SEDIMENT ALL MILKS

THE CITY VETERINARIAN AND MILK INSPECTOR, ISSUES A STATEMENT CONCERNING PURITY OF MILK

ADD A TESTER FOR THE WORK Dr. Firkus Will Inspect all the Milk of the City with Sediment in The Future

Dr. William J. Firkus, the city veterinarian and milk inspector has received a sediment test and hereafter he will test all of the milk in the city. The inspector has issued the following statement on the care of milk, entitled "Admixture of Dirt in Milk"

It is customary for milk to become more or less contaminated with particles of dirt and their adherent bacterial during milking. The dirt consists, principally, of bits of manure and besides this, hairs, dandruff, particles of food, earth and dust. Usually after milking each cow, the milk is passed through a strainer which retains particles of dirt; but if the strainer is not cleaned very frequently the particles of dung and dirt are softened in the milk, bacteria are washed through and substances that carry abnormal odors and tastes are set free in the milk. By straining then one accomplishes only the removal of the larger and more solid particles of dirt that are quite harmless in themselves, such as hairs, cellulose, sand, etc. When unclean milk is permitted to stand, a distinct sediment is formed and its presence signifies lack of cleanliness in respect to production.

The importance of dirt contamination is due chiefly to the addition of bacteria with the dirt and to the salutation of focal matter; the visible dirt is important only as it makes the milk unappealing. It follows that a greater or less dirt content has a great influence upon the healthfulness and keeping quality of the milk; this is emphasized by a study of bacterial contents of cow dung. This has been found to vary according to the kind of feed; the bacteria in the dung of cows fed with hay appears to be most numerous, in gramme of such excrement contained 375,000,000 bacteria.

In order to illustrate the importance of cleanliness in the stable and during milking, the following figures, determined by Grotenfeld, may be of use:

In one c. c. of milk from cows particularly well cared for, he found 106 bacteria, while the freshly drawn milk of cows in a dirty stable contained 617,000 bacteria per c. c. Therefore, the utmost cleanliness and carefulness should be observed during milking.

So last evening the family decided to move their household goods to Crystal Falls, where they will make their future home.

MY OWN COLUMN

Dear Readers:—
For a few weeks, until I run out of jokes or you get tired of me I am going to have a column all my own. The little suggestions I offer are not for the purpose of hurting your "feelings," and when things appear that you do not like, shut your eyes and skip them. Not being much of an artist I will also ask your indulgence on that score. If any of my friends want to see how my column is drawn and made ready for the paper, I will be glad to have them come to the office and see for themselves while I hide in the cyclone cellar. Lovingly, I am,

ANNUAL ASSEMBLY OF GREAT LAKES' SHIPS WILL BE AT THUNDER BAY FOR THEIR MANEUVERS

MAY GO EAST IN THE FALL

The 1913 Cruise Orders Have Been Sent out From Washington
For Summer Program

Training ships of the great lakes' naval reserve fleet will assemble at Thunder Bay, Lake Huron, on August 10 for their annual maneuvers and mimic warfare. The Yantic, Hancock's "man o' war," probably will sail for the training ground on August 5 or 9. Eight ships, the Yantic, Dubuque, Gopher, Hawk, Wolverine, Don Juan de Austria, Dorothea and Essex will comprise the fleet. The Dubuque will act as flagship.

Orders specifying Thunder Bay as the rendezvous were mailed from the navy department's headquarters in Washington a few days ago. Instructions for the Yantic were placed in the hands of Lieutenant Commander Paul J. Ruppe today. For three days Hancock's ship will play a part in the Thunder Bay maneuvers, but thereafter it will be at liberty to sail wherever Commander Stephenson directs. The itinerary, however, has so far not been drawn up.

May Go East in Fall
The orders from Washington also contained the hint that reserves might be given an opportunity to take part in a grand fleet review on the coast, in the fall. If the review is arranged it will be similar to that conducted on the Hudson last October.

Something About the Men Nominated by the Democrat Convention

Lansing, Mich., Feb. 18.—Here is information for voters, about candidates nominated at the democrat state convention.

George L. Yaple, nominated to succeed Justice Moore on the supreme bench, is a veteran judicial officer. For 18 years, up to Jan. 1, 1912, he was judge of the Branch-St. Joseph circuit. Back in the early eighties he defeated Julius Caesar Burrows for congress in the old third congressional district. In 1886 he came within 15,000 votes of being elected governor. Judge Yaple is a jurist of wide attainments. Probably no man who has been on the circuit bench in his time, would, were he to speak for himself, claim to be a better authority on legal propositions than Judge Yaple.

Ingram County Leader. Rollin H. Person, nominated for the supreme bench to succeed Chief Justice Steere, is one of the leaders of the Ingram county bar. The last democrat governor, Edwin B. Winnans, whose term of office was 1891-93, appointed Judge Person to the newly created judicial circuit which comprised Ingram county. He was re-elected for a full term. During Judge Person's service on the bench, he twice convened grand juries in memorable cases. One of his grand jurors indicted the secretary of state, the state treasurer, the state land commissioner, and the attorney-general, on charges involving altering the returns on a vote upon an amendment to increase their own salaries. A number of subordinates were also indicted. Gov. John T. Rich, although belonging to another political party than Judge Person, summarily removed from office the secretary of state, state treasurer and land commissioner. These three officials appealed, but the supreme court decided that the governor had acted within his rights in removing them on the indictment of Judge Person's grand jury.

The second memorable grand jury Judge Person convened was in 1900, to investigate frauds in the state military board in connection with the Spanish-American war. This grand jury went into legislative affairs with the result that some people of importance were convicted and sentenced to prison.

Helped Convict Glazier. Judge Person's term expired before the cases were concluded. In 1905 Judge Person was retained as special counsel for the state in the investigation which resulted in the indictment and conviction of State Treasurer Glazier on a charge of embezzling state funds.

Frank H. Begole, nominated for university regent, is one of the first citizens in the commercial life of Marquette. He is the head of the Lake Shore Engine Works, which is one of the largest concerns in the north country, vice president of the Marquette National bank, and is an investor in some other large industries. He is a nephew of Josiah W. Begole, who, in 1882, was as a green-baker, with the indorsement of the democrat state convention elected governor. Three of Mr. Begole's sons are at present students in the state university.

William A. Comstock, dominated for second place on the ticket for university regent, was appointed by Gov. Ferris a few weeks ago, for the unexpired term of the late Regent Grant. Mr. Comstock is a graduate of the classical department of the state university in the class of 1899. His father, W. B. Comstock, was in his lifetime one of the biggest lumbermen operators in the Alpena district and left a large estate.

Is Railroad Builder. William A., the nominee, is 36 years old, and his principal business now is in interurban railroads, he being president of one interurban railroad in Wisconsin.

John M. Munson, nominee for superintendent of public instruction, has the personal indorsement of Gov. Ferris. Prof. Munson, although recognized at the Michigan university as an educator of high standing, began life as a lumber jack, and he is now but 25. He worked his way through the Ferris institute at Big Rapids, of which the governor is head, then as a teacher at the public schools of Harbor Springs, he earned enough to pay his way for a course through the University of Chicago. From the Chicago university he returned as superintendent of the Harbor Springs schools. He has raised the standard of the Harbor Springs schools so that the graduates are now admitted to the state university on their diplomas.

Emanuel Wilhelm, nominated for member of the state board of education, was born at Traverse City, and has lived there all of the 49 years of his life. He has been several times elected mayor. For 30 years he has been engaged in the dry goods and clothing business.

Former Governor's Son. George G. Winans, nominee for state highway commissioner, lives on a farm at Hamburg, Livingston county. His father was governor of Michigan from 1891 to 1893, being elected on the democrat ticket. George was the executive secretary while his father was governor. He received his education at Deveraux Military college, near Niagara Falls, and for many years has been an active worker for better roads.

Robert W. Hemphill, one of the nominees for member of the agricultural college board, lives at Ypsilanti. He is a graduate of the college and is now largely interested in the industrial affairs of his home city.

Alfred E. Souter, named for second member of the agricultural college board, lives at Shelby, Oceana county. He is a farmer and lawyer. For 20 years, he was president of the Patron's Mutual Fire Insurance co. of Oceana, Muskegan and Newaygo counties, and for 24 years he has been secretary of the board of education of Shelby. In his district where he is best known, he ranks high as a useful citizen.

Had Tuberculosis of Glands; Now Well

If you are a sufferer from Glandular Tuberculosis, or know of anyone so afflicted, it might be well to investigate this case, where the writer declares after a year of suffering, he found permanent relief and full recovery to health by using Eckman's Alternative, a medicine which has been effective in many cases of Tuberculosis.

227 Laruston St., Phila., Pa. "Gentlemen—In March, 1909, I was taken sick and my doctor pronounced my case 'Tuberculosis of the Glands.' Medical treatment did not help me, and on my doctor's advice, I went to a hospital to be operated upon, but relief was only temporary. I lost strength, and at times would have cold sweats and fever. In April, 1910, I returned to the hospital, but the continued operations were not benefiting me.

In the meantime, a friend of mine advised Eckman's Alternative, saying it was good for Tuberculosis. The wounds in my neck were still open and in a frightful condition when I started to take it. After using two bottles, I found I was improving, having gained weight, could eat, and was able to sleep. I continued using it until I was well, which was in November, 1910. Before I took the medicine, I had three hemorrhages; since I have been taking it, I have not had any. On November 11, 1910, I started to work, and since that time I have not lost one day's work through sickness. I can highly recommend Eckman's Alternative to anyone who is suffering from Tuberculosis of Gland Trouble, providing they take it as directed. I will gladly correspond with any party desiring further information of what the medicine did for me." Sincerely yours, JOSEPH B. WHITE. Eckman's Alternative is effective in Bronchitis, Asthma, Hay Fever, Throat and Lung Troubles, and in upbuilding the system. Does not contain poisons, opiates or habit-forming drugs. Ask for booklet telling of recoveries and write to Eckman Laboratory, Philadelphia, Pa., for evidence. For sale by all leading druggists

GLADSTONE MAY HAVE BAND ORGANIZATION

Effort is Being Made to Organize a Musical Organization in That City Now

An effort is being made to organize a band at Gladstone, and of its success, the Delta County Reporter says:

About a dozen of the local musicians of the city held an enthusiastic meeting in Swensons hall Sunday afternoon to take the preliminary steps to organize a band. There is material available in the city for a good organization of this kind and the citizens at large will be pleased to hear that steps are being taken to get the talent together.

Arrangements were not completed at this, their first meeting but another meeting is to be held next Sunday afternoon when details will be perfected and officers elected. There are a number of other musicians who will be present at the next meeting with the result that Gladstone will have a band equal to any in a town of this size.

FOR FIRE PREVENTION

REPORT OF STATE GAME, FISH AND FORESTRY WARDEN PRAISES WORK OF FOREST SCOUTS.

THEIR WORK IS VALUED HIGHLY

Consists of 2,500 School Boys Who Volunteered to Undertake Forest Fire Protection.

The work of the boy scouts in the prevention of fires throughout the state of Michigan is ably portrayed in the report of W. R. Oates, the state game, fish and forestry warden. Last week J. H. McGillivray, a deputy warden was in the city and addressed the boys in the public schools and some of the boy organizations concerning the work.

In his report in reference to this work, Mr. Oates says:

"We desire to interest you in the prevention of forest fires—it is a true matter for the interest of all the people of Michigan.

"We desire particularly to interest you in our recent innovations for immediate benefits in fire prevention in Michigan."

It is apparent from a perusal of the forestry warden's report that Mr. Oates values highly the work of the Michigan Forest Scouts, a volunteer organization of some two thousand, five hundred Michigan school boys. He devotes an even hour of his report to a discussion of their work.

Regarding the value of Michigan forests which have been destroyed by fire, the report contains the following:

"Based on figures compiled by The American Lumberman, acknowledged the highest authority on statistics of lumber harvesting, the value of merchantable timber alone, destroyed by fire in Michigan since the advent of the sawmill, (more than double the amount manufactured) would be, approximately, ten billions of dollars."

Putting the value of these forests into a figure which more readily conveys to the average mind the almost inconceivable loss sustained in this state by forest fires, the forestry warden writes:

"Let us plant a forest of metal trees on some area that fire has robbed of its pines. We would give each tree a trunk of pure copper, branches of pure silver, an exterior bark and leaves or needles of finest gold—we would plant acres and acres of such forest with the value of Michigan's forest of wood which has been destroyed by fire through what we may justly term the moral, criminal negligence of her citizens."

On the value of the undersized trees, saplings, and seedlings, Mr. Oates says:

"Go into some piece of forest not yet ravaged by fire. For every merchantable tree, (trees that can be utilized in the manufacture of lumber) you will find several trees lacking in complete size, a dozen lesser saplings and a score of seedlings. The proge value of such partial growth that has already been destroyed by fire in this state would mean in money an amount almost beyond the limits of our comprehension.

"The work of the Michigan Forest Scouts, or schoolboy auxiliary fire wardens, complemented by that of the regular state and lumbermen's association service," says the forestry warden, "has brought Michigan the first year in the history of the state that forest fires have not destroyed more timber than has been manufactured into lumber. Five hundred and nine fires have been extinguished or reported by the scouts during the dry season 1912. Fifty-six of these fires were put out by the scouts without adult aid. At least three of these fires were such in nature and extent as to tax the ingenuity and intelligence of the best men fire fighters."

Under the caption, "Scouts in Action," the following instances of their invaluable assistance are given.

"Near Munising, in May, 1912, Captain Bloom with ten of his Forest Scouts gave such aid to the township fire warden, W. R. Burns, that he attests his appreciation in a complimentary letter to the department.

"Near Mio, in July, 1912, Lieutenant Russell Mapes, Sergeant Bliss Nolan and Scouts Clyde Thompson, Glenn Thompson, Edmund Hershberger, Dwight Clark, and Warden Cripps registered in class, 'A' as fire fighters. These mere boys, the oldest sixteen years of age, discovered a fire covering more than 200 acres which did not interest the older citizens. They secured a horse and plow and ran several furrows across the front of the fire. Unable to check the fire at the first stand, they duplicated the work several hundred yards ahead. Again the fire failed to succumb at the dead line. Then the boys headed the fire front by half a mile, taking advantage of a sparse forest line at this point. They put ten furrows across the path of advance. The fire did not pass the wide lane which was efficient."

The Innocent Bystander By Walter A. Sinclair.

"T last," exclaimed the Regular Fellow. "They have invented the stingingless bee!"

"Cheer up! The politicians and other grafters will have a stinging lesson to replace it," consoled the Innocent Bystander.

"Though, why not a stingingless bee, seeing as how they had honeyless honey before the pure food laws became perniciously active. Fortunately work has been resumed at filling the factory made combs—yes, they took that task away from the busy little bee, too. As a matter of fact, the busy little bee would be a joke with his work of comb making and filling gone and his stinger taken away if he hadn't been allowed to resume the honeyfugling. Busy as a bee would be a doubtful compliment, just as 'putting a bee on him' will mean nothing to future generations."

"Bees always have been noted for their sober, industrious habits, accustomed to working union hours and forming combinations in restraint of the honey trade—hence the re-strait honey. They enforced their little bee gentlemen's agreements with the might of the stinger, and just what they are going to do now I for one can't guess. The drones who furnished all the society life of the apiary—which isn't a place where they keep a pos—which is to walk up the streets of Hivesopolis now without taking an awful chance of being labbed with a sticker for falling to work.

"There will be no incentive for small boys to walk sedately past the hives where the honey lies when they learn that in case of a little raid on the sweets there will be no reprisals in the shape of a cloud of red hot needles. What small boy is going to miss the chance of using the only comb he ever cared for if there is not swift, penetrating volleys of lances to defend the honey industry? For the report of the new species says that a child can hold the stingingless bee in his hand. And a bee in hand is worth two of the sharp pointed kind on the back of the neck."

"If I was a bee I wouldn't stand being deprived of my only defence. Of course, we humans, having intelligence, don't have to fly to the defence of our garnerings when pillaged by some big, strong, illegal trust. Nope. We simply buzz or take it as a matter of course. Maybe the bees will get an injunction to protect their hives. Otherwise they might as well submit to losing their sting. Science has taken the sting out of party platforms and anti-trust suits. Why, in some States they've even taken the sting out of matrimony."

"If he loses his sting the bee may lose ambition," remarked the Regular Fellow "and where will he live then?" "Next spring you'll furnish the hives, you rash chap," answered the Innocent Bystander.

WOMAN'S GERM COLLECTOR.

Do you ever think, my dear lady Dainty, what a highly unsanitary, not to say dirty, little person you are when you slip on your smart silk petticoat? All the arguments (except the cost of a laundry bill) are in favor of the white washing petticoat, and all our undergarments, without exception, should be washable. Yet many of us wear close about our person corsets which have not once been cleaned during four or five months, though a corset with removable bones costs no more if it does mean a little extra labor on washing day.

The same thing may be said of our silk or mollette petticoats, and it may be repeated with the greater emphasis now that our skirts are once more running to length. However careful we may be we cannot prevent the hems of our garments touching the curb as we cross the street, or the steps of cars and buses as we go about the town, and the abominable germs that we collect in doing so take refuge in our pretty silk petticoats and lurk there week after week and month after month.

All the same, that will not prevent the poet from singing the praises of the fro-frou of silken frills or the lady from continuing to wear them—no matter what sanitation and the modern doctor may have to say against the unwholesome practice.

BLACK AND WHITE. Among the favorite uses of the black and white combination that is so fashionable now may be noted its popularity in the confection of the smart blouses so much worn. The variety of black and white tones as they are sometimes seen on one garment is most effective. Take, for instance, a corsage of black chiffon, mounted on white and having a plastron of white chiffon. This was seen with heavy, padded white silk motifs and embellished with rich black and white fillosette embroidery, while around this the blouse itself was outouched with white and black in a bold outline design.

The Greatest Harley-Davidson Eight Honest Horsepower. THE new Harley-Davidson Twin Cylinder does not have to be babied, nursed or coaxed into action—it is ALL THERE. It is instantaneous responsive to the throttle—off like a flash—picks up quickly—no hesitation—no sluggishness—no snoring or popping. This new HARLEY-DAVIDSON without question is the fastest machine on the road today. Its exceptional speed has been obtained in a measure through the use of large intake and exhaust chambers and passages, and pistons, connecting rods and fly wheels individually and collectively in perfect balance. And this speed comes without sacrificing one atom of Harley-Davidson reliability or endurance. In fact the decreased vibration, due to more perfect balance of the vital parts has actually increased the life of the motor. The Full-Floating Seat which does away with all jolts and jars due to rough roads, and the Free-Wheel Control, a device which permits starting without the usual hard pedaling or running alongside are incorporated in all models. Both of these features are patented and are to be found only on the Harley-Davidson. Call for a demonstration and read for literature. Escanaba Electric & Garage Co. 810 Ludington Street.

ISABELLA'S DESCENDANTS.

The discovery is attributed to President David Starr Jordan of Stanford university that almost any American of distinction can trace his descent to a common ancestor, one Isabella de Vermandois, duchess of Warren, who lived in the twelfth century. So far as that is concerned, none of us has any difficulty in proving by unimpeachable mathematics and irrefutable logic that he is warmed by the transmitted blood of nobility, royalty and genius. A child of today has two parents, four grandparents and so on. Counting for convenience three generations to the hundred years, his theoretic ancestors in Isabella's century are numbered by millions; a few centuries further back by billions. The actual number is far small, since lines of descent criss-cross from common ancestors; but it is a fair logical inference that among so many millions and centuries every one may count on possessing a reasonable number of royal or distinguished forbears. But what does that prove? How much influence on the life of an American of today could be claimed for one-seven-millionth part of Isabella blood, or for any probable number of multiples of that share? Here is the crucial test of the hereditary fallacy, the scientific basis of democracy, says the New York World. Eugenics is a fact; but better far a descent from a reasonable proportion of good stock in the three or four most recent generations than the ability to claim one-two-hundredth part of a single drop of blood as coming from some prized ancestor of the twelfth century.

A Chicago woman has a just grievance. She had just hired a taxicab when the police jumped in and made the driver pursue a party of automobile bandits who had just robbed a jewelry store. After participating in a hot engagement without power to extricate herself, when the robbers got away she was confronted with a bill of $9 for the use of the taxicab, and on refusing to pay it was sent to jail. It looks as if she should be grateful that the robbers did not capture the vehicle and make off with it, in which case evidently the slanted-eyed justice of Chicago would have made her pay for the loss of the taxicab.

The boy who was found adrift on the Caribbean sea, clinging to a coconut palm tree from which he had picked a nut and secured nourishment that sustained his vitality until rescued by a passing steamer, was blown off the island of Jamaica by a hurricane. The hurricane also blew down and carried into the water the palm tree on which he managed to keep himself afloat. It proved a better life preserver than usually is available to passengers of wrecked steamers.

Ordered as they are to adopt western dress and give up their trousers, the Chinese women, says one of them in this country, would never wear American fashions. Probably, after their bound feet, they see no reform in any other hobbler system.

If, like the Chinese, we paid doctors to keep us hale and sound in body, and stopped the stipend when we got sick or contracted broken bones, do you believe that the medical profession would be enthusiastic football fans?

The Siege of the Seven Suitors

By MEREDITH NICHOLSON

SYNOPSIS

Hartley Wiggins is in love with Cecilia Hollister. His friend Arnold Ames meets an elderly lady at the Asolando tea room.

She is Cecilia's Aunt Octavia, an eccentric woman of wealth. She invites Ames to Hopefield Manor. Ames is fascinated by Francesca, a tea room girl.

Ames sees Wiggins meeting Cecilia secretly at Hopefield Manor. Aunt Octavia is a great believer in the potential influence of No. 7.

Ames sees mysterious men watching the house. He hears of Hezekiah, Cecilia's sister. Wiggins calls upon Cecilia. The chimney smokes mysteriously.

The house is said to have a ghost. Cecilia tells Ames she is in deep trouble and asks him to urge Wiggins not to call upon her again.

CHAPTER VI.

I Deliver a Message.

I WAS aroused at six o'clock the next morning by the sound of gun shots, and, springing out of bed, I beheld in an open pasture beyond the stable yard the indomitable Miss Hollister engaged in the pleasing pastime of breaking clay pigeons with a fowling piece. Her Swedish maid stood by for a formidable pad of paper, keeping score. A lay pulled the trap for her, and she threw up her gun and blazed away with a practiced hand. Her small, slight, tense figure, awaiting the launching of the target, the quick uprising of the gun as she sighted, and the pause following the firing of the shot, in which she bent forward rigidly watching the result, were features of a picture which I would not have missed.

I will write it down here and be done with it, that it had been my good fortune to know many delightful women, but I have never known one more interesting or charming than Miss Octavia Hollister. The spirit of deathless youth was in her heart, and youth's gay pennants fluttered about her as the reports of her gun fell cheerily upon the crisp morning air, a rebuke and a challenge to all indolent souls.

I made myself presentable as quickly as possible and went forth to report to her. She nodded pleasantly as I greeted her immediately after she had scored a capital shot. A second gun was produced, and I saw that it was not without satisfaction that she observed my lack of prowess. One out of five was the best I could do, whereas she smashed three with the greatest ease.

"If I had known you would be up so early I should have sent coffee to your room," she remarked as we walked toward the house. "Very likely your lack of luck with the birds is attributable entirely to the impoverished state of your stomach."

Breakfast was served on a delightful sun porch that I had not before seen. Cecilia appeared promptly, having, in fact, been gathering fall flowers for some time. I judged, from the considerable amount of chrysanthemums, asters, dahlias and marigolds which we found her arranging for the table. She seemed in excellent spirits and greeted us most amiably.

The mail arrived and was placed by Miss Hollister's table before we left the table. She opened first a bulky envelope containing a letter from a clipping bureau and handed it about upon these as follows: "This press story of a sunbather galleon off the coast sounds plausible, but I don't see the work of some bright young journalist. Our minister in that hem-dog country doesn't take any stock in it. I had a cable from him yesterday."

the fireplace. I suggested immediately that as I had come to Hopefield Manor to inspect the dunes I should now be about my business, but to my surprise Miss Hollister evinced no interest whatever in the matter. Her tone and manner implied that the condition of her chimneys was wholly negligible.

"There is no haste, Mr. Ames. I have suffered all my life from the ill considered and hurried work of professional men. As for my chimneys, I beg that you give me the result of your most serious deliberations. At this hour I ride. Cecilia, will you dress immediately and accompany me?"

She disappeared at once, and I stared mutely after her. I am by no means an idler, and this cool indifference to the value of my time would ordinarily have enraged me, but I believe I laughed, and when I turned to Cecilia I found her smiling.

"I'm glad, Mr. Ames, that you are a person of humor. It is no joke that my aunt is a believer in thoroughness, and one of these days when she is ready to talk of chimneys she will subject you to a most rigid examination."

"One of these days? Why, I have looked at the timetable, and it is my present intention to take the 12-03 into town. I have appointments at my office for the afternoon. I assure you, Miss Hollister, that I'm a man of engagements, particularly at this season."

"I remembered what Jewett had told me of Fortner, the painter, and his detention at Newport by Miss Octavia Hollister. I had no intention of being inured in any such fashion, and I was about to protest further when Cecilia took a step toward me and after a glance at the door spoke in a low tone and with great earnestness."

"Mr. Ames, I have every reason to believe that you are a gentleman, and in that confident belief I'm going to ask a favor of you. You have said that you know Hartley Wiggins well."

"I know no man better. You might not have inferred it from his manner last night, but he was undoubtedly surprised and embarrassed by my presence and did not act quite like himself."

"I think I understand the cause of that. If I should ask you to see him today and give him a message for me could you do so?"

"It will be an honor to serve you and a very simple matter, as I should see him on my own account if he is still in the neighborhood."

"He is doubtless at the Prescott Arms. My message is a verbal one. Please urge him not to make any effort to see me and not to call here again. But at the same time, as the chimney smoked just as we were about to be left alone last night, I think—I think—she hesitated a moment—"you may say that his interests have not been jeopardized by his tenacity in calling."

In her pause before concluding this curious commission her eyes searched mine deeply, and I felt that she had not lightly entrusted me with this singular errand. Her dark eyes held mine an instant after she had spoken. Then she smiled, and her face showed relief.

"Ask for anything you want. Aunt Octavia despises motors, so there's no car here, but you will find plenty of horses and traps. Order whatever pleases you. I shall expect to meet you at dinner if not at luncheon, and so—" she smiled again—"will Aunt Octavia."

She nodded to me from the door, and I heard her running lightly upstairs.

Left to my own devices I rang the bell and ordered the library fire extinguished and the hearth cleaned. This required a little time, but the houseman obeyed me readily, and soon, clad in my professional overalls and jumper, I was going carefully over the fine whose behavior had been so unaccountable the previous night. Guided by the servant, I inspected the three fireplaces in the upper chambers that were served by fires in this chimney and finally dropped my torch and plumb line from the chimney pot. Never in all my experience had I seen better fires. But I had the ashes thrown out of the dumb in the cella, and found the grate in perfect order. I learned by inquiry that the other fires worked perfectly, but I nevertheless scrutinized them carefully. My freedom of the house afforded an excellent opportunity for a study of its beautiful construction. It was modern in every sense, with no dark, mysterious corners in which goldfish might lurk.

My professional labors were finished. I was quite ready for Miss Hollister's most searching inquiries. As for the library fire, I had decided that a little care in piling the logs in the hearth would obviate the possibility of any recurrence of the difficulty. And I thereupon hurried to my room and after a tub (my valet-in-charge encouraged frequent tubbing close from the stable a neat trap for one horse. This expedient I set out to find Wiggins at the Prescott Arms.

As I drove into the entrance I saw Wiggins leaning on the long veranda. He waved a hand and came out to meet me, and when I had rid myself of the trap he suggested that we take a walk.

His manner was not cordial, and he wore the lug and look of a man on bad terms with his fellow. I attributed his appearance to preoccupation with his love affair. When he had withdrawn a little way I turned to my friend and said sharply: "Well," I laughed.

"Oh, you needn't take that tone about it! Your being here is something that requires explanation, and your being there"—he flung out his arm toward Hopefield Manor—"your presence there is not a laughing matter."

"My dear Wiggins, I came here in a spirit of friendship, and you treat me like a pelpeelet. I must say that if you had not acted like a clam the other night at the club, but had told me what was in the wind we might not be meeting now like ancient enemies instead of old and intimate friends."

"Your presence there is not a laughing matter."

He vouchsafed no reply, but threw himself down under a scarlet maple and began to whistle a stick, while I went on with my story, concluding with: "And now I have finished my work, and after I have made my report I shall probably not meet her again. As for Miss Cecilia Hollister, I can only say, my dear Wiggins, that she is a rarely beautiful woman, and that if you wish to marry her you have my very best wishes for your success and happiness."

"It struck me that you were pretty well established there," he blurted. "I confess that I took it for granted you were not there wholly on a professional errand, and I won't deny, Ames, that I was not pleased to see you."

"You honor me in assuming that I might aspire to the hand of so splendid a woman as Cecilia Hollister; but, my dear Wiggins, I tell you I never laid eyes on her until last night."

"But you had been to the Asolando," he persisted, harking away doggedly at his stick.

"Of course I had. I told you I had. I told you the whole story. But I did not see Cecilia Hollister there. She wasn't there. I fancy that after you saw her there last spring and became infatuated with her and followed her to Europe instead of going to Dakota to harvest your blooming wheat—after that bit of history she never returned to the Asolando. Your lack of frankness in all this has pained me, and you left it for a gossiping chap like Jewett to tell me the whole story."

He threw the stick at a sparrow whose chirp irritated him from a stone fence beyond us and turned toward me a countenance on which dejection, humiliation and chagrin were written large.

"Hang it all!" he bellowed. "I believe I'm losing my mind. I don't know what I'm doing. That old woman up there is responsible for all this. She's as crazy as a March hare—crazier! And she's made a prisoner of that girl I tell you Cecilia Hollister is the grandest girl in the world."

"Go it, son! These descendants of Caesar's legions at work in the road down there are pausing to listen. Try to affect calmness if you don't feel it. I agree to all you say of Miss Cecilia, and please get it into your noodle that I have no intention of becoming your rival for her hand. But I must beg of you also not to speak in such terms of her aunt. She is the most delightful woman I ever met."

"Mad, I tell you, quite mad! I tell you, Ames, that woman is a malevolent being. She's perfectly fendish."

There is no way of answering a man in this humor save by laughter, and I laughed long and loud, to the consternation of the Italian road laborers, who were now swallowing their luncheon a short distance away from us.

Wiggins sulked awhile and then addressed me seriously.

"I didn't tell you I was going abroad, because the situation made explanations difficult. I could hardly tell you that I was about to race over Europe after a waitress I had seen in a tea room. You're always so confoundingly suspicious. It would have an odd sound even now if she were—well, if she were a waitress instead of what you know her to be. And my animosity toward Miss Octavia Hollister is due to the fact that after I had been as courteous to her all summer long as I could and thought myself tolerably established in her mind as a decent person and a gentleman, she suddenly shuts Cecilia up in that house—bought it on purpose, I fancy—and Cecilia herself is compelled to take on an air of mystery, warning me to keep away, suggesting the darkest possibilities, but giving me no hint whatever of the reason for her conduct."

"Let us confine ourselves to Miss Octavia for a moment. While you were acting as cavalier to her party abroad she was friendly—then she suddenly changed. Now there must be some explanation of that."

"Well, for one thing, she sewed off at a tangent about my ancestors. We were in Berlin on the Fourth of July and got to talking about the American revolution. She asked me what my people had done for the patriotic cause. The painful fact is that most of them were Tories, but my great grandfather broke with his father and brothers. Joined Washington's army and fought through the whole business. But to save the feelings of the rest of them, who went to England till it was all over, he changed his name. There's no mention of him in the war records anywhere. I've had experts working on it, but they can't find any trace of him. He was greatly embittered by the estrangement from his people, and though he had a farm in this very neighborhood somewhere—I've thought some time I'd look it up and try to get hold of it—he never mentioned his military experiences even to his own children. Usually Miss Hollister changes front if you give her time. I've heard her say that we'd have been better off if we'd never broken with England, but she persists in prodding that weak place in my armor."

"From what you say Cecilia has not repelled you. On the other hand, she has frankly given you to understand that you must not press your suit at this time for reasons she sees fit to withhold. A little more patience, a little calm deliberation and less violent language, and in due course the girl is yours. Now, what do you fancy is the cause of Cecilia's abrupt change of attitude?"

He refused to meet my eyes, but turned away as though to conceal an embarrassment whose cause I could not surmise. When he spoke it was in a voice husky with emotion.

"Am I a cad? Am I beneath the contempt of decent people?"

"It's possible, Wiggy, that you are. Go on with it."

"Well, you know," he began diffidently, "Cecilia has a sister."

I grinned, but his scowl brought me to myself again.

"Yes. And her name is Hezekiah. The name pleases me."

"She was with Miss Octavia in her gallop over Europe, so I saw a good deal of her necessarily. She is younger than Cecilia. She's a good deal of a kid—that sort that never grows up, you know."

"Just like her Aunt Octavia."

"Bah! Don't mention that woman. Hezekiah is a very pretty girl, and I suppose—well, when you are thrown with a girl that way, seeing her constantly—"

I clapped my hand on his knee as the light began to dawn upon me.

"You old rascal! You don't need to add a single word. I dare say you are guilty. I can see it in your eye. After waiting till you reached years of discretion before beginning an attack upon women in platoon. So they come running now that you've got a start. Oh, Wiggy! And I believed you immune! And you're trying to drive 'em tandem!"

"That you shameless wretch, would be a sufficient reason for Miss Octavia's aloofness—your double faced dealing with her niece. You confirm my impression that she is a wise woman, and Cecilia, I take it, may be deeply embarrassed by her sister's infatuation for you. You certainly have made a tangle of things, you heart wrecker, you conscienceless deceiver! But where, may I ask, does this Hezekiah keep herself?"

"Oh, she's with her father. They have a bungalow over the hills there, several miles from Hopefield Manor."

"Well, I hope you are no longer toying with her affections. Of course you don't see her any more?"

"Well," he mumbled, "I did see her this morning. But I couldn't help it. It was the merest chance. I met her in the road when I was out taking a walk. She's always turning up. She's the most unaccountable young person."

He rose and flung up his arms despairingly. It was such easier to laugh at Wiggins than to be angry at him, but I delivered the message which Cecilia had entrusted to me, and this, I thought, might give him some comfort.

"She told you to see me?"

"She certainly did. I confess that my message doesn't seem luminous, but I have a feeling that she meant to be kind. It may be that she is giving you time to disentangle yourself from the detestable Hezekiah's meshes. I can't elaborate. I merely convey information. But answer honestly if you can, has Cecilia ever refused you?"

"No," he replied grimly, "she's never given me the chance."

The Daily Mirror

With an honorable record of more than a quarter of a century, is better and more widely known than any other Escanaba newspaper. It holds the respect of all classes and is depended upon for truthfulness in its utterances and correctness in its news matter. It is progressive in all its parts.

Advertising

As an advertising medium The Mirror has a reputation for the certainty of profitable results and the permanency of good impressions made through the use of its columns. While it commands the attention of all classes, its chief mission for the advertiser is among prosperous homes of the city. That is its stronghold from which it has never been displaced by any other newspaper. For this reason advertisers who wish to reach the active and desirable buyers of the city will find The Mirror a most valuable distributor for the information they have to convey.

Circulation

The circulation of The Mirror covers a field that is distinctly its own. Its distribution is positive in regular established channels, not of the fluctuating sort as is common with newspapers whose various editions are issued for the purpose of swelling receipts and circulation reports. The readers of The Mirror buy it for its real merit as a live, dependable news informant. The volume of its circulation is a large one and is keeping pace with the marvelous growth of the city, steadily and surely upon a time tested solid foundation.

If you are not a Mirror advertiser look into the matter of circulation and the unimpeachable testimony of thousands who are using it with constant profit. If you are not a subscriber to the Mirror compare it with the paper you may now be reading. The comparison, if a fair one, must impress you with its superiority.

WEATHER CONDITIONS

An extensive area of low pressure that covers the Plains states, is causing snows in its advance over the Lake region, and snows and rains in its rear over the upper Pacific and Rocky Mountain states. Temperatures have risen over the middle portion of the country, from the Rockies to the Mississippi River and upper Lakes, since yesterday morning, and while they have fallen somewhat over the far northwestern states, they average above the seasonal normal for the country as a whole. As the snow in this vicinity during the past 24 hours was caused by the approach of the low pressure area from the west, the further eastward advance of this storm indicates continued snow to-

Council Will Take the Matter up This Evening and a Committee Will be Named

Thomas street, one of the oldest streets in the city is to be renamed. Part of it has already been given the name of Escanaba avenue and if the plans of some members of the council are carried out the few blocks that are left of Thomas street will be given the name of Market street.

Market street will be a very nice name to give it and as Escanaba now has no Market street, there ought to be one. It is a good name that makes a city sound prosperous. That there are no markets on Thomas street at the present time need not deter the council from using the name.

FLINT'S LETTER

While London copper warrants were slightly lower today the general market, both New York and Boston, had a stronger tone to it. Perhaps the firmness in copper was partly due to the report that quite a large amount has been contracted for may delivery this being the first sign that consumers are satisfied with the present price of 15 cents for the metal. There is no question but what the present dividends paid by copper stocks can be maintained indefinitely if copper sells at 15 cents per pound. Nearly all authorities agree that if the Balkan war, the Mexican embargo, the unrest of labor and the tariff agitation were settled here would be no reason to expect copper to sell as low even as 15 cents. Without any public news to account for it the market had a severe break in the last half hour today and prices tonight are lower than for years.

SAFETY

When you have a checking account it is only necessary to keep a small amount of cash in your pocket. You can pay all bills by simply writing checks. Your money is, of course, much safer in a good bank than if kept at home or on your person.

You may lose your check book—you may even lose a check you have filled out—but you suffer no actual money loss. If a check is improperly paid the loss is the bank's, not yours. In fact, when you pay by check the bank guarantees that your money will only be paid out on your bona fide order. It protects you against loss in every way.

This bank cordially invites your checking account, no matter how small.

You will find a checking account a great convenience. Next week we will tell you why.

Will Receive $5750 From Continental Casualty Company for Loss of His Hand

Very fortunately for him, Attorney John Cummiskey carried and has carried for the past three years an accident policy in the Continental Casualty company, of which J. R. Harris is the local representative.

This policy which has cost Mr. Cummiskey $180, will pay him the sum of $5750. Another small policy that was carried by Mr. Cummiskey will pay him about $1250. Mr. Harris was at the hospital today making out the necessary papers and the check in settlement will be forwarded in a few days. While this sum is very small considering the misfortune that has befallen the local attorney, it would give him, if necessary, a chance to take a long rest that some men with less vitality might need.
