FRUIT GROWER TO THE FRONT

H. L. SPOONER COMES TO THE DEFENSE OF THE UPPER PENINSULA APPLE.

WEATHER IS A MERE BUGABOO

Says It Equals and in Many Cases Exceeds the Lower Michigan Offering.

H. L. Spooner, for many years a nursery salesman, farmer and extensive grower of fruit, comes to the defense of the Upper Peninsula apple as compared with the lower Michigan variety.

Mr. Spooner says: "I have read with much interest Prof. Geismar's defense of the Upper Peninsula apple in Wednesday night's Mirror. I firmly agree with Mr. Geismar.

"I was born and have lived nearly all my life in the center of the fruit belt of lower Michigan. As a nursery salesman I have visited many of the largest orchards of lower Michigan. I have also visited a number of orchards near Menominee, Bark River and Garden and am compelled to say that the Upper Peninsula can produce and does produce as good fruit as lower Michigan.

"Of course, as Mr. Geismar says, the same varieties may not do as well here as in lower Michigan, but I have seen Northwestern Greenings, McIntosh Red, Fameuse, Baldwin and Northern Spy better here than in lower Michigan, because they are more free from disease.

"I have spent six winters in the Upper Peninsula and in none of these has it been any colder or have we had any more snow than in lower Michigan. In fact, a glance at the climate map of Michigan sent out by the agricultural bureau at Washington, shows Schoolcraft, Delta and Menominee counties to be in the same climate belt as Detroit.

"I have great faith in this section of the Upper Peninsula as a fruit country. I believe we can grow any fruit as good here as in lower Michigan with the exception of the peach and I believe that even some of the hardy varieties of peach, as Crosby and Champion can be successfully grown on the garden peninsula."

NEW MAIN IS COMPLETED

REINFORCING MAIN FINISHED THIS MORNING AND WATER TURNED IN AT TEN O'CLOCK

ERADICATES THE BACK PRESSURE

Three Thousand Feet of Sixteen Inch Pipe Laid at Cost of Over Eighteen Thousand Dollars

At ten o'clock this morning water was turned into the reinforcing main just completed by the Escanaba Water company after five months' continuous labor on the part of a large force of men.

Three thousand feet of sixteen inch pipe were laid from the pumping station to Fannie street and the entire line is now in service. The pipe was laid at a cost of but $18,000.

Formerly it was necessary to keep a pressure of about eighty pounds at the pumping station to maintain a pressure of forty pounds at Charlotte street. Now a pressure of sixty pounds at the pumping station will give a pressure only slightly less at Fannie street, this because of the near eradication of back pressure through the laying of the new reinforcing main.

It is expected that within the course of a few years the main will be continued from Fannie street to North Escanaba as the needs of the consumers in that end of the city become apparent.

CHAPTER VI.

My Lady Is Placed in Great Peril.

As I was a prisoner, I said I didn't feel that blow on the cheek, but as I thought on it it fairly seared me. I hated the thought that—no, I might as well not with myself. I didn't care how they treated me, how disdainful words, how unjustly she punished me. I loved her. I couldn't help, I wanted to help her. I would kiss her plank she hallowed with her

There was another side to my confinement, and I presently took thought. I swore that I was not thinking of her. I could see dangers that perhaps no one else could. Confinement added to her peril. I didn't realize that; nobody after that realized it. There was a peril, menacing, about to break. I Remember the fact that we were hunting had got about. I had heard much of the crew, including villainous looking boatswain.

We had shipped a lot of men, about the average in and above the average in the sea. I decided as the days had with nothing happening, but had signed some I could wish left ashore.

My presence on the ship, too, was a nuisance. Alone in the little Rose with thirty men. By evil chance she had brought with her after a brief illness two men—Captain Matthews and I turning back, but she said no, and go on. We had lost too many already and her all was gone.

We were now plowing the waters of the Pacific, and I, mate of the ship, and the only other officer left, looked up!

We were nearing the latitude and longitude of the island. Suppose the men mutiny! I ground my teeth. The men liked me well and I had been particular to show them good humor, passing over things for her sake that I would not have done with a blow had she not been there.

"Captain Matthews had done once or twice of my laxness, things that he didn't do, done what I deemed best for the ship. I pledge you my word that there is a farthing for the treasure had never given it much thought. I grew to believe in it less as we got further from home, and been stronger for my duty than in any love I would have had for her from the voyage, following Ficklin's lead.

That she was poor and alone, and forgotten, I had enjoyed the dream that I could be a commander—a life shipmate—for a while. I was a rough, plain old sailor, a fool I was! And yet it had been in some way as I had known. We had been thrown into the sea by the loneliness of her and my faithful and, until that moment, unobtrusive, self-effacing

It never entered her head to presume to love her, she was less careful than she otherwise, and that very day I had poured out my declaration she had had no words to meet it. I thought her consent. I see now that she consented. I seized her in my arms, she must have been lifted up and kissed her lips and then on her cheek. Arcester, the blacked had done no worse. I forgot how she stigmatized me as a coward, low born. I don't recall that at that moment I didn't care what she had said. Her safety, her life, her honor, that I be released, that was the paramount concern.

I thought I heard a footstep on the outer cabin. Could she be coming? I had been locked up for perhaps an hour. Aye, on the instant the bell forward struck three. We kept man-of-war customs at her fancy. The sound came to me faintly as I listened. Half past 9. She could not have gone to her berth yet. She must be there in the great cabin. I ventured to call.

What it cost me any man can imagine—and to humble myself to ask her mercy too. I am a man of fierce temper, as you have deemed, but I can control it on occasion, and I did it now. I shook the door of the cabin gently at first and then vigorously and called once and again. There was no answer. I beat upon it. I raised my voice. I scarcely thought I could be heard on deck. The wind was blowing, the sea was heavy, and the ship was pitching wildly. The straining, the creaking, the groaning of the timbers would have prevented such a noise as I made from attracting attention unless some one were in the cabin. But all in vain. No heed was paid to me, and yet I could swear that somebody was there. I don't know how exactly, but I was conscious of her presence. Perhaps because I was so in love with her that I could always tell whether she was about. I can't say this day.

It made me madder than before to go thus unheeded. I was on the point of giving over my endeavor, but I thought of the peril in which she stood.

"Madam," I whispered softly, and then more loudly, "Madam!" I did not venture to say any other word. I called again, and yet a third time, and then for the last time with the full power of my voice. I heard a movement outside and then a voice—beloved, blessed voice, even when it rated me.

"Well, sir?" The words came to me through the partition. She was there, then, as I had divined. She had been there all the time, trying me.

"I would fain have a word with you," I answered, putting everything else by and speaking most entreatingly and with a humility I did not altogether feel.

"I desire no speech with you," was her cold and measured answer. I could hear her turn as if to move away.

"Think of my long and faithful service," I urged, "and of your gracious friendship for me, often expressed."

"You yourself forgot it tonight."

"For God's sake," I cried desperately as I heard her go, "just one word."

"An apology? Do you beg forgiveness?"

"No—yes—anything!" I finished in confusion.

"I will not listen. I wish to convince you of the enormity of what you have done, the grossness of your presumption. I will give you time for quiet reflection, sir."

"I am convinced already," I urged hurriedly.

"So easily?" she mocked.

"Madam, if you love life and honor I pray you hear me. It is not of myself I think, but of you. You are in grave peril, returned I with the utmost seriousness.

"What peril?"

There was a note of alarm in her voice in spite of her effort to be indifferent. I seized upon its promise eagerly.

"The men of the ship—they are not what they should be. Captain Matthews is alone. Pimball is a villain. I trust no one but—"

"And is this the plea on which you seek enlargement?"

"That is the only plea."

"You did not discover this danger until I locked you up, did you?"

"I tell you that it is not for myself I fear, but for you," I persisted.

The wind had ceased blowing hard outside, and some spray came in through the port as the waves slapped the side of the ship. I closed and secured it. There was nothing to be gained there. I must seek some other way. I was not weaponless. Nobody had thought to search the cabin, and a brace of pistols which I always kept loaded and ready for an emergency were locked securely in my chest. My hanger hung at the side of my berth. The door was a strong one. It was locked and barred without. I might have broken it down; I could have done so if I had had space enough in which to run and hurl myself against it. I might even have kicked it to pieces with my heavy seaman's boot. Certainly I could easily have blown the lock off with my pistol, but any of these endeavors would have roused the ship.

I had one other hope. If Captain Matthews should come to the cabin I would appeal to him. For the rest I determined not to sleep that night. Some strange foreboding possessed me. We were near the latitude and longitude of the island we were seeking. If indeed there were such an island as was thought to be, and I reasoned that the men would argue now and it would be a good time for an outbreak, especially since I was removed. Would it come that night? Would it come at all? Was I mistaken in the men?

I have often wondered why women were made, and since they were made, why men should be such fools about them. Here I was helpless just because I had snatched a kiss from one. And now that I am in the mood for confession, I might as well say that I fully rejoiced in that kiss.

Well, whatever happened, I had the memory of that kiss. She would never forgive me. Of course there was absolutely no hope that she would return my suit, even in her poverty. She was not for such as I, and if there was anything in this old buccaneer's parchment, if there was an island and if she did get the treasure, why, the world would be at her feet again. And I, like the fool I was, was helping her to get it, to bring it about. I was mad, aye, mad, with impotent helplessness that night.

I sat there in the dark, no light being vouchsafed to me, and the lights in the outer cabin not having been lighted for a long time. The wind rose and rose. The ship was pitching madly. My room was on the starboard side of the cabin, and presently I heard all hands called to reef the topsails. Captain Matthews was alert and ready, of course. Presently he put the ship about, and with the canvas off of her she was steady. There did not seem to be any especial danger in the weather, and for that I was thankful.

I must have dozed. I was awakened by the last echoes of the bell forward. I didn't know what time it was, because I didn't know whether I had heard it begin to strike, but I could count three couples, which meant that it was 11 o'clock at least. I didn't know, of course, that it was eight bells, midnight, until the voice of the boatswain came to me through the bulkhead that separated the cabin from the quarterdeck:

"A—A—all the port watch!" I could hear the men below grumbling and cursing as they turned out. They had evidently been sent below to the hammocks after the topsails had been reefed for a couple of hours in. I could hear scraps of conversation.

"Now!"

"Kill him!"

"This is the best time!"

"The old man's alone!"

What I heard filled me with dismay. I picked up the pistol and pointed it at the lock in the door. I had made up my mind, come what might, to blow off the lock and get free. Before I could press the trigger I heard a call on the deck above me, a shot, a rush of feet, a scuffle, a groan, a fall!

IF HAIR IS TURNING GRAY, USE SAGE TEA

Don't Look Old! Try Grandmother's recipe to darken and beautify faded, lifeless hair.

That beautiful, even shade of dark, glossy hair can only be had by brewing a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray, streaked and looks dry, wispy and scraggly, just an application or two of Sage and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundred-fold.

Don't bother to prepare the tonic; you can get from any drug store a 50 cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," ready to use. This can always be depended upon to bring back the natural color, thickness and lustre of your hair and remove dandruff, stop scalp itching and falling hair.

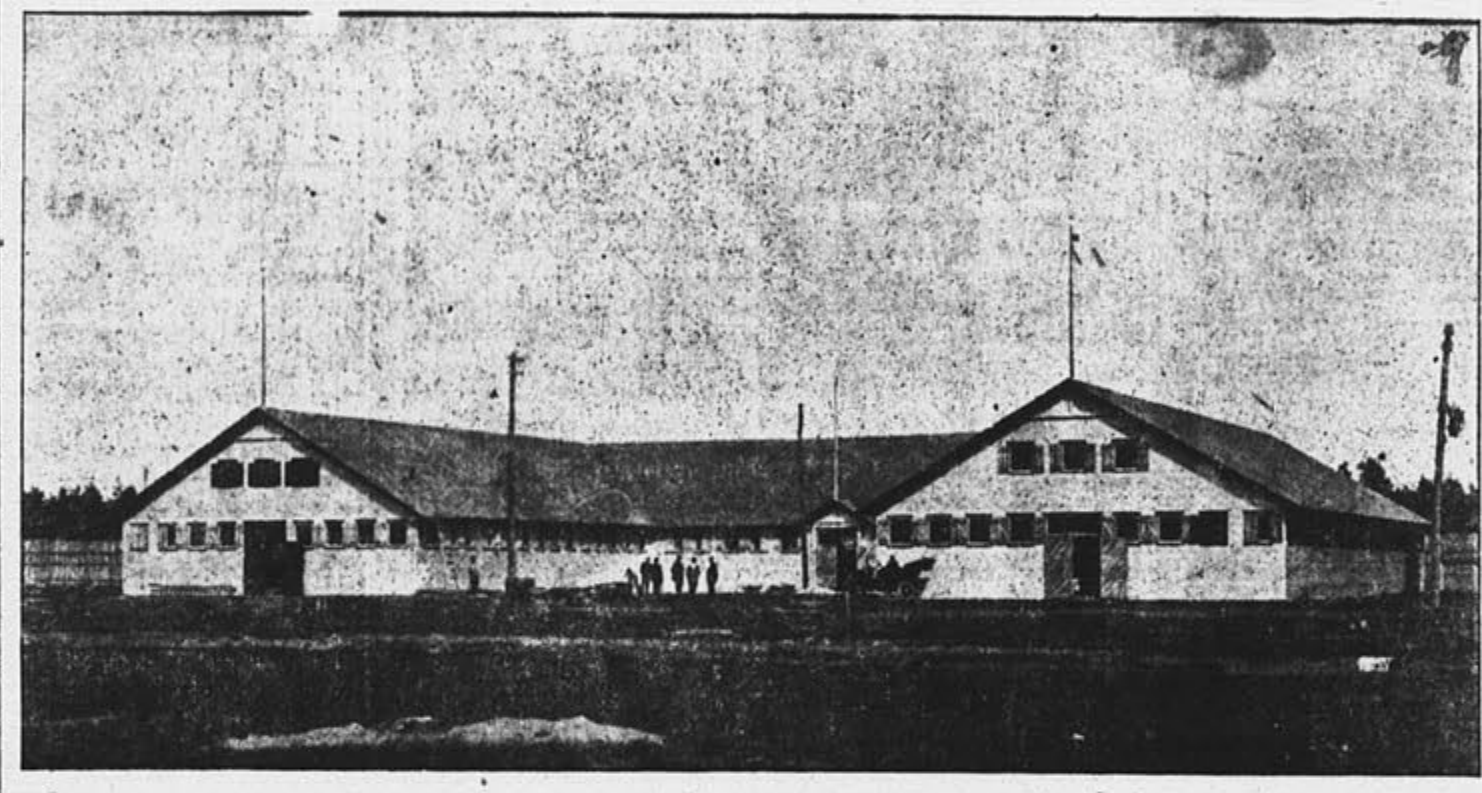

Everybody uses "Wyeth's" Sage and Sulphur because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair has disappeared, and after another application it becomes beautifully dark and appears glossy, lustrous and abundant.

WHO PAYS THE TAXES?

Are you playing fair with the home merchant? It's an open secret that at least one quarter of the necessities and luxuries of life used by the people of Escanaba and the surrounding district, are purchased from mail order houses and travelling agents. If any good reason could be offered for this condition, no manner of argument could prove the practice wrong. It is a safe assertion that in nine cases out of ten the same articles being purchased today from mail order houses, could be bought from local merchants at the same figure or lower, quality considered. It is a known and established fact that goods advertised at what appears to be exceptional prices are of notoriously low grade and the same class of goods could be secured from the local merchant for the same price. The local merchant, however, cannot afford to advertise as a leader a cheaply made article. The mail order house does not come into personal contact with its patrons. The local merchant is with you always and meeting you personally when he makes a sale, he is held responsible for the standard quality of that article.

In addition to offering you the convenience of supplying your wants when they are wants and guaranteeing to give you full value for your money, the local merchant is one of the heaviest taxpayers in every community. He contributes largely by the payment of taxes, to the support of your schools for the education of your children; his money aids in providing tenance of parks, bathhouses and other public utilities for your enjoyment and convenience and in every way he is a contributing factor to your welfare.

Not a single mail order house pays a cent of taxes in the city or county in which you live. The mail order houses contribute nothing for the support of your schools, churches, or public utilities; the mail order houses contribute nothing toward the building of our roads or streets. In fact the mail order house receives all and gives nothing that you cannot secure at the same price, quality considered, from your home merchant, who is a constant and liberal supporter of your home institutions.

Milk, we are told, can be preserved longer in red bottles than in bottles of other colors, but if that is true should not the color of the cow have an effect on the fluid?

When the weather makes work even more distasteful than usual and leisure even more alluring, then the strike germ gets in its work.

Modern dress, the alienists say, causes insanity among women. The price on it causes madness among men.

Three years don't constitute a long and successful career in most lines of endeavor, but they do in aviation.

telegram from a newspaper man. Dooin went to William F. Baker, one of the owners of the club, and the latter immediately informed him that there was nothing in the rumor.

Mr. Baker, declared Dooin, is greatly pleased with the manner in which the team is going and can see no reason for getting a new leader.

DREW EQUALS A WORLD'S RECORD.

Howard P. Drew, the Springfield (Mass.) high school sprinter, equaled the world's record for the 100 yard dash over Charter Oak track at the Connecticut fair.

He ran the distance in 9.35 seconds.

Five stop watches caught this time, and so it was officially announced, but it was said later that two watches caught the feet footed negro in 9.25 seconds.

Following the 100 yard dash, Drew ran the 220 yards in 22 seconds flat. The silver loving cup given to the team winning the most points was awarded to the New Haven Athletic club, whose points totaled twenty-six, and second prize went to the Pastime Athletic club of New York.

Dan Kelly of Spokane set the world's mark for 100 yards at 9.25 seconds on June 23, 1906.

HELPS SOLVE THE MYSTERY

Marinette-Police Receive Telegram to be on Lookout for Woman From Kaukauna.

A telegram received from Appleton today by Chief Cook, of the Marinette police throws some light on the attempt of suicide of yesterday on the part of an unknown woman.

The wire addressed to the chief asked that he be on the lookout for a woman by the name of Elsie Erb, aged 30, who disappeared from Appleton on Sunday and was seen in Kaukauna Sunday night. The description given corresponds to some extent to that of the woman who attempted suicide in the Menominee river yesterday. Miss Erb has been an inmate of an asylum and it was thought that she had again gone insane.

Marinette police authorities have been unable to find any woman in Marinette answering to the description given.

OPERATIONS AT JUDSON MINE ARE PROGRESSING

Considerable Money Being Expended by Judson Mining Company at Alta

S. E. Bracegirdle, representing the Judson Mining company of Crystal Falls is in the city in the interest of his company of the company's new Mining proposition at Alta, Mr. Bracegirdle says.
"The Judson Mining Company in which G. G. Hartley of Duluth and H. H. Porter of Chicago are the principle capitalists, are opening up the old Mastadon district which is about seven miles south of Crystal Falls. At present the property is the scene of much construction work in the way of building Boiler and Power Houses, Dry, Warehouse and Office.
"About five weeks ago ground was broken for the sinking of a shaft at an angle of forty-five degrees following the foot wall and striking in a northwesterly direction and at present the shaft is down to a depth of 75 feet. It is reported by authentic mining men that the Judson find is probably one of the largest of its kind on the Menominee Range. The iron ore is covered with an over burden of about a hundred feet and averages a very good percentage.
"It is quite probable that within the next year or two the surrounding vicinity of the Mastadon District will be the scene of a heavy mining industry as there has been and still is a considerable amount of explanatory work being done on the adjoining properties. The Cleveland Cliffs have explored the two forties adjoining, north of the Judson and still north of this the U. S. Steel Company are interested.
"Between the Judson and the Cleveland Cliffs Property the Balkan Mining Co. are sinking a drain shaft for the purpose of draining the surrounding property preparatory to stripping the iron ore body as it has been deemed advisable to work this property as an open pit.
New Town of Alpha.
"The new town of Alpha which is located within a quarter of a mile of the mines is rapidly building up. Many mercantile buildings are being erected besides a town hall and school. The town hall is almost completed and will be used as a temporary school house until the new school house has been built. Plans for the new school have been decided upon and it is estimated at a cost of $30,000. The contract for the building of the school house has been let to Mr. Gustafson of Norway, Michigan. Plans for a $25,000 modern fire proof hotel have been decided upon and a contract for the building of this hotel will be let within a week or so."

nation to the company to take effect on September 15. She will leave few days later for Milwaukee to make her home.
Always courteous and obliging Miss Fish has ingratiated herself with the patrons of the company and her departure for Milwaukee is greatly regretted.
She will be succeeded by Miss Elizabeth Wolfe.
