

Escanaba's New Gas Plant In Detail

SUFFRAGETTES TO ORGANIZE AT ONCE IN THIS CITY

MRS. GEORGE YOUNG IS LEADING SPIRIT IN THE PLAN FOR A SUFFRAGIST CAMPAIGN IN ESCANABA.

ENCOURAGED BY GOV. OSBORN.

She Has Been In Active Touch With Prominent Suffragettes in Lower Michigan Who Want Upper Part of State Organized by Counties and Townships—Expects to Secure a Loyal Following Here.

Men of Escanaba, BEWARE! The suffragette movement has at last struck this city. Votes for women will be the great watchword, and if Mrs. George Young who is one of the leading spirits in the local campaign which was launched here today for the first time, succeeds in enlisting the support of Escanaba women, it is declared that a large following of upper peninsula women may join hands in the movement.

Mrs. Young who has been in touch with prominent suffragettes in the lower part of the state said today that work to promote the cause would begin in the city at once. The fact that Governor Osborn has put himself on record as favoring votes for women, has had the effect of stirring the activities of the suffragettes of this state, according to Mrs. Young.

She proposes to organize a branch of the Michigan Equal Suffrage association. In discussing the matter Mrs. Young said:

"The plan of the Michigan Equal Suffrage association is to adopt methods of organization used by the political parties. It is proposed to organize by counties and by townships, by cities and by wards, with a county chairman in charge of the work in each township, and also a city chairman to conduct the fight in the cities through the ward and precinct committeemen. We do not find fault with what the men are doing, but many problems will never be solved until women have the ballot."

POLICE TO WATCH HIGH SCHOOL BOYS

COMPLAINTS MADE TODAY THAT THE STUDENTS USE THE PUBLIC FOR SNOWBALL TARGETS—LITTLE GIRL VICTIM.

Complaints were made to the police today that the boys attending the local high school have made it a daily practice to throw snowballs at persons on the street. Several little girls have been struck in the face with icy snowballs, and one of the victims it is said, narrowly escaped losing an eye after being hit with a snow ball thrown by a high school boy. Throwing snowballs at persons who are walking on the sidewalks is against the law, and Chief of Police Iverson said today that he would detail special officers to watch the boys hereafter. If they persist in attacking people who are not molesting them, the police will be compelled to arrest those who are guilty of this misconduct.

There is a city ordinance against this dangerous form of amusement, and this ordinance is to be enforced by the local authorities.

LOCAL MAN LEAVES ON EXTENDED TOUR

William E. Irwin, local agent of the New York Life Insurance company, has left for an extended trip that will include several of the "far countries." Leaving Escanaba he will go first to Mississippi and several of the southern states, working his way north again to New York, where he will take passage for Italy on December 8. After a stay of several weeks in Naples and some of the Italian cities he will cross over into Egypt and spend the winter on the upper reaches of the Nile. It has been Mr. Irwin's custom to spend his winters in the south or in Europe, returning to Escanaba in the early summer. Mr. Irwin some time ago received a communication from the New York Life company telling him that out of all its hundreds of salesmen he ranked 19 in the amount of insurance written.

BALLOON LANDS SAFELY.

(By Associated Press.) Indianapolis, Nov. 20.—The balloon Duesseidortier which rose from here late yesterday afternoon, is reported to have landed safely at Monroeville, Ind., 110 miles northeast of the city.

EIGHT HOURS FOR ALL POSTMASTERS

HEREAFTER POSTMASTER COBURN WILL HAVE TO CUT OUT LONG HOURS—NEW STAMP OUT DECEMBER 1.

Word has been received at the local postoffice that a new special registry stamp will be issued for use beginning December 1. It is light blue with the design of a spread eagle. For registry purposes it is possible to use the regular stamps, but it will be advisable to affix the special stamp instead, as there is less likelihood of it being overlooked, and with the letter or package marked "registered" this will call double attention to the fact. This also applies to special delivery letters from which the regular stamps may be used, but it is better to have the special delivery stamp instead.

Eight hours each day, Sundays excepted, postmasters will be required to devote to the duties of their lucrative positions, according to orders issued by the postoffice department and which becomes effective at once. Heretofore Postmaster Coburn has only worked about sixteen hours a day and the new ruling will be hard on him. When granted leave of absence the order shall not be in force, but at all times while in the home city and not on leave postmasters must be in their offices eight hours each day. During the last few months, inspectors have been going from office to office arranging work scheduled for the postmasters and employees.

How the Gas Is Made—Pictures of the Plant and History of the Plant

The new municipal gas plant about which so much has been said and written has at last been finished and now having stood every test that the experts deem essential, it has become part of the economic scheme of the city. The plant was designed by W. J. Corkindale, of Ishpeming, who also served as consulting engineer for the city while the plant was in the able hands of F. W. Freese, of Ft. Wayne, Indiana, the contractor whose work crystallized the plans of the designer into a perfect, efficient machine.

When the new plant was started for the first time on Thursday afternoon, every part performed its function perfectly and there was not the slightest hitch or delay from any of the unforeseen flaws and oversights that are so often discovered when any new mechanism is given its initial run. Designer and contractor had both done their work with such thoroughness that when put to the test it rang true.

Although the plant is a modern one in every particular it can not in any way be considered an experiment, but is a system that has been all worked out in every detail and one that has always given complete satisfaction wherever used.

Carbonated Water Gas.
The new gas works is a complete set of apparatus for producing a combination water and oil gas, known as carbonated water gas, the product being produced by the decomposition by heat, of steam and oil. The purified product, as it enters the city mains, is a gas of good quality, having very little tar or other solid impurities to cause smother and the clogging of burners, and burns with a clear, bright flame, producing a soft, penetrating light equivalent to 22 candle power, and giving the intense heat of 600 B. T. U. when used in a properly designed burner.

Board of Public Works may be Proud of Outcome—City will be Benefitted Greatly—What the New Plant is and What may be Expected of It—Everyone Should Read this Article.

Buildings Well Constructed.

The mechanism of the plant is all installed in a new building of brick construction throughout, 50x50 feet and 28 feet high, having concrete floors and foundation. The roof is an inch and three quarter matched lumber, steel braced and covered with a seven ply composition roofing. All of the generating apparatus is installed in one large main room while the station meter and purifying boxes each occupy separate smaller rooms.

When the layman visits the plant he is courteously shown three large iron cylinders, placed on end all connected together, which to him seem to be very much alike, but he is told that the first is the generator, the middle one the carbureter, and the last, the superheater. This is the business part of the works for it is these large cylinders that the gas is produced.

All the operating is done from the main floor. The generator is filled to about two-thirds of its capacity with coke, which is hoisted up by steam power and fed in at the top of the shell. The carbureter and superheater are both filled with fire brick checkerboard, that is, stacked in such a way that they present the greatest possible amount of surface. The bed of fuel in the generator is ignited and produces an intense heat.

When the valve connecting the generator with the carbureter is opened, the hot blast from the fuel bed passes down through the carbureter and up through the superheater, heating the first brick as it goes and passes out of the stack. When the brick has become sufficiently heated, the stack valve is closed and live steam, produced in an 80-horse power boiler, is turned in at the bottom of the generator where it passes directly through the bed of burning coke and the great heat causes a chemical decomposition of the water of the steam into hydrogen and carbon monoxide, or what is technically known as blue gas.

This blue gas, upon reaching the second of the shells, the carbureter comes in contact with oil, previously heated, which is injected into the top of the shell by a small pump. The heat within the shell at once vaporizes the oil and it combines with the blue gas in a chemical union that is permanent. Steam is run into the generator and gas is produced for about four minutes, after which the brick work becomes so cool that the chemical actions do not take place. The steam is then shut off and the stack valve opened for three or four minutes until the hot blast has again heated the brick work in the carbureter and superheater. Gas is thus made in "runs" of several minutes each with corresponding waits while the brick reheats. The capacity of this outfit is 175,000 cubic feet of gas per day.

Leaving the superheater, the gas which is now called a carbonated-water gas, enters and passes through the scrubber, which is a steel shell, smaller than the others, in which there are a number of trays filled with coke and wood shavings, with water dripping down upon them. Practically all of the tar and other solid impurities are extracted from the gas here and are collected in a tar tank, 26x36 feet, constructed of concrete and having a concrete top. The gas next passes

PRES. SANTO DOMINGO KILLED.

(By Associated Press.) Washington, Nov. 20.—It is reported here today that President C. A. Ceres of Santo Domingo was fatally wounded yesterday in San Domingo city.

ENGINEER COTTON HAS BEEN RETIRED

AFTER FORTY-SEVEN YEARS OF SERVICE ENGINEER WILL PASS THE REST OF HIS LIFE IN EASE ON PENSION.

Charles A. Cotton, who has been in the employ of the Chicago & Northwestern Railway company for the past forty-seven years, and who is well known to many of the company's employes on this end of the Peninsula division, has been retired by the company under the pension system. Mr. Cotton, whose home is at Green Bay, has served the company as engineer for forty-seven years. He was a fireman prior to being advanced to the position of runner.

Mr. Cotton entered the service of the Northwestern company on Sept. 1, 1865, and at that time was at work on the Wisconsin division of the system. In those days the fuel used on the engines was cord wood. Two years later, or in the spring of 1867, he was promoted to be an engineer. In July he took a "run" on the Iowa division of the system, and at other times during his long career he was employed on the Kenosha and Rockford, Galena, Wisconsin and Lake Shore divisions.

Mr. Cotton has the distinction of having been the first engineer to take a passenger train out of Green Bay north. After the completion of the extension of the Northwestern line from Green Bay to Marinette and Menominee Mr. Cotton was "called" to take out the train carrying the officials of the road over the new extension on a tour of inspection.

PRESS ASSOCIATION PLANS FOR CHICAGO MEETING COMPLETED

A THEATRE PARTY WILL BE GIVEN BY THE TYPE FOUNDERS AND THERE WILL BE SOME GOOD SPEAKERS.

SHERMAN HOUSE HEADQUARTERS

Phil. J. McKenna Will Assist Chicago's Mayor in Making it Pleasant for the Editor From Northern Michigan—Many Editors Who Can Spare the Time Will Be There on Time.

Hon. Patrick O'Brien of Iron River, secretary of the Lake Superior Press Association, has returned from Chicago, where he has been making arrangements for the visit of the newspaper men to the Land Show. He has secured some eminent men to address the Press association in Chicago, including W. J. Hartman, president of the Ben Franklin Club; B. B. Herbert of the "National Printer and Journalist"; C. H. Norris, of the J. W. Butler company, and Theodore E. Quinby, Mayor Harrison, Phil McKenna and other prominent men will also contribute to the entertainment.

The Chicago type founders are making up a theatre party for the newspaper men. Mr. O'Brien feels sure that the occasion affords the members of the Lake Superior Press association the opportunity of having the time of their lives.

Cards were issued some time ago by Mr. O'Brien to the members of the association, urging them to join the trip to Chicago. The replies have not been as prompt as Mr. O'Brien hoped for, and the newspaper men are urged to communicate with him at once. The headquarters of the Lake Superior Press association in Chicago, Dec. 4 and 5, will be at the Sherman House.

GAS RANGES TO BE DEMONSTRATED HERE

M. Dougherty and Ed. Erickson returned yesterday from a four day trip to Chicago and Detroit, where they went, as a committee of the board of public works to inspect various makes of gas ranges and pick out one or more makes to recommend to the board for their acceptance. Mr. Dougherty said today that they had selected four makes of stove, and that when the board of public works had decided upon the one that most appealed to them that a couple of demonstrators, with a number of the most popular models of their range, would come here and give the ladies of Escanaba a chance to see the stoves in full operation, and have them select the one that they prefer for use in their homes.

At Harry Paul's bowling alleys on Ludington street local devotees of bowling have been practicing every evening and getting themselves into fine shape for future meets with crack amateur bowlers of this and other cities in Delta county. The local boys it is said are going to "make good" when they are scheduled to play for bowling honors in the near future. The local bowling league that was recently organized at Harry Paul's has been adding new members since the league was launched, and it is expected that the Escanaba bowling aggregation will prove itself one of the cleverest in this section of the country.

through the condenser, a shell filled with little tubes like an old fashioned flue boiler, but in this case the flues serve as coolers instead of heaters and the gas is chilled and contracts in volume. All the functions of the generative mechanism is now complete and the gas goes to the old holder which formed a part of the original gas works system. This old tank is used as a temporary storage and to furnish a uniform pressure to facilitate the work of the purifying apparatus.

Coming back from the temporary holder to the purifying part of the outfit, the gas first passes through the ammonia washer, a steel cylinder containing 64 small pipes in which the gas passes through water and has the ammonia and some other chemical impurities "washed" out of it. Leaving the washer, the gas then enters the purifying boxes.

There are two purifying boxes, of steel construction, 12 feet in diameter and 5 feet deep, in each of which, is placed 400 bushels of iron "sponge," an iron oxide resembling rusty lathe cuttings. This material is very porous and the gas, under a light pressure, passes through it, and in doing so, loses its sulphur and impurities. These two purifying boxes are supported on I beams about 8 feet above the floor and have a chain hoist rigged above them, by means of which the tops are raised whenever it becomes necessary to replace the saturated "sponge" with a fresh batch. There is a chute in the bottom of each box which can be opened, allowing the material to fall to the floor below where it can be treated and made fit for use again. There is sufficient of this material on hand so that one batch can be curing while another is in use. A complicated valve connects the two boxes and permits of the use of either side on top or bottom.

When the gas has left the purifying boxes, its manufacture is complete and it is then passed through the station meter which registers every foot of gas produced, and goes on to the holder.

The new holder, two large steel tanks, the lower one without a top and the upper one with a top and sides but no bottom, somewhat on the idea of a tin can turned upside down in a pair of water. The lower and larger tank is filled with water and the upper tank, the holder proper, when empty, sinks or telescopes into the larger one until its top rests on the water surface. The gas is admitted through two pipes which rise through the water and project just above the surface.

The gas enters between the water and the top of the upper tank and creates a pressure. With the constant addition of gas, the pressure increases and becomes so great that the heavy steel holder is forced up out of the larger tank and is kept straight as it rises by a guide frame. In a holder of this kind, the pressure of gas in the city mains is constant, regardless of the amount of gas in storage, the pressure being at all times just equivalent to the weight of the upper shell.

The present capacity of the holder is 50,000 cubic feet, but when the consumption of gas increases sufficiently at some future time, another outer section can be installed in the tank and its capacity doubled.

Work Has Been Rushed.
Mr. Freese started his work of building the plant on the third of August, this year and except at one time when the job was held up for three weeks because of the mis-shipment of a carload of material, the work progressed smoothly and suffered few of the setbacks that are so often experienced in construction work.

Mr. Freese has been in the gas business in every department, builder operator and owner, since 1885 when he made his debut by unloading coal from a car into the coal shed. He did his first contracting work in 1887 and since that time his rise in his line has been rapid. The coal heaving episode is now a long way off and he can look back over the years and point proudly to a vast amount of work well done. In our own state, in recent years he has constructed complete plants at Albion, Cadillac, Cheboygan and Hastings. This present plant is the first he has built in the upper peninsula. In Indiana he has left three large monuments to his name in the form of modern gas plants at Laporte, Bloomington and Rochester. He owns an extensive interest in the Laporte works and is manager and purchasing agent of the Rochester plant.

Other Big Jobs.
The famous moving of the million foot holder from 40th and Langley streets to 110th street and Torrance avenue, in Chicago was this man's work as well as the million foot holder at Los Angeles, California, the largest holder west of Chicago. In addition to these big undertakings, several scores of small plants, holders of all sizes, pipe lines and many other jobs, both large and small, are scattered over the country, bearing testimony of the ability and industry of one of the unheralded soldiers of fortune who do their work in silence and go their way, leaving the world better for their having lived in it.

Mr. Freese Likes Escanaba.
When interviewed at the plant he had just finished for Escanaba, Mr. Freese said that he had greatly enjoyed his stay in the city and that he had found his work among its citizens very congenial. In speaking of the plant he said: "The plans as drawn by W. J. McCorkindale were so perfect in detail that I had not the slightest trouble in producing from them a model gas works system. Mr. McCorkindale is one of the best men in his line that this country has produced and he and I worked together in perfect harmony. It is very pleasant to find a man of his calibre, who knows his work so well and who, in his capacity of consulting engineer for the city will collaborate with the contractor and assist him in so many ways by amicably discussing the work in hand, instead of making his life a burden to him with constant bickering and arrogant display of authority, as is so often the case.

The Gas Expert.
Another man whose work has helped greatly in giving Escanaba a modern gas works is Mart Newman, sent here by the Western Gas Construction company of Fort Wayne, Ind., who furnished the water gas set. Mr. Newman came to Escanaba about a month ago and has had direct charge of the erection of the gas producing apparatus. He is an expert in gas manufacture and will stay in the city until he can train a local man to take charge of the operation of the technical end of the gas production.

JOHN HENRY'S ATTEMPT TO DISRUPT THE UNION.

By A. W. MACY.

The Embargo Act, which was enacted shortly before the outbreak of the war of 1812, was very unpopular in New England, as it interfered greatly with the commerce of that section. Sir James Craig, governor of Canada, employed one John Henry, an Irishman by birth but a naturalized American citizen, to go to Boston and ascertain whether the discontent was sufficient to make it probable that New England would care to sever its connection with the Union and line up with Canada. Henry remained in Boston three months, but as no pay for his expenses and services was forthcoming, he went to Washington and offered his documents for sale to the government authorities. The President allowed him $50,000 out of the secret service fund, and sent him to France in the employ of the government. When the documents were laid before congress they made a great sensation. England claimed however that Craig had acted entirely on his own responsibility, and the excitement soon died away.

Wrong Interpretation.

A city official tells of a conversation he and a Spanish maiden had when he was a sergeant, with troops stationed on the island of Porto Rico. "The senorita," said the official, "had become infatuated with a certain soldier named Harry, and she had learned his name. One morning she approached me and asked: "'Where Harry?' " "He was asleep, and I laid my head on my hand and closed my eyes to tell the girl. She misunderstood the signs and, with a cry, pointed to heaven. I shook my head and pointed down. The senorita raised her hands in silent supplication. Later Harry was seen on guard, and the girl looked at me reproachfully."—Indianapolis News.

Don't need the invitation.

A somewhat striking story dealing with the now obsolete conventional suicide, harakiri, or "happy dispatch," once common in Japan, was once told by the French Admiral Gourdon. When he was a young man he had a comrade who, having assisted in the organizing of the Japanese navy, was subsequently raised to the rank of admiral in that force. He took the part of the tycoon against the mikado in the revolutionary war and, having been captured, was tried by court martial and sentenced to death, which in those days implied harakiri. When, however, the fatal sword was presented to him he flatly refused to kill himself and declared that if he was to die somebody else must kill him. Threats and entreaties alike proved unavailing. He resolutely refused. The whole of Japan was scandalized at such immoral behavior, which, however, saved his life. The Japanese penal code had never contemplated such a contingency as a man inhuman enough to refuse the harakiri, and in the end he was banished from the country and returned to France.

GRANDMOTHERS USED SAGE TEA

To Darken the Hair and Restore Gray and Faded Hair to its Natural Color.

It is easier to preserve the color of the hair than to restore it, although it is possible to do both. Our grandmothers understood the secret. They made a "sage tea," and their dark, glossy hair long after middle life was due to this fact. Our mothers have gray hairs before they are fifty, but they are beginning to appreciate the wisdom of our grandmothers in using "sage tea" for their hair and are fast following suit.

The present generation has the advantage of the past in that it can get a ready-to-use preparation called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy. As a scalp tonic and color restorer this preparation is vastly superior to the ordinary "sage tea" made by our grandmothers.

This remedy is sold under guarantee that the money will be refunded if it fails to do exactly as represented.

If your hair is losing color or coming out, start using Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur today, and see what a change it will make in a few days' time.

This preparation is offered to the public at fifty cents a bottle, and is recommended and sold by all druggists.

INVESTIGATION TO CLOSE.

Lorimer Investigation to be Adjourned Until Dec. 5.

(By Associated Press.) Chicago, Nov. 18.—The investigation in the Lorimer case will close here next Wednesday and taken to Washington where the committee will reconvene on December 5th. Emanuel Abrams, Democratic legislator, today admitted that he had discussed the election of Lorimer with "Bath Room Bob" Wilson, George Alschuler and others, but nobody asked him to vote for Lorimer. Abrams said he would have voted for him even if he were the only Democrat to do so.

BALL PLAYERS IN SESSION.

(By Associated Press.)

San Antonio, Nov. 18.—At today's session of the National association of base ball leagues, the American association and the Eastern and Pacific Coast leagues won their fight for the special "AA" classification. The Western, Three-I and Mink leagues voted against it.

CHAPTER II.

After that bitter disappointment his interest in his personal appearance dwindled to the negligible. In a black temper with himself (whom alone he blamed for the deception to which he had fallen too facile a victim) he searched blindly for a fresh tie, found it somehow, and knotted it round his collar in the most haphazard fashion imaginable. Then he shrugged a dress coat upon his shoulders and marched forth to dine.

In this humor he propelled himself with determination into the public restaurant of the establishment, and, oblivious to the allure of many pairs of bright eyes that brightened all too readily to challenge his, insisted upon a table all to himself, and dined in solitary grandeur, comporting himself openly as a morose and misunderstood person, and to his waiter with a manner so near rude that the latter began almost to respect him.

After some time he was disgusted to discover that he felt better. An impulse toward analysis led him to probe the psychology of the change, with the result that he laid the blame for it at the door—or the neck—of a half-bottle of excellent burgundy. So he ordered another, and, resolutely dismissing from his mind the woman who had no right whatever to be able to sing a certain song the way she had, set his wits to work on the riddle of Tomorrow.

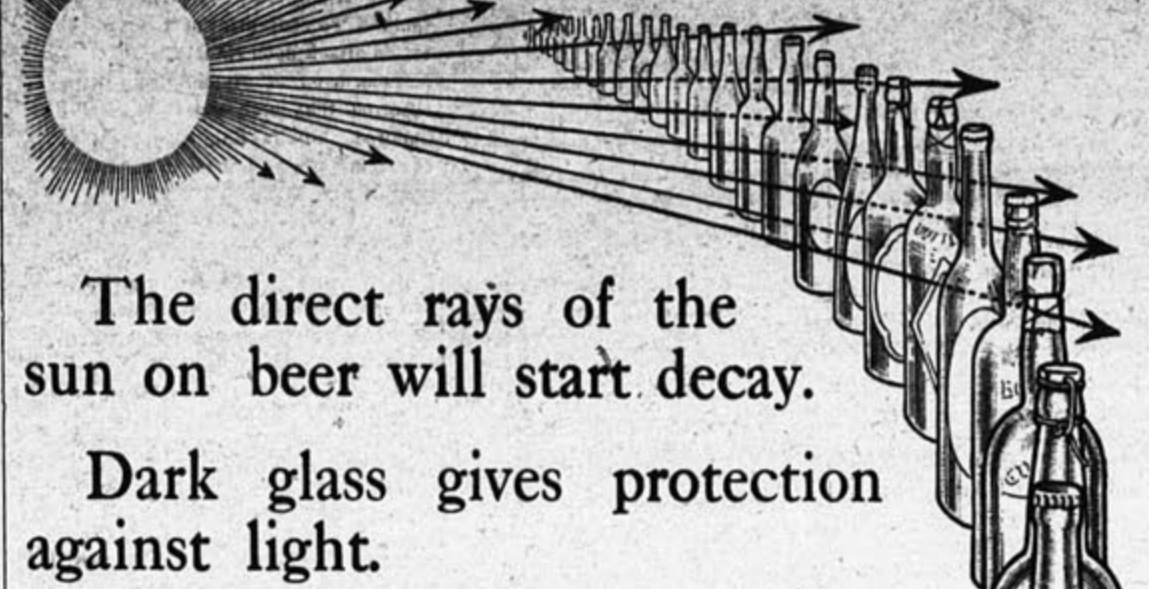

To a man whose trade was fighting, the world just then was a most distressful place, too peaceful entirely. Over his coffee the adventurer nodded in despair and frowned in disgust; then rousing, he summoned the waiter and paid his reckoning with a secret grin at himself, a fifty-franc note and a gesture which splendidly obliterated altogether every trace of suspicion that he intended to take back any part of the change due him.

Trimming and lighting a cigar, he reviewed the restaurant with a listless eye which discovered no one of his acquaintance; therefore, with neither haste nor waste of time, he rose and betook himself to the Casino—that is, to the one place where one may feel certain of encountering, sooner or later, everybody who is anybody within the bounds of the principality.

This night, more particularly than on any preceding it, now that he had made up his mind to seek betterment of his fortunes elsewhere, he played heedlessly, little concerned with the fate of what money he had about him. He had set aside a reserve fund sufficient to settle his hotel bill and carry him a considerable distance into the unknown which he was resolved to beard, and was resigned to lose the remainder. It was a tenet of his creed of fatalism that chance seldom favored him when he had money in his pockets; the tide of his affairs must be at its lowest ebb ere it turned. His policy then was obviously childishly plain: he must fling to the winds all that which he had.

Now never was there a man who played to lose who didn't win his point. Colonel O'Rourke's case can be cited as no exception to this rule. Elbow to elbow on one side with an artless old lady from Terre Haute, who risked her minimums with the ferocious jealousy of a miser making an unsecured loan, on the other with an intent little Austrian gambler absorbed in the workings of his "system," with a fresh red face marred by hallmarks of dissipation; British, every inch of him.

"That, I'm thinking," mused O'Rourke, "will be the Honorable Bertie Glynn. Faith, he looks the part, at least; 'tis just that kind—bored, underbred, without brains or real stamina—that would run through a half-million sterling inside a year."

But the other?

"Monsieur," the little Austrian stammered excitedly in his ear, "for you the red had doubled a fourth time."

"Thank ye," replied O'Rourke without moving. "Twill turn up seven, this run."

The system-gambler subsided, petrified.

But the other? O'Rourke continued to probe his memory. Something in the man's personality was curiously reminiscent. . . . Of a sudden he remembered. The Frenchman had been pointed out to him, years ago, in Paris, as a principal in a Boulevard scandal which had terminated in a duel—a real duel, in which he had been victorious. He was accustomed to anticipate such an outcome of his affair of honor, however; that was why he had been named to O'Rourke; Des Trebes (that was the name; the Visconte des Trebes) was a duelist of international repute.

"Monsieur," the agitated voice fluttered in his ear, "you have won yet again—for the sixth time!"

"Let it stand for the seventh, mon ami."

Why should Des Trebes be watching him so openly, so pointedly? As he watched he became aware that these two, the Frenchman and the Englishman, were not alone; detached though their attitude was, they were evidently of a party of ladies and gentlemen whose gay, chattering group formed their background.

"Monsieur, the seventh turn!"

"Yes, yes."

"Rein ne va plus," croaked the croupier.

One of the ladies turned to speak to the Honorable Mr. Glynn. Smiling, he nodded, and offered her an arm. She lingered, addressing Des Trebes. The latter bowed, lifted his shoulders and laughed lightly, plainly excusing himself. A general movement took place in the party; it began to disintegrate, men and women pairing off, all moving at leisure toward the lobby. Des Trebes alone remained. O'Rourke could see that the personnel of the gathering was largely British. He recognized Lady Pinnimmon, whose yacht he had heard casually had arrived in the harbor that morning. Evidently this was her party. Another woman's figure caught his attention; her back was turned, but she had sat up, a graceful set of the shoulders, an individual pride and spirit in the poise of her head, that O'Rourke could have sworn he knew. He was conscious that he flushed suddenly, that his heart was pounding. He made as if to rise and follow, but was prevented, almost forced back by a hand which the Austrian in his feverish interest had unconsciously placed on the Irishman's shoulder.

"Monsieur, monsieur!" he gasped, his eyes protruding, fixed upon the wheel. Beads of sweat glistened on his forehead. He trembled as though his own fortunes hung on the change.

Impressed, O'Rourke could not forbear to linger, to cast a reluctant glance at the table.

The size of his pile of gold and notes on the red was a somewhat startling sight to him. His breath stopped in his throat. The ivory sphere was rattling over the compartments to its predestined place. What, if he were to win? O'Rourke began to calculate mentally how much he had, at stake, how much he might win if his careless prediction that red would turn up the seventh time should come true—lose his bearings in a maze of intricate computation, and was on the point of abandoning the problem when black was called.

"Great God!" parted the Austrian, withdrawing his hand.

O'Rourke rose. "The fortunes of war, my friend," said he with a laugh so unforced that it sounded unnatural. He strode away hastily, searching the throng in the lobby for her with whom his mind was occupied to the exclusion of all else.

The system-gambler followed him with a stare of incredulous amazement. "What a man!" said he to himself, if half aloud. A second later he added: "What a remarkable acting!"

But he was mistaken. There was nothing assumed in O'Rourke's air of apathy. He was actually quite indifferent and already preoccupied with his new interest—the pursuit of the woman whose unexpected appearance in Monte Carlo seemed likely to upset all his calculations. The saff of his life long been trimmed to the winds of Chance; he was accustomed to seeing them fall flat and snapping, empty, just when a venture seemed most propitious. The loss of the money was nothing; the initial amount had been little enough in all conscience, though the major part of all that he possessed; but to him the woman was everything—the world and all.

And now she was gone, had disappeared with her companions! In that instant in which he had turned from her to the table, she had made her escape.

He cursed roundly the weakness that had lost her to him, and passing rapidly through the lobby, left the Casino, pausing before the entrance to look right and left.

There was no sign of what he sought; the party had vanished. And who should say whither?

"Damnation!" he grumbled.

"Monsieur," a voice intruded at his side.

"He turned with a start, annoyed. "Well!" he demanded curtly, recognising Des Trebes.

The Frenchman bowed. "I have the honor to address Monsieur le Colonel O'Rourke?"

Reflecting that the man might afford him the information he sought, O'Rourke unbent. "I am he, Monsieur des Trebes."

Surprised, the latter lifted his eyebrows, showing even white teeth in a deprecatory smile. "You know me, monsieur?"

"By sight and reputation only, monsieur."

"I am honored."

"No more than myself, if it comes to that."

The viconte laughed. "Then I may presume to ask the favor of a word with you?"

"Are ye not having it, monsieur?"

"True. . . . But in private?"

"One moment. Ye can do me a favor, if ye will. Afterwards—"

"I am charmed."

"'Tis not much I'll be asking ye—merely a question or two. Now that gentleman ye were talking with awhile back: isn't he the Honorable Bertie Glynn?"

"The same, monsieur."

"And the lady who spoke to him—"

"Madame Smyth-Herriott, I believe; I know her only slightly."

"Then ye are not of their party?"

"Party? Des Trebes appeared perplexed. "What party?"

"Why, Lady Pinnimmon's, of course."

"I have not the honor of that lady's acquaintance, monsieur."

"Oh, ye have not! But Mr. Glynn?"

"Is here with me, monsieur—a flying trip. We ran down from Paris but yesterday. Our meeting with Madame Smyth-Herriott was quite accidental!"

SEEING AMERICA.

Our own continent is well worth seeing and the great army of American travelers who overflow Europe every year ought to make themselves acquainted with this side of the Atlantic as well as the other. The popularity of ocean voyaging will account in part for the Transatlantic trend of American travel and the opening of the Panama Canal will start a large quota of it in other directions. The whole Pacific Coast up to Alaska, the islands of the Pacific and the coast of South America will be brought into the fashion and become the objective point of tourists. In addition to the change which the canal will make in the direction, quantity and character of trade, the breaking down of the wall of division between the two oceans will start a stream of tourist travel through the Panama Canal to the many points of interest and attraction on the hemisphere within reach of steamship transportation. See Europe by all means, but see America, too, and see it well. It is a great and interesting country, as well as a big one, and should be studied and made familiar. Americans appreciate this more and more every year and home travel steadily increases. It is inevitable that the opening of the Panama Canal and the World's Fair to celebrate that event in California will give it a new impetus.

Emotions are not morals, nor invariably genuine evidence of morals. The persons who feel the deepest are not always the ones to dissolve their sympathy through their eyes. Public manifestation does not make private sorrow or solicitude, neither does private sorrow or solicitude, always wait upon that emphasis. It is quite likely that men of real probity sit through the performance that made the criminals weep without turning an eyelid. Emotion, Webster says, is the excited action of some inward susceptibility or feeling. The sympathy that cannot be stirred with excitement is often not worth stirring. The natures that are really profound and dependable in emergencies are those that are kept well in hand under restraint and not those that run amuck every time the soft pedal is turned on. Tears lose their effect with overmuch facility, but when they come from sober eyes they mean something. There is nothing weak or unmanly in genuine emotions, but of themselves emotions are not necessarily indicative of strength, morality or otherwise.

There can be little doubt that there are too many books written and published, if not read. But there is the widest diversity of tastes for which to make provision. In literature, as nowhere else, one man's meat is another's poison. It would be the most difficult thing in the world for a censorious committee to determine what books shall live and which must die. The law of the survival of the fittest among printed volumes must take its own course, unaided and unhampered. The centuries themselves constitute the unerring final arbiter.

Geologists are claiming that the greatest underground river in the world flows from the Rocky mountains underneath New Mexico and Texas, emptying itself in the Gulf of Mexico. This river is thought to be in places several miles wide, and it is believed that it feeds rivers that flow upon the surface. The artesian well belt of Texas is pointed to as the uplifting of the water from this river, often from eight hundred feet below.

DAY'S EVENTS IN CHINA.

Fighting Occurs at Hankow, Many are Killed—Important Prisoner.

Tientsin, Nov. 18.—The American minister today peremptorily ordered all the Americans in the interior to take refuge at once at the nearest port and be in readiness to embark in case it became necessary. Reports from Amoy say that foreign consuls have assumed charge of the customs and postoffice.

Chin Kiang, Nov. 18.—The revolutionists are concentrating their forces for an attack upon Nanking. Fighting has occurred at Hankow and it is reported that both sides lost three hundred. Admiral Sah, commander of the Chinese navy is said to be a prisoner at Kuh Kiang.

Novel Necktie. An oddity in neckwear that can easily be copied at home is made of inch wide velvet ribbon brought round the base of the collar and held in front over the crossed ends by a beaded slide. The ends, which are cut square across, are finished with beaded fringe to match.

THEATRICAL

THE PETERSON—Stock company theatrical managers, whose experience with the various tastes of the public leads them to form definite conclusions as to the popularity of certain plays, have a general maxim that is universal. When they want to please their audiences most with a dramatic offering, they present "East Lynne". When they want to make these same audiences laugh loudest and longest, they put on "The Private Secretary." This condition prevails in exactly the same manner in England where Mr. C. J. Bancroft, the celebrated comedian, has played to crowded houses in "The Private Secretary" for over 2,000 performances. Surrounded by capable company, Mr. Bancroft is making a tour of America and meeting with the greatest enthusiasm in the role of the Rev. Robert Spaulding, pronounced by the great majority of theatregoers as the funniest character ever presented on the stage. Mr. Bancroft is bringing his big production to the Peterson Opera House on Tuesday evening, Nov. 21.

THE BIJOU—The Bijou will present a splendid bill to the theatre public of Escanaba the coming week. This theatre being one of the largest and best houses in the city, is coming to the front with a line of vaudeville that meets with the approval of the large audiences which gather nightly. For the fore part of this week, Nov. 20, 21, 22, Manager Frechette presents the Jurvis Comedy Variety Circus of trained dogs and monkeys. The human intelligence of these educated animals is marvelous and shows the tedious work of long and constant training. The way these super-human animals respond to the words of their master will no doubt be appreciated by the audience. The last part of the week the boards will be held by Maggie Leclair, The Irish comedienne of metropolitan reputation. She will no doubt delight her audience with the Irish brogue which she carries out to perfection through her witty sayings and songs. Max Dillae and Beth Geyer in their little playlet the "Fairy Picnic" will also be one of the features of latter part of the week and will be awaited with much interest. New and excellent motion pictures will be shown.

GARRICK—Another excellent program opens for the first part of the week at the Garrick tonight consisting of four feature acts, among them being such people as Rose & Ellis world's greatest barrel jumpers. Their act is one that will cause you to sit up and take notice, being such a feature as the theatre goers of this city have never had an opportunity of seeing on a local stage. Special stage settings accompany this big act. Knotts & Lawrence, the fashion plates of vaudeville are heralded to be wonders and will in all probability be the best yet put over at the Garrick in their line. Jack Hub and Miss Alys Le Mar will constitute the strongest bill yet presented at this popular play house, and a record breaking business is assured.

THE GRAND—The Grand will open tonight with five of the greatest acts that have ever been presented to an Escanaba audience. Manager Tolan has had the preparation of this bill in hand for several weeks and now announces that everything is in readiness to open the big show. The "Elite Five," a troop of five artists appear in a one act farce comedy, "Boots," a clean, clever little one-act skit that should interest everybody. Grant and McNally, present one of the feature acts, a number of heavy juggling "stunts." Ray Sample is a whirlwind dancer and the booking office asserts that she is about the best in her line in the country. Roy and Bessie Lindsey sing, talk and dance in a very entertaining manner, and Riggs and Ganby, a mixed team, give a comedy act. The pictures are the best that have been released this week.

Needed a Sea Turn.

Captain Lane had retired from active pursuit of his beloved calling and had turned his attention to town affairs. Having succeeded in rounding the citizens to the need of a drinking fountain and also to the need of two coats of paint on the town hall, Captain Lane felt himself a valued and important person.

One day he was asked by a sojourner in the town to give his opinion of the present administration. "It's pretty fair," said the captain slowly. "Of course there's things that could be different and would be better so, but on the whole 'tis pretty fair. But now I'll tell ye—I'm speaking from experience, you understand—things at the seat of government won't be run as they could be run till the people of this country make up their minds to stop confiding their votes to landlubbers!"—Youth's Companion

WOMEN HAVE MORE SYMPATHY THAN MEN

FOR THAT REASON POOR COMMISSIONER THINKS LOCAL WOMEN OF LEISURE SHOULD DO CHARITABLE WORK.

"Women should engage in charitable work because they are more sympathetic than men," said City Poor Commissioner Blanchet this morning in urging the need for the presence of more women in local charitable and philanthropic work. Backing up the view he took a few days ago, and which was published in The Mirror, the commissioner said that there are many women here who have considerable leisure time which they might use to noble advantage in visiting poor families, and looking after worthy cases of distress. He pointed out that in Chicago there were a great many women who devoted a part of their leisure time to assist needy families. Why should not Escanaba have a few charitable clubs composed of women? There is a field for it here according to the poor commissioner. This city is growing every year in population, and the existence of such clubs would be an indication of the civic progressiveness of Escanaba. These charitable clubs it is said could co-operate with the poor commissioner's office and in this way prove of great value to the community.

LINDQUIST'S COUSIN IS STILL MISSING

THE BELIEF THAT HE WAS DROWNED IN BAY IS GAINING STRENGTH—AT FIRST THOUGHT

TO BE IN MILWAUKEE.

John Rader, cousin of Arthur Lindquist who disappeared a week ago when it was reported that he was on his way across the bay to visit the confessed murderer of Alvin Fogarty, has not yet been found. It was said by the police today that he might possibly be in Milwaukee, but no word has been received from that city confirmed such a belief. If he is alive and was not drowned in the bay in the heavy sea of last week when a woman, Mrs. Londerville reports that she saw a lone figure in a flat row boat disappear from sight, it is peculiar that he does not communicate the fact, that he is not missing. That is the view the local police take. If he was drowned, it is said that this fact might only come to light after the elapse of weeks, as bodies have been known to remain beneath the water for weeks before coming to the surface.

The Martinet.

"The martinet never succeeds. A typical martinet was the well known one who, having ordered his men to change their shirts and then, having learned that they had no shirts to change, said in that event they must change shirts with each other. I heard yesterday of still another type of martinet."

The speaker was an old West Pointer, says the Washington Star. It continued:

"This chap, a captain, strode up to one of his men and said, with a fearful frown:

"Who's the idiot that ordered you to leave that mess of empty meat cans right here in front of headquarters?"

"It was the colonel, sir," the man replied.

"Very well then," said the captain sharply. "Let it stay there. And your leave's stopped for a week, my man, for calling your colonel an idiot."

SOCIETY IS BUSY WITH PREPARATION

The Ladies Aid society of the First Presbyterian church were very busy today with their preparatory work for the big sale and supper which is to take place next Thursday evening, November 23, in the basement of that church.

The committee on fancy work has been working hard to get everything in readiness for the sale. They made the statement today that they had a large display of fancy work and other articles which will make fine Christmas gifts. Also comforters, aprons and dressed dolls, and in fact the finest stock that has ever been presented to the public by this society. Every effort will be made to make the booth attractive. The articles will be sold at most reasonable prices. The Turkey Supper will be served at six o'clock. It is expected that the ladies will have a liberal patronage, as this society is a popular one in this city.

CURIOUS BITS OF HISTORY

HOW KING HENRY IV. FOOLED THE LAWYERS.

By A. W. MACY.
The sixth parliament of Henry IV. of England met at Coventry in 1404. It was called the Unlearned Parliament by some, and the Illiterate Parliament by others; while by others still it was disrespectfully dubbed the Parliament of Dunces. The reason for this was that it contained no lawyers. There had been much complaint that lawyers were in the habit of securing seats in parliament, not for the public good, but to further the interests of their clients and incidentally feather their own nests. Henry himself said that members often spent more time on private suits than on public business. Availing himself of an ordinance passed under Edward III., he stipulated in the writs that no lawyers should be returned. He had the parliament meet in Coventry, so as not to be near the courts. Notwithstanding it contained no lawyers, and although it was called by derisive names as noted, it seems to have been as good as the average, and to have done some sensible things. Strange to say, though obsolete long ago, the ordinance excluding lawyers was not repealed till 1871.

GRAND OPENS UNDER A NEW MANAGEMENT

A great revolution has taken place in the theatrical business in Escanaba. The great competition of the local theaters has driven first one play house and then another to add new and better features to their shows until the theater-going public of Escanaba has been trained to expect nothing but the best and most spectacular acts that the managers can secure.

The newest development in the fight for supremacy is the move made this week by James Tolan, owner of the Grand theater, when he secured the services of Jack Amick, who has been with the Garrick.

The Grand, as previously announced, has arranged to produce musical comedies with a stock company of twelve people, all artists in their lines, next week. This week, while preparations for the big opening are under way, the popular little play house will run five of the best acts that have ever been shown on a local stage. The Grand will give its first performance tonight under Jack Amick's management.

(By Associated Press.)

London, Nov. 20.—England's support of France in the Moroccan trouble may lead to serious trouble with Germany and it is alleged that an open breach may occur at any time.
