

WHY DID JOHN RADER LEAVE?

AN EMPLOYEE OF THE I. STEPHENSON COMPANY SAYS RADER DISAPPEARED AFTER READING MURDERER'S CONFESSION.

Arthur Lindquist, Confessed Murderer of Alvin Fogarty Says He Thinks Rader, His Cousin, is Working in Milwaukee—Locating of Rader by Police May Throw Light on Case.

According to an employee of the I. Stephenson Lumber company, John Rader, missing cousin of Arthur Lindquist was employed in one of the firm's lumber camps previous to the Lindquist confession of guilt in the Fogarty murder case.

In a statement made by this employee to a reporter for The Mirror today, it is alleged that following the murderer's confession, a copy of The Mirror containing the murderer's confession, was read in the lumber camp by Rader, who it is said appeared to grow nervous after he had finished the article concerning his cousin's acknowledgment of guilt.

The next day the report of his disappearance was given out. It is alleged that he left the camp hurriedly without waiting to receive his time, which it is said amounted to 13 days. The money is still unclaimed according to Rader's fellow employees at the camp. He has been missing over a month.

The question arises. Why did Rader leave the lumber camp so suddenly after learning of the disposition of the case against Arthur Lindquist? It is claimed that he may have known something of the facts or circumstances surrounding the death of Fogarty, and fearing that he would be apprehended by the police, decided that it would be wise to make for parts unknown. It is pointed out that if he was not drowned in the bay as has been thought possible, it is exceedingly strange that he does not come to claim his wages.

At the jail today Arthur Lindquist said he believes that his cousin is at present working in Milwaukee. "How do you know?" he was asked. "Well, that's what I am told by some of his friends who know him," he replied.

FLYING TIMBER BREAKS MAN'S LEG

Victor Carlson, an employe in the I. Stephenson company lumber mill at Wells, was severely injured in an accident which occurred in the mill today. While at his work, an accident happened to the machinery and a large plank that was being put through the cutting process, was forcibly thrown through the air and struck Carlson, breaking his leg, just below the hip. He was taken to his home and his injuries attended to at once. The broken leg will be set in a plaster cast and there is no doubt that it can be saved.

WORKING TO IMPROVE YANTIC

Engineer Who is Overhauling the Ship Declares She Will Make Much Faster Time On the Next Cruise.

Tests applied to the wireless equipment aboard the U. S. S. Yantic have proved it to be one of the very strongest on the lakes. In answer to a message sent to the Calumet station recently, the reply came back that the sound came in like blows struck by a hammer, which confirms the statement given out by Engineer O'Neill, who is overhauling the Yantic's machinery and who superintended the installation of the wireless equipment. A message recently sent from the Yantic to Buffalo reached the latter city in less than three hours, the transmission from one station to another including a relay over a telegraph line. Mr. O'Neill says this shows the practicability of using wireless on the lakes.

"BOOK DAY" DRAWS MUCH ATTENTION

HOLIDAY BOOKS ON DISPLAY AT THE LIBRARY RECEIVED MUCH ATTENTION FROM THE LOCAL BOOK LOVERS.

"Book day" at the Escanaba Public library, which opened this afternoon is proving very popular among the people here, the room in which the new books are being displayed, being crowded during the greater part of the afternoon. Several hundred new books have been put on exhibition in the large room in the basement, formerly used for the art exhibition. The display of books is very tastefully arranged and the room beautifully decorated with the appropriate flowers of the season. Among the volumes in the exhibit are to be found works on a great diversity of subjects, but attention has been paid more closely to works of all kinds that are suitable for children, especially the ones that will make the most suitable offerings in the way of holiday gifts for the little folks. Fairy stories and picture books make up a large part of the collection and anybody who is thinking of presenting a child with a book on Christmas will be sure to find something very appropriate among the volumes that have been laid out for inspection at the library.

The display of books will be open to the public this evening and tomorrow and evening. With the closing of the exhibit, the books will all be placed on the shelves with the regular collection and put into general circulation.

SHAME CAUSED SUICIDE.

Japanese Railroad Official Destroyed Himself After Failure.

(By Associated Press.) Victoria, B. C., Dec. 8.—Mall advices from Japan today state that Mōji Shimidzu, a train superintendent on one of the Japanese railways, committed suicide by throwing himself under a train. The cause of his violent act was that a delay to trains had caused the Imperial Emperor of Japan to spend an hour in the public waiting room of a station. Shimidzu left a letter in which he said that he felt that it was his duty to give his life as a forfeit for having caused this embarrassment. The emperor was very much distressed when he heard of the incident.

The advance sale of seats has been large and quite a number of people are expected to come down from Gladstone with the team to see the game. HUNTERS TO ATTEND MEETING

Escanaba Will be Represented at Meeting of Sportsmen Who Seek to Better the Present Game Laws.

With a view to discussing the existing game laws, and to make plans toward securing necessary revision, a meeting of the Upper Peninsula Sportsmen's association has been called to be held in Marquette on Tuesday, Dec. 12.

Escanaba will be represented at the meeting by E. C. Voght and possibly by several of the prominent sportsmen of the city, who give much thought and effort to securing wise and proper game supervision for upper Michigan.

The meeting will be held in the city hall and it is anticipated that most of the game organizations in the upper peninsula will have representatives in attendance.

Upper Peninsula sportsmen are of one opinion that the present game laws of Michigan are sadly in need of revision. At a meeting of the U. P. Sportsmen's association held here a year ago plans to bring about changes were discussed, but no results followed. It is now proposed to go ahead with the work, and at next Tuesday's meeting the various laws

ODD FELLOWS ARE AT ODDS

APPOINTMENT OF GRAND SECRETARY CAUSES DISSENSION AMONG MANY PROMINENT MEMBERS OF ORDER.

FOUR MEN ARE NOMINATED.

Special Session. Is Called. of Grand Lodge in Order to Postpone the Election—Petitions Asking for a Special Meeting, it is Said are Being Circulated in Various Cities.

Fred A. Rodgers, of Reading has been appointed grand secretary of the Michigan I. O. O. F. by Grand Master Frank R. Hamburger to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Grand Secretary H. N. Wilder.

This announcement, says a Lansing dispatch, does not meet with the approval of many of the prominent members of the order throughout the state, and the appointment of Rodgers may result in a special session of the grand lodge in order to make further nominations for the office of grand secretary. Petitions asking for a special session, it is said, are being circulated in Detroit, Grand Rapids, Saginaw and other cities.

At the recent grand lodge session at Saginaw, four nominations were made for the office of grand secretary, the list including H. N. Wilder, Fred A. Rodgers of Reading, I. R. Reynolds of Ann Arbor and G. I. Hallock of Grand Rapids.

These candidates were to be voted upon in June by the subordinate lodges throughout the state, and the reasons given for calling a special session of the grand lodge is to postpone the election in order to place in nomination other candidates because of the removal by death of Grand Secretary Wilder as a candidate and also that the appointment of Mr. Rodgers at this time will give him an undue advantage over the other candidates.

If a special session of the grand lodge is called, it is believed that the vacancy will be filled by that body until the next regular grand lodge session, when the numerous candidates for the position will all be placed on an equal footing.

Charles F. Ganschow of Saginaw has many friends urging his nomination, and the friends of other members including those of Charles F. Haight of Lansing, past deputy grand secretary are urging them to become candidates.

EDUCATORS WILL ADDRESS TEACHERS

A teachers institute has been planned for Escanaba and will be held here on December 12. Many of the teachers in the local schools will attend and listen to addresses by two very prominent educators, who have arranged to come here for this occasion. L. L. Wright, of Lansing, superintendent of public instruction for the state of Michigan, and L. D. Harvey, formerly state superintendent of schools in Wisconsin, both bear reputations as being among the foremost educators of this section and their talks should prove of great interest to teachers.

GARRICK—The talk of the Escanaba theater goes in "How can Manager Barrett put on such a big show for ten cents and all first class stars in his or her line." Too much praise cannot be given to Manager Barrett for putting on first-class, clean moral, shows he runs at the Garrick.

PETERSON—"The Girl and The Tramp," which comes to the Peterson Sunday, Dec. 10, is from the pen of Carlos Inskeep. The scene of the first act is laid in the New York suburbs, showing the residence of Banker Merton and wife, comfortably and happily situated. It shows how people living in ease and luxury can be brought to poverty by the cunning schemes and manipulation of the bank-books by a villain like Phillip Redman. During this first act of the play, a tramp, Happy Jack by name, comes to the Merton home and asks for food, which he is given. Phillip Redman sees the tramp and sets a trap to get him in his power, which he succeeds in doing. They then return to the Merton home, the tramp disguised as a detective. They start to place Mr. Merton under arrest when the girl whom Mrs. Merton has adopted, puts in her appearance and concocts a scheme whereby Mr. Merton makes his escape.

ARRESTED MAN FOR POT HUNTING DEER

MAN ARRESTED NEAR KATES HAS HIDES OF 18 DEER IN HIS POSSESSION—CHARGED WITH UNLAWFUL HUNTING.

Deputy Game Warden Herman Leisner went into the woods near Kates yesterday and arrested Jesse Bollinger who is charged with being a "put hunter" and killing deer for the hooves and hides. It is alleged that Bollinger has killed scores of deer, both in and out of season and when arrested he was found to have the hides of quite a number of deer in his possession, both in red and brown coats, proving that some of the deer had been killed long before the season opened. There were a total of 18 hides and it is believed that nearly all were taken during the summer and very early fall. Bollinger confessed that he manufactured novelties of one kind or another from the hooves and hides of the animals and made a fairly good living selling them to hunters and the men in the nearby lumber camps. Game Warden Leisner brought his prisoner to Escanaba last night, where he was held until this morning and taken to Negaunee, where he was arraigned in court. This appears to be the worst case of "pot hunting" that has been discovered for several years.

At 4 o'clock this afternoon, a game will be played between the freshman and sophomore classes and followed by another between the junior and senior classes. The best men in each class have been picked for the respective teams and contests are expected. The final game of the afternoon will be played between winners of the other two games and the result will be the awarding of the school championship.

The Pool of Flame

CHAPTER XX.

O'Rourke's first fears were for the woman, his first words a lie designed to reassure her.

"What—what does it mean?" she gasped faintly, her face as white as marble, her eyes wide and terrified.

"Sure, I'm thinking 'tis nothing at all," he answered readily, with a smile amending, "nothing of any great consequence, that is to say. Permit me to escort ye to your cabin."

"I'm not afraid," Mrs. Pryne interjected.

"Faith, I see that, madam. But your maid, now—? Would it not be well to return to your stateroom and quiet her, whilst I'm ascertaining the cause of this trouble? I promise to advise ye instantly, whether there's danger or not."

"You're very thoughtful," she returned. "I'm sure you're right. Thank you."

He escorted her to her stateroom and left her at the door, remarking its number and renewing his pledge to return in ten minutes—more speedily if possible. He was back in five, with a long face.

Mrs. Pryne answered instantly his double-knocked summons and, stepping out quickly, closed the door tight. In the fraction of a second that it was wide, however, O'Rourke saw one side of the stateroom warm and bright with electric light, and sitting there, Cecile the maid, completely dressed, wide awake and vigilant. The girl was French and sullenly handsome after her kind. O'Rourke got an impression of a resolute chin and resolute eyes under level brows; and he did not in the least doubt that she was quite prepared to make good and effectual use of the revolver which she held pointed directly at the opening.

Why? From her mistress' pose, too—one arm rigid at her side, the hand concealed in the folds of her gown—O'Rourke divined that she was alert, armed, on her guard no less than the maid. But she left him no time to puzzle over the mystery.

"Well!" she demanded breathlessly. "Tis as I thought, Mrs. Pryne. A cylinder-head has blown off and done no end of damage. We're crippled, if in no danger. The other crew will take us far as Aden, but there we'll have to wait for the next boat."

Mrs. Pryne's face clouded with dismay. "How long—a day or two?" she demanded.

"Mayhap," he replied, no less disconsolate; "mayhap, as much as a week. Faith, 'tis meself that would it were otherwise, but I fear there's no mending matters."

She regarded him thoughtfully for an instant.

"Then you, too, travel in haste, colonel?"

"Indeed I do so, madam. Me for—ture hangs upon me haste. If I get there"—he checked himself in time, the word Rangoon upon his lips—"too late, 'twill be all up. I'm heavy with an urgent enterprise, madam." And he smiled.

The woman looked past him, down the dusk of the gangway, apparently pondering her dilemma. "What will you do?" she inquired at length.

"Faith," he said, disturbed, "that's hard to say."

She flashed him an ironic look. "You mean you are resigned to the inevitable?"

"Be the powers!" he cried in resentment. "I'm resigned to nothing that doesn't please me. Is it that ye ask me aid? Sure, if ye do, neither the inevitable nor the impossible shall keep ye from arriving at Bombay, and on time!"

Her spirit, through her eyes, answered his in a flash. Then cooling, she looked him over from crown to toe, weighing him deliberately in the balance of her knowledge of men. He bore the inspection with equanimity, quite sure of himself, as was natural in the O'Rourke. Provoked, put on his mettle, he felt himself invincible, and showed it in every line of his pose. She could not have wavered long; indeed, her decision was quite manifest. Impulsively she caught his two hands in her own.

"Yes," she cried, "I do believe you! Take ye at your word—your generous word, Colonel O'Rourke! I will trust implicitly in you. You shall get me to Bombay by the fifteenth."

"The fifteenth?" he echoed thoughtfully. "This is the tenth."

"The Panjab is scheduled to arrive on the fifteenth. All my plans depend upon there being no delays."

"Five days! . . . It shall be managed, Mrs. Pryne. Bombay by the fifteenth it shall be, or the O'Rourke will have broken his heart!"

She grew thoughtful. "You are very good—I've told you that. I believe that you will accomplish what you promise. Yet it seems hardly fair to saddle you with my cares, my perils, without informing you of their nature—"

"Madam, 'tis not the O'Rourke who would ever be prying into your secrets. Let's not complicate a simple situation with explanations."

"But, colonel, there is one thing more." He paused. "It is a question," she continued, "of chartering a ship at Aden, is it not?"

"I see no other way."

"Then—spare no expense, Colonel O'Rourke. Remember that I foot the bill."

"But—"

"Or, if you insist, sir, I pay nothing: Great Britain pays for both of us."

"Eh? Yes?" he stammered.

"But see, colonel."

He had before then noted indifferently that she wore a chain of thin, fine gold about her neck, its termination—presumably a locket of some sort—hidden in the folds of her corsage. Now she quietly pulled this forth, and displayed her pendant, a little trinket of gold, a running greyhound exquisitely modeled.

Stunned, he stared first at the top, then at the woman. "Ye mean to say—?" he whispered, doubting.

"On the King's service, Colonel O'Rourke!"

"A King's courier, madam? You—a woman!"

"And why not?" she demanded proudly. "The King's messengers dare many dangers, it's true. But in some of them might not a woman serve better than a man?"

"True enough. Yet 'tis unprecedented—at least, ye'll admit, most unusual. I begin to understand. That lascar, for instance—?"

"Believe me, Colonel O'Rourke, I'm at liberty to tell you nothing."

"Tell me this, at least: would ye know him if ye saw him again?"

"Truthfully," she said, looking him in the eye, "I would not. I will say one other word: I had anticipated his attack, although I had never seen him

Lurching drunkenly into the harbor known locally as Aden Back Bay, the Panjab came to anchor. O'Rourke, from the lower grating of the steamship's accommodation ladder, signaled to one of the swarm of hovering dinghys, and waiting for it to come in, reviewed the anchored shipping, gathered transiently together in that spot from the four corners of the earth, and shook his head despondently.

A yellow-haired Somali boatman shot his little craft in to the grating. O'Rourke dropped upon the stern-seat and took the tiller. "Post Office pier," he said curtly. The dinghy shot away with dipping, dripping oars, while the Irishman continued to search among the vessels for anything that seemed to promise the speed necessary for his purpose, and failed to discover one.

"'Tis hopeless," he conceded bitterly as the boat wove a serpentine wake in and out among the heaving bulks.

"And, I'm thinking, 'tis the O'Rourke who will presently be slinking back to confess he bragged beyond his powers. The fool that ye are, Terence, with your big words and your fine promises, all empty as your purse! 'Tis out of patience I am with ye entirely!"

Doubtless he made the very picture of unhappiness.

So, at least, seemed to think a man lounging in a dilapidated canvas deck-chair beneath a dirty awning in the stern of a distant tramp steamer; who, raking the shoreward-bound with a pair of rusty binoculars, had chanced to focus upon O'Rourke.

HANCOCK WANTS CONVENTION.

Effort is Being Made to Secure Next State Meeting of Eagles.

Hancock, Mich., Dec. 8.—A proposition to endeavor to secure the holding of next year's state convention of the Fraternal Aerie of Eagles was discussed at a big meeting of the Hancock aerie held last evening. At the state convention held last summer at Alpena the matter of designating a place for the 1912 convention was left open and Hancock, being one of the largest aeries of the state and the biggest in the upper peninsula, hopes to be able to land it.

FIRE IN BATTLE CREEK.

Explosion in Restaurant Starts a Disastrous Fire in the City.

(By Associated Press.) Battle Creek, Dec. 7.—An explosion in a restaurant adjoining the gas plant, started a disastrous fire here today that for a time threatened the business section of the city. The flames were controlled in two hours, after two large three-story buildings had been destroyed and nearby property damaged. The amount of the loss has not been stated.

Adrian, Mich.—Former Congressman Henry C. Smith, aged 55 years, died today of pneumonia.

WHY SHOPPING SHOULD BE DONE EARLY

What the Escanaba High School Students Say About it—Many Good Reasons.

"Do Your Christmas Shopping Early," is the cry of the merchants.

Why do they say this? It is because they wish to impress upon the minds of people the value of shopping early.

One reason for shopping early lies in the fact that the early shoppers have a better assortment of gifts to choose from. Things have not been handled and soiled at all. Another great reason for shopping early is the help you give to the clerk.

Near Christmas much more work is thrust upon them because people will not shop early. These clerks must work from early morn until late at night in order that the late shoppers may be given proper attention.

The people of our city should think about this and thus lighten the burdens of a clerk.

Again, the men who work in the woods are unable to come home until the day before Christmas. They will want to buy a few gifts even if they are not very expensive.

Then I say to the people of Escanaba do your shopping early and when the men come give them a chance in the stores.

Another reason for shopping early is in the fact that a number of late shoppers, when the time comes for distributing gifts, find they have no gift for such and such a person.

These people are placed in an embarrassing position, whereas if they had done their shopping early, they could have bought more gifts.

Now if the people would follow these thoughts and practice them Christmas would be merrier.

Edward Smith

Many people have had the habit of waiting till about a week or so before Christmas to do their shopping and usually they neglect all other things, then and hustle and scuffle in all way to get down town at about the eleventh hour to purchase perhaps twenty to thirty presents in about an hour and on leaving the house have no more an idea what they are going to purchase or the amount than perhaps some child.

This is in every way wrong in my idea of it. In the first place, for instance one can not be too fast in the choosing of presents, because the present must first fit the receiver. What a terrible mistake it would be if you by mistake purchased a pink necktie for a widower or a blue muffler for a widow. I tell you it often happens.

Once I heard of a lady sending her son at college a blue hair ribbon, a pair of dancing slippers and fancy handkerchiefs and then sending her daughter a pair of hockeys and a dozen of men's handkerchiefs and many other articles. Of course you can imagine the disappointment of the receivers and the sorrow on the part of the mother this sad mistake. But still people insist on waiting until the last moment for everything to be purchased thinking perhaps that they will be cheaper and else more of an assortment. In which they make a great mistake for neither things are so. I think it is better to have all presents ready a week or so before Christmas and enjoy the last week than to think Christmas is an imposition just because you have been neglectful and thoughtless.

Ruby Connelly

There are two main reasons why people should shop early. One reason is the merchants' and clerks' convenience. The other is for the convenience of the Christmas shoppers.

By purchasing gifts early, we have a much better selection; the goods are in better condition, and it enables the purchaser to give more thought and care. The clerks also are not so tired and hurried and the purchaser is not so tired from the Christmas rush.

Many times the tired shoppers buy things and upon inspection they are found not to be what they wanted; also gifts are bought and later found inappropriate. The other things taken into consideration are the tired and rushed clerks. Many people begin to do their Christmas shopping just a few days before Christmas.

These people do not get the desired article after an endless search the tired but patient clerk, the article is not to be found and the late purchaser disgusted and tired perhaps doesn't even thank the clerk for her search.

The merchants also are losers to a certain extent when the shoppers do not buy early enough. If they bought earlier the merchant would have a much better chance to display his Christmas stock. While if the people purchased earlier the merchant could display their Christmas goods earlier also.

Are We Making, Madam, a Million-Dollar Mistake?

When we select our wheat—
When we wash, brush and scour it—
When we pass it through 20 grindings—
When we sift it 10 times through silk.

No doubt this is adding a million dollars per year to the necessary cost of our milling.

Is it our mistake?
Or is it your mistake when you fail to get it—when you fail to specify Gold Medal Flour?

Think what this means:
Gold Medal Flour now far outsells any other flour that's milled.
It feeds 24,000,000 folks daily.
Just because housewives—millions of them—have found that Gold Medal excels all other flours.

CURIOUS BITS OF HISTORY

STRANGE DYING REQUEST OF TWO KINGS.

By A. W. MACY.

Edward I, king of England, and Robert Bruce, king of Scotland, were deadly enemies, and faced each other on many a hard fought battlefield; and strangely enough each left a dying request that after death his heart should be removed from his body and buried in the Holy Land. But in neither case was the request carried out. Edward's son disobeyed his father's command, and buried his body in Westminster Abbey, the heart with it. Bruce's friend, Sir James Douglas, attempted to carry out his instructions. The heart was removed from the body, embalmed, and inclosed in a silver case. This Sir James suspended from his neck and started for the Holy Land. Unfortunately he stopped in Spain to assist in a war against the Moors, and was slain in battle. His body was found, the locket recovered, and the heart returned to Scotland and buried at Melrose Abbey. Had their instructions been carried out the hearts of these two inveterate enemies might possibly have reposed side by side in the same sepulchre.

"What's the matter?" asked a policeman.

"I've met the meanest man," he answered. "I've heard of him, and I've never expected to meet him face to face."

"Where is he?"

"Up in that building."

"How do you know he's the meanest man?"

"By the way he acted. I showed him this work of art, lectured on it for half an hour, pointed out the engravings, and when I hinted it would be a good thing to order what do you think he said?"

"I don't know."

"He said he never bought books, he didn't have to. He just waited for some idiot of an agent to come along and tell him all that was in 'em and turn over the leaves while he looked at the pictures. Nice, isn't it?"—Frothworth Herald.

LEE'S IDEA OF A GENTLEMAN

Lee hated parade, display and ceremony, hated above all things being made an object of public gaze and adulation, declares a writer in the Atlantic. His idea of high position was high responsibility; a superior was simply one who had larger duties, and the mark of a gentleman was a keen sense of the feelings and susceptibilities of others.

No one has ever expressed this attitude more delicately than he himself in a memorandum found among his papers after his death.

"The forbearing use of power does not only form a touchstone, but the manner in which an individual enjoys certain advantages over others is a test of a true gentleman.

"The power which the strong have over the weak, the magistrate over the citizen, the employer over the employed, the educated over the uneducated, the experienced over the confiding, even the clever over the silly—the forbearing or inoffensive use of all this power or authority or a total abstinence from it when the case admits it will show the gentleman in a plain light.

"The gentleman does not needlessly and unnecessarily remind an offender of a wrong he may have committed against him. He cannot only forgive, he can forget; and he strives for that nobleness of self and mildness of character which impart sufficient strength to let the past be the past. A true man of honor feels humbled himself when he cannot help humbling others."

UP TO THE FREEZING POINT

Ample Cause Why Miss Oldgirl Should Heave a Sigh on Awakening From Dream.

The shimmering moonlight silvered the placid water. The tinkle of a banjo down in the cabin floated up the companionway and spread itself around the deck. The girl leaned against the rail. The captain was first.

"Miss Oldgirl," he said softly, "from the first minute you decorated this ship with your charming presence, I have worshiped you. Yes, worshiped. Worshipped. As an old sea dog, the word ought to have 'ship' in it somewhere. Will you go halves with me for the rest of this earthly cruise?"

The girl was just about to answer when the first mate appeared. "Hear me before you promise," he begged. "If you don't make me the happiest man on earth I will jump overboard and stick out my tongue at the life boat. Say, yes; ah, yes!"

Softly, though. The second mate is approaching. "Hear me, ere you decide," he besought. "I love you so much it's a shame. Nobody did. Nobody could. Won't you?"

With a start the girl awoke and rubbed her eyes with two knuckles and a sigh. It was her thirty-second birthday, and thirty-two is freezing point.

Cossack and Saint.

A Paris contemporary by way of illustration as to how some persons discharge their religious obligations relates a story of a Cossack who was overtaken by a terrible storm of thunder and lightning. In his terror he prayed to the saint to save him and promised if only he once more reached his home he would sell his horse and the proceeds should be spent in candles in honor of the Saint. The saint, pleased with so generous an offer, stayed the storm and the Cossack reached home in safety.

This is how he discharged his vow: The next day he went to the market with a cock and a horse. His method of sale was this: He would only sell the two together, the horse at 30 kopecks (about 15 pence) and the cock at 200 rubles (about $20). After a time the Cossack found a purchaser on these terms and faithful to his vow the Cossack devoted 15 pence to the purchase of candles for the altar of his patron saint.

His Sign Said So.

The doorkeeper declined to admit the family with two tickets only. "But all these are my children," said the man.

"Of course," said the doorkeeper; "but some of them are too old to be admitted free."

"Too old? What's that to do with it? Don't it say on your bills that children under 12 are admitted free with parents?"

"Yes." "Well, I've only got 11 children, and if 11 children aren't under 12 I'm beat."—Everybody's Weekly.

Summer Parties

"No," said the girl who had been two months at a summer resort. "I can't say that I feel rested. You see, I had to work so hard dodging parties!"

"When I first settled down at Cumagen Woods I thought I had a breathing space ahead of me. Every woman and girl there said things like this: 'Isn't it perfectly heavenly to get out of doors and be close to nature and drop all the rush and worry and social doings that one has to suffer in town?' Then some one would answer: 'Perfectly grand! I am so-o-o tired of it all!'"

"Aha!" I said to myself. "I have found the place I have long been seeking." And I was innocent enough to believe that I had.

"Then in about a week I observed that Mrs. Fink next door was moody and restless. Finally she burst out with her troubles. She said she had decided that she ought to give a party because she hadn't done so for two seasons, and was indebted to all the old residents. She said it was such hot weather that she just dreaded it, but it had to be done and she might as well get it over.

"So she walked two miles up and down the lake front inviting people, and it was so hot that when she got home the family had to put her to bed and keep ice on her head all night and the doctor's bill was about ten dollars. Mrs. Fink then used up two days in driving about cajoling farmers into promising to deliver lettuce and parsley and chickens and things for her salad and another whole day in making the salad.

"She nearly had nervous prostration over the lettuce because, as she said, the farmers didn't care whether they did as they said they would. They regarded the desire for lettuce merely as one of the silly vagaries of the summer residents and she knew if the lettuce farmer took it into his head to go on a picnic or drive to town that day he'd do it, and then what should she do with forty women coming?"

"We were all so worried over Mrs. Fink's lettuce that we distractedly walked the porch the morning of the party, and when we saw the lettuce farmer really drive up we just cheered out loud in our relief! He didn't bring the nice, crimped, curly kind that she had ordered.

"It was about 110 degrees in the shade that afternoon, and if you walked by any house in the place you could hear mutterings and grumbings from the unhappy women within who were trying to curl their hair and get into their party clothes. All of them were wondering what Mrs. Fink wanted to give a party for, anyway, and wasn't it horrid having to go? The perspiration rolled off Mrs. Fink's face as she told her guests how glad she was to see them and then everybody sat and crocheted and mopped her face and ate three times more than was digestible and said what a beautiful time she had had and then rushed home to get into a kimono and to feel thankful that it was over.

"Then Sally Casey arrived one day and asked me to an afternoon bridge party. The weather was perfectly ideal, the kind that makes you want to run bareheaded through the woods and shout because you're alive. But we sat all that glorious afternoon in doors quarrelling over cards and I was sick two days from the stuff I ate, and a woman who didn't get the prize said that the woman who did cheated.

"By that time every woman in the place caught the entertaining fever. There were invitations out for nearly every afternoon and evening, because every one was afraid that if she didn't give a party she wouldn't be asked to the others, and, of course, no matter how much you hate to go you nearly die if you don't get the chance to go. Nobody had any time to do anything but whitewash her shoes and press out her dress-up dresses and shampoo her hair.

"There were sewing parties and card parties and luncheon parties and corn roasts and watermelon parties and teas, and people got thin and haggard and dyspeptic and cross and quarrelsome, and above it all rose the wall at each party: 'Why did she take it into her head to give a party and make me climb out of the hammock and get into tight clothes and sacrifice myself?' Yet we were all scared to death for fear there would be a party that we would not be asked to.

"But a great and bitter rebellion was seething within me and one day I found a soul who could understand. Catherine Smith and I fairly wept as we both talked at once and confessed how we hated summer parties when we wanted to rest from the effects of the winter parties.

"As we were discussing possible methods of escape Catherine grabbed me with a shriek. 'I have it!' she cried. 'I know how we can escape all the rest of the parties! Just say: 'No, thank you.' Instead of 'Yes, thank you,' when we are asked!'"

"It really was simple, wasn't it? So that was what we did and we became known as the social outcasts of Cumagen Woods, because if you don't go to their parties the women all got mad at you. After they were all mad at us Catherine and I had a delightful time.

ROMANCE RESULTS IN A DIVORCE

A JULY ELOPEMENT TO MENOMINEE FINALLY DEVELOPS INTO ACTION FOR A DIVORCE AT OSHKOSH.

Menominee, Dec. 8.—Another romantic marriage in which the interested parties were from Wisconsin has been shattered and a divorce was granted this week to Hattie E. Allen of Neenah from Merton Allen of Neenah. The decree was signed by Judge Burnell at Oshkosh, on the grounds of non-support.

The wedding occurred in Menominee in July of this year, and was an elopement. The defendant is an express messenger on the Wisconsin Central road. He is about 24 years of age and his bride of five months ago is not yet 21 years.

Our Record and Reputation Today tell the Story of Our Success
It's Significant; Think it Over

The steady and splendid growth and increase of patronage of this store show that people are less and less attracted by will-o'-the-wisps, and more and more firmly of the opinion that to depend on the store where quality is assured is, in the long run, the soundest economy. This is all the more true since a comparison of goods shows that the prices at "The Big Store in the Heart of Escanaba" are always lower than prices in stores where the supervision of the merchandise is less careful.

In Buying Gift Goods—Remember: Value is what you get for what you pay, not what you pay for what you get.

NEW BRITISH UNIONIST LEADER

A. Bonar Law, who succeeded Arthur J. Balfour as the leader of the Unionist party in the British house of commons, seems to be the right man for the place, having restored confidence and united the factions. He was born in New Brunswick in 1858. His father was a clergyman. He was educated in Scotland and engaged in the iron business in Glasgow until he entered politics in 1900. From 1902 to 1906 he was parliamentary secretary of the board of trade. He is a strong protectionist.

New Powder Puff.
Novelty counters have lately exhibited one charming bit of silverware that, while it fascinates the beholder, inspires at the same time the question, "What can it be good for?" This exquisite frivolity is termed "a body puff." In a large silver bowl for powder is an equally large puff, to which is attached a long silver handle, rather like the handle of a carriage parasol. Its length is its strong point, or, one might say, its long suit, since it enables the user to reach shoulder and heel with equal ease, but the appearance of this useful handle as it projects from the side of the silver bowl is somewhat surprising. This novelty is found in the empire pattern, a fine tracery of lines forming a background that suggests brocade, with square decorations superimposed on the lines. At present the prices run up to $50, but there is little doubt that long handled powder puffs will prove so convenient that they will soon be reproduced in less costly style.

A Stretching Exercise.
It imparts elasticity. And it is good for one. It will lift the vital organs. It gives strength and poise to the body. The clothing must be loose and comfortable. To begin any exercise one must stand erect. The chest should be high, the head up and the chin in. The body should rest on the balls of the feet, not on the heels. At first it may be enough to stretch the chest and slowly mouth standing thus. This alone is a fine thing if practiced in the open air or before a window open top and bottom for five or ten minutes twice a day. Now for the stretching. Sweep the arms slowly outward and upward until they touch above the head, lifting the chest walls and stretching the arms. Lower the arms with the same sweep, stretching them all the time. Five times will be enough at first, breathing deeply and slowly all the time.

MOST everybody reads the ads. in this paper. They furnish as much news to the man in town and on the farm as the personals, and often more. Peter Smith's wife wants a new hat. Smith sees by the paper that Jones is selling hats at so much. Johnson's store ad. is missing from the paper—Johnson's trying a non-advertising policy.
