SUN DIAL FOR STANDARD TIME.

Advantages Claimed by the Inventor for This Over the Ordinary Form.

The ordinary sun-dial naturally indicates sun-time, and the sun as a timepiece is not accurate, because its motion is not uniform throughout the year. A dial that will indicate standard time, or the local time of any particular place, if desired is described in the Literary Digest. The Crehore dial as it is called is one solid piece of bronze, except the face, which is an engraved bronze cylindrical sheet whose axis is inclined to the horizontal plane at an angle equal to the latitude of the place and directly north. The shadow is cast by a small bead held by a wire kept stretched by a spring, as shown in the picture. The scientific principle on which the dial depends is thus described by the inventor. He says:

Sun-dial to tell standard time.

"The relative motion of the sun and earth is such that the sun's apparent path in the heavens, when mapped with reference to the horizon plane of some fixed locality, is only completed so that the sun begins to describe approximately the same path because of several component motions of very long period, which are for the present purposes of the second order of magnitude and may be neglected. Considering the sun's path results from two component motions, the rotation of the earth on its axis once per day and the revolution in its orbit once per year, it will be seen that this path is one continuous curve which is approximately completed only once a year, and will be retraced each succeeding year. Each day the path is almost a complete circle, but the circle is not quite closed, as the path the following day is a similar circle very near the preceding one, so that the path resembles a screw thread except that the pitch of the screw is not uniform throughout the year, but changes from its maximum at the time of the equinoxes to zero at the solstices.

"For a sun-dial which is to indicate time it is necessary to know more than the mere path of the sun in the heavens, which is only a geometrical curve described in space. It is necessary to know where the sun is situated on this curve at all times. If a point is marked on the sun's path, as above described, for every hour throughout the year, it will be found that the points made at the same hour, say 3 o'clock, on succeeding days lie very close together as compared with points corresponding to succeeding hours of the same day. At 3 o'clock on the succeeding day the sun would have made a complete revolution in its screw-thread path, and will then be at the corresponding point on the next adjacent thread. If it were exactly at a point for each succeeding day, all the 3 o'clock points for example, would be located. The surface may be almost any shape a horizontal plane is objectionable because the shadow of the bead becomes indistinct at hours distant from noon, owing to increased distance from those parts of the plane on which it is then thrown; also because the system of curves would differ with locality.

"If in such a dial it is desired to indicate the time of some other locality it is merely necessary to revolve the cylinder about its axis by an amount corresponding to the difference in time between the two places. This has been done whenever standard instead of local mean time is wanted, or when Greenwich time instead of local mean time is desired."

A Story of Victor Hugo.

Victor Hugo, as is well known, was a man of exceeding vanity; he had a sense of his own importance which often manifested itself in ridiculous ways. During the siege of Paris, in 1871, a number of political and literary men were dining one evening at his house. The conversation, naturally, turned on the horrors of the siege, and the members of the party gave their respective ideas as to the best means of terminating it. Suddenly Victor Hugo had an inspiration. "I know how to do it," he said, with such conviction that everyone was filled with expectation.

"Yes," he continued; "to-morrow, I, Victor Hugo, dressed in my national costume, will go forth all alone, unarmed, and meet the bullets of the enemy. I shall be killed, and the siege will be over!"

"Over for you," irreverently interrupted one of the company.

Victor Hugo's brow took on an Olympian frown. Never again did the unhappy interrupter receive an invitation to the table of the post-Harper's Weekly.

GLADSTONE SWAMPS CUBS

Slam Ball Over the Lot and Win by a Score of Fourteen to Four

The Gladstone Eagles made the Cubs look like a bunch of amateurs in Sunday's contest at South Park. The game in detail follows: Hit-error-slam-fumble-bingle-boot-biff-bonehead-bang. Gladstone fourteen runs, Escanaba 4. Hess twirled for the locals and was slammed rather lively, while his teammates gave him punk support. Gladstone on the other hand played good ball in the field and slammed the ball around the lot with an abandon that was appalling.

New York's fire loss records is being considerably lowered by vigilance of its fire department officials and war on firebugs.

FRESH AIR FOR FIRE FIGHTERS.

Withstands Sulphur Fumes for One Hour With Recent Equipment. An ingenious respiratory apparatus for the use of firemen, described in the Scientific American, by Arthur Inneraley. It consists, he tells us, of a hood lined with oiled silk, and an air cylinder, strapped on the back, carrying under pressure enough air to last an hour. The air is conducted by a rubber tube to the head-piece, the exhaled air passing out through a valve before the mouth. To quote Mr. Inneraley: "The fireman can get enough air to fill his lungs comfortably but can not expend the supply in a short time, as he might be tempted to do if he became frightened. The main supply of air comes from the outer cylinder, the middle one being smaller and to be drawn upon only when the other two are exhausted. The apparatus can be adjusted on the back in half a minute, and, as it weighs only 23 pounds, it does not impede the fireman in his work. "A man equipped with the apparatus entered a room filled with the fumes of burning sulphur and worked there for a full hour, coming out with his throat and lungs perfectly free."

Nelson's Fighting Men.

Of the wooden walls of England, the great sailing ships in which Admiral Nelson won his victories, and of the men who worked them, a critic writes: "Though beautiful to behold and terrible to fight with, those old men-of-war were more often than not abodes of tyranny and wretchedness. The violence of the press gangs, which seized men of all ages and occupations, was but a prelude to the oppression that followed. Deceit men were herded indifferently with ruffians, the rights of free-born Englishmen were rudely snatched from them—for them, therefore, there was no law save the will of the captain and the dread articles of war. Shoregoing leave was nonexistent, the food was atrocious and scanty, punishments were barbarous, and the only thing served out with any liberality was rum, on which the men got drunk—and then were flogged for that offence at the gratings next morning.

"In Nelson's time the seamen had few pleasures save the prospect of a hot fight and his daily plat of rum. But to these must be added the valiant satisfaction he took in his clothes. When rigged out in his best he frequently wore rings in his ears and silver buckles on his low shoes; his short blue jacket would be decorated with gold buttons and colored ribbons sewn down the seams to give an additional gaiety; his waistcoat might be red or emerald yellow, and a black silk handkerchief would be knotted loosely round his throat. As the finishing touch his hair would be hanging in a cue down his back. The broad collars were first worn as a protection against the grease and pomatum used in dressing the hair."

"But all these fripperies were discarded when the guns were cast loose from their lashings and the firelocks were lighted. It was the custom of the men when going into action to strip to the waist. They took their black silk handkerchiefs and bound them very tightly round their heads over their ears, so that the roar of the guns might not deafen them for life. It was remarked that men going into action always wore a saffron frown, however merry they were in their talk."

"Methods followed in that day were curiously primitive and tortuous, but the results were undoubtedly satisfactory, save to the nameless and numberless sailors who met grim death on the black and blood-stained decks or in the dark horror of the cockpit. That those hardy and careless men often faced death or disablement with a jest or a cheer only renders their unconscious heroism the more impressive."

Faithful Arabian Horses.

Arabian horses show remarkable courage in battle. It is said that, when a horse of this breed finds himself wounded, and knows instinctively he will not be able to carry his rider much longer, he quickly retires, bearing his master to a place of safety while he has yet sufficient strength. But if, on the other hand, the rider is wounded and falls to the ground, the faithful animal remains beside him, unmindful of danger, neighing until assistance is brought.

LONGEVITY AND SOLAR PLEXUS.

By Cultivating This Important System We May Live Forever.

Dr. Cornwall Round, a medical practitioner in London, claims to have discovered how to live forever—barring accidents. As he is only 40 years old himself it cannot be said that in his own person he offers even presumptive evidence of the truth of his theories. But that is no reason, he thinks, why he should not start a lot of other people living forever.

He tells how to do it. Firstly, there is the cultivation and the training of the solar plexus. Concentrate your mind on the plexus, think hard of something, and that something will happen. The entire mentality of humanity is like All Gaul, divided into three parts, thus: Subjective mind—S. Individual mind—O. Objective mind—O.

These three states of consciousness correspond exactly with three primary colors—namely S—blood-red; I—yellow sunlight; and O—true blood. Following along the very clear line of this demonstration, our gifted author shows that the first stage on the road to living forever is "to avoid reading tales that end badly, or witnessing maudlin dramatic tragedies, or recapitulating them in our thoughts."

The next stage is that "At meals there ought to be a cessation of all unpleasant discussion—in fact, the less said the better. So, when assimilating food and drink, we should, as far as in our power lies, have congenial surroundings, and think our highest thoughts, and in this way salt our bread with our own best ideals."

That seems very easy. And so does this:

"Human singing, particularly when combined with droning music, is a powerful means of getting at the S, and producing a highly suggestive state."

Then, from eating, the author proceeds to smelling.

"Smells," he says, "among all our senses, seems to be one that has the longest memory for associated ideas. Thus we can also make the sense of smell an avenue for healthful impressions by mentally connecting some chosen ideals with a particular odor."

"For instance, write on incense paper:

"HEALTH IS NATURAL." . . . or some affirmation which you wish to impress on yourself, ignite the paper, and hold yourself in a mentally relaxed passive condition, then the Dual systems of Brain and solar plexus, the controlling forces of long life.

perfume will tend to convey the associated suggestion to your S."

What could be simpler or surer than that? Or this: "Write or have printed in large white letters on a black ground:

"I feel and look YOUNGER Every Day!"

Place it at the head of your bed and look at it hard, very hard, just before going to sleep and just after waking in the morning. If possible, give it a passing gaze just before waking. The longer you do this, the younger you will look and feel, until in a year or two you will be feeding from the bottle.

To The King's Disadvantage. When King Edward agreed to place the hereditary revenues of the crown at the disposal of the nation he made a bad bargain. Instead of the revenues, he agreed to accept a clear yearly sum of $2,350,000 and the nation is making a profit on the bargain. It amounted to $112,500 last year and is increasing. Among the properties assigned by the king were considerable portions of the West End. Rents have risen greatly. One instance is the Carlton hotel, for which the ground rent was only $2,815 per annum, but which is now $21,000.

Male Chatterboxes.

Are not in the mass more it generate gossip than women. Makes citizens do the real gossiping in their plays, even though he followed tradition in personifying rumor as a dame. "If my gossip report be a honest woman of her word." You will find as much lively and interesting that any man's clubhouse as in any woman's. The hotel and theatre lobbies seethe with the gossiping of men. No village sewing society or wife society can equal the incessant buzz at the grocery store, and when it comes to downright, earnest, unflagging discussion of reputation and pernicious little-tattle there is no body of women in the land that can hold a candle to the foolish adult chatterboxes at any political headquarters.

Complementary Colors.

Recent experiments, the results of which have been placed before the Academy of Sciences in Paris, appears to demonstrate that the true complementary colors of the spectrum have not hitherto been recognized. Red was formerly considered to be the complement of green, yellow of violet, and blue of orange. But according to Mr. Rosenstiel, the complementaries of red and orange are neither green or blue, but two greenish-blue tints and the complement of yellow is bluish and not violet, which is the complement of green. Mr. Rosenstiel has accordingly formed a new "chromatic circle" for the use of artists, which he believes is more correct than its predecessors.

An Island for Duck Shooters.

Little Stinger Island, only 10 by 22 feet, was sold recently for $15,000, representing the highest price for a piece of land of such small dimensions ever to be recorded in Princess Anne county.

Although Little Stinger Island only contain 220 square feet of land rising from the waters of Back Bay, Va., its value lies in the fact that it forms a natural battery for shooting ducks and is located at the lead to the great Virginia and Carolina ducking grounds. The title includes a strip of land on the mainland, which, however, has no particular value except for the erection of a clubhouse.—Norfolk Landmark.

HOW UNCLE SAM PAYS DEBTS.

Settles With Warrants Drawn Upon United States Treasurer.

The United States government never pays immediate cash for any purchase or any service on the face of the earth. It does business by warrants drawn upon the Treasurer of the United States, the man in whose custody there are money and securities to the value of $1,200,000,000, and who gives a bond to the government in the sum of $150,000. The warrant is drawn by the Secretary of the Treasury or his assistants, and it may be for one cent or it may be for $50,000,000. There is no handing over of cash out of the cash drawer without a warrant; no making of receipts, few of the formalities that characterize ordinary business.

There was disbursed during the last fiscal year $567,411,611, besides much more than $100,000,000 on account of the Post Office Department. Not a penny of it was paid except by warrant upon the Treasurer of the United States. If the government owed a man a single cent it would set about paying the sum as deliberately as if it were $10,000,000. There would be absolutely no difference in the routine the claim would have to travel, unless the amount due happened to be in favor of some great man of the government. This would induce the clerks to push it along.

Ex-President Grover Cleveland holds the only warrant for one cent ever drawn by the Secretary of the Treasury upon the United States Treasurer. It was in payment of the balance of the salary due the great democratic chieftain at the close of his term in 1897, and its issuance was made necessary by one of those mistakes that are rare on the part of the expert bookkeepers engaged in running the accounts of the government.

Every quarter the President of the United States is entitled to three checks—one for $4,166.66 and two for $4,166.67. The table of methods of paying government salaries shows that if the $50,000 a year for the President is divided into twelve equal instalments, one for each month, the amounts will be $4,166.66 2-3, but the two-thirds of a cent cannot be paid at the end of a month, and so the practice is to send the President a check for $4,166.66 one month and the other two months of the quarter the amount is $4,166.67.

In some manner President Cleveland failed to get a check one month for the extra cent that was due him, and when the books were balanced at the close of his term it was detected. With all due solemnity the officers of the Treasury drew the famous warrant for one cent, and Mr. Cleveland received it with the same amount of seriousness.

He has never cashed the warrant and has preserved it, although it is good, while others believe that it is not worth a cent now.

A Deep Pennsylvania Shaft.

One of the deepest shafts in the bituminous coal field in Pennsylvania, according to the report of Col. Henry C. Deming, consulting geologist, mineralogist and chemist, is operated by the Maryland Coal Company at St. Michael, about two and one-half miles south of South Fork, on the Dunlop branch of the Pennsylvania Railroad. At the Maryland company's operation the hoist shaft is 997 feet deep and the air shaft is 671 feet. Within one mile east of this point is the highest mountain peak in the State Blue Knob—Philadelphia Record.

Mr. Carnegie's Habits.

Mr. Carnegie never smokes. No one dares light a cigarette in Skibo castle. Mr. Carnegie does not play cricket; is not devoted to riding; never followed the hounds in his life and does not shoot. Golf Mr. Carnegie plays in moderation and he is fond of trout and salmon fishing. He loves to potter about his garden. Skibo castle is to him a "crat" or a toy, with which he never tired of playing. He is always planting here, advertising a tree there, making a new road or building a bridge.

NOT GROWING COLDER.

Earth's Climate Has Not Changed Within Historic Times.

During the last few years the supposition that the earth is growing colder has received a setback from the consideration of the consequences which result from the discovery of radium in the earth's rocks. If radium exists throughout the interior of the globe in the same quantities in which it appears in the surface rocks, then such is the volume of heat which it would render up that the earth ought to be growing hotter instead of colder.

If, furthermore, the earth were slightly increasing in temperature, amount of rainfall precipitated from the atmosphere would become greater rather than less, and as, at the same time, the amount of water shut up in the earth's rocks would also be forced out in greater quantities by increasing heat, it would not be possible to suppose that the earth's surface was becoming dryer.

Therefore the supposition that the earth has exhibited within historic time any general drying up or any tendency to revert to a glacial epoch has been regarded with more and more suspicion, and the hypotheses have been substituted that either the apparent variations of climate are local, or else that they are the results of some serious conditions, the causes of which remain to be discovered.

In short, whatever test be applied it becomes extremely hard to show that the climate of any particular of the civilized world has seriously changed within historic times.

The English at Table.

The English have for centuries been accused of "adding their pleasures daily." The latest gibe is found in a letter written by a German to the London Daily Mail. He thus describes the dinner scene at a great hotel.

Elegant tables, splendid surroundings, and an absence of sound. Slowly, stately, like automotons, the dining ladies and gentlemen proceed with their meal. The scene is undoubtedly very impressive, but oh, so sad! Amid the sparkle of jewels and silver and crystal and porcelain, and a sign that fairly invites, begs, cries for a bright smile, a low rippling laugh, or at least that deep, animated hum that makes itself noticed wherever there is a large gathering, the diners sit as in expectation of the judgment-day. Sometimes somebody does speak. One word or two. The lips hardly part. The other nods his head in terrible earnest. Then silence reigns supreme again.

A friend, who had been in England, once related a story, the point of which I have never fully appreciated until now. Like myself, the first time he had entered a dining-room in London he looked round in surprise. Finally toward the end of the meal he called the waiter.

"Tell me, please," he asked, "does anybody ever laugh here?"

"Well," replied the waiter, "I am sorry to say that we have had complaints, but not often, sir, not often."

MEASURING FISH BY THE EYE.

Not Many Men Can Hit a Fish's Size Accurately in This Way.

Not every man can measure fish accurately by eye. Many people are apt to make their guess too big, and then there are many who, misled by the tapering head and the diminishing tail end of the fish, are apt to make it too small.

Here was a little bunch of men out fishing for blues, and presently one pulled in a handsome and fair sized fish. Then somebody started guessing at the length of it and one guessed two feet and another four and still another three feet. Then a man in the boat who was familiar with fishes glanced at this blue and said that he guessed it would measure two feet and a half; whereupon a man in the party who had a tape measure in his pocket got that out and put the tape on the fish; and it actually measured thirty-one inches.

There was just one man in the boat who could measure a fish accurately by the eye.—New York Sun.

BUSINESS HAS DOUBLED

Local Monument Concern the Largest in the Upper Peninsula

To increase an output 25 per cent is excellent but to double an output within one year is remarkable. This is the condition our representative found when interviewing the Escanaba Granite & Marble Works.

Their second year closed on July 31 and their books show that Escanaba has one more boast to make to the cities of the Upper Peninsula and that is of having the largest concern of this kind in the U. P. What is of still more interest to our merchants is the fact that this means one more pay roll to be distributed among the stores and places of business here.

When asked for a few interesting items we were told the monuments made here were set up principally in Menominee, Marquette, Alger, Iron, Dickinson, Schoolcraft and Delta Counties. The concern had reached as far north as Calumet where the monument ordered by the Rev. Geo. M. LaForest would be set. South to Holy Cross Cemetery Milwaukee, West to Weaver Minnesota and east to Posten Kill, New York.

The Granite used in these stones came from the quarries in Vermont, Mass., Mo., Minn. and Wisconsin. The two most popular granites seem to be the Barre granite of Vermont and the Red Minnesota. The Marble comes from New York State and Vermont.

Another interesting point is the fact that monuments seem to be about the only thing that have not increased in cost in this era of high prices.

AUTOMOBILISTS INVITED

Will Go to Rapid River August 20 to Enjoy Celebration

Rev. Father Souldard of the St. Charles church at Rapid River, has invited the automobilists of Escanaba to attend the big celebration to be given for the benefit of the church there on August 20.

A chicken dinner will be served at seven o'clock after which "A Drama of the West" will be presented. This will be followed by a dance.

A large number of the automobile owners of Escanaba have accepted Father Souldard's invitation and many others plan to take part in the big time.
