LAW IS NOT UNDERSTOOD

CUTOVER AND WILD LANDS FREE FROM TAXATION ONLY UNDER CERTAIN CONDITIONS

TREASURER RECEIVES INQUIRIES

That Purchased as a Home and Never Cultivated Exempt for Five Years

There went into effect in the state of Michigan on August 15, last, a law exempting cut-over and wild lands from taxation for five years. County Treasurer Hess has received from numerous farmers in Delta county inquiries regarding this law, which inquiries show that the statute is not understood by the people whom it is supposed to benefit. The enactment is as follows:

An act to exempt certain cut-over and wild lands from taxation in certain cases: Hereafter any cut-over and wild lands, as defined herein, which shall be actually purchased by any person for the purpose of making a home shall be exempt from the payment of all taxes for a period of five years thereafter. Cut-over and wild lands shall be construed to mean any land or land from which timber has been removed and no part of which description claimed to be exempt has ever been cultivated. The exemption herein provided for shall be operative in any case, unless the purchaser, either upon contract or otherwise, actually resides upon the land for at least two years thereafter and every year of the said five years in a manner to subject the same to taxation. Provided, that the exemption therein provided for shall not extend to more than eighty acres purchased by any one person.

Any person claiming exemption under the act shall make application to the supervisor for exemption at the assessment of the township and the supervisor shall enter the assessment roll the person's name and the description of the land, as though taxes were to be levied upon the land, and refer the matter to the board of review of the township, which shall, if the conditions entitling exemption have been met, order to be written on the assessment roll. Exempt under the act and wild land act, first year, second year, third year, fourth year, fifth year, sixth year, seventh year, eighth year, ninth year, tenth year, after which the land shall no longer be exempt under this act.

Application of the Law.

The law clearly applies only to lands purchased after the act went into effect. It does not apply to lands owned by the state or to lands owned by the timber on them; it does not apply to lands that have been improved in any way.

Treasurer Hess is perfectly willing to explain this explanation to all callers at his office, but he feels that if the people understand it they will be able to take the trouble and expense of going to Escanaba to learn the facts.

FOOTBALL ON SATURDAY

High School Eleven Will Meet Team Composed of Graduates

The first football game of the season will take place on Saturday afternoon when the football team of Escanaba High school meets a team composed of the alumni.

Bowles is confident that the team will turn out a winning team this year although the members of the team are not any too weighty. The team has twice captured the Upper Peninsula high school football championship and they may expect to repeat this year.

CANOEISTS IN THE HARBOR

MRS. H. J. ELLIS AND SON ARRIVE IN ESCANABA EN ROUTE TO NEW ORLEANS IN CANOE

SERVICE WILL BEGIN MONDAY

Will Leave Escanaba Tomorrow Morning, Proceeding to Green Bay

En route to New Orleans by canoe Mrs. H. J. Ellis and son Earl arrived in Escanaba late yesterday afternoon and will continue their journey south tomorrow morning.

The canoe was placed in the water at Gwinn and the trip from that place to Escanaba, although made in extremely disagreeable weather, was accomplished without much trouble.

The canoe is a sixteen foot affair, very substantial in appearance and well adapted to the long journey. They are carrying about 150 pounds of baggage which includes a tent. They paddle during the day and when night overtakes them they go into camp if a farm house is not nearby.

From Escanaba they will proceed down Green Bay to Menominee and thence to Green Bay. From Green Bay they will make their way up the Fox river to Lake Winnebago, crossing to the Wisconsin river and down that waterway to the Mississippi. Mr. Ellis expects to make good time in his trip down the Mississippi to New Orleans and expects that the entire journey will occupy from eight to ten weeks.

Mrs. Ellis spent the day with relatives at Garden.

MOFFITT REPORTS TO HIS CHIEF ON COPPER STRIKE

Says Relations are Too Strained to Hope for Arbitration of Any Sort

(By Associated Press.)

Washington, Sept. 25.—John A. Moffitt, the special mediator from the department of labor who was sent by Secretary Wilson to Calumet to adjust the copper strike has reported that he found the relations between the miners and the managers so strained that it was impossible to bring them together on any satisfactory basis.

Moffitt has submitted a detailed report to Secretary Wilson, who says that he will not say at this time what action the department will take now.

This picture shows the body of William J. Gaynor, late Mayor of New York, who died while on his way to Europe in search of health, lying in state in the City Hall, New York. Over 75,000 people viewed the body which was guarded by the police. A line of people over two miles long stood in the rain for hours and not one went away without paying his respects to the late Mayor. It was a most remarkable tribute. The throng represented every class and occupation, every race and creed. There were easily five hundred Chinamen among the crowd and several delegations of boy scouts in uniforms, and of public school children carrying the banners of their schools. A little bootblack, attired in the uniform of a Municipal Ferry employee, was the first of the unofficial boat to pass through the portal and tip-toe timidly to the bier.

"If the newspapers would print pictures of girls making bread and winning cooking prizes instead of pictures of Evelyn Thaw and of boys raising prize winning corn instead of Jack Johnson, the country would be better off," said A. P. Sandell secretary of agriculture from Ohio.

He also made a strong plea for girls remaining upon the farm and said that unless the girls would stay on the farm the boys would not do so. Three fourths of the men in the Ohio state penitentiary are men who left the home on the farm for city life. He advises that the girls remain on the farm for the good of the country.

NO COMMITMENT ISSUED

Judge McEwen Awaits an Opinion From the Attorney General

When William Sauers chose to take a jail sentence of nine days instead of paying a fine for speeding it was announced that proceedings against the sheriff would be instituted should he accept the prisoner. It was decided to ask the attorney general for his opinion on the speeding ordinance and pending the receiving of that decision it is probable that Judge McEwen will withhold issuing a commitment for Sauers, thus avoiding disagreeable legal complications.

HOLD UNIQUE CELEBRATION

BIRTH ANNIVERSARIES OF FATHER, SON AND GRANDSON CELEBRATED ON THE SAME DAY

A SURPRISE TO ELDER HARING

P. V. Haring was Seventy-Eight Years Old Yesterday, Son 50 and Grandson 22

A birthday surprise party held last evening at the home of P. V. Haring 1400 Hale street was out of the ordinary inasmuch as the birth anniversary of three members of the family, father son and grandson were celebrated at the same time.

The coincidence is a peculiar one. P. V. Haring was born on September 24, fifty years ago and Elton Brown, grandson of P. V. Haring and a nephew of M. A. Haring was born on September 24, twenty-two years ago.

The party arranged last evening by Mrs. M. A. Haring and Mrs. William Brown was ostensibly for their father but the celebration included congratulations to the other two members of the family whose birth anniversaries occurred yesterday. M. A. Haring was out of the city and unable to be present. Twenty relatives of P. V. Haring assembled at his home at six o'clock last evening and partook of a bounteous dinner. The evening was passed with games and music and Mr. Haring was presented with a purse of silver.

The elder Haring has been a resident of Escanaba for over thirty years coming to this city from Beaver Dam, Wis.

ELEVENTH SPEEDER IS OUT OF TOWN MOTORIST

E. O. Brault of Manistique Pays Fine and Costs for Exceeding Speed Limit

The eleventh speeder spotted by Motorcycle Cop Carney happened to be an out of town motorist, E. O. Brault of Manistique. He was apprehended last evening on Hartnett avenue while proceeding at a rate of thirty miles an hour. He appeared before Judge McEwen, pleaded guilty and was fined $5 and costs, amounting to $9.25.

Charles Brandenburg appeared before Judge McEwen this morning and pleaded guilty to speeding. He was fined $5 and costs. The fact that Mr. Brandenburg resembles somewhat another individual saved him five dollars. When he appeared before Judge McEwen this morning and stated that he was there to plead guilty to the charge placed against him the Judge mistook him for another whom he expected to plead at that time and it was not until he had fixed the fine and Brandenburg had departed that he realized his mistake.

T. M. Judson has asked for a jury trial on the charge of speeding and the case will accordingly be heard tomorrow morning before Judge Glaser.

OPENINGS IN FULL SWING

ESCANABA MERCHANTS HAVE OUTDONE THEMSELVES IN SHOWING OF FALL STYLES

THE SMALL HAT MOST POPULAR

Stores Resplendent in Autumn Finery and Great Crowds Turn Out Despite Rain

The fall millinery openings are in progress today in Escanaba. The leading department and millinery establishments are resplendent with the most up-to-the-minute showings in fall millinery and the ladies of Escanaba are or ought to be in a sort of seventh heaven of delight.

The buyers and trimmers for the various millinery establishments in the city have but recently returned from the fashion centers of the United States and the local stores are showing the latest thing in feminine headgear.

The stores are resplendent in fall regalia and it is doubtful if the stores have ever presented a more pleasing appearance than at the present time.

The small close-fitting hats are shown almost to the exclusion of the large or even the medium sized hat. The majority are caught up at the side so that the coiffure may be seen. Flush is very prominent and extremely modish and mirlie is extensively used. The face hats are shown in many shapes and will be largely worn this fall. The New Blue, taupe, cherry and, of course, black are the predominant colors.

Brocaded ribbons are used extensively in trimming, feathers and furs are popular, while mirlie plays its usual prominent part. All in all the shapes, shades, etc., are what the female of the species would doubtless describe as "beautiful, superb, divine," while mere man at loss for words would content himself with "mighty nifty."

The merchants of Escanaba have spared no expense in securing and showing the latest things in millinery and the ladies showed their appreciation by turning out this afternoon in large numbers despite the inclemency of the weather. Living models and music add greatly to the showings.

The openings in the majority of the stores will continue throughout the remainder of the week.

The showing of coats and suits in the stores really beggars description. The buyers for the departments have exercised great care in purchasing only the very latest models and Escanaba women never looked upon prettier or newer models than are showing this week.

The fall showing in men's wear is also on in the stores and while the men do not profess the interest in such matters that the women do, the display of fall wear for men was by no means neglected.

CLOSED SEASON CHANGES

Will Be Illegal to Keep Trout Caught in Nets From October 10 to Nov. 1.

Marquette, Sept. 25.—S. P. Wires of Duluth, has applied to W. R. Oates, state game and fish warden, for permission to have a number of commercial fishing boats take trout in closed season, so that the spawn they contain may be secured for the United States hatchery at Duluth. Mr. Oates now has the request under advisement. Mr. Wires has annually, for several years past, secured large quantities of spawn in this port.

The last legislature, among other changes in the laws relating to commercial fishing, radically changed the closed season for trout. It has previously been from November 15 to December 20, but this fall and hereafter it will extend from October 10 to November 1. During this period, the trout are in a green state and are in the spawning beds. The state fish department contended that under the old commercial fishing law the closed season came too late to be of the greatest value in conserving the trout.

This view was combated by many fishermen, but the legislature accepted it, nevertheless. The closed season for whitefish remains as formerly, Nov. 15 to Dec. 20. Some of the opposition of the fishermen to the present closed season for trout was due to the fact that in the last days of October they can do considerable fishing, whereas from Nov. 15 to Dec. 20 the lakes are usually so rough that they are unable to set and lift their nets with any regularity.

The change in the season recalls that the session of the legislature last spring an attempt was made to place the laws relating to commercial fishing in Michigan waters on a scientific basis, but it was defeated largely because the attorney general ruled that the proposed law was local legislation, and therefore would be unconstitutional. After this ruling, a resolution calling for the amendment of the constitution so as to permit local game and fish legislation was passed by the senate, but it was carried no further.

The annual report of the state game and fish department outlines the "zone" bill that was sought from the legislature, and sets forth the steps that in its opinion, are necessary to give Michigan the scientific fishing laws needed to conserve the fishing industry and to continue the lakes as a source of a cheap food supply.

Mr. Oates Explains.

"The inadequacy of the present laws and the necessity of their amendment in a sweeping manner before we will have scientific protection of our commercial fisheries is due to the fact that Michigan borders on four of the great lakes," State Game and Fish Warden Oates explained yesterday. "Michigan has extensive Superior, Michigan and Huron shore lines, and the southeast part of the state is touched by Lake Erie. In these various waters having a large geographical extent and each, possessed of distinctive conditions, the spawning seasons for the commercial fish naturally vary greatly, yet we have been trying to meet these varied conditions with one general law. It is of course inevitable that while under the terms of the general law the fish may be protected during spawning season in some waters, in most of the waters of the state they are not protected at all."

"The 'zone' law was proposed to remedy this condition. It called for the establishment of five zones in each of which regulations provided by the state would be adapted to the conditions in that particular zone. It contemplated the fixing of different closed seasons."

"But this bill was not accepted by the legislature, though there was much sentiment favorable to it, for the reason that the attorney general was of the opinion that it was unconstitutional. The game department contends that scientific conservation of the resources of food fisheries must be brought about by legislation that will be flexible enough to meet varying local conditions. Under the system of general legislation now in vogue our laws cannot be so constructed that they will give adequate protection."

"The department hopes to see the legislature take up this subject in an effective manner at some early session."

SELECTED BY SENATE

REASON FOR OUT-OF-DOORS INAUGURATION OF PRESIDENT.

Comparatively Trivial Misunderstanding Between Speaker Henry Clay and the Upper House Led to Custom Since Maintained.

When tens of thousands of people gathered in front of the capitol at Washington on March 4 to see Woodrow Wilson inaugurated as president of the United States probably few realized what was the beginning of the custom of holding presidential inaugurations out of doors. Well, it originated in a sort of ruction between the United States senate and Henry Clay, speaker of the house of representatives.

The senate had not been in existence when the new president was being sworn in, there was no house and no speaker. When George Washington first took the oath the lack of railroads and the condition of the highways between Mount Vernon and New York delayed the inauguration until April 30, and the new congress was already in session. When Washington took the oath at his second inauguration the house had adjourned sine die, and the president went to the senate chamber for the ceremonies. John Adams repaired to the senate for his inauguration, but the senate held the ceremony in the representatives' hall in order to get more room. Thomas Jefferson took the oath at both his first and second inaugurations in the senate chamber. James Madison was inaugurated in the hall of the house for both his terms.

But when a senate committee called on Speaker Henry Clay in March, 1817, and informed him that they would like to borrow the house chamber for the inauguration of James Monroe, he told the senators they could hold the show in his hall, but he would not surrender control. The senators wanted to bring with them their comfortable red Morocco chairs, but Speaker Clay told them they would have to sit in the democratic split bottoms with which the house chamber was furnished. We are told the senators retired in high dudgeon and the senate held the inauguration of President Monroe at the east front of the capitol.

Monroe's second inauguration took place in the hall of the house, but we are not told whether the red Morocco chairs were moved over from the senate chamber for the accommodation of the senators. John Quincy Adams took the oath in the hall of the representatives, but Andrew Jackson informed the senate in 1829 that he would take the oath "at such place as the senate may think proper to designate." The senate again selected the east front of the capitol for the inauguration ceremonies, and all subsequent inaugurations have been held out of doors.

Mar's Nestor.

There is a newspaper man in Washington known as the oldest among the war, state and navy correspondents. He is noted for another thing—an ability to ask more direct, artful and embarrassing questions to an executive officer than any other three men. The other day Secretary of State Bryan was being put through the usual third degree by the newspaper men, this man taking the lead as usual.

When the men had finally gone to the secretary of state turned to Secretary Manton J. Wyvell and asked:

"Who is that elderly correspondent?"

"The white haired man?"

"Yes."

"That," said Secretary Wyvell, "is the nestor of Washington correspondents."

"I should say," remarked the secretary of state, "that he is the true nestor of Washington."

Attorney Newton Spencer is spending the day in Menominee on business.

THE ISLAND OF THE STAIRS

A True Account of Certain Strange and Wonderful Adventures of Master John Hampdon, Seaman, and Mistress Lucy Wilberforce, Gentlewoman, In the Great South Seas.

CHAPTER XVII. How We Won Light, Life, Liberty and Love.

"I went down the cave. To find the water was easy. Sure enough, it led away through a narrow rift in the direction we could not tell, its tendency was downward, and it would come out upon some place somewhere. It had not to me as I examined it before the quake that the rift was more than enough to carry the water, but it probably opened wider now by the and so we followed it. At some times the walls closed to water course, making tunnels, and I went in the advance, for I had what my bulk could pass present little difficulty for her. Under in and out among the until it seemed to me that we were miles, although in reality it have been but a few hundred

"I came to a place too low narrow for me to pass, although I might, perchance, have thrust my head through. 'This is the end,' she said.

"I had the ax with me and the which I had thrust into my the rock seemed soft. Lying upon my back and covering my with one hand, I struck at it the ax, thus enlarging the passage. The water beneath me was cold, the candle in the lantern rning lower and lower, but I never did I work so in all as then. At last I loosened a ck, which fell suddenly upon and I not seen it coming and the ax and stayed its progress unpraised hands it might have ue. As it was, it fell fairly breast. We stepped out upon the sand. My clothes were torn to rags; blood was clogged in my hair and on my forehead; my face was black with sweat and dust. There were wounds on my arms and legs. I was a gory and horrible spectacle. Mistress Lucy had suffered no wounds, but her clothes were rent and torn. Her face was grimy and beneath the dust and earth stain it was as white as the cap of a wave.

"Thanks to God," she said at last, "and you, we have won!" I thought she would have fainted. I caught her by the arm, sat her down upon the island and sprinkled the water from the brook in her face until presently she revived.

"We are not safe yet," I urged. "There were hundreds of savages upon the island. They could not all have been in the cave. We must go warily. We cannot rest now."

"I am ready," she said with great spirit, getting to her feet and stretching out her hand; "if you will help me I can go anywhere."

I still had my sword, I drew it and led on, keeping well under the shelter of the cliffs. We walked up the end toward the giant stairs. There were men, islanders, at the top of the wall, but my first glance told me that we had nothing to fear from them, for the stairs were gone. They were but a scattered heap of stones. The earthquake had crumbled the work of the builders of bygone years, and as the stairs had fallen away they had left the cliff sheer and bare for a hundred feet. They couldn't come at us.

"It is an act of God," said I, "that has broken down the stairs."

"But there may be another way of descent," she said after a moment. "Oh, let us leave this dreadful island!"

I had no hope that the dinghy had been spared, but its place was not far away, and we walked to it in silence. It was gone. A tidal wave had followed the earthquake. The canoes in which the islanders had come had been dashed to pieces and their keepers killed. The survivors were prisoners on the island unless their friends came to their help and even then until they could devise some way of getting down the cliff. And we, too, were prisoners. Some of our gear, the compass, some provisions which I had stored in the crannies of the rock were still there, but they were useless to us. Something else had happened. The earthquake had broken the vast barrier reef. Before us was a practicable passage to the sea!

If we only had a boat! I turned to the canoes hopeful of finding one seaworthy, and as I did so my little mistress caught me by the arm.

"Look!" she cried, pointing far up the horizon.

I turned, and there, bottom upward, floated the dinghy. The sight of her was like a draft of wine. I turned and ran up the sand, followed by my lady. When opposite the boat I kicked off my shoes—I had on little else but shirt and trousers—jumped into the lagoon, swam to the dinghy and towed her ashore. Assisted by Mistress Lucy, I turned her over. I then hunted up the few things we had saved, with a little store of coconuts which we had accumulated in one of the caves, shipped the oars, which, being tied to the rowlocks, had not been washed away, and shoved off.

The mast was still lashed to the thwart, and a boat cloak had been caught under the forward thwart. The painter was still fastened to a ring bolt in the bow, and as soon as I had rowed through the narrow entrance I stepped the mast and improvised a sail with the boat cloak and the painter. The breeze blew softly. We passed the island and then set our course by the compass to the eastward, headed for the great South American coast so many miles away.

We had gone through many perils, but had sustained them all. Fortune, as if ashamed of her allotted trouble, made it up to us in the end, for in a few days we fell in with a Spanish ship of war in the service of the viceroy of Peru, which had been exploring the south seas and had been driven far out of her course by the same storm which had wrecked the Rose of Devon. Commander Don Antonio Regarded us as a prize. He had a small boat, and we were taken aboard. He was a good man, and he treated us well. He had a small boat, and we were taken aboard. He was a good man, and he treated us well. He had a small boat, and we were taken aboard. He was a good man, and he treated us well.

We Fell In With a Spanish Ship of War.

then, and he treated us courteously, gave us food and raiment, assigned a spare cabin to my mistress and berthed me aft with the officers. He was bound for Valparaiso, which in due course, without mishap, we reached. There we took ship for the Portuguese possessions on the other shore of the continent and thence we got a ship from Rio de Janeiro to Lisbon, and so at last we came to England and to Plymouth harbor, whence we had set forth nearly a year ago.

I paid the captain of the Spanish frigate which had picked us up with an emerald of great price, which he was loath to accept, but which we pressed upon him. We had little difficulty, through his kind offices, in selling another stone or two for ready money at Valparaiso, so we experienced no difficulties which could be avoided by the expenditure of money upon the way.

I took my mistress to the house of the devoted Master Ficklin, who, with that kindly woman, his sister, greeted us as if we had risen from the dead, and, greatly rejoicing in my lady's good fortune, gave us the warmest of welcomes. There I had what I expected would be my last interview with her. We had been thrown constantly together during the six months that had elapsed between our great adventures upon the Island of the Stairs and our arrival in England. We had discussed everything else, I think, but she said naught of my love. Indeed, she said league of sea over which we passed on our way homeward seemed to remove her farther from me.

We were alone. Good Mistress Ficklin had given us her parlor for the afternoon. I took from my pockets the canvas pouches filled with her treasures and laid them on the table.

"These, Mistress Wilberforce," said I, formally enough, although my heart was beating rapidly, "are yours."

She waved her hand as if they were of small moment.

"We have discussed that before," she said. "What of yourself?"

"Last night," I replied, "I went down on the docks. A company's ship sails for India next week. They want a chief mate, and if my references serve they will engage me."

"And you have these references?"

"I thought, madam, that your friends in the city might give them to me when they know."

"But I have no friends in the city," she said.

"These," said I, pointing to the table, "will buy them for you."

"And so," she said, without looking at me, "and so it is goodbye, then. May you be happy."

She extended her hand to me, and I caught it. I kissed it passionately, but when I made to let it go she would not.

"Master Hampdon," she said, looking at me, her eyes brighter than the diamonds and bluer than the sapphires upon the table, "you are a fool."

"Right well do I know that, mistress," said I, striving to fetch a smile to match her own.

"And a blind man as well."

"Whereat I was a blind man indeed, for my eyes misted up, but not with the blood as in the battle. And I, as strong and tough as a mountain oak, was as like to faint as any lovesick girl."

"John, John," came the sweetest voice in the world to me through the darkness, "don't you see? Don't you know that I love you and you only, that you have all my life, and that my life, which is yours a thousand times on sea and shore, is not worth living without you?"

"But your friends, your world," I protested as she came nearer.

"I have no other friends, I want no other, and you are my world."

Well, it is not in me to resist after that, and for the third time in my life I held her in my arms, where since that hour she has often been again, and for the third time I drank the sweetness of her lips.

"Do you remember that night on the Rose of Devon when first you kissed me?" she asked, laughing.

"If I should kiss you a million times, sweetheart, as I mean to do," I answered boldly, "I should not forget a single one of them, much less that."

"And to punish you for your presumption, although my heart went out to you, I confess, I struck you; and to teach you to be a dutiful husband, loving, devoted to me," she paused and laughed again, "I strike you once more."

Whereat she laid her hand once again, but in tenderness, upon my cheek, following it with a kiss.

I have had his majesty's sword laid upon my shoulder after I had led one of the king's ships to victory in the French wars, and I am now, if you please, Sir John Hampdon. We live at Wilberforce Castle, and our children play on the sward, but the royal accolade meant not so much to me as that light blow upon my cheek with which my dear mistress sealed our pledged troth.

THE END.

Guard the Tongue.

If anger arise in thy breast, instantly seal up thy lips, and let it not go forth; for, like a fire when it wants vent, it will suppress itself. It is good in a fever to have a tender and smooth tongue; for, if it be rough and distempered there, it is an ill sign, but here is an ill cause. Angry passion is like a fire, and angry words are like breath to fan them; together they are like steel and flint, sending out fire by mutual collision.—Jeremy Taylor.

"Deadhead" of Ancient Origin.
The origin of the word "deadhead" takes us back to the theaters of ancient Rome. R. H. Broadhead, in "A History of Pantomime," gives the following realistic explanation. He says: Persons were instructed to give applause with skill. The proficient hired themselves out to the poets, authors, etc., and were so disposed as to support a loud applause. The free admission tickets were small ivory death's heads, and specimens of these are to be seen in the Museum of Naples.

CANCER CONTROLS

The most recent announcement of a cancer cure from Europe says that it has been proved through experiments and repeated tests that the disease is contagious and brought about by the presence of a parasite.

Girls have shown themselves better practical farmers than boys. The boys' corn raising clubs organized by the agricultural department several years ago proved very successful.

McGraw's Left Handers Will Figure in Series

Fans Are Wondering Just How Far the Southpaws Will Go.

The recent success of left-handers over the Philadelphia Athletics has given rise to the question as to whether John J. McGraw, leader of the New York Giants, will not profit by sending Marquard to the front in the opening contest between the two clubs for the world's honors.

The winning of the first game in such a short series as this always means a lot. It only gives the victorious club the edge, but it increases the courage of the players and makes them willing to take chances while the losing club is put on the defensive.

Veal Gregg of the Cleveland Naps has been usually returned a winner when opposed to the Athletics, although Philadelphia at different times this season, has hammered Gregg.

It is certain that McGraw will not overlook any chances to gain a decision for his team. The Giants have been humbled on two occasions in fights for the high honors of baseball and McGraw will doubtless resort to every trick to prevent a triple failure.

Harry Shanley, a sensational performer in the spring training work with Detroit, will go south with the New York Highlanders, next spring.

The worth of this can be clearly understood when it is stated that for a month after the beginning of the Southern league season Shanley did not bat better than .300.

The umpire, replying, declared that Shanley was a sensational performer at times and a weakling on other occasions.

The Tigers will train in Gulfport, Miss., next spring, but there is some question as to whether they will go there in 1915.

The citizens of Gulfport are considering the raising of a sum of money for the purchase of the property and W. N. Driver, manager of the Great Southern hotel, and who was in Detroit a few weeks ago, declares that the property may be acquired by the city before the coming spring.

The Tigers will meet a number of Detroiters when they go south next spring. Prominent residents of Grosse Pointe have signified an intention of wintering along the gulf of Mexico coast and a number of them have already spoken for quarters at the Great Southern hotel.

BELITTLES CHAMPION

British Champion Doesn't Give Out-met Any Too Much Credit.

London, Sept. 25.—The defeat of Harry Vardon and Edward Ray by young Francis Ouimet at Brookline is described as "humiliating" by John Henry Taylor British open golf champion, in a statement to the press today.

"Youth has no nerves," he contends. "Youngsters playing golf do not realize how difficult it is to play really well. Only when one has made a reputation and understands the dire consequence of failure is one properly thankful if one is playing well.

Taylor himself won his first open championship in Great Britain at the age of 23.

M'ALEER CAN'T SEE TIGERS IN 1914 RACE

Boston Sept. 25.—"The Naps had the chance of their lifetime to win the pennant this year," remarks President Jim McAleer of the Red Sox. "Next year you will see one of the greatest battles in the history of the league, as there will be five and possibly six clubs having a chance to land the flag.

"Philadelphia, Washington and Cleveland will be up there, of course, and Boston will be back with its players that won the world's series in 1912. Chicago may have Walsh back, but even without him, the Sox are more dangerous than they were last spring.

JUST CANNOT HELP SHOOTING PARTRIDGE

Gunning Permitted Now, Hunters' Temptation is Great—Laws Faulty.

The upper peninsula press has published recently numerous instances of prosecutions for killing partridge out of season. This has no particular application to the copper country, excepting that it seems to bear out the contention of many Houghton hunters, that the state game laws merely invite their own violation by prohibiting the shooting of partridges in September while permitting the shooting of ducks and rabbits.

The assiduity of Michigan's game laws was never better demonstrated than in the fact that the season is closed on partridge in September while the hunting of ducks and rabbits is permitted during that month.

"There is no reason on earth why there should be an open season for ducks in the upper peninsula, especially in the copper country. There are so few ducks here that they should be protected for a period of years. Then, too, the rabbit season opens too early. As it is, many rabbits that would otherwise come into the world are now unborn, being killed with the doe. It would be better for all concerned if the season for rabbits was kept closed until Oct. 1.

"As it is now, the law is just an excuse for carrying partridge guns

NEWSPAPERS ENTHUSED OVER OLE THEOBALDI

Musical Critics Everywhere Stamp Him as a Wonderful Genius.

Musical critics on the various newspapers throughout the country speak in the highest terms of the work of Ole Theobaldi, the celebrated violinist who will appear here at the Peterson opera house tomorrow evening. The following are a few of the thousands of favorable comments made:

His playing was crystalline and winged in execution. Where violin players often slur over notes in rapid runs on the upper scale, ascending or descending, Theobaldi utters musical syllables round, and yet does not slacken in rapidity of delivery. His execution of four passes in close harmony, one finger in tremula, and the other three sustaining full, round notes was remarkable.—Brooklyn Daily Eagle (N. Y.)

"Ole Theobaldi, a Norwegian violinist gave a recital of most unusual numbers at Music Hall Sunday evening. It appeared to the musicians there as a reminiscence of the days of Remenyi and Ole Bull, and possessed many of their peculiar characteristics. Of set numbers there were few, the whole program being made up of fantasies exploiting the rushing waters, mill wheels, creaking, wind sighing, imaginary human voices and sobbing and organ tones, and wound up with a roll of drums, with imitation of a whole brass band. The genius of the soloist is being appreciated to the fact that all this was upon the violin alone, no accompaniment."—The Chicago Record-Herald, Chicago.

"Ole Theobaldi, a picturesque personage in the violin line, appeared before a large audience last evening, and was honored throughout the long and trying program with many recitals. He not only played class Edward Relg, but gave a number of selections of Program, Ole Bull and compositions of his own based upon original themes, interesting variations, far and away from the ordinary conventional recital."—Chicago Daily News, Chicago.

"The fact that upward of 2,000 people heard him last Sunday at the Armory, speaks volumes for the famous Norwegian violinist. 'Never before' said a musician who heard him, 'has Duluth had a chance to hear anything so grand, pathetic, and passionately beautiful as the tones Theobaldi brought out from his wonderful Casper de Salo violin.'—Duluth News-Tribune, Duluth, Minn.

BARK FROM CORK TREE.

Occasionally 500 pounds of cork bark are taken from a single tree in Spain. "Cork wood" is first harvested when the tree has a circumference of about sixteen inches, and thereafter regularly every nine or ten years throughout the life of the tree. The best bark, commercially speaking, is produced when the cork tree is fifty to one hundred years old. Instead of injuring the tree, stripping the bark seems to add impetus to the growth of a new coat. The highest priced cork only is used in the crown corks to golden grain belt beers bottled only at the Minneapolis brewery. F. W. Aronson, distributor.

SCRIPT OF MAD "EMPEROR"

Relic Presented to San Francisco Museum a Reminder of the Early Days of That City.

The old days of San Francisco—that period about twenty years ago when the "Guttersnipe," "Topsy-Turveys," "The Great Unknown" and other famous street characters were daily sights in the city—are recalled vividly by a donation made last week to the Golden Gate Park Memorial museum. Chris W. Smith gave the museum a piece of script issued by the far-famed "Emperor" Norton, the millionaire pioneer, whose reason went with the loss of his money by unwise speculation.

It was in the late seventies that "Emperor" Norton held forth in all his glory. He had come to California in 1849, had endured all the hardships of that early date, and retired to San Francisco when his wealth had reached the million mark. He was not violently insane, simply possessed of the hallucination that this was one vast empire, over which he ruled, and that those whom he daily passed on the streets were his humble subjects.

The piece of script presented to the Park museum is perhaps the only relic of one habit of "Emperor" Norton. Striding into a store or into a place of liquid refreshment, the "emperor" would, in a dignified manner, order whatsoever he wished. In payment he would give a piece of script such as that received by the museum, or mayhap a personal check. More than once, say the old-timers, a $5,000 check was given in payment for a small glass of mineral water.

"Emperor" Norton's script is printed on a blank piece of paper slightly larger than a bank note, and worded as follows:

"The Imperial Government of Emperor Norton I promises to pay holder hereof the sum of ten dollars in the year 1880, with interest at five per cent, per annum from date, the principal and interest to be converted at the option of the holder at maturity into twenty-year five per cent. bonds, or payable in gold coin. Given under our royal hand and seal this 26th day of March, 1879.

(Signed) NORTON I"

Putumayo Indians.

The Indians of the Putumayo district of Peru, whose brutal abuse by the rubber companies has aroused the world, are described in a recent issue of Folk-Lore by Capt. T. W. Whiffen, who apparently lived among them before they were subjected to the white man's kindly attention. According to Captain Whiffen they are a pretty hard lot themselves. For example, they kill the second twin at birth, and the mother always drowns a sickly or deformed child. They kill their prisoners and eat them. In fact they were still in the stone age when Captain Whiffen studied them, and, contrary to the opinion of Doctor Martin, had never been any higher in the evolutionary scale. Their only social function was a sort of dance, to which the participants and audience were summoned by the beating of drums so loud that it could be heard for a distance of eight or ten miles. One of the curious customs described by the captain was their method of using tobacco. The leaf was made into a "treachy decoction" and this was "licked ceremoniously" by friends in the tribal palaver, and also as a sort of binder—like an oath—in making a contract.

Keep Fences in Condition.

A New Jersey man, according to a decision of the state supreme court, must pay damages for the death of his neighbor's cow, which broke through the fence of a garden and ate enough green corn to cause its death. The farmer who lost the green corn was liable to damages, the court decided, because the fence should have been so constructed that the neighbor's cow could not have broken through.

MR. BEECHER AT A FUNERAL

Rev. Dr. Twichell of Hartford Recalls Famous Man as He Saw Him in His Last Years.

Though for a period of nearly 30 years it was my fortune to hear him now and then, and occasionally to meet him, the last time is specially memorable to me, says a correspondent of the Congregationalist. It was about two years before his death, at the funeral in Ithaca, N. Y., of the late Henry M. Sage, who had been an early parishioner of his in Brooklyn and one of his most intimate friends.

Mr. Beecher was then seventy-two years old. I sat close beside him as he rose to begin the service (it was in a private house), and marked the sturdy vigor of his frame. No sign of any decay or infirmity of age was observable. He read, from a small, fine print Bible and without glasses, a portion of the Holy Scripture, with a velled but consummate art of elocution that delicately carried the impression that the words were not man's words, but the breathings of a divine Comforter.

In the address that followed his voice, soft, rich, melodious, seemed without the least effort on his part to float out on the air more like perfume than a voice, yet with a power that made every syllable he uttered clearly audible to the hundreds of people that filled the house and the wide verandas outside. There were tears in it first and broken tones of sorrow, but presently he mounted up, as on wings, as a lark rises skyward, into the regions of Christian victory and hope, taking us all with him; and sang—I can liken it to nothing else—a song of the resurrection, sweet, triumphant, uplifting, beyond description; thence passing into prayer, in which the strain ascended to a still further height, hovering, as it were, about the gates of the celestial city, communing there with the angels of eternal peace, till the listener forgot, for the time, the burden and grief of life and felt that Christ and the Father's house alone were real.

It was simply wonderful; and since I was not to see Mr. Beecher again on earth I am glad that it is my last recollection of him.

As for himself, he, in the near approach of death, said to Professor Stowe, who told it to me, that the thought of getting through with this world was oftentimes to him like the wait upon his brow of a cool breeze on a sultry summer day—so blessed and cheering was his anticipation of 'the life beyond.'

Opening Exhibition

At the Fair Savings Bank This Week
The Opportunity is Given This Week, Beginning Today, for the Women of Escanaba and Vicinity to Review the Fashion Assembled for Opening of the New Season.

Every department is at its best, each vibrant with enthusiasm and stacked to its full capacity with new and desirable fall and winter merchandise. In making our arrangement for the fall and winter opening display of 1913, we kept in mind the fact that The Fair Savings Bank customers are practical sensible women who believe that while the clothes they wear must of course be fashionable, they must first of all be suited to the particular requirements of the wearers—it has been our aim to have the right garments for every woman and to have them in large numbers.

New Coats-New Dresses-New Suits

from makers whom we have tried and tested in past seasons—we secured garments that will give to their wearers in individuality that the very fewest ready-to-wear clothes impart. The materials we select are of the best both from point of weave and color.

The workmanship is guaranteed—not alone by the makers but by the Fair Savings Bank as well—so much confidence have we in it.

Every Garment the Best Value for the Money

It matters not whether you have decided to spend $15.00 or $50.00 for your new fall and winter coat, suit or dress—The Fair Savings Bank have it. The very best suit, coat or dress that you can buy for that amount. We've spent long weeks—yes months in making sure of this very fact—making sure that we have secured the very best the market afforded to each price range represented in our stock.
