a few days itching and dryness of the scalp entirely disappear. Don't neglect your hair. Start using Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur today, and you will be surprised at the quick results.

This preparation is offered to the public at fifty cents a bottle, and is recommended and sold by all druggists.

KIDNAPED TEACHER MARRIED RESCUER

Winnipeg, Manitoba, Sept. 20.—Eleanor Gladys Price, whose abduction and thirty hours of captivity in the woods last week resulted in a man hunt lasting several days and the subsequent arrest of Ed. Davis, alleged to be an escaped California convict, Monday was married to Frank Patterson, who led a posse to her rescue.

A Great Advantage to Working Men

J. A. Maple, 125 S. 7th St., Steubenville, O., says: "For years I suffered from weak kidneys and a severe bladder trouble. I learned of Foley's Kidney Pills and their wonderful cures so I began taking them and sure enough I had as good results as any I heard about. My backache left me and to one of my business, expressman, that alone is a great advantage. My kidney acted free and normal, and that saved me a lot of misery. It is now a pleasure to work where it used to be a misery. Foley's Kidney Pills have cured me and have my highest praise." For sale by all druggists.

MANITOWOC SECURES M. O. WATER PLANT

Manitowoc, Wis., Sept. 20.—Manitowoc's seven-year fight to secure municipal ownership of the water works plant, was ended at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon when a contract was signed by the mayor, representing the city, and the officers of the Manitowoc Water Works company for the transfer of the plant to the city on October 2, for a price of $247,500, which is $11,500 more than the valuation fixed by the state rate commission. The deal was consummated through negotiations which have been conducted for ten days and which Monday night appeared to have been broken off when the company made a demand for remission of the 1911 taxes assessed against its property and the city absolutely refused to concede this point.

DAYS OF DIZZINESS

Come to Hundreds of Escanaba People. There are days of dizziness; Spells of headache, languor, backache; Sometimes rheumatic pains; Often urinary disorders. And tell you plainly the kidneys are sick. Major League Notes

"Doc" White has become inoculated with the managerial fever. His burning ambition is to lead the senators. It's a natural desire, because the frail flinger calls Washington his town home.

There is a possibility of a change in the management of the Louisville club next season, as Del Howard is said to be slated to go and John McClockey is picked for the berth. Howard owns considerable stock in the organization which may have some bearing on the plans.

Frank Chance, the Peerless Leader, has sent a hurry call to Cedar Rapids for the Indian aviator, Slapnicka, the gent who won the pennant for Rockford, Ill., in the Wisconsin-Illinois league, and he will report at the earliest moment, possibly today.

Brick Owens yesterday forwarded his contract to President Lynch of the National league and next season he will judge plays in that circuit. Owens is acknowledge to be the best arbiter in the A. A.

Tom (Buck) O'Brien, the Denver pitcher, is making good with the Boston Red Sox.

Pitcher Halls of Cincinnati, formerly one of Louisville's star flingers, is pitching classy ball with Los Angeles.

A Boston writer suggests that the Red Sox slide into bases head foremost. Three have broken legs or ankles the other way.

St. Paul released Jack Flynn to Kansas City, though Flynn won the game the day he was transferred for the Saints. You see, Kansas City has half a chance for the pennant.

It has been several years since so close a race at the finish of the National league has been witnessed. In 1908 an additional game between New York and Chicago was necessary to decide the pennant winner.

With The Fighters

Battling Nelson, the former light weight champion of the world, hammered his way to victory in his bout with Billy Nixon of Cambridge at Boston last night, the referee stopping the fight in the tenth round of a scheduled twelve-round contest. For seven periods Nixon, blinded by the swings of the former champion, fought pluckily on and received a terrible battering. The Dane did the greater part of his damage in fighting.

Frank Mulhern, who is trying to transfer the McFarland-Wolgast bout to the coast, is finding 't a difficult matter, as the club which intended to stage the mill cannot go the October date.

Grover Hayes won a decision over Danny Goodman in an eight-round bout at Chattanooga last night. Hayes was unable to secure a knockout, but had the best of the fight throughout.

The feeling against the Johnson-Wells contest has gathered such force that it probably will be abandoned, or stopped by the government. The archbishop of Canterbury has written to the home office urging that action be taken to suppress the contest, and this has served as a focus for adverse opinion.

Jim Flynn, the Pueblo, Col. fireman who recently blasted the pugilistic aspirations of one Carl Morris, halled as a "white hope," will pay Fond du Lac a visit on Thursday. Flynn is going to visit Arthur Barrett, his former manager.

Tony Caponi, the Italian middleweight, is training with a ten-round bout with Sam Langford in view. Tony believes he can beat the negro over the short route and will leave for the east the latter part of the week to seek a match with the Boston fighter.

Jimmy Clabby of Milwaukee has closed negotiations to box Willie Lewis of New York twelve rounds at Boston on September 26. On September 30 Clabby will meet Mike Gibbons of St. Paul in a fifteen-round bout at Winnipeg.

GIANT'S SHORSTOP IS STAR

Arthur Fletcher, Secured by McGraw From Dallas, Tex., Develops into Brilliant Fielder.

Among the star shortstops in the National league this season there are few possessed of the brilliancy and grace of Arthur Fletcher, Johnny Mc-

Arthur Fletcher.

Graw's dashing inner worker. For Fletcher to depose men of the caliber of Devlin and Bridwell he had to go some, but there is no gainsaying that Fletcher has strengthened the Giants considerably. McGraw was willing to sacrifice anything for speed, and in Fletcher he has one of the fastest infielders in the National league circuit.

Fletcher is a natural infielder, if ever there was one, and the grace with which he fields his position has been a feature of New York's game since he went to short. He has frequently been compared to Larry Lagole as a fielder, in that he makes the most difficult plays with little effort.

Last season Arthur showed lots of promise in the field, but did not loom up particularly strong with the willow. He was well down in the list and batted only .324 in forty-four games. This season, however, Fletcher has been one of the most consistent clubbers in the McGraw ranks. He is now hitting .324, Chief Myers being the only Giant with a higher average. Among the National league regulars Fletcher stands fifth.

As a base runner Fletcher fits in well with the other speed boys who compose McGraw's team. He has stolen twelve bases, but has not taken part in near as many games as Devore, Snodgrass and the other men much higher up. In many of Fletcher's games he played only the last few innings, while in others he acted only as a pinch runner.

Fletcher was procured by the Giants in the spring of 1909 from the Dallas (Tex.) league club. The youngster made such a big impression on McGraw when the Giants were training in the Lone Star state that he was signed and brought north. Dallas was Fletcher's first professional engagement, but prior to that he played in a trolley league in St. Louis. He hails from Collinswood, Ill., which is across the river from the Mound City.

Feet Tired-- So Tired?

TIZ Makes Sick Feet Well No Matter What Ails Them.

TIZ acts at once and makes tired, aching, swollen feet remarkably fresh and sore proof.

It's the sure remedy, you know, for everything that gets the matter with your feet. It's for sore feet and for sweaty, bad-smelling feet, and for corns, callouses and bunions, too.

"For years I have been troubled with sore and tender feet; suffered intense pains. Have had the assistance of physicians without relief. I bought a box of TIZ, which worked a perfect cure, as it has with a great many of my friends. I would not be without it. All it requires is to be known to be universally used."—A. F. Dreutzer, Chicago.

TIZ is not a powder. Powders and other foot remedies clog up the pores. TIZ draws out all poisonous exudations which bring on soreness of the feet, and is the only remedy that does. TIZ cleans out every pore and glorifies the feet—your feet.

You'll never limp again or draw up your face in pain, and you'll forget about your corns, bunions and callouses. You'll feel like a new person.

TIZ is for sale at all druggists, 25 cents per box, or it will be sent you direct, if you wish, from Walter Luther Dodge & Co., Chicago, Ill.

ANSWER

One—the flat, sad, sickly looking one—was baked with poor baking powder; possibly the high-priced kind—possibly the cheap, big can kind. It denotes a lack of leavening gas, or an uneven distribution of same—or both. The other—the large, light, fluffy one—was prepared with Calumet Baking Powder, and denotes the never-failing, delicious baking that always results from its use.

Calumet does not cost as much as the high price baking powder, but it is very much superior in every way—it is purer—more reliable—more healthful. Here are the reasons:

All baking powders undergo a chemical change in the process of baking. You do not take it into the stomach in the same form as it is in the can. For example: When you use Cream of Tartar Baking Powder you get Rochelle Salts in your food, because the Cream of Tartar during this reaction turns into Rochelle Salts. This, as you know, is a drug, and should be taken only under doctor's orders.

Calumet is so carefully and scientifically prepared that the neutralization of the ingredients is absolutely perfect.

That it is absolutely pure and of highest quality is proven by the fact that

FALL OPENING ON [AT BIG STORE TODAY

Among the more formidable of the fall openings in Escanaba is the beginning today of the autumn showings in the Kratz Brothers large store on Ludington street. With decorations complete and enticing the interior of the store presents a pretty sight, its preparation requiring much effort. The show windows are adorned in the latest fall wear and are fully as consistent in beauty as the interior of the store. The management is prepared to extend every courtesy to customers, who are asked to step in and view the mammoth store.

LATHROP IN MIDST OF HARVEST SEASON

DANCE THERE IS FAILURE BECAUSE OF MAPLE RIDGE AFFAIR—OTHER ITEMS.

(Special Correspondence.)
Lathrop, Sept. 21.—Charles Haas of Escanaba, traveling for Cudaby Bros. Co., spent a few hours in town Saturday.

Mr. W. Fahay drove to Maple Ridge Sunday to witness a game of baseball between Maple Ridge and the Perkins Cubs.

Mrs. W. Bagley returned Saturday morning from Green Bay where she has spent a few weeks visiting friends. Mr. and Mrs. Bagley intend making their home here in the future.

The dance that was to have taken place here Saturday evening was a failure. A number of the dancers went to Maple Ridge to a party that evening. Henry, the three year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. F. Johnson was quite ill for a few days last week.

Mr. and Mrs. F. Deloria of Iron River and Mr. and Mrs. H. D. Gibbs of Perkins visited at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Delong Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Werville of Beaver and Mr. and Mrs. Breamer of Maple Ridge visited Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Fahay Sunday.

Mr. M. LeBresh of Perkins is here with his threshing machine doing fine work for the farmers in this vicinity.

Mrs. M. Wolf of Negaunee is visiting at the home of her parents Mr. and Mrs. T. Koski.

The new home of Nick Britz is almost completed being equipped with nearly every modern convenience.

Miss Mary Koski entertained a few friends at her home Tuesday afternoon in honor of her sister, Mrs. M. Wolf of Negaunee.

F. Johnson's new house is nearly finished and the family expects to move soon.

A number of Lathrop people are anticipating a trip to Perkins Oct. 4th to be present at the Parish Day exercises in that village.

TAFT TALKS ON TARIFF

per cent. The Wilson bill, passed in 1894, had reduced the duty to 50 per cent with no duty on the raw wool at all, a much more favorable arrangement to the manufacturers than in the present bill, and yet the years of the Wilson bill were years of disaster to woolen manufacturers. It may be that other causes than the tariff contributed to the failure of woolen mills in the time of the Wilson bill, and it may well be that conditions in the woolen business have changed so that it does not need as much protection as then; but I had no adequate information, and had been furnished none, upon which I could say that the bill presented to me was in accord with the Republican platform of protection upon which I was elected, and to which I am in honor bound to square my official act and policy. In the absence of such adequate information, and with the prospect of securing it in three months, it became my bounden duty to withhold my approval of the bill. What was the necessity for such great haste in passing the bill at an extra session called for another purpose?

Talks on Schedule K.
Schedule K had been in force so long and its percentages were so high in many respects that I had not hesitated in times past to say that it ought to be reduced, and to explain how it came not to be reduced in the Payne bill as it ought to have been. But it is one thing to know that a schedule of this sort is too high, and it is a very different thing in such a complicated schedule to know upon what items the reductions should be made and how great the reductions should be made and how great the reductions ought to be. If the principle to which I am committed, and to which the party is committed in the strong terms of the resolutions, which I have quoted above, was to be observed as a policy at all, here was the occasion for following it. If I had allowed the wool bill to become a law, the progress made would have been entirely lost and the policy cast to the winds.
