GREEN BAY'S OLDEST MAN

WILLIAM BATTERSHILL, WAS 101 YEARS OF AGE AND NEVER SICK UNTIL LAST ILLNESS

PILOTED FIRST STEAMER TO PORT

Attributed His Long Life to a Careful Diet Which the Seasons Controlled

Wm. Battershill, the oldest man in Green Bay and the man who piloted the first steambot into that port is dead at the age of 101 years.

He was born in London, England, in 1812. He came to America in 1837 and reached Green Bay by way of the Mississippi and Fox rivers. He operated a pontoon line on the river between here and Kaukauna, and purchased a steambot in Chicago and took it by way of Lake Michigan and Green Bay to this city in 1839. Shortly after that time he urged the government to make a survey of the Fox river and to establish a channel. His request was granted and he worked with the surveyors on that piece of work.

One of the chief reasons for his living so long is that Mr. Battershill lived according to seasons, as he himself expressed it. He never drank coffee or tea, and was strict about his diet. For example he began in spring to eat nothing but the vegetables that grew then, in fall he was satisfied with a mixture of eggs in warm water, in winter he ate salt pork and other meats. He adhered to this system of eating all his life. He was never sick enough to have a doctor care for him till his last illness.

Mr. Battershill was a power in politics in the town of Howard and vicinity. For twenty-five years he was town chairman of Howard. He taught school here when a young man.

Never during his life did he weigh over 100 pounds, and on account of his light weight, he was not permitted to join the army during the Civil war. He enlisted here and went with the troops to the south, only to be ordered back home. Upon his return he was placed in the marshal's office as an accountant.

"The Thunderer."

It was mud splashing that gained the London Times its nickname of the Thunderer. For the name was first applied when two ladies at Kew were bespattered with mud by a horseman riding much too close to them. The Times, in a leading article harshly criticizing his bad manners, alleged that the horseman was the Duke of Cumberland, then resident at Kew. A denial was made on behalf of the duke, and the Times then published a second article beginning, "When a few days ago we thundered out"—and popular appreciation of this modest expression saw to it that the nickname stuck even tighter than the mud.

STEEPLEJACK IS KILLED BY FALL

Was the Last Time he was Going Aloft to do any Work—Fell and was Instantly Killed

Venice, Ill., April 16.—John Lackey, who has been a steeplejack for a number of years, fell 175 feet from a smoke stack he was painting and was killed instantly. When he left his home in St. Louis he told his wife and friends that this was to be his last job as he had secured another position.

He had completed his work of painting the stack and was about to return to the ground when he fell.

NEW STORY WILL START TODAY

Don't Forget to Read the Opening Chapter of "Hawthorne of the U. S. A." Today.

ESCANABA lovers of a bright, sparkling novel, a live wire story from a live wire play that has captivated Chicago, should not fail to read the initial installment of The Mirror's new serial, "Hawthorne of the U. S. A.," which begins in today's issue.

Persons who witnessed the production of the lay in Chicago are advertising it as one filled with situations both seriously excellent and hilariously comical, and the novelization by Albert Payson Terhune contains all of the good of the stage production by James Benard Fagan.

GRANDMOTHER USED PLAIN SAGE TEA TO DARKEN HER FADED, GRAY HAIR—TRY THIS

Mixed With Sulphur It Makes Hair Soft, Beautiful; Cures Dandruff

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural color dates back to grandmother's time. She kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and abundant with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair fell out or took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

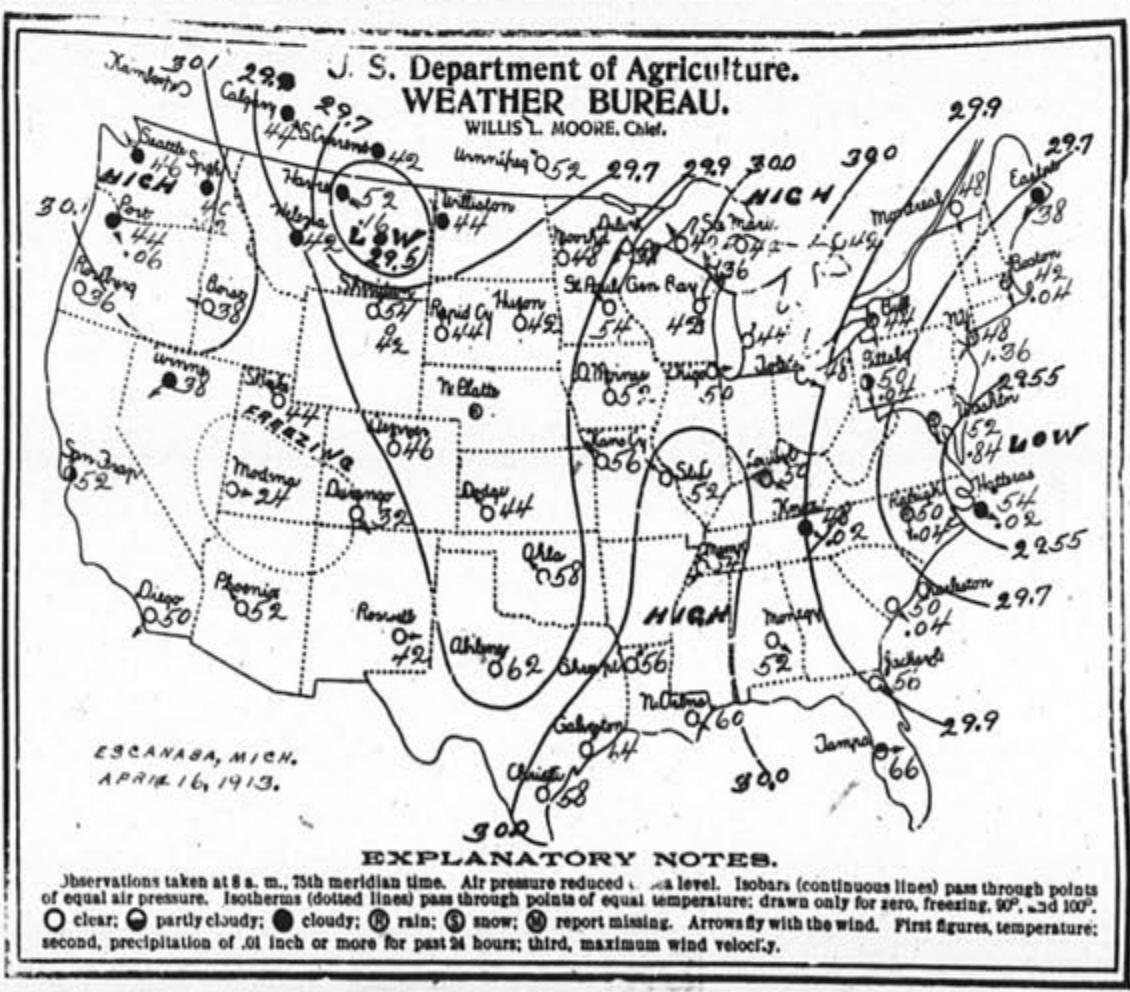

But the brewing at home is messy and out-of-date. Nowadays skilled chemists do this better than ourselves. By asking at any drug store for the ready-to-use product—called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy"—you will get a large bottle for about 50 cents. Some druggists make their own, which is usually too sticky, so insist upon getting Wyeth's, which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair and is splendid for dandruff, dry, feverish, itchy scalp and falling hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says his customers insist on Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, because, they say, it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use too. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. Do this at night and by morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and abundant.

The story is one of a typical American who not only loves and wins a beautiful girl through sheer determination, bravery and brains, but the girl is a real princess and she places confidence in him that events show is thoroughly justified. It is most romantic, short excellently written and withal is certain to please the most exacting.

SENATE DOWNS BOOST IN MEMBERS SALARY

Move to Raise Pay From $800 to $1500 Did Not Meet With Approval of Majority.

Lansing, Mich., April 16.—The senate voted 19 to 8 in favor of submitting to the people next year a constitutional amendment providing for a salary of $1,500 per session for the members of the senate and house instead of the present stipend of $800. Despite the favorable vote, the resolution failed of passage, as a constitutional amendment requires a two-thirds vote, or 22 in the senate.

SENATOR WEADOCK OF SAGINAW, WHO INTRODUCED THE RESOLUTION, DECLARED THAT WITH A $1,500 SALARY ATTACHED TO THE JOB A BETTER AND HARDER WORKING LEGISLATURE COULD BE SECURED. THE RESOLUTION WAS LAID ON THE TABLE AND WILL BE TAKEN OFF IF THREE VOTES CAN BE FOUND FOR IT AMONG THE FIVE MEMBERS WHO WERE ABSENT WHEN THE VOTE WAS TAKEN.

HAWTHORNE OF THE U. S. A.

Novelized From James Bernard Fagan's Great Play of the Same Name by Albert Payson Terhune

By Courtesy of COHAN & HARRIS

PROLOGUE.

This romantic tale, recounting the adventures of a plucky and resourceful young American in the Balkans, is full of genuine humor and exciting incidents from the very first line to the last. The story very closely follows the successful play from which it is novelized. When a hustling American has not only broken the bank at Monte Carlo, but is in love with a princess and is doing his level best to save the throne for her father, the king, and frustrate the plotting of a villainous prince, there is little chance for interest to lag.

CHAPTER I.

The Princess and the Yankee.

ANTHONY-HAMILTON HAWTHORNE was an optimist. Discouragement never entered into his philosophy, no matter how clouded the prospect. He lived the typically energetic life of the young American, accepting good fortune and ill fortune alike with the smile that in his schoolboy days had saved him many a chastisement and in business had proved a distinct aid on various important occasions.

As our story opens we find Hawthorne in a place where he had absolutely no right to be. And he knew it. But, to do him justice, he had no idea just how little right he had to be where he was.

He was lounging beside a mossy sundial in a tumbledown old garden near Oberon, capital of the tiny Balkan kingdom of Borrovina. Hawthorne's tastes did not run to solitude nor to moldy gardens. Which made his presence there the stranger.

Kicked out of a snug political job by a shift of administration, he had left America and, with his friend, Rodney Blake, had made a whirlwind tour of Europe. The two chums had paused at Monte Carlo. There, by a wondrous stroke of luck and by carefully backing the fortune of "No. 5" at roulette, Hawthorne had annexed a sum of something over $100,000.

The continental papers were full of stories of the American who had broken the bank at Monte Carlo. They hailed Hawthorne as a multimillionaire and as several other laudatory but objectionable things. And to escape notoriety he had packed his winnings in a suitcase and, with Blake, had motored to Borrovina until the sensation should evaporate. There, under an assumed name, he had registered at Oberon's defunct Casino, which was also the city's only hotel.

On the first day of his stay in the down at heel, bankrupt little capital Hawthorne had gone for a stroll in its suburbs. Curiosity had led him to climb a garden wall. What he had seen there had brought him back every afternoon, to the disgust of Blake, who was sick of the dead and alive little kingdom and who wanted to see what would happen when Hawthorne and himself and $100,000 should strike Paris simultaneously.

A few minutes before the stroke of 5 in the afternoon Hawthorne had climbed the wall. The sound of steps on the path from the house beyond sent him into hiding behind a dilapidated summer house just as a very young and very pretty girl entered the garden. The girl moved forward eagerly, as if expecting some one. A shade of wistfulness crossed her face as she found the place seemingly deserted. Reaching the sundial, she leaned down and kissed its numbered face. Then turning quietly, she discovered Hawthorne coming out of his hiding place. "I hope I didn't frighten you," he stammered. "You—you were expecting me, weren't you?"

"Why should I be expecting you?" she asked, with an effort at aloofness. "I can't imagine," he returned meekly, "except perhaps because I said I'd be here. Why—why were you kissing that sundial?"

"Because it said it was 5 o'clock," was the odd reply. "Geel!" he murmured. "In my time I've wished I was a lot of things. But this is the first time I ever wished I was 5 o'clock. But why does that especial hour make such a hit with you?"

"Oh," evaded the girl, "it's—it's as good an hour as any, isn't it?"

"A million times better. I've known that ever since you told me you walk in this garden every afternoon at 5. Over in our country we call a sundial a 'lovers' clock.' You see, when lovers meet they forget there's such a thing as time. And a sundial's too sympathetic to hawl out the hours at them the way a regular clock does. It doesn't tick a pious warning that the seconds are passing. It never wakes lovers from their fond dreams. Good old sundial!"

"Then," laughed the girl, "I'm glad I kissed it. I hate to hear it's time to go. Don't you?"

"It's the one thing I do hate—today. So—not that it's any business of mine, as you were about to partee—why were you standing by the sundial the first day I came here? Were you kissing at 5 o'clock then?"

"No. I was giving audience." "Giving which?"

"Audience. It's a foolish little game I play sometimes. Don't laugh at me. I was pretending this was my court. I was giving audience to a hero—a preserver of our country. Then I looked up and saw—"

"Me. You looked like a princess out of a story book. I wondered why you spoke as you did. Say, it's a dandy game. Let's play it again. You can pretend you're a royal princess—the Princess of Borrovina, if there is one—and I'll be—I'll be—let's see! What sort of a face card shall I be?"

"The minister of foreign affairs!" she cried delightedly, entering into the spirit of the game. "I've sent you around the world to report on other nations, and you're just returned. Now, enter the royal presence!"

Hawthorne started forward with as much of an ambassadorial air as he could summon.

Why We Buy At Home

This is not an ADVERTISEMENT, just a declaration of principle.

Why:

- BECAUSE our interests are here.
- BECAUSE the community that is good enough for us to live in, is good enough for us to buy in.
- BECAUSE we believe in transacting business with our friends.
- BECAUSE we want to see the goods.
- BECAUSE we want to get what we pay for. (That is what you get when you deal with us.)
- BECAUSE every dollar we spend at home stays at home and helps work for the welfare of the City.
- BECAUSE the man we buy from stands back of the goods. (That is what we do, stand back of our policies.)
- BECAUSE we sell our policies here at home.
- BECAUSE the man we buy from pays his part of the City and County taxes.
- BECAUSE the man we buy from helps support our schools, churches, lodges and our homes.

Here is where we live and here is where we buy. If we are right in principle we must be right in practice. Don't you think that this would be a pretty good institution to entrust your insurance with?

EXCELSIOR Auto-Cycles

Another reason why discriminating buyers are purchasing Excelsior Auto-Cycles follows:

The fundamental feature of Excelsior design is the offset valve chamber which gives the largest possible cooling surface and a rush of cold intake gases over the hot exhaust valves. The cams have been redesigned this season to give a longer opening on the exhaust stroke. An improved Schebler Carburetor, worked out, especially for our 1913 motor and a much larger intake manifold give wonderful power to the new motor. On account of the large amount of air used in our perfect mixture, the gasoline economy is extremely high.

THE BOHEMIAN GIRL.

The Aborn Opera Company's extraordinary production of the "Bohemian Girl" will be seen at the Peterson on Friday, April 18.

This organization is said to have a remarkable grand opera cast of principals, immense chorus, and corps de ballet, in all numbering upwards of one hundred people, besides which the Messrs. Aborn promise a massive and elaborate scenic environment which, while built from the same models as last season's productions are entirely new. The "bigness" of this organization may best be realized when it is learned that it requires a seven car train to transport the company, scenery and accessories. Occasional difficulty was experienced last season with local orchestras, because of fewness of rehearsals, to get satisfactory orchestral support. This season as the special orchestra is a part of the Aborn company, this fault is rendered impossible.

Knute Knutson went to L'Anse yesterday on business.
