ATTY. CUMMISKEY KILLED WHEN AUTO TURNS OVER

Caught Beneath Windshield, Prominent Attorney Has Life Crushed Out at Nadeau When Car Hurtles Over Bank After Skidding—N. C. Spencer Has Narrow Escape From Death

Nadeau Residents, Awakened at Three O'clock by Cries for Aid, Lift Car From Dead and Release Spencer—Survivor is Suffering From The Shock

Attorney John Cummiskey was instantly killed and Attorney Newton C. Spencer narrowly escaped death when an automobile in which they were riding turned turtle in the outskirts of Nadeau at three o'clock this morning. Rounding a sharp curve in a dense fog the car skidded, slid over a three foot embankment into a ditch and turned turtle pinning both men beneath it.

In Menominee on Business

The attorneys, who were partners in law, left yesterday afternoon for Menominee in Spencer's automobile to attend to some legal affairs which they concluded about eleven o'clock. At midnight they started on the return trip with Spencer driving. The atmosphere was clouded with fog and they were compelled to proceed slowly so that it was about three o'clock when they reached Nadeau.

Didn't See Curve

Both were looking for a sharp curve in the road just south of Nadeau but in the darkness they did not see it. The right front wheel went over a slight embankment and Mr. Spencer put on the brakes. The rear wheels skidded, dropped over the three foot embankment and the car turned completely over. As the car turned and settled with its wheels spinning in the air Cummiskey was caught directly beneath the windshield which lay across his chest. The crushing blow must have killed him instantly. Spencer's left forearm was pinned beneath the windshield and his body held by the body of the car. He did not lose consciousness for a moment and although in his stress he believed that he lay there for hours crying for aid help came quickly.

Heard Cries for Help

Miss St. Albin, daughter of the postmaster and living not far distant from where the accident occurred, heard the crash as the car went over and later Spencer's cries for help. She summoned her father and others, but when they arrived on the scene Joseph Serravallo, blacksmith, who lives but a short distance from the scene of the wreck was struggling to lift the car off the imprisoned men. In a short time the rescuers raised the body of the car sufficiently to allow Spencer to crawl forth and to extricate the body of Cummiskey.

Spencer was taken to the railroad station nearby and Train No. 101 was flagged a short time later. He was placed aboard and brought to Escanaba. He is now at his home, suffering terribly from nervous shock. His injuries, however, consist only of a swollen ankle and a bruised wrist.

No Inquest Held

Menominee County Coroner George Prince of Powers was notified at once and he motored to the accident's scene. After viewing the remains and learning the details he decided that an inquest was not necessary if being painfully apparent that death came by accident.

The body of Cummiskey was taken to Powers by Mr. Prince. Undertaker J. B. Wilkinson went to Powers early this morning and returned at nine o'clock with the body. The force of the crushing blow as the automobile catapulted upon him crushing him about the chest and forcing the blood to his head doubtless caused death. The bruise across the chest is the only mark that the body bears.

A Brilliant Attorney

The victim of this morning's unfortunate accident has long been considered one of the most brilliant lawyers of the Upper Peninsula. A short time ago he lost his right hand when a loaded gun fell in a closet at his office.

exploded and shattered the head just below the wrist.

He was born in Livingston county Michigan, June 21, 1868, and was therefore forty-eight years of age. He was the son of Patrick and Julia Cummiskey and was the youngest of a family of ten children, five of whom are now living.

Was Born on Farm

He spent his boyhood days on his father's farm and received his early training in the public schools. At the age of seventeen he began teaching and in the meantime occupied himself with the study of law. Three days after his twenty-first birthday he was admitted to the bar and a year later was elected prosecuting attorney of Livingston county. Immediately after his admission to the bar he opened a law office in Howell where he practiced until 1897. He then came to this city. In 1890 he formed a partnership with Judge Yelland which lasted until 1906 when Judge Yelland retired and the firm of Cummiskey and Spencer was formed. This partnership, not only one of business but of close friendship was severed by Cummiskey's death.

Mr. Cummiskey was elected prosecuting attorney of Delta county in 1900 and was reelected in 1902, serving until 1904.

The deceased was married in 1894 to Miss Clella B. Farrell, who survives him.

Funeral arrangements have not been discussed.

The automobile still lies in the ditch where it turned turtle. The rear wheel is broken off at the axle but otherwise the car is not badly damaged. It is a seven passenger model—bought by Mr. Spencer this spring.

FOUL PLAY SUSPECTED

A NORTHWESTERN ORE TRAIN RUNS OVER MAN LYING ON TRACKS NEAR SPREAD EAGLE

ENGINEER DENTON RUNNING TRAIN

Some Believed Man Was Robbed and Beaten and His Body Placed On Rails

Antoine Razork, a resident of Iron Mountain was killed yesterday morning just west of Spread Eagle on the Northwestern railroad. Whether the man was the victim of foul play or whether the ore train, which mangled his body horribly, brought about his death is not known.

Engineer Denton of this city was running the train that ran over the man. He saw what he believed to be a pile of sand lying on the track and not until he was close upon the prostrate form of the man did he recognize the fact that it was a human form.

The train was brought to a stop and the man, still breathing, was hurried to the hospital, where he died shortly after.

The dead man with another man was seen walking along the track a short time before the train passed. It is believed by some that his companion robbed and beat him, then laid him on the track to conceal his crime. A chain with no watch attached and an empty pocketbook were found on the man's person.

PFANSCHMIDT TO BE HUNG

TWENTY-ONE YEAR OLD MURDERER SENTENCED TO DEATH BY JUDGE GUY WILLIAMS

APPEAL ON WRIT OF ERROR

Declares He is Innocent When Asked By Judge if He Had Anything to say

(By Associated Press.)
Quincy, Ill., July 7.—Ray Pfanschmidt, the twenty-one year old murderer of his father, mother, sister and Miss Emma Kaepem, was today sentenced to hang on Saturday, October 18, by Judge Guy Williams.

"I am innocent of this charge," was the youths only answer when asked what he had to say. He conversed pleasantly with his aunt and was apparently not impressed with the solemn proceedings of the court.

It is expected that the case will go to the supreme court on a writ of error, this delaying the execution.

Pfanschmidt's crime is the worst murder in the history of Illinois. On September 27, 1911, he murdered the four and the following night burned the house to conceal his crime. His desire to inherit the real estate owned by his father is given as the motive of the crime.

ALBERT PAYSON TERHUNE

CAN A WOMAN do as she pleases in her youth and by the strength of her will, the force of her determination, avoid the consequences? Can she, by laborious secrecy and tireless evasion, make the world judge her as the world judges men and not as the world judges women? Can she—once and once only—step beyond the bounds fixed by Society and resolutely step back without a penalty? This great problem of a Woman's Will Against the World is the problem of 'The Woman'—a problem only shadowy in the play, become salient and challenging in the intense, arresting story which Mr. Terhune has based upon the powerful de Mille play produced with such great success by Belasco.

Receipts at Tonawanda Ports Show Decrease of 7,000,000 Feet for Present Season.

North Tonawanda, N. Y., July 8.—Receipts of lumber at Tonawanda ports during June were comparatively light as compared with those for the similar month last year.

The decrease is attributed to the advance in the price of stock at the upper lake mills. Customs reports show that during June a total of 42,854,769 feet of lumber was unloaded at the local docks against 49,640,464 feet received in June last year. Of the stock brought here last month, 35,640,367 feet went to North Tonawanda firms and 7,214,902 feet were unloaded at Tonawanda docks.

During June, the customs report shows 76 laden vessels arrived at the Tonawanda ports. Of these, 14 carried ore, while 62 carried lumber. Eight of the lumber laden vessels entered the Tonawanda port and 54 the North Tonawanda port. To date this season a total of 77,155,687 feet of stock has been unloaded from vessels at the Tonawanda ports. That is about 7,000,000 feet less than was received here during the same period last year.

OUR BOYS and GIRLS

A New Kind of Top.

It is Made Out of an Apple and a Skewer. John came into the room where I was sewing and sat down on the couch with a pout. "A fellow can't have any fun on a rainy day. All the boys in this poke town are afraid a little rain will melt them. As if they were made of sugar? Stuff and nonsense!" "Stuff and nonsense, indeed!" I exclaimed. "Can't you content yourself at home for a while?" "What's a fellow to do? I say, ma, can I have some apples and nuts? I saw some on the sideboard." "Yes, and after you have eaten your fill I'll show you how to make a new kind of top. One that you can spin on a rainy day." John shouted "Hurrah!" and ran to the dining room for the goodies. When he was ready for the top, I said: "Here a hole is a nut, just large enough to pass a thin skewer through;

The Top Complete. the kernel should then be extracted, and another hole bored in the side of the nut, as A in the picture. A skewer should next be cut or thinned, leaving it large enough at the top to form a head, as shown in the cut. A piece of string is then to be tied to the skewer, and passed through the hole in the side of the nut at A, and an apple stuck on the end of the skewer. The top being now complete in all its works, it should be twirled round in the same manner as the humming top to wind up the string, holding the nut stationary between the forefinger and thumb of the left hand, when this is done, the string must be pulled out quickly and the top will spin round.

GIRLS WILL HAVE SWEETHEARTS

Their Mothers Can Help Them to Make Wise Selections.

A proper moralist would, no doubt, lecture the little girls on the wickedness of deceiving their mothers, and tell them that mother always knows best, and should always be implicitly obeyed.

As a matter of fact, a mother who takes this attitude towards her young daughter, and who tries to rule her with a rod of iron, is just as silly and knows just as little of life as the girl possibly can, and my words today are not to daughter, but to mother.

The first thing that I want to say to mothers is that in their nearly grown daughters it is a condition and not a theory that confronts them. Very likely it is better that a girl shouldn't have any beaux, or any thought of a beau, until she is a grown and mature woman. Very likely she should devote her mind to study instead of having her attention distracted by boys. Very likely it is best for her to spend her time in the bosom of her family and never go out anywhere except with papa or mamma.

We won't waste time disputing those issues. The point is that daughter is going to have beaux. Her mind is full of boys. She is going to indulge in the pleasures that other young girls indulge in, and if you don't let her do it, openly, she is going to do it secretly. If you don't let her have boys come to the house, she is going to meet them on the street corners.

Now, mother of Mary and Sally and Jennie, which do you prefer? Which do you consider the safer course?

Of course you will say that you have brought up your children to obey, and that you are going to enforce discipline in your home. Possibly, but you are not a secret service agent who can trail Mary or Sally or Jennie every minute of the time; and you may be very sure that the minute your back is turned, and your watch relaxed, that your outwardly obedient little daughter is doing exactly as she pleases, and doing it with twice the vim and zest, simply because it is a stolen pleasure.

Nine-tenths of the trouble between parents and children arises out of the fact that fathers and mothers simply cannot realize that their children have arrived at man's or woman's estate; and they cannot bring themselves to concede to their grown-up sons and daughters the liberty of action that is their right. In her mother's eyes a daughter is still an infant until she gets married. To a man his son is a boy even after he grows a beard.

This age is a forcing house in which never seems to occur to the father that the reason her daughter doesn't come to her is because the girl knows that mother will treat her as if she were a little girl in pigtails, and veto everything she wants to do. There is small encouragement to tell your hopes and plans to a person who is going to tell you that the thing you want to do you shan't do, and how generally silly and foolish you are.

But what I want to impress on mothers, is that you can't keep Sally from knowing boys and going out with them. No matter whether you forbid her to do it or not, she is going to do it. Something stronger than all your power is urging her on. It is youth calling to youth. It is youth's insatiable demand for pleasure, and the question is whether you are going to take your defeat gracefully, or whether you are going to risk ruining your child's life, to uphold your own petty tyranny.

Don't believe for a minute that you are stronger than the voice of nature. You are not. Sally is going to have her boy friends and go out with them whether you approve or not, and it's up to you to make her a deceitful little hypocrite or a frank, open-minded girl who really does tell mother her secrets.

Inasmuch as the girl will have beaux, don't you think you would make her a million times safer if you invited the boys to the house and got acquainted with them, and knew with whom she was going, and where she went, than she is when she meets some youth on a street corner and goes off with him to God knows where, and comes home to lie to you about it?

Any girl who has to deceive her parents to get the enjoyment that is natural to her time of life stands on the very brink of the pit, and many a time it is the mother's hand that unwittingly pushes her over.

Many a girl marries the first man who asks her to escape her mother's tyranny. Many a girl runs away from a dull home and goes to the bad just because of the restrictions that were put on her at home.

See that these things do not happen to your daughter. Just remember, mother, that 17 is a skittish age, and that she drives safe who drives with a light rein.

Slavery in England.

Slavery existed in England without any mitigating features worth speaking of until the time of the Wars of the Roses. Bracton, the famous lawyer of the time of Henry III, informs us that the condition of slaves was fearful. It was indeed slavery, pure and simple. All the goods a slave acquired belonged to his master, who could take them from him whenever he pleased, the slave having no redress at law. Hence the impossibility of a man's purchasing his own freedom. The only hope for the slave was to try and get into one of the walled towns, when he became free, the townsmen granting him liberty on the condition of his helping them fight the nobles. — New York American.

DIG DAM ACROSS THE NILE.

The greater Assouan dam, which will store twice as much water as the first section, which was completed in 1902, is now finished. It will furnish enough water from the Nile, the London Times states, to do away with the system of basin irrigation, in use for thousands of years, and the fertile fields of Egypt can now be cultivated all the year around, says the Baltimore Sun. The original dam, which cost about $12,500,000, provided a storage capacity of 954,000,000 cubic meters of water, the present structure for about 2,000,000,000. Ninety years ago the Egyptian government took the first steps for a greater water supply, but it was not until 1889 that the British engineers, headed by William Willecocks, brought forth the solution by proposing to dam the Nile at Assouan. The project was too ambitious to secure financial support until Sir Ernest Cassel, in 1898, provided the necessary funds. The first dam was begun February, 1902, a year ahead of time. It is the most important of public works of Egypt since Menes constructed the dike across the river at Memphis, making possible basin irrigation, the wonder of engineers to this day. Basin irrigation cost about $15 an acre in 5,000 acre areas; from $25 to $30 on small tracts, and land rented at from $15 to $25 an acre per year. Irrigation all the year round, now made possible, costs $22 an acre and the rents are from $25 to $40.

The reason why the educational authorities want teachers who are unmarried is because they are able to give all their time and thought to their chosen work. When a teacher marries she naturally takes on increased responsibilities in her home. Unless her husband is able to afford servants, she must do the housework and mending. This, in itself, is a large-sized job for any woman, says the Washington Post. The question is whether the teacher would attend to her duties in the school and neglect her husband and her home, or vice versa. When the teacher becomes a mother it is necessary for her own sake, and especially for the sake of her child, that she give her personal attention to her home. If she keeps on teaching, her own home must suffer. Her husband must pay for a nurse or other servant to look after the baby and the home. Moreover, if the child should become ill, the mother would soon forget about the classes at school and might frequently send a substitute. It is far better for the children in the schools and far better for youngsters in the homes that mothers should not be teachers.

A Washington chauffeur has been sent to jail for three years for taking a joy ride in his employer's automobile without permission. Courts and public are realizing that drastic measures are necessary to break up the joy-riding practice and the stealing of motor cars for this purpose. The jail sentence is a good experiment along this line. It might be extended to take in all speeders on the public highways.

New Jersey has a baby born on the thirteenth of the month, in 1913, and is the thirteenth child of its parents. That child is destined to have a hard battle with superstition, but with real American gift it can manage to win out. And, after all, there is no good reason why its life should be given up at the start as a failure on account of mere arithmetical coincidence.

FEW SURPRISES IN PENNANT RACES

Last Year's Leaders Disappointing Fans This Season.

PHILLIES LOOK VERY GOOD.

Charley Dootin's Team Playing Great Ball—Philadelphia Americans Going Well—Cleveland a Big Surprise. Giants Not Doing So Well.

It is doubtful if any pennant races have furnished as many surprises as the present one. In both major leagues teams which were considered as having the best chance to lead the procession have proved disappointments.

Boston in the American league was expected to get a flying start in the race this year, yet is occupying a lowly position, with but slight hope of improving. The National league race was believed to be a fight between Pittsburgh and New York, and yet neither of these teams has shown pennant winning ball to date.

McGraw's machine seems to have broken down. Marquard's great pitching of last season, when he won nineteen straight games and kept his team in the lead, is missed. Testean is not near as effective as he was, and Mathewson is still the Giants' star twirler, but he must have four or five days' rest to be at his best.

The Phillies appear to be showing their very best form. They are galloping out in front, but it is a question how long they will last, though Dootin seems to have the material for a winner. No team has a better pitching staff than he. Seaton, Chalmers, Alexander, Rixey and Brennan make a formidable lot of twirlers, and if they can hold up their end the Phillies are not to be easily caught.

Cleveland is the surprise in the American league. Birmingham is getting some wonderful results out of his team, but it would be most remarkable if the Naps were able to continue their present stride much longer. They have been known to make other similar spurts, only to fall down during the middle of the campaign.

Washington, because of the fact that its team has not been intact the greater part of the season, has shouldered a great handicap, yet remains prominent in the race.

The Athletics are playing great ball. It is a question whether Mack has a pitching staff strong enough to carry him along. Plank and Bender are the only ones to be relied upon, and it will probably be found that they will need help before the season is over.

One marvelous boy major league team of a few years back managed to go through a season with twelve or thirteen players when today the average team finds itself pushed for material even though it carries twenty-five players on its list.

In the old days few players were ever idle. Pitchers played the outfield when they were not pitching, while catchers were constantly being used in the infield when they could be spared behind the bat. It would seem that the players were more versatile in those days or the standard of play was not as high as it is today.

MACK WANTS CY MORGAN.

Veteran is Twirling Great Ball For Kansas City Team.
Connie Mack would like to have Cy Morgan back. Old Cy, who was not good enough for the Athletics a year ago and was sent to the minors, it is figured, would help the weak twirling staff of Mack's team just now.

Mack has kept the wires hot to Kansas City, where Morgan is pitching high grade ball, but Kansas City cannot spare him at this stage of the race, and all the flattering offers which Mack has made have been turned down. It only proves that it is a mistake for a major league club to let out a winning veteran before some of the phenomenal recruits have shown good form.

Pitchers of the ability of Morgan are not picked up every day. He was too valuable a twirler to be allowed to go back to the minors notwithstanding the fact that he had his wild spells. Morgan is sure to be in the big show again next season even if Mack does not succeed in securing him. He won his first ten games pitched.

Of Interest to Women Readers

HATPIN GUARD.

Keeps Point of Pin from Spilling Eyesight of Neighbors.

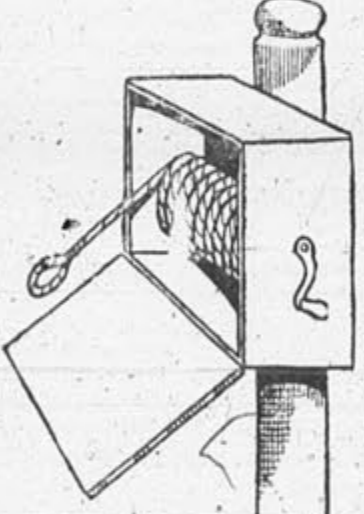

If the several councils in Illinois cities that passed ordinances regulating the length of women's hatpins had waited a while, their laws would not have been necessary. A man in their own State has invented a hatpin guard which, it is claimed, will save the eyesight of many an inoffensive man and yet leave the ladies their weapon for defence against footpads, mashers and the like—for which uses they declare they are needed. The device here shown consists of a small tubular contrivance with a claw at one end in which a jewel is held, thus making the guard ornament as well as protective and improving the appearance of the headgear. The open end of the tube flares into a mouth wide enough to make the guard easy to slip on, and, inside the tube, is a rubber bushing which grips the pin tightly enough to prevent the guard from falling off. It is predicted that these devices will become very popular as gifts from men to their women acquaintances.

A Handy Clothesline Reel.

Any bright boy can make this reel for his mother after he has studied the picture for five minutes. Set the post firmly in the ground, tamping in broken stone or bricks to hold it erect. The box will always keep the clothes line dry and clean. If one of the posts is set just inside the kitchen porch and another box placed upon it, the clothes line may be wound up from either end by adding a convenient string to reach the distance between the posts. The reel should be of a stout piece of wood and the box must be strong enough to stand the strain of the line when full of wet clothes.

Making Her Wise.

Mrs. Wise—I see by the paper that judging by the insanity returns, only sixteen cases in 4,399 are caused by love affairs.

Mrs. Knocker—Oh, well, more than that number act crazy.

One Time Of Mister Trouble

Combination Auto Horn.

The use of siren automobile horns is forbidden in some cities, but it is mighty effective signal for country roads where the motorist makes faster time and wants to give warning of his approach in plenty of time. Therefore many automobilists carry both the electric and the hand tooter on their cars, using whichever is required. A New York man has designed a horn which answers both purposes and does away with the necessity of carrying two separate signals.

Only One Signal Needed.

This device consists of a mouth-piece with a pipe coiling back of it and a stem on which a rubber bulb is fitted. Near the base of this coil, however, another pipe enters, and this connects with the electric signal, the same mouth-piece being used in both cases. All the driver need do is to either press the rubber bulb to get a toot or push the electric signal to get a siren, according to the emergency.

Goodsort—I have come here to convert thee.

Satan—Not on your life. The last fellow tried, that and I've got too much reason in me now.

Kathleen's Reward

Part and parcel of Kathleen Howard's love for all humankind was a belief in its goodness. Regardless of disastrous results, her experiences with sundry women and men left upon her consciousness only an assurance that their ultimate intention had been fair enough.

One afternoon, about 5, Kathleen was pouring tea for Billy Rindge's mother. Mrs. Rindge was just back from town and her arms ached with the weight of her shopping, and her feet ached with the heat and too much walking, and her head ached. More than all, her heart surged and filled and bubbled over with bitterness at the sight of Billy's best white blouse suit, over which swept in graceful lines a perfect wonder of green and red paint. Billy had escaped Kathleen and everybody else interested, and invaded a painter's equipment in Kathleen's kitchen while the painter had his lunch out of doors under the trees. The trees were green, so reasoned Billy, and why not he? The roses were red, and so, with equal reasonableness, why not he? This was what Kathleen had made out of his answers to her remonstrances.

"You have no idea, Kathleen," Mrs. Rindge was saying "what a care that child is. If I should have another one I think I should die. That suit is ruined, utterly, hopelessly ruined. Of course, I don't blame you, you mustn't think that, but really, isn't it enough to break anybody's heart to look at that suit?"

"I don't see how it could have been helped, Amy," Kathleen answered patiently. "Billy seems to know what he must do and what he can't do, and promises so sweetly and looks such a dear when he asks you things, that you don't know how to refuse him; and then, suddenly, the world topples over your head and you emerge to see Billy in some stretched plight. But you must love him so, Amy? Think what a baby girl would be like if she and Billy's curls and Billy's eyes."

"And Billy's love of mischief and Billy's guile and Billy's paint that won't come off," interrupted his mother. "Now we will go home, Kathleen, though I do hate to leave everything in so cool and restful."

But they did go at last and Kathleen watched them turn toward home with relief in her heart. Suddenly she beheld her of something rushed madly out of the house after them.

"Oh, Amy!" she shrieked after the rapidly retreating figures. "Did you get that ribbon for me and the lace at Mark's?" "I'm so sorry forgot it until--" came back the disjointed sentences, and Kathleen's courage failed her. Her dress for tomorrow night's dance was a dream, but it had no sash and she didn't know how to wear it unless she had some lace to finish the neck and sleeves.

A man on horseback met her before she reached the gateway. He noted her defection. Maybe he thought she would accept a little cheering. Anyway, he stopped his horse and dropped at Kathleen's side in time to be asked "Bibin for a cup of tea and a cake." It was very cheerful in Kathleen's den. There were just a few chairs that were made to sit in and a broad, low couch and a fireplace. Before the fireplace, Kathleen's favorite rug gave light to the otherwise dusky interior, a prayer rug, all amber and ruby and summer-sea blue. Dropping upon it and resting her head against a pile of pillows, Kathleen related her experiences for that one day.

"And she borrowed my pearl brooch to fasten her collar because she came away in such a hurry that she forgot to put one on, and now she has gone home and forgotten to give it to me," Kathleen ended. She looked tired and hurt.

"Treated you pretty roughly, didn't she?" sympathized the man who understood.

Somehow his hand found a resting place on Kathleen's shoulder; somehow his voice found an extra tender note.

"I don't know, but it may be my own vanity that's hurt," Kathleen said after a moment. "I wanted to look my best to-morrow night, as if clothes made the girl, and as if anybody would care more for me in a pink dress than in a blue one." She flushed at the little slip she had made.

Richard Prouty took immediate advantage. He had courted the coy young woman all summer, afraid to speak although impatient at delay. He told of his love and his loneliness in hurried words and, inspired by his own impetuosity, dropped his arm to the waist of the unresisting Kathleen and kissed her.

Kathleen pouted conquestfully by the name of the slip she had made but tamed and disappointed, put her head upon his shoulder and said: "Dick, you were a goose not to see that I loved you all the time."--MARTHA PROUTY.

SEWARD'S OLDEST RESIDENCE IN RUINS

This shows all that was left of the residence of C. Kollmeyer by the terrible storm that swept Seward. The house was the oldest in the town.

"Thirteen" Pursued Him.

When the misfortunes of Gustaf Adolf IV. of Sweden were on his lips the king pointed out to the queen how the number thirteen had influenced his life. "Even the name Gustaf Adolf IV. is thirteen letters. * * * I am the thirteenth king of Sweden from the time of Gustavus Wasa. At the age of thirteen I became king, and I reigned thirteen years after attaining my majority. I was made a prisoner on the 13th of March. It is now twenty-two times thirteen since Gustavus Wasa was elected king of Sweden in 1523, and seventeen times thirteen years since the death of Charles XII. In 1718; these added together produce the number 1860, the current year. * * * If you transpose the numbers one and three, which stand for thirteen, they make thirty-one, which is precisely my age now."

Curiously enough, he died in room No. 13 at the Weisse Brossi, St. Gallen--the date, Feb. 7, 1836--"An Exiled King."

High Price For Straightness. One of the most difficult problems in practical mechanics is to make a straight edge. How difficult it may be is judged from an incident that occurred in the shop of a celebrated astronomical instrument maker.

A patron asked what would be the price of "a perfect straight edge of glass thirty-six inches long."

"It cannot be made perfect," said the instrument maker, "but it could probably be made with a limit of error amounting to only a fraction of a wave length of light."

"How much would that cost?" "About $40,000."

It turned out that the customer wanted the straight edge for a scraper and that an error of one-sixty-fourth of an inch would not bother him.--St. Louis Republic.

His Strong Point.

"My favorite nephew, Oliver Toller, is--well, he's my favorite nephew," remarked the old soldier. "Well, while he is pretty much always getting into trouble or having things go awry with him, and so forth and so on, instead of blaming it on to somebody else or his luck or the party in power or saying he can't imagine how in the world it came to happen, he just scratches his head, grins a wry grin and says, 'Well, dad blame my fool picture; that's another time I brought it right on myself by not having as much sense as a barrel of hair!'"--Kansas City Star.

Ways of Carrying Money.

When mamma gives you a penny to buy a bit of candy she usually either sends you to her top bureau drawer to get her purse or takes it from a little box she keeps in which to drop her spare change. But, if your mamma were an immigrant--people who come to this country from foreign lands are called immigrants, you know--instead of your own dear mamma, she would carry her money in strange fashion. If she were a Swede or Norwegian she would carry it in a pocketbook so big that it contains enough leather to make a pair of shoes out of. The Italian immigrant prefers a small tin tube which he hangs about his neck by a small chain, and the Hungarian stuffs his money into his long boots--along with his knife and fork and spoon. Germans keep theirs in a belt strapped around their waist under the clothes, and the French are partial to a small brass case about as large as the average pocketbook.--Detroit Free Press.

Lost to the Audience.

The conductor Panelli describes an experience he had at Queen's hall during one of the concerts, says the Paris correspondent of the London News.

Wishing to hear the orchestra to the best advantage, he ascended to the highest gallery of the building without saying anything to anybody and hid himself in a corner.

"The public listened beautifully," he writes, "and I was overcome with emotion. Seeing that they were determined to have me on the platform, I began to descend, but lost myself completely in a maze of passages. I wandered about for some time, opening doors and it was too late to think of appearing. When I found my friends again they were very angry with me for what they considered my breach of good manners in not replying to the applause."

George Beason of Perkins was a business visitor in the city today.

The Planet Mars.

As to the habitability of Mars, the planet popularly regarded as offering the nearest approach to a duplication of earthly conditions, E. Walter Maunder, F. R. A. S. in "Are the Planets Inhabited?" is unconvincedly negative. "A consideration of the Martian temperature and atmosphere leads him to this conclusion:

"What we know of Mars shows us a planet icebound every night, but with a day temperature somewhat above freezing point. As we see it, we look upon its warmest regions, and the rapidity with which it is cleared of ice, snow and cloud shows the atmosphere to be rare and the moisture little in amount and readily evaporated. These seas are probably shallow depressions filled with ice to the bottom, but melted as to their surfaces by day. From the variety of tints noted in the seas and the recurrent changes in their outlines, they are composed of congeries of shallow pools, fed by small, sluggish streams. Great ocean basins into which great rivers discharge their waters are quite unknown."

Had Planted a Quince.

The gardening season had opened, and in the train the usual banal garden talk was in progress. "Have you got a quince in your garden?" asked the quiet man in the corner. There was a dead pause. "A quince, you mean?" suggested the botanist, politely. "No, a quince," said the man, confidently. "Won't bloom in this soil, you'll find."

"I'm surprised you haven't got one," said the quiet man. "It was the first thing I planted after I hid out my garden--been quite a success with me." "How do you spell the name?" asked a novice only three months married, respectfully, determined to look up the etymology at once. But it was the common, not garden, dictionary that enlightened him. There says the Manchester Guardian he learned that a quince is an arrangement of five trees or plants, one at each of four corners and one in the middle. Next morning all the talk was of golf handicaps.

The F. R. A. will hold its regular meeting in the Armory tomorrow night.

Miss Myrtle Bowers left this afternoon for a visit with relatives at Ishpeming.

BOY CRUSHED TO DEATH YESTERDAY

Edwin Goodfellow Crushed to Death in Freight Elevator in Lauerman Store this Afternoon

Menominee, July 8.--Edwin Goodfellow, aged 17, son of Frank Goodfellow, the rural mail carrier, residing on Tenth street, was crushed to death yesterday afternoon in the elevator shaft of the Lauerman store.

He was tending the freight elevator and was outside the car on the second floor sweeping, when the elevator started upward. He grabbed for the ropes and was carried upward. Louis Peters shouted to him to drop but he failed to do this and he was crushed to death when the elevator struck the second floor. He had apparently left the elevator ropes unfastened.

He was a member of the graduating class of Our Lady of Lourdes school in June. The accident occurred about half past three.

WORK ON NEW ORE DOCK GOES FORWARD RAPIDLY

Duluth, Missabe & Northern Structure Will Soon be Ready to Receive Steel.

Duluth, Minn., July 8.--Concrete bases and steel sheaths for piling for the foundation for the new steel ore dock of the Duluth, Missabe & Northern railroad at Thirty-fourth avenue west are being rapidly put in place and it is expected that within another month the work will have progressed far enough to begin putting up some of the steel.

It will take 22,000 tons of steel for the stringers, girders and pockets for the dock. Most of this will come by lake.

Most of the concrete foundation to be put in north of Superior street has already been laid. The pillars have been sunk several feet into the ground and are ready to receive the steel. Three pile-drivers are at work west of Superior street driving steel pockets or sheaths for the wooden piling.

More than 200 men are employed on construction of the dock.

Miss Edith Longstrom has returned to her home at Negaunee after a visit at the home of Roudolph Larson at North Escanaba.

THROUGH THE DARK VALLEY

The darkness of night was over the city. Here and there a house with a lighted window frowned sullenly on the belated passerby, who, with eyes strained to catch a glimpse of her desired goal, hurried up the street. In a few minutes she reached the house where the lighted piazza revealed a black ribbon fluttering from the door. With a gasping cry she drew back; then, the next instant, recovering, the peal of the bell echoed through the house.

"Is it you, Elsie?" the elder woman, opening the door, asked softly. "I hardly expected you to-night; and yet, I thought that you would come."
 "How could I wait after that telegram? I had just time to catch the train," she spoke in a harsh, strained voice.
 Gently taking her hand, her mother-in-law led her into the library. But the usually attractive room seemed filled with a strange weirdness. To Elsie's excited fancy, even the fire flashed and leaped in an uncanny manner, as the light kindlings were laid upon it. Elsie felt as if she were stifling.

Awed by the suffering which changed the bright, youthful face into one suddenly old and care-worn, she answered the unasked questions of the woman Oswald had loved so well. "It happened at 10 o'clock," Elsie leaned forward that no word might be lost. "Perhaps it was a mistake to keep from you that his life might end suddenly at any time; but he did it to spare you pain. He came home for a document that he left there," pointing to the table. "Just as he reached the door he fell. The doctor said that he died instantly."

"Don't go to him to-night," she begged as Elsie moved toward the door. And when she would have accompanied her, Elsie firmly motioned her back.

A solemn quietness filled the room where the still form rested. Elsie removed the covering from the face, which, noble in life, was now filled with an added dignity. A smothered moan, a confused jumble of incoherent words reached the ears of the woman who waited outside; then the minutes dragged into hours and the silence remained unbroken.

As Elsie looked at her dead husband, her loss was no longer visionary. Before, she had been stunned, helpless; but now she felt a sharp, poignant pain. Her hot hands covered the cold hand of the sleeper. Her throbbing temple was pressed against the cold, lifeless one. Only a few short hours ago, and what tender words of love would have answered the endearing epithets that Elsie uttered. Oh! for only one word. But never to hear his voice again. How could she bear the long years of separation with nothing but memory to comfort her!

"If people would get the right idea of death, much of the bitter heart-ache would be avoided. Death is advancement, promotion. A short separation, then endless reunion."

Did a voice speak? Or was it memory recalling the precious words with which Oswald had once comforted her. As before, it effected the same purpose. Elsie was calmed, strengthened. Then memory yielded another treasure.

"If I can accomplish ever so little good in the world before I am called home, I will not have lived in vain."

Elsie shuddered as she thought of Oswald's class of poor boys whom he was educating to become useful, honorable men; of his services as choir-leader in the church, which was unable to pay a salary; of all the good he had hoped to accomplish in the city. Should these things cease because their leader was found worthy of promotion? Elsie bowed her head low over her husband's, speaking each word slowly, solemnly, impressively. "Oswald, I promise, with the help of God, to carry on the work you have left."

It was 15 years later that the city celebrated its centennial. The Y. M. C. A. Building, dedicated the week before, was opened to the inspection of the public. In the City Hall inspiring addresses were heard. But the climax of the celebration was reached when the young lawyer, whose eloquence appealed to the hearts of his audience, finished his address with the words:

"Many have spoken to-night of our pride in our beautiful city, and in our noble-minded, loyal-hearted citizens. But none have spoken of the far greater pride we feel in the woman who, 15 years ago, vowed to perpetuate the memory of her dead husband."

"It is chiefly to her that we owe thanks for the erection of the beautiful building you have admired to-day. It is to her that 20 boys owe an immeasurable debt of gratitude that she carried on the work her husband left unfinished. Of that class of boys, two are missionaries in the Far East; three are ministers; four in the medical profession; six are members of well-known business firms, and the remaining five, including myself, are following the profession her husband honored."

Taking the hand of the shrinking woman, seated among the speakers, he led her forward. But the thundering applause which greeted her drowned the closing words.—LILLIAN D. COPP.

DROWNS AFTER SAVING THREE FROM WATER

John Flynn, Detroit, Victim of Own Heroism at Pontiac.
 Pontiac, Mich., July 8.—After rescuing three companions, two women and a young man, from drowning in Orchard lake, near here, Sunday afternoon, John Flynn, 30 years old, of 30 1/2 Detroit street, Detroit, was set with cramps and sank off a sharp ledge in to 30 feet of water.
 The party of three who came from Detroit with Flynn in an automobile this afternoon, were bathing near the ledge, but were unconscious of their danger until one of the women stepped off it.
 Mrs. W. Dalester, the second woman in the party, and the young man, also unconscious of the abrupt drop at this point, went to their companion's rescue and both sank. Flynn rushed from the shore, and after a terrific struggle grabbed both women as they came up and shoved them to the shallow water, where willing hands assisted them to safety. He turned back and lending a hand to the young man, towed him a short distance when he sank.
 A number of swimmers dove for more than an hour, but were unable to locate Flynn's body.

WEATHER CONDITIONS.

A low pressure area central over Manitoba, is causing unsettled weather over the middle northern states from the upper Rocky Mountain slope east to the lower Lake region. Elsewhere over the country, the weather has been generally fair since yesterday morning and temperatures have shown no decided change over any large area.
 In this vicinity, the weather will remain unsettled during the following 24 hours, with showers indicated to-night or Wednesday, and a change to somewhat warmer tonight. The winds will be moderate southeast and south, becoming variable.
