

Washington Crisps have
1/3 High cost of living
FOR CEREAL FOOD

The newspapers and magazines are full of articles relating to the HIGH cost of living, and political parties are blaming "the other fellow" for policies which, it is claimed, encourage the luxuriant growth of high prices—especially for FOOD, consumed by the American people. As Mr. Cleveland put it: "It is not a theory, but a condition, which confronts the American people." Prices of almost every kind of food, travel in airships, instead of walking on the sidewalks with old acquaintances. "Washington Crisps" is the ONLY cereal food in America which gives ONE-HALF MORE in every package than was given a year ago—

1/2 More THAN IN ANY OTHER CEREAL FOOD PACKAGE for 10¢

Millions of housewives who really want to reduce household expenses, and at the same time use the best quality foods, are using "Washington Crisps" every day in the year. When the price of meat goes soaring sky-high, eat more

Wedding Presents

The girl who likes to talk about her head solemnly at the friend who wanted to know whether she should buy a cut-glass bowl for a wedding present or send a set of Shakespeare.

"You're like all the rest," said the girl. "You haven't the remotest notion of the crisis looming over you! It's the test of friendship, this selecting a wedding present. You may have been bosom chums with the bride from the mud-pie stage, but right now either you cement that friendship or else you make two deadly enemies.

"Sometimes," went on the girl who likes to talk, "it seems as though all the people who have it in for you for something just treasure up your little grudge till you get married, and then with a gurgle of triumph take revenge by sending you a wedding present that they know will set your teeth on edge and send cold chills down your spinal column every time you look at it. She is a lucky bride whose new home is a thousand miles away where her old friends can't drop in unexpectantly and prowl around to see that she has their presents properly displayed in the best light!

"Louise moved to California when she married," related the girl who likes to talk, "and do you know what that smart girl did? When I visited her she took me and unlocked a closet door, and turned on the light. I focused a questioning eye on her after one glance, and said I didn't know she was starting a chamber of horrors, and asked what the answer was.

"Louise said she and Harry decided they had only one life to live, and even at that they probably would have unavoidable troubles, so there was no use in deliberately acquiring other troubles. They took every last wedding present they hated and stored them in the closet, and were slowly giving them away on Christmases and other occasions to people whose character they thought needed chastening. Louise generally puts the prizes she wins at card parties in there, too, because either they never match her house or else they are champagne glasses—and they can't afford much of anything but ginger ale.

"I know a bride who got only one set of salad forks, so she thankfully overlooked the fact that they were of a design calculated to make one a misanthrope for life. But when a dilatory cousin sent her some perfectly beautiful salad forks, and she simultaneously got a wedding invitation herself, she took the hideous forks to a jeweler and requested that he obliterate her initial, and put on that of the bride on whom she was going to inflict them.

"Oh, yes," said the man, languidly, as he examined the forks, "we can do it. This will be the third time we've changed the initial on these same forks!"

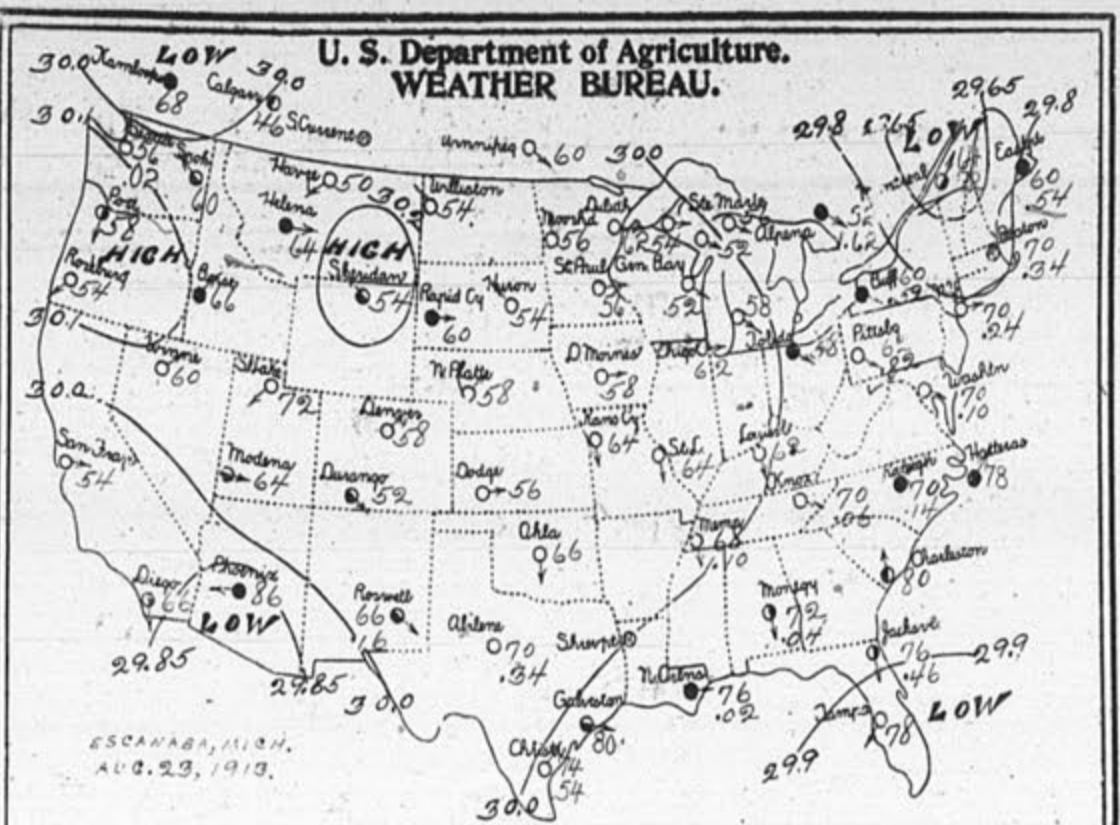

"Now, my mother got some beautiful presents when she was married—years ago I think people had kind hearts and really loved their friends—still, she, too, had her trials. Among them was a dessert set, which still lingers among the family treasures. It is a wondrous thing of bright green glass that mother says is cut, but I am positive it was run through a hydraulic press by an apprentice, who afterward went insane. The big dish is mounted in a silver filigree arrangement, which is carried on up above it like an Eiffel tower. Perched precariously on this tower is a large silver bird, with a wooden expression and a tail like that of a flying machine. There are a dozen smaller glass dishes, replicas in miniature of the big one, and the effect of the whole collection when brought on the table is to appall the brightest, most intrepid spirit, and paralyze any flow of wit that may be there. No human being can do anything but gaze in wonder at the atrocity, simply overwhelmed by the thought that a mere mundane mind could have imagined and been desperate enough to carry out the design.

"Nobody has ever dared to muse on the dark, secret thoughts of the individual who presented that dessert set to mother, and she won't tell who it was. I've always thought it was some girl who was in love with father, and because she didn't get him, wanted to blight the lives of all who came near him. Mother has a sweet nature, and believes in bearing her crosses, but I'm different.

"Still, that dessert set is bewitched, for I've bribed every maid we ever had to smash it accidentally—and they break everything else on the premises, while that escapes. I believe if I took a hatchet to that big glass dish, it would crumble the hatchet as though it were tissue paper, and remain standing grinningly, triumphantly on the pantry shelf, the horror of my life. Sometimes I think it will revenge itself on me for my bitter dislike—'I'm afraid mother will give it to me. She often says I need a touch of trouble to round out my character. If she does, I'll blow it up with dynamite!"

"It really is best to elope," commented the bride.

"That doesn't do a bit of good," gloomily replied the girl who likes to talk. "They send you to your after ward!"—Chicago Times.

Birds Rob Ohio Farmers.

Margaretta township farmers went out with guns for a pair of thieving blackbirds. Fred Blair saw one of the two leaving his dwelling through a window with his razor in its mouth. The birds inhabited a big elm tree in a field near the outskirts of the village of Teemex. A search recovered plunder in a crotch several feet above the ground. There were numerous spoils of thread, several thimbles, pins, needles, hairpins, small articles of wearing apparel, collar buttons, a pair of scissors and two case knives.

The blackbirds saw the posse of farmers coming and by dodging buck shot managed to make their escape. They are believed to have established a new "fence."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Louisiana Figs.

Figs as large as a hen's egg and fully ripe were on exhibition here, having been raised on the place of Martha Franklin in this city. The fig is the best crop of this section, and one crop that never fails. The trees grow from sprouts and thrive under any and all conditions. The fruit matures especially early and could be made the source of great revenue if used as the basis for canning and preserving for the market. Trees that are affected by the late frosts and freezes have put forth a second crop.—Baton Rouge correspondence New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Doctor the Best Pie Maker.

Dr. Silas E. McDonald is Oak Park's star pumpkin pie maker. His recipe won the prize position in the Euclid Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church's cook book.

He said his mother made good pumpkin pie, but his wife's was better, and he followed her plan. Here it is:

"To one quart of properly stewed pumpkin, pressed through colander, add enough good rich milk to moisten it, a teaspoonful of salt, one-half cup of molasses, one tablespoonful of ginger and one teaspoonful of nutmeg. Bake in moderate oven."

Only a Summer Dog.

A little boy was entertaining the minister until his mother could complete her toilet. The minister to make congenial conversation inquired:

"Have you a dog?"

"Yes, sir, a dachshund," responded the lad.

"Where is he?" questioned the dominie, knowing the way to a boy's heart.

"Father sends him away for the winter. He says it takes him so long to go in and out the door he cools the whole house off."—Success.

Recruiting the Giant.

One of the most industrious of the man-thieves who recruited the famous regiment of giants for King Frederick William of Prussia was Baron Hompesch, whose many successes led him once to cast covetous eyes upon a very lengthy joiner. He ordered of the joiner a chest or cupboard which should be as long and broad as the worker himself. In due course the baron called round. The cupboard had been finished, but he protested that it was too small. This the carpenter denied and laid him- self within it as proof of its dimensions. No sooner had he done so than servants of the baron clapped

L. C. Smith & Bros. Typewriter

(Ball Bearing—Long Wearing)

In buying a typewriter you want a satisfactory answer to three questions:

What will it do for me?
How well will it do it?
How long will it do it?

By answering these queries with the needs of the typewriter owner and user in mind, the L. C. Smith & Bros. Typewriter Company has attained the front rank in the typewriter field.

Some people think that a typewriter is a typewriter and that is all there is to it. Machines may look alike but there is a lot of difference in efficiency.

The new Model Five is built not only for straight correspondence but for tabulating, billing and in fact for every service needed in the average business.

Its ball bearings at all points where friction develops through action, permit close adjustment and insure correct and accurate typewriting.
